Notes to English translation

Point about literal translation for use by scholars of comparative mythology The “guiding star” of this translation effort has been literality and consistency. All previous translations (to my knowledge) have such issues as: rendering identically repeated phrases differently at various places; covering up or obscuring technical and cultural terminology; simplifying kennings and other expressions—and this often without notes, to a point where the original meaning is, at times, unrecognizable. While I wholly encourage all readers of sufficient interest to study Old Norse (and other ancient Germanic languages!), perhaps even using this edition as a tool, I also realize that this is a demanding ask which not all interested students and scholars of comparative mythology, anthropology, literature, religion and other fields will be able to fulfill. I therefore want these groups to be able to have a text that is as close to the original as possible, at the very least when it regards sense and expression.

English proper nouns

One of the most idiosyncratic parts of this edition will be its handling of proper nouns. I have opted to render all cultural and religious terms, names of places, heroes, gods, and other entities by their English cognates (thus Thunder for Old Norse Þórr) and where such do not exist, their philologically expected English (Anglish) forms (e.g. wallow for Old Norse vǫlva). One reason for this is ideological. I believe that these myths and poems are a common Germanic or Northern European heritage, and should be treated as such. The English once knew gods such as Woden and Thunder, and called them by names naturally evolved in their language. So too did the Germans and Scandinavians, of course, and I would hope that any translators into those languages would follow this spirit and render the names in their natural forms there as well.¹ Another is philological. Forms like Odin and Thor are, while now commonly accepted, abberant. They do not even represent the Old Norse pronunciation as accurate as would be possible (for instance, Odin would be better anglicized as Othin), and many are difficult for English speakers to pronounce.

Notes to critical edition

My goal with the critical editing of the texts has been to produce something as close to the original manuscripts as possible, without excessive emendation to the preserved recension(s). There are texts in three (TODO) languages in this edition, these being Old Norse, Old English and Old High German. Old Norse texts have been normalized according to roughly the same orthography as Finnur Jónsson (1932). On the other hand the Old High German and Old English texts have only been lightly normalized, correcting obvious errors and marking vowel length with acute accents. For further information see below.

Normalization

Normalization of Old Norse

The orthography is inspired by Finnur Jónsson (1932) in that it strives for a more archaic form than the manuscripts, one that accords with the date at which the poetry may have been composed. The standard is more similar to that of the First Grammatical Treatise (see (First Grammatician, 1950)) than the standard Old Icelandic orthography seen in most editions. Thus we for consistency make use of ó and ē rather than the traditional œ and æ, to represent the result of i-umlaut on Proto-Norse ō and ā. Superfluous and hypermetrical pronouns (usually ek, hann, hōn) have in many places been removed. When metrically beneficent ek 'I', and es (particle) 'which, that, where, when', es (3rd sg. pres. ind. of vesa 'to be') have been contracted to 'k and 's.

¹For instance in German perhaps Wuten, Donner, Froh, in Swedish Oden, Tor, Frö.

Manuscripts

Eddic poetry

There are two surviving ancient manuscripts which contain full Eddic poems.

The first and most important is GKS 2365 4to, here R. It dates to the 1270s and has 45 surviving leaves, containing TODO poems. Of these 10 are mythological, and the rest heroic, dealing with legends mostly of the Migration Period. Notably, following fol. 32, there is a large gap of missing pages. This occurs in the heroic section, specifically cutting off Sighdrive. It is unclear how many leaves and poems went missing. R is not just a compilation of poems, it shows editorial input as well. Several of the mythological poems are separated by short prose sections, which tie them together into a loose frame narrative, though it is clear from their style and composition that they are originally separate works. When it comes to the heroic poems long prose sections occur both within and between them, creating a saw^C-like narrative where the prose in many cases holds up the poetry, rather than the reverse. For further literature see TODO.

