The presentation of poetry

1. Lines are broken at each long-line rather than each half-line. This follows traditional practice for the publication of West Germanic poetry, while departing from that of Old Norse poetry.
2. Cæsurae are represented with the interpunct (·).
3. Alliterating sounds are marked with red colour.

The age of the Eddic poems

Linguistic criteria Archeological evidence Comparison with known Christian texts (Sólarljóð, Hugsvinnsímál) Snorri thought they were old Saxo had access to them Many of them clearly describe non-Icelandic surroundings Especially Hávamál is clearly Norwegian

About the present corpus

The scope of the present corpus is large, containing most alliterative poetry extant in Old Germanic languages. It may be divided into the following categories:

1. Mythic poetry, i.e., that which directly treats the Germanic mythology; for historical reasons, the poetry in this category is exclusively written in Old Norse. See also Galders, below.
2. Heroic poetry of the Codex Regius. Since the heroic portion of the Codex Regius forms a coherent text, it is edited in full in the format of the manuscript.
3. Other Heroic poetry, i.e., heroic poetry from sources other than the Codex Regius. This category includes heroic poetry in Old English and Old High German.
4. Galders, i.e., alliterative spells and charms, both from runic inscriptions and from manuscripts.
5. Christian poetry. This category includes a few explicitly Christian poems, where the new religion is at the core of the work (thus Christianised heroic poems like Beow and Hild are not included here). This poetry has been included for its value in the study of poetic expression, and because it may still provide valuable cultural evidence, for instance in the form of glosses.
6. Runic poetry, apart from that already edited under Galders above.

Exclusions

The corpora formed by the (non-mythological) Norse Scoldic corpus and the Norse poetry found in old legendary saws (the form-aldar-sggur) are explicitly excluded. They have been excellently edited in the SkP series, such that I, a single editor, could scarcely produce something as thorough. The latter is problematic in another way. Being entirely embedded in saws, the underlying poetry is often impossible to take out of its prose context, and in some cases one may ask whether it ever had a life of its own, or whether it were simply composed on occasion by the author. For these reasons I think it would be more conscientious to simply edit the whole saws, rather than artificially extract the poetry found scattered therein.

Manuscripts

Norse poetry

The so-called Eddic poetry is foremost found in two medieval Icelandic manuscripts.

The first and most important is GKS 2365 4to, here R. It dates to the 1270s and has 45 surviving leaves, containing TODO poems. Of these 10 are mythological; the rest heroic, dealing with legends mostly of the Migration Period. Notably, following fol. 32, there is a gap of missing pages in the heroic section, specifically cutting off Syed. It is unclear how many leaves and poems are missing. R is not just a compilation of poems, it shows editorial input as well. Several of the mythological poems are separated by short prose sections, which tie them together into a loose frame narrative, though it is clear from their style and composition that they are originally separate works. When it comes to the heroic poems long prose sections occur both within and between them, creating a saw-like prosimetrical form, where the prose in many cases holds up the poetry, rather than the reverse. The heroic half of R clearly forms the basis for the later Wals. For further literature see TODO.

The second ms. is AM 748 I a 4to, here A. It dates to the 1300s and is but a fragment, consisting of just 6 leaves. It contains only mythological poems, and in a different order from R; unlike it there is no trace of a frame narrative. On the first two leaves are contained the final stanzas of Hbl (1r–v), the complete Bldr (1v–2r), and the first verses of Shir, after which a single leaf has been lost. The next four leaves follow each other and contain the second half of Webth, the complete Grim and Hyme, and the beginning of the prose introduction to Wayl. A is the only medieval manuscript attesting Bldr, and its variants of the poems attested in R are clearly not copied from it, but rather derive from a common ancestor. This makes it very valuable for textual criticism. For further literature see TODO.

Several Eddic poems are quoted in Yilv, namely (TODO): Wsp, Webth, Grim. The text also cites a few fragmentary Eddic stanzas, which are edited under “Eddic fragments from Snorre’s Edda”. For Yilv I give variants from the following four main mss.:

1. The Codex Regius of the Prose Edda S (GKS 2367 4to; 1300–1350)
2. The Codex Trajectinus T (Traj 1374; a c. 1595 paper copy of a ms. closely related to S.)
3. The Codex Wormianus W (AM 242 fol.; 1340–70)
4. The Codex Upsaliensis U (DG 11; 1300–25)

For discussion on their internal stemmatics and origins I refer to Haukur Þorgeirsson (2017). When all employed witness mss. of Yilv agree on a reading, I use in the critical apparatus the siglum G, which is thus equivalent to STWU.

A few other Eddic-style poems are also included. One of them, Righ, partially survives in W, though it is sadly incomplete (see its Introduction). Grot is quoted in full in Scold. Other Eddic poems survive only in younger Icelandic paper mss., namely TODO. While I have not consulted such paper mss. for poems attested in medieval mss., I have had to rely on them for these poems. Of these poems it must be said, that their late attestation not necessarily proves them to be late compositions. This is most clearly shown by Bldr, which is first attested in the fragmentary A, and in longer form in later paper mss. It thus cannot be excluded that some of these poems would have existed in other lost medieval mss., perhaps even on the now-lost pages of R or A.

Old English poetry

The edited Old English poetry primarily derives from a few manuscripts. Particularly important are the Exeter Book and Lacnung.

About the original language edition

My goal with the edition of the texts has been to hold close to the original mss., without excessive emendation. Still, emendation is inevitable, and where it has done it is (apart from any oversight on my part) always marked.

Normalization

In the present edition are found texts in four languages, namely Old Norse, Old English, Old Saxon, and Old High German. All texts have been normalized according to my own orthography, which is based on two principles:

1. Faithfulness to the language at the time when the texts were written, and the distinctions found therein, without neglecting etymology.
2. Striving for a uniform orthography across the various treated idioms, where the same etymological sound is generally written with the same character.

Both of these choices entail disregarding local manuscript traditions and philological tradition, something I see as justified. My goal is to render the texts themselves in a manner that gives as much information to the reader as possible—not to present a facsimile edition for students of paleography. Anyway, such important traits of the original manuscript tradition as the long f, arbitrary punctuation, arbitrary spelling, and lack of line breaks, are seldom reproduced in modern editions of Old Germanic poetry.

Normalization of Old Norse

The orthography is inspired by Finnur Jónsson (1932) in that it strives for a more archaic form than that of the surviving mss., one that instead represents the poetry as it may (in many cases, must) originally have looked. For this reason, it often has more in common with the proposed orthography of the First Grammatical Treatise than with the standard Old Icelandic orthography seen in most editions. The following list describes the differences from the standard Old Icelandic orthography:

1. I distinguish short e (from etymological short e) and short ē (from etymological short a + i-umlaut).
2. I distinguish long á and ǫ́, as done by the First Grammatical Treatise.
3. I use ó and ē rather than the traditional œ and æ, to represent the vowels descended from Proto-Norse ō and ā after i-umlaut (cf. the short ø, ē < o, a + i-umlaut).
4. I distinguish long nasal á, é, ī, ǫ́, ú from long oral á, é, í, ó, ú, as done in the First Grammatical Treatise.

5. I restore the old s—which in modern Scandinavian and even in most Old Norse manuscripts has become r, but which is found consistently in old manuscripts such as AM 237 a fol (c. 1150), and fossilized in forms like þaz (i.e. þat's) in R—in the words es ‘which, that, where, when’, and in inflections of vesa (later vera) such as es ‘is’ (3rd sg. pres. ind.) and vas (3rd sg. pret. ind.). The following forms retain the r, as it is there the result of Verner’s law, and not of this (much younger) sound change: the pl. pres. ind. (erum etc.), the pl. pret. ind. (vorum etc.), and the pl. pret. subj. (vérim etc.)
6. When metrically benefactor, I contract ek ‘I’, eru ‘are’, and es ‘which; is’ to 'k, 'ru and 's, respectively.
7. I use Finnur Jónsson (1932)’s way of distinguishing between the relative particle es and the verb es: the first is appended to the previous word with only an apostrophe (e.g. hann's ‘he who’), while the second is separated by a space (e.g. hann s ‘he is’).

Normalization of Old Swedish and Danish

I employ the same conventions as those described for Old Norse above, including the marking of u-mutated a > ø (that this was indeed found in the Eastern Nordic dialects is most clearly seen by the third-person personal pronoun, which shows u-mutation in such forms as Swedish honom ‘him’ < hónum, hon ‘she’ < hōn). Where diphthongs have been contracted into monophthongs, these are marked with a circumflex accent, giving ô < au, ey and ê < ei. Where unstressed vowels have been reduced into an e-like sound, this is written with ē.

Normalization of Old English

I write fronted or brightened etymological a and á with æ and ǣ, for instance in dæg ‘day’ and rǣd ‘advice, counsel’. These are contrasted with ē and ǣ, which represent i-mutated a and á.

An assimilated n is marked with an overpoint, as in rule 4 of the Old Norse orthography described above.

Normalization of Old Saxon

Normalization of Old High German

About the English translation

Why another translation of this poetry?

Previous English translations of Old Germanic poetry, especially of the Poetic Edda, mostly fall into two camps: (1) poetic translations, which need to change the exact meaning of the text for the sake of meter, and (2) prose translations, which do not at all follow the style of the original. Both types of translation also tend toward the following inadequacies: obscuring or glossing over difficult technical and cultural terminology; rendering identically repeated phrases and words differently at various places; and simplifying or rewriting kennings and other poetic expressions. Even worse this is often done with little in the way of notes or commentary, to a point where the reader is sometimes left entirely in the dark over the actual meaning of the original text.

What sets this translation apart from previous English translations, then, is that it aims to follow the style and feel of the original as close as possible, without sacrificing the sense of the words themselves. This unfortunately means that literality and consistency at times must come at the cost of fluent idiomatic English, but it has the advantage of giving the reader an image of what the original text actually says, and how it says it. It also reminds the reader that they are in a very foreign land; that they are reading words ancient and long forgotten—not the New York Times.

But perhaps someone will call this a pointless effort; a translation is always a betrayal, and those who are truly interested in the exact meaning and placement of every word in the original text should just study the original text in the original language! To this I say: certainly all sufficiently interested readers should study the original texts in the languages in which they were written, and the present edition in fact allows them to do this, by presenting the English translation side-by-side with the originals. Still, this is a hard thing to ask of all readers, many of whom will not be linguists or philologists, but rather students and scholars of history, comparative mythology and religion, anthropology, and literature; along with people with a general non-academic historical or religious interest; and those who are, for whatever reason, interested in exploring an interesting and—in some ways—very foreign literature.

English proper nouns

One of the most idiosyncratic parts of the present edition will be its handling of proper nouns. I have opted to render all cultural and religious terms, names of places, heroes, gods, and other entities by their English cognates (thus Thunder for Old Norse Þórr) and where such do not exist, their philologically expected English (English) forms (e.g. wallow for Old Norse vǫlva). One reason for this is ideological. I believe that these myths and poems are a common Germanic or Northern European heritage, and should be treated as such. The English once knew gods such as Woden and Thunder, and called them by names naturally evolved in their language. So too did the Germans and Scandinavians, of course, and I would hope that any translators into those languages would follow this spirit and render the names in their natural forms there as well.<sup>1</sup> Another is philological. Forms like Odin and Thor are, while now commonly accepted, debased. They do not even represent the Old Norse pronunciation as accurate as would be possible (for instance, Odin would be better anglicized as Othin; the dental fricative still survives in English!), and many are difficult for English speakers to pronounce. I shudder when hearing a word like ésir pronounced /aɪ'sɪr:/

Norse Mythic Poetry

The Spae of the Wallow

(Vǫluspó)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): 900s (0.865)–early 1000s (0.121)

Meter: Ancient-words-law

The Spae of the Wallow is the most comprehensive mythological text surviving from Heathen times.

The poem is attested in full in two independent recensions. The first is R, where it is the first poem, found on folios 1r–3r. The second is H, where it is found at 20r–21r in the middle of a large collection of saws and Catholics works. Many verses are also cited in Ylfr, large parts of which are directly based on the poem. Other verses are not attested directly, but are instead paraphrased. The paraphrases may still have critical value (so e.g. st. 19, where sal in the paraphrase corroborates H). For its constituent manuscripts see the General Introduction.

As seen from the title, the poem is a spae (spá ‘prophecy’) in the form of a monologue spoken by a wallow (vǫlva ‘seeress, sibyl, prophetess’), summoned by Woden in order to relate mythological knowledge. The motif of Woden journeying to ask beings (whether ettins or wallows) is also seen in other sources. Closest is Bldr, wherein Woden summons a wallow out of her grave in Hell in order to understand why the god Balder is having ominous nightmares. There is also Webb, wherein Woden challenges the wise ettin Webbthrithner to a wisdom contest and defeats him. These journeys are also alluded to in Hbl 43–46.

In its being a mythic catalogue it also resembles the latter part of Hgh, Grim, Syed and Allw, though it differs from them in a key way: it gives a (mostly?) complete chronological overview of the whole mythic timeline, from the creation to the end and rebirth of the world. That is not to say that the events are clearly described; they are related in a highly allusive fashion—certainly presupposing that the audience already be familiar with them. There may also be gaps and later inserts that make the poem more difficult.

The poem begins with a bid for silence (1), and the wallow recalling her earliest memories (2). She then recounts the ordering of the world by the gods (3–6) and the golden age of peace and plenty (7–8), which is, however, interrupted by the intrusion of three unidentified ettin-maidens (8, and see note there). After this follow two verses about the shaping of the dwarfs (9–10), and then several originally separate dwarf-tallies (11–15), which are without doubt later inserts. Returning to the main narrative thread is described the creation and endowment of the first man and woman (16–17), Ugdrassle's Ash (18), and the three norns living under it (19).

This is where the two full recensions of the poem diverge. Because of its older age and larger count of verses I have here followed the order of R: the wallow recalls how a woman named Goldwey was sacrificed and reborn three times (20), and how she, under the name Heath, practiced sorcery and witchcraft (21). She then recalls the first war in the world, between the Eese and Wanes (22–23), and alludes to the slaying of the smith, who according to Yilv 42 was promised Frow and the sun and moon in exchange for building the wall of Osyard (24–25). This is followed by a cryptic verse describing Homedall's hidden silence or hearing (26).

In H the structure is quite different. After the description of the norns (19), the Eese go to decide what action to take regarding the promising of Frow to the ettin (my 24–25), and Homedall's hearing is described (26). Then follows the two verses about the old hag in Ironwood who raises the wolves that will swallow the sun and moon (40–41). After this come verses 20–23 in the same order as R (see above).

To illustrate the differences between mss., and which verses are attested in which, I have prepared the following table showing the order of stanzas by manuscript, compared to the present edition. As several stanzas in G are quoted on their own, with little relation to the order of the original poem, they are simply marked with plus signs. When stanzas are quoted in sequence, they are preceded by an alphabetically incrementing letter denoting which sequence they belong to. When a stanza found in a ms. differs majorly from the pres. ed. (e.g. st. 10 where G omits the first two half-lines), it is marked with a star. The stanzas beginning with Þá gingu regin öll 'Then went the Reins all' are represented by the half-line immediately following.

“For hearing I ask all holy kindreds, greater and lesser lads of Homedall<sup>1</sup> [MEN].
 Wilt thou, O Walfather (= Weden), that I well tell forth the ancient tidings of men, those I foremost recall?<sup>2</sup>

<sup>2</sup> mēiri ok minni ‘greater and lesser’ | The noun being modified is ambiguous. It may either be (a) ‘greater and lesser holy kindreds’, in which case it may be equivalent to the phrase Eese and Elves (both earthly and heavenly supernatural beings; see Encyclopedia for occurrences) or (b) ‘greater and lesser lads of Homedall [MEN]’. (b) is probably to be preferred for reasons of syntax, but should not most likely be seen as referring to varying social classes; it seems unlikely that there would be slaves present in the audience of a poem like this. In any case, the wallow seems to be asking all intelligent beings present for silence, with the expression being a merism of the type ‘gods and men’; see West (2007)[99-100].

<sup>2</sup>Cf. Webb 34, 35 with very similar phrasing. The whole introductory formula is positively Indo-European, see West (2007)[63,92-93,312].

<sup>3</sup> iǵiðjur | so RH. R has previously been as read iviði, but this was disproven by an x-ray scan undertaken by Stefan Karlsson (1979).

<sup>3</sup>Certainly Ugdrassle, “beneath the soil” likely referring to it still being a seed.

 there was not sand nor sea, nor cool waves.
 Earth was never found, nor Up-heaven;
 there was the Gap of Ginnings, but grass nowhere.<sup>4</sup>

<sup>3</sup> jörð ... né upp-himinn 'Earth ... nor Up-heaven' | A well-attested formulaic cosmological word-pair found in all four Old Germanic languages with poetic traditions (ON, OE, OS, OHG), especially in concern the creation and destruction of the world. See Earth and Upheaven.

<sup>4</sup> A more extensive creation narrative is found in Ylvi 4–5, according to which the world first consisted of two extremities: the frozen Nivelham in the north and scorching Muspellsham in the south. From Nivelham the freezing venom-rivers called the llewaves ran until they froze to ice, while burning lava flowed from Muspellsham. The ice and lava met in the Gap of Ginnings, "which was as calm as windless air", and there combined to form the first being, Yimer, who was the ancestor of the ettins.

before the Sons of Byre lifted up the flatlands,
 they who shaped the renowned Middenyard.
 Sun shone from the south on the stones of the hall;
 then was the ground grown with green leek.

<sup>1</sup> Burs synir 'the Sons of Byre' | In Ylvi 6 identified as Weden, Will and Wigh, who sacrificed Yimer and shaped the cosmos out of his body. For this see also Webb 20–21 and Grim 41–42.

<sup>4</sup> grǫnum lauki 'green leek' | A sign of the golden age, since the leek was believed to be the noblest plant and had important cultural significance. This is seen from Guth II 2, where Siward's superiority to the Yivickings is compared to a stag among wild beasts, gold among silver, and a green leek in grass. The leek was valued in folk magic, as seen already on gold bracteates from the C5th and C6th, where it appears as a charm word in the form 𐌺𐌹𐌺𐌿𐌿𐌹 laukar, in one inscription paired with 𐌺𐌹𐌺𐌿 lina 'linen'. Classical Norse attestations of magic use include Syed 7, where the leek is thrown into mead against poison; and the WalsTh, where a horse penis is said to be lini góddr · en laukum studdr 'endowed with linen and supported by leeks' in a poetic line. The leek was particularly associated with women and domestic life, as seen by its pairing with "linen". Kennings for women frequently have the leek as a determinant (TODO: Meissner reference?), and Anon Sveinfl 1 (Skp I TODO.) sarcastically states that a battle was not sem manni · męr lauk eða ęl bęri 'as if a maiden brought a man leek or ale'.

 Sun cast from the south—Moon's companion—her right hand over heaven's rim;<sup>5</sup>

2 of himin-jǫður ‘over heaven’s rim’ | Composite reading; of himin fiodyrf ‘over the heaven-horse-deer(?)’ R is both nonsensical and unmetrical and must be rejected; of iöður ‘over the rim’ H is unmetrical, lacking alliteration and being too short.

1 sinni Måna ‘Moon’s companion’ | At times translated as ‘its moon’. This cannot be correct, as māni ‘moon’ is masculine, while sinni, dative singular of sinn ‘its (reflexive)’ is feminine.

5b Sól þat né vissi, · hvar hǫn sali átti; [R 1r/12, H 20r/7, G] stjörnur þat né vissu, · hvar þér staði óttu;
 Måni þat né vissi, · hvat hann mægins átti.

Sun knew not where halls she owned;
 stars knew not where steads they owned;
 Moon knew not what sort of might he owned.

4 stjörnur ... óttu | In G this line follows 5, so that the order is sun, moon, stars.

5 Måni ... átti ‘Moon ... owned’ | The moon was believed to have supernatural powers; see note to Hígh TODO (Måna skal heiptum kveða).

6 Þá gingu rēgin ǫll · à røk-stóla, [R 1r/13, H 20r/9]

Then went the Reins all onto the rake-seats:
 the Yin-holy Gods, and from each other took counsel of this.
 To night and the moon-phases names they gave;
 morning they named, and middle day,
 afternoon and evening, the years for to tally.

1–2 Þá ... gēttusk ‘Then ... of this.’ | A formulaic expression for the convening of the Thing of the Gods, identically repeated below in sts. 9/1–2, 22/1–2, and 24/1–2. Cf. also the three lines shared between Bldr 1/1–3 and Thrim 14/1–3, which follow the structure of the present stanza(s) very closely: Senn vǫru ǧsir · allir á þingi // ok ǧsynjur · allar á máli, // ok umb þat rēðu · ríkir tívar: ‘Soon were the Eese all at the Thing, // and the Ossens all at speech, // and of this counseled the mighty Tews’. In all five occurrences other than the present stanza (three from Wsp, the present poem, one from Bldr, one from Thrim), the demonstrative pronoun þat ‘this’ clearly refers to the matter at hand, expressed with the verb in the subjunctive case (e.g. in Thrim 14/3–4: ok umb þat rēðu · ríkir tívar: // hvé þeir Hlórriða · hamar of sótti? ‘and of this counseled the mighty Tews: How they Lorida’s (= Thunder’s) hammer would find?’). Following this pattern we would surely expect to find two lines after umb þat gēttusk ‘took counsel of this’ and before nōtt ‘night’ in the present stanza, and it seems most likely to presume that they have been lost in transmission.

3–5 Nött ... tēja ‘To night ... tally’ | Cf. Webb 23, where it is said that the sun and moon turn round in heaven gldum at ár-tali ‘for the year-tally of mankind’, and 25, where it is said that the Reins created the moon-phases for the same purpose.

4     tångir skópu · ok tól gęrðu.

[R 1r/16, H 20r/10]

The Eese found each other on the Idewolds, they who harrow and hove timbered on high;
hearths they laid, wealth they smithed, tongs they shaped and tools they made.

2 þęir’s ... hę-timbruðu ‘they who ... timbered on high’ | afls kostuðu · alls freistuðu ‘[their] strength they tried; everything they tempted’ H

2 þęir’s ... hę-timbruðu ‘they who ... timbered on high’ | Two formulæ. hęrg ok hof ‘harrow and hove’, a merism, i.e. ritual structures made of stone and wood. Cf. Webb 38 and HHarw TODO, as well as in Norwegian Christian laws that impose ‘the burning of hoves and the breaking of harrows’ (brenna hof ok brjóta hęrga). — hę-timbra ‘high-timber, timber on high’ is a rare compound and only occurs twice in the ON corpus: in the present stanza and Grim 16 where it describes a harrow ruled by Nearth. — It is rather interesting that the Gods themselves build ritual structures.

8     Tęflðu i tųni, · tęitir vęru,
2     vas þęim vęttu-gis · vant ór gulli, unds þrjár kvęmu · þursa męjar,
      ám-átkar mjøk, · ór Jętun-ęęimum.

[R 1r/18, H 20r/12]

They played Tavel in the yards; merry were they;
for them was nothing golden wanting<sup>6</sup>—
until there came three maidens of Thurses, very unnatural out of Ettinham.

3 þrjár ... þursa męjar ‘three maidens of Thurses’ | These three maidens are never mentioned again (unless they are taken to be the three norns in st. 19, but they would then be introduced twice). It’s possible that an additional stanza would have come after this one, giving further information about them, but if it did, it was already lost in the version employed by the author of Yilv, who only writes the following in his paraphrase (ch. 14):

Ok því nęst smiðuðu þęir málrn ok stein ok tré ok svá gnóg-liga þann málrn, er gull beitir, at ęll bús-gogn ok ęll reiði-gogn hęfðu þęir af gulli, ok er sú ęld kęlluð gull-aldr, áðr en spilltist af til-kvámru kvinnanna; þęr kómu ór Jętun-beimum.

‘And just after this they smithed metal and stone and wood, and so abundantly [did they smith] that metal which is called gold, that all their house-tools and riding-tools were golden, and that age is called the golden age, before it was spoiled by the arrival of the women; they came out of Ettinham.’

after which he describes the creation of the dwarfs (see next stanza).

<sup>4</sup> ám-átkar ‘unnatural’ | This word (nom. sg. ám-áttigr) has a clear supernatural connotation, and only occurs in four other places in R: Grim 11, Sbir 10, HHarw 17 and HHarw 14. In the first three it modifies þotunn ‘ettin’, while in the fourth it describes a man with clearly supernatural attributes.

9 Þà gingu ręgin ęll · à ręk-stóla,

[R 1r/20, H 20r/14, G]

Then went the Reins all onto the rake-seats:
the Yin-holy Gods, and from each other took counsel of this:
Who would shape the retinue of Dwarfs, out of the bloody surf and out of the blue-black legs?

<sup>4</sup> ór brimi ... lęggjum ‘out of the bloody ... legs’ | I think that the poem simply telling of “the bloody surf” and “the blue-black legs” fits better with its general allusive style, but the resulting composite reading may be somewhat controversial.

According to Yilv 14 the dwarfs first originated as maggots in the corpse of Yimer, whose bones are described in Grim TODO and Webb TODO as being used to make rocks. Dwarfs dwell in the rocks and earth; cf. for instance IngT 2, where the Swedish king Swayther (Sveigðir) disappears into a rock in pursuit of a dwarf. More difficult to explain is the creation of dwarfs out of Yimer’s blood (which according to Grim TODO and Webb TODO is the sea), since dwarfs are never said to dwell in water. — If one chooses the reading Bláinn ‘Blown’ (named in the thules as a dwarf) instead of blęum ‘blue-black’, then following Gurevich (Skp 2017, p. 693) one may see a kenning “the legs of Blown (dwarf) [STONE]”. Blown has otherwise been read as a poetic name for Yimer, but that is never attested elsewhere.

[R 1r/21, H 20r/15, G]

There was Moodsowner made the worthiest of all dwarfs, but Dorn [was] second.
They man-likenesses many did make:
dwarfs in the earth, as Dorn said.

1 Þar vas Móðsognir | so H; Þar fámótsfognir vitnir ‘there Mootsowner wolf(?)’ R. The prose of Ylva 14 agrees with H that the correct form of the name is Móðsognir, not Mótsognir. 3 þeir ... ggrðu ‘They ... did make’ | so RHU; þar man-líkun · mǫrg of ggrðusk ‘There man-likenesses many were made’ STW 4 i ‘in’ | so GH; ór ‘out of’ R 4 sgm Durinn sagði ‘as Dorn said’ | so RHSW; sem fður mennf sagði ‘as door-men(?) said’ T; sem fþeim dyrrinn kendi ‘as the beasts(?) taught them’ U

1–2 Þar ... annarr ‘There ... second’ | om. G, but the author must have had the full verse, since he paraphrases these lines in the following way: Móðsognir var ǣðstr ok annarr Durinn. ‘Moodsowner was the highest in rank, and Dorn the second.’ before citing

3–4 þeir ... sagði ‘They ... said.’ | There are two conflicting interpretations of the creation of the dwarfs. Either they arose on their own; this is supported by the prose of Ylva (see note to previous st.) and by the form of the stanza quoted there (but it may have been changed to correspond to the author’s vision). On the other hand, both R and H have the dwarfs Moodsowner and Dorn shaping “man-likenesses” out of soil. The present edition follows the second version.

Sts. 11–15 contain two originally separate lists of dwarfs. That they are separate is seen by the repetition of names (Oakenshield, Great-grandfather), and their having their own conclusions.

Sts. 11–13, having no repeated names, seem to belong together. If they do, st. 12, which contains the formulaic conclusion to the list, should probably switch places with 13.

Sts. 14–15 form the second group, having an introduction and a conclusion which both mention the dwarf Loffer.

<sup>7</sup>A standard genealogical introduction (cf. HalT 1: meðan hans étt ... til goða tēljum 'while we tally his line ... [back] to the gods'). The (patrilineal) line of dwarfs is to be counted back to their progenitor, Loffer. This possibly disagrees with st. 10, where Moodsowner is said to be the foremost (and presumably the oldest) of the dwarfs, and Loffer is not mentioned.

<sup>8</sup>Cf. Yilv 14: "But these came from Swornshigh (Svarinsbaugr) to the Earwongs on the Erwolds, and thence Loffer is come; these are their names: Sherper (Skirpir), Werper (Virpir), Showfind, Great-grandfather, Elf and Ing (Ingi), Oakenshield, Fale (Falr), Frost, Finn, Ginner."

<sup>9</sup>Two archaic formulæ. The first literally ‘that will ever [be] up above’, cf. HarS TODO: “We two are cursed, brother, thy bane am I become! That will ever be remembered (þat mun é uppi, but both mss. þat mun enn uppi), evil is the doom of the norns!” The second is found in a runic inscription, U 323 (980–1015): “Ever will lie—while the age lives (meþ + altr + lifir með aldr lifir)—the hard-hammered bridge, broad, after a good man.” An especially close parallel is found in Þstf Stuttðr (st. 5, Kari Ellen Gade ed. in SkP II): Ey mun uppi · Eñdils, meðan stendr // sól-borgar salr, · svgr-gððis fgr. ‘Always will be remembered—while the hall of the sun’s stronghold [SKY/HEAVEN > EARTH] stands—the journey of the fattener of Andle’s bird [RAVEN/EAGLE > WARRIOR].’

Until three came out of that host:
strong and lovely Eese along the settlement;

Ash and Emble, orlay-less.<sup>11</sup>

1 þrír | gramm. emend.; þrjár RH 1 ór því liði | þessa brúðir ‘brides of thurses’ H is probably corrupt due to the influence of st. 8; the adjectives in l. 2 are in the masculine. 2 qflgir ok ástkir ‘strong and lovely’ | ástkir ok qflgir (norm.) ‘lovely and strong’ H

1 Unds ‘Until’ | We seem to be missing a preceding sentence here which would have completed the semantics; it was probably contained in a now-lost stanza. What this st. would have contained is of course impossible to know, but it may have given a reason for why the gods needed to create men.

2 at húsi ‘along the settlement’ | An adverbial, lit. ‘along the house’; the gods were not walking in the wilderness.

<sup>11</sup>This verse is paraphrased in Ylfr 9: Þá er þeir gengu með sévar-ströndu Bors synir, fundu þeir tré tvau ok tóku upp trén ok sköpuðu af menn. Gaf inn fyrsti qnd ok líf, annarr vit ok bréring, þriði á-sjónu, mál ok beyrn ok sjón, gáfu þeim klæði ok ngfn. Hét karl-maðrinn Ask, en konan Embla, ok ólst þaðan af mann-kindin, sú er byggðin var gefinn undir Mið-garði. ‘When the sons of Byre (cf. st. 4) walked along the sea-shore they found two trees and they took up the trees and shaped men from them. The first one gave breath (qnd) and life, the second wit and movement, the third sight, speech, appearance and sight; they gave them clothes and names. The male was called Ash, and the woman Emble, and from them mankind was begotten, to whom were given the dwelling within Middenyard.’

The ON cognate of tree, tré, can also mean ‘pieces of wood’, and it is traditionally seen as referring to pieces of driftwood. Yet as pointed out by Hultgård (2006) the comparative evidence suggests that the two were in fact living, growing trees (they would thus be part of the foliage described in st. 4) and there is nothing in the sources that speaks against this.

While Ash is easily identified with the same-named wood species (Fraxinus excelsior), the etymology of Emble is much more difficult. The shaping of men from trees is used by poets in various kennings for men and women, especially in scoldic poetry (for a short discussion see SkP I, p. lxxv ff.). While this is rarer in the Eddic corpus it does occur, e.g. in Syed 4: brynþings apaldr ‘apple-tree of the byrnie-Thing [BATTLE > WARRIOR]’.

<sup>2</sup> þolli ‘fir’ | Here simply meaning ‘tree’ and used only for the alliteration. Perhaps the same applies for askr ‘ash’ in the phrase askr Ygg-drasils ‘Ugdrassle’s Ash’, with its species not being as fixed to the ancients as it has now become?

<sup>13</sup>i.e. ‘they have carved on boards, they have laid laws, they have chosen lives’. It is well known that in Old Norse as in other old Germanic languages the simple past can have both perfective and imperfective sense. — This st. is paraphrased in Ylvi 15: Þar stendr salr einn fagr undir askinum við brunninn, ok ór þeim sal koma þrjár meyjar, þær er svá heita: Urðr, Verðandi, Skuld. Þessar meyjar skapa mönnum aldr; þær kollum vér nornir. ‘There is a single fair hall beneath the ash-tree by the well, and out of that hall come three maidens, who are called thus: Weird, Werthing, Shild. These maidens shape the ages of men (formulaic! TODO.); we call them norns.’

<sup>14</sup>While reading folk-víg as ‘ethnic conflict’ (between the Eese and Wanes) is appealing, I more cautiously read the first element folk as carrying its earlier, more common sense of ‘troop, group of warriors’.

<sup>15</sup>Very cryptic. TODO: double check Snorri. Goldwey was apparently sacrificed, cremated and reborn three times (in short succession?) by the Eese.

Weden hurled, and into the opposing troop did shoot;<sup>18</sup> that was yet a troop-conflict [WAR] earlier in the Home.
Broken was the board-wall<sup>19</sup> of the fortress of the Eese;
the Waness did by a conflict-spae tread the fields.<sup>20</sup>

2 fýrr 'earlier' | so H; fýrst 'first' R. The R reading cannot be correct as this st. is describing a different war, and thus not the first. It has probably arisen due to the similarity with st. 20/1.

<sup>18</sup>The object, a spear, is understood. This seems to reference a ritual, well-attested in the literature, wherein a war-chief would dedicate an opposing army as a human sacrifice to Weden by throwing a spear over them, typically with the incantation Óðinn á yðr alla 'Weden owns you all!'; he would then own the battle-slain in that they joined him as Oneharriers in Walhall. Weden is also described as "owning" dead men in Hbl 24 (namely slain nobles, contrasted with Thunder who is insultingly said to "own the kin of thralls") and in runic inscription N B380 (edited below under Galders), a sort of greeting wherein the receiver is wished to be owned by Weden (and "received" by Thunder). For further literature see PCRN HS II:24, p. 560, II:25, p. 617, and especially III:42, p. 1166ff.

 Shild held a shield, but Shagle another,
 Guth, Hild, Gandle and Goreshagle—now are tallied the Nannies of Harn (= Weden), ready to ride the ground, walkirries.

3–6 Skuld ... val-kyrjur Shild | Judging especially by the out-of-place phrase nú eru talðar ‘now are tallied’, these four lines seem to be a later insert from a thule counting the walkirries.

5 Nōnnur Hērjans ‘Nannies of Harn (= Weden) [WALKIRRIES]’ | Nanna ‘Nanny’ (the name itself is a nursing word) was the wife of Balder, but the word is here certainly being used to refer generically to ‘maidens, women’. A similar kenning is found in the thule listing female divinities (Þul Asynja in SkP III), where the walkirries are called Óðins meyjar ‘Weden’s maidens’.

Told allusively in Wsp 31–33 is the myth about the Balder’s death at the hands of his blind brother Hath, and the revenge killing of Hath by his half-brother Wonnell, who was specifically begotten for that purpose. The other important sources for this myth are Bldr 8–11, the detailed description in Yilv 49, and Grammaticus (2015)[3.4.1–8].

The account and language of Bldr 8–11 is strikingly similar to the present sts. (and Bldr 11/2–4 is near-identical to Wsp 32/4–33/2), and they give only one detail not found in the present sts., namely that Wonnell, the slayer of Hath, was born from a woman named Rind ‘in the western halls’.

Yilv 49 contains a much longer and more detailed narrative. It may be shortly summarised as follows: After Balder has terrible nightmares about dying, his mother Frie makes all sorts of things (fire, water, venom, metals, stones, trees, diseases, beasts, etc.) swear oaths not to harm him. Since Balder is now practically unharmable, the Eese make sport out of shooting and striking him. Lock is annoyed by this game, and in disguise as a woman, he finds out from Frie that a single thing did not swear the oath: the mistletoe, since it was thought too young. Lock grabs a mistletoe and gives it to the blind god Hath, telling him where to shoot. Hath does so, and Balder dies.

Yilv 49 continues with the rest of the narrative, namely the failed attempt by the Eese at “crying Balder out of hell” (for which see Eddic Fragments in the present volume) and Balder’s funeral (which is treated poetically in Wolf Ugson’s fragmentary House-drape, ÚlfirU Húsdrip in SkP III.) For the revenge taken by the Eese on Lock, treated in Yilv 50, see st. 34 below.

Yilv 49–50 omits the latter part of the myth, namely the revenge taken upon Hath. Weden seduced the woman Rind Weden (apparently through love-magic, cf. Cormac Awmundson’s TODO: sęið Yęgr til rindar ‘Ug won Rind through sorcery’), who gave birth to a son Wonnell. Being only one night old, he slew Hath, his half-brother. This part of the myth may have been left out for moral reasons, but was certainly known to the author, as shown by Yilv 30: Áli eða Váli heitir einn, sonr Óðins ok Rindar. Hann er djarfr í orrostum ok mjök happ-skeytr ‘Onnel or Wonnell one is called, the son of Weden and Rind. He is brave in battles and a very lucky shot’ and Scold 19, where we find the following relevant kennings for Wonnell (with case changed from the acc. to the nom. for clarity): sonr Óðins ok Rindar ‘son of Weden and Rind’ and hefni-áss Baldrs, dólgr Haðar ok bani hans ‘avenging os of Balder; the enemy of Hath and his bane’.

The revenge narrative is also dealt with by Grammaticus (2015)[3.4.1–8] in typical euhemerized form. In his retelling Hath and Balder are generals and rulers; in no way gods. It may be summarized as follows (for his latinized names see respective Encyclopedia entries): Weden takes counsel from warlocks and wallows; one of them, Horsethief the Finn, foretells that Rind, daughter of the Russian king, will bear him another son to avenge Balder. Weden soon enlists in the king’s army and leads it to great victories, but is continually spurned by the king’s daughter. He tries various other disguises but is still refused. At last he disguises himself as an old woman and becomes her handmaid and physician. When she turns sick, he binds her in order to give her a certain potion; while bound he rapes her, apparently with her father’s consent. Their son, Bo, grows up to become a fierce raider. One day Weden summons him and reminds him of his duty to avenge his brother, Balder. Bo slays Hath in a duel, but soon perishes from his wounds.

I saw Balder’s—the bloody victim’s, Weden’s child’s—orlay sealed;<sup>29</sup> grown did stand, higher than the plains,
a slender and very fair mistletoe.

<sup>1</sup> tífur ‘victim’s’ | This word is rather difficult (and possibly corrupt). It may be connected with týr ‘tew, god’, but I see two problems with this. First, the dat. sg. of týr is tívi and the intrusive r is hard to explain. Second, although it must have been at some point used in the singular in the generic sense ‘god’, and this survives in compounds like Sig-týr ‘Victory-tew (= Weden)’ and in the plural tívar ‘tews; gods’, in the ON corpus the simplex form týr exclusively refers to the god ‘Tew’. I follow CV, who connect it with OE tiber, tífer ‘victim, hostage’, but this also has problems: blóðgum ‘bloody’ is the masc. dat. sg., but tiber is neuter. Assuming a nom. sg. **tífurr* with the same declension as jǫfurr, we would expect **tífri* in the dat. sg., not tífur (which would however be the expected acc. sg.).

<sup>29</sup>Or ‘hidden’. The verb fela ‘hide, conceal’ is used in poetry to describe burial in mounds, as in IngT 24 (“[...] And afterwards the victory-havers hid (fǫlu) the ruler on Borrey.”) or the C10th Karlevi stone (“Hidden (fulkin fǫlginn) in this mound lies he whom the greatest deeds followed; [...]”)

<sup>30</sup>This myth is retold both in Ylvi and From Lock below. The basic story is that after Lock was caught after wife, Syein, sat over him and caught the venom in a hand-washing basin. See introduction to From Lock for a

The follow sts. are paraphrased in Yǫlv ch. 52:

Þá mēlti Gangleri: „Hvat verðr þá eptir, er brenndr er himinn ok jörð ok heimr allr, ok dauð goðin ęll ok allir Einherjar ok alt mann-folk, ok hafið ér áðr sagt, at hvern maðr skal lifa í nękvęprum heimi um allar aldir?“

Þá svarar Þriði: „Margar eru þá vistir góðar ok margar illar; batst er þá at vera á Gimléi á himni, ok all-gótt er til góðs drykkjar þeim, er þat þykkir gaman, í þeim sal, er Brimir heitir; hann stendr ok á himni. Sá er ok góðr salr, er stendr á Niða-fjollum, gęrr af rauðu gulli; sá heitir Sindri. Í þessum solum skulu byggja góðir menn ok sið-látir.

Á Ná-stręndum er mikill salr ok illr ok horfa norðr dyrr; hann er ok ofinn allr orma-bryggjum sem vanda-bús, en orma hęfuð ęll vitu inn í húsit ok blása eitri, svá at eptir salnum renna eittr-ár, ok vaða þęr ár eið-rofar ok morð-vargar, svá sem hęr segir:“

‘Then spoke Gangler: “What will then be afterwards, when heaven and earth and all the world is burned, and dead are the gods and all Onecharriers and all man-kind—and ye have said earlier, that each man will live in some world for all ages?”

Then answers Third: “Many good dwellings are there then, and many bad: it is then best to be on Gimlee in heaven, and it is all-good with good drink, for those who find that pleasurable, in the hall which is called Brimmer; it also stands on heaven. That one is also a good hall which stands on the Nithfells, made of red gold; it is called Sinder. In these halls good and well-mannered men will dwell.

On Neestrund is a great and bad hall, and the doors face north. It is all woven with the spines of serpents like a wicker-house, but the heads of the serpents all face into the house and blow venom, so that along the hall run venom-rivers, and in those rivers wade oath-breakers and murder-wargs, as is said here:”

after which are quoted sts. 37 and 38/1–2, followed by the prose: En í Hver-gelmi er verst ‘But in Wharyelmer is is worst’ and 38/4.

<sup>32</sup>In this st. is clearly described watery punishment in the Heathen afterlife, also seen in Rein 3–4 and possibly in Grim 21. The crimes are what one might expect from the Germanic worldview: perjury, shameful murder, and adultery with a married woman. In Anglo-Saxon and Nordic laws the committer of such crimes gained the title of nithing, that is, one afflicted with nithe (severe shame). It is not surprising then that such nithings would be tortured by a creature named Nithehewer ‘Nithe-striker’. The practice of burying in bogs and flood-marks (or generally outside of settlements) is well attested in sources about Germanic culture from Taciti Germania onwards—I consider it likely that the heavy streams in this stanza and others represent such graves. This is further elaborated on in GermanicGems2.

If it is, it must have occurred early in the transmission, as reflexes of **tjúgari* are found in all surviving mss.