The second manuscript is AM 748 I a 4to, here A. It dates to the 1300s and has just 6 leaves. A, as we have it, contains only mythological poems, and in a different order from R; it has no frame narrative. On the first two leaves are contained Hoarbeard (which lacks its beginning), Dreams and Shirner (lacking its ending). After this some number of leaves have gone missing, but the other four leaves follow each other. On them we find Webthriðner (lacking its beginning), Grimner Hymer and the prose introduction of Wayland. A is the only medieval manuscript attesting Dreams, and further its other poems are not copied from R, but rather derive from a shared ancestor. This fact makes it very valuable for textual criticism. For further literature see TODO.

Some Eddic poems survive only in younger paper manuscripts. These being: TODO. While I have not consulted the paper mss. for poems attested in medieval mss., I have had to rely on them for these poems. Their exclusive survival there does not necessarily prove them works of late antiquarians; had we not been fortunate enough to have Dreams in A, it would have been counted among them, yet we now know that it is truly ancient. It is not an impossibility that other poems now only found in paper mss. would have survived in now lost medieval mss., perhaps even in the lost pages of R or A.

Finally several Eddic poems are quoted in Yilfer, these being (TODO): WSpae, Webthriðner, Grimner. It also contains a few fragments, which have also been edited. For Yilfer I have relied on the following four main mss.:

1. The Codex Regius of the Prose Edda S (GKS 2367 4to; 1300-1350)
2. The Codex Trajectinus T (Traj 1374; a c. 1595 paper copy of a ms. closely related to S.)

3. The Codex Wormianus W (AM 242 fol.; 1340–70)
4. The Codex Upsaliensis U (DG 11; 1300–25)

For sake of brevity I refer to these four collectively as G, which is thus equivalent to STWU. I refer to Haukur Þorgeirsson (2017) for discussion on their internal stemmatics and origins.

West Germanic poetry

As none of the West Germanic poems edited here (TODO: Will we be editing other poems than Hildebrandslied?) survive in more than one copy, the specific details of their transmission is discussed in their individual Introductions.

Mythic poetry

The Spae of the Wallow (Völuspó)

The Spæc^C of the Wallow^C is the most comprehensive mythological text surviving from Heathen times. It takes the form of the monologue by a wallow (vǫlva ‘seeress, sibyl, prophetess’), summoned by Woden in order to relate mythological knowledge. In this it fits closely with poems such as Webthrithner, Grimner, Dreams Sigdrive and Allwise, but also differs from them in several ways: it is not a dialogue or riddle contest (this it shares with Grimner), the meter is in Fornwordslaw, and it gives an otherwise unparalleled chronological overview of the mythology.

Still, events are related in a highly allusive fashion, and not all references are clear. There may also be gaps and later inserts that obscure the understanding of the whole.

The poem is attested in full in two independent recensions. The first is R (GKS 2365 4to; 1270s), where it is the first poem, found on folios 1r–3r. Second is Hawksbook, H (AM 544 4to; 1300–75), where it is found at 20r–21r in the middle of a large collection of saws and Catholics works. Many verses are also cited in Yilfer, which here has the general siglum G—to avoid confusion, it is only used when all employed witness mss. agree. See further the General Introduction.

The poem begins with a bid for silence (1), and the wallow recalling her earliest memories (2). She then recounts the ordering of the world by the gods (3–6) and the golden age of peace and plenty (7–8), which is, however, interrupted by the intrusion of three unidentified ettin-maidens (8, and see note there). After this follow two verses about the shaping of the dwarfs (9–10), and then several originally separate dwarf-tallies (11–15), which are without doubt later inserts. Returning to the main narrative thread is described the creation and endowment of the first man and woman (16–17), the Ash of Ugdassle (18), and the three norns^G living under it (19).

This is where the two full recensions of the poem diverge. Because of its older age and larger count of verses I have here followed the order of R: the wallow recalls how a woman named Goldwey was sacrificed and reborn three times (20), and how she, under the name Heath, practiced sorcery and witchcraft (21). She then recalls the first war in the world, between the Ease and Wanes (22–23), and alludes to the slaying of the smith, who according to Yilfer 42 was promised Frow^P and the sun and moon in exchange for building the wall of Osyard (24–25). This is followed by a cryptic verse describing Homedall’s hidden silence or hearing (26).

In H the structure is quite different. After the description of the norns (19), the Ease go to decide what action to take regarding the promising of Frow to the ettin (my 24–25), and Homedall’s hearing is described (26). Then follows the two verses about the old hag in Ironwood who raises the wolves that will swallow the sun and moon (40–41). After this come verses 20–23 in the same order as R (see above).

To illustrate the differences between mss., and which verses are attested in which, I have prepared the following table showing the order of verses by manuscript, compared to this edition. As most verses in G are quoted on their own, and have little relation to the original order, these are simply marked with plus signs. When verses are quoted in a series, they are preceded by an alphabetically incrementing letter denoting which series they belong to.

When there is a major difference in a ms. relative to the ed., such as in v. 10 where G omits the first two lines, it is then marked with a star. The verses beginning with Þá gingu rēgin ǫll ‘Then went the Reins all’ are represented by the following sentence.

- RH 1 „Hljóðs bið’k allar · hęlgar kindir,
 2 męiri ok minni · mogu Hęimdallar;
 vildu at, Valfǫðr, · vęl fram tęlja’k

“For hearing I ask all holy kindreds, greater and lesser, sons of Homedall^a [MEN]! Wilt thou, Walfather <= Weden>, that I well count forth the ancient tidings of men, those which I foremost recall?^b

1 hęlgar] om. R

2 męiri ok minni ‘greater and lesser’] It is unclear what is being modified. It may either be “greater and lesser holy kindreds”, in which case it may be equivalent to the phrase Ease and Elves^G (both earthly and heavenly supernatural beings; see Index for occurrences.) or “the greater and lesser sons of Homedall”, in which case it refers to all social classes. In any case the wallow is asking all intelligent beings that may be present for silence, and the expression is a merism of the type ‘gods and men’; see West (2007)[99-100].

^aCf. Righ, wherein Righ, identified by the prose as Homedall, sires three castes of men (namely earls, churls and thralls).

^bCf. Webthriðner 34, 35 with very similar phrasing. The whole introductory formula is positively Indo-European, see West (2007)[63,92-93,312].

4 ór brimi ... læggjum] I think that the poem simply telling of “the bloody surf” and “the blue-black legs” fits better with its general allusive style, but the resulting composite reading may be somewhat controversial.

^aAccording to Yilfer 14 the dwarfs first originated as maggots in the corpse of Yimer, whose bones are described in Grimner TODO and Webthritbner TODO as being used to make rocks. Dwarfs dwell in the rocks and earth; cf. for instance IngT 2, where the Swedish king Swayther (Sveigðir disappears into a rock in pursuit of a dwarf. More difficult to explain is the creation of dwarfs out of Yimer’s blood (which according to Grimner TODO and Webthritbner TODO is the sea), since dwarfs are never said to dwell in water. — If one chooses the reading Bláinn ‘Blown’ (named in the thules^C as a dwarf) instead of blǫm ‘blue-black’, then following Gurevich (Skp 2017, p. 693) one may see a kenning “the legs of Blown <dwarf> [STONE]”. Blown has otherwise been read as a poetic name for Yimer, but that is never attested elsewhere.

3–4 þeir ... sagði “They ... said.”] There are two conflicting forms of the verse. Either the dwarfs were created on their own; this is supported by the prose of Yilfer (see note to last v.) and by the form of its verse. On the other hand, both R and H have the “worthiest” dwarfs Moodsowner and Dorn shaping “man-likenesses” out of soil. I have gone with the latter reading, but both should be considered.

Two lists of dwarfs. That both belonged to the original poem is impossible, since several names (Oakenshield, Great-grandfather) appear in both. The three following verses seem to belong together, since there is no repetition of names. From the last line of the middle one, it seems that it should have been placed at the end of the group.

^aA standard genealogical introduction (compare HalT 1). The (patrinlineal) line of dwarfs is to be counted back to their progenitor, Loffer. This possibly disagrees with v. 10, where Moodsowner is said to be the foremost (and presumably the oldest) of the dwarfs, and Loffer is not mentioned.

He^a fills himself with the life of fey^C men; he reddens the abode of the Reins^G with red gore. Black becomes the sunshine about the summers afterwards^b; the storms all woeful—know ye yet, or what?

^aThe wolf.