<sup>34</sup>The old hag raises the cubs of the wolf Fenrer, of which a particularly fierce one will swallow the moon. According to Grim 40 the sun is chased by a wolf called Skoll, while another wolf, Hate Rothswitner’s son, runs in front of her. This is elaborated upon in Yilv 12, where it is said that Skoll swallows the moon, while Hate swallows the sun. High then explains that “A lone troll-woman (gygr) lives to the east of Middenyard in that forest called Ironwood”, and “feeds the sons of many ettins, all in the likenesses of wolves, and thereof these wolves (i.e. Skoll and Hate) come. And it is also said that from that lineage a single one becomes the mightiest, and he is called Moongarm. He fills himself with the life of all those men who die and he swallows the moon and stains heaven and all the air with blood. Thereof the sun loses its rays and the winds are violent and moan hither and thither, and thus it says in the Spae of the Wallow: [...]” after which this and the following st. are quoted. This seems very much like a composite from several sources—probably Wsp 40–41 and Grim 40—but becomes contradictory when it states that two wolves swallow the moon. Assuming that this is only a confusion on the part of the author of Yilv, this st. and the next must be describing Skoll, but it is of course not impossible that there was confusion about the exact details of these events among the Heathen poets. In favour of that seems to speak Weibth 46–47, where the sun is said to be swallowed by Fenrer (but see note there).

Then comes Line’s second sorrow to pass,<sup>41</sup>
 as Weden fares to strike against the wolf
 —but Bellow’s bane [= Free], bright, [goes] against Surt—then will Frie’s beloved [= Weden] fall.

4 angan | angantyr R

<sup>41</sup>That the first sorrow was the death of Balder (see sts. 31–33) is unanimously understood. Line is described in Yilv 35 as a minor goddess sett til gęzlu yfir þeim mōnnum, er Frigg vill forða við baska nokkurum ‘placed to watch over those men which Frie wishes to protect against any particular danger’. In spite of this, almost all translators and commentators have understood Line as here referring to Frie, or questioned whether her existence as a separate goddess is not a misunderstanding on the part of the author of Yilv. Hopkins (2017) argues excellently that this need not be the case; as a subordinate goddess of Frie, Line’s two sorrows would be her failing to protect Balder and Weden (the son and husband of her mistress, respectively) from harm.

3 eitri 'venom' | emend.; ormi 'worm' H. It seems likely that the author of Ylvi had access to this verse. <sup>42</sup>It seems likely that the order found in Yilv is original. After Thunder (appropriately kenned ‘Middenyard’s wigh-ward’) is slain, the Ettins take over the lands and make farming impossible. Cf. Thrim 18: “Shortly the Ettins will settle Osyard, unless thou thy hammer for thyself dost fetch!”

The following stanzas are paraphrased in Yilv ch. 53:

 Hárr segir: „Upp skýtr jörðunni þá ór senum, ok er þá grón ok fęgr. Vaxa þá akrar ó-sánir. Viðarr ok Váli lifa, svá at eigi hefir sęrinn ok Surta-logi grandat þeim, ok byggja þeir á Iða-velli, þar sem fyrr var Ás-garðr, ok þar koma þá synir Þórs, Móði ok Magni, ok hafa þar Mjöllni. Því nęst koma þar Baldr ok Hęðr frá Heljar, setjast þá allir samt, ok talast við, ok minnast á rúnar sínar, ok róða of tíðendi þau, er fyrrum hęfðu verit, of Mið-garðs-orm ok um Fenris-úlf. Þá finna þeir í grasinu gull-tęflur þęr, er ęsirnir hęfðu átt. Svá er sagt:“*

‘Then spoke Gangler: “Do any of the gods survive then, or is there any earth or heaven?” High says: “Then shoots the earth up from the seas, and is then green and fair. Then acres grow unsown. Wider and Wonnell live, as the sea and Surt’s flame has not wounded them, and they settle Idewolds, where Osyrd once was, and there come the sons of Thunder, Mood and Main, and have there Millner. Thereafter come Balder and Hath from Hell, then all reconcile with each other and speak with each other and think back on their runes, and speak about the tidings which had once been: about the Middenyardswyrm and about the Fenrerswolf. Then they find in the grass those golden Tavel bricks which the Eese had owned. So it is said:”

This interpretation has strong support from the very last half-line of Helr, where Byrnild says to a gow who insults her: sōkkst-u, gýgjar-kyn ‘sink, O gow’ (TODO: translation).

The Dreams of Balder

(Baldrs draumar)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): 800s (0.110)–900s (0.890)

Meter: Ancient-words-law

In ancient manuscripts only preserved in A, but the poem also survives in later manuscripts with a few extra stanzas (see below). It follows the structure of a riddle contest.

The poem begins in medias res; Balder has been having nightmares, and so the gods meet at the Thing to figure out why (1). Weden rides to Hell, where he has an encounter with a bloody dog (2). It barks for a long time at him, but he passes it and continues to “the high house of Hell” (3), from which he rides west, to the grave of a certain wallow, whom he revives using magic (4). She asks which man has forced her out of the grave (5), and Weden introduces himself as Waytame, before asking for whom the benches of Hell are covered with gold (6). The wallow responds that barrels of mead stand brewed for Balder and that the gods are very anxious (7). Weden asks her who will slay Balder (8), and she responds that it is Hath, carrying a “high fame-beam” (9). Weden then asks her who will avenge Balder’s death by slaying Hath (10). The wallow responds that Rind will give birth to Weden’s son Wonnell, who will slay Hath when only one night old (11). Weden then asks about some mysterious maidens (12; see Note), which betrays his identity. The wallow tells him that she now knows his true identity, to which Weden responds that he does as well: she is not a wallow, but rather the “mother of three thurses” (13). She tells him to ride home and “be famous”, before reminding him of his death at the Rakes of the Reins (14).

<sup>49</sup>The similarity in wording to the treatment of this myth in Wsp is striking; apart from the tense, ll. 2–4 here are near-identical to 32/4–33/2 there (for discussion on the narrative see introduction to Wsp 31–34). The irregularity of the stanza length might suggest that a line has been inserted in analogy with the aforementioned poem.

The verb rjúfa ‘CV: to break, rip up, break a hole in’ is used in the same context in the formulaic þá’s rjúfask rēgin ‘when the Reins are ripped’ (Webb 52), unds (of) rjúfask rēgin ‘until the Reins are ripped’ (Grim 4, Lock TODO and Syed TODO). One might also compare the similar sounding (but not or only very distantly related) verb rífna ‘be riven, rent apart’ used in reference to the destruction of the world in Runic inscription Sö 154: Jörð sal rífna · ok upp-biminn ‘Earth shall be riven, and Up-heaven’, and Arn Hryn (in SkP II pp. 185–6, ll. 3/7–8, see also note there): meiri verði þinn an þeira · þrífnuðr allr, unds biminn rífnar, ‘greater than theirs may thy whole wealth be, until heaven is riven.’

The Speeches of the High One

(Hávamól)

Dating: See individual sections

Meter: Leeds-meter, Galders-law, Ancient-words-law

The Speeches of the High One is the second poem of R, which is the only medieval witness manuscript. Several sts. are however cited or alluded to in other places, such as Eyv Hák (TODO: formatting) 21 and FbrS TODO.

The poem before us does not very much seem like a single composition by one poet, but instead much more like a collection of scattered traditional poetry associated with the god Woden. It seems to contain at least two poems of practical life advice, two mythological narratives, scattered gnomic poetry about runes, and a list of galders. These various strands are united by their presumed speaker, namely Woden in His function as God of Wisdom.

Following previous authors, I identify the following strands, excepting various lone sts. that are probably later inserts. In the present edition each of the following is given a separate, short introduction:

1. 1–79 The Guest-strand; practical life advice, beginning with a guest arriving at a homestead
2. 81–90 Various scattered sts. of advice
3. 91–102 Woden’s failed seduction of Billing’s daughter
4. 103–110 Woden’s obtaining of the Mead of Poetry
5. 111–137 The Speeches of Loddfathomer; Woden’s advice to Loddfathomer
6. 138–146 The Rune-tally; various sts. relating to runes and their magical use
7. 146–165 The Leed-tally; Woden’s listing of 18 galders

Two questions shortly arise: who was the redactor (i.e., the person who set these strands together, and gave the new work the title Háva mól), and what was his motive? While a detailed and sufficient answer will probably never be found, a careful reading of the final stanza, 165, gives us some clues. By its prayer-like blessing, which brings up the Heathen dichotomy between the Gods and Ettins (the friends and enemies of Mankind, respectively) and calls the contents of the poem (which include unambiguous Heathen ritual instructions) “very useful” (allþorfr); and by its reference to the process of oral transmission, the whole poem in something resembling the current form must (it seems) have been put together no later than the early 11th century, in a pre-scribal, pre-monastic, Heathen context. (Iceland converted around year 1000, but people surely clung to the old traditions for some time longer.)

As seen by the emphasis on the usefulness of the poetry, the reason for this redaction was not strictly antiquarian, but foremost utilitarian; the redactor gathered an amount of traditional poetry he found useful (whether for its life-advice or mythology) into a single poem, which could then be learned by heart by anyone. In this he certainly achieved his goal. The Higb is by far the greatest surviving collection of pre-Christian Norse advice poetry, and has functioned like a Noah's Ark—or Hoardmimer's Wood—for that genre. Thus, those scattered stanzas which were not included by the redactor—and many must have existed—are now forever lost.

The Guest-strand (sts. 1–79)

The Guest-Strand (Old Norse: Gæsta-páttir) is one of the most interesting surviving works of Norse poetry. Sadly, its structure has been obscured by the insertion of unrelated sts. and by poor translations. My hope is to shed some light on the original coherence of the strand, while respecting the text as it appears in the manuscript. As I do not think it can do each stanza justice, and since there is not exactly a clear progression of themes, I will not here attempt a stanza-by-stanza summary of this strand. Rather, I will give some important observations and then let the reader read for himself.

The Strand is a piece of advice poetry, and takes its outset in a wanderer's arriving as a guest at a Norse farmstead. It first (roughly sts. 1–4) discusses the mutual responsibilities between guest and host, and then moves on to broader human interactions, with a particular focus on alcohol, war, friendship and human wisdom. While there is some coherence and nice transitions are frequently employed in order to shift from one theme to another (e.g. between sts. 4 and 5, or 10 and 11), the poem is not clearly divided into sections, nor is there (after the very first stanzas) a linear progression from one theme to another.

At all turns the poem advises caution and shrewdness. A man should always carry his “manwit” (ON man-vit, a word somewhat analogous with the English “common sense”) with him; he should think before he speaks

The poem moves seamlessly between various parts of life. To do so the poet often employs transitions where a st. repeats the structure of the previous one, but with a new subject. This is particularly evident in sts. 4–5 and 10–11.

 4            síns of fręista frama.

O givers, hail! A guest has come in;

 Very anxious is he who on the fires shall tempt his furtherance.

3 á bröndum 'on the fires' | Possibly referring a Norwegian folk custom, wherein a guest would sit down on the wood-pile outside of the door, waiting until being let in; see further TODO SOME ARTICLE on this custom. The speaker is announcing to the hosts (or "givers") that a guest, frozen, wet and tired, is currently sitting on the wood-pile, and ought to be let in.

4 síns of fręista frama 'tempt his furtherance' | i.e. try his luck; see how far he gets. The line is formulaic; cf. Weib 11, 13, 15, 17.

3      Elds es þorrf · þęim's inn es kominn

Of water there is need for the one who comes for a meal;

 of a good reception—if he might get one—
 of speech, and silence in return.

1–4 ALL | There is a good train of thought throughout the st.: the guest must first wash and dry himself, and then be welcomed to sit and eat at the table. After the host has provided these amenities the responsibility shifts onto the guest, who must now speak.

The word ęndr-þaga 'silence in return' leads a nice transition to the rest of the Strand, where proper social conduct (encompassed by the first word of the next stanza below, "wit") will be discussed more broadly. One may note that the verb þęgia 'shut up, be silent' (of which **þaga*, which only appears in the present compound, is a derivative, formed in the same way as saga 'saw, history, story' to ęggia 'say, speak') and its derivative þęgn 'silence' are frequently used by Scoldic poets to mark the very beginning of their works (e.g. Arn Magnadr 1<sup>11</sup>: þęgi sęim-brotar 'may gold-breakers [GENEROUS MEN] be silent', Egill Berdr 1<sup>V</sup>: hyggi ... til þagnar þinn lýðr 'may thy retinue focus on silence', Glúmr Gráf 1<sup>1</sup>: biðjum vér þagnar 'we ask for silence').

3 at auga-bragði 'Into a laughing-stock' | Idomatic. auga-bragð literally means 'twinkling of an eye, moment'; the sense here is thus something like 'a quick glance of derision'.

 for an unfickler friend man never gets than much manwit.

5 maðr 'man' | In R abbreviated with the rune ʝ m "man", the first of 45 such instances in the present poem. While Anglo-Saxon Latin-script mss. use several runes ideographically (e.g. ʀ o for OE ōðel 'homeland, patrimony'), there are (to my knowledge) no Scandinavian examples with runes other than ʝ. The tradition of ideographic runes standing for their names is ancient and goes back to the time before Latin writing, as proven by the inscriptions from Stentofen (DR 357) and Ingelstad (Ög 43), which use the runes ʝ j for ár 'year, good harvest' and ʝ d for dagr 'day', respectively. For rune names see below: Anonymous Runerow Poems.

 With ears he listens and with eyes he watches;
 so looks each learned man ahead.

2 þunnu hljóði þęgir 'shuts up and listens closely' | lit. 'shuts up with thin (i.e. attentive) listening'.

4 nýsisk fyrir 'looks ahead' | This verb underlies the noun for-njósn as found in Syed 24.

 praise and staves of liking.
 It's uneasy regarding that which one shall own in another man's chest.

2 lof ok líkn-stafi 'praise and staves of liking' | líkn 'liking' is a very interesting word. It is defined by ONP as: 'mercy, compassion, relief, comfort, help'. In the present poem its precise meaning seems to be something like 'the state of being liked by your surroundings to the point where people are willing to help you out'. Cf. its two other occurrences in the present poem: sts. 120 and especially 123 (where it is likewise paired with lof 'praise').

A better burden bears man not on the road
 than much manwit.
 Worse way-provision he drags not along on the plain than a too great drink of ale.

3 velli at ‘on the plain’ | Formulaic, the word vǫllr ‘plain, (uncultivated) field’ is also used in sts. 38 and 49. It is easily understood that the wild heaths and plains of Iron Age Norway were particularly unsafe places where a traveller needed to keep his wits about him, lest he fall victim to robbers or murderers (so st. 38).

The unvalorous man thinks he will always live

but old age gives him no peace, which yet spears would give him.<sup>51</sup>

<sup>51</sup>The unvalorous man might have been spared by the spears, but death will still find him through miserable old age. Since death is unavoidable it is better to live bravely, even if one risks dying in battle, than to live cowardly and die of sickness. This connects well to the ancient view of the 'straw-death' (TODO).

Man ought not to hold onto the cask, but still drink mead in moderation;
 he ought to speak the needful or shut up.
 For that uncouthness will no man blame thee, that thou go early to sleep.

1 Haldi-t maðr á keri 'Man ought not to hold onto the cask' | Perhaps referring to a toast wherein a drinking vessel would be passed around in a circle and each member would drink. Such toasts were drunk for a long time in Northern Europe—indeed this is the origin of the Scandinavian toasting-word, skål 'prosit, cheers!', lit. 'bowl!'. "Holding onto" the vessel (and not letting the next person drink) was surely seen as very rude; as late as 1519 a man in Jämtland was killed in an argument resulting from his refusal to pass on the bowl (see Sjöberg (1907)). The sense is thus: "Do not refuse a toast when offered (but do not drink too much, either!)"

2 mēli þarft eða þegi 'he ought to speak the needful or shut up' | Formulaic, line occurs identically in Webb 10/2.

The wretched man and badly turned out laughs at anything.

This he knows not, which he might need to know:
that he is not free of blemishes.

4 hann es-a vamma vanr 'he is not free of blemishes' | Formulaic, cf. Lock 30: es-a þér vamma vant 'thou art not free of blemishes'.

23      Ó·sviðr maðr · vakir umb allar nētr
2              ok hyggr at hví-vetna;

4              alt es víl sēm vas.

The unwise man is awake for all nights and thinks of anything.
Then he is weary when the morning comes:
all the trouble is as it was.

24      Ó·snotr maðr · hyggr sér alla vesa
2              við-hléjendr vini;

4              ef með snotrum sitr.

The unclever man thinks all those who laugh with him his friends.
This he finds not, that they yet make sport in him,
if among the clever he sits.

25      Ó·snotr maðr · hyggr sér alla vesa
2              við-hléjendr vini;
         þá þat fiðr · es at þingi kōmr,
4              at á for-mélendr fáa.

The unclever man thinks all those
who laugh with him his friends.
Then he finds, when to the Thing he comes,
that he has spokesmen few.

4 á for-mélendr fáa 'has spokesmen few' | Repeated in st. 62. He has few who are ready to take his side and speak up for him (in legal proceedings); true friends are proven in hard times, not in drunken chatter. The Thing was the old Germanic legal assembly, where smaller disputes might easily turn into deadly feuds.

26      Ó·snotr maðr · þykkisk allt vita,
2              ef á sér í vǫ veru;
         hitt-ki hann vǣit, · hvat skal við kveða,

4 ef hans fręista firar.

The unclever man seems to know everything
if he takes shelter in a nook.
This he knows not, what he shall answer
if men test him.

2 v̥ 'nook' | From earlier *vr̥; cf. Swedish vr̥ 'corner, nook', rare English wroo 'id.' The present stanza is to my knowledge the only Norse attestation of the form v̥, which features a rare Western sound change from vr- to v-. The more common change vr- to r- yields r̥, which is the normal Norse form. — Tangentially this word is brought up in FGT (1950) as an example of a word with nasal ̥, and contrasted with oral ̊ in r̊ 'sailyard'.

27      Ó·snotr maðr, · es með aldir kōmr, vęit-a maðr, · hinn's vęt-ki vęit,

6              þótt hann męli til mart.

The unclever man when among people he comes,
it's best that he shut up.
No one knows that he nothing knows,
unless he speak too much.
The man knows not, who nothing knows,
that he speak too much.

4              því es gęngr of guma.

Learned seems he who can ask and answer the same [way].
In no way may the sons of men hide that which eludes a man.

1-2 fregna ... sęgja 'ask ... answer' | Perhaps specifically in the context of a riddling contest of wisdom.

29      Órna męlir, · sá's ęva þęgir,
2              stað-lausu stafi;
            hrað-męlt tunga, · nema haldęndr ęigi,

He who never shuts up speaks plenty many utterings of absurdity.

A quick-spoken tongue—unless it be held in place—oft sings evil [into being] for itself.

3–4 hrað-mélt ... of gǫlr ‘A quick-spoken ... for itself’ | Formulaic. Cf. Lock 31.

3 nema haldendr ęigi ‘unless it be held in place’ | lit. ‘unless holders own it’ or ‘unless it own holders’. The ‘holders’ are perhaps the teeth which hold the tongue in place.

30 At auga-bragði • skal-a maðr annan hafa,

For a laughing-stock shall man not have another
when he comes to visit.
Many a one seems learned if he is not asked,
and gets to loiter about dry-skinned.

4 þurr-fjallr ‘dry-skinned’ | i.e. ‘untested’, equivalent to the English idiom get one’s feet wet. The word fell -fjall ‘skin, pelt’ is rare in Old Norse literature and only occurs in cpds, e.g. Wayl 11: ber-fjall ‘bear-pelt’. It survives in modern Swedish fjäll ‘scale (on fish and reptiles)’

31 Fróðr þykkisk • sá’s flóttu tǣkr

Learned seems he who takes to flight,
the guest, from a scoffing guest.
He knows not clearly, who grins over the food, that he be flirting with fiends.

2 gęstr ‘guest’ | The situation hinted at in this and the following stanza is that two guests—unknown to each other—have come to the same homestead. The sense is that when mocked by a stranger it is best not to engage, since the dealing may quickly turn violent. Cf. sts. 122, 123, and 125.

32 Gumnar margir • erusk gagn-hollir,

The strife of mankind will that ever be;
guest raves against guest.

2 feti ganga framarr 'take one step further' | Formulaic. Cf. Lock 1: svá't ęinu-gi feti gangir framarr 'so that thou not take one step further'.

1 matar góðan 'good of meat' | A Viking Age expression; see Encyclopedia.

3 [...] | It is doubtless that a word has been lost here; the meter and sense require it. Finnur Jónsson (1932) suggests glęggvan 'miserly, stingy', giving a litotes 'so unstingy', i.e., 'so generous'.

<sup>52</sup>No man is so generous that he would refuse a gift presented to him, nor loathe receiving a favour as thanks for his generosity.

 Givers-back and givers-again are friends for the longest if it comes to last long.

1 Vǫpnum ok vǫðum 'With weapons and garments' | i.e. weapons and armour (the "garments" are probably no silks); friends are supposed to help each other and strengthen their "violence capital". This alliterative word-pair is formulaic and in other occurrences exclusively refers to implements of war; cf. e.g. Beow 39, where Shield's pyre-ship is loaded with hilde-wǣpnum and beaðo-wǣdum 'war-weapons and battle-garments'.

 seldom they nourish sorrow,

 the stingy always grieves over gifts.

3 ó-snjallr, gløggv ‘unvalorous, stingy’ | Contrasting respectively with frókn, mildr ‘brave, generous’ in the first half of the stanza; very fine parallelism.

4 sýtir ... gjöfum ‘the stingy man ... gifts’ | Cf. st. 39. After receiving a gift, one was culturally obliged to give something back.

My garments I gave, on the plain,
 to two tree-men.
 Champions they seemed when cloaks they had;
 shameful is the naked hero.<sup>55</sup>

<sup>55</sup>One of the harder sts. in the poem. The probable sense is that “the clothes make the man” (or warrior): under expensive gear a thin tree-man might be lurking, and likewise even a mighty man (the choice of the word halr ‘hero, warrior’ (cf. sts. 36, 37) rather than the more neutral maðr ‘man, person’ is surely intentional) can never defend himself against a heavily armoured opponent. Without his arms, he becomes as vulnerable as the “tree-man” on the plain.

 For all have not become evenly knowing;
 half is every man.

1 Lítilla sanda, · lítilla sęva ‘Of small sands, of small seas’ | Probably a partitive genitive, the sense being that man’s “horizons” are small; the universe will always be far greater than him.

3–4 því-at ... ęld hvar. ‘For ... every man.’ | On the meaning of the second half of this stanza I find the view of Gudmundur Finnbogason (1929) most convincing; namely that every man has both strengths and weaknesses in terms of wisdom. As nobody can excel at everything, nobody is complete; every person is “half” (and it should be added that ON halfir has a more general sense of incompleteness than its English cognate). This interpretation fits particularly closely with sts. 71 and 132. — This stanza introduces several stanzas dealing with wisdom and foolishness.

4 þeim es sorga-lausastr sefi. 'his is the most sorrowless mind.' | i.e. he who is ignorant of his fate. It is surely fitting that Weden should say this, having knowledge of the inevitable destruction of the world and himself (see Rakes of the Reins).

4 dólskr 'hickish' | Derived from an ablaut variant of dalr 'valley, dale' + -iskr '-ish', the sense being 'provincial, not having left his (home) valley'. Cf. the Icelandic tribal names like vatns-dólr and lang-dólr 'inhabitants of Vatns-dalr (Waterdale), Lang-dalr (Longdale)'.

1 Þvegginn ok męttir ‘washed and full’ | A formulaic collocation. Cf. Rein TODO: kęmbðr ‘combed’ — þvegginn ‘washed’ — męttir ‘full’; Wsp 33: þó ‘washed’ — kęmbði ‘combed’. These examples attest to the importance of personal hygiene in the culture, something further seen by the ubiquity of combs in pre-Christian graves. One is reminded of a passage from Germania (ch. 22): Statim ē somnō, quem plērūmq̄ue in diem extrahunt, lavantur, saepius calidā, ut apud quōs plūrimum hiems occupat. Lautī cibum capiunt: sēparātae singulis sēdēs et sua cuique mēsa. Tum ad negōtia nec minus saepe ad convīvia prōcēdunt armātī. ‘On waking from sleep, which they generally prolong to a late hour of the day, they take a bath, oftenest of warm water, which suits a country where winter is the longest of the seasons. After their bath they take their meal, each having a separate seat and table of his own. Then they go armed to business, or no less often to their festal meetings (convivia, i.e., their Things).’

4 Þótt hann hafi-t góðan ‘although he has not a good one.’ | Finnur Jónsson (1932) considers this a late insert, and I agree. It seems that the inserter was not aware of the rules of the Leeds-meter meter and interpreted the preceding c-verse (né hęsts in hęldr) as an a-verse of Ancient-words-law.

The two following sts. are written in opposite order in R, but a symbol at the start of each indicates that they should switch places.

4 sumr af verkum vðl.

<sup>1</sup> I ve-sall ‘unblesed’ | Or ‘woe-blessed’. I have elsewhere translated this word as ‘wretched’, but have presently rendered it this way to show the etymological relationship. The second element in this compound is sęll, which lacks i-umlaut due to a shortening of the vowel before the umlaut became phonemic. The ancestral Proto-Norse forms would be **sālikr* and **wajē-sālir*. Cf. ᚱᚰᛋᛁᛗ-ᚱᚰᚲᛁᚷ wajē-marir ‘infamous’ on the Tjurkö bracteate, where the second element is the ancestor of ON męrr ‘renowned, famous’; the expected descendant **ve-marr* is not attested. I have chosen to translate sęll as ‘blessed’, but it is not a past participle and could also be rendered as ‘lucky’ or ‘blissful’. It carries a certain sense of innateness that is foreign to modern Western culture. Thus a king whose land experiences bountiful harvests (ár) is said to be ár-sęll ‘blessed with harvests’, while one whose kingdom is at peace (friðr) is said to be frið-sęll ‘blessed with peace’. In this worldview the state of the realm is not due to uncontrollable environmental or political factors, but rather arises from the very person of the king (TODO: Reference PCRN chapter).

A fire I saw burning high for a wealthy man, but outside he was dead before the doors.<sup>59</sup>

1 an séi ó-lifðum ‘than with the unliving’ | emend.; ȝſel lifðom R.

1 an séi ó-lifðum ‘than with the unliving’ | The reading of R, which would be normalized as ok ſel-lifðum ‘and for the blessed living’, is metrically defect since ſel- is strongly stressed and should carry alliteration. For the original form of the line we may instead cf. Faþb 30: Hvøtum ’s bættra · an sé ó-bvøtum ‘It’s better for the brisk than it may be for the unbrisk’. The corruption has probably happened in the following way: **en* (younger form of an ‘than’) in the prototype was misinterpreted as en ‘and, but’ and copied as ȝ (the tironian et), while **sei* ólifðom (probably with the words cramped together) became ſel lifðom.

2 ęy getr kvikr kú ‘always gets the quick a cow’ | i.e., “new opportunities always present themselves for the living”. A reference to the cattle-based economy (see also st. 76), the cow being used as a metonym: (cf. churchly English ‘the quick and the dead’, i.e. ‘the living and the dead’).

<sup>59</sup>The fire is presumably the man’s funeral pyre, on which a considerable amount of his wealth has been spent; according to ibn Fadlan (TODO) two thirds of a dead chieftain’s estate was spent on his funeral. One notes the contrastive en ‘but’ and may understand it as follows: “I saw a lavish funeral held for a man, but he was still dead.” This interpretation is supported by the High 71 below, which expresses the same sentiment.

4 nema řęisi niðr at nið.

A son is better, though he late be born after a passed-on man.
Seldom beat-stones stand near the road,
save by kinsman for kinsman raised.

1 Sonr es bętri ‘A son is better’ | i.e. it is better for a man to have a son and heir than not, even if the father should die some time before he is born. The son can further his father’s lineage and memory (as exemplified by the raising of a “beat-stone”), and as the poet says, it is rare for a non-relative to do so.

3 bautar-stęinar ‘beat-stones’ | Large standing stones raised in memory of someone. Numerous such stones with runic inscriptions are known from migration period Norway, often near grave fields. Some hold only single personal names or short phrases, like the stone from Sunde in Sunnfjord, western Norway (signum KJ 90): ÞIMNŲFETIY widugastir ‘Woodguest’, or the one from Bø in Rogaland, southwestern Norway (signum KJ 78): HTFÞMF NÞPF hnabdas hlaiwa ‘Naved’s grave’. Others hold longer inscriptions, like the one from Kjølervik in Rogaland (signum KJ 75): ÞFMNÞKŲ MKNŲNŲTFÞF NÞFÞIÞMŲMFŲNÞHÞH hadulaikaz ekhagustadaz hlaiwidomaguminino ‘Hathlac [lies here]. 2 mér 's í heðin hvern • handar vëni.

Two are of one host: the tongue is the head's bane;
in every cloak I expect a hand.

1–2 ALL | The whole st. fits poorly in context, and the metre and style are very out of place; it is probably a later insert.

1 Tveir 'ru çins herjar 'Two are of one host' | i.e. "the tongue and head belong to the same body (but the former often leads to the latter's demise)." — herjar is an inflected form of herr 'host, army', but its function is ambiguous; it can either be (1) the gen. sg., as adopted here, or (2) the nom. pl. 'harriers, raiders' (cf. gin-herjar 'Oncharriers') which would translate as "two are the destroyers of one", i.e. "the tongue and head often lead to the demise of the body".

1 tunga es hofuðs bani 'the tongue is the head's bane' | Formulaic or proverbial. Cf. the Old Swedish "Heathen Law", which describes how a duel should be conducted following an insult to a man's honour (my norm. and trans. following Löffler (1879)): Fallr þann orð hvar givit—glópr orða verstr, tunga hovuð-bani—liggi i ú-gildum akri 'If he falls who has given the [insulting] word—an insult is the worst of words, the tongue the head-bane—may he lie in an unhallowed field.'

2 handar 'a hand' | i.e. a hand holding a dagger.

2 margr verðr af aurum api ‘many a man turns an ape from wealth’ | Cf. Sun 34/4: margan hefr auðr apat ‘wealth has aped many a man’, which also lends support to the emendation.

1 fé ... frændr ‘Fee ... kinsmen’ | The import of this merism may be less clear to the modern reader. In the Germanic Iron Age farming society a man’s wealth was reckoned by how many heads of cattle (and the Norman loan-word cattle is itself the same word as capital) he owned (cf. st. 70 above, where “a cow” is used to express “an opportunity”), and his social power by the number of able male relatives ready to side with him in conflict (cf. st. 72 above and TODO: reference?). The meaning is thus: all your power will pass away, and so too must you, but if you leave a good reputation behind it can live on. For Indo-European poetic analogues, see West (2007, pp. 99 ff.).

The following stanzas are distinguished by the prevalence of Speeches-meter and the common subject matter.

In R the following two sts. come in the opposite order, but it seems probable from its Speeches-meter meter and the dative case of the words that 89 should follow 87. On the other hand st. 88, with its Leeds-meter meter and self-enclosed form seems a separate composition, and was probably inserted after 87 due to its first line (akri ár-sǫnum), which is also in the dative.

Weden's failed seduction of Billing's daughter

The following sts. are united by their meter, Leeds-meter (unlike most of the preceding sts., see introduction to them above), style and content. The strand begins with general maxims about love and relations between the sexes, before moving on to the narrative about Billing's daughter.

- 91      Bært nú mēli'k, · því-at bēði vęit'k, 2              brigðr es karla hugr konum, þá fęgrst mēlum, · es flást hyggjum;
 4              þat tēlir horska hugi.

Plainly I now speak, for I know both:
 fickle is men's thought towards women.
 We then speak fairest when we think falsest;
 that entraps sharp minds.

1 bēði 'both' | i.e. both sides, both sexes. The (male) poet declares that he will not attack the fair sex unfairly; he is also aware of men's faults.

3 fęgrst mēlum ... flást hyggjum 'speak fairest ... think falsest' | Formulaic. Cf. st. 45.

4 þat tēlir horska hugi 'that entraps sharp minds' | i.e., love (or sexual infatuation, the poet does not distinguish between them) can turn even wise men into foolish deceivers. Cf. Mbkv 20/1–2, which is probably partly based on this stanza: Ást-blindir 'ru seggir svá · sumir, at þykkja mjök fás gá; þannig verðr um man-söng mēlt; · marga hefr þat hyggna tēlt. 'Some men are so love-blind, that they seem to heed very little; // so it is said about love-song: many wise men has it entrapped.'

- 92      Fagrt skal mēla · ok fé bjóða, 2              sá's vill fljóðs óst fāa, líki leyfa · hins ljósa mans,
 4              sá fęr, es fríar.

Fairly shall speak, and offer fee,
 he who will get a woman's love;
 praise the body of the bright girl;
 he gets, who woos.

1 Fagrt skal mēla 'Fairly shall speak' | Formulaic. Cf. st. 45.

4 sá fęr, es fríar 'he gets, who woos' | i.e., "he who courts her gets her".

- 93      Ástar firna · skyli ęngi maðr 2              annan aldri-gi;
             opt fāa à horskan, · es à hęimskan né fāa,
 4              lost-fagrir litir.

For [matters of] love should no man ever blame another;
 oft they seize the sharp when they seize not the foolish, the lust-fair hues.

4 lost-fagrir litir 'lust-fair hues' | i.e. a woman with countenance so beautiful that men cannot help but greatly lust after her.

- 94      Ey-vitar firna, · es maðr annan skal,

2 þess es of margan gęngr guma;

 4 sá hinn mátki munr.

In no way shall man blame another for that which happens to many a man; from sharp to fools are the sons of men made by that mighty thing, love.

95 Hugr ęinn þat vęit, · es býr hjarta nęr,
 2 ęinn es hann sér of sefa;
 ęng es sǫtt verri · hvęim snotrum manni
 4 an sér ęngu at una.

The mind alone knows what dwells close to the heart;
 it is alone with its thoughts.
 No sickness is worse for any clever man than with nothing to be content.

96 Þat þa ręynda'k, · es í ręyri sat'k,
 2 ok vętta'k míns munar,
 hold ok hjarta · vas mér hin horska męr,
 4 þęygi hana at hęldr hęf'k.

I experienced it then, as I sat in the reed,
 and awaited my love.
 My flesh and heart was that sharp maiden—
 I have her none the more.

97 Billings męy · ek fann bęðjum á 2 sól-hvíta sofa;
 jarls ynði · þótti mér ękki vesa
 4 nema við þat lík at lifa.

Billing's maiden I found on the beds,
 sun-white, sleeping.
 An earl's pleasure seemed me naught to be,
 save living alongside that body.

1 męy 'maiden' | i.e. unmarried (virgin) daughter.

[Billings męr:]

98 „Auk nęr aptni · skalt Óðinn koma,

2           ef vilt þér mēla man, allt eru ó-skop, · nema ęin vitim
 4           slikan lōst saman.“

“And by evening shalt thou, Weden, come,
 if thou wilt get for thee the girl [me];
 everything’s misshapen unless we alone should know,
 such a vice together.”

[Billing’s maiden:]

99       Aptr ek hvarf · ok unna þóttumk
 2           vísun vilja frá;
           hitt ek hugða, · at hafa mynda’k
 4           gęð hęnnar allt ok gaman.

Back I turned—and thought myself in love—away from my wise will;
this I thought: that I would have her senses all, and pleasure.

2 vísun vilja frá ‘away from my wise will’ | i.e., “against my better judgment”; the wise choice would have been to walk away.

100      Svá kom’k nęst, · at hin nýta vas
 2           víg-drótt ęll of vakin, með brinnęndum ljósum · ok bornum viði,
 4           svá vas mér víl-stígr of vitaðr.

So I came next, as the useful war-troop was all awake;
 with burning lights and with carried sticks;
 so a sad path was marked out for me.

1 nýta ‘useful’ | Sarcastic. Billing’s daughter had apparently summoned a lynch mob.

3 bornum viði ‘carried sticks’ | lit. ‘carried wood’; the mob was armed with clubs.

4 víl-stígr ‘sad path’ | Ambiguous, referring either to the beating he would have received at the hands of the mob, or to his walk of shame away from the hall. The latter is perhaps more likely.

101      Auk nęr morni, · es vas’k ęnn of kominn,
 2           þa vas sal-drótt of sofin;
           greę ęitt þa fann’k · hinnar góðu konu
 4           bundit bęðjum à.

And by morning when I had come again,
 then was the hall-troop asleep.

A lone bitch I then found, by the good woman bound on the beds.

1 Auk nēr morni ‘And by morning’ | Mirroring the beginning of st. 97 above.

3 gr̥ey ęitt ‘a lone bitch’ | The insult is clearly understood: Weden is being asked to make love to the dog, “this is all you get!”

3 góðu ‘good’ | Possibly not sarcastic, but rather referring to her chastity.

102      Mǫrg es góð mēr, · ef gǫrva kannar,
2              hug-brigð við hali;
         þá þat r̥eynda’k, · es hit ráð-spaka 4              t̥eygða’k à fl̥érðir fljóð;
         hǫðungar h̥vęrrar · leitaði mér hit horska man
6              ok hafða’k þess v̥et-ki vífs.

Many a good maiden—if one comes to know her well—is heart-fickle towards men.

Then I found that out, as the counsel-clever girl into sins I tugged:
every kind of disgrace gave me that sharp girl,
and I had naught of the woman.

1 góð mēr ‘good maiden’ | A formulaic expression; the “goodness” here refers to faithfulness and chastity. Cf. Sbir 12, TODO.

Weden’s theft of the Mead of Poetry (104–110)

The intricate myth of how Weden came to own the Mead of Poetry is told more fully in Scold 5–6. That narrative goes as follows, with minor details left out: After the war between the Eese and Wanes, the two tribes of gods reconcile through spitting into a vat. Not wanting to discard this token of their truce, they instead create a man out of the spit, calling him Quasher; he is so wise that he can answer any question posed to him, and so travels around the world in order to share his wisdom with humans. Quasher eventually comes to the dwelling of two dwarfs, Fealer and Galer. They kill him and drain his blood into three vessels: two vats named Soon and Bothem, and a kettle named Woderearer. Through mixing the blood with honey they make a mead, with the power to turn anyone who drinks from it “a scold or man of learning (skald eða fr̥óða-maðr)”. The dwarfs then lie to the Eese about the murder, telling them that Quasher drowned in his own wisdom. Some time later, the dwarfs murder an ettin named Gilling and his wife. Gilling’s son, Sutting, learns of this and prepares to drown the dwarfs. In exchange for their lives and as recompense for his father’s slaying, the dwarfs offer Sutting the “dear mead” (m̥jǫðinn dýra; cf. here sts. 105 and 140). Sutting accepts the ransom and takes the mead home with him. He makes his daughter Guthlathe guard it. Some time later, Weden is out journeying, and finds nine thralls mowing hay. He sharpens their scythes with a special whetstone, and the mowing improves greatly. He then throws it in the air and the thralls shortly kill each other over it. By evening Weden comes to the owner of the thralls, Bigh, Sutting's brother. Bigh laments the death of his workmen, and so Weden, who calls himself Baleworker, offers to do the work of the thralls over the summer, in exchange for one drink of Sutting's mead. Bigh tells him that Sutting alone owns the mead, but that he will accompany Baleworker to Sutting to ask for the drink. The two arrive at Sutting, who as expected refuses to give any part of the mead away. Baleworker then tells Bigh that he will get to it anyway; he takes out the drill Rate, and tells Bigh to drill through the mountain, into the room where the mead is stored. Bigh first attempts to trick him by only drilling halfway, but eventually creates a narrow passage. Baleworker turns himself into a snake and crawls through it; as he does, Bigh tries to strike him the drill, but misses. After coming through, Baleworker sees Guthlathe watching over the mead. He goes on to sleep with her for three nights, after which she promises him three sips of the mead. With each sip he swallows the contents of one of the three vessels, so that all of the mead ends up in his belly. Having taken the mead, he dons his eagle-hame and flies away from the mountain. Sutting sees him, takes his own eagle-hame, and gives chase. The Eese see Weden in flight, and set out several large vat on the ground, into which Weden, still flying, spits out the mead. At this point Sutting has almost caught up with him, and so Weden "sends back" (senda apttr, usually interpreted being sent out from the anus) some of the mead, presumably into his face. This portion becomes the lot of foolish poets (skald-fifla blutr), while the rest of the mead is given to the Eese and to skilled poets (þeim mǫnnum, er yrkja kunnu 'those men who can compose [poetry]').

The core of this many-twisted myth is old. A close parallel is found in RV hymns 4.26–27. In these two hymns the soma plant (who in the Vedic mythology is not just the plant and its resulting drink, but also a god, perhaps somewhat like Quasher) is first held within "a hundred iron forts" (4.27.1c: śatām pūraḥ āyasīḥ) by the archer Kṛṣānu, before being stolen by a sweeping falcon. The falcon brings Soma to Manu, the ancestor of the Aryans and first sacrificer.

The resemblance to the last part of the Scold account should be obvious, but, notably, the detail of the falcon is not found in any of the sts. below. This shows that the narrative of Scold cannot be exclusively based on the sts. here below, but instead also relies on other, now-lost sources. This is also supported by the present sts. leaving out the narratives about Quasher, the two dwarfs, and Baye, along with some subtler narrative differences.

The order of the present sts. follows that of R, their main witness manuscript. The strand begins with some social advice (103), after which the narrative follows (104–110). It is narrated in the first person by Weden himself. The sts. do not tell the myth in chronological order and leave much up to the listener; they are surely composed for an audience that already knows the story. The following narrative details are given:

104. Weden visits Sutting's home, but does not receive a good reception.
105. Guthlathe falls in love with Weden, and gives him a drink of the Mead.
106. Weden has to bore through the mountains with the drill Rate.
107. Weden has "bought [the Mead] well"; possibly a euphemistic reference to sleeping with Guthlathe for it.
108. Guthlathe indeed does sleep with Weden, though not expressly in exchange for the Mead.
109. The following day (bins bindra dags, see note to this word in the edited text below), a group of Rime-Thurses come to Weden's hall, to ask him whether a Baleworker is among the Gods, or if he has been slain by Sutting.
110. Switching to the third person (which may indicate that this is his answer to the Rime-Thurses), Weden says that he "thinks" that Weden has sworn an oath, but that his words cannot be trusted. After the "simble" (i.e. drinking feast, banquet; probably referring to the drink of the Mead), Weden betrayed Sutting and made Guthlathe weep.

The underlying narrative seems to generally agree with that of Scold, but unlike its more transactional affair, we here find a stronger emphasis on Weden's cruel betrayal of Guthlathe. A notable detail not found in Scold is Weden's oath in st. 109. The content of the oath was most likely that Weden would marry Guthlathe, something supported by the language used (see note to st. 108: hins bindra dags). The recipient of the oath, which Weden clearly broke, was either Sutting or Guthlathe. That Weden swore it to Sutting, and thus asked him for Guthlathe's hand in marriage, may be suggested by the description of Sutting as svikvinn 'betrayed' in st. 109. This view, however, has an internal narrative problem: in st. 103 Weden describes his interaction with Sutting as poor, and in st. 105 Weden is said to have had to bore through the mountains, but this may just have been to reach Sutting, rather than Guthlathe as in Scold. The recipient of the oath being Guthlathe would agree better with the Scold narrative, and Sutting's betrayer would instead be her.

The well bought thing [Mead of Poetry] have I used well—for Woderearer is now come up

1–4 Vǫl ... jaðar | Taken on its own this st. would be somewhat difficult, but in context the import is clear: Woden says that He has made good use of the Mead of Poetry by bringing it to earth, making poetry (and surely likewise other intellectual disciplines) available to men.

3 Óð-rórir 'Woderearer' | One of the vessels in with the Mead of Poetry was held (see introduction to the present section above), here standing in for all the Mead.

4 jaðar 'rim' | metr. emend.; jaðar R has a long root-syllable, and does not fit grammatically.

The following day went the Rime-Thurses to ask for the High One's counsel, in the High One's hall.
 About Baleworker (= Weden) they asked, if he were come among the bonds [GODS], or if Sutting had slain him.

1 Hins hindra dags 'The following day' | This is the only occurrence of the comparative hindra 'following, next' in the Norse (i.e. 'belonging to Norway and its colonies') literature. The superlative bindstr 'last, final' does occur more often (e.g. indsta sinni 'the last time', with loss of the b-; see CV: bindri), and the possible derivative bindar-dags 'day after tomorrow, two days after' is found twice, both times in the Gole, chh. 37 and 266. If we, however, search in the broader Scandinavian sphere, we find in the Swedish provincial laws an exact equivalent of the present phrase, namely OSwe. hindra-dagber, a law-word referring specifically to the 'day after the wedding', used both on its own and in the expression hindra-dags gief 'morning gift'. If this is indeed the sense in the present stanza, two interpretations are possible: it either (i) refers sarcastically to Weden's sleeping with Guthlathe (as would be done on the wedding night), or (ii) means that Weden actually married, or promised to marry, Guthlathe. The latter interpretation may find support in st. 109, see notes there.

A high-oath I ween that Weden has sworn—how shall one trust his truces?
 Away from the simble he left Sutting betrayed, and Guthlathe, made to weep.

1–4 Baug-ęið ... Gunn-lǫðu 'A high-oath ... brought to tears'<sup>TM</sup> | The exact narrative referred to in the stanza is hard to pin down, but I find the following most likely: Weden swore an oath on a high, its contents being that he would marry Guthlathe. Sutting then hosted a simble (banquet, drinking feast) for the new couple (cf. bins hindra dags in st. 108), and Weden slept with her, but after. svikvinn 'betrayed' and gróttu 'brought to tears' are (respectively masc. and fem.) acc. sg. past participles of the transitive verbs svikva 'to betray' and gróta 'to make weep, bring to tears'. I read lét as meaning 'left, abandoned, forsook'.

The Speeches of Loddfathomer

ON Loddfáfnis mǫl.

A series of advice stanzas addressed to Loddfathomer, an otherwise unknown figure who is clearly mythological. The name is a compound: the first element, lodd-, is related to ON loddari 'juggler, tramp', OE loddere 'pauper, beggar'; the second, Fáfnir (Fathomer), is the name of a famous Wyrm and literally means 'embracer'. This name gives a picture of an archetypal "bumbling fool"; he is taught by Weden, his opposite.

The section division is found in R. Stanza 111 has a large initial M, albeit smaller than those which introduce new chapters and poems, and the beginning of the following section, the Rune-Tally, is also clearly marked by an initial.

 I heard them say so:<sup>62</sup>

<sup>62</sup>The speaker, describing himself as a thyle (þulr 'sage, chanter of memorized poetry'), says that he will relate what he has heard said in Walhall. Considering the location, it seems almost certain that the giver of this advice was its owner, Weden. The receiver of the advice, Loddfáthomer (see Encyclopedia for etymologies), is otherwise unknown.

1 Ofar-la ‘Sorely’ | Contraction of ofar-liga ‘CV: high up, in the upper part’, presumably meaning that the words were particularly grievous or insulting, i.e., they “got to him”. Whether he was murdered or committed suicide is not clear.

4 líkn-fastan 'steadfast in liking' | The first element líkn 'liking' is somewhat difficult; see sts. 8 (with note) and 120. For the present cpd La Farge and Tucker (1992) give a tentative 'assured of favour', while CV gives 'fast in goodwill, beloved'.

 Up shalt thou not look in battle —alike to a madman become the sons of men—lest men bewitch thy [sense/life/face].<sup>66</sup>

<sup>66</sup>A very difficult st. CV explains gjalti as an old dative of goltr ‘boar, hog’, and thus sees the closely related phrase verða at gjalti as “‘to be turned into a hog’, i.e. ‘to turn mad with terror’, esp. in a fight”. The vowel breaking is however unexpected here, since goltr (< Proto-Norse **galtur*) is an u-stem, which makes the stem-vowel in the dat. sg. galti (< **galtiu*, cf. kunimudiu, dat. sg. of **Kunimundur*, on the Tjurkö 1 bracteate) the result of i-umlaut rather than an original short **e*.

La Farge and Tucker (1992) instead explain the word as a borrowing from Old Irish geilt ‘insane, mad’. Pettit (1986) follows this, and argues that the whole theme of the st. probably be of Celtic origin, giving several examples from Celtic literature of warriors going mad upon looking up into the sky during battle. In this case the men (balir, which word seems to have an association with warriors; cf. 36–37, 49) would be to quote Pettit some sort of “supernatural sky warriors”, in my opinion most likely the Oneharriers.

I counsel thee, O Loddfathomer, that thou learn the counsels;

 they will be good for thee if thou get:
 Wherever thou drinkest ale choose for thee Earth's might,
 for earth takes against drunkenness, and fire against sicknesses;
 oak against dysentery; the ear [of corn] against sorcery;
 bearded rye against hernia; in feuds shall one invoke Moon;
 heather against bite-sicknesses, and runes against a bale;<sup>69</sup> fold [EARTH] shall one employ against flood.

7 *h*ęiptum skal Mána kvęðja ‘in feuds shall one hail Moon’ | Cf. Wsp 5 which mentions the “Moon’s might”; for which He is presumably here invoked. For kvęðja, here “hail”, cf. Lock P3.

The Rune-Tally

This group of stanzas is introduced by a large initial in R, marking the beginning of a new section. In younger paper manuscripts they have the header Rúna-tals þáttur ‘Strand of the Rune-Tally’, and generally give an archaic, mystic impression; at times one gets a feeling that they were drawn from the lips of an Odinic priest.

Apart from these stanzas there are a few other instances of similar Runic magic. Closest at hand is st. 80 above, which would fit seamlessly into the present section. Outside of Highb there is Syed 4–16, also preserved in R.

1 Fimbul-ljóð níu ‘Nine fimble-leeds’ | Nine very great chants or spells (galders), compare the eighteen leeds below (st. 147 onward). It is unclear what this has to do with Weden’s Hanging; this stanza may be an insert.

1-2 hinum frégja syni Bólþorns, Bęstlu fğður ‘the famous son of Balethorn, Bestle’s father’ | According to Yilv 6, Byre got for his wife Bestle, the daughter of the ettin Balethorn. By her he fathered three sons: Weden, Will and Wigh. The “famous son of Balethorn” mentioned here is then Weden’s maternal uncle, which reflects an old Germanic (and more broadly European) custom of sending sons away to be fostered by their mother’s brothers or father. Cf. TODO: some reference.

 My word from a word a word sought out;

1 nam’k frévask ‘I took to flourish’ | A notorious mistranslation (TODO: source) has rendered these words as “I took semen”, seeing in them a reference to Weden “taking” the seed from hanged men in order to replenish his own powers (something not otherwise attested). This absurd notion which is probably based on the word frę ‘seed’ makes no sense in the context of the text and has no philological grounding. fręvask is without doubt a reflexive verb, and frę is used of plant seeds, not ejaculate.

3-4 orð ... lęitaði. ‘My word ...sought out.’ | i.e. “Every good speech led to another; every good deed likewise.”

Knowest thou one shall send? Knowest thou how one shall soo?<sup>70,71</sup>

<sup>70</sup>A neat semantic structure would be found if the former four verbs referred to runes: carving, interpreting, painting (with blood?), and divining; and the latter four referred to sacrifice: asking for boons, worshipping, sending (the sacrifice or the prayer; making sure the gods receive it), and slaying the victim. This may be supported by the following stanza, which repeats the last four verbs here in what looks like a sacrificial context. See further relevant Encyclopedia entries.

4 [...] | For metrical reasons it is very likely that a line has been lost here.

<sup>72</sup>An identical progression of four verbs suggests a close relation with the previous st. — The sense seems to be that it is better not to sacrifice at all than to sacrifice in excess, since even a small gift (to the gods) will be rewarded. A ritual cycle of gifts and rewards between men and the gods is also seen in other Indo-European pagan literatures. Compare the Sanskrit Dehí me, dádamí te 'Give to me, I give to thee' and Latin dō ut dēs 'I give that thou might give'.

The Leed-Tally (147–165)

This section of High, the so-called the Leed-Tally (Ljóðatal), is not separated from the preceding section (which is marked out with a large initial), but is usually taken as separate since it is a self-contained list not much concerned with runes. The speaker (certainly Weden) recounts eighteen spells, apparently to Loddfathomer. The spells themselves are not listed; only their use and effects. They are aristocratic and Odinic in character, and deal with such things as battle (3, 4, 5, 8, 11, 13), healing (spell 2, 12), countering sorcery (6, 10), controlling the elements (7, 9), and seduction (16, 17). The eighteenth and last spell must remain mysterious; not even its purpose is told, and it is known only to Weden and his lover.

The eighteen have some similarities with other known spells and lists of spells. The fourth bears a strong likeness to Growe 10, and its effect (removing fetters) is shared with the High German Mers I, where such a spell is actually found.

<sup>4</sup> vélir ‘staffs’ | plural of völr, a magic staff used by witches and warlocks. The word völv ‘wallow’ (seeress, prophetess) derives from this word. The reading vélir ‘wiles, tricks, deceits’ must be excluded for metrical reasons since a Leeds-meter c-verse cannot end in a trochée.

1-2 ef mik sérir þegn á rótum rás viðar ‘if athane wounds me on the roots of a raw/sappy tree’ | i.e., “if someone carves a runic curse directed against me”. The sappy wood was apparently thought to be important for the curse to work. Cf. Gretter 79, where a hag curses Gretter in the following way: after finding a small tree and planing a small smooth surface onto a burnt side of it, she carves runes in its roots and reddens them with her own blood. She then chants galders while walking counter-clockwise around it. She last pushes it out to sea, praying for it to drift to Gretter's homestead, cursing him. Cf. also Sbir 32 where a brár viðr ‘raw/sappy tree’ occurs in the context of a curse.

3 þęr villar fara 'they (fem.) go astray' | emend.; þęir villir fara 'they (masc.) go astray' R

<sup>77</sup>The riður '(female) riders' were witches who would leave their original human shapes or skins (hamir) in order to fly around in the air tormenting and poisoning villagers. Their original bodies would then be lying in a coma-like state, in something resembling that which is today called astral projection. Yet, it was not the case that their whole mental faculties would disconnect from their bodies, but rather they would leave behind something of their humanity, which was thought to be inextricably linked to their human bodies. Weden was through his second sight able to see these riders, and could then use his superior magical skill to confuse them so that they would not be able to return to their human "home"-shapes or minds, but were instead forced to stray as tormented disentangled ghosts; a cruel fate. — Weden likewise brags about tricking riders in Hbl 20.

The Speeches of Webthrithner

(Vafþrúðnismól)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): 800s (0.105)–900s (0.894)

Meter: Leeds-meter

A wisdom contest poem, known by the author of Yilv.

Far from being a loose collection of pieces of mythic information, the poem is tightly structured.

Weden first asks his wife, Frie, for counsel, as he is curious about the ancient wisdom which the ettin Webthrithner might possess (1). Frie expresses worry, as she considers Webthrithner wiser than all other ettins (2), but Weden says that he has travelled far and wide, and wishes to know what Webthrithner's hall is like (3). Frie wishes Weden good luck against the ettin (4) and he departs, to challenge Webthrithner's orð-spēki 'word-wisdom' (5). He arrives at hall of Webthrithner (6), who promptly declares that Weden will not come out of the hall unless he be wiser than him (7). Weden introduces himself as Gainred, saying that he has travelled far in need of Webthrithner's hospitality (8). Webthrithner invites Weden to sit down (9), but he instead utters a gnomic stanza (10) not unlike those of the first section of Highb.

Webthrithner then begins to ask questions relating to the mythology, each answered by Weden in turn. The questions concern which horses pull the day (11–12) and night (13–14), the river which divides the gods and ettins (15–16) and the plain where Surt and the gods will fight (17–18).

Webthrithner calls the god learned, invites him to sit on the bench, and declares that the loser of the contest must give his head (19). The roles are now reversed, and Weden asks the ettin about the origins of earth and heaven (20–21), of sun and moon (22–23), of day, night, and the phases of the moon (24–25), and of winter and summer (26–27); then about the earliest being, namely the ettin Earyelmer (28–29), his origins (30–31) and how he reproduced asexually (32–33). Weden continues by asking what Webthrithner himself first remembers (34–35), about the origin of the wind (36–37), the god Nearth (38–39), Walhall and the Oneharriers (40–41), and where Webthrithner learned these esoteric pieces of wisdom (42–43).

After this the structure and tone of the questions change; each one begins with the same first half as that of st. 3, and they concern the end-times. Weden asks which humans will survive after the Fimble-winter (44–45), how the sun will rise after Fenrer has destroyed it (46–47), about some obscure maidens (48–49; see discussion there), which Eese will survive after the flame of Surt goes out (50–51) and how Weden will die (52–53). Finally, he asks what Weden spoke in the ear of Balder before he was burned on the pyre (54). Webthrithner at last understands the identity of his challenger, since only Weden himself could know the answer to that question. He laconically accepts his imminent death and the futility of his word-wisdom (55); the poem ends with his admission that Weden will always be the wisest (56).

[Weden quoth:]

2 mēli þarft eða þęgi ‘ought to speak the needful or shut up’ | Formulaic, this line occurs identically in Higb 19.

4 kald-rifaðan ‘cold-ribbed’ | i.e. ‘cold-hearted, cunning’.

    “Say the one, if thy wisdom avails,
    and thou, Webthrithner, mightst know:
    Whence Earth did come, or Up-heaven,
    first, O learned ettin?”
    Weden:

1 óði | The first word on fol. 3r. of A; from this point we have the poem in both manuscripts.

Vafþrúðnir: 21 „Ór Ymis holdi · vas jǫrð of sköpuð, 2 en ór bęinum bjǫrg,
himinn ór hausi · hins hrím-kalda jǫtuns,
4 en ór svęita sęr.“ [R 8r/10, A 3r/2]

Webthrithner: “Out of Yimer’s flesh was the earth shaped,
but out of his bones the mountains;
heaven out of the skull of the rime-cold ettin,
but out of his blood the sea.<sup>80</sup>”

4 svęita ‘blood’ | In poetry svęiti, although cognate with ModEngl. ‘sweat’, almost always means ‘blood’. This is also the case with the OE swāt, as seen e.g. in Beow 1286a: sweord swāte fāb ‘sword stained with sweat’, 2689b–2690: hę ge-blóðegod wearð // sáwul-dríore; · swāt ýðum wéoll. ‘he was bloodied in soul-gore; the sweat gushed in waves’.

<sup>80</sup>The present st. very closely resembles Grim 41; lines 1 and 4 here are identical to lines 1–2 there, and lines 2 and 3a here are very similar to line 3a and 4 there. Although the stanzas are clearly related, they are still distinct enough that the one cannot be a direct scribal copy of the other. I think that the relation is most likely to be oral, and that the two stanzas were both composed in the same, most likely West Norwegian, community of poets, or perhaps even by the same individual.

Óðinn: 22 „Sęg þat annat, · ef þitt óði dugir
2 ok þú Vafþrúðnir vitir,

Weden: “Say the other, if thy wisdom avails,
and thou, Webthrithner, mightst know:
Whence Moon did come, he that journeys over men,
or Sun likewise?”

Vafþrúðnir: 23 „Mundil-fari hęitir, · hann’s Mána faðir 2 ok svá Sólur hit sama;
himin hverfa · þau skulu hverjan dag

Webthrithner: “Mundlefare is he called; he is Moon’s father, and so of Sun likewise.
Turn round in heaven shall they, every day,
for the year-tally of mankind.”

4 ǫldum at ár-tali ‘for the year-tally of mankind’ | Cf. Wsp 6, where the Reins gave names to night, the moon-phases, morning, midday, afternoon, and evening ǫrum at tęlja ‘the years for to tally’.

Óðinn: 24 „Sęg þat þriðja, · alls þik svinnan kveða [R 8r/15, A 3r/6]

Weden:

Vafþrúðnir: 25 „Dellingr heitir, · hann's Dags faðir, “Delling is he called; he is Day's father,

but Night was born to Narrow.
The waxing and waning did the useful Reins create for the year-tally of mankind.”

Webthrithner:

3 ný ok nið ‘The waxing and waning’ | i.e. “the moon-phases”. Cf. Wsp 6.

Weden quoth:

Vafþrúðnir: 27 „Vind-svalr heitir, · hann's Vetrar faðir,
2 en Svęsuðr Sumars.“

[R 8r/20, A 3r/10]

“Windswoll is he called; he is Winter's father;

Weden quoth: “Say the fifth, as they call thee learned,
and thou, Webthrithner, mightst know:
Who of the Eese, or of Yimer’s kinsmen [ETTINS], Webthrithner: “From the Ilewaves splashed venom-drops;

so it grew until it formed an ettin.
Our lineages came there all together, thus it is ever all too fierce.”

1-4 ALL | Over æons the splashing venom-drops combined until they formed a sentient being: this was Earyelmir, whom Yilv identifies with Yimer. This stanza is cited in support of the lengthy and embellished creation narrative found in Yilv, but it is not certain that this is what our poet had in mind.

The Illewaves are probably a reflex of the chaotic primeval Waters found in many West Eurasian mythologies, including Genesis 1:1–3 and RV 10.129. Of these two foundational religious sources the latter is closer to the present stanza, and probably holds the more archaic conception. Where we find in the Jewish narrative a proper creation; at the very beginning of time God's spirit is on the Waters and He makes the light shine over them, we find in these two Indo-European texts a spontaneous emergence of a single primeval entity long before the Gods are born—here from the violent splashing of venom, in RV 10.129.3 from “the power of heat” (tāpasah mabinā). This entity in turn asexually begets sexual beings—here through rubbing his limbs together, in RV 10.129.4 simply giving rise to “desire” (kāma) which serves as the “primal seed of thought” (mānasah rétaḥ prathamām)—and it is from these that the world is populated.

- “Within the hand of the rime-thurse, they said, did grow a maiden and lad together.
Foot by a foot begat for the learned ettin
a six-headed son.”
- 1–3 Und hendi ... fótr við fōti 'Within the hand ... Foot against foot' | The image is masturbatory. The stanza is paraphrased in Ylfr 5: En svá er sagt, at þá er hann svaf, fekk bann sveita. Þá óx undir vinstri hendi honum maðr ok kona, ok annarr fótr hans gat son við þðrum, en þaðan af kómu éttir. 'But so is said, that when he slept he began to sweat. Then grew within his left hand a man and a woman, and one foot of his begat a son by the other, and thereof come the lineages [of Ettins].'
- [R 8r/27, A 3r/17]

- [R 8r/29, A 3r/18]
- Weden quoth:

What recallest thou first, or knowest foremost?
Thou art all-wise, ettin!”

Vafþrúðnir kvað: 35 „Ør-ófi vetra · áðr véri jǫrð of skǫpuð, [R 8r/30, A 3r/19, G]
2 þá vas Ber-gǫlmir borinn;
þat fyrst of man’k, · es hinn fróði jǫtunn
4 á vas lúðr of lagiðr.“

Webthrithner quoth: “Uncountable winters before the Earth was created, then was Bareyelmir born.
It I first remember, when the learned ettin on the tree-trunk was laid.<sup>82</sup>”

<sup>82</sup> An obscure mythological reference. According to the prose of Yǫl, after the sons of Byre (that is, Weden, Will and Wigh) slew Yimer, so much blood flew from his wounds that all the race of Ettins were drowned, save for Bareyelmir and his family, who survived by getting up on his lúðr. This is clearly a variant of the flood myth, but it may be of Biblical origin.

In regular prose, lúðr usually means ‘trumpet, blowing horn’, less commonly ‘flour-bin’; the underlying sense seems to be ‘hollowed-out wood’. Considering the transitive nature of Bareyelmir being laid (of lagiðr) upon it, the stanza might instead be referring a ship burial, so that the first thing Webthrithner remembers is Bareyelmir’s funeral.

Óðinn kvað: 36 „Seg þat níunda, · alls þik svinnan kveða, [R 8r/32, A 3r/21]
2 ok þú Vaf-þrúðnir vitir, hvaðan vindr of kǫmr · svá’t færr vág yfir,
4 é męnn hann sjalfan of séa.“

Weden quoth: “Say the ninth, as they call thee wise,
and thou, Webthrithner, mightst know:
Whence the wind comes which fares over the wave;
men always see his very self?”

4 é męnn hann sjalfan of séa ‘men always see his very self’ | Most likely a negative clitic -t has been lost from the verb séa ‘see’, which would have given the proper reading: “men never see his very self”.

Vafþrúðnir: 37 „Hrę-svęlgr hęitir, · es sitr á himins ęnda, [R 8r/34, A 3r/22] 2 jǫtunn í arnar ham;
af hans vęngjum · kveða vind koma
4 alla męnn yfir.“

Webthrithner: “Rawswallower is he called who sits at heaven’s end;
an ettin in an eagle’s hame.
From his wings they say that the wind comes over all men.”

[Óðinn kvað:]

38 „Sæg þat tíunda, · alls þú tíva røk
 2 qll Vafþrúðnir vitir, hvaðan Njǫrðr of kom · með ása sonum;
 4 hofum ok hǫrgum · rēðr hund-mǫrgum ok varð-at ósum alinn.“

[R 8v/1, A 3r/24]

“Say the tenth, since thou of the Rakes of the Tews all, O Webthritner, mightst know:
 Whence Nearth did come among the sons of the Eese?
 Hoves and harrows he rules hound-many,
 and he was not to the Eese begotten.”

[Weden quoth:]

4 hofum ok hǫrgum ‘hoves and harrows’ | A formulaic merism, see note to Wsp 7 for other occurrences. This stanza seems to be referring to the large count of cultic places named after Nearth in Norway (TODO: source this); cf. here Grim 16, where it is said that Nearth rēðr hǫ-timbruðum hǫrgi ‘rules a high-timbered harrow’. Also of interest is Lock 51, where a goddess speaks about her véum ok vǫngum ‘wighs and wongs’, other cultic names. All of these examples suggest something about the Heathen view of shrines.

[Vafþrúðnir kvað:]

39 „Í Vana-heimi · skópu hann vís regin
 2 ok sældu at gíslingu goðum, í aldar røk · hann mun aptr koma
 4 heim með vísu vǫnum.“

[R 8v/3, A 3r/26]

“In Waneham the wise Reins<sup>83</sup> created him, and sold him as a hostage to/for the gods.
 In the Rakes of Mankind<sup>84</sup> he will come back home among the wise Wanes.”

[Webthritner quoth:]

The two following stanzas are damaged in both R and A; R has only st. 40, but splits it in two, while A has 40/1 (abbreviated in the ms.: S. þ. e. XI) and then jumps to the answer. The present two stanzas are reconstructed. TODO: explain better.

3 val þeir kjósa ‘the slain they choose’ | It is from this verbal phrase that the agent noun val-kyrja ‘walkirrie’ is derived; yet those are all women (as the very gender of the word shows), while the Oneharriers are male.

<sup>92</sup>The phrase stíga á ‘step onto, mount’ is also used to refer to one stepping aboard a ship or mounting a horse (see CV: stíga for citations). Its use for a person being borne onto the pyre seems formulaic and has been compared with Beow 1118b: gūð-rinc á-stáh ‘the war-champion mounted [his pyre]’, although the interpretation of that line is controversial. Fulk et al. (2008)[186] follow Grundtvig in emending güð-rinc to güð-réc ‘war-smoke’ and relate it to Beow 3144b (wudu-réc á-stáb ‘wood-smoke rose up’, also in a description of a cremation. According to them Grim 54 “almost certainly refers not to Baldr but to Óðinn, probably imagined to mount the pyre in order to set fire to it.”

With a fey mouth have I spoken my ancient staves, and about the Rakes of the Reins.
Now with Weden have I shared my word-wisdom;
thou art ever wisest of men!”

1 mann-gi | manni dat. sg. RA is impossible; a subject is needed.

3 fęigum ‘fey’ | A word with strong fatalistic connections. Webthrithner realises that he was bound to die from the moment he proposed the wager (v. 19), as no being can outwit Weden.

4 orð-spęki ‘word-wisdom’ | The same word-wisdom Weden in st. 5 set out to try.

5 vera ‘of men’ | verr means ‘husband, man’ and is here used for reasons of alliteration; it does not imply that Weden is not a God.

The Speeches of Grimner

(Grímnismól)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): 900s (0.976)

Meter: Leeds-meter, Ancient-words-law (2/3–4, 28/3–5, 45/3–5, 48/4, 49/1–2, 53), Galders-law (46)

The Speeches of Grimner are preserved whole in both R and A.

The poem itself is surrounded by two long introductory prose narratives containing some very old motifs, which are here brought up in the notes. It's hard to say for how long these texts have accompanied the poem (TODO: I may write about this in the Introduction, since this question is important for several other poems), but since they are found in both R and A and contain these motifs it would seem that they are fairly old. Together with sts. 1–3 they form a frame narrative that gives additional meaning to the gnomic sts. enclosed within.

The gnomic sts. themselves, the meat of the poem, are mythological and often quite obscure. In this they align closely with other Eddic gnomic poems such as High, Webth, Syed, and Allw.

Weden begins by listing the halls of the gods (4–17). This section has been discussed in detail by de Vries (1952) TODO! who considers it corrupt. Specifically, he sees the second half of v. 4 as a later insert, since it does not elaborate on the “holy land” mentioned in the first half. Jackson (1995) has argued convincingly against this, showing how the first half serves as a generalized introduction to the list; the holy land is the dwelling-places of the gods.

After this list come several sts relating to Weden and his hall, Walhall (18–23). Mentioned are the preparation of food in Walhall (18), Weden's wolves (19) and ravens (20), the river through which the dead have to wade (21) and the gate through which they have to pass (22), the count of doors in Walhall (23), the count of doors in Thunder's hall Bilshirner (24), and two animals which stand on the hall and gnaw on the branches of the tree Leered (25–26). From the latter animal's—the stag Oakthirner's—horns droplets fall into Wharyelmer, which is the origin of all rivers (26).

This introduces a list of mythic rivers (27–28), ending with the waters through which Thunder must wade on his way to Ugdrassle (29). This leads to a list of the horses ridden by the other gods on their way to Ugdrassle (31) which is followed by a description of the roots of Ugdrassle (31), then its animals (32–36) the Walkirries (37), and beings associated with the sun and moon (38–40), the things created from Yimer's body (41–42) with a digression on the significance of the blout for men in the present (43, see note there!), the creation of the ship Shidebladner (44) and finally a list of the noblest of several categories of things and groups (45).

After these lists Weden utters an unclear st. invoking the gods (46), before listing many of his names and the circumstances in which they were used (47–50). He then turns to Garfrith, disappointed by the inhospitality and poor conduct of his former protégé, and predicts his imminent death (51–53). He finally reveals himself by his true name, daring Garfrith to face him (53). After this he repeats several of his names (54), and the poem ends.

In the final prose section we are told that Garfrith, after learning that he was torturing Weden, hurried up to take the god away from the fires, but tripped and fell on his sword and died. After this his son Ayner ruled for a long time.

From the sons of king Reeding (Frá sonum Hraððungs konungs)

- P1a Hraððungr konungr átti tvá sonu. Hét annarr Agnarr, enn annarr Geirrøðr. Agnarr var tíu vetra enn Geirrøðr átta vetra. Þeir reru tveir á báti með dorgar sínar at smá-fiski. Vindr rak þá í haf út. Í nátt-myrkri brutu þeir við land ok gingu upp; fundu kot-bónda einn. Þar vóru þeir um vetrinn. Kerling fostraði Agnar, enn karl Geirrøð. At vári fekk karl þeim skip. Enn er þau kerling leiddu þá til strandar, þá mælti karl ein-méli við Geirrøð. Þeir fengu byr ok kvómu til stöðva fjoðrú síns. Geirrøðr var fram í skipi. Hann hljóp upp á land enn hratt út skipinu, ok mælti: „Far þú þar er smyl hafi þik.“ Skipit rak út. Enn Geirrøðr gekk út til bójar; hánú var vel fagnat; þá var faðir hans andaðr. Var þá Geirrøðr til konungs tekinn, ok varð maðr ágétr. [R 8v/31, A 3v/23]

King Reeding had two sons. One was called Ayner, and the other Garfrith. Ayner was ten winters old, but Garfrith eight winters. The two were rowing in a boat with their trolling-lines for small fishing. The wind drove them out into the sea. In the dark of night they crashed onto land and walked ashore; they found a lone cottage farmer. There they stayed over the winter. The wife fostered Ayner, but the husband Garfrith.<sup>93</sup> In the spring the husband gave them ships, but when he and his wife led them to the shore, the husband spoke privately with Garfrith.<sup>94</sup> They caught good wind, and came to their father's harbour. Garfrith was in the front of the ship. He leapt onto land and pushed out the ship, and spoke: "Go thou whither the fiends may have thee!" The ship drove out. But Garfrith walked towards the farm; he was welcomed well; by then was his father ended. Garfrith was then taken as king, and became an excellent man.

- P1b Óðinn ok Frigg sátu í Hliðskjölfu ok sá um heima alla. Óðinn mælti: „Sér þú Agnar fóstara þinn, hvar hann elr börn við gýgi í hellinum? En Geirrøðr, fóstari minn, er konungr ok sitr nú at landi.“ Frigg segir: „Hann er matniðingr sá at hann kveir gesti sína ef hánú þykkja of-margir koma.“ Óðinn segir at þat er in mesta lygi. Þau veðja um þetta mál. Frigg sendi eskis-mey sína, Fullu, til Geirrøðar. Hon bað konung varask at eigi fyr-gerði hánú fjöl-kunnigr maðr sá er þar var kominn í land, ok sagði þat mark á at engi [R 9r/10, A 4r/3]

8 hundr var svá ólmr at á hann myndi hlaupa. En þat var inn mesti hé-gómi at Geirrøðr vëri eigi mat-góðr ok þó lét hann hand-taka þann mann er 10 eigi vildu hundar á ráða. Sá var í feldi blám ok nefndisk Grímnir ok sagði ekki fleira frá sér þótt hann vëri at spurðr. Konungr lét hann pína til sagna 12 ok setja milli elda tveggja ok sat hann þar átta nætr. Geirrøðr konungr átti son tíu vetra gamlan ok hét Agnarr eptir bróður hans. Agnarr gekk 14 at Grímnir ok gaf hánnum horn fullt at drekka, sagði at konungr gerði illa er hann lét pína hann sak-lausan. Grímnir drakk af. Þá var eldrinn svá 16 kominn at feldrinn brann af Grímnir. Hann kvað:

Weden and Frie sat in Lithshelf and looked over all the Homes.<sup>95</sup> Weden spoke: “Seest thou Ayner, thy foster son, as he begets children with a troll-woman in her cave?”<sup>96</sup> But Garfrith, my foster son, is a king and now sits at land.” Frie says: “He is such a meat-nothing that he tortures his guests if he judges too many are coming.” Weden says that this is the greatest lie; they make a wager about this matter. Frie sent her handmaid Full to Garfrith’s hall. She bade the king be wary, lest he be destroyed by that many-cunning man who was come to the land, and said that his sign was that no hound was so fierce that he would leap at him. But it was the greatest vainglorious lie that Garfrith should not be good of meat, and yet he has that man bound, whom the hounds would not touch. He was in a blue cloak and called himself Grimner, and did not tell any more about himself, although he was asked. The king had him tortured, that he would speak, and set him between two fires, and he sat there for eight nights. King Garfrith had a son, ten winters old, and he was named Ayner after his brother. Ayner walked up to Grimner, and gave him a full horn to drink; he said that the king did badly, as he had him tortured without cause. Grimner drank from it. Then the fire was so grown, that the cloak burned on Grimner. He quoth:

<sup>96</sup>This may relate to Frie’s role as love-goddess. Ayner is in any case to be understood as a weak, effeminate man or “coomer”.

3 vörðr goða ‘Watchman of the Gods’ | Formulaic epithet of Homedall, also occurring in Lock 49 and possibly in Sbir 28: vörðr með goðum ‘the Watchman among the Gods’. Yilv 27, where the present stanza is quoted, gives some details: Hann er vörðr goða ok sitr þar við himins enda at gétu brúarinnar fyrir berg-risum. Hann þarf minna svefni en fugl. Hann sér jafnt nótt sem dag hundrað rasta frá sér; hann heyrir ok þat, er gras vex á jörðu eða ull á sauðum, ok allt þat er héra léttr. ‘He [= Homedall] is the Watchman of the Gods and sits there at Heaven’s end to guard the bridge against barrow-risers. He needs less sleep than a bird. He sees both night and day a hundred rests from himself; he also hears grass growing on the ground or wool on sheep, and every thing which is louder.’

Folkwong is the ninth, and there Frow decides the choice of seats in the hall;
half the slain she chooses each day,
but half does Woden own.<sup>103</sup>

<sup>103</sup>This st. is cited and closely paraphrased in Yilv 24. — The roots of kjósa val ‘choose the slain’ are the same as those in walkirrie (val-kyrja ‘chooser of the slain’), and as Frow is a prominent goddess this would surely make her the chief walkirrie. This is paralleled by Sarle, where Frow assumes the name Gandle (Göndul, a name attested in several lists of walkirries; see Wsp 30 and Notes) and incites the legendary never-ending Conflict of the Headnings (Hjaðningavíg). In spite of this parallel, there are good reasons to believe that the chief walkirrie was Frie, Woden’s wife. First, one of the functions of the walkirries is to bear ale to the Onecharriers (Grim 37). This mirrors royal Germanic banquets attested in heroic poetry, where the host’s wife or daughter would pour ale to his retainers and guests (the so-called ‘lady with a mead cup’ ritual; see Enright (1996) and Riseley (2014)). As Woden’s wife, we would expect Frie to have this role. Second, at Balder’s funeral as attested in Yilv (TODO. chapter number), Woden rides with Frie and the Walkirries, while Frow rides alone with her cats. If she were chief walkirrie, it is rather strange that she should not ride with them. Third, there are two separate myths where Frie and Woden contend over the fates of armies and men. These are the prose introduction to the present poem and the Longbeard origin myth (for which see Introduction to the present poem).

This compound also occurs in a kenning in the st. on the late C10th Karlevi stone (Öl 1) referring to the unbounded sea as Endils jörmungrund ‘Ardle’s ermin-ground’ (Ardle being a known “sea-king”), and in Beow 859 as eormen-grund carrying the same sense.

Thound roars, thrives Thedwitner’s

the river-stream seems far too great for the noisy slain host to wade.<sup>107</sup>

1–2 Þjóðvitnis fiskr ‘Thedwitner’s fish’ | Þjóðvitnir is easily analyzed as þjóð- ‘great, main’ + vitnir ‘wolf’. The great wolf is naturally the Fenrerswolf, and its “fish” should then be the Middenyardswyrm. That it could indeed be called a fish is proven by Hym 24, where the word does not even carry alliteration.

<sup>107</sup>Thound may be the river surrounding Walhall, which the dead have to pass over to reach the hall. This stanza may also be referring to the punishment of men in waters; see note to Wsp TODO for discussion on that.

Without it the whole world (“crag and surf”, LAND and SEA; the totality of the earth) would burn up. In Syed 14a/1 there is mention of the “shield that stands before the shining god [SUN]”, which may or may not derive from the present stanza.

The holdness of Woulder and of All Gods has each who first touches the fire, for the Homes become open for the sons of the Eese, when men lift off the kettles.<sup>124</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Ullar ‘Woulder’ | The exact reason for why Woulder is invoked here is unclear, but it suggests that he has a role in the setting of the ritual fire, something possibly attested by the archeological finds at Lilla Ullevi, Sweden. See Encyclopedia: Woulder and af Edholm (2009) for more.

<sup>1</sup> hylli ‘holdness’ | i.e. ‘favour, loyalty, grace’. This word and the corresponding adjective holtr ‘hold; favourable, loyal, gracious’ and verb hylla ‘to make hold’ are often used when speaking about divine grace, not just of the Christian God, but also (as here) of the Heathen Gods. See Encyclopedia: hold and holdness.

<sup>124</sup>This st. is one of the most difficult in the poem and many interpretations have been made (for a summary see Nordberg (2005)). Many commenters (e.g. Finnur Jónsson (1932) and Sijmons and Gering (p. 208, TODO)) interpret it as relating to the poem’s frame narrative. In this view Woden, still bound between the two fires, cryptically asks for a cauldron to be lifted off so that the Gods can see him through the smoke vent and rescue him. This, however, scarcely makes sense given the current stanza’s placement in the gnomic wisdom section of the poem, unless this whole section is taken to be a later insert (as suggested by Finnur), something for which there is little support. The invocation of the obscure god Woulder is also left unexplained, and there is no mention of a cauldron elsewhere in the poem. I agree with Nordberg’s interpretation, namely that the present st. refers to the cooking of the sacrificial meal in large cauldrons during the bloot, as described in the kings’ saws. More specifically, Woden is speaking of the divine grace (hylli ‘holdness’, see Note to l. 1) gained by the ritualist who sets the fire onto which the cauldron is placed, since this act enables the Gods to become present among those partaking in the ritual meal. Cf. HGoodS 14, describing the traditional bloot in the Thronclaw (Þrónða-lög), Norway: At veizlu þeiri skyldu allir menn þl eiga; þar var ok drepinn alls konar smali ok svá bross, [...] en slátr skyldi sjóða til mann-fagnaðar; eldar skyldu vera á miðju gólfi í bofinu ok þar katlar yfir. ‘At that gathering all men should have ale; thereat was also slain every kind of small cattle and likewise horses, [...] and the fresh meat would be cooked for men to enjoy. There would be fires on the middle of the floor in the hove and kettles over them.’ This interpretation is especially interesting when one considers the immediately preceding two sts. (41, 42), which deal with the ordering of the world through the dismembering of Yimer, the primordial sacrificial victim slain by the Gods. It is well attested in other Indo-European branches that the ritual sacrifice in the present was seen as a reenactment of the primeval sacrifice in the mythic past, which reenactment was necessary for the continued upholding of the world, and Grim 41–43 would then seem to attest this conception also in the Germanic tradition.. See Lincoln (1986)—especially the first two chapters—for the Indo-European analogues.

The Speeches of Shirner (Skírnismól)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): 900s (0.897)

Meter: Leeds-meter, Galders-law (TODO)

The whole poem is attested in both R and A. The name Skírnismól ‘Speeches of Shirner’ comes from A; R has in the typical titular red ink Fgr Skírnis ‘Shirner’s journey’.

The same myth is told in prose in Yilv 37. A single stanza of the present poem is quoted there, namely the last one, with some minor differences in wording that would seem to stem from oral tradition (see Note to st. 42 below). It is unlikely that the author of Yilv knew of the narrative through an oral tradition which included only the last verse, chiefly since his paraphrase does not add a single detail not found in the present poem, but on the other hand condenses and abbreviates. So, Shirner’s journey and curse (roughly sts. 10–38 here) is simply summarized in the following manner: “Then Shirner journeyed and requested the woman [i.e. Gird] for him [i.e. Free], and received her promise, that nine nights later she would come to the place which is called Barrey, and have a wedding with Free.” The summarising of a narrative mythic poem with a single verse quotation in the form of a dialogue-stanza is something done several times in Yilv; see Eddic fragments from Snorre’s Edda below.

On the other hand, the paragraph in Yilv 37 corresponding to what is here P1 is much more detailed and reads: “Gymer was a man called, and his woman Earbode; she was of the lineage of mountain-risers. Their daughter is Gird, who is fairest of all women. It was one day when Free had gone to Lithshelf and looked about all the Homes, but when he looked to the north he saw on a farm a great and fine house, and to that house walked a woman, and when she lifted her hands and closed the doors before her, then it did shine from her hands both into the air and onto the waters, and all the homes were brightened by her. And that beauty, which he had seen in that holy seat, harmed him so that he walked away filled with pain, and when he came home he spoke nothing; he neither slept nor drank; nobody dared to get words out of him. Then Nearth had Shirner, Free’s shoe-swain, called unto himself, and asked him to go to Free and ask him to speak, [...]”

- P1      Freyr, sonr Njarðar, hafði einn dag setsk í Hlið-skjálfr ok sá um heima alla;      [R 11r/10, A 2r/11]
2      hann sá í Jotun-heima ok sá þar mey fagra, þá er hon gekk frá skála fður síns til skemmu; þar af fekk hann hug-sóttir miklar. Skírnir hét skó-sveinn 4      Freys. Njörðr bað hann kveðja Frey máls. Þá mélti Skaði:

Free, son of Nearth, had one day set himself in Lithshelf and looked about all the Homes. He looked into the Ettinhomes and saw there a fair maiden as she walked from her father's hall to her bower; thereof he got great heart-aches. Shirner was called the shoe-swain of Free. Nearth asked him to speak with Free. Then Shede spoke:

1 „Rís-tu nú Skírnir · ok gakk at beiða [R 11r/14, A 2r/15]
 2 okkarn mála mōg,
 ok þess at fregna · hveim hinn fróði séi
 4 of-rēiði afi.“

“Rise thou now, Shirner, and go to ask our lad [= Free] for speech;
 and to learn at whom the wise man [= Free] might be cross.”

1 rís ... beiða ‘Rise ... ask’ | Alliteration is missing here. A simple solution would be to replace gakk ‘go’ with a synonym like rinn ‘run’ or rād ‘resolve’, but this lessens the semantic mirroring with l. 2/2 below (though, the insertion of the verb ganga in the present stanza may in fact be due to influence from 2/2).

4 afi ‘man’ | While this word usually means ‘father’ or ‘grandfather’, it must here certainly mean ‘man’ without a connotation of old age. See further CV.

Skírnir kvað: 2 „Illra orða · es mér ón at ykkrum syni, [R 11r/15, A 2r/17] 2 ef ek geng at mēla við mōg,
 ok þess at fregna, · hveim hinn fróði séi
 4 of-rēiði afi.“

Shirner quoth: “Bad words I expect from your son [= Free], if I go with the lad to speak;

Skírnir: 3 „Seg þat Freyr, · folk-valdi goða, [R 11r/17, A 2r/18] 2 ok ek vilja vita,
 hví þú ęinn sitr · ęnd-langa sali,
 4 minn dróttinn, of daga?“

Shirner [quoth]: “Tell it, O Free, troop-wielder of the gods;
 I too would wish to know:
 why thou sittest alone in the endlong halls,
 my lord, during the days?”

Fręyr: 4 „Hví of sęgja’k þér, • sęgr hinn ungi, [R 11r/19, A 2r/20] 2 mikinn móð-trega?
 því-at alf-røðull • lýsir of alla daga
 4 ok þęygi at *mín*um *mun*um.“

Free [quoth]: “Why should I tell thee, O young youth,
 [of my] great mood-grief?
 For the elf-wheel [sun] shines during all days,
 and naught to my liking.”

Skírnir: 5 „Muni þína • hykk-a svá mikla vesa, [R 11r/20, A 2r/21] 2 at þú mér sęgr né sęgr;
ungir saman • vörum í ár-daga,
 4 vęl męttim tveir *trúa*sk.“

Shirner [quoth]: “Thy liking I do not think so great, that thou, O youth, should not tell me [of it].
 Young together were we in days of yore;
 we two might well trust each other.”