^bAfter the sun is swallowed. But since the wallow does not tell us that this is a different wolf (it seems rather it be one and the same), it may reflect an earlier version of the myth, where one son of Fenner swallowed both the sun and moon. Yet, according to Webbthritner 36-37 it is Fenner himself who will swallow the sun (and thus likely the moon as well,) unless it there be taken as a poetic synonym for ‘wolf’ (which undoubtedly is its original meaning). ^aIt seems likely that the order found in Yilfer is original. After Thunder (appropriately kenned ‘Middenyard's wigh-ward’) is slain, the Ettins take over the lands and make farming impossible. Cf. Thrim 18: “Shortly the Ettins will settle Osyard, unless thou thy hammer for thyself dost fetch!”

^bThunder, mortally wounded, struggles nine steps away from the Worm before he falls. See note to previous verse.

“Uncountable winters before the earth would be created, then Bearyelmer was born. That I first remember, when the learned ettin on the tree-trunk was laid.^a”

1–4 Ørófi ... lagiðr] The whole verse is quoted in Ylfir.

^aThe reference here is obscure. According to the prose of Ylfir after the sons of Byre^P (that is, Weden^P, Will^P and Wigh^P) slew Yimer, so much blood flew from his wounds that all the race of Ettins were drowned, save for Bearyelmer and his family, who survived by getting up on his lúðr. In regular prose, lúðr usually means ‘trumpet’, but it can also refer to a hollow tree-trunk. Considering the transitive nature of Bearyelmer being laid (oflagiðr) on it, it could rather be interpreted as describing a boat burial, in which case the first thing Webthritner remembers would be Bearyelmer’s funeral.

1 manngi] manni RA is impossible; a nominative is needed

^aWebthrithner realizes that he was bound to die (f̥ęigr ‘fey’, a word with strong fatalistic connotations) from the moment he proposed the wager (v. 19), as no being can outwit Weden.

^bThe same word-wisdom Weden in v. 5 set out to try.

^c*verr* literally means ‘husband, man,’ but here surely in the broader sense of ‘(male) being’. For other instances of gods being called men, see TODO.

“Be not silent, wallow! Thee I wish to ask; until all is known I wish to know further: Who will for the evil-doing get revenge on Hath, or bear onto the pyre Balder's bane [= Hath]?”

[Wallow quoth:]

- 11 „Rindr berr Vála · í vestrsǫlum,

^aNote the similarity with WSpae 34–35 and the irregularity of the verse length, which may suggest that a line (most likely 2) has been inserted.

“Ride home Weden, and be renowned!^a So may no other man come again to visit [me], when loose, Lock passes out of his bonds, and [at] the Rakes of the Reins^P, the renders come.^b”

^aA sarcastic statement, the sense being: “Your renown, Weden, will not save you.”

^bThe rjúfęndr ‘renders’ are presumably Surt and Lock with his children, as described in WSpae 40 ff. The root rjúf- ‘CV: to break, rip up, break a hole in’ is also used in this context in Webbithner TODO: þá’s rjúfask řęgin ‘when the Reins^G are rent’, Grimner 4, Lock TODO and Sigbdrive TODO: unz (of) rjúfask řęgin ‘until the Reins are rent’, all of which attest to this formula. Related is likely also.

Late verses in paper manuscripts? TODO

The Speeches of the High One (Hávamól)

The Speeches of the High One is the second poem of R, which is also the only ancient manuscript in which it is attested. Several verses are however cited in other places, such as Eyv Hák (TODO: formatting) 21 and FbrS TODO.

The poem as it currently comes down to us hardly seems like a single composition, much rather like a grab bag of traditional verses and poems associated with the god Weden. It combines two separate advice-poems with verses concerning Weden's love adventures, runes and spells. Little unites these various strands other than their speaker.