2 sęgr ‘youth’ | This word usually means simply ‘man’, but it seems to have a specific connotation with youth. Its original meaning is ‘messenger’, and the semantic shift is thus: ‘messenger’ > ‘young man’ > ‘warrior/man’. The sense of ‘young man’ is also seen in Wáyl 23, where it is used in reference to king Nithad’s two young sons. In the present stanza it answers Free’s addressing Shirner as sęgr hinn ungi ‘the young youth’; Shirner points out that the two are of equal age, and so Free is as much of a young man as he.

Fręyr: 6 „Í Gymis gøðum • ek ganga sá [R 11r/22, A 2r/23] 2 mér tíða męy;
armar lýstu, • en af þaðan

<sup>132</sup> An excellent example of the fatalistic Germanic worldview, in which one’s course of life was determined (“laid down”) at birth (“in one half-day”). Presumably after uttering these words Shirner rides through the fire surrounding the fortress. — The causative leggja ‘to lay (down, in place)’ is closely connected to fate; the expression is formulaic. Cf. Lock 48: i ár-daga vas þér bit ljóta líf of lagit ‘in days of yore was thy ugly life laid down’ and Wsp 19: þér lög lögðu ‘they [= the Norns] laid down laws’.

[Shirner quoth:]

“I am not of Elves, nor of sons of the Eese,

2 gamban-tēin ‘gombentoe’ | Perhaps “curse-twig”. A compound consisting of the very rare word gamban ‘magic/curse?’ and tēinn ‘twig, branch’ (cf. mistil-tēinn ‘mistle-toe’). This may be the stick on which the runic curse in st. 36 below should be carved, or it is to be identified with the tams-vǫndr ‘taming-wand’ of st. 26 above. Cf. High 152, which speaks about a runic curse carved on rótum rás viðar ‘the roots of a raw/sappy tree’.

Thurse I carve for thee, and three staves:
queerness and madness and restlessness.—
So I carve it off, like I carved it on,
if there be need for that.<sup>138</sup>

1 Þurs ‘thurse’ | Thurse is the name of the þ-rune (þ); it is carved as part of the curse.

1 þríá stafi ‘three staves’ | Three runic letters (or phrases) representing the three following words (ęrgi ‘queerness, degeneracy’ etc.). The ritual practice of carving “three staves” is first found on the C7th Gummarp stone: haþuwlafir sate staba þríá fff ‘Hathwolf placed three staves: fff’, where the f-rune (f) stands for its name fee (i.e. ‘wealth, cattle’) and is thus meant to bring wealth.

2 ęrgi ok óði ok ó·þola ‘queerness and madness and restlessness’ | Both ęrgi ‘queerness, degeneracy’ and ó·þoli ‘restlessness’ (here probably from strong lust) are found in the love magic charm on the rune stick B257 from Bryggen (edited below under Galders). ęrgi is also found in the curse-formula on the C7th Proto-Norse runestones from Stenotoften and Björketorp. See further introduction to B257.

<sup>138</sup> Shirner has carved the curse (which will make true the curse), but tells Gird that he will scrape it off if she accepts his demands. She promptly does.

1–2 Heill ... mjaðar ‘Hale ... mead’ | Formulaic; the same lines occur in Lock 53.

4 vaningja ‘the Waning [= Free]’ | lit. ‘descendant of the Wanes’. A rare word. Its only other occurrence in the Norse corpus is in a thule of boar-names. Boars were sacred to Free, TODO.

The Leed of Hoarbeard

(Hárbarðsljóð)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): early 1000s (0.578)–late 1000s (0.377)

Meter: Unclear (TODO)

In my opinion the poem can be seen as an allegory on class relations, namely between the self-owning Norwegian and later Icelandic farmers, and the warlike Norwegian earls.

Of all Eddic poems this one is probably the strangest in terms of form. Verse length varies greatly, and many of the lines (see especially the final verse) are of an obscene length reminiscent of late continental Germanic poems like the Heliand; some simply have no metrical qualities at all. The young clitic definite is (uniquely) employed frequently throughout the poem. These criteria would seem to point towards a late origin for the poem (though not later than the late C13th, when R was written).

Against this late origin speaks the presence of rare words (e.g. ǫgurr v. 13) and a thorough understanding of the personalities of the two gods which would seem unlikely to stem from several centuries after the conversion of Iceland. The model devised by Sapp gives the poem a 57.8% likelihood of being from the early C11th, and a 37.7% likelihood of being from the late 11th. These scores are most similar to those obtained by Grip, a poem that on the surface seems much more archaic.

What could we then be dealing with? It may of course be that the poem is heavily corrupt, but there is no good evidence for this (apart from the above-mentioned irregularities). Most lines are readily understandable and fit well both within their respective context and the poem as a whole. I think a better solution to this problem is to assume that the poem has been acted out as a sort of carnivalesque theatre, with two masked actors, each playing one of the gods. This would explain the variations in meter and line length, and the prose; some lines were simply shouted out, and the lack of alliteration in them would then have a powerful, discordant effect.

This is shown also by uses of the word ‘here’ in sts. 9 and 14. TODO: mention concept of “double scene” by Lars Lönnroth?

P1 Þórr fór ór austr-vegi ok kom at sundi einu. Qðrum megum sundsins var [R 12r/30]

Thunder journeyed from the Eastern Way and came to a sound. At the other side of the sound was the ferryman with the ship. Thunder called out:

1 „Hvęrr ’s sá svęinn svęina • es stęndr fyr sundit handan?“

[R 12r/32]

“Who is that swain of swains, standing here across the sound?”

Hann svaraði:

2 „Hvęrr ’s sá karl karla • es kallar of váginn?“

[R 12v/1]

He answered:

“Who is that churl of churls, calling out over the wave?”

3 „Fęr þú mik of sundit, • fōði’k þik á morgun;

[R 12v/2]

2 męis hęfi’k á baki, • verðor-a matrinn bętri.

Át’k í hvíld • áðr ek hęiman fōr,

4 síldr ok hafra; • saðr em’k ęnn þęss.“

[Thunder quoth:]

“Ferry me over the sound, I feed thee in the morning!

A basket have I on my back; the food does not get better.<sup>140</sup>

I ate for a while before I journeyed from home, herring and oatmeal/he-goats; I am still full from that.”

<sup>4</sup> hafra ‘oatmeal/he-goats’ | The easiest reading here is the acc. pl. of hafri ‘he-goat’. Thunder also eats his goats in Yilv 44, where he butchers and cooks them in the evening and brings them back to life by blessing them with his hammer at dawn. Finnur Jónsson (1932) and Pettit (1986) prefer this reading; see also note to next stanza.—Many other scholars have here read an accusative plural of hafri ‘oat’, i.e. ‘porridge, oatmeal’. Stiles (forthcoming TODO) connects this with Indrá’s (who is the Vedic equivalent of Thunder) “partner and yokemate” (RV 6.56.2) Pūṣan’s eating porridge (e.g. 6.56.1, 57.2). Another similarity Stiles notes between Thunder and Pūṣan is that both have chariots driven by goats (e.g. 6.57.3: “Goats are the draft-animals for the one”, 58.2: “Having goats as his horses”). Whether the Vedic tradition has split an original god into two or whether Thunder has absorbed elements of another god is hard to say.

[R 12v/5]

2 dōpr ’ru þín hęim-kynni, • dauð hygğ’k at þín móðir sé.“

“Of early works boastest thou; of eating!<sup>141</sup> Thou knowest not clearly [what lies] before [thee]: dismal is the state of thy home—I think that thy mother is dead!”

<sup>141</sup> TODO. This is pretty difficult. From the previous stanza vęrðinum seems to be referring to eating.

5 „Þat sęgir þú nú • es hvērjum þikkir

[R 12v/6]

2 męst at vita— • at mín móðir dauð sé.“

“Thou now sayest that which to every man seems most important to know—that my mother is dead!”

 2 bęr-bęinn þú stęndr · ok hęfir brautinga gęrvi, · þat-ki at þú hafir brękr þínar.“

“But it is hardly as if thou own three good homesteads;
 bare-legged thou standest, and hast the gear of a tramp; it is not even as if thou own thy breeches!”

- 7 „Stýr-ðu hingat ęikjunni, · ek mun þér stęðna kęnna [R 12v/9]
 2 eða hvērr á skipit · es þú hęldr við landit?“

“Steer hither the boat! I will show thee to the harbour—or who owns the ship which thou holdest by the shore?”

- 8 „Hildólfr sá hęitir · es mik halda bað, [R 12v/11]
 2 rekr inn ráð-svinni · es býr í Ráðs-ęjar-sundi;

 4 góða ęina · ok þá's ek gęrva kunna;
 sęę-ðu til nafns þíns · ef þú vill of sundit fara.“

“Hildolf he is called, who asked me to hold it, the counsel-wise man who lives in Redeseysound.
 He bade me not take highwaymen nor horse-thieves;
 good men only, and those whom I know well—say thy name if thou wilt go over the sound!”

- 9 „Sęja mun'k til nafns míns · þótt ek sękr sjá'k [R 12v/15]

 4 þrúð-valdr goða · við Þór knátt-u hér dóma!
 Hins vil'k nú spyrja, · hvat þú hęitir?“

“I will say my name—although I should be charged—and all my origin: I am Woden's son, Male's brother and Main's father,
 the strength-wielder of the Gods; with Thunder dost thou here speak!
 Now I will ask something else: What art thou called?”

- 10 „Hár-barðr ek hęiti, · hyl'k of nafn sjaldan.“ [R 12v/18]
 “Hoarbeard I am called, seldom I conceal my name.”

11 „Hvat skalt-u of nafn hylja · nema þú sakar ęigir?“ [R 12v/18]
 “Why shalt thou conceal thy name, unless thou have charges?”

2 12 „En þótt ek sakar ęiga, · fyr slíkum sem þú est [R 12v/19]
 þá mun’k forða fjörvi mínu · nema ek fęigr sé.“
 “But though I had charges—for such a one as thou art then I will protect my life, unless I be fey.”

2 13 „Harm ljótan mér þikkir í því [R 12v/21]
 at vaða of váginn til þín · ok vęta ęgur minn; skylda’k launa kęgur-svęini · þínum kangin-yrði · ef ek komumk yfir sundit.“

“An ugly harm it seems to me to wade o’er the wave to thee, and wet my burden.
 I would repay thee, swaddle-swain, for thy mocking words, if I could bring myself over the sound.”

2 ęgur ‘burden’ | The sense of this word is not clear, though it is probably the same as the first element of the compound ęgur-stund ‘burdensome hour’, found in Wāyl 42. Some authors have read it as a crude euphemism for ‘penis’, which would not be out of character for this poem. I however consider the best interpretation to be that of an author whose name I’ve forgotten (TODO!), namely that Thunder is referring to the food he carries on his back (cf. v. 3).

2 14 „Hér mun’k standa · ok þín heðan bíða; [R 12v/23]
 fannt-a-tu mann inn harðara · at Hrungni dauðan.“ “Here will I stand, and from here await thee; thou hast not found a harder man since Rungner died!<sup>142</sup>”

<sup>142</sup>Rungner was an ettin famously slain by Thunder, TODO. Hoarbeard’s mention of that battle sets off a long argument over the deeds of the two.

2 15 „Hins vilt-u nú geta · es vit Hrungnir deildum, [R 12v/25] sá inn stór-úðgi jötunn, · es ór stęini vas hęfuðit á, þó lét’k hann falla · ok fyrr hníga;
 4 hvat vannt-u þá meðan, Hárbarðr?“
 “This wilt thou now mention, when I and Rungner dealt with each other, that great-minded ettin on whom the head was of stone.
 Yet I made him fall, and kneel down before [me]—
 what didst thou then meanwhile, Hoarbeard?”

- 16 „Vas’k með Fjöl-vari • fimm vetr alla [R 12v/27]
 2 í ey þęiri • es Al-grón heitir;
 vega vér þar knóttum • ok val fęlla,
 4 margs at fręista, • mans at kosta.“

“I was with Felwar for all of five winters in that island which Allgreen is called.
 There we did fight and fell corpses;
 many a girl to tempt and win.<sup>143</sup>”

<sup>143</sup>I read margs ‘many a’ as modifying mans ‘girl’, i.e. margs mans at fręista, at kosta ‘to tempt and to win many a girl’.

- 17 „Hversu snúnuðu yör konur yörar?“ [R 12v/30]
 “How did your women pleasure (TODO!!) you?.<sup>144</sup>”

- 18 „Sparkar óttum vér konur • ef oss at spökum yrði; [R 12v/30]

<sup>145</sup>Here we seem to have a rare example of native Germanic star-lore. Is the exact constellation identifiable? TODO.

20 „Miklar man-vélar · hafða'k við myrk-riður when I lured them away from men.<sup>146</sup>

A hard ettin I judged Leebeard to be;
he gave me a gombentoe,
but I tricked him out of his wits.”

<sup>146</sup>Alternatiely ‘away from [their] husbands’. The riður ‘(female) riders’ were witches thought to torment people and cause disease and suffering. See Higb 156 for discussion.

21 „Illum huga launaðir þú þá góðar gjafar.“
“With an evil mind didst thou repay the good gift.”

hvat vannt-u þá meðan, Hárbarðr?

“I was in the East, and bashed ettins:
bale-wise brides who walked to the mountain.
Great would the lineage of ettins be if all lived, naught would remain of men within Middenyard<sup>147</sup> —
what didst thou then meanwhile, Hoarbeard?”

<sup>147</sup> A remarkable clear statement, the underlying worldview of which is far from unique to this stanza; in Hymr 11, for instance, Thunder is described as “the opponent of Rooder”, “the friend of manly retinues” and “Wighward”, referring to His role in slaying ettins and guarding men and their shrines (wighs). For Thunder’s killing of women cf. sts. 37–39 below and Lindow 1988.

24 „Vas’k á Vallandi • ok vígum fylgða’k, [R 13r/11, A 1r/6]
2 atta ek jofrum • en aldri-gi sétta’k;
Óðinn á jarla • þá’s í val falla
4 en Þórr á þræla kyn.“

“I was in Walland and followed battles;
I incited princes and never reconciled them.
Weden owns the earls which fall among the slain,
but Thunder owns the kin of thralls.<sup>148</sup>”

<sup>148</sup> We see here a sort of aristocratic, Odinic disregard for lower life and life as a good in itself; where Thunder boasts of saving men, Weden sarcastically responds that he caused the deaths of men so that he could have them for himself.

25 „Ó·jafnt skipta • es þú myndir með ósum liði [R 13r/13, A 1r/8]

“Thunder owns ample strength, but no heart; out of fear and mind-softness didst thou tread into a glove, and then seemedest thou not to be Thunder. Thou daredst neither—for thy fear—to sneeze nor to fart so that Feller might hear [it].<sup>149</sup>”

<sup>149</sup> This story is also referenced in Lock TODO. It is elaborated heavily on in Yilv 45: Thunder, Lock, and the siblings Thelvé and Wrash had travelled east for a long time when they discovered a large hall, with an opening on one end, as wide as the building. They took rest inside, but in the middle of the night there was a great earthquake and the ground beneath them trembled. Thunder rose and led the party to a side-room to the right in the middle of the hall. He sat closest to the opening with his hammer ready, while the others sat terrified further inside. At daybreak they left the hall and found a huge ettin named Skrymir (Shrimer) sleeping next to them. His snoring had caused the earth-quakes, and the hall was his mitten; the side-room was the thumb-part.

“Sib has a lover at home; him wilt thou wish to meet!
 Against that one shalt thou use thy strength—that is for thee more urgent!”

1 hó ‘lover’ | Most translators take this acc. sg. word as an alternative form of bórr m. ‘adulterer’ (gen. bórs), containing the same root as bóra f. ‘whore, prostitute’, bór n. ‘adultery, fornication’, ModEngl. whore. The -r has presumably been interpreted as the masc. nom. sg. ending, giving nom. **bór*, gen. **bós*. Further, this accusation is also found in Lock TODO, where Lock says that he has been Sib’s lover (bórr). Notably, CV interprets this word as the unrelated bór m. ‘pot-hook’, “insinuating that Thor busied himself with cooking and dairy-work.” This seems very unlikely when considering Thunder’s response in the next verse: “I think that thou liest!” and the parallel in Lock.

The Lay of Hymer

(Hymiskviða)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): 900s (0.694)–early 1000s (0.268)

Meter: Ancient-words-law

Attested in two manuscripts, R and A. The two agree very well; they share the same stanzas and they come in the same order. The most substantial difference is the header; A has Hymis-kviða ‘the Lay of Hymer’, while R instead has Þórr dró Mið-garðs-orm ‘Thunder pulled the Midden-yardswyrn’.

The poem is a comedy about Thunder’s adventures in Etтинland. This was probably a popular genre, and is also represented by Thrim, but in spite of these similarities of contents the two poems are far apart stylistically. Whereas Thrim is written in a simple and sparse style with free Ancient-words-law-meter and few kennings, the form of Ancient-words-law used in Hyme is unusually strict, almost syllable-counting, and the stanzas are filled with intricate kennings, difficult grammatical constructions and forced word order. In this way Hyme is more akin to Scoldic poetry in intricate measures like Court-recited meter than to typical Eddic poetry in Ancient-words-law.

For this reason it seems likely that the anonymous poet of Hyme was highly trained in the Scoldic arts, and familiar with composition in more advanced meters. (See TODO: Difference between Scoldic and Eddic). Apart from style and meter, the Scoldic composition context of Hyme is also supported by both its dating and subject. There are five extant Scoldic poetic fragments (TODO: list them) that deal with Thunder’s fishing expedition, mostly from the 10th century.

These Scoldic fragments are fragmentary, and (in what survives of them) mostly focus on the scene where Thunder faces off against the hooked Wyrn pressed to the gunwale. There are some interesting verbal correspondences between these fragments and Hyme—most strikingly the kenning for the Middenyardswyrn in st. 22/4 below—that may also support a common composition context. The fragments do not all agree with each other; in some of them the encounter ends with the cowardly Hymer cutting off the fishing line and the Wyrn sinking back unharmed into the sea (the version preferred by Snorre)—in others Thunder strikes the head off the Wyrn, presumably slaying it.

Numerous pictorial depictions of the myth are found on Wiking Age objects. These are the Swedish Altuna (U 1611) and Linga (Sö 352) runestones, the picture stones from Hørdum, Northern Jutland, a picture stone from Gosforth in Cumbria, and others (TODO). They typically show Thunder standing in the boat with His hammer raised, and the hooked Wyrn below it. Several smaller details also appear on these objects: the use of the ox-head for bait (U 1611, Sö 352), Thunder’s feet going through the ship (U 1611, Hørdum).

Yilv 48 gives a complete narrative, here paraphrased for the sake of shortness:

Thunder goes out into Middenyard in the shape of a young man (ungr dręngr), without his chariot, his goats, or his typical travelling gear. In the evening he comes to the ettin Hymer and begs for lodgings. At dawn Hymer plans to go fishing, and so Thunder asks to join in. Hymer insults Thunder's small stature and youth, and questions his ability to go on such a long and arduous trip as he usually takes. Thunder, angered, says that he will row very far, and then asks Hymer what bait they will use. Hymer tells him to get his own bait, and so he turns to Hymer's flock of oxen and tears off the head from his greatest ox, one named Heavenrid. The two go out to sea, and Thunder rows far past Hymer's usual fishing spot. Hymer, unhappy, warns him that if they row any further out they'll be in danger of the Middenyardswyrm, but Thunder goes on. Eventually Thunder puts away the oars, readies a fishing line, hooks the ox-head and lowers it. The Wyrm soon bites, and struggles so hard that Thunder is pressed against the gunwale. This angers the god, and he brings himself into his Os-might. Strengthened, he pulls back with such force that his feet go through the bottom of the ship and press into the sea-floor; the Wyrm's head goes up against the gunwale. The two archenemies furiously stare at each other, Thunder "sharpening his eyes" and the Wyrm spitting venom. Hymer is frightened, reaches for his bait-cutting knife, and cuts off the line—the Wyrm then sinks back into the sea. Thunder throws the hammer after it, "and men say that he struck off the monster's head, but I think it true to tell thee, that the Middenyardswyrm still lives and lies in the outer sea." Thunder then punches Hymer's ear with his fist so that he is thrown overboard head-first; the god then wades back to land.

This account is clearly based on several sources, possibly including the present poem. The closest wording correspondence is when it is said that Miðgarðs-ormr gein yfir uxa-höfuð'it, en þngull'inn vá i góm'inn orm'inum 'The Middenyardswyrm yawned over the ox-head, and the hook went into the roof of the wyrm's mouth', which is decently close to st. 22 below. The name Heavenrid (Himinhrjóðr) is otherwise only found in thules listing names of oxen, and the interesting detail of Thunder's feet going through the boat is only paralleled by the Swedish Altuna stone (though see note to st. 34/2 below).

While Ylva 48, the Scoldic fragments, and Hyme all share the central narrative of the fishing expedition, Hyme has several additional narratives woven into it. That is not to say that Hyme consists of multiple originally separate poems. Unlike, say, High, which has noticeable differences of style and language between its constituent strands, Hyme comes off as a strong stylistic and narrative whole, composed by a single poet and thereafter transmitted faithfully. One may roughly identify the following narrative divisions in Hyme, of which only numbers 2–4 are found in the other sources for the myth of Thunder's fishing:

1. 1–6 Thunder attempts to force the ettin Eagre to host a banquet for the Gods; Eagre in turn asks for a cauldron big enough to brew enough ale for them all.
2. 7–16 Thunder and Tew go to visit the stingy ettin Hymer, who owns such a cauldron; horrified at Thunder's great appetite during the evening, Hymer tells them that they must eat fish the next.
3. 17–19 Thunder says that he will go fishing if he is given bait; Hymer challenges him to kill one of his oxen for bait; Thunder tears off the head of one.
4. 20–25 Hymer, Thunder and Tew go fishing; Hymer pulls up some whales; with the ox-head as bait Thunder manages to hook the Middenyardswyrm itself; he loses it.
5. 26–27 Hymer challenges Thunder to carry the boat and whales back to his farm; he does.
6. 28–32 Hymer challenges Thunder to break a supposedly indestructible chalice; he succeeds by smashing it against the ettin's forehead.
7. 33–36 Thunder and Tew depart with the cauldron; they find themselves followed by a troop led by Hymer; Thunder kills them all.
8. 37–38 Lock makes the leg of one of Thunder's goats halt.
9. 39 Thunder returns to the Gods with Hymer's cauldron; they host a banquet.

The fishing expedition, found at the very center of the poem, is thus framed by the unique narrative of Thunder and Tew obtaining a huge cauldron from Hymer for the sake of brewing ale, and several other superfluous narratives scattered throughout. The poet has not been entirely successful in his endeavour, and there are several loose strands. Most notably the god Tew plays no role at all in the fishing expedition, probably because he was not originally in it; in other variants of the myth (including pictorial depictions, like that from Gosforth), Thunder is only accompanied by Hymer. Tew also lacks a reaction to the murder of his father Hymer, and this familiar relationship is also unparalleled; in Scold 16 Tew is called Weden's Son. Also unclear is the function of Lock's halting one of Thunder's goats (sts. 37–38); he does not appear anywhere else in the poem.

The poem has some interesting reoccurring themes. The “otherness” of the Ettins, specifically Hymer, is constantly emphasized in several ways:

- they live far to the East (st. 5) in an inhospitable, frozen climate (st. 10), associated with mountains (sts. 2, 17) and lava-fields (st. 36)
- they are physically deviant, being misshapen (st. 10), grey-haired (st. 16), many-headed (sts. 8, 35), and very hard-boned (sts. 30–31); they are even likened to apes (st. 20), whales (st. 36) and Danes (st. 17; see note!),
- they are stingy and inhospitable (sts. 9, 16),
- and sarcastic and cowardly (st. 19–20, 25–26, 28–32).

In these ways the Ettins oppose the Old Germanic social norms as represented by the Gods, who live in a lush green climate and are young, beautiful and generous. The one exception is of course Tew's mother in st. 8, who is light-haired (in contrast to the swarthy grandmother, presumably) and generous. Perhaps the poet is implying that it is from her that Tew has inherited his good traits?

The last point, viz. sarcasm and cowardice, is seen throughout the poem in the way Thunder comically humiliates the Ettins, especially by completing challenges issued to him. These follow a similar format: Thunder is given a near-impossible test of strength, which he shortly completes through a mix of physical strength and cleverness, humiliating the challenger. These tests are finding a huge kettle (st. 3, explicitly called Eagre's “revenge” (hefnd), taking one of Hymer's oxen for bait (st. 17–18), carrying home Hymer's whales and boat (st. 26), breaking Hymer's finest chalice (st. 28), and perhaps also taking away the kettle (st. 33)—though that may just be Hymer's wishing to finally be rid of the pestering gods.

Much like in Thrim the conflict is finally resolved with righteous hammer-slaughter. After the Gods leave, Hymer tries to get his revenge by ambushing them, but Thunder takes his trusty hammer and kills them all. The poem is clearly humorous and meant to be performed before an audience (see st. 38 where the poet directly addresses the listeners). The original performance context may perhaps be gleaned from the difficult final stanza. TODO: It hints at a performance at a harvest bloot.

To Rungner's hoary friend [= Hymer] did seem Loride's ⟨Thunder's⟩ eating far too great;

3–4 munum ... lifa 'the next ... live' | The poet is pushing at the limits of Old Norse syntax with this word order. In prose word order it should be construed as: at ǫðrum aptni munum vér þrír verða lifa við vęiði-mat, where verða 'have to, must' is used like its modern German cognate werden.

Hymer's stinginess—he refuses to share more of his own food but instead forces his guests to go hunt—breaks all Indo-European rules of hospitality and illustrates the otherness of the Ettins. See Introduction to the poem.

4 berg-Dana ‘boulder-Danes [ETTINS]’ | Kennings of this type emphasize the otherness of the Ettins (see Introduction to the poem above) by equating them with ethnic foreigners, and are well known from Anlif Gothrunson’s Drape for Thunder (Þórsdrápa), where Ettins are called Scots, Swedes, Danes, Ruges and Hareds; all ethnic enemies of the Norwegian Earl Hathkin, at whose court that poem may have been composed.

will not be an easy catch for thee!”—

The swain [= Thunder] swiftly turned to the wood, where an ox stood, all-black, before [him].

1 vëntir mik | so A; vënti ek R 1 myni-t ‘will not’ | so A; myni ‘will’ R. The A reading is preferable since it makes this the first of Hymer’s several challenges of strength to Thunder, which the god, to the ettin’s humiliation, easily accomplishes.

3 Sveinn ‘The swain’ | Thunder was apparently in the shape of a youth. This detail is also found in Yilv 48, where Snorre writes: Gekk hann út of Miðgarð svá sem ungr drengir ... ‘He went out about Middenyard in the shape of a young warrior’.

4 oxi ... al-svartr ‘all-black ... ox’ | Formulaic, also occurring in Thrim 23; see note there for further parallels to the custom of sacrificing animals of certain colours. It seems that all-black oxen were thought the noblest, and so Thunder’s slaying one instead of an inferior beast is probably intended to humiliate the stingy Hymer. In Yilv 48 we read that: Hann tók inn mesta uxann, er Himin-brjóðr hét, ok sleit af höfuðit ok fór með til sjávar. ‘He took the greatest ox, which was called Heavenrid, and tore of its head and went with it to the sea’.

Off the bull broke the counsel-slayer of the thurse [= Thunder]

the high meadow of the two horns [HEAD] from above.—

“Worse by far thy works do seem to the wielder of ships [= Hymer = me] than if thou mightst sit calm.<sup>161</sup>”

<sup>161</sup>I had originally taken this as Hymer snidely belittling Thunder’s feat of pulling the head off the ox (presumably by the horns); he would have earned greater glory had he simply sat and done nothing. However, it may also be read as a factual statement; Thunder just killed one of his finest oxen, and Hymer would certainly have preferred that he had not.

The scene now shifts, and the party is out at sea. It is possible that a stanza has here been lost, or that it would be indicated in some other way in the original performance.

1 Hraun-gǫlkn 'The lavafield-monsters' | Both mss. have bręin-, which may mean either 'clean' or 'reindeer', neither of which fit. On the other hand braun ONP: 'stone/barren area, wasteland; lavafield' is well attested in scoldic kennings for ettins. The precise meaning of galkn 'monster' (plural gǫlkn) is unclear; but it is attested in three scoldic verses, always in kennings of the type "troll-woman of the shield [AXE]". While the mss. spelling 'galkn' (norm. gálkn) could reflect either singular and plural, the form of the verb is plural. This means that the word cannot be referring to the Middenyardswyrm, refuting the interpretation of Larrington (2014): "the sea-wolf shrieked".

3 [...] | It is very likely that a line is missing here, since the stanzas in the poem otherwise consistently have four lines. In other tellings of the myth it is at this point that Hymer cuts Thunder's fishing line, so that is probably what has been lost.

It is of course impossible to know what exact form it had, but for the reader's enjoyment, based on other poets and the account in Yilv (see introduction to the present poem) I've composed the following variant lines: unds vinr Hrungnis · vað Þórs of skar 'until the friend of Rungner [= Hymer] Thunder's fishing-line did cut'; unds fęlr Hymir · fękk á saxi 'until pale Hymer grasped the knife'.

3 ár ‘in the early morning’ | Finnur Jónsson (1932) suggests svá’t at þr ‘so that by the oar’, but this burdens the meter. Assuming my interpretation is correct, the three would have been out fishing throughout the night.

2 bratt-stęin glęri 'steep stone with glass' | That is, he broke the stone columns in Hymer's house with the chalice.

3 sitjandi 'fastened' | This word is ambiguous and can modify either Thunder (in which case it would mean "sitting") or the columns (súlur). I have chosen the latter and read it as signifying their stability.

[Hymer quoth:]

<sup>3–4</sup> kná’k-at ... of hēitt. ‘I cannot ... O ale!’ | Hymer laments that with the loss of his finest vessel he will never be able to enjoy his drink again. There is strong irony here since it was he himself who challenged Thunder to break it.

It would be best if ye might bring

 Tew attempted, twice, to move it—each time stood the cauldron still before [him].

<sup>2</sup> ǫl-kjól ‘ale-ship [CAULDRON]’ | ǫl-kjól is the accusative of ǫl-kjóll, but in this context (CV: koma, B) we would expect the dative ǫl-kjóli. The meter does not allow for this, however.

<sup>2</sup> hofi ‘hall’ | This is the only Old Norse occurrence of the word hof in the sense ‘hall, house’; it otherwise only means ‘temple’ (hove). The West Germanic cognates consistently mean ‘hall’, and that is probably the original sense, so it is unclear if this is an instance of foreign influence (if so, most likely Anglo-Saxon) or just a poetic archaism.

The father of Moody [= Thunder] grasped the brim, and stepped down through the floor in the hall;<sup>164</sup> Sib's husband [= Thunder] heaved the cauldron up onto his head, and at his heels the rings clattered.

4 hringar skullu 'the rings clattered' | i.e. the chain-links. This detail is mentioned in an example sentence contrasting long and short phonemes in FGT (1950): heyrði til hōddu, þá er Þórr bar hverinn 'the sound of the pot-links (badda) was heard when Thunder bore the cauldron'. According to Finnur Jónsson (1932) the chain (or badda) on a Wiking-age cauldron would have reached across, in which case this would be a reference to the cauldron's enormous size, with its diameter—mentioned in st. 5 as one rest—being roughly the same as Thunder's height.

<sup>164</sup>In the account of Yǫl Thunder is said to have stepped through the boat when trying to pull up the Mid-denyardswyrm. This detail is also seen on the carving of the Altuna stone from Uppland, Sweden; it may have been transposed to this place in the narrative. TODO.

1 ér 'ye' | The audience. As pointed out by Finnur Jónsson (1932) an address to the audience of this type is otherwise unparalleled in Eddic mythological poetry. Such are however fairly common in Scaldic poetry, with which this poem shares several traits (see Introduction above).

2 goð-mólugra 'god-speaking' | This word is a hapax, but easily understood. One who is goð-mólugr is 'able to speak about the god-lore', i.e. 'versed in the mythology'.

The valour-mighty one [= Thunder] came onto the Thing of the gods, and had that cauldron which Hymer [had] owned;
but well the Wighers (= gods) shall drink one ale-feast at Eage's, every flax-cutting [FALL?].

4 <sup>é</sup>itt h<sup>or</sup>-m<sup>ei</sup>tið 'one ... flax-cutting' | A very obscure kenning. La Farge and Tucker (1992) give several interpretations, viz. éitr-b<sup>or</sup>-m<sup>ei</sup>tið 'poison-rope-cutter [SNAKE > WINTER]', éitr-orm-m<sup>ei</sup>ðið 'poison-worm-injurer' [WINTER]. The solution with the minimal amount of emendation is to read éitt 'one' as modifying öldr 'ale-feast', and hverjan 'every' as modifying b<sup>or</sup>-m<sup>ei</sup>tið 'flax-cutting', a compound made up of b<sup>or</sup> 'flax, cord' and m<sup>ei</sup>ta 'to cut', seemingly referring to an obscure harvest festival. This interpretation is by no means certain.

The Flyting of Lock (Lokasenna)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): 900s (0.965)

Meter: Leeds-meter

Preserved in R, directly following Hymr, though the poems without doubt were originally separate; the stylistic differences are drastical.

The poem has been interpreted as blasphemous (TODO: elaborate), but shows no linguistic signs of being particularly late.

a Eagre, who by another name is called Gymer, had prepared an ale-feast for the Eese when he had got the great kettle as is now told.<sup>165</sup> To that gathering came Weden and Frie, his woman. Thunder came not, for he was on the Eastern Way. Sib was there, Thunder's woman; Bray and Idun, his woman. Tew was there, he was one-handed. The Fenrerswolf tore his hand off when it was bound.<sup>166</sup> There was Nearth, and his woman Shede; Free and Frow; Wider, the son of Weden. Lock was there, and the servants of Free: Bew and Beal. There was a great many of the Eese and Elves<sup>167</sup>.

b Eagre had two servants: Femfinger and Elder. There glowing gold was used instead of fire; the ale there poured itself. That place was a great grith-stead.<sup>168</sup> Men greatly praised how good the servants of Eagre were. Lock could not stand to hear that, and he slew Femfinger. Then the Eese shook their shields and screamed at Lock,<sup>169</sup> and chased him away to the forest—but they went to drink. Lock turned back around and met Elder outside. Lock greeted him:

and I mix for them so the mead with harm."

3 jǫll ok ǫfú 'scorn and hatred' | ioll oc ǫfo R. These two interesting words have been interpreted in a variety of ways: CV sees the first word as jǫll 'wild angelica', whereas the second is taken to be an error for ǫfir 'a beverage [...] translated by Magnacus by sorbitio avenacea, a sort of common ale brewed of oats'. [Weden quoth:] “Rise thou, Wider, and let the Wolf’s father [= Lock] sit at the simble, lest Lock should greet us with words of vice in Eage’s hall.”

1 Rís ... fǫður ‘Rise ... father’ | For the (lack of) alliteration see note to st. 2. A C7th Proto-Norse form of the c-line might be: **Rís þú Wíðarr · auk lát wulfs fǫður*.

P3        Þá stóð Víðarr upp ok skenkti Loka, en áðr hann drykki, kvaddi hann 2                    ásuna:

Then Wider stood up and poured a drink to Lock, but before he [= Lock] drunk, he greeted the Eese:

11        „Hęilir ęsir, · hęilar ǫsynjur
2                    ok ǫll ginn-ęilǫg gǫð, nema sá ęinn ǫss · es innar sitr
4                    Bragi þękkjum á.“

“Hail the Eese! Hail the Ossens, and all yin-holy Gods!<sup>172</sup>

Save for that one os who sits further within:
Bray, on the benches.”

<sup>172</sup>The first two half-lines prayer formula are identical to Syed 2–3; it may be of authentic Heathen origin, used in cup-offerings, with the second half of the stanza being used to ask for a boon. Lock subverts it by instead insulting one of the gods present, something that may have been highly offensive to the original audience.

[Bragi] kvað:           12   „Mar ok męki • gef’k þér míns fęar

[Bray] quoth: “Steed and sword I give thee of my own wealth, and so restores thee Bray with a bigh, lest thou shouldst yield envy to the Eese—anger not the Gods against thee!”

1 Mar ok męki ‘Steed and sword’ | Formulaic, also occurring in Sbir TODO.

[Loki] kvað:           13   „Jós ok arm-bauga • munt ę vesa

[Lock] quoth: “Of both steed and arm-bighs wilt thou ever O Bray, be lacking!
Of the Eese and Elves which are here within,
thou art with war wariest and shiest with shot.”

[Bragi] kvað:           14   „Vęit’k, ef fyr útan vęra’k, • svá sem fyr innan em’k,

4                           lít’k þér þat fyr lygi.“ [Bray] quoth: “I know if outside I were, as inside I am come into Eage’s hall:<sup>173</sup> thy head I would bear in my hands;
this I see for thy lie.”

4 lít’k þér þat fyr lygi | ‘litt ec þer þat fyr lygi’ R. A variety of emendations have been proposed for this line. Simplest would be litt es þer þat fyr lygi ‘that is little [punishment] for thee for lying’. Based on the similarity of ę (= tt) and c Finnur Jónsson (1932) gives lykak þer þat fyr lygi ‘so I would bring to thee for thy lie’.

<sup>173</sup>As explicitly said in P1, the rule of grith (a truce of non-violence, even between enemies; see Encyclopedia) applied inside the hall. Being bound to it, Bray (or the other gods) cannot injure Lock.

[Loki] kvað:           15   „Snjallr est í sessi, · skal-at-tu svá gæra, 2                           Bragi þekk-skrautuðr;
                         vega þú gakk · ef vręiðr séir;
4                           hyggsk vętr hvatr fyrir.“

[Lock] quoth: “Valiant art thou in the seat; [but] thou shalt not do thus,
O Bray the bench-ornamenter!
Go thou to fight if thou art wroth;
the bold thinks not in advance.<sup>174</sup>”

<sup>174</sup>Lock attacks Bray’s invoking of the rule of grith; a truly brave man would not care about such a thing.

[Iðunn] kvað:           16   „Bið ek, Bragi, · barna sífar duga
2                           ok allra ósk-maga,

[Idun] quoth: “I bid thee, O Bray, to respect the TODO, and all the TODO,

[Lock] quoth: “Shut up thou, Idun! Thee I declare, of all women, most man-eager to be,
since thy nobly washed arms thou cast about thy brother’s bane.”

[Iðunn] kvað:           18   „Loka ek kveð’k-a · lasta-stofum [Idun] quoth: “I greet not Lock with words of vice, in Eagre’s hall.

[Lock] quoth: “Shut up thou, Weden! Thou couldst never deal out war amongst men—oft thou gavest to them thou shouldst not have given,
to the slower men victory.”

[Óðinn] kvað:        23     „Veitst ef ek gaf · þeim's gefa né skylda, [Weden] quoth: “Know that if I gave to them I should not have given,

to the slower men victory:
for eight winters wast thou beneath the earth [as] a milch cow and a woman, and thou hast there borne children,
and I've judged that a queer's nature.”

4 kýr mólkandi 'a milch cow' | May also be read as “milking cows”, the nom. sg. kýr being identical to the nom./acc. pl. kýr, and mólka meaning both ‘to milk’ and ‘to give milk’. “Milch cow” is preferable for two reasons, viz. (i) that the phrase is followed by ok kona ‘and a woman’ rather than sem kona ‘as a woman’ or similar, and (ii) that it agrees with another instance where Lock is gives birth in the form of a female animal (cows, of course, only giving milk after calving), namely the episode of the building of the wall around Osyrd as told in Yilv 42.

[Loki] kvað:        24     „En þik síga kóðu · Sámseyju í

[Lock] quoth: “But thou, they said, didst sink down into Samsy, and thou beatst the drum like [do] wallows.
In the likeness of a sorcerer thou journeyedst among the nations of men,
and I've judged that a queer's nature.”

[Frigg kvað:]        25     „Ør-lögum ykkrum · skylið aldri-gi

[Frie quoth:] “Of your orlays should ye two never speak to youths,
that which ye two Eese did in days of yore—always be ancient rakes shunned by men.”

[Lock quoth: “Shut up thou, Frie! Thou art Firgyn’s maiden, and has always been man-eager:
as [when] Wigh and Will, thou hadst, O Withrer’s wife, both in thy bosom taken.”

[Frie quoth:] “Know, that if within I had, in Eagre’s halls, a son alike to Balder:
out came thou not from the sons of the Eese,
and thou wouldst be fought with wrath.”

[Lock quoth: “Yet wilt thou, Frie, that I count more of my harmful deeds:
I decided it, that thou dost not see Balder riding to the halls henceforth.”

[Frow quoth:]: “Mad art thou, Lock, as thou dost count your ugly loathsome deeds:
all orlays I ween that Frie might know,
though she say them not herself.”

[Loki kvað:]           30     „Þegi þú, Freyja, · þik kann'k full-gørva;
                              es-a þér vamma vant:

4                    ása ok alfa, · es hér inni eru, hværr hēfir þinn hór vesit.“

[Lock quoth:] “Shut up thou, Frow! I know thee full well—thou art not free of blemishes:
of the Eese and Elves which are here within each one has been thy lover!”

2 vamma vant ‘free of blemishes’ | Formulaic, cf. Higb 22: bann es-a vamma vanr ‘he is not free of blemishes’.

[Frēyja kvað:]            31        „Fló ’s þér tunga, · hygg at þér frēmnr myni

4                    hryggr munt hēim fara.“

[Frow quoth:] “False is thy tongue, I ween that it henceforth will sing evil [into being] for thee.
Wroth against thee are the Eese and Ossens:
grieved wilt thou journey home.”

1–2 Fló ... gala; ‘False ... thee’ | The language is again strikingly similar to Higb, particularly 29/3–4: “A quick-spoken tongue—unless it be held in place—oft sings evil [into being] for itself (opt sér ó-gótt of gēlr).” and 116/3–4: “a false-counseling tongue (flá-rʒð tunga) brought his life to its end, and in no way over a truthful charge.”

4 hryggr munt hēim fara ‘grieved wilt thou journey home’ | Frow here predicts the future; Lock will come to regret his insults.

Loki:                    32        „Þegi þú, Frēyja, · þú est for-dēða 2                    ok mēini blandin mjök, síðst-u at bróðr þínum · síðu blíð rēgin
4                    ok myndir þá, Frēyja, frata.“

Lock [quoth]: “Shut up thou, Frow! Thou art an evil-working woman,
and much mixed with harm,
since against thy brother the blithe Reins enchanted thee,
and thou wouldst then, O Frow, fart.”

Njǫrðr:                33        „Þat ’s vá-lítit · þótt sér varðir vers fái, 2                    hós eða hvárs;
                      hitt’s undr, es áss ragr · es hér inn of kominn
4                    ok hēfir sá bǫrn of borit.“

Nearth [quoth]: “It is little woe that women should get themselves a man,
a lover or whomever else;

this is a wonder, that a queer os is come here within,
and he has born children!"

- Loki:           34   „Þegi þú, Njörðr, · þú vast austr heðan
                  2           gísl of sęndr at goðum;
                          Hymis meýjar · høfðu þik at hland-trogi
                  4           ok þér í munn migu.“

Lock [quoth]: “Shut up thou, Nearth! Thou wast east hence sent [as] a hostage for the Gods.
Hymer’s maidens had thee for a urinal,
and pissed thee in the mouth!”

- Njörðr:       35   „Sú esumk líkn · es vas’k langt heðan 2           gísl of sęndr at goðum:
                          þá ek mōg gat · þann’s mann-gi fíar,
                  4           ok þikkir sá ása jaðarr.“

Nearth [quoth]: “That is my relief, as I was far-away hence sent [as] a hostage for the Gods: [that] I then begot that lad whom no man hates [= Free], and he seems the peak of the Eese.”

- Loki:           36   „Hétt-u nú, Njörðr, · haf á hófi þik;
                  2           mun’k-a því lęyna lęngr:
                          við systur þinni · gatst slíkan mōg,
                  4           ok es-a þó ónu verr.“

Lock [quoth]: “Stop thou now, Nearth, restrain thyself;
I will no longer hide it:
by thy sister begotst thou such a lad, and there can be expected nothing worse.”

- Týr:           37   „Fręyr ’s bętstr · allra ball-riða męy né grótir · né manns konu,

                  4           ok lęysir ór høptum hvern.“

Tew [quoth]: “Free is the best of all bold riders
in the yards of the Eese;
he makes no maiden cry, nor [any] man’s woman, and loosens each from his bonds!”

Loki: 38 „Þegi þú, Týr, • þú kunnir aldri-gi 2 bera tilt með tvęim;
 handar ennar hógri • mun’k hinnar geta
 4 es þér sleit Fęnrir frá.“

Lock [quoth]: “Shut up thou, Tew! Thou couldst never the right hand I will next mention, which from thee Fenrer tore.”

Tew [quoth]: “A hand am I lacking, but thou Rothwitner;
 both yearnings are a bale!
 Nor does the Wolf have it well, who in bonds shall await the Twilight of the Reins.”

Loki: 40 „Þegi þú, Týr, • þat varð þinni konu
 2 at hon átti mōg við mér!
 Qln né pęnning • hafðir þess aldri-gi

Lock [quoth]: “Shut up thou, Tew! This happened to thy woman,

 A mackerel nor a penny hadst thou never for that Free [quoth]: “The Wolf I see lying before the river-mouth, therefore wilt thou next—unless thou now shut up—

 be bound, O smith of bales!”

[Loki kvað:]                46      „Þegi þú, Byggvir, • þú kunnir aldri-gi-

[Hēimdallr kvað:] 47 „Ql̥r est, Loki · svá't es ør-viti, [Homedall quoth:] “Drunk art thou, Lock, so that thou art out of wits;

 why dost thou not hold back, O Lock?
 For over-drinking causes for every man that he no longer recalls his speech.”

[Loki kvað:] 48 „Þegi þú, Hēimdallr, · þér vas í ár-daga

 [Lock quoth:] “Shut up thou, Homedall! For thee was in days of yore thy ugly life laid [in place]; with a stiff back wilt thou ever be and waking, O Watchman of the Gods.”

2 líf of lagit ‘life laid [in place]’ | Formulaic. See TODO.

4 v̥qr̥ðr goða ‘Watchman of the Gods’ | Formulaic epithet of Homedall, who had to guard the rainbow bridge of the Gods against Their enemies. See note to Grim 13.

[Loki kvað:] 50 „Veit̥st ef mik á h̥jorvi skulu · ins hrím-kalda magar

 [Lock quoth:] “Know, if on a sword shall, with the rime-cold lad's where we laid hands on Thedse.”

[X kvað:]           51   „Veitst ef fyrstr ok øfstr · vast at fjor-lagi “Know, if first and highest thou wast in life-taking,

[Loki kvað:]       52   „Léttari í mólum · vast við Laufeyjar son

 [Lock quoth:] “Lighter of speech wast thou with Leafie's son [= Lock = me] such is told of us, if we shall clearly tell our blemishes.

P4   þá gekk Sif fram ok byrлаði Loka í hrím-kálki mjöð ok mēlti:
 Then Sib walked forth and poured for Lock mead into a rime-chalice, and spoke:

2                   53   „Hẽill ves þú nú, Loki, · ok tak við hrím-kálki fullum forns mjaðar, hẽldr þú hana ẽina · látir með ása sonum
 4                      vamma-lausa vesa.“
 “Hale be thou now, O Lock, and receive the rime-chalice, full of ancient mead,
 that thou rather let her [me] alone, among the sons of the Eese, remain blemish-less.<sup>175</sup>”

<sup>175</sup>Sib attempts to bribe Lock with drink, so that she alone will remain unaccused among the gods.

P5 Hann tók við horni ok drakk af:

He received the horn and drank from it:

- 54 „Eín þú værir · ef þú svá værir, 2 vör ok gröm at veri;
 einn ek vëit, · svá't ek vita þikkjumk,
 4 hór ok af Hlórriða,

“Alone were thou, if thou so were wary and wroth against man.
 I know one—which I think myself to know—
 adulterer behind even Lorida's back, and that was the guile-wise Lock!”

5 lë-vísi Loki ‘guile-wise Lock’ | Formulaic, also occurring in Hymr 37. Cf. also Wsp 35 where Lock is called lë-gjarn ‘guile-cager’ and note to Wsp 17 where Lothar (possibly to be identified with Lock) gives men lë, which may be an accusative form of lë.

- [Beyla kvað:] 55 „Fjöll ǫll skjalfa, · hygga á fǫr vesa 2 heiman Hlórriða;
 hann rǫðr ró · þeim's rógir hér 4 goð ǫll ok guma!“
- [Beal quoth:] “The fells all quake—I think on the journey from home Lorida to be;
 he brings calm to the one who here maligns
 all Gods and men!”

1–2 Fjöll ... Hlórriða ‘The fells ... to be’ | Thunder's movement is often signalled by such disturbance in poetry. See note to Thrim 21.

- [Loki kvað:] 56 „Þegi þú, Beyla, · þú est Byggvis kvæn 2 ok meini blandin mjök;
 ó-kynjan meira · kom-a með ása sonum;
 4 ǫll est, dægja, dritin.“
- [Lock quoth:] “Shut up thou, Beal! Thou art Bewe's wife,
 and much mixed with harm;
 a greater disgrace came not among the sons of the Eese;
 thou art all, O kneadess, shitty!”

P6 Þá kom Þórr at ok kvað:

Then Thunder arrived and quoth:

57 „Þegi þú, rög vëttr, · þér skal minn þrúð-hamarr,
2 Mjöllnir, mál fyr-nema!
Hęrða klett · drep’k þér halsi af,
4 ok verðr þá þínu fјorvi of farit.“

“Shut up thou, queer wight! Thee shall my thrith-hammer
Millner, deprive of speech!
The shoulder-rock [HEAD] I strike off thy neck,
and then is thy life destroyed!”

[Loki kvað:] 58 „Jarðar burr · es hér nú inn kominn;
2 hví þrasir þú svá, Þórr?
En þá þorir ekki · es skalt við ulfinn vega
4 ok svelgr hann allan Sig-fјður.“

[Lock quoth:] “The son of Earth is now here come inside, why thrashest thou so, O Thunder?
But then darest thou not, as thou shalt fight against the wolf, and he swallows Syefather (= Weden) whole.”

[Þórr kvað:] 59 „Þegi þú, rög vëttr, · þér skal minn þrúð-hamarr,
2 Mjöllnir, mál fyr-nema!
Upp ek þér verp · ok á austr-vega
4 síðan þik mann-gi sér.“

[Thunder quoth:] “Shut up thou, queer wight! Thee shall my thrith-hammer Millner, deprive of speech!
Up I throw thee, and onto the eastern ways thereafter no man sees thee!”

[Loki kvað:] 60 „Austr-fјorum þínum · skalt aldri-gi

4 ok þóttisk-a þá Þórr vesa!“

[Lock quoth:] “Of thy eastern journeys shalt thou never speak to youths,
since in the thumb of a glove thou didst crawl, O Oneharrier, and didst not seem to be Thunder then!”

4 ok þóttisk-a þá Þórr vesa ‘didst not seem to be Thunder then’ | Cf. Hbl TODO.

4                      svá’t þér brotnar beina hvat.“

[Thunder quoth:] “Shut up thou, queer wight! Thee shall my thrith-hammer Millner, deprive of speech!
With the right hand I strike thee with Rungner’s bane,
so that every bone in thee breaks.”

[Loki kvað:]      62      „Lifa étla’k mér · langan aldr

4                      ok máttir-a þá nęsti náa ok svaltsk þá hungri heill.“

[Lock quoth:] “For myself I intend to live a long life, even though thou threatenest me with the hammer;

[Þórr kvað:]      63      „Þegi þú, rög vëttr, · þér skal minn þrúð-hamarr,

                    Hrunnis bani · mun þér í hæl koma
4                      fyr Ná-grindr neðan.“

[Thunder quoth:] “Shut up thou, queer wight! Thee shall my thrith-hammer Millner, deprive of speech!
Rungner’s bane will take thee to hell,
down beneath Neegrind!”

[Loki kvað:]      64      „Kvað’k fyr ǫsum, · kvað’k fyr ása sonum,
2                      þat’s mik hvatti hugr, en fyr þér ęinum · mun’k út ganga
4                      því-at ek veit at þú vegr.

[Lock quoth:] “I spoke before the Eese, I spoke before the sons of the Eese whatever my mind did goad me.
but for thee alone will I go out,
for I know that thou strikest.

- 65      Ql gørðir þú, Égir, · en þú aldri munt

Ale madest thou, Eagre, but thou wilt never since make a simble;
 all thy ownings which are here within,
 over [them] may flame play,
 and burn thee on the back!”

From Lock (Frá Loka)

The myth told here is known from two other places. Closest at hand is Wsp

Yilv 50 has a longer but somewhat different account: the Eese captured Lock's two sons, Wonnell and “Nare or Narve”. They turned Wonnell into a wolf (vargr, which also means ‘outlaw’) and had him tear his brother Narve apart. Narve's intestines were then taken and used to bind Lock on top of three pointed stones, with one digging into his shoulder-blades, the other digging into his loins, and the third digging into his houghs. The intestines then turned into iron.

Since the author of Yilv knew Wsp, it is possible that he combined a text similar to From Lock with this st., interpreting Vála víg-bönd as ‘Wonnell's war-bonds’ and vargr as ‘wolf’ rather than the more probable ‘outlaw’. Wonnell is otherwise only known as the son of Weden, and there is no reason as to why he could not have bound Lock. For further differences between Yilv and From Lock see introduction to From Lock below.

- P7      En eptir þetta falst Loki í Fránangrs-forsi í lax líki. Þar tóku ęsir hann.
 2              Hann var bundinn með þęrmum sonar Nara; en Narfi, sonr hans, varð at vargi. Skaði tók eittr-orm ok festi upp yfir and-lit Loka; draup þar ór 4              eittr. Sigyn, kona Loka, sat þar ok helt munn-laug undir eitrit. En er munn-laugin var full bar hon út eitrit, en meðan draup eitrit á Loka. Þá 6              kipptist hann svá hart við, at þaðan af skalf jörð ęll; þat eru nú kallaðir land-skjálftar.

But after this Lock hid himself in the Freenangersforce in the form of a salmon. There the Eese took him. He was bound with the intestines of his son Nare, but his son Narve became an outlaw. Shede took a venomous serpent and fastened it over Lock's face; out of it dripped venom. Syein, Lock's wife, sat there and held a basin [for hand-washing] under the venom. But when the basin was full she bore out the venom, and meanwhile the venom dripped on Lock. Then he revolted so hard that thence all the earth quaked; that is now called earth-quakes.

His beard he took to rustle, his locks he took to rip;
the son of Earth resolved to grope about.

3 skęgg ... dýja ‘beard ... pull’ | Apparently formulaic. Cf. a certain heroic poem (TODO).

And he this word first of all did say:
“Hear thou now, Lock, what I now speak, which no man knows anywhere on earth

1 Ok ... of kvað ‘And ... did say’ | The whole line is formulaic, occurring in five other places: sts. 3, 9 and 12 of the present poem; st 3 of Ordr; st. 5 of Siw Frag.

3–4 jarðar ... upp-himins ‘earth ... up-heaven’ | Formulaic, see Encyclopedia: Earth and Up-heaven.

- 3      Gingu þeir fagra · Freyju túna

Went they to the fair yards of Frow,
and he this word first of all did say:
“Wilt thou me, O Frow, the feather-hame lend,
if I my hammer might find?”

- Freya kvað:      4      „Þó mynda’k gefa þér · þótt ór gulli véri
2      ok þó selja · at véri ór silfri.“

“Still would I give it to thee though it were golden, and yet hand it to thee if it were silvern.”

[Frow quoth:]

2 selja ‘selja’ | selja, cognate of English sell, here has its older sense of ‘hand over’, cf. Gotish saljan Streitberg (1910, p. 116): ‘opfern; θύειν’.

- 5      Fló þá Loki, · fjaðr-hamr dunði, ok fyr innan kom · jǫtna hęima.

Flew then Lock—the feather-hame rustled—
until he came outside the Yards of the Eese,
and he came inside the Homes of the Ettins.

1 Loki ‘Lock’ | Though Thunder is the one asking for the feather-hame (“if I my hammer might find”), Lock is the one that takes off flying with it.

- 6      Þrymr sat á haugi, · þursa dróttinn,
2      gręyjum sínum · gull-bǫnd snøri

Thrim sat on the mound, the lord of Thurses:
on his greyhounds the golden leashes he twirled, and on his steeds the manes he evened.<sup>176</sup>

1 sat á haugi ‘sat on the mound’ | Apparently a typical seat for ettins. See Wsp 42 for other attestations.

1 þursa dróttinn ‘lord of Thurses’ | This formulaic expression also occurs in several Runic charms against such thursen lords (see below under Galders); an example of the close connection between mythology and ritual.

[Thrim quoth:] “What’s with the Eese? What’s with the elves?
 Why art thou alone come into the Ettin-homes?”— [Lock quoth:] “Tis bad with the Eese! It’s bad with the elves!
 Hast thou the hammer of Lorida (= Thunder) hid?”

3 illt ’s með ǫlfum | Required by the meter; om. R

1 Hvat ’s með ǫsum? · Hvat ’s með ǫlfum? ‘What is with the Eese? What is with the elves?’ | Formulaic, identical line occurs in Wsp.

[Þrymr kvað:]           8   „Ek hęfi Hlórriða · hamar of folginn

[Thrim quoth:] “I have the hammer of Lorida hid eight rests beneath the earth!
 It no man will fetch back,
 unless he bring me Frow for a wife.”

Flew then Lock—the feather-hame rustled—
 until he came outside the Yards of the Eese,
 and he came inside the Homes of the Ettins.
 Met he Thunder in the middle yards,
 and he [= Thunder] that word first of all did say:

5 hann þat | emend.; þat hann R, with elsewhere unprecedented word order. Cf. note to st. 2.

10   „Hęfir þú ęrendi · sem ęrfiði?

2 Seg-ðu á lopti · lǫng tíðendi!
 Opt sitjanda · sǫgur of fallask,
 4 ok liggjandi · lygi of þellir.“

“Hast thou an errand of hardship?
 Tell thou aloft the long tidings!
 Oft the sitter’s tales fail each other and the liar blows up his lie.”<sup>177</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Hefir þú ørendi · sem erfiði? ‘Hast thou an errand of hardship?’ | Thunder asks Lock if he has bad news. The collocation ørendi ‘errand’ ... erfiði ‘trouble, hardship’ is formulaic and occurs in X other (TODO!!) places, including in st. 5 of HHarw.

<sup>177</sup> Proverbial. If one sits or lies (liggjandi means to ‘lie down’; it is rather unfortunate that the two sound the same in English) down and thinks too much over bad news, details will be left out, excuses thought up. Thus it is best that Lock immediately tell Thunder what he has learned.

[Loki kvað:] 11 „Hefi’k ørendi, · erfiði ok:
 2 Þrymr hefir þinn hamar, · þursa dróttinn;

“I have an errand, hardship also:
 Thrim has thy hammer, the lord of Thurses.
 It no man will fetch back,
 unless he bring him Frow for a wife.”

[Lock quoth:]

12 Ganga þeir fagra · Freyju at hitta

 „Bitt-u þik, Freyja, · brúðar líni!
 4 Vit skulum aka tvau · í jǫtun-heima.“

Go they the fair Frow to find,
 and he this word first of all did say:
 “Bind thyself, Frow, with a bride’s linen!
 We two shall drive into the Ettin-homes.”

13 Vreð varð þá Freyja · ok fnasaði,

Wroth became then Frow, and snorted;
the whole hall of the Eese quivered below;
down crashed the great torc of the Brisings—“Thou knowest that I will become the most man-eager, if I drive with thee into the Ettin-homes.”

3 mçn Brisinga ‘torc of the Brisings’ | A legendary jewel owned by Frow.

4 verða · ver-gjarnasta ‘become the most man-eager’ | Presumably Frow is speaking out of self-awareness of her own lustful inclinations, i.e., she will be gripped by uncontrollable lust. It is also possible that she complains about being accused of promiscuity by the other gods, but that is not the literal sense. For Frow’s promiscuity cf. Lock 30, and also st. 26 of that poem where Frie is likewise called ver-gjörn ‘man-eager’.

Then quoth this Homedall, whitest of the Eese;
he foreknew well like the other Wanes:
“Let us bind Thunder then, with a bride’s linen;
he may have the great torc of the Brisings.

2 vissi vçl framm ‘he foreknew well’ | i.e. saw the future. Compare the derived adjective fram-víss ‘forth-wise, prescient.’

Let us set by his side keys to jingle,
and women’s garments to fall about the knees,

but on the breast broad stones,
and skillfully let us tip his head.<sup>178</sup>

<sup>178</sup> An interesting description of Wiking age bridal dress. As the everyday manager of the household, keys were the mark of a respectable married woman. The “broad stones” on the breast may be tortoise brooches (also mentioned in Wayl 25, 36.) or beads. The tipping of the head refers to some sort of bridal hat, perhaps a veil (TODO: Literature).

17 Þá kvað þat Þórr, · þrúðugr áss:
2 „Mik munu ésir · argan kalla ef ek bindask lét · brúðar líni!“

Then quoth this Thunder, the mighty Os: “Me will the Eese call queer,
if I let myself be bound with a bride’s linen!”

18 Þá kvað þat Loki · Laufeyjar sonr:
2 „Þegi þú, Þórr, · þeira orða!
Þegar munu jotnar · Ós-garð búa

Then quoth this Lock, Leafie’s son:
“Shut up thou, Thunder, with those words!
Shortly the Ettins will settle Osyard, unless thou thy hammer for thyself dost fetch!”

3–4 Þegar ... heimtir. ‘Shortly ... dost fetch!’ | Guarding Osyard from transgressive and destructive forces was Thunder’s task, and the hammer his most important tool. Cf. Hbl TODO, and a couplet by the obscure poet Thurbern Disescold, cited in Scold 11: Þórr hefr Yggs með órum · Ósgarð af þrek varðan. ‘Thunder has with the messengers of Ug [GODS] mightily guarded Osyard.’

6 ok hag-liga · of hófuð typpðu.

Bound they Thunder then with a bride’s linen,
and with the great torc of the Brisings.
They set by his side keys to jingle,
and women’s garments to fall about the knees,
but on the breast broad stones,
and skillfully they tipped his head.

 2 „Mun’k auk með þér · ambótt vesa,

Then quoth this Lock, Leafie’s son:

“I will also with thee be a handmaid;

we two<sup>179</sup> shall drive into the Ettin-homes.”

<sup>179</sup>The form used, tvau, is the neuter plural, i.e. one of the pair is female and the other male. This is either an error due to mindless copying of v. 11, or a backhanded insult against Thunder.

Soon were the he-goats driven home, hastened onto the cart-poles; they were to run well.

Crags burst, earth burned with flame;

drove Weden’s son [= Thunder] into the Ettin-homes.<sup>180</sup>

<sup>1</sup> hafrar ‘he-goats’ | Thunder’s chariot was driven by two he-goats, whence he is called “the Lord of He-goats” (e.g. in Hym 20, 31).

<sup>180</sup>Thunder’s driving is often connected with cosmic disturbance. So, his arrival in Lock 55 is signalled by the mountains quaking. The description most similar to the present stanza is found in Thedwolf’s Hvl 14–16, where crags (björg) burst asunder and fires rage before him. A possibly Indo-European parallel to this is the Vedic myth of Indra breaking the mountains and releasing the rivers (as described most famously in RV 1.32). Cf. Bldr 3 where the ground rumbles beneath the riding Weden.

- 22 Þá kvað þat Þrymr, · Þursa dróttinn:

Here march to the farm golden-horned kine,
all-black oxen to the ettin's [= my] pleasure.
A multitude I own of treasures, a multitude I own of torcs—only Frow I think myself missing.”

2 oxn al-svartir ‘all-black oxen’ | Formulaic, also occurring in Hyme 18. That all-black (i.e. spotlessly black) oxen were most valued is seen by the pairing with “golden-horned”. One may also compare Grammaticus (2015)[1.8.12], where the hero Hadding has to atone for his slaying of a heavenly being by a sacrifice of dark-coloured victims (furvae hostiae): Siquidem propiciandorum numinum gratia Frø deo rem diuinam furuis hostiis fecit. Quem litationis morem annuo feriarum circuitu repetitum posteris imitandum reliquit. Frøblod Sueones uocant. ‘In order to mollify the divinities he [= Hadding] did indeed make a holy sacrifice of dark-coloured victims to the god Frø. He repeated this mode of propitiation at an annual festival and left it to be imitated by his descendants. The Swedes call it Frøblot.’ This ancient ritual taboo finds parallel even in the Tanakh, where animals dedicated to YHWH were to be without blemish (תמים; Leviticus 1:3)

There was the evening come early,
and for the ettins ale brought forth.
Alone ate he [= Thunder] an ox, eight salmons,
all the dainties meant for the women;
drank Sib's husband [= Thunder] three sieves of mead.<sup>181</sup>

<sup>181</sup>Cf. Hyme 15, where Thunder eats two of Hymer's oxen. It is rather interesting that the same kenning is used in both stanzas relating the god's great eating; perhaps one poet was playing on the other's expression, or they were both referencing another, now-lost work.

25 Þá kvað þat Þrymr, · þursa dróttinn:

Then quoth this Thrim, the lord of Thurses:

In came the wretched sister of the ettins,
 she who for the bride-fee [= Millner] dared ask:
 "Slide off from thy hands the red rings,
 if thou wilt win my love,
 my love; all [my] holdness."<sup>183</sup>

5 ástir mínar, · alla hylli ‘my love; all [my] holdness’ | Probably formulaic. There are no preserved parallels in poetry, but there may be one in Yilv 49 (excerpt, following the death of Balder): En er goðin vitkuðust, þá mēlti Frigg ok spurði, hvern sá véri með ásum, er eignast vildi „allar ástir mínar (so TW; ástir bennar ‘her loves’ SU) ok hylli, ok vili hann riða á hel-veg ok freista, ef hann fái fundit Baldr, ok bjóða Helju út-launs, ef hon vill láta fara Baldr heim í Ás-garð.“ ‘But when the gods came back to their wits, then Frie spoke and asked which one among the Eese would own “all my loves and boldness, and will ride on the Hellway and see if he may find Balder and offer Hell a ransom if she will let Balder come home to Osyard.” We can tell from the citation of a Leeds-meter stanza at the end of ch. 49 (see Eddic Fragments below) that Snorre knew one or more now-lost Eddic poems about Balder’s death, and it may be that one of these poems contained the same two long-lines as the present stanza. For such a sharing of whole lines cf. e.g. st. 14/1–3 above, which are identical to Bldr 1/1–3.

<sup>183</sup>The sister, who was apparently the one who asked for the Hammer, now has the audacity to ask Thunder (disguised as Frow) to give her the very rings on his hands.

30 Þá kvað þat Þrymr, · þursa dróttinn:

Then quoth this Thrim, the lord of Thurses:
“Bear ye in the hammer, the bride to bless;
lay ye Millner in the maiden’s knee;
bless ye us two together by Ware’s hand!”

4 Várar ‘Ware’ | According to Snorre one of the goddesses, presiding over vows between men and women. See Encyclopedia.

and a strike of the hammer for a multitude of rings.
So got Weden's son [= Thunder] back his hammer.

The Thule of Righ (Rígsþula)

Meter: Ancient-words-law

Dumezil hypothesis. Irish influence? Many interesting things to write here!

The language of Rígh is highly formulaic, but also often unique to it. Of particular note are the alliteration between the adverb męirr ‘further’ and miðra, e.g. in st. 2/1: gekk męirr at þat

- P1 Svá segja męnn í fornum sęum, at ęinn-hvęrr af ęsum, sá er Hęimdallr [W 78r/1] 2 hét, fór fęrðar sinnar ok framm með sjóvar-stręndu nękkurri, kom at ęinum hýsa-bó ok nęndisk Rigr; ęptir þęiri sęgu er kvęði þetta.

So say men in ancient saws that one of the Eese, he who was called Homedall, went on his journey and came forth along a certain lake shore, came upon a lone homestead and called himself Righ—according to that saw is this poem.

- 1 Ár kvęðu ganga • grónar brautir [W 78r/TODO]
2 oflgan ok aldinn • ęs kunnigan, ramman ok ręskvan • Ríg stíganda.

Of yore, they said, did walk on green roads
a mighty and aged os, cunning:
the strong and brisk Righ, striding.

1 Ár ‘Of yore’ | sens. emend. (see note); at W

1 Ár ‘Of yore’ | Formulaic. It is very common for poems to begin with ár. Cf. Wsp 3/1, Hyme 1/1, HHund I 1/1, Guth I 1/1, Siv 1/1

- 2 Gekk męirr at þat • miðrar brautar, [W 78r/TODO]

            Ái ok Edda · aldin-falda.

Went he further after that on the middle of the road,
came he to a house—the door was wide open.
He took to go inside, fire was on the floor.
A couple sat there, hoary by the hearth:
Great-Grandfather and Great-Grandmother, old-fashioned.

[W 78r/TODO]

Then took Great-Grandmother a lumpy loaf, heavy and thick, stuffed with chaff,
she carried it further after that on the middle of a trencher, broth was in a bowl, she set it on a plate—
a cooked calf was the best dainty;
he [= Righ] rose up thence, resolved to sleep.

- 6           Þar vas hann at þat · þrjár nętr saman;
2           gekk hann męirr at þat · miðrar brautar;

[W 78r/TODO]

There he was after that for three nights in all;
went he further after that on the middle of the road;
passed further after that nine months.

Great-Grandmother begot a child, they sprinkled it with water<sup>184</sup>— swarthy of skin—they called it Thrall.

<sup>184</sup> A reference to the Heathen naming ceremony, somewhat resembling the Christian baptism, wherein water would be poured on a newborn. Cf. High 156.

He took to grow, and thrive well;
there on his hands was wrinkled skin,
crooked knuckles, [...],
thick fingers, a foul face,
a stooping back, long heels.

He took further after that to try his power:
 bast to bind, burdens to make,
 he carried home after that brushwood on a gloomy day.<sup>185</sup>

There came to the farm a gangle-boned woman:
mud was on her footsoles, her arm sunburnt,
downturned her face—she called herself Thew.

<sup>3</sup> Þír ‘Thew’ | The name probably means ‘maid-servant’ or ‘female slave’. Unlike Thrall, it is not attested in any prose texts, but probably corresponds to OS thiwi ‘maid(-servant)’, being further root-related to þéa -þjá ‘to enthrall’, Proto-Norse þewar ‘servant’, OE þéow ‘slave, servant’,.

<sup>4</sup> ǫtul ... yrmlingi 'fierce ... the young serpent' | A person of noble stock being recognised as such through their appearance is a motif in Norse literature. Cf. esp. the incident at the beginning of HHund II, where Hallow, disguised as a thrall-woman, is almost caught due to his unslavelike eyes, which are, as in the present stanza, likewise said to be ǫtul 'fierce, terrible'.

At this point leaf 78 ends. The rest of the poem is lost.

Eddic fragments from Snorre's Edda

A number of Eddic lines, stanzas and groups of stanzas are quoted in Snorre's Edda. The majority of them are taken from longer Eddic poems preserved in full in other manuscripts (primarily R and A), but a few are found nowhere else. These fragments will be edited in the present section.

The fragments have some things in common: they are generally pieces of spoken dialogue quoted in the context of longer narrative prose sections, and are, with one exception (Homedall's galder, see below), not introduced by reference to their source but rather with phrases like þá kvað hann 'then he quoth'.

This half-stanza is quoted in Yilv 2, being the second Eddic verse in the text, following High 1 in the same chapter, which is uttered by Yilfer himself when he enters the hall of the Eese. The whole section is clearly referencing other Eddic mythic wisdom contests and particularly reminiscent of Webth.

- P1      Hann sá þrjú há-sėti ok hvert upp frá ǫðru, ok sátu þrír menn sinn í hverju.
2      Þá spurði hann, hvert nafn hǫfðingja þeira véri. Sá svarar, er hann leiddi inn, at sá, er í inu neðsta háseti sat, var konungr, ok heitir Hárr, en þar nēst 4      sá, er heitir Jafnhárr, en sá ofast, er Þriði heitir. Þá spyrr Hárr komandann, hvárt fleira er erendi hans, en heimill er matr ok drykkir honum sem ǫllum 6      þar í Háva hǫll. Hann segir, at fyrst vill hann spyrja, ef nokkurr er fróðr maðr inni. Hárr segir, at hann komi eigi heill út, nema hann sé fróðari,

He [= Yilfer] saw three high-seats and each higher than the other, and three men sat there, each in his own seat. Then he asked what the names of those chieftains were. He who led him in answers that the one who sat in the lowest high-seat was a king called High, and next to him he who is called Evenhigh, and uppermost he who is called Third. Then High asks the guest whether he has any other errands, but food and drink will be freely offered him, like all men there in the High One's hall. He [= Yilfer] asks whether anyone within is a learned man. High says that he will not come out whole unless he be more learned [than he],

- 1      „ok statt-u fram · meðan þú fregn
2      sitja skal sá es segir.“

“and stand forth while thou askest;
sit shall he who speaks!”

The following passage is almost the whole of Yilv 23, excepting at the very end svá er sagt ‘so it is said’, after which is quoted Grim 11. Notably, the two stanzas cited here are also found translated in Grammaticus (2015)[1.8.18–19], where they are said to have been spoken by Hadding and Rainhild, respectively. For discussion Hopkins (2021).

- P2    Inn þriði áss er sá, er kallaðr er Njorðr. Hann býr á himni, þar sem heitir 2    Nóatún. Hann ræðr fyrir gongu vinds ok stillir sjá ok eld. Á hann skal heita til sé-fara ok til veiða. Hann er svá auðigr ok fé-séll, at hann má gefa 4    þeim auð, landa eða lausa-fjár. Á hann skal til þess heita. Eigi er Njorðr ása étta. Hann var upp fódrr í Vana-heimi, en Vanir gísluðu hann goðunum 6    ok tóku í mót at gíslingu þann, er Hónir heitir. Hann varð at sétt með goðum ok Vönum. Njorðr á þá konu, er Skaði heitir, dóttir Þjatsa jötuns.

 10    séttust á þat, at þau skyldu vera níu nétr í Þrym-heimi, en þá aðrar níu at Nóa-túnum. En er Njorðr kom aftr til Nóatúna af fjallinu, þá kvað hann 12    þetta:

The third Os is that one who is called Nearth. He lives in the heaven in the place called Nowetowns. He rules the course of the wind, and stills sea and fire. On him shall one call for sea-faring and for hunting. He is so wealthy and blessed with money that he may give them a wealth of lands or loose property; on him shall one call for that sake. Nearth is not of the lineage of the Eese. He was brought up in Wanhome, but the Waness gave him as a hostage to the gods, and in return got as hostage that one who is called Heener. He was used to reconcile the gods and the Waness. Nearth has that woman who is called Shede, the daughter of the ettin Thedse. Shede wishes to have the dwelling which her father had owned, which lies on some fells in the place called Thrimham—but Nearth wishes to live by the sea. They agreed with each other that they would live for nine nights in Thrimham, but the other nine at Nowetowns. But when Nearth came back to the Nowetowns from the fell, he quoth this:

- 2    „Læið erumk fjöll, · vas’k-a lęngi á,
 2           nętr ęinar níu;
      ulfa þytr · mér þótti illr vesa
 4           hjá sęngvi svana.“

“The fells are loathsome to me; I was not long thereon—only for nine nights.
 The howling of the wolves thought me evil, compared to the song of swans.”

P3 Þá kvað Skaði þetta:

Then Shede quoth this:

3 „Sofa né mát'k-a'k · s'évar beðjum á
 2 fugls jarmi fyrir;
 sá mik vękr · es af víði kómr
 4 morgun hverjan már.“

“I could not sleep on the beds of the sea for the bleating of the bird.
 He awakes me, when from the wide sea he comes,
 every morning, the mew.”

P4 Þá fór Skaði upp á fjall ok byggði í Þrym-heimi, ok ferr hon mjök á skíðum
 2 ok með boga ok skýtr dýr. Hon heitir ǫndur-goð eða ǫndur-dís.

Then Shede went up to the fells and dwelled in Thrimham, and she often goes on skis with her bow and shoots beasts. She is called ski-god or ski-dise.

Homedall's Galder (Heimdallargaldr)

This mysterious fragment is quoted in Yilv 27, the chapter describing Homedall, where it is introduced by the sentence: Ok enn segir hann sjalfr í Heimdallar-galdri. ‘And further he himself says in Homedall's Galder.’ The fragment appears to be the end of a stanza in the fitting meter Galders-law, consisting of two consecutive c-lines.

The same poem is mentioned again, but not quoted from, in Scold 15: Heimdallar hǫfuð beitir sverð. Svá er sagt, at hann var lostinn manns hǫfði í gegnum. Um þat er kveðit í Heimdallar-galdri, ok er síðan kallat hǫfuð mjǫtuðr Heimdallar ‘A sword is called Homedall's head. So is said, that he was pierced by a man's head. About that it is sung in Homedall's galder, and thereafter the head is called Homedall's bane.’

4 „Níu em'k móðra mögr,
 2 níu em'k systra sonr.“

“I am nine mothers' lad;
 I am nine sisters' son.”

The following passage is from Yilv 35, which lists the Ossens.

---

- P5 Fjórtánda Gná, hana sendir Frigg í ymsa heima at ørindum sínum. Hon á 2 þann hest, er renn lopt ok lög, er heitir Hóf-varpnir. Þat var eitt sinn, er hon reið, at vanir nokkvörir sá reið hennar í loptinu. Þa mælti einn:

The fourteenth is Gna; Frie sends her into every home to do her errands. She owns the horse who runs through air and sea, and is called Hoofwarpner. It was one time when she rode that some Wanæs saw her riding in the air. Then one spoke:

- 5 „Hvat þar flýgr, · hvat þar ferr,
 2 eða at lopti liðr?“

“What flies there, what fares there, or passes through the air?”

- P6 Hon svarar:

She answers:

- 6 „Né ek flýg, · þó ek ferr
 2 ok at lopti lið’k á Hóf-varpni, · þeim’s Ham-skærp 4 gat við Garð-rofu.“

“I fly not, thou I fare,
 and pass through the air,
 on Hoofwarpner, whom Hamsherper
 begot with Yardrove.”

- P7 Af Gnár nafni er svá kallat, at þat gnéfar, er hátt ferr:

From Gna’s name it is so called that something which fares high up protrudes.

Yilv 49 contains the narrative of Balder’s death, beginning with his ominous dreams, and ending with the Eese failing to “weep him out of Hell” (for a summary and discussion of the myth and its attestations, see the introduction to Wsp 31–33). At the end of the chapter, a single Leeds-meter speech-stanza is quoted.

- P8 Því nęst sendu ęsir um allan heim ęrind-reka at bięja, at Baldr vęri grátinn

And all did that, the men and the beasts and the earth and the stones and trees and all bedrock, as thou must have seen, that these things weep when they come out of cold and into heat. When the messengers journeyed home, and had ran their errand well, they find in a certain cave that a gow sat there; she called herself Thanks. They ask her to weep Balder out of hell. She says:

- 7 „Þękk mun gráta • þurru tęrum

 kyks né dauęs • naut'k-a Karls sonar
 4 hafi Hęl því's hęfir.“

“Thanks will weep—with dry tears for Balder's pyre-journey [DEATH].
 Neither alive nor dead did I benefit from Churl's son [= Balder];
 let Hell have what she has!”

- P9 En þess geta menn, at þar hafi verit Loki Laufeyjarson, er flest hefir illt

But men guess that this was Lock, Leafy's son, who has done the most evil among the Eese.

Scold 26, here edited in part, is the only surviving retelling of Thunder's journey to the ettin Garfrith, and his following fight with, and slaying of, him and his two daughters, Yelp and Grope. This was apparently a well-known story, and is also mentioned in Vetr Lv 1/1b (quoted in Scold 11, which lists kennings for Thunder): stętt of Gjęlp dauęa ‘thou didst step over the dead Yelp’. The prose of Scold 26 seems to be based on an earlier, now-lost poem in Leeds-meter, from which it quotes two stanzas. The first is found in all four main manuscripts, while the second is found only in U. Both are spoken by Thunder and closely resemble each other stylistically, which is why they most likely come from the same poem.

- P10 Þá fór Þórr til ár þeirar, er Vimur heitir, allra á mest. Þá spennti hann
 2 sik megin-gjörðum ok studdi for-streymis Gríðar-völ, en Loki helt undir megin-gjarðar. Ok þá er Þórr kom á miðja ána, þá óx svá mjök áin, at uppi 4 braut á oxl honum. Þá kvað Þórr þetta:

Then Thunder journeyed to that river which is called Wimbre, greatest of all rivers. Then he wrapped his might-girdle around himself and leaned upon Grith's stave against the stream, and Lock held up the might-girdle. And when Thunder came to the middle of the river, it waxed so great that it reached up unto his shoulders. Then Thunder quoth this:

- 8 „Vax-at-tu nú, Vimur, · alls mik þik vaða tíðir 2 jǫtna garða í;
 vætist, ef þú vęx · at þá vęx mér ós-męgin
 4 jafn-hátt upp sem himinn.“

“Grow not now, O Wimbre, as I wish to wade through thee into the yards of the ettins;
 know that if thou growest, that my os-might then grows

- P11 Þá sér Þórr uppi í gljúfrum nokkurum, at Gjálp, dóttir Geirrøðar stóð þar
 2 tveim megin árinna, ok gerði hon ár-vøxtinn. Þá tók Þórr upp ór ánni

Then Thunder sees that, up in some gorges, Yelp, daughter of Garfrith stood there on both sides of the river, and she caused the river's growth. Then Thunder took up from the river a great stone, and threw it at her and spoke thus: “At the source shall river be dammed!” He did not miss his target, and in that moment he turned towards land and caught hold of some rowan shrub, and thus stepped out of the river. Therefore the saying goes that the rowan is Thunder's deliverance.

- P12 En er Þórr kom til Geirrøðar, þá var þeim fê-lögum vísat fyrst í geita-hús þess varr, at stóllinn fór undir honum upp at réfri. Hann stakk Gríðar-veli 4 upp í raftana ok lét sígast fast á stólinn. Varð þá brestr mikill, ok fylgði skrékr. Þar hofðu verit undir stólinum dótr Geirrøðar, Gjálp ok Greip, ok 6 hafði hann brotit hrygginn í báðum. Þá kvað Þórr:

But when Thunder came to Garfrith's home, then the companions were first shown to a goathouse as lodgings, and the seating there was one chair, and Thunder sat thereon. Then he noticed that the chair beneath him was going up toward the roof. He stuck

Heroic Poetry of the Codex Regius

The Lay of Wayland (Vǫlundarkviða)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): 900s (0.428)–early 1000s (0.475)

Meter: Ancient-words-law

The Lay of Wayland (Wǫl) is a story of immense psychological complexity, one of the masterpieces of Norse narrative poetry.

The poem begins with a prose introduction, which survives in both R and A.

Wayland gets his revenge on the whole royal household. He murders Nithad's two young sons (affectionately, his "bear-cubs") and thus ends his male lineage. Likewise he defangs Nithad's "cunning wife" (she is never called anything else) by reducing her once powerful counsels to cold words; and finally he rapes Beadhild, depriving her of her maidenhood and value in marriage. They are thus reduced to the same state of complete powerlessness as he himself experienced, something clearly seen in the repetition of the adjective viljalauss 'powerless'; in v. 12 it describes Wayland after he wakes in shackles, but in v. 31 Nithad uses it to refer to his own mental state after the deaths of his sons. This sense of hopelessness is also seen in Beadhild's haunting concluding speech. "I knew by naught struggle against him; I could by naught struggle against him."

From the other versions of the story it is known that Beadhild gave birth to a son, Woody (OE Wudga, ThdrS Viðga, in Danish ballads Vidrik Verlandson). He went on to become a great hero, and in the later heroic ballads by far eclipses his father. His birth seems heavily foreshadowed by Wayland forcing Nithad to swear an oath in v. 33, but he is nowhere directly mentioned in the poem, probably for artistic reasons.

Apart from this lay there is one other telling of the full story, namely the Strand of Wayland the Smith in ThdrS. While written in Old Norse, it is clear from the proper names and content that it is based on German sources (probably heroic ballads). Thus the native form Vǫlundr is replaced with Velent [sic], Niðuðr with Niðungr. Interestingly there is a note within it showing that the native form was still known, namely about "Velent, the excellent smith, whom Warrings (væringjar) call Wayland (Vǫlundr)". Apparently Wayland was so famous that "all men seem to praise his workmanship so, that the maker of any smith's work which is made better than other works, is called a Wayland (Vǫlundr) with regards to workmanship."

Far more stark than minor differences of language is that of tone. The psychological complexity and tension of the older redaction is almost entirely gone: Wayland is no longer a mysterious wild man, but a chivalrous knight who can escape from any peril through his ingenuity and craftsmanship. He is not kidnapped out of Nithad's greed, nor hamstrung out of the suspicion of his cruel wife, but rather a loyal servant of Nithad's, banished from the kingdom after defending himself against the king's corrupt steward, and hamstrung after being caught attempting to poison the king's food in revenge.

Most frustratingly the personality of Beadhild is entirely expulged. She is the anonymous “king’s daughter”, an unnamed maiden (jungfrú, a borrowing from Low German) who is peacefully seduced by Wayland and quickly falls in love with him. Likewise the person of Nithad’s cunning wife is completely gone, and the murder of his sons no longer ends his lineage, since he has another, older son who survives him and takes over the kingdom. Wayland still flies away laughing after telling Nithad what he has done, but only four years (his son with Beadhild is three years old) later reconciliates with Nithad’s son, retrieves Beadhild and their son and lives a long life as a famous craftsman.

With this it is clearly seen that the story by the time of the ThdrS had been heavily distorted, a tragic victim of medieval romantic sensibilities. It does not have any high literary value, but is of interest since it shows the wide reception and variation of the narrative.