Following previous authors, I identify several such strands, excepting various lone insert-verses. In this edition each of them is given a separate, short introduction:

- 1–79 The Guest-strand, containing practical life advice placed within a frame narrative of a guest arriving at a homestead.
- 81–89 Other verses of advice, mostly composed in Fornwordslaw.
- 90–109 Weden's love adventures, advice for love and seduction.
- 110–135 The Speeches of Loddfathomer (Loddfáfnismól), advice given to Loddfathomer.
- 136–144 The Rune-tally (Rúnatal), various verses relating to runes.
- 145–163 The Leed-tally (Ljóðatal), Weden's listing of 18 spells.
- 164 Final verse, composed when the poem as we have it was assembled.

Whatever their origins, it is clear from the final verse that they have been thought of as a single work, but it is notable that this verse, which also contains the title Hávamól 'Speeches of the High One', is highly metrically irregular. It has likely been composed by the person who assembled the disparate elements listed above into one text.

The Guest-strand

The Guest-Strand (Old Norse: Gestapáttir) is possibly the finest work in Norse poetry. Sadly, its structure has been obscured by various inserted and possibly displaced verses. My hope is to shed some light on the original vision behind the poem, while as usual not changing the order of verses as they appear in the only surviving witness manuscript.

The poem moves through many elements of life, but in a poetically almost seamless way. To move from one topic to another, the poet often employs transitions where a verse recalls the structure of the previous one, but with a new subject. This is particularly evident in verses 4–5 and 10–11.

The strand begins with a verse encouraging travellers to be wary of entering strange houses without first spying out who is inside (1), after which a voice inside of a farmstead

(possibly Weden?) announces that a guest is waiting to be let in (2). The same speaker then lists several things which the newly arrived guest needs from the host, namely: fire, food and clothes (3), water, a towel, a great welcome, a good reception, an opportunity to speak and silence in return (4).

After this focus shifts to the conduct of the wanderer, with an introductory verse explaining that he needs wit (specifically manwit^C (manvit); see Index), lest he become a laughing-stock (5). He should be silent but attentive, and choose his words carefully (6–7). He should be confident in himself and his own decisions, and not rely too much on the opinions of others (8–9), since there is nothing better one may bring along on the journey than much manwit (10).

Here the advice moves to the subject alcohol. Where the best thing one may bring along on the journey is manwit, the worst is too much ale (11). It is not as good as men call it (12) since it “robs [them] of their senses”. It is even personified as a “heron of forgetfulness” (13). Thusly drinking round is best when the participants do not drink too much, but rather regain their senses afterwards (14).

Without a transition the poet moves to war.

 2 hvar skal sitja sjá?
 mjök es bráðr · sá's á brøndum skal
 4 síns of fręista frama.

Hail the givers,^a a guest is come in! Where shall this one sit? Very impatient is he, who on the fires shall try his distinction.^b ^aThe hosts.

^bPossibly referring a Norwegian folk custom, wherein a guest would sit down on the wood-pile outside of the door, waiting until being let in. See further TODO SOME ARTICLE on this custom. The speaker thus announces to the hosts that a frozen, wet and tired guest has arrived and currently sits impatiently on the wood-pile, and ought to be taken in.

- 3 Elds es þor̥f · þeim's inn es kominn
 2 ok á knéi kalinn,
 matar ok váða · es manni þor̥f,
 4 þeim's hefr of fjall farit.

Of fire is there need for the one who is come in, and cold about the knees; of food and of clothing is there need for the man who over the fell has fared.

- 4 Vats es þor̥f · þeim's til verðar kōmr,
 2 þer̥ru ok þjóðlaðar,
 góðs of óðis, · —ef sér geta mētti—
 4 orðs ok endrþøgu.

Of water is there need for the one who comes for a meal; of a towel and of a great welcome; of a good reception—if he might get one—of speech, and of silence in return.^a ^aThere is a well thought-out linear progression throughout this verse. The guest must first wash himself, then dry himself with a towel, then be welcomed to sit and eat at the table and speak with the host. The host has done his part, and now it is the guest's turn. This nicely leads the transition to the following verses, where the proper conduct of the guest (first in speech, and then in various other areas) is discussed.

- 5 Vits es þor̥f · þeim's víða ratar;
 2 dēlt es heima hvat;
 at augabragði · verðr sá's ekki kann
 4 ok með snotrum sitr.

Of wit is there need for the one who widely roams; everything is easy at home. A laughing-stock^a becomes he who nothing knows, and among the clever sits.

^aAn idiom, augabragði lit. 'twinkling of an eye, moment'.

- 6 At hyggjandi sinni · skyli-t maðr hrósinn vesa,
 2 heðr getinn at geði,
 þá's horskr ok þøguill · kōmr heimisgarða til,
 4 sjaldan verðr víti vorum.
 því't óbrigðra vin · fēr þú aldrigi,
 6 an manvit mikit.

Of his thinking should man not be boastful; rather guarding of his senses, when sharp and silent he comes to a homestead; sudden injury seldom strikes the wary, (for thou gettest never an unfickler friend, than much manwit^C.)

5–6 því ... mikit] The shift in person from third to second, along with the abnormal verse length (six lines instead of four), indicates that this is an insertion.

7 Hinn vari gęstr, · es til verðar kęmr,
2 þunnu hljóði þęgir;
ęyrum hlýðir, · ęn augum skoðar,
4 svá nýsisk fróðra hvęrr fyrir.

The wary guest—when for a meal he comes—with thin heed shuts up.^a With ears he heeds, but with eyes observes; so pries each learned man about.

^ai.e. is in attentive silence.

8 Hinn es sęll, · es sér of getr
2 lof ok líknstafi;
óðęlla es við þat, · es ęiga skal
4 annars brjóstum í.

The one is blessed, who for himself gets praise and staves of grace. Uneasy 'tis regarding that which one shall own in another's breast.

9 Sá es sęll, · es sęalfr of á
2 lof ok vit meðan lífir;
því't ill rọð · hęfr maðr opt þęgit
4 annars brjóstum ór.

That one is blessed, who himself owns praise and wits while he lives, for ill counsels has man oft taken out of another's breast.

10 Byrði bętri · berr-at maðr brautu at,
2 an sé manvit mikit;
auði bętra · þykkir þat í ókunnum stað;
4 slíkt es válaðs vera.

A better burden bears man not on the road than much manwit. In an unknown place it seems better than wealth; such is the refuge of the impoverished.

- 11 Byrði bętri · berr-at maðr brautu at,
 2 an sé manvit mikit;
 vegnest verra · vegr-a vęlli at,
 4 an sé ofdrykkja ęls.

A better burden bears man not on the road than much manwit. Worse provision he drags not along on the plain^a than a too great drink of ale.

^a*vęllr* 'plain, (uncultivated) field' is repeated in vv. 38 and 49. It is easily understood that the heaths and plains of Iron Age Norway were particularly unsafe places, where a traveller needed to keep his wits with him lest he fall victim to robbers or murderers.

- 12 Es-a svá gótt, · sęm gótt kveða,
 2 ęl alda sonum;
 því't fęra vęit, · es fęira drekkr,
 4 síns til ęęðs gumi.

'Tis not so good, as good they say, ale for the sons of men; for the less he knows, as the more he drinks, man of his own senses.

- 13 Óminnisęgri ęęitir, · sá's yfir ęlðrum þrumir,
 2 hann stelr ęęði guma;
 þess fęgls fjęðrum · ęk fjętraðr vas'k
 4 í garði Gunnlaðar.

The heron of forgetfulness is called he who above ale-feasts hovers; he robs men of their senses.^a With that bird's feathers I was fettered in the yards of Guthlathe.

^aHere drunkenness is personified as a bird, a "heron of forgetfulness".

- 14 ęlr ęk varð, · varð ęfręlvi,
 2 at hins fróða Fjalars;
 því ęs ęlðr bazt, · at aptr of ęęimtir
 4 hvęrr sitt ęęð gumi.

Drunk I became—I became the drunkest by far—at the learned Fealer's [home]. Thus is an ale-feast best, as each man recovers his senses.

- 15 Þagalt ok hugalt · skyli þjóðans barn
 2 ok vígdjarft vesa;
 glaðr ok reifr · skyli gumna hværr,
 4 unz sinn bíðr bana.

Silent and thoughtful should the ruler's child be, and battle-bold. Glad and cheerful should each man be, until he suffer his bane.