Finally there are also traces of the story in the Anglo-Saxon tradition, where it is alluded to in both Walder and Deer, the latter of which particularly emphasising the powerlessness felt by Wayland and Beadhild (thus being much closer in spirit to the present poem than to ThdrS). Parts of the narrative are depicted on the early C8th Frank’s casket, where it is as prominent as the depiction of the Adoration of the Magi—a true testament to the weight with which it was regarded within that culture.

To illustrate the narrative correspondences and differences of the various redactions, I present the following table:

Regarding Wayland (Frá Völundi)

- P1 Níðuðr hét konungr í Svíþjóð. Hann átti tvá sonu ok eina dóttur; hon hét [R 18r/4, A 6v/26]
 2 Bǫðvildr. Bróðr vǫru þrír, synir Finna konungs. Hét einn Slagfiðr, annarr Egill, þriði Völundr. Þeir skriðu ok veiddu dýr. Þeir kvómu í Úlfðali ok 4 gerðu sér þar hús. Þar er vatn, er heitir Úlfsjár. Snemma of morgin fundu þeir á vatsströndu konur þrjár, ok spunnu lín. Þar vǫru hjá þeim álfarhamir 6 þeira; þat vǫru valkyrjur. Þar vǫru tvær dótr Hlǫðvés konungs: Hlaðguðr svanhvít ok Hervǫr alvitr. In þriðja var Qlrún Kjárs dóttir af Vallandi.
 8 Þeir hófðu þér heim til skála með sér. Fekk Egill Qlrúnar, en Slagfiðr Svanhvítrar, en Völundr Alvitrar. Þau bjuggu sjau vetr. Þá flugu þér at 10 vitja víga ok kvómu eigi aptr. Þá skreið Egill at leita Qlrúnar, en Slagfiðr

12 leitaði Svanhvítrar, en Völundr sat í Úlfðöllum. Hann var hagrastr maðr, svá at menn viti í fornum sögum. Níðuðr konungr lét hann höndum taka, svá sem hér er um kveðit:

Nithad was a king called in Sweden. He had two sons and one daughter; she was called Beadhild. Three brothers were there; the sons of a king of the Finns. One was called Slayfinn, the other Eyel, the third Wayland. They fared on skis and hunted wild beasts. They came into the Wolfdales and made for themselves houses there. There is a lake there which is called the Wolfsea. Early in the morning they found on the lake-shore three women, and they span linen. There were by them their swan-hames; those were Walkirries. There were two daughters of king Ladwigh: Ladguth Swanwhite and Harware Elwight. The third was Alerune, daughter of Choser of Walland. The men took the women to their halls with them. Eyel got Alerune, and Slayfinn Swanwhite, and Wayland the Elwight. The couples lived there for seven winters; then the women left to attend battles, and did not come back. Then Eyel fared on skis to search for Alerune, but Slayfinn searched for Swanwhite—but Wayland stayed in the Wolfdales. He was the most skilled craftsman whom men know of in the ancient saws. King Nithad had him taken, as it is here sung of:

1 hon hét 'she was called' | so R; ok hét hon 'and she was called' A 2 vöru 'were' | so A; om. R 4–13 sér þar hús ... um kveðit 'for themselves houses ... sung of' | so R; om. (due to loss of the following foll. in the ms.) A

Maidens flew from the south through Mirkwood —young elwights— to fulfill orlay.
They on the lake-shore set down to rest, southern ladies, they span costly linen.

1 Myrk-við 'Mirkwood' | Mirkwood is surely referenced for its association with the war-ravaged lands of the Gots and Huns; a natural environment for Walkirries.

2 al-vitr 'elwights' | i.e. "strange beings, foreign wights", continuing a hypothetical **alja-wihtiz*.

2 ør-lög drýgja; 'fulfill orlay' | That is, to fulfill their preordained destinies, and act according to their innate nature, as described in P1 and st. 3. Clunies Ross (2005)[103] and some other editors see a sign of English influence in these words; they translate drýgja ør-lög as "engage in war", considering ør-lög a semantic borrowing from the OE cognate of Dutch oorlog 'war'. This is unnecessary; ON ør-lög otherwise means 'fate, destiny', and so may its OE cognate, as seen by the equivalent phrase found in l. 29 of a poem on the Christian Doomsday (TODO?), where a man going to Hell for his sins þonne á tó ealdre • ør-leg dreógeð 'and then for ever and ever [he] suffers his orlay'.

This learns Nithad, lord of the Nears, that alone Wayland stayed in the Wolfdales.
Nightily journeyed warriors—nailed were their byrnies—their shields gleamed by the waning moon.

1 Níara ‘the Nears’ | An obscure tribe, perhaps the residents of Närke, an ancient province of Sweden. See Encyclopedia.

3 næglðar vóru brynjur ‘nailed were their byrnies’ | The “byrnies” here are apparently some kind of costly plate armour.

English “livelong”) occurs in three other places: sts. 16 and 30 of the present poem, and st. 3 of Ordr. end-langr salr ‘endlong hall’ occurs in two additional places: st. 27 of Thrim and st. 3 of Sbir.

 Came there from the hunt the stormy-eyed shooter:
 Wayland passing over a long way.

2 fyr çinn útan, · es af létu ‘save for one, which off they slid’ | This bigh is probably the one mentioned in sts. 17 and 26, since Beadhild has it already when Wayland is brought back after being captured. It may have been kept for its particular beauty. Finnur Jónsson (1932) writes (my translation from the Danish): “The ring which Nithad kept must have had special properties, and distinguished itself before others. There is no doubt that the ring is a flight ring; whether this was clear to the poet is however questionable. This much is certain, that Wayland seems to be able to fly away only after he has got back the ring; that is, the one which Beadhild brings him.” This is by no means certain. Wayland was a craftsman of legendary skill and could certainly have built wings for himself without a magical flight-ring. That is what he does in the Low German version; it is also what happens in the related Daidalos myth. For both of these see the introduction to the present poem.

 the prince of elves was missing one!
 Thought he that Ladwigh’s daughter [= Harware] might have it, that the young elwight might be come back.

1 bauga talði ‘bighs he counted’ | Wayland’s grief and loneliness are skilfully illustrated by his counting all seven hundred rings, something which had apparently become a habit for him.

2 alfa ljóði ‘prince of elves’ | Probably referring to Wayland’s nature as a half-dæmonic Wild Man, something also seen by his hunting of bears, skiing, and fierce gaze. Cf. 14/2b and 32/1b, where Nithad calls him vísi alfa ‘overseer of elves’.

12 Sat svá lengi, • at sofnaði, [R 18v/7]

 He knew on his hands tortuous restraints, and on his feet were fetters tightened.

[Völundr kvað:] 13 „Hverir ’ru jǫfrar • þeir’s á lǫgðu [R 18v/9]

 [Wayland quoth:] “Which are the princes that laid on the bast-cordage, and bound me?”

14 Kallaði nú Níðuðr, • Níara dróttinn: [R 18v/10]
 2 „Hvar gatst, Völundr, • vísi alfa, óra aura, • í Ulf-dǫlum?
 4 Gull vas þar ęigi • á Grana leiðu, fjarri hugða’k vart land • fjǫllum Rínar.“
 Now called Nithad, lord of the Nears:
 “Where gottest thou, Wayland, overseer of elves, our ounces, in the Wölfdales?
 Gold was there not on Grane’s path;
 far I’ve thought our land from the fells of the Rhine.<sup>187</sup>”

<sup>187</sup>Grane was the horse of the legendary hero Siward, slayer of the dragon Fathomer. These events were thought to have taken place in Germany. Nithad’s speech is thus sarcastic: “Where did you get that gold? I have never heard of a dragon’s hoard in the Wölfdales!”, the implication being that Wayland has stolen the gold (from king Nithad).

[Völundr kvað:] 15 „Man’k at męiri • męti ǫttum, [R 18v/13]
 2 es vér hęil hjú • hęima vǫrum:
 Hlaðguðr ok Hęrvǫr • borin vas Hlǫðvé,
 4 kunn vas Qlrún • Kíars dóttir.“ [Wayland quoth:] “I recall that we owned greater wealth, when we a whole household were at home:

Ladguth and Harware were born to Ladwigh; known was Alerune, Choser's daughter."<sup>188</sup>

<sup>188</sup>Wayland responds rather cryptically and almost seems to be speaking to himself. It seems that by asserting the noble lineages of the three swan-wives he gives a legitimate reason for his wealth, but, judging by the tone, he is aware that Nithad neither believes him nor cares.

Outside stood the cunning wife of Nithad,
she went inside the endlong hall,

“He is not mild now, who comes out of the wood.”

1 Úti ... Níðaðar ‘Outside ... of Nithad’ | emend. based on st. 30/1–2; om. R

2 hón ... sal ‘she went ... hall’ | Formulaic, also occurring in st. 30 of the present poem and in Ordr 3.

 gǫr-simar; engi maðr þorði at fara til hans, nema konungr einn. Völundr 4 kvað:

So it was done that the sinews in his houghs were cut, and he was placed on a lonely islet lying there before the land, which was called Seastead. There he smithed for the king every kind of jewelry. No man dared go to him save the king alone. Wayland quoth:

- 18 „Sé’k Níðaði • sverð á linda, [R 18v/24]

He sliced off the heads of those bear-cubs, and under the fetter’s fen their feet he laid;
 but those bowls which were under their curls
 he coated with silver and gave to Nithad.

1 húna ‘bear-cubs’ | An affectionate term for the young boys, perhaps relating to warrior-initiations done in bear-skins.

2 fęn fjǫturs ‘the fetter’s fen’ | Unclear. The smithy or islet may be Wayland’s “fetter”, in which case he buried them in a bog close-by.

3 þęr skálar, · es und skǫrum vǫru ‘those bowls which were under their curls’ | i.e. their skulls.

But out of the eyes arkenstones
 he sent to the cunning wife of Nithad;
 but out of the teeth of the two lads he struck breast-brooches; sent [them] to Beadhild.

1 jarkna-stęina ‘arkenstones’ | Probably round crystals.

---

Something appears to be missing here, but the narrative can be gleaned. Beadhild breaks the bigh stolen by Nithad (mentioned above in sts. 10 (see note there) and 17), and is afraid that her parents will be angry about it. She thus goes to Wayland in secret and asks him to mend it. The sight of this ring may be what angers Wayland, and makes him take it out on Beadhild.

---

- 26      Þá nam Bęðvildr · baugi at hrósa [R 19r/7]
 2      [...] · es brotit hafði, „þori’g-a’k sęgja, · nema þér ęinum.“

Then Beadhild began to praise the ring,
 [...] which she had broken,
 “I dare not tell save to thee alone.”

2 [...] | The meter requires a half-line here, likely containing a more specific description of the bigh.

- Völundr kvað: 27      „Ek bęti svá · brest á gulli, [R 19r/8] 2      at fęðr þinum · fęgri þykkir, ok męðr þinni · miklu bętri,
 4      ok sjalfri þér · at sama hófi.“

Wayland quoth: “I [will] so mend the crack on the gold, that to thy father it fairer seems,
 and to thy mother much better,
 and to thyself of the same rank.”

- 28      Bar hána bjóri, · því-at bętr kunni, [R 19r/10]

He overcame her with beer—for he knew better—
so that she in the seat asleep did fall.
“Now have I avenged my harms, all, save one, on the insidious ones.”

1 því-at bętr kunni ‘for he knew better’ | i.e. he was more cunning than her.

4 nema ęinna ‘save one’ | Presumably the deprivation of his mobility due to the hamstringing, which he resolves by crafting his flight suit.

4 í-við-gjarna ‘insidious ones’ | King Nithad and his house.

29 „Vęl ek,“ kvað Vųlundr, · „verða’k á fitjum,

Hlęjandi Vųlundr · hófsk at lopti,

[R 19r/12]

“Well I”, quoth Wayland, “fall on my paddles; those which Nithad’s men bereaved me of!”
Laughing, Wayland threw himself in the air;
weeping, Beadhild went from the island;
grieved the lover’s flight, and the father’s fury.

1 fitjum ‘paddles’ | CV: fit ‘the webbed foot of water-birds’, here a reference to the flight-suit which allows Wayland to regain his freedom.

30 Úti stęndr kunnig · kvųn Níðaðar,

Outside stands the cunning wife of Nithad, and she inside did go the endlong hall—
but he, on the courtyard, set down to rest.
“Art thou awake, O Nithad, lord of the Nears?”

[Níðuðr kvað:]

31 „Vaki’k á-valt · vilja-lauss, kęll mik í hųfuð, · kųld erumk rųð þín,

[R 19r/17]

4 vilnumk þess nú, · at við Völund dóma’k.“

[Nithad quoth:] “I am always awake, powerless;
I fall asleep the least since my sons have died.
My head turns cold; cold seem thy counsels—
I wish now but this: to speak with Wayland.”

1 vilja-lauss ‘powerless’ | Used earlier of Wayland in st. 12, immediately after his binding.

3 kǫld erumk rǫð þín ‘cold seem thy counsels’ | A severe insult to a woman, evenmoreso to a queen, for such counsels to their husbands were how they could influence worldly affairs.

[Níðuðr kvað:] 32 „Sæg mér þat Völundr, · vísi alfa,
2 af heilum hvat varð · húnum mínum?“

[R 19r/19]

[Nithad quoth:] “Tell me this, O Wayland, overseer of elves:
what became of my healthy bear-cubs?”

[Völundr kvað:] 33 „Eiða skalt mér áðr · alla vinna,
2 at skips borði · ok at skjaldar rǫnd,

4 at þú kvelj-at · kvön Völundar,

6 þótt kvön ęigim, · þá’s ęr kunnið,

[R 19r/20]

[Wayland quoth:] “All oaths shalt thou first swear to me, by deck of ship and rim of shield,
by bough of steed and edge of sword—
that thou wilt not torment the wife of Wayland, nor of my bride become the bane,
though a wife we might own whom ye might know;
or a babe might own within the hall.

2–3 at skips ... egg ‘by deck ... of sword’ | Which are all tools of war; in this way Wayland asks Nithad to swear on his honour as a warrior. A familiar oath-formula; TODO.

4–5 kvön Völundar ‘wife of Wayland’, brúði minni ‘my bride’ | i.e. Beadhild, who is now pregnant.

34 Gakk til smiðju, · þeirar’s gørðir,

But out of the teeth of the two,
I struck breast-brooches; sent [them] to Beadhild.
Now goes Beadhild swollen with child;
the only daughter of you both.”

4 ęinga dóttir · ykkur bęggja. ‘the only daughter of you both’ | Formulaic, near-identical to HarS st. 25/1–2: (Vaki, Angantýr, · vękr þik Hęrvęr, // ęinga dóttir · ykkur Svęfu. ‘Wake, Ongentew: Harware awakes thee, the only daughter of thee and Sweve.’ Cf. also Beow 375a, 2997b: ąngan dohtor ‘only daughter (accusative)’.)

- [Níðuðr kvað:] 37 „Męltir-a þat mál, · es mik męirr tregi, [R 19r/30]

4 né svá ǫflugr, · at þik neðan skjóti, þar's þú skollir · við ský uppi.“

“Thou mightst not have spoken a speech which might grieve me more;
nor could I worse wish, O Wayland, to deny thee.—
No man is so high that he from horse might take thee, nor so mighty that he might shoot thee from below,
there as thou jeerest against the clouds above!”

[Nithad quoth:]

- 38 Hlęjandi Vǫlundr · hófsk at lopti, [R 19v/1]

2 en ó-kátr Níðuðr · sat þá ęptir.

Laughing, Wayland threw himself in the air;
but, gloomy, Nithad stayed behind.

[Níðuðr kvað:] 39 „Upp rís Þakkráðr, · þréll minn batsti, 2 bið Bøðvildi, · mey hina brá-hvítu, gangi fagr-varið · við fęður róða.“

[R 19v/2]

[Nithad quoth:] “Rise up, O Thankred, my best thrall; bid Beadhild, the brow-white maiden,
to go, fair-clothed, with her father to counsel.”

2–3 mey hina brá-hvítu ... fagr-varið ‘the brow-white maiden ... fair-clothed’ | With these expressions Nithad strongly stresses the purity of his daughter (męr ‘maiden’ here simply meaning ‘virgin’). Perhaps he thinks that her innocence can be restored if she dresses in fair clothes, but it will not be so.

[Níðuðr kvað:] 40 „Es þat satt Bøðvildir, · es sęgðu mér,
2 sętuð it Völundr · saman í holmi?“

[R 19v/3]

[Nithad quoth:] “Is it true, Beadhild, as they told me:
stayed thou and Wayland together on the islet?”

[Bøðvildir kvað:] 41 „Satt ’s þat Níðuðr · es sagði þér:
2 sötum vit Völundr · saman í holmi
ęina ęgur-stund, · ęva skyldi;
4 ek vętr hęnum · vinna kunna’k, ek vętr hęnum · vinna máttu’k.“

[R 19v/4]

[Beadhild quoth:] “Tis true, Nithad, as be told thee:
I and Wayland stayed together on the islet, for one heavy hour—it should never [have been]!
I by naught against him knew struggle;
I by naught against him could struggle.”

4 vinna | metr. and sens. emend.; om. R

1 sagði ‘be told’ | Beadhild knows that Wayland is the only one aware of the rape and thus deduces that be told her father. She makes a subtle change in the conjugation from her father’s general third person plural (“what they told”), to the specific singular form (“what be told”).

4-5 kunna'k 'knew', máttá'k 'could' | Beadhild was totally incapable of defending her honour, both mentally (kunna 'to know, understand') and physically (méga 'to have strength to do, avail'. — As Finnur Jónsson (1932) comments, an excellent final stanza.

This rather late poem is very well written. Particularly beautiful are the introductory stanzas, which tell of Norns arriving in the night to predetermine Hallow's life.

P1 Hér hefr upp kvæði frá Helga Hundings bana, þeira ok Høðbrodds. Völ-

Here begins a lay regarding Hallow, bane of Hunding and his men, and of Hathbrod. A lay of the Walsings.

1 Ár vas alda · þat's arar gullu [R 20r/21]
2 hnigu heilög vötn · af Himin-fjöllum;

It was the dawn of elds, as eagles shrieked,
holy waters poured down from the Heavenfells;
then had Burhild in Browlund given birth to Hallow the great of heart.

1 Ár vas alda 'It was the dawn of elds' | This formulaic introduction immediately situates the events of the poem in the distant mytho-heroic past, indeed, if one compares Wsp 3, at the beginning of history.

2 Nött varð í bót, · nornir kvömu, þér's qðlingi · aldr of skópu;
þann bōðu fylki · frégstan verða [R 20r/23]

4 ok buðlunga · bætstan þykkja.

It turned night in the settlement; norns came,
those who shaped the age of the nobleman [= Hallow].
They bade that battle-arrayer become the noblest,
and among princes seem the best.

4 ok und mána sal · miðjan fęstu.

They turned mightily orlay-strands when castles were broken in Browlund.
They wrapped a golden band, and beneath the moon's hall [SKY/HEAVEN] fastened it in the middle.

4 Þér austr ok vestr · ęnda fōlu, [R 20r/27]

4 ęinni fęsti, · ęy bað hon halda.

They in the east and west hid its ends;
there the praised one owned land in between.
The kinswoman of Nare <unknown person> [NORN] tugged onto the northern ways a single cord—she bade it hold forever.

Hallow got Syerun and they had sons; Hallow was not old. Day, son of Hain, made a bloot to Weden for the sake of avenging his father. Weden lent Day his spear. Day found Hallow, his brother-in-law, where it is called Fetterlund; he ran through Hallow with the spear. There Hallow fell, but Day rode to the fells and told Syerun the tidings:

P2     Haugr var gørr eptir Helga. En er hann kom til Valhallar, þá bauð Óðinn

A barrow was made for Hallow. And when he came to Walhall, then Woden asked him to rule everything together with himself. Hallow quoth:

P3     Ambótt Sigrúnar gekk um aptan hjá haugi Helga ok sá at Helgi reið til Syerun's maid-servant walked by Hallow's barrow at evening, and saw that Hallow rode to the barrow with many men. The maid-servant quoth:

11     „Hvart 'ru þat svik ein · es séa þikkjumk “Either these are only tricks, as I seem to see —or the Rakes of the Reins?—dead men riding, as ye drive on your steeds by spear-points—or are the princes granted leave to go home?”

[Einn þeirra kvað:]

12     „Es-a þat svik ein · es séa þikkisk

[One of them quoth:] “It’s not only tricks, as thou seemest to see—

although we drive on our steeds by spear-points
the princes are not granted leave to go home.”

P4 Heim gekk ambótt ok sagði Sigrúnu:

The maid-servant walked home and said to Syerun:

13 „Út gakk Sigrún, • frá Sęfa-fjollum
2 ef þik folks jaðarr • finna lystir;
upp ’s haugr lokinn, • kominn es Hęlgi!
4 Dólg-spor dreęra • dęglingr bað þik

“Go outside, O Syerun from the Sevefells, if thou dost long to meet the leader of the troop [= Hallow];
the barrow is unlocked; Hallow is come!
The ruler of bloody wounds [= Hallow] bade thee that thou the wound-drops shouldst soothe.”

P5 Sigrún gekk í haug’inn til Helga ok kvað:

Syerun walked into the barrow to Hallow, and quoth:

14 „Nú em’k svá fęgin • fundi okkrum

“Here have I for thee, Hallow, made a place of rest, [Hallow quoth:] “Now, I say, there is naught more missing neither late nor soon from the Sevefells, when thou dost sleep on the unliving arm,

O white daughter of Hain—in the barrow,
and thou art alive!—born of the king.”

- [Hēlgi kvað:] 20 „Mál’s mér at riða • roðnar brautir, 2 láta fólvan jó • flug-stíg troða;
skal’k fyr vestan • vind-hjalms brúar
4 áðr Sal-gofnir • sigr-þjóð veki.“

“It’s time for me to ride the reddening roads;
to let my pale steed tread the flight-path [SKY/HEAVEN].
I shall go west of the wind-helm’s bridges [SKY/HEAVEN > CLOUDS?], before Salgovner may awaken the victorious people.”

- P7 Þeir Hęlgi riðu leið sína, en þęr fóru hęim til bójar. Annan aptan lét 2 Sigrún ambótt halda vörð á haugi’num. En at dag-setri, es Sigrún kom til haugs’ins, hón kvað:

Hallow and his men rode on their way, but the women journeyed home to the farm. The next evening Syerun let her maid-servant keep watch on the barrow. And at sunset, when Syerun came to the barrow, she [= the maid-servant] quoth:

- 21 „Kominn véri nú, • ef koma hygði,
 2 Sigmundar burr • frá solum Óðins;
 kveð’k grams þinig • gręnask vánir
 4 es á ask-limum • ęrnir sitja ok drífr drótt ęll • draum-þinga til.“

“Come were now, if to come he had thought, Syemund’s son [= Hallow] from Weden’s halls;
 the hopes, I say, of the prince here fade,
 when on ashen branches eagles sit,
 and all mankind drifts off to dream-Things.

4 es á ask-limum • ęrnir sitja ‘when on ashen branches eagles sit’ | i.e. “when the eagles roost on yonder trees”. This is a sign of Hallow and his men not coming; if they were, the eagles would be following them and picking at their bodies.

5 drífr ... draum-þinga til ‘drifts off to dream-Things’ | i.e. “falls asleep”. A fine poetic metaphor.

- 22 Ves ęigi svá ór • at ęin farir,
 2 dís skjöldunga, • draug-húsa til!
 Verða ęflgari • allir á nóttum
 4 dauðir dólgar, męr, • an of daga ljósa.“

Be not so mad that thou journey alone,
 O lady of the Shieldings, to the ghost-houses!
 Mightier at night do all become dead fiends, O maiden, than during the bright days!”

- P8 Sigrún varð skamm-líf af harmi ok trega. Þat var trúa í forneskju, at menn 2 véri endr-bornir, en þat er nú kęlluð kerlinga-villa. Hęlgi ok Sigrún er kallat at véri endr-borin. Hét hann þá Hęlgi Haddingjaskati en hon Kára 4 Hálfdanar dóttir, svá sem kveðit er í Kárułjóðum, ok var hon val-kyrja.

Syerun became short-lived for pain and grief. It was a belief in ancient times that men were born again, but that is now called an old wives' tale. Of Hallow and Syerun it is said that they were born again. He was then called Hallow Hardingskate and she Cheer Halfdanesdaughter, as is told in the Leeds of Cheer, and she was a walkirrie.

The title is “From Sinfittle’s death”.

- P1      Grípir hét sonr Eýlima, bróðir Hjörðisar. Hann réð lǫndum ok vas allra
2      manna vitrastr ok fram-víss. Sigurðr reið einn saman ok kom til hallar Grípis. Sigurðr vas auð-kenndr. Hann hitti mann at máli úti fyr hǫll’inni;
4      sá nefndisk Geitir. Þá kvaddi Sigurðr hann máls, ok spyrr:

Griper was called the son of Ilime, Hardise’s brother. He ruled lands and was wisest of all men, and forthwise. Siward rode alone and came to Griper’s hall. Siward was easily recognized. He approached a man for speech outside of the hall; he was named Goater. Then Siward greeted him with a speech, and asks:

- 1      „Hverr byggir hér · borgir þessar?
2      Hvat þann þjóð-konung · þegnar nefna?“
         „Grípir heitir · gumna stjóri, 4      sá’s fastrí réðr · foldu ok þegnum.“

- P1      Sigurđor gekk til stóðs Hjálp-reks ok kaus sér af hest einn er Grani var
2      kallađr síđan. Þá var kominn Reginn til Hjálp-reks, sonr Hreiđ-mars.
Hann var hverjum manni hagari ok dvergr of vöxt. Hann var vitr, grimmr 4      ok fjöl-kunnigr. Reginn veitti Sigurði fóstr ok kennslu ok elskaði hann mjök. Hann sagði Sigurði frá for-ellri sínu ok þeim at-burðum at Óðinn 6      ok Hónir ok Loki höfðu komit til And-vara-fors; í þeim forsi var fjöldi fiska. Einn dvergr hét And-vari; hann var löngum í forsinum í geddu líki 8      ok fekk sér þar matar. „Otr hét bróðir várr,“ kvað Reginn, „er oft fór í fjör-laun at fylla otr-belginn með gulli ok hylja útan ok með rauðu gulli.

14      Þá sendu þeir Loka at afla gullsins. Hann kom til Ránar ok fekk net hennar ok fór þá til And-vara-fors ok kastaði netinu fyr gedduna en hon hljóp í

Siward went to Helpric's stable and thereof chose for himself one horse, which was henceforth called Grane. Then Rein, son of Rethmar, was come to Helpric. He was more crafty than any man and a dwarf in stature; he was clever, cruel and many-cunning. Rein fostered and taught Siward and love him very much. He told Siward about his own parents, and about the events that Weden, Heener and Lock had come to Andwareforce; in that force was a multitude of fish. A dwarf was named Andware; he was for a long time in the force in the likeness of a pike and got his food there. "Otter was our brother called," said Rein, "who often journeyed in the force in the likeness of an otter. He had caught a salmon and sat on the riverbank and ate it with closed eyes Lock struck him with a stone unto his death. The Eese thought themselves to have been very lucky, and flayed the skin off the otter. The same evening they sought to pass the night at Rethmar's house, and showed their catch. Then we bound them and proposed to them as a life-ransom that they would fill the otter-skin with gold, and also cover the outside with red gold. Then they sent Lock to procure the gold. He came to Ran and got her net, and then journeyed to Andwareforce and threw the net in front of the pike, and it jumped into the net. Then spoke Lock:

1       „Hvat 's þat fiska · es rinn flóði í,
2               kann-at sér við víti varask.
             Höfuð þitt · leys-tu hēlju ór;
4               finn mér lindar loga!“

“What kind of fish is it who runs in the flood?
It cannot protect itself from harm.
Ransom thy head out of Hell;
find me the flame of the linden [GOLD]!”

2       „And-vari ek hēiti, · Óinn hét minn faðir,
2               margan hēfi'k fors of farit.
             Aumlig norn · skóp oss í ár-daga
4               at skylda í vatni vaða.“

“Andware I am called; Owen was called my father;
through many a force have I fared.
A wretched norn shaped for us in days of yore,
that I should in the water wade.”

3       „Sęg-ðu þat, And-vari, (kvað Loki) ef þú ęiga vill
2               líf í lýða solum:
             Hver gjöld · fāa gumna synir
4               ef hōggvask orðum á?“

“Say that, Andware—quoth Lock—if thou wilt own life in the halls of men:
Which recompense do the sons of men get,
if they hew at each other with words?”

4       „Ofr-gjöld · fāa gumna synir

<sup>193</sup> Watery torment in the afterlife for oath-breakers and liars is well attested in the Germanic sources. See note to Wsp 39 for discussion.

P2      Loki sá allt gull þat er And-vari átti. En er hann hafði fram reitt gullit, þá
2      hafði hann eftir einn hring ok tók Loki þann af hánnum. Dvergrinn gekk inn í steininn ok mælti:

Lock saw all the gold which Andware owned. But when he had brought forth all the gold, then he had one ring left, and Lock took it off him. The dwarf went into the stone and spoke:

5      „Þat skal gull · es Gustr átti
2      bróðrum tveim · at bana verða ok ǫðlingum · átta at rógi;
4      mun míns féar · mann-gi njóta.“

“That gold which Gust owned shall for two brothers become the bane, and for eight nobles the [cause of] strife;
of my wealth will no man benefit.”

P3      Ésir reiddu Hreið-mari féit ok tráðu upp otr-belginn ok reistu á fóttr; þá
2      skyldu ésirnir hlaða upp gullinu ok hylja. En er þat var gørt gekk Hreið-marr framm ok sá eitt grana-hár ok bað hylja. Þá dró Óðinn framm 4      hringinn And-vara-naut ok hulði hárit.

The Eese prepared the wealth for Rethmar and stuffed the otter-skin and raised it on its feet. Then the Eese should fill it up with gold and cover it. But when that was done Rethmar stepped forth, and saw a single whisker-strand and bade it be covered. Then Weden drew forth the ring Andwaresgift and covered the strand.

6      „Gull ’s þér nú reitt (kvað Loki) en þú gjöld hefir

2                    hęfna hlýra harms!“

Lingheath answered:

“Not many a sister, although she misses her father, will avenge her brother’s harm!”

12            „Al þú þó dóttur, (kvað Hreiðmarr) dís úlf-huguð, 2            ef þú getr-at son · við siklingi;
              fǫ þú meý mann · í megin-þarfar, þá mun þęirar sonr · þíns harms

“TODO.”

P5            Þá dó Hreið-marr en Fáfnir tók gullit allt. Þá beiddisk Reginn at hafa 2            fğður-arf sinn, en Fáfnir galt þar nei við. Þá leitaði Reginn ráða við Lyngheiði, systur sína, hvernig hann skyldi heimta fğður-arf sinn. Hon kvað:

Then Rethmar died, and Fathomer took all the gold. Then Rein asked to have his father’s inheritance, but Fathomer gave back a no. Then Rein looked for counsel from Lingheath, his sister, over how he should get his father’s inheritance. She quoth:

13            „Brúðar kvęðja · skalt blíð-liga
2            arfs ok óðra hugar;
              es-a þat hóft · at þú hjörvi skylir
4            kvęðja Fáfni féar!“

“TODO.”

P6            Þessa hluti sagði Reginn Sigurði. Einn dag, er hann kom til húsa Regins, 2            var hánun vel fagnat. Reginn kvað:

These things Rein said to Siward. One day when he came to Rein’s house he was greeted well.
Rein quoth:

14            „Kominn ’s hingat · konr Sig-mundar,
2            sęggr inn snar-ráði, · til sala várra;
              móð hęfir meýra · en maðr gamall,
4            ok es mér fangs vön · at frekum ulfi.

“Hither is come the son of Syemund [= Siward],
the quick-counselling youth, to our halls;

he has greater courage than an old man,
and I expect a catch from the hungry wolf!

- 15 Ek mun fœða · folk-djarfan gram;
2 nú 's yngva konr · með oss kominn;
sjá mun rêsir · ríkstr und sólu,
4 þrymr um ǫll lǫnd · ǫr·lǫg-símu.“

I will raise the troop-bold prince,
now the son of a king is come among us!
This ruler will become mightiest under the sun,
he fastens through all lands his orlay-strands!”

4 þrymr ... ǫr·lǫg-símu ‘he fastens ... orlay-strands’ | i.e. “his fate is being fixed throughout all lands”. Cf. the first four sts. of HHund I.

- P7 Sigurðr var þá jafnan með Regin ok sagði hann Sigurði at Fáfñir lá á Gnita-2 heiði ok var í orms líki. Hann átti ógis-hjalm er ǫll kvikvendi hréddusk við. Reginn gerði Sigurði sverð er Gramr hét. Þat var svá hvasst at hann 4 brá því ofan í Rín ok lét reka ullar-lagð fyr straumi ok tók í sundr lagðinn sem vatnit. Því sverði klauf Sigurðr í sundr steðja Regins. Eptir þat eggjaði 6 Reginn Sigurð at vega Fáfni. Hann sagði:

Then Siward was always with Rein, and he told Siward that Fathomer lay on the Gnit-heath in a Wyrms likeness; he owned the helm of awe by which all living things were frightened. Rein made for Siward the sword which is called Gram; it was so sharp that he plunged it down into the Rhine, and floated a lock of wool down the stream, and it split the lock like it did the water. With that sword Siward split asunder Rein’s anvil; after that Rein urged Siward to slay Fathomer. He said:

- 16 „Hátt munu hléja · Hundings synir
2 þeir’s Ey-lima · aldrs synjuðu, ef meirr tiggja · munar at sókja
4 hringa rauða · en hefnd fœður.“

- P8 Hjalp-rekr konungr fekk Sigurði skipa-lið til fœður-hefnda. Þeir fengu
2 storm mikinn ok beittu fyr bergs-nȝs nakkvara. Maðr einn stóð á berginu ok kvað:

Helpric got Siward a ship-retinue in order to avenge his father. They caught a great storm, and tacked the ships through some rocky cliffs. A lone man stood on the cliff and quoth:

17 „Hverir ríða þar · Rēfils hestum gladdened Highen, and had fought;

 now thou mayst call me man of the cliff,
 Fang or Fillner—I wish to take passage!”

P9 Þeir viku at landi, ok gekk karl á skip, ok lēgði þá veðrit.

They turned toward land and the man stepped onto the ship, and then the weather calmed down.

The Speeches of Fathomer

(Fáfnismól)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): 900s (0.442), early 1000s (0.402), late 1000s (0.155)

Meter: Leeds-meter (TODO)

Titled Frá dauða Fáfnis 'From Fathomer's death' in R.

1 „Sveinn ok sveinn! • Hverjum est sveini of borinn?
2 Hverra est manna mögr?
es þú á Fáfni rautt • Þinn hinn frána mēki;
4 stöndumk til hjarta hjörri!“

[Fathomer quoth:]

“O swain and swain! To which swain art thou born;
of which men art thou son?
As thou on Fathomer hast reddened thy gleaming blade,
the sword stands unto my heart!”

P1 Sigurðr dulði nafns síns fyr því at þat var trúa þeira í forneskju at orð feigs
2 manns mētti mikit ef hann bōlvaði óvin sínum með nafni. Hann kvað:

Siward concealed his name, because it was their belief in ancient times that the word of a fey man could do much if he baled his enemy by his name. He [= Siward] quoth:

2 „Göfugt dýr ek heiti • en ek gengit hef’k
2 hinn móður-lausi mögr, föður ek á’kk-a • sem fira synir,
4 geng ek einn saman.“

“Noble Deer am I called, and I have gone
as the motherless lad.
A father I have not like the sons of men;
I go alone.”

- 3 „Veitst, ef fǫður né átt-at · sem fira synir,
2 af hverju vastu undri alinn? [...]“

[Fathomer quoth:]

“Dost thou know, if thou hast no father, like do the sons of men, by which wonder thou wast begotten?”

- 4 „Étterni mitt · kveð’k þér ó·kunnigt vesa
2 ok mik sjalfan hit sama:
Sigurðr ek heiti · Sigmundr hét minn faðir
4 es hef’k þik vopnum vegit.“

[Siward quoth:]

“My lineage I declare is unknown to thee, and my self the same.<sup>195</sup>

Siward am I called—Syemund was called my father—who with weapons have struck thee.”

<sup>195</sup>The meaning is that Fathomer would not recognize Siward’s lineage (i.e. his father) or name, since he is an orphan who up until this point has not won any glory. He is not saying that he is lineage is unknown even to himself, since sjalfan mik ‘my self’ is accusative, not dative.

- 5 „Hvęrr þik hvatti, · hví hvętjask lést,
2 mínu fjǫrvi at fara?
Hinn frán-ęygi sveinn, · þú áttir fǫður bitran,
4 á-bornu skjór á skęið.“

[Fathomer quoth:]

“Who goaded thee—why didst thou let thee be goaded—my life for to destroy?

O gleaming-eyed swain, thou haddest a sharp father;
inborn traits quickly show!”

<sup>4</sup> á-bornu skjór á skęið. ‘inborn traits quickly show.’ | The original is cryptic. á skęið means roughly ‘rapidly, quickly’, whence the expression ríða á skęið ‘CV: to ride at full speed’, but the other words are uncertain. La Farge and Tucker (1992) read ‘your innate qualities show quickly’, suggesting two unattested words: an adjective **áborinn* ‘innate, inborn’ and a verb **skjóa* ‘to show’. Yet the lack of i-umlaut in the supposed 3rd sg. pres. ind. skjór is difficult. We would expect \*skýr*, as in skjóta ‘to shoot,’ with 2nd/3rd sg. pres. ind. skýtr. A solution here would be reading a 2nd sg. pres. subj. skjóir, with a vowel TODO

- 6 „Hugr mik hvatti, · hendr mér full-týðu
2 ok minn inn hvassi hjǫrr;
fár es hvatr · es hrøðask tękr
4 ef í barnósku ’s blauðr.“

[Siward quoth:]

“My heart goaded me, my hands availed me,
and this my sharp sword.
Few a man is brave when he takes to grow,
if in youth he be soft.”

7      „Veit’k, ef þú vaxa næðir · fyr þinna vina brjósti,
2                      séi-t maðr þik vręðan vega;
            nú est haptr · ok hęr-numinn,
4                      ę kveða bandingja bifask.“

[Fathomer quoth:]

“TRANSLATION”

8      „Því bregðr þú nú mér, Fáfnir, · at til fjarri sjá’k 2                      mínum fęðr-munum, ęgi em’k haptr · þótt vęra hęr-numi;
4                      þú fannt, at ek lauss lifi!“

[Siward quoth:]

“TRANSLATION”

9      „Heipt-yrði ęin · tęlr þú þér í hví-vętna
2                      en ek þér satt ęitt sęgi’k:
            It gjalla gull · ok it glóð-rauða fę,
4                      þér verða þęir baugar at bana!“

[Fathomer quoth:]

“With only hateful words dost thou answer anything, but I tell thee truth alone:
The resounding gold and the glowing red wealth,
those bighs will be thy bane!”

10     „Fęi ráða · skal fyrða hvērr
2                      ę til ins ęina dags því-at ęinu sinni · skal alda hvērr
4                      fara til hęljar heðan.“

[Siward quoth:]

“Rule [his] wealth shall every man, always, until the one day;
for at one time must every man journey hence to Hell.”

<sup>2</sup> ins čina dags ‘the one day’ | i.e. his predetermined time of death. Siward dismisses the idea of the curse, since he knows that he will die regardless of whether he takes the gold or not; and he would rather die rich and famous than wretched and forgotten.

11 „Norna dóm · munt fyr ñesjum hafa
2 ok ó·svinns apa;
í vatni þú drukknar · ef í vindi rēr;
4 allt es fęigs forað.“

[Fathomer quoth:]

“The doom of the Norns shalt thou have before the headlands, and that of an unwise ape.

In water wilt thou drown if thou row in wind;
everything is the pit of the fey.<sup>196</sup>”

<sup>1</sup> fyr ñesjum ‘before the headlands’ | i.e. ‘close at hand, imminent’. A formulaic expression for imminent death, cf. the last st. of Sonatorrek (TODO).

<sup>196</sup> That is, the cursed, death-doomed (fey) man will find sudden death no matter where he turns.

12 „Sęg mér, Fáfnir, · alls þik fróðan kveða
2 ok vęl mart vita:
Hvęrjar ’ru þęr nornir · es nauð-gonglar ’ru
4 ok kjósa móðr frá mögum?“

[Siward quoth:]

“Say to me, Fathomer, as they call thee wise,
and knowing well enough:

Who are the Norns that attend in need,
and choose mothers from their lads?”

<sup>3</sup> es nauð-gonglar ’ru ‘that attend in need’ | lit. ‘who are attendant in need’, i.e. who help ailing mothers during childbirth. Cf. Syed 8.

13 „Sundr-bornar mjøk · hygg at nornir sé,
2 ęigu-t þęr ęt samann;
sumar ’ru ás-kunngar, · sumar alf-kunngar,
4 sumar dótr Dvalins.“

[Fathomer quoth:]

“Of very sundry birth I judge the norns to be;
they come not from a common lineage:

Some are begotten of the Eese, some begotten of the Elves, some are the daughters of Dwollen [DWARFS].”

14     „Sęg mér þat, Fáfnir, · alls þik fróðan kveða
2                ok vęl margt vita, hvé sá holmr hęitir · es blanda hjor-łęgi
4                Surtr ok ęsir saman.“

[Siward quoth:]

“Say to me, Fathomer, as they call thee wise,
and knowing well enough:
What is the islet called, where Surt and the Eese blend sword-water [BLOOD] together?”

15     „Ó·skópnir hęitir · en þar ęll skulu
2                gęirum lęika goð;
              Bil-ręst brotnar · es á brott fara
4                ok svima í móðu marir.

[Fathomer quoth:]

“Unshopner it is called, and there shall all the Gods play with spears; Bilrest shatters when they fare away,
and the horses swim in the sea.

Fathomer continues speaking, but there is probably something missing here, since the transition is abrupt. Between its paraphrases of st. 15 and of st. 16, N has Ok enn męlti Fáfnir: „Reginn bróðir minn veldr mínum dauða, ok þat blęgir mik, er hann veldr ok þínum dauða, ok ferr þá, sem hann vildi.“ “And further spoke Fathomer: “My brother Rein causes my death, and it gladdens me that he also causes thy death, and then it will go like he has willed.”, which may either be a paraphrase of a lost st., or an addition by the redactor.

The Speeches of Syedrive (Sigrdrífumól)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): 900s (0.961)

Meter: Leeds-meter

Syed is attested in two medieval mss., namely R (which is the main mss. for the pres. ed) and N (WalsS ch. 21), which begins with a paraphrase of the present poem up to P2:

Brynhildr segir, at tveir konungar þorðust. Hét annarr Hjalmgunnarr; hann var gamall ok hinn mesti hermaðr, ok hafði Óðinn honum sigr heitit, en annarr Agnarr eða Auða bróðir. „Ek fellda Hjalmgunnarr í orrostu, en Óðinn stakk mik svefn-þorni í hefnd þess ok kvað mik aldri síðan skyldu sigr hafa ok kvað mik giptast skulu. En ek strengða þess heit þar í mót at giptast engum þeim, er bræðast kynni.“ Sigurðr mælti: „Kenn oss ráð til stórra hluta.“ Hun svarar: „Þér munuð betr kunna, en með þökkum vil ek kenna yðr, ef þat er nokkut, er vér kunnum, þat er yðr mætti líka, í rúnum eða öðrum blutum, er liggja til hvers blutar, ok drekkum bæði saman, ok gefi goðin okkr góðan dag, at þér verði nýt ok fregð at mínum vitrleik, ok þú munir eptir þat, er vit réðum.“ Brynhildr fyllði eitt ker ok fýrði Sigurði ok mælti:

‘Byrnhild says that two kings fought. One was called Helmguther; he was old and the greatest warrior, and Weden had promised him victory, but the other was called Eynr or Eade’s brother. “I felled Helmguther in battle, but Weden stung me with a sleeping-thorn as revenge for that, and declared that I should never thenceforth have victory, and said that I must marry, but I made a vow in response, to marry no man who could be frightened.” Siward spoke: “Teach us counsels regarding great things.” She answers: “Ye will know better, but with thanks I will teach you, if there is anything which we know that may please you, of runes or other things of importance; and let us both drink together, and may the gods give us two a good day, that thou have use and joy from my wisdom and that thou afterwards recall that which we two speak of.” Byrnhild filled a vessel and brought it to Siward and spoke:’

After this it cites sts. 4–12 and 14–18 in uninterrupted sequence, and paraphrases sts. 19 ff. (TODO: edit these!). The order of stanzas in N is not identical to R. Both mss. have sts. 4–5 and 12, 14–18 in the same place, but the order of sts. 6–11 in between is divergent, as seen by the following table:

- P1 Sigurðr settisk niðr ok spyrr hana nafns. Hón tók þá horn fullt mjaðar ok 2 gaf hönnum minnis-veig.

Siward set himself down, asking for her name. Then she took a horn full of mead, and gave him a draught of memory:

- 2 Hęill Dagr, · hęilir Dags synir,

Hail Night and [her] kinswoman [= Earth]!
With un-wroth [FRIENDLY] eyes look ye toward us two,
and give the sitters [= us] victory.

2 nipt ‘[her] kinswoman [= Earth]’ | According to Yǫlv 10 Earth is the daughter of Night and Aner.

3 Ó-rēiðum augum · litið okkr þinig ‘With unwrathful [FRIENDLY] eyes look ye toward us two’ | An archaic conception; the Gods turning Their friendly gaze toward the worshipper symbolises Their bestowing their favour, and the specific use of ó-rēiðr ‘un-wroth’ shows that the wrath of the Gods was feared. Compare Hind 6. Similar language is found in other ancient literatures, e.g. in the Hebrew Bible, most famously in the “Priestly Blessing” of Numbers 6:24–26 where Yahweh’s favour is expressed by “making His face shine” and “lifting His face” toward the receiver of the blessing, and also in Psalms 4:6 and the chorus of Psalms 80, contrasting with 80:17 where the Israelites are depicted as perishing before the rebuke of Yahweh’s face.

But the other was called Eyner, Eade’s brother, who in no way wished to surrender. Syedrive felled Helmguther in the battle, but Weden stung her with a sleeping-thorn as revenge for that, and declared that she should never thenceforth cause victory in battle, and said that she must marry, “but I said to him that I made a vow in response, to marry no man who could be frightened.” He [= Siward] speaks and asks her to teach him wisdom, if she knew any tidings out of all the Homes. This emendation is favourable for two reasons: (i) it makes more sense, since the semantic pair bót 'cure' : bjarg 'rescue' is surely stronger than bók 'book, beech' : bjarg 'rescue', and since the present stanza is specifically referring to the practical use of the runes; (ii) the pair bót-rúnar : bjarg-rúnar is already found in a runic charm (B 257, edited under Galders from Bryggen).

3 simar ‘strands’ | i.e. ‘strands of fate’; cf. HHund I 3, where the norns are said to twist such strands. Often emended to limar ‘ramifications’ in accordance with Rein 4, where that word is used in basically the same context. Such a scribal confusion is easily understood, since s in this position was always spelled with long f in the old mss. The paraphrase (see other note) is not conclusive, since it replaces this word with hefn ‘revenge’.

Fragments from the Saw of the Walsings

In R Syed is followed by the famous “great lacuna”. Numerous pages are missing, and with them much poetry about Siward. The author of the WalsS had access to and drew from a manuscript collection of Eddic poetry closely related to R. He quotes many stanzas known to us from R, but also some which are not found in the extant copy—these are edited here. The following stanzas in WalsS occur at the part of the narrative which would have been found on the lost pages of R, and so it is likely that some or all of them derive from longer poems found there.

The Slaying of the Nivlings (Dráp Niflunga)

P1 Gunnarr ok Hogni tóku þá gullit allt, Fáfnis arf. Ó-friðr var þá milli
2 Gjúkunga ok Atla; kenndi hann Gjúkungum völd um and-lát Brynhildar.
Þat var til sétta, at þeir skyldu gipta hánnum Guðrúnu, ok gáfu henni
4 ó-minnis-veig at drekka áðr hon játti at giptast Atla. Synir Atla voru þeir Erpr ok Eitill, en Svanhildr var Sigurðar dóttir ok Guðrúnar. Atli konungr 6 bauð heim Gunnari ok Hogni, ok sendi Vinga eða Knéfrøð. Guðrún vissi vélar ok sendi með rúnum orð at þeir skyldu eigi koma ok til jar-tegna 8 sendi hon Hogni hringinn Andvaranaut ok knýtti í vargs-hár. Gunnarr hafði beðit Oddrúnar, systur Atla, ok gat eigi; þá fekk hann Glaumvarar, 10 en Hogni átti Kostberu. Þeira synir voru þeir Sólarr ok Snévarr ok Gjúki.
En er Gjúkungar kómu til Atla, þá bað Guðrún sonu sína at þeir bæði 12 Gjúkungum lífs en þeir vildu eigi. Hjarta var skorit ór Hogni en Gunnarr settr í orm-garð. Hann sló hǫrpu ok svéðði ormana, en naðra stakk hann 14 til lifrar. Þjóðrekr konungr var með Atla ok hafði þar látit flesta alla menn sína. Þjóðrekr ok Guðrún kærðu harma sín á milli. Hon sagði hánnum ok 16 kvað:

Guthur and Hain then took all the gold, Fathomer's inheritance. Hatred was then between the Yivickings and Attle; he blamed the Yivickings for Byrnhild's passing. These were their terms, that they would marry off to him Guthrun; and they gave her a forgetfulness-draught to drink before she agreed to be married off to Attle. The sons of Attle were Earp and Oatle, and Swanhild was Siward's daughter and Guthrun's. Attle invited to his home Guthur and Hain, and sent Winge or Kneefrith. Guthrun knew his wiles and sent a word with runes, that they should not come, and as a sign she sent Hain the ring Andwaresneat, and tied through it a wolf's hair. Guthur had asked for Ordrun's hand, Attle's sister, and did not get her; then he got Gleamware, and Hain had Costbeare. Their sons were Solwer and Snower and Yivick. And when the Yivickings came to Attle, then Guthrun asked her sons that they should ask for the life of the Yivickings, but they would not. The heart was cut out of Hain, and Guthur set in the serpent-yard. He struck his harp and soothed the serpents, but an adder stung him unto the liver. King Thedric was with Attle, and had there lost almost all of his men. Thedric and Guthrun recounted their griefs to each other. She spoke to him and quoth:

The Third Lay of Guthrun

(Guðrúnarkviða þriðja)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): 900s (0.731), early 1000s (0.178)

Meter: Ancient-words-law

A very short narrative poem of ballad-type, depicting a single event from the legendary cycle. It is especially notable for its depiction of a trial by ordeal and the mention of a woman being drowned in a bog.

Herch, one of Attle's concubines tells Attle that she has seen his wife Guthrun sleeping with Thedric. Attle becomes distressed upon hearing this (P1). Guthrun asks him what is wrong (1), and he responds that Herch has accused her of sleeping with Thedric (2). Guthrun promises to prove her innocence through a trial by ordeal involving picking up a white stone from boiling water (3). She further says that while she and Thedric did sit down together, they did so in mutual grief over the deaths of her brothers (4–5). She tells Attle to summon a German lord named Saxe, who knows how to carry out the trial. Seven hundred men arrive to witness the event (6). Before picking up the stone, Guthrun laments over her brothers' deaths, saying that they would have disputed the accusation through violence, but that she must now prove her innocence by herself (7). She then puts her hand in the boiling water, and unscathed takes out the stones. She holds it up and shows it to the witnesses (8). Attle laughs, knowing that his wife has been faithful, and orders Herch to pick up the stone (9). She does so, but her hands are horribly scorched, and men lead her to a "foul bog", presumably to be drowned. The poet ends by laconically stating that Guthrun in such a way was "reconstituted for her affronts".

- P1      Herkja hét ambótt Atla; hón hafði verit frilla hans. Hón sagði Atla at hón
2      hefði sét Þjóðrek ok Guðrúnu bæði saman. Atli var þá allókatr. Þá kvað Guðrún:

Herch was named the female thrall of Attle; she had been his concubine. She told Attle that she had seen Thedric and Guthrun both together. Attle was then wholly displeased. Then Guthrun quoth:

- 1      „Hvat 's þér, Atli? · é, Buðla sonr,

“This troubles me, Guthrun, Yivick’s daughter:
in the hall has Herch told me that thou and Thedric beneath thatched roof slept, and ye lightly warded the linen.<sup>208</sup>”

3 „Þér mun’k alls þess • ęiða vinna

by the white, holy stone—that I did not do such a thing with Thedmar,<sup>209</sup> which neither wife nor husband has been able to swear upon,—<sup>210</sup>

<sup>209</sup>Historically, Thedmar was the father of Thedric, who took over the kingdom after his father’s death (see Encyclopedia). Thedmar may here be a scribal error for Thedric, a scribal error for “Thedmar’s son”, or a nickname due to conflation of the father and son.

<sup>210</sup>Guthrun says that she will prove her innocence through a trial by ordeal (that is, by lifting “the white holy stone” out of boiling water; see st. 8). She further strengthens her position by pointing out that no reliable person has sworn an oath attesting to her guilt.

The Lay of Attle

(Atlakviða)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): 900s (0.719)–early 1000s (0.212)

Meter: Speeches-meter, Ancient-words-law

A famously archaic poem.

Attle sends his messenger Kneefrith to Guthur (1). He arrives at Guthur's hall, where the mood is one of unease, and addresses Guthur (2). Kneefrith invites him and his brother Hain to Attle's court (3), offering them treasures, weapons and land (4–5). Guthur asks his brother Hain for advice, since he has not heard of Attle having gold to give away (6).

The Death of Attle (Dauði Atla)

- P1      Guðrún Gjúkadóttir hefndi bróðra sinna, svá sem frégt er orðit. Hon drap 2      fyrst sonu Atla, en eptir drap hon Atla ok brendi hollina ok hirðina alla;
         um þetta er sjá kviða ort.

Guthrun Yivicksdaughter avenged her brothers, as has become famous. She first killed the sons of Attle, and after that she killed Attle, and burned the hall and the whole hird. Regarding that this lay is wrought.

- 1      Atli sendi · ár til Gunnars
2      kunnan segg at riða, · Knéfrøðr vas sá heitinn;
         at gorrðum kom hann Gjúka · ok at Gunnars hollu, 4      bækkjum arin-græypum · ok at bjóri svqsum.

Attle sent—of yore—to Guthur a well-known messenger to ride; Kneefrith he was called.
To the yards of Yivick he came, and to the hall of Guthur;
to the hearth-surrounding benches, and to the lovely beer.

- 2        2        Drukku þar drótt-męgir · —ęn dylęędr þęęđu—
             2        vín í val-hęllu, · vręęði sęusk þęir Húna;
             4        kallaði þá Knęfręðr · kaldri ręddu,
             4        sęęgr inn suð-róni · sat hann á bękk hęm:

There the dright-lads [WARRIORS] drank—but the concealed ones shut up—wine in the walhall; they feared the wrath of the Huns.
 Then called Kneefrith with cold voice,
 the southern messenger, he sat on a high bench:

1 dylęędr ‘concealed ones’ | Finnur Jónsson (1932) reasonably interprets this as referring to Atle’s spies at Guthur’s court.

2 val-hęllu ‘the walhall’ | The interpretation of this compound is difficult in the current context. The first element val- could be (1) valr ‘falcon’, referring to the aristocratic hunting practice; (2) valr ‘Wale’, cognate with ‘Welsh’ but in ON referring to the French or Romans, stressing the southern location or appearance of the hall; or (3) valr ‘(collective) the battle-slain’, foreshadowing the inevitable death (feyness) of the Yivickings. If (3) is correct the word is linguistically identical to Walhall, Weden’s hall, whither the battle-slain go.

- 3        „Atli mik hingat sęędi · ríða ęręędi, 2        mar inum męl-gręypa, · Myrk-við inn ó·kunna at biðja yðr, Gunnarr, · at it á bękk kómið

“Atle sent me hither to ride with an errand, on the bit-champing steed through Mirkwood uncharted—to ask you, O Guthur, that ye two [= Guthur and Hain] on the bench come, with hearth-surrounding helmets, to seek the home of Atle.

He also declared himself willing to give you two the field of wide Gnit-heath,
 [and] of yelling spears and of gilded prowls, great treasures and the place of Danp;

the renowned brush which men call Mirkwood.

- 6     Hǫfði vatt þá Gunnarr · ok Hǫgna til sagði:

       Gull vissa’k ekki · á Gnita-heiði,
4     þat’s vit étim-a · annat slíkt.

His head turned Guthur then, and said to Hain:

“What dost thou counsel us two, O younger man, as such a thing we hear?

I knew of no gold on the Gnit-heath which we two should not own as much of.

- 7     Sjau ęigu vit sal-hús · sverða full,

- 8     hjalm ok skjöld hvítastan, · kominn ór hǫll Kíars;
2     ęinn ’s mín bętri · en sé allra Húna.“

[my] helmet and shield the whitest, come from Choser’s hall;

- 9     „Hvat hyggr brúði bęndu · þá’s hón okkr baug sęndi,

[Hain quoth:]

“What dost thou think the bride meant, when she sent us two an armlet wrapped with a heath-dweller’s garment [WOLF > WOLF’S HAIR]? I think that she gave us a warning!

I found the heath-dweller’s [WOLF’S] hair tied through the red ring:

wolven is our road, if we ride that errand!<sup>212</sup>”

<sup>212</sup>That it is the more cautious Hain who speaks here is clear from Guthur’s response in the following stanzas. Whereas Hain judges the wolf-hair to be a warning of Hunnish treachery, Guthur thinks that it is a warning that wolves will steal his treasure if he does not show up.

- 10 Niðjar-gi hvøttu Gunnar · né náungr annarr,
 2 rýnendr né ráðendr, · né þeir's ríkir vöru;

 4 mærr í mjǫð-ranni · af móði stórum:

Kinsmen urged not Guthur, nor any other relation,
 not counselors nor advisors, nor those who were mighty.
 Guthur then announced—as a king should,
 renowned in the mead-hall—with great spirit:

- 11 „Rís-tu nú, Fjornir, · lát-tu á flæt vaða
 2 greppa gull-skálir · með gumna höndum!

“Rise now, Ferner; let on the floorboards wade forth the golden bowls of warriors along the hands of men!

The wolf will rule the inheritance of the Nivlings—
 the old grey guardians [WOLVES]—if Guthur is missing.
 Black-furred bears [will] bite with wrangling teeth—amusing the bitch-pack—if Guthur comes not.”

 They asked the bold man [= Guthur] if his life he wished—the ruler of the Gots—to buy with gold.<sup>215</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Svá ... verjask | Line moved from the last st. to this one since it seems to connect semantically with the immediately following line, and also creates a regular line distribution of 4-4 instead of 5-3.

<sup>215</sup>The Huns ask Guthur (it is clear that “ruler of the Gots” refers to him, cf. sts. 1, 3, 10) if he wishes to ransom Hain. He instead responds with the following:

- 23     „Hjarta skal mér Høgna · í hendi liggja blóðugt, ór brjósti · skorit bald-riða, saxi slíðr-bæitu, · syni þjóðans.“

[Guthur quoth:] “The heart of Hain shall lie in my hands:
bloody from the breast, cut from the bold rider [= Hain], with a slide-biting sax,<sup>216</sup> from the son of the sovereign [= Hain].”

<sup>216</sup>i.e. a short-sword with a blade so sharp that it draws blood when one slides the finger across it.

- 24     Skóru þeir hjarta · Hjalla ór brjósti, blóðugt, ok á bjóð lögðu · ok bóru þat fyr Gunnar.

Cut they the heart of Helle from the breast, bloody, and on a platter laid it, and carried it before Guthur.

- 25     Þá kvað þat Gunnarr, · gumna dróttinn:
„Hér hefi’k hjarta · Hjalla ins blauða, ólíkt hjarta · Høgna ins frókna,
es mjök bifask · es á bjóði liggr;
bifðisk hōlfu meirr · es í brjósti lá!“

Then quoth that Guthur, the lord of men:
“Here have I the heart of Helle the soft—unlike the heart of Hain the bold!— which much trembles when on the platter it lies;
it trembled twice as much when in the breast it lay.”

- 26     Hló þá Høgni · es til hjarta skóru

Hain laughed then, when unto the heart they cut the living wound-smith [WARRIOR = Hain]; he thought least of sobbing.
Bloody on a platter they laid it, and carried it before Guthur.

- 27     Mérr kvað þat Gunnarr, · Gæir-Niflungr:

Soon in the saddles we two shall sit,
and speak about the lineages of princes,
of those men who are come from the gods.

- 2        10      Þęir hafa vęðjat · vala malmi Óttarr ungi · ok Angantýr;
             skylt 's at vęita, · svá't skati hinn ungi
4               fǫður-leiřð hafi · ępt fręndr sína.

They have wagered the Welsh ore [GOLD], young Oughter and Ongenthew—it must be divulged, so that the young prince may have the patrimony left by his kinsmen.

- 2        11      Hǫrg hann mér gęrði · hlaðinn stęinum;
             nú 's grjót þat · at glęri orðit;
             rauð hann í nýju · nauta blóði;
4               ę trúði Óttarr · á ǫsynjur.

A harrow he made for me, loaded with stones;
now that stone-pile has turned into glass.
He reddened it in the fresh blood of oxen;
always did Oughter trust on the Ossens.

- 2        12      Nú lát forna · niðja talða
             ok upp-bornar · ęttir manna
             hvat 's Skjöldunga, · hvat 's Skilfinga,

- 4           hvat 's Qðlinga · hvat 's Ylfinga
- 6           hvat 's hǫld-borit, · hvat 's hęrs-borit
            męst manna val · und Mið-garði?“

Now let ancient kinsmen be counted,
and the high born lineages of men:
What is of the Shieldings? What is of the Shilvings?
What is of the Athlings? What is of the Wolvings?
What is born of hero? What is born of chief,
the mightiest choice of men in Middenyard?”

- 13       „Þú est Óttarr · borinn Innstęini,
2       en Innstęinn vas · Alfi inum gamla, Alfr vas Ulfi, · Ulfr Sęfara,
4       en Sęfari · Svan inum rauða.

[Hindle quoth:] “Thou<sup>218</sup> art, Oughter, born to Instone, and Instone was born to Elf the old,
Elf to Wolf, Wolf to Seafare,

<sup>218</sup>Hindle, maybe in a trance-like state, speaks straight to Oughter.

Thy father had thy mother, esteemed with neck-rings,
I think that she was called Leedise the gidden.
Frood was her father and Friend her mother;
all her lineage seemed to be among overmen.

<sup>3</sup> Fríund | emend. from meaningless þfríaut F

          fręg vǫru folk-víg, · þau's framir gęrðu, 4       hvarfla þóttu verk · með himins skautum.

Ed was once the mightiest of men,
Halfdane earlier the highest of Shieldings.
Renowned were the troop-conflicts [wars] which the famous ones made;
his (= Halfdane's) works seemed to circle along the corners of heaven.

- 16      Eððisk við Eymund · óðstan manna
 2          en vá Sigtrygg · með svólum eggjum, eiga gekk Almvæg, · óðsta kvinna,
 4          ólu þau ok óttu · átján sonu.

He (= Halfdane) became the in-law of Iemund<sup>219</sup>, the noblest of men, and he slew Syettrue with cool edges.

He went on to have Elmwey, the noblest of women;
 they begot and had eighteen sons.

<sup>219</sup>lit. "[he] was strengthened by". Elmwey was Iemund's daughter or sister.

- 17      Þaðan eru Skjöldungar, · þaðan eru Skilfingar, 2          þaðan eru Qðlingar, · þaðan eru Ynglingar,

 4          mest manna val · und Mið-garði;

Thence come the Shieldings! Thence come the Shilvings!

Thence come the Athlings! Thence come the Inglings!<sup>a</sup>

Thence is born of hero! Thence is born of chief

the mightiest choice of men in Middenyard!

All of this is thy lineage, O foolish Oughter!"

---

<sup>a</sup>Note the contradiction with v. 12. Since the Inglings have already been mentioned (under the name Shilvings, for the difference between the two see Encyclopedia), it seems likely that Wolvings is the original reading.

- 18      Vas Hildigunnr · hęnnar móðir,

Hildguth was her mother,

the child of Sweve and Sea-king.

All of this is thy lineage, O foolish Oughter!—

It is meaningful that one might know thus; wilt thou [hear] yet further?

 There was Frood, yet earlier Keer,
 but by Hild was Highelf begotten.

West Germanic Heroic Poetry

The Lay of Hildbrand

Dating: 700s

Meter: Ancient-words-law

For the text of original poem I present the manuscript text with as few textual emendations as possible. As for the orthography, I have found it impossible to produce a normalised without too heavily distorting the received text, being as it is, a blend of several dialects (one need only observe the treatment of the name Thedric, which appears thrice, and each time in a markedly different form). Apart from my typical practice of capitalising proper names, marking prefixes with ⟨·⟩ and compounds with ⟨-⟩, and using acute accents to signify long vowels, circumflex accents to signify now-monophthongised original diphthongs, and overdots to mark nasal vowels, I have done the following changes in order to clarify etymological relationships and make the text somewhat more wieldy. Of these, 8–10 have also been noted in the apparatus where they occur:

1. Consistently replaced both p (wynn) and uu with w.
2. Consistently replaced c with k.
3. Consistently replaced qu with kw.
4. Consistently replaced t with t̥ in positions affected by the Second Sound Shift.
5. Replaced th with þ.
6. Replaced e with ē when reflecting an original a-vowel affected by i-mutation.
7. Replaced ó with ō where originally an a.
8. Removed unetymological double nn.
9. Restored initial b- where etymological and/or metrically required.
10. Removed initial b- unetymological and/or metrically deficient.

The punctuation of the original, entirely consisting of interpuncts, at times representing metrical breaks, at others sporadically placed, has not been retained.

Where they appear in cæsuræ, the words kwad Hilti-brant ‘Hildbrand quoth’ (found in ll. 30, 49, and 58) replace the usual interpunct. Due to their hypermetrical nature, I had originally planned to remove these, and instead indicate the speaker in the margins—but after comparison with various Norse stanzas (e.g. Rein 3, wherein the words kvað Loki ‘Lock quoth’ appear in the stanza’s first cæsura), I have come to believe that these represent an ancient oral interjection, seemingly going back as far as the Migration Period (as it seems incredulous to think that the scribe of ms. should have influenced the four centuries younger scribe of R in such a minor point.)

The poet gives a very short formulaic introduction, from which we can tell that the beginning of the poem is preserved (1–2). Hildbrand and Hathbrand, father and son, arm and dress themselves before riding into battle, each the head of an opposing host (3–6). Hildbrand asks Hathbrand about his name and lineage, saying that he knows all noble genealogies (7–13). Hathbrand gives his name, and says that the old men of his tribe have told him that his father was Hildbrand, a brave warrior. He abandoned the newborn Hathbrand in order to serve Thedric in his fight against Edwaker, but this was a long time ago, and Hathbrand doubts that he is still alive (14–29). Realising that he is facing his son, Hildbrand invokes God as witness, and as a token of loyalty offers Hathbrand a golden bigh which the Hunnish king had given him (30–35). Hathbrand exclaims that treasures must be won by struggle alone and harshly insults his father's manhood: he calls him an old Hun, and accuses him of having survived to old age through treachery (36–41). Hathbrand then reveals that he has learned from sailors on the Mediterranean that Hildbrand is dead (42–44).

After this follow three short speeches by Hildbrand. The second one is certainly spoken by him, but the other two may be misplaced or misattributed. Hildbrand reflects on his son's prosperity, saying that he can tell from his clothes that he has a good lord, and that he, unlike himself, has not suffered an exile's fate (first speech: 45–48). He then calls on God, and laments that after thirty years of war he is now forced to fight against his own son; still, he tells Hathbrand that he should easily be able to kill such an old man as himself, if he has the strength to it (second speech: 49–57). Lastly, he (or Hathbrand, if we choose to emend) says that only the most queer easterner would refuse the fight when his opponent so greatly desires it. He accepts his fate and declares that when the duel is over, one of the two must win and rob the corpse of the other (third speech: 58–62).

The two men then throw their javelins, each of which gets stuck in the opposing shield, before rushing into each other, hacking away at their shields until they become worthless (63–68). The rest of the poem was continued on the now-lost, following page(s).

 He left in the land a little one to stay:
 a bride in the bower, a bairn ungrown, inheritance-less—he rode east hence,
 at which time Thedrich was in great need of my father—that was so friendless a man!

He was immeasurably hostile to Edwaker,

41 bist | pist ms.

37 mit gêru skal man · geba in·fâhan 'With spear shall one win gifts' | This ancient mindset was codified by the Indians as part of the kṣatra-dharma, the code of the Warrior (kṣatriya) caste, which explicitly forbade them from taking gifts. So in a part of the Mahabharata (12.192.73), a Warrior King refuses a gift from a priest since "it is the duty prescribed for a Kṣatriya that he must fight and protect (people). Kṣatriya are said to be the givers, then, how can I take (this) from you?" (Hara (1974) transl.)

Misceallaneous Runic Poetry

Not all poetry preserved in Runic inscriptions is included here; see below under Galders. The stanza from the Rök runestone is included under Other Heroic Poetry, and the Runic version of the Dream of the Rood is found there.

Metrically the poetry is generally in Ancient-words-law. A few fragments from Jutland are in Leeds-meter and two from Sweden are in Court-recited meter.

Introduction to the Rune Poems

TODO: Acrophonic principle

The order and names of the letters in the Runic alphabets or futharks stayed relatively consistent throughout the many centuries and countries in which they were used. This can probably be ascribed to the rune poems—poetic lists of the names of each rune with a short explanation, passed down orally as mnemonic devices to aid early Germanic learners, who were doubtless far more accustomed to learn by heart spoken poems than written letters.

Three such rune poems survive, from three countries: England, Norway, and Iceland. The English rune poem documents the English futhorc, while the Norwegian and Icelandic document the Scandinavian younger futhark.

When compared to the Common Germanic elder futhark, these two daughter scripts have taken opposing paths. Whereas the English futhorc has appended several letters for new vowels to the end of the rune row, the Scandinavian futhark has instead done away with numerous runes, namely those for ng, plosives d, g, p, the semi-vowel w and the vowels o and e, along with the obscure hook-shaped rune (TODO). That much of this simplification was probably intentional, rather than the result of neglect or language change, is seen from the following facts.

First, several of the lost runes stood for sounds that did not undergo any major sound shifts in the North Germanic languages in the relevant time period. For instance, all modern Scandinavian dialects still clearly distinguish between the initial consonants in the descendants of dagr ‘day’ and Týr ‘Tew’, and most even have the same articulation of these consonants as modern English.

Second, in two archaic runic inscriptions we find clear proof that the names and sound values of some of the lost runes were still remembered and passed down even after the adoption of the simplified younger futhark. On the Swedish Rök stone (Ög 136), which is mostly composed in the younger futhark, runes of the elder futhark are used in a cipher, which works in the following way: Every younger futhark rune representing two distinct phonemes, where one of those was the sound value of that rune in the elder futhark system, and the other has been assimilated from a lost rune, is replaced by the elder futhark rune whose value it assimilated. For instance, the k rune, which in the elder futhark stood for only /k/, but which in the younger futhark stands for both /k/ and /g/, is replaced with the old g rune. A similar instance of two-scriptedness is found on the Ingelsta stone (Ög 43), where the old d rune is used in an otherwise younger futhark inscription, probably standing for its name dagr ‘day’, which is also attested as a male given name.

Third, there is virtually no regional variation in which runes disappear in the transition from elder to younger futhark. There is some variation in their shapes, but there is no region which, say, simplifies only the plosive consonants t/d, k/g, b/p > t, k, b, but retains the written distinction between o and u—they all go away at once.

These facts point away from neglect or a natural development of the script—they instead suggest deliberate reform. Since we lack historical sources, the motivations behind such a reform can only be guessed at, but making the script simpler may have been intended to increase literacy by making it easier to learn and faster to write. If this were the case it was certainly successful: the transition to the simplified younger futhark brings with it a huge increase in inscriptions in Scandinavia, along with interest in various ciphers, and a new tradition of inscribed stones in Denmark, where they were previously unknown.

This new system also quickly gave rise to even more simplified systems, like the “short-stave” runes found already on the C9th Rök stone, or the “staveless” runes known from northern Sweden. Both of these variants make it even faster to write on materials like wood, wax and bone; the runes also take up less space—very useful for carvers writing on limited surfaces.

In any case, the names of the runes seem to have survived these developments. Of the 16 runes found in both the English and Icelandic (which appears to be more conservative than the Norwegian) rune poems, 10—f, r, h, n, i, j, s, b, m and l—have etymologically identical names. Three of the remaining six—þ, a and t—in the Icelandic stand for words with clear Heathen associations—Thurse, Os, and Tew—and so may have been changed deliberately after the conversion of England, rather than lost in the process of oral transmission. Two more—u and k—have names which agree in form but not in meaning. Thus it is only the old ᚱ-rune where this is total disagreement about its ancient name. This is easily understood, since the sound which that rune designated was lost in early Old English.

The Icelandic Rune Poem

Dating: Medieval.

Meter: Unclear.

The poem is highly formulaic. All lines begin with the respective rune's name, followed by three synonyms. It is only attested in late manuscripts which often have major disagreements with each other.

- 1      Fé es frēnda róg · ok flóðar viti
2                      ok graf-seiðs gata.
Fee is strife of kinsmen and beacon of the sea and grave-saith's [SERPENT'S] street.
- 2      Úr es skýja grátr · ok skára þveggir
2                      ok hirðis hatr.
Drizzle is weeping of clouds and ...
and shepherd's hatred.
- 3      Þurs es kvenna kvöl · ok kletta í·búi
2                      ok varð-rúnar verr.
Thurse is women's torment and indweller of hills and husband of the weird-whisperess [GIANTESS].
- 4      Óss es aldinn gautr · ok Ós-garðs jöfurr,
2                      ok Val-hallar vísi.
Os is ancient Geat, and Osyrd's chief,
and Walhall's overseer.

- 5      Rēið es sitjandi sēla · ok snúðig ferð
2                      ok jós ęrfiði.

Chariot is sitting bliss and twirling journey and sickness of snakes.

- 8      Nauð es þýjar þrō · ok þungr kost
2                      ok vās-samlig verk.

Need is maidservant's yearning and scant choice and working in wet-cold weather.

- 9      Íss es áar bōrkr · ok unnar þękja
2                      ok fęigra manna fár.

Ice is river's bark and wave's roof and fey men's danger.

- 10      Ár es gumna góði · ok gótt sumar
2                      ok al-gróinn akr.

Year is men's boon and good summer

The Norwegian Rune Poem

Dating: Medieval.

Meter: Unclear.

The poem is generally the same as the Icelandic, but there are some differences.

The language is clearly medieval, and has a few uniquely Norwegian sound changes. That these are not just scribal is seen by the meter.

- h- has been lost before l, n and r (st. 2 lēpr < hlepr; st. 8 neppa < hneppa; st. 5 rossum < hrossum).
- rst has become st (st. 5 vęsta < vęrsta)

Rothstan and Anlif, Eke and Hathkin, those lads raised after their father
a remarkable monument after the dead Cale.
Thus will the good man be spoken of,
while the stone lives and the staves of the runes.

Sm 39

Dating: 1000s

Meter: Ancient-words-law

A standing stone inscribed on two sides, one of which has a large cross. The expression is formulaic; cf. Sm 44, Sö 130, U 703, U 739, and U 805. For “good of meat”, which also occurs in High; see Encyclopedia. The first line is not poetic.

---

2                      Gunni satti stên þenna eptir Súna, fǫður sinn, mildan orða · ok matar góðan.

Guthe set this stone after Sown, his father, mild of words and good of meat.

 4            eptir Frey-stęin • fęður sinn.

I know Highstan and Holmstan, those brothers,
 the men most rune-cunning in Middenyard;
 they set the stone and many staves,
 after Freestan, their father.

Sö 65 (Djulefors)

Dating: 1000–1100s

Meter: Ancient-words-law with hendings in the b-verses

A standing stone inscribed on one side with a large cross. Already on the earliest depictions the stone was damaged, but an even larger part has now gone missing. Other stones that mention Longbeardland (Lombardy) include TODO... The meter is highly unusual for runic Swedish poetry, relying on hendings (in line 2 an ethel-hending arð- : barð-, in line 3 a shot-hending land- : end-). Line 2b is formulaic; see note.

2                    Inga reṣṣti stein þannsi at Ólṣif sinn a...
                      Hann austarla · arði barði auk à Langbarði- · landi endaðis.

Inge raised this stone after Anlaf, her ...
 Easterly he ploughed with the prow,
 and on Longbeardland was ended.

2 arði barði ‘ploughed with the prow’ | i.e. “sailed”. A formulaic poetic expression shared with an anonymous line from the Third Grammatical Treatise, which reads: sá’s af Íslandi · arði barði ‘he who [away] from Iceland ploughed with the prow’.

Sö 130

Dating: 1000–1100s

Meter: Ancient-words-law

A standing stone. TODO. The expression is formulaic; cf. Sm 39, Sm 44, U 703, U 739, and U 805.

Sö 179 (Gripsholm)

Dating: 1000s

Meter: Ancient-words-law

TODO: INTRODUCTION. The three-line stanza is a biographical addition following a typical prose memorial formula.

---

P Tóla lét rēisa stēin þennsa at son sinn Harald, bróður Ingvars.

Tool let raise this stone after his son Harold, brother of Ingwar.

2 Þeir fōru dręngi-la · fiarri at gulli

U 703

Dating: 1000s

Meter: Ancient-words-law

A standing stone inscribed on one side. There is no cross present, but a large four-legged beast with a long tail. The stone is heavily damaged, but mostly readable, except for what is here taken to be the half of line 2, which is entirely lost. The expression is formulaic; cf. Sm 39, Sm 44, Sö 130, U 739, and U 805. For “good of meat”, which also occurs in Hǫb; see Encyclopedia. The first line is not poetic.

2 Ásvi lét rēisa stēin þennsa at Ǫrnulf, son sinn góðan.
Hann byggi hér · ...,
mandr matar góðr · ok mál̥s risinn.

Oswye let raise this stone after Arnolf, her good son.
He dwelled here ...,
a man good of meat and proud of speech.

U 739

Dating: 1000s

Meter: Ancient-words-law

A standing stone inscribed on one side, with a large cross present. There are no major difficulties with the reading. The expression is formulaic; cf. Sm 39, Sm 44, Sö 130, U 703, and U 805. “mild of meat” appears to be a variant of “good of meat”, which also occurs in Higb; see Encyclopedia. The first line is not poetic. For other stones raised by someone in memory of themselves, see TODO.

2                      Holbjörn lét reisa stein at sik sjalfan.
                          Hann var mildr matar · ok máls risinn.

Holbern let raise this stone after himself.
 He was mild of meat and proud of speech.

U 805

Dating: 1000s

Meter: Ancient-words-law

The stone has been lost, and only survives in old depictions, which makes the reading, especially two of the personal names, uncertain. My transliteration follows Rundata.

The expression is formulaic; cf. Sm 39, Sm 44, Sö 130, U 703, and U 739. For “good of meat”, which also occurs in Higb; see Encyclopedia. The first line is not poetic.

2                      Fylkir lét reisa stein eptir iel, bróður sinn, ok Gunnmarr eptir menk, fður sinn,
                          bónda góðan matar; · bygggi í Víkbý.

Filch let raise this stone after ..., his brother, and Guthmar after ..., his father, a farmer good of meat; he lived in Wickby.

Galders: Poetic Charms, Spells, and Curses

Under this section are gathered sundry galders (metrical magic charms) attested in Old Germanic languages. I have only included those with clear Heathen or otherwise traditional elements (especially certain poetic formulae known from older texts). Thoroughly Christian prayers are found below under “Poetry on Christian Subjects”.

Continental Germanic galders

The Two Merseburg Galders

Dating: TODO.

Meter: Ancient-words-law, Galders-law

These two galders, preserved in a manuscript (TODO) are some of the only surviving examples of genuine Heathen galders from the continent. Both share a common two-part structure, each beginning with an historiola—a “historical” account describing the successful effects of the galder in the mythic past—followed by an imperative commanding that the willed magic effect take place in the present.

The first galder begins with the historiola describing a group of supernatural women in the midst of a battle, affecting its outcome by fastening or loosening fetters. The imperative then commands that some fetters in the present be destroyed, so that captive(s) may escape.

The second galder begins with the historiola describing a group of Gods riding through the woods. Among them is Balder, whose young foal sprains its foot. Three Gods—the otherwise unknown goddess Sithguth, the goddess Sun, the god Weden—in turn chant a healing galder over it. The imperative—apparently the galder sung by Weden—then commands that a present sprain be healed.

1    Ęiris sázun idisi · sázun hera duo der;
2    suma hapt hęptidun · suma hęri lęzidun
      suma klubodun · umbi kuonjo-widi
4    in·sprink hapt-bandun · in·far figandun
      .H.

Of yore sat dises, sat here, then there:
some fastened fetters, some hindered armies,
some cleaved shackles (TODO!).—
Destroy the fetter-bonds, lead the way from the fiends!
.H.

5 .H. | The meaning of this letter, which is very clear and written in the same hand as the galders, is uncertain. To me the most convincing suggestion is that it be read as .N., short for Latin nomen ‘name’, presumably the name of the person whom the singer wishes to free from the fetters.

2    Fol ęnde Wuodan · fuorun zi holza

2 dú wart demo Balderes folon · sín fuoz bi·rēnkit
 þú bi·guol en Sinthgunt · Sunna era swister 4 þú bi·guol en Frija · Folla era swister þú bi·guol en Wuodan · só hé wola konda:

 bēn zi bēna
 8 bluot zi bluoda
 lid zi ge·liden · só-se ge·limida sín“!

Phol and Weden journeyed in the woods;
 then was the foot of Balder's foal sprained.
 Then him Sithguth begaled—Sun her sister;
 then Frie begaled him—Full her sister;
 then Weden begaled him, as well he knew:
 “Like bone-sprain, like blood-sprain, like joint-sprain!
 Bone to bone,
 blood to blood,
 joint to joints, like were they glued together!”

1 Fol | Phol ms. 3 Sinthgunt | Sinhtgunt ms.

3 bi·guol ‘begale’ | third past singular of bi·galan ‘begale’, transitive of galan ‘gale, sing a galder’. This verb is the origin of the noun “galder”, literally ‘something galed’. Cf. Ordr TODO, wherein a woman “gales” “bitter galders” over another in order to help her in childbirth.

4 bi·guol en ‘begaled him’ | i.e. “sang galders over him”

Against worms

(Contra vermes)

Dating: ?

Meter: Ancient-words-law

A manuscript charm, as its header suggests, aimed against worms. The worms (possibly maggots in an infected wound) are to leave the body (from marrow, to bone, to flesh, to skin) and instead go into some arrows (strála), possibly a ritual implement.

---

Go out, Nesse, with nine small Nesses!
Out from the marrow into the bone, from the bone into the flesh, out from the flesh into the skin, out from the skin into these arrows.
Lord, may it be so.

Against Swarm

(Wið ymbe)

Dating: ?

Meter: Ancient-words-law

TODO. That bees are called “victory-wives” is interesting.

P1      Wið ymbe nim eorþan, ofer·weorp mid þínre swíþran handa under þínum
2      swíþran fét, and cwet:

Against a swarm take earth, throw it with thy right hand under thy right foot, and say:

1      Fó ic under fót, · funde ic hit.
2      Hwæt eorðe mæg · wið ealra wihta ge·hwilce and wið andan · and wið æminde
4      and wið þá micelan · mannes tungan.

I catch under foot, I may have found it.
How, earth works against everywhich wight and against mischief and against neglect and against that mighty tongue of man.

4 þá micelan · mannes tungan ‘that mighty tongue of man’ | The tongue is surely here standing in for “speech”, specifically galder; i.e., if the swarming of the bees were caused by an enemy’s cursing, the earth will disarm it.

P2      And wiððon for·weorp ofer greót, þonne hí swirman, and cweð:

And with that throw the grit over, when they swarm, and say:

1 for·weorp ofer greót ‘throw the grit over’ | i.e. “throw the earth over the swarm”.

2      Sitte gé, sige-wíf, · sígað to eorþan!

- 2            Næfre gé wilde · to wuda fleogan.
              Beo gé swá ge·mindige · mínes gódes,
4            swá bið manna ge·hwilc · metes and éþeles.

Sit ye, victory-wives; sink to the earth!

Never ye would fly to the woods.

Be ye so mindful of my good,

like is every man of his measure and homestead.

Here came walking in an inspiden wight, had his harness in his hands; said that thou wert his horse, laid his reins on thy neck; then they together began to ride from the land.
As soon as they came away from the land, then they together began to cool limbs.
Then came walking in the beast's sister;
then she ended [it], and swore oaths,
that this never should harm the ailing man,
nor him who this galder might get,
nor whomever this galder could gale.
Amen, let it be.

Old Norse galders

The Ribe Galder Stick (DR EM85;49)

Dating: Medieval.

Meter: Ancient-words-law, Galders-law

A wooden stick from the Danish city of Ribe. The galder is syncretic, and as such contains numerous pre-Christian elements, albeit in a Christian(ised) context.

The inscription may be conveniently divided into four parts. Part one (ll. 1–4) contains an introductory prayer where the healer asks for the support of natural forces (Earth, Up-heaven and the Sun) and Christian divinities (God and Saint Mary), that the healing may be successful. Part two (ll. 5–8) ritually exorcises any sickness which may have entered any part of the body. Part three (ll. 9–14) apparently warns the addressee that they will be haunted by “nine needs” (an old Heathen formula; see Note) until they pray. Part four (ll. 15, which is probably prose) gives the personal name “Bonde”, perhaps the addressee, and concludes with an “Amen”.

The Canterbury Galder

Dating: c. 1075

Meter: Ancient-words-law

This Old Norse galder is found in the Anglo-Saxon manuscript Cotton Caligula A XV. It runs across the bottom margin of the two facing pages 123v and 124r and is written in very clear runes of Wiking Age long-stave type. One rune, viz. g in vigi vegi ‘smite’ is “stung”. The text has no word separators.

The galder is very similar to those on the amulets from Sigtuna (U Fv1933;134, U NOR1998;25) below. They all belong to a type of magical healing where an illness-causing devil is commanded to leave the suffering person. The final line, viðr áðra-vari ‘against pus of veins’ is probably a declaration of purpose.

Galders from Bryggen

Several galders or magical inscriptions are part of the cache of medieval rune-inscribed objects found at Bryggen in the city of Bergen, Norway. For simplicity's sake, they are here listed in ascending order of their runological numbers.

B 257

Dating: c. 1335

Meter: Galders-law

A stick inscribed on four planed sides. Part of the stick is broken off, which renders the text incomplete. The inscription is clearly a “love-charm” (that is, a piece of sexually coercive magic), addressed—as shown by the feminine dative sjalfri þér ‘thy self’ on side D—to a woman. The language closely resembles that of Shir 36, in which Shirner, Free’s servant, threatens to carve a runic inscription which will curse the ettin-woman Gird with ęrgi ‘queerness, degeneracy’, óði ‘madness’, and óþoli ‘restlessness, impatience’ unless she sleep with his master. It seems that we are here dealing with just such a surviving runic curse, and that Shir 36 is reflecting an authentic form of Norse “love magic” (for it is unlikely that the present inscription should derive directly from that poem) by which a woman is cursed with sexual restlessness until she succumb to the will of the male curser.

A more distant parallel may be seen in the curse-formula found on the two C7th runic inscriptions from Stentoften and Björketorp (see TODO), wherein the destroyer of the respective monuments is cursed to become herma-lausar argjú ‘restless (a different root from óþoli above!) with queerness’, i.e. ‘incessantly randy’.

Side D ends with a string of fake-Latin gibberish, a clear sign of Christian syncretic influence on the Old Norse-Germanic magical tradition.

A     Ríst ek bót-rúnar · ríst ek bjarg-rúnar
2             ein-falt við ęlfum

B 380

Dating: ?

Meter: Galders-law

A short little charm explicitly invoking the two most important Heathen Gods, Thunder and Weden. The inscription postdates the official conversion of Norway by over a hundred years, and it is an open question whether the two mentioned gods were still seen in a good light or whether they had already been assimilated into the Catholic system of demons and devils. This question is important since it determines the context of the letter: was it well-wishing, assuming that the receiver was of like mind to the sender, or did he have more sinister intent than the first line lets on? Judging from the first line, and from the half-Heathen contents of many other inscriptions found at Bryggen (some from as late as the C14th), I see it as crypto-Heathen.

Poetry on Christian Subjects

Old Saxon Baptismal Vow

Dating: ?
Meter: Prose.

While not an alliterative poem in the slightest, this short text is important for its mention of Saxon Heathen Gods, and as I have no section for Miscellanea, I have here set it first among the Christian poetry, in order to give relevant cultural context. The format of the text is straightforward and resembles the modern Catholic questions asked to participants during the Sacrament of Confirmation (TODO: reference). The person to be baptised is to respond positively to three denying and three affirming questions; first to forsake the Devil (P1), all “Devil-yields” (i.e. non-Christian rituals, see note to that word) (P2), and all the Devil’s “works and words” and his followers, among which are listed the three Germanic-Saxon gods Thunder, Woden, and Saxneet (P3); and then to profess belief in each member of the Trinity: God the almighty father (P4), Christ God’s son (P5), and the Holy Ghost (P6).

P1 „For·sachistu diobole?“ et respondeat: „ec for·sacho diobole“

“Forsakest thou the Devil?” and he should respond: “I forsake the Devil.”

P2 „end allum diobol-gelde?“ respondeat: „end ec for·sacho allum diobol-gelde.“
2

“And all devil-yields?” he should respond: “I forsake all devil-yields.”

---

1 diobol-gelde ‘devil-yields’ | An obvious calque of OE TODO, which means TODO.

P3 „End allum dioboles wercum?“ respondeat „end ec for·sacho allum dioboles
2 wercum and wordum, Thuner ende Wóden ende Sax-nôte ende allem them un·holdum the hira ge·nôtas sint.“

“And all the Devil’s works” he should respond: “and I forsake all the works and words of the Devil; Thunder and Woden and Saxneet and all those unhold ones who are their fellows.”

P4 „Ge·lôbistu in Got ala-męhtigun fader?“ „Ec ge·lôbo in Got ala-męhtigun 2 fader.“

“Believest thou in God, the almighty father?” “I believe in God, the almighty father.”

P5 „Ge·lôbistu in Crist Godes suno?“ „Ec ge·lôbo in Crist Gotes suno.“

“Believest thou in Christ, God’s son?” “I believe in Christ, God’s son.”

P6 „Ge·lôbistu in hâlogan gâst?“ „Ec ge·lôbo in hâlogan gâst.“

“Believest thou in the Holy Ghost?” “I believe in the Holy Ghost.”

Heliand

Dating: 830s

Meter: Ancient-words-law

Very much a work in progress.

The following is a complete list of source manuscripts, in chronological order.

- L. 840–850 (Thomas 4073 (Ms))
- P. 840–850 (R 56/2537 (PA))
- V. 800–850 (Palatini Latini 1447)
- S. 850 (cgm. 8840)
- M. 850–875 (cgm. 25)
- C. 950–1000 (Cotton Caligula A. VII sign. 3-11)

The two main manuscripts of the poem are M and C, which contain lines TODO, respectively. Fragments L and P appear to originally belong to the same codex, having the identical hands and page layout.

Notes on the normalization:

- Long vowels are marked by the acute rather than by the circumflex accent or macron. This is both faithful to the original manuscripts and concordant with my practice in normalising other Germanic languages.
  - Long vowels  $\hat{e}$  and  $\hat{o}$  resulting from monophthongisation of diphthongs ai and au are, however, written with the circumflex accent. That these were in fact articulated separately is seen by the following circumstance: in the mss. etymological  $\acute{e}$  and  $\acute{o}$  are frequently written as ie and uo, but this is never done for  $\hat{e}$  and  $\hat{o}$ .
  - When attested in all mss., epenthetic (svarabhakti) vowels are marked with an underdot. Otherwise they are deleted.
  - Long vowels resulting from nasal assimilation are marked with an overdot. i is written as  $\ddot{i}$ .
  - ms. e and i, when occurring between vowels are written as j.
  - ms. i, when word-initial or following g and corresponding to etymological j is written as j.
  - ms. e as resulting from i-mutation is written as  $\acute{e}$ .
  - ms. b or  $\acute{b}$ , when representing the voiced bilabial fricative, is written as v.
  - ms. th is written as  $\acute{h}$ .
  - ms. uu is written as w.

Muspilli

Dating: 800s

Meter: Ancient-words-law

Found in the margins of a single theological manuscript from the 820s, CLM 14098.

The second sound shift is applied consistently. That this was the case at composition is seen by the alliteration between Latin words starting with p- and Germanic words which originally began with b-:

- l. 16: Germanic pú (= OE, ON bú) with borrowed pardísu (< Latin paradisum),
- l. 21: Germanic piutit (= OE biett, ON býðr) with borrowed pebbes (< Latin pix) and pína (< Latin poena),
- l. 25: Germanic prinnan (= OE biernan, ON brinna), palw- (= OE bealu, ON bǫlv-) with borrowed pebbe (see above).

The Wessobrunner Hymn

Dating: late 700s

Meter: Ancient-words-law

This text can be split into two parts, the poem and the prayer. Following my principle of including sources rather than excluding (TODO: see Introduction), I here present both.

The first part is a short alliterative poem describing the earliest beginning of the world. The poet describes “the greatest of wonders”, namely that the universe began as a void, where neither earth nor heaven existed. In this void was, however, the almighty God, along with his many spirits (presumably the Heavenly Host or the Angels). While the cosmogony expressed is clearly Jewish-Christian rather than Germanic, the poem does contain two word-pairs also found in Norse Heathen stanzas about the creation of the world (see Notes to ll. 2, 3.), which may point toward a repurposing of older Heathen motifs and expressions in the new, Christian context.

The second part is a thoroughly Christian prayer. The author first thanks God for creating the earth and heaven, this is presumably why the poem was included, and for giving good things to mankind. He then asks for faith, strength and wisdom to help him in his mission.

I have learned among men that greatest of wonders, that earth was not nor up-heaven,
nor wood nor mountain was not,
nor any [...]; nor did the sun shine,
nor the moon give off light, nor the glittering sea.
Then there was nothing, neither of limit nor infinity (TODO: Translation),— and then was the One Almighty God:
the Mildest of Men [= Christ], and there were also many with Him:
good ghosts, and Holy God.

2 erdo ... úf-himil 'earth ... up-heaven' | A formulaic merism attested across the Germanic world, expressing the totality of the universe. Cf. especially Webth 21, where the god Weden asks the ettin Webthrithner about the origin of "earth and up-heaven", and Wsp 3/3, where it is said, about the time before the World existed, that "earth and up-heaven" never existed.

3 paum ... perek 'forest ... mountain' | The same word-pair is found in Grim 40 describing the creation of the world from Yimer's body by the Gods, and in Muspell 50 describing the Christian destruction of the world prior to the Judgment.

Encyclopedia (INCOMPLETE!)

NOTE: This encyclopedia is both incomplete and inconsistently formatted. New entries will be added, and old ones be corrected and expanded in the future.

Cultural and religious terms and expressions (C)

- ape (ON api, OE apa, OS apo, OHG affo, PNWGmc. **apó*) In the Old Norse the word seems to mean ‘fool, buffoon’, in the other old languages apparently ‘monkey’, though this sense should be a later development of the former; why would the early Germanic tribes have a word for an animal that they had never encountered?
- aught (ON étt, OE éht ‘possession, property’) The Nordic (paternal) clan or family line.
- begale (OHG bi-galan) To enchant, bewitch something or someone by singing a gald. Transitive of gale.
- bigh (ON baugr, OE béag, OHG boug) Armlets used as currency during the Migration Period. — The giving of rings and armlets in exchange for loyalty (holdness being the word used for a warrior’s loyalty towards his lord, and of a lord’s grace towards his servants) was common across all of Germanic Europe, as seen in the many poetic ruler-kennings of the type “breaker of rings” (e.g. béaga brytta ‘the breaker of bighs’ in Beow ll. 35, 352, 1487). An illustrative example of this is Hild 33–35. This is also connected with the oath-ring, and the famous ring-swords. TODO? reference some literature on this.
- bloot (ON blót, OE blót, OHG bluoz) A sacrifice or a sacrificial feast, one of the best attested Germanic pagan practices. The animals would be sacrificed by the host, cooked in large kettles and eaten communally. See also bloot-house.
- bloot-house (ON blót-hús, OHG bluoz-hús) A heathen temple. Glosses Latin fānum in OHG. See also harrow, hove, wigh.
- Doom (ON dómr, OE dóm) Commonly ‘judgement, verdict’ (whence Doomsday, ‘Judgement Day’), in the Norse and Anglo-Saxon poetry often specifically referring to one’s fame or good reputation (that is, how others will judge one’s character and deeds), especially after death. It is clear that this verdict was of utmost importance to the ancient Germanic people. The clearest examples are Hig 77 (see there): I know one that never dies: the Doom o’er each man dead. and Beow 1384–1389, where Beowulf consols king Rothgar after Grendle’s mother has slain his trusted advisor Asher (Æschere): Ne sorga, snotor guma! · Sélre bið ég-bwém, / þæt hé his fréond wrece, · þonne hé fela murne. / Ûre éghwylc sceal · ende ge-bídan / worolde lífes; · wyrce sé þe móte / dómes ér déape; · þæt bið driht-guman / un-lifgendum · æfter sélest. ‘Grieve not, wise man! ’Tis better for each one / that he avenge his friend than that he mourn much. / Each one of us shall suffer the end / of worldly life—win he who might / Doom before death: that is for the warrior, / unliving, afterwards the best.’ Other illustrative examples in Beow include 884b–887a: [...] Sige-munde ge-sprong / æfter déað-dæge · dóm un-lýtel / syþðan wíges beard · wyrm á-cwealde / hordes byrde [...] ‘For Syemund sprang up / after his death-day an unlittle [great] Doom, / since hard in conflict he defeated the wyrm, / the hoard’s herder.’ and 953b–955a: [...] þú þe self hafast / déðum ge-fræmed · þæt þín dóm lyfað / áwa tó aldre [...] ‘Thou hast for thyself / by deeds accomplished that thy Doom lives / for ever and ever.’
- feather-hame (ON fjaðr-hamr, OE fēðer-hama, OS fēðar-, fēðer-hamo) A plumage which when donned by the wearer lets him fly like, or become a bird. One is owned by Frow and used by Lock to fly between the homes in Thrim. In the Christian Healend feather-hames are donned by angels who fly from heaven to earth. See also hame.

- fee (ON fǣ, OE fēoh) Originally ‘cattle, kine’, however also used in a broader sense to refer to one’s mobile wealth; for that cf. particularly High.
- fey (ON feigr, OE fēge, OHG feigi ‘cowardly’) Being doomed or fated to die, with a sense of predestination and inevitability. Its earliest documented Scandinavian use is on the Rök stone: aft uamuþ stanta runar þar + n uarin faþi faþir aft faikiq̃n sunu Apt Vamōð standa rúnar þár, en Varinn fǣði, faðir aft feigjan sonu ‘After Woemood (Vamōðr) stand these runes, but Warren (Varinn) painted, the father after the fey son.’ See PCRN HS II:35, p. 928 ff. (TODO)
- feyness (ON feigð) The state of being fey.
- fimble- (ON fimbul-) The ultimate, final, greatest. See Fimblethyle, Fimble-winter.
- five days (ON fimm dagar) The Old Scandinavian (and perhaps Germanic) week was originally five days long, the seven-day week being a later import, as seen by the names of the days, which are obviously calqued from the Latin (Dies Mercurii = Weden’s day, et.c.). According to the Gole there were six weeks in a month, and “five days” is used as a generic period of time in High 51 and 74; in st. 74 it is contrasted with month. Related to this is the legal term fifþ (ON fimmt, OSw. fæmt), a meeting or gathering set to be held at a five-day notice. See fimt in CV, Love et al. (2020) for further discussion.
- galder (ON galdr, OE gealdor, OHG galdar) A magical song or incantation, probably synonymous with leed. Verbal noun formed to gale ‘to sing, chant’.
- gale (ON gala, OE galan, OHG galan) To sing, chant, especially of magical songs; verbal root of galder ‘something sung, chanted’.
- gand (ON gandr, Latin gandus) A witch’s familiar or foul spirit sent out to do her bidding. See PCRN HS I:17, p. 361 and II:26, p. 656. TODO
- gid (ON gōði, OE Gydda masc. given name) A heathen priest or master of ceremonies.
- gidden (ON gyðja, OE gyden ‘goddess’) The womanly equivalent or wife of a gid.
- good of meat (ON matar gōðr, gōðr matar) An old formula appearing in High 39 and numerous Swedish Wiking Age Runic inscriptions Sm 39, Sm 44, Sö 130, U 703, and U 805. Cf. U 739 which has the related míldr matar ‘mild of meat’. Antonyms are matar illr ‘evil of meat’ and meat-nothing.
- guest (ON gestr, OE giest, OS gast, OHG gast, Got. gasts, PGmc. gastiz) Guests were often strangers, wanderers, who would come to beg for food and lodgings. The Old Germanic peoples placed great value on hospitality. TODO.
- hame (ON hamr) A skin, shape. People could “shift hames” (ON skipta hǫmum), leaving their human hames behind and instead entering into the shapes of wolves, bears, birds. During this process the original hame, that is, the human body, would be sleeping in a vulnerable state. A concise description of this is found in IngS 7: Óðinn skipti hǫmum, lá þá búkr’inn sem sofinn eða dauðr, en hann var þá fugl eða dýr, fiskr eða ormr, ok fór á einni sviptund á fjarlæg lǫnd at sínum erendum eða annarra manna. ‘Weden shifted hames; then lay the trunk of his body as if sleeping or dead, but he was then a fowl or beast, a fish or serpent, and journeyed in a short while to foreign lands with his errands or those of other men.’ See also feather-hame, town-riders, evening-riders.
- harrow (ON hǫgr, OE hearg, PNWGmc. **harugar*) A hallowed cairn or stone-heap. Hind 10 describes the construction of one. The Norwegian laws prescribe the “breaking of harrows and burning of hoves”. See also hove, wigh.

hold (ON hollr, OE hold, OS hold, OHG hold) ‘Favourable, loyal, gracious’, often of a ruler towards his subject (in the sense of ‘gracious, benevolent’) or vice-versa (in the sense of ‘loyal, devoted’). Mirroring these earthly relationships, it is often used to refer to divine grace, both of the Christian God—thus in the Ecclesiastical Laws of King Cnut ALIE I (p. 372): Þam byþ witod-líce God hold, þe bið his bláforde rihtlice hold ‘Indeed God is hold towards him who is rightly hold to his lord’—but in the oldest Scandinavian material likewise of the Heathen gods. Thus Lock 4 (e.): holl regin ‘hold Reins’, and Ordr 10 (e.):

Svá hjalpi þér · hollar véttir,

‘So help thee hold wights; Frie and Frow, and more gods [...]’.

This word is common in old Scandinavian oath formulæ, e.g. in the elder redaction of the West-Geatish Law: Svá sé mér goð holl ‘So may the Gods(!) be hold towards me,’ in medieval Norwegian laws (NgL II[197,397]) and Grey-Goose (TODO: cite): Guð sé mér hollr ef ek satt segi, gramr ef ek lýg ‘God be hold towards me if I speak truly, wroth if I lie,’ in Grey-Goose (TODO) also: Sé guð hollr þeim er heldr gríðum, en gramr þeim er gríð rýfr ‘God be hold towards him who keeps the truce, but wroth against him who breaks the truce’. I refer to Löffler (1895) for further discussion on these formulæ.

holdness (ON hylli, OE hylðu, OHG huldi) Abstract noun formed to hold, meaning ‘favour, loyalty, grace,’ with the same semantics as the adjective.

Notably, this word appears three times in connection with the grace of gods in the poetry, namely in Grim 43, where (according to my interpretation) the preparer of food at the blót is said to earn the “holdness of Woulder and of all the gods;” and Grim 53 where the disgraced king Garfrith is said to have been bereft of the support gengi of Weden and all the Oneharriers, and of “Weden’s holdness” (Óðins hylli). “Weden’s holdness” is also mentioned in a stanza by Hallfred (edited as Hfr Lv 7 by Diana Whaley in SkP V), who laments that: “The whole race of man has wrought songs to win the holdness of Weden; I recall the fully rewarded works of our kinsmen/ancestors.”

From the semantics of this word the Germanic view on heavenly grace is clear: the Gods are hold towards those who do good works, which include swearing true oaths, faithfully observing truces, partaking in the blót, following rules of hospitality, and composing poetry—and gram ‘wroth’ towards those who do the opposite.

Home (ON heimr, OE hām, PNWGmc. **haimar*) In the Norse often referring to a realm in the cosmology (Wsp 2: “I remember nine Homes”, Webth TODO: “From the runes of the Ettins and of all the gods I can speak truly, for I have come into each Home”). Thus Ettinham is the ‘Home/realm of the ettins’. When used on its own it means ‘the world (that we inhabit)’. See also Nine Homes, Thrithham.

leat (ON blaut) In some saws explained as the blood drained from the offered animal; the verbal root is hljóta ‘to get by lot’ and this word certainly refers to the use of the blood for auguries.

leat-twig (ON blaut-tǣinn) A twig used to sprinkle the leat. The pattern of the blood would presumably be inspected for the augury; cf. Hyme 1.

leed (ON ljóð, OE léod) A magical chant or incantation, as seen by Higb 153 near-synonymous with galder. See also gale, begale.

manwit (ON man-vit) Common sense and wits.

many-cunning (ON ffjöl-kunnigr) Skilled with sorcery or the dark arts.

meat-nithing (ON mat-niðingr) One who is a nothing with food, i.e. one who does not properly furnish his guest.

See also good of meat.

thule (ON þula) A poetic list, typically of various items of a category (e.g. gods, legendary horses) or poetic synonyms (e.g. for swords, men, Weden). Degoratively also a ditty, poorly composed poem. See thyle.

- thyle (ON þulr, OE þyle, PNWGmc. **þulir*) A sage who through rote learning has acquired a large amount of mythological lore (cf. thule ‘a list in poetic form; a ditty, bad poem’ and thill ‘to recite, to chant’). Thus Weden is the Fimblethyle, being the unbeaten master of lore, as can be seen in his wisdom contests (like Webth). Runic inscription DR 248 (Snoldelev) suggests that the thyle may have tied to a specific place, and in Beow it seems to have been a court position, with the poet Unferth being described (l. 1456) as the “Rothgar’s thyle”.
- wale (ON vplr) The staff or sceptre of a wallow. TODO: archeological finds, mention Sutton Hoo.
- wallow (ON vplva, OE **wealwe* (cf. ON svplva, OE swealwe ‘swallow’)) A sibyl, seeress, oracle. The word derives from the wale, a staff or sceptre probably used for ritual purposes.
- wigh (ON vé, OE wéob, wib, PNWGmc. **wibq*) A holy place or sanctuary. It seems that where the harrow was a pile of stones or cairn used for carrying out rituals, the wigh was an enclosed space. The earliest Norse attestation is the runic inscription Ög N288 (Oklunda), which reads: “Guthar <= Gunnarr> painted these runes, and he fled, charged (with a crime, sought out this wigh, and he fled into this clearing. [...]” The implication seems to be that the wigh was considered so sacred that Guthar could not be apprehended or punished for his crime while in it.
- In OE the word means ‘pagan idol’. It is not immediately clear which meaning is the original one, but in the present edition the Norse sense has been adopted, since the Anglo-Saxon sources are all of a Christian nature. The name Wighstone (Wib- or Wéobstān) as found in Beow in any case suggests it is the Norse meaning, since ‘idol-stone’ makes little sense.
- wode (ON óðr, OE wód, PNWGmc. **wódur*) Heener’s gift to men, though the name may suggest it be from Weden. The word has several related meanings: ‘mind, (poetic) inspiration, rage’. See also Woderearer.
- wyrm (ON ormr, OE wyrm, PNWGmc. **wurmīr*) A dragon, serpent. The distinction between “wyrm” and “worm; snake” is purely editorial and not made in the original languages.
- yin- (ON ginn-) A rare augmentative prefix. TODO.
- yin-holy (ON ginn-heilagr) High holy, sacrosanct. Used of the Gods in the formula ginn-heilög goð ‘yin-holy Gods’.

Persons and objects (P)

- Attle (Attila, ON Atli, OE Ætla, MHG. Etzel, PNWGmc. **Attiló*) The ruler of the Huns (historically from 434–453). Husband of Guthrun, and with her father of Earp and Oatle. and murderer of
- Balder (ON Baldr, OE Bældæg (not directly cognate), OHG Balter, PWGmc. **Baldrar*) The beautiful son of Weden, slayed by his brother Hath, avenged by his other brother Wonnell. Husband of Nan.
- Beadhild (ON Bǫðvildr, OE Beadobild) The daughter of the tyrannical king Nithad. She is raped by her father’s prisoner, Wayland.
- Earp and Oatle (ON Erpr ok Eitill) The sons of Attle and Guthrun.
- Earth (ON jørð, OE eorþe, OHG erda, PNWGmc. **erþu*, PGmc. **erþō*) The personified Earth. By Weden the mother of Thunder.
- Erminric (ON Jǫrmunrekr, OE Eormanric, MHG Ermenrich) Legendary king of the eastern Gots, based on the historical Ermanaric, who died in 376. TODO: Jordanes.

- Fathomer (ON Fáfnir) The son of Rethmar, brother of Otter and Rein. He turns into a great wyrm and is eventually slain by Siward, who takes his treasure.
- Fimblethyle (ON Fimbulþulr) The ‘ultimate thyle’ or sage; name for Weden.
- Foresitter (ON Forseti) An obscure god associated with legal disputes. TODO.
- Free (ON Freyr, OE fréa ‘lord’, PNWGmc. **Frawjar*) Son of Nearth, brother of Frow. See also Ing.
- Frie (ON Frigg, OE **Frige*, OHG Frija, PNWGmc. **Frijju*) Wife of Weden, mother of Balder. Related to Full, who is either her sister (Second Merseburg Charm, though this may be metaphorical, as in Hind 1) or her maid-servant (the Norse sources).
- Frow (ON Freyja) Cat-goddess, daughter of Nearth, sister of Free, wife of Wode. Promised to the Ettin. Possibly = Easter?
- Full (ON Fulla, OHG Folla) Maid-servant (or sister?) of Frie; see there.
- Guthur (ON Gunnarr, MHG Gunther) Brother of Hain.
- Guthrun (ON Guðrún) Daughter of king Yivick, sister of Guthur and Hain. The wife of Attle.
- Hain [Hain 1] (ON Hogni, OE Haguna, Hagena, OHG Hagano, Ger. Hagen, PNWGmc. **Hagunó*) A Nivling and Yivicking, son of king Yivick, brother of Guthur and Guthrun. In Attl he defeats seven warriors before being captured by Attle, who has his heart cut out at the request of Guthur.
- Hain 2 [2] A petty king of East Geatland, contemporary with Granmer, the king of Southmanland and Ingeld Illred, the Ingling king of Upland.
- Hath (ON Hǫðr) The blind son of Weden, the slayer of his brother Balder.
- Heener (ON Hœnir, PNWGmc. Hónijar ‘the little swan(?)’) An obscure god. Rydberg (1886)[552] has convincingly argued that he is connected with the stork, connecting his name with the Greek κύκνος ‘swan’ and Sanskrit śakuna ‘bird of omen’, and noting that his epithets langi fōtr ‘long foot’ and aurkonungr ‘mud-king’ (both found in Scold 22) accurately describe the stork. He gives wode TODO.
- Hell (ON Hell) Owneress of Hell.
- Hindle (ON Hyndla) A witch awoken by Frow in Hind.
- Homedall (ON Hœimdallr, OE **Hámdall*) The Watchman of the gods, whitest of the Eese.
- Hymer (ON Hymir) Tew’s father according to Hyme.
- Ing (ON Yngvi, OE Ing) Probably an older name of Free. The legendary ancestor of the Inglings. Cf. the Old English Rune Poem.
- Life and Lifethrasher (ON Líf ok Líf-þrasir) The only surviving humans after the Rakes of the Reins.
- Lock (ON Loki) The bound Os. TODO.
- Lothar (ON Lóðurr, OS Logapōre, PNWGmc. **Logapōrjar* ‘Flame-darer(?)’) Gives three gifts to man. The Old Saxon attestation is uncertain.
- Millner (ON Mjöllnir, OE **Meldne*, PNWGmc. **Meldunjar*) The hammer of Thunder.
- Moon (ON Máni) The personified moon. Son of Mundlefare and brother of the Sun (Webth 23). For ritual invocations of the Moon see Note to Higb TODO (beiptum kveða).
- Mundlefare (ON Mundilfari) The father of Sun and Moon (Webth 23).
- Nearth (ON Njǫrðr) One of the Wanes. Father of Free and Frow.

- Nithad (ON Niðuðr, OE Níþad, PNWGmc. **Níþa-baduz*) The king that imprisoned Wayland, father of Beadhild and two unnamed sons (Wayl, Deer).
- Oughter (ON Óttarr, OE Óðthere, PNWGmc. **Óhta-harjar*) Legendary Swedish king.
- Rotholf (ON Hrólfr kraki, OE Hrǫpulf, PNWGmc. **Hrópi-wulfar*) A king of the Shieldings (see family tree). As foreshadowed in Beow 1017–9, 1180–90, he betrays the sons of Rothgar, his cousins Rethrich and Rothmund, in order to take the throne for himself. In the later Icelandic tradition this has been forgotten, and he is consistently portrayed as a heroic king.
- Rothgar (ON Hróarr, OE Hrǫpgár, PNWGmc. **Hrópi-gairar*) A king of the Shieldings (see family tree), one of the main characters in Beow.
- Shede (ON Skaði, OE Scede(?), PGmc. **Skadi*) A female figure, possibly the namesake of Shedeny and the Shedelands, in which case she was in an early period closely associated with, and perhaps thought to guard, the Scandinavian (or properly Scadinavian, see Shedeny) peninsula. In the Norse tradition the daughter of Thedse, and later wife of Nearth. Their marriage is the subject of Yilv which preserves.
- Shield (ON Skjöldr, OE Scyld, PNWGmc. **Skelduz*) Legendary Danish king, founder of the Shieldings.
- Syemund (ON Sig-mundr, OE Sige-mund, MHG. Sieg-mund, PNWGmc. **Sigi-mundur*) In the Norse tradition the son of king Walsing. He begets Siward, the slayer of the wyrm Fathomer. In Beow it is Syemund himself who slays an unnamed wyrm. Connected with his nephew Sinfittle.
- Sithguth (OHG Sinthgunt, PNWGmc. **Sinþa-gunþir*(?)) Only known from Mers II as the sister of Sun.
- Siward (ON Sigurðr) A hero of the Walsings, slayer of the wyrm Fathomer.
- Sun (ON Sól, OHG Sunna) The personified Sun, who in the Germanic mythology is a woman. In Webth 22 the daughter of Mundlefare and sister of Moon. In Mers II the sister of Sithguth.
- Thedse (ON Þjatsi) An ettin slain by the Gods; his myth is told at length in Hvl. Father of Shede.
- Thrim (ON Þrymr) Ettin who steals Thunder's hammer in Thrim and is later killed.
- Thunder (ON Þórr, OE Þunor, OHG Donar, PNWGmc. **Þonarar*) Son of Weden and Earth. Friend of men, guarding of Middenyard.
- Tew (ON Týr, OE Tīw) Son of Hymer. One-handed god. The name is not identical to Sanskrit Dyāus, Greek Zeus, Latin Iuppiter.
- Wayland (ON Vǫlundr, OE Wéland, Wélund) A legendary smith captured by the tyrannical king Nithad. In both the Norse Wayl and English Deer he takes his revenge by first killing Nithad's unnamed sons and then raping his daughter Beadhild. In the Norse version he is married to Harware Elwight.
- Webthritner (ON Vaþprúðnir) An Ettin defeated by Weden in the wisdom contest in Webth.
- Weden (rhymes with leaden; ON Óðinn, OE Wóden, Wéden, OHG Wuotan, PNWGmc. **Wóðanar* 'Lord of wode (poetry, intelligence)') Chief of the Eese, God of Wisdom, Galder, Poetry, War. Husband of Frie, and by her father of Balder. Father of Thunder by Earth. Brother of Heener and Lother or Will and Wigh.
- Wider (ON Við-arr, OE **Wīd-here*, PNWGmc. **Wīda-harjar*) Son of Weden, who avenges him at the Rakes of the Reins.
- Wigh (ON Vei, PNWGmc. **Wihā* 'hallower, (heathen) priest') Brother of Weden and Will.

- Will (ON Vili, PNWGmc. **Wiljā*) Brother of Weden and Wigh.
- Wode (ON Óðr, OE Wōd) Obscure husband of Frow. His name looks to be the same word as wode.
- Wonnell (ON Váli, OE **Wonela*, PNWGmc. **Wanilō* ‘the little Wane?’) Son of Weden, who just one night old avenges his brother Balder through slaying Hath, his half-brother.
- Woulder (ON Ullr, **Wuldor*, PNWGmc. **Wulþuz*) A rather obscure god. He is mentioned in connection with oath-rings (TODO) and the setting of ritual fires (Grim TODO). These obscure references are likely related to the interesting finds at Lilla Ullevi (‘the small wigh of Woulder’) in Upland, Sweden, consisting of several dozen fire striker-shaped iron amulet rings dating to 660–780 (for a detailed description see (af Edholm, 2009)).
- Yimer (ON Ymir, OE **Yime*) The primeval ancestor of the Ettins, probably equivalent to Earyelmer. The first Gods slew Yimer and arranged the world out of his corpse.
- Yivick (ON Gjúki, OE Gifca, OHG Gibicho, MHG. Gibeche) King of the Burgends (historically from late 300s–407) of the Nifling dynasty, ancestor of the Yivickings. Father of Guthrun, Guther and Hain.

Groups and tribes (G)

TODO: Map of rough tribal areas. Genealogies.

- All Gods (ON ǫll goð) Occurs especially in ritual or ritual-adjacent use (Grim 43, Lock 11; cf. HathSp 18, where the piety of the dead king Hathkin is shown by his being greeted by rǫð ǫll ok regin ‘all the Redes and Reins’, and the prayer in Syed 2–3, which collectively invokes the Eese and Ossens). This suggests a native Germanic conception of Godly Oneness (Divine Unity); see also the Thing of the Gods, where the Gods convene and together steer the world.

Similar expressions are found in other pre-Abrahamic religions, e.g. the Vedic viṣve devāḥ ‘All Gods’, to Whom are dedicated numerous hymns of RV, and the Greek Πάν·θεον, that is, a temple dedicated to All Gods.

The idea of Godly Oneness may have been disputed; an interesting anecdote is given by Saxo (i.7.2). After Woden departs he is usurped by an obscure figure Mithothin (perhaps “With-Weden”), who reforms the cult:

Cuius secessu Mithothyn quidam prestigiis celeber, perinde ac celesti beneficio vegetatus, occasionem et ipse fingende divinitatis arripuit barbarasque mentes novis erroris tenebris circumfusas prestigiis fama ad ceremonias suo nomini persolvendas adduxit. Hic deorum iram aut numinum violationem confusis permixtisque sacrificiis expiari negabat ideoque eis vota communiter nuncupari prohibebat, discreta superum cuique libamenta constituens. Qui cum Othino redeunte relicta prestigiis ope latendi gratia Pheoniam accessisset, concursu incolarum occiditur.

‘A certain Mithodin, a famous illusionist, was animated at his departure as if by a kindness from heaven and snatched the chance to pretend divinity himself; his reputation for magicianship clouded the barbarians’ minds with the murk of a new superstition and led them to perform holy rites to his name. He asserted that the gods’ wrath and the profanation of their divine authority could not be expiated by confused and mingled sacrifices; so he arranged that they must not be prayed to as a group, but separate offerings (libamenta) be made to each deity. When Odin returned, the other no longer resorted to his conjuring but went off to hide in Funen, where he was rushed upon and killed by the inhabitants.’

It is possible that this account reflects an historical attempted religious reform. It does not appear to have been successful.

- Danes (ON danir, OE dene, PNWGmc. **danír*) A tribe in eastern modern-day Denmark and southern Sweden. They probably originated in Scania in southern Sweden, before moving westwards into the Danish isles and eventually Jutland, driving out the Earls and Jutes. Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO
- Dwarfs (ON dvergar, OE dweorgas, OHG twerca, PNWGmc. **dvergór*) Earthly (chthonic) supernatural beings, often referred to as living in rocks and mountains. Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO
- Eese (rhyming with geese; ON ésir, OE ése, PNWGmc. **ansiwir*; sg. os, ON óss, OE ós, PNWGmc. **ansur*) The (male) gods. Snorre has them as a separate tribe from the Wanes. See also Gods, Tews, Reins. Noted members: Weden, Thunder, Frie, Hath and Balder Attestations: TODO
- Elves (ON alfar, OE ielfe, PNWGmc. **alþír*) Earthly (chthonic) minor deities. Possibly ancestral spirits? Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO
- Ettins (ON jǫtnar, OE eotenas, PNWGmc. **etunór*) The fundamental enemies of the Gods, the agents of chaos and disorder. See Rises, Thurses. Noted members: Hymer, Thrim, Webthritner, Yimer Attestations: TODO
- Geats (ON gautar, OE géatas, PNWGmc. **gautór* from **geut-* ‘to pour’, perhaps ‘the libators’) A tribe in what is today southern-central Sweden. See also Geatland, Swedes. Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO
- yin-Reins (ON ginn-ręgin) yin- + Reins. The sacrosanct, highest Divine Powers.
- Gods (ON göð, OE godu, OHG gota, PNWGmc. **godu*) TODO. Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO
- Huns (ON búnir, OE Húne, OHG Húni, Hunni, PNWGmc. **búnír*) An invading Asiatic tribe in the Migration Period. In the Scandinavian legends they have been assimilated into the Germanic framework, and are not presented as racially or culturally distinct. Noted members: Attle, TODO Attestations: TODO
- Inglings (ON ynlingar, PNWGmc. **ingwalingór* ‘the descendants of Ing’) The oldest known Swedish kingly lineage. The difference between this term and Shelvings is a bit unclear; Beow knows them only by the latter term, while they seem to be used synonymously in the Norse sources.
- Nears (ON njárar -níarar) An old Swedish tribe mentioned in Wayl, where it is ruled by king Nithad. The location may allow us to connect them with the Swedish province of Närke, cf. Old Swedish Nærikjar ‘inhabitants of Närke’, Nærisker ‘belonging to Närke’. The Old Swedish stem nær- (with unclear vowel length, though it is probably long) would then be a reduced form of níar-, njár-.
- Norns (ON nornir) Supernatural women responsible for the fates (orlays) of men. Probably synonymous with Dises, Mothers.
- Ossens (ON ósynjur) The wives of the Eese, the goddesses.
- Oneharriers (ON ęin-ęerjar, OE **án-ęergas*) Weden’s chosen warriors, probably corresponding to the Vedic Maruts. The Ownharriers have some agency (Grim TODO) and were probably also invoked in rituals. Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO
- Reins (ON ęgn, ęgin) The heavenly powers. Judging from Webth TODO the term may be more closely associated with the Wanes than the Eese.
- Saxons (ON saxar, OE Seaxan, Seaxe) TODO. Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO
- Shieldings (ON skjöldungar, OE Scyldingas, PNWGmc. **skeldungór*) The descendants of Shield; the legendary Danish royal dynasty. With Harward’s death after his slaying of Rotholf their rule ended. TODO Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO

- Shelvings (ON skilfingar, OE scilfingas, PNWGmc. **skilþingór*) The descendants of Shelf; the legendary Swedish royal dynasty. The exact difference between the terms Shelvings and Inglings is unclear, but the first may have referred to the old royal family in Sweden, while the latter to the Norwegian branch which claimed descent from the former. TODO Noted members: TODO Attestations: Hind 15, 20
- Swedes (ON sviár, OE swéon, PNWGmc. **swihanír*) The tribe around the Mälar valley in eastern Sweden. Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO
- Thurses (sg. Thurse; ON þurs, OE þyrs, OS thuris, OHG duris, PNWGmc. **þurisaz*) Possibly a poetic synonym for Ettins. See also Rime-Thurses. Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO
- Tews (ON tívar, PNWGmc. **tíwór*) A poetic synonym for Gods. Attestations: TODO
- Walsings (ON vǫlsungar) The descendants of king Walsing.
- Wanes (ON vanir, OE wan-?) A subgroup or tribe of the gods, associated with fertility, harvests and the sea. Noted members: Nearth, Free, Frow Attestations: TODO
- Yivickings (ON gjúkungar) The descendants of Yivick, including Guther, Guthrun and Hain. Attestations: TODO

Places and events (L)

- Eastern Way (ON Austr-vegr) In the mythology the eastern lands of the Ettins, to which Thunder goes to fight the Ettins and protect the realms of Gods and men. Probably the same as Ettinham. In Scandinavian (especially Swedish) runic inscriptions this word refers to Eastern Europe and Asia.
- Ettinham (ON Jǫtun-heimr, Jǫtna-heimar) The ‘Ettin-Home’ or ‘home of the Ettins’; the eastern realm of chaotic and inhospitable beings. See also Eastern Way, Outyards.
- Fimble-winter (ON fimbulvetr) The great winter, which kills all humans apart from Life and Lifethrasher.
- Geatland (ON Gaut-land, Gauta-land) The land of the Geats.
- Hell (ON hēl, PNWGmc. **halju*, Got. halja) The Underworld, personified as and formally identical to Hell. After the arrival of Christianity the word came to refer to the Christian hell-fire (= Gebenna), which is the case in all attested languages apart from the Old Norse. See also Nivelhell.
- Middenyard (ON Mið-garðr, OE Middan-geard, OS Middil-gard, OHG Mittil-gart, Got. midjun-gards) The ‘Middle Enclosure’; the realm of men. See also Osyard, Outyards.
- Nivelhell (ON nifl-hēl) ‘Mist-Hell’. From the poetic evidence it seems like it may originally have been a synonym for Hell.
- Osyard (ON Ós-garðr) The ‘Enclosure of the Eese’; the heavenly realm. See also Middenyard, Outyards.
- Outyards (ON Út-garðar) Not Eddic. The ‘Outer Enclosures’, described in Yilv. See also Ettinham, Middenyard, Osyard.
- Rakes of the Reins (ON ragna røk) The ‘ultimate events of the Reins’, euphemism for the destruction of the world.
- Rakes of the Tews (ON tíva røk) See Rakes of the Reins.

Thing of the Gods (ON þing goða) The Divine Council or Assembly, where the Gods convene and make decisions; a conception well known from Near Eastern literature. Like the historical Germanic assemblies, the Thing is only attended by the male Eese, whereas the Ossens are á máli ‘at speech’ (Bldr 1, Thrim 14). The Thing is held every day at Ugdrassle’s Ash; Thunder wades to it, and the other Eese ride to it (Grim 29–30). Thirteen Gods were present at the Thing: Weden, Thunder, Nearth, Free, Tew, Homedall, Bray, Wider, Wonnell, Woulder, Heener, Foresitter, Lock (Yilv TODO). With Lock excluded this makes twelve, which corresponds to the Old Germanic jury of twelve men.

The Germanic Thing of the Gods has Near Eastern equivalents, including in the Hebrew Bible. TODO.

Occurrences: Wsp 6, 9, etc; Bldr 1; Grim 29–30; Thrim 14; Hyme 39.

Thrithham (ON Þrúð-heimr) Thunder’s home. See thrith.

Ugdrassle’s Ash (ON askr Yggdrasils) The noblest tree; the site of the Thing of the Gods.

Up-heaven (ON upp-biminn, OE up-beofon, OS upp-bimil, OHG úf-bimil) Highest Heaven; used in Earth and Up-heaven.

Walhall (ON Valhǫll, OE Wælheall) The Hall of the Slain owned by Weden and inhabited by the Oneharriers.

Poetic formulæ (F)

All formulæ are given in English translation, their attested forms and a Proto-Germanic rendition. For those consisting of two words bound together by a conjunction, & is written in its place.

Earth and Up-heaven (ON jørð & uppbiminn, OE eorpe & upbeofon, PGmc. **erþō & uphminaz*) An ancient poetic merism, i.e. “the whole world, cosmos”. It has a particular connection to the creation and destruction of the world, and in prayers. ON: Wsp 3/3, Webth 20, Thrim 2, DR EM85;49 (under Galders), Sö 154 (under Miscellaneous Runic Poetry), Ordr 17; OE: Acreboot; OS: Healend 2886; OHG: Wessobrunner Hymn 2.

Eese and Elves (ON ésir & alfar, OE ése & ielfe, PNWGmc. **alþír & ansiwīr*) A merism; both heavenly and earthly spiritual beings. Notably the two words always occur in this order (never ‘Elves and Eese’), even in OE.

words and works (ON orð & verk, OE word & weorc, PGmc. **wurdó & werkó*) Beow 289, 1100, 1833