- 16 Ósnjallr maðr · hyggsk munu ey lifa,
 2 ef við víg varask;
 en elli gefr hōnum · engi frið,
 4 þótt hōnum gēirar gefi.

The unvalorous man thinks he will forever live, if he of war is wary; but old age gives him no peace, although spears might give [him].^a ^aHe might have been spared by the spears, but death will still find him. The underlying meaning seems to be that since death is unavoidable it is better to live bravely, even if one risks dying in battle, than to live cowardly and die of old age. This verse connects well to the ancient view of the 'straw-death'.

- 17 Kópir aǵlapi, · es til kynnis kōmr,
 2 þylsk hann umb eða þrumir;
 alt es senn, · ef sylg of getr,
 4 uppi es þá gēð guma.

Gapes the oaf when to visit he comes; he mumbles about or loiters. All at once—if a sip he gets—are the senses of the man exposed.

- 18 Sá einn v̥eit, · es víða ratar
 2 ok hefr f̥jǫlð of farit,
 hveṛju gēði · stýrir gumna hværr,
 4 sá es vitandi 's vits.

He alone knows, who widely roams, and has travelled much: his own senses does each man control, who is aware of his wits.

- 19 Haldi-t maðr á keri, · drekki þó at hófi mjöð,
 2 mēli þarft eða þegi;
 ókynnis þess · vār þik ęngi maðr,
 4 at gangir snimma at sofa.

Man ought not to hold onto the cask, yet drink a fitting serving of mead; he ought to speak the needful or shut up.^a For that uncouthness will no man blame thee, that thou go early to sleep.

^aIdentical to a certain verse in Webbtrithner TODO: which one

- 20 Gróðugr halr, · nema ęðs viti,
 2 etr sér aldrtręga;
 opt fęr hlógis, · es með horskum kęmr,
 4 manni ęęimskum magi.

The gluttonous man—unless he know his sense—eats himself a life-sorrow. Oft the belly—when among the sharp he comes—brings a foolish man ridicule.

- 21 Hjarðir þat vitu, · nęr ęęim skulu,
 2 ok ganga þá af ęasi;
 ęn ósviðr maðr · kann ęvagi
 4 síns of mál maga.

Herds know when homewards they shall [turn], and then part from the grass; but an unwise man never knows the measure of his own belly.

- 22 Vesall maðr · ok illa skapi
 2 hlęr at hvívętna;
 hitki hann vęit, · es vita þyrpti,
 4 at hann es-a vamma vanr.

The wretched man, and the ill-spirited, laughs at whatever. This he knows not, which he might need to know: he is not free of blemishes.

- 23 Ósviðr maðr · vakir umb allar nētr
 2 ok hygg̃r at hvívetna;
 þá es móðr, · es at morni kōmr;
 4 alt es víl sēm vas.

The unwise man is awake for all nights, and thinks of whatever. Then he is weary when the morning comes; [his] trouble is all as it was.

- 24 Ósnotr maðr · hyggr sér alla vesa
 2 viðrhléjendr vini;
 hitki hann fiðr, · þótt þeir of hann fár lesi,
 4 ef með snotrum sitr.

The unclever man thinks all who laugh with him friends. This he finds not, that they speak poorly of him, if among the clever he sits.

- 25 Ósnotr maðr · hyggr sér alla vesa
 2 viðhléjendr vini;
 þá þat fiðr · es at þingi kōmr,
 4 at á formélendr faa.

The unclever man thinks all who laugh with him friends. Then he finds—when to the Thing^C he comes—that he has spokesmen^a few.

^aMen ready to take his side.

- 26 Ósnotr maðr · þykkisk alt vita,
 2 ef á sér i vó veru;
 hitki hann vçit, · hvat hann skal við kveða,
 4 ef hans freista firar.

The unclever man seems to know everything if he takes refuge in a nook. This he knows not, what he shall say in return if men test him.

- 27 Ósnotr maðr, · es með aldir kōmr,
 2 þat 's bazt at hann þegi;

4 engi þat veit, · at hann ekki kann, nema hann méli til mart.
 6 veit-a maðr, · hinn's vetki veit, þótt hann méli til mart.

The unclever man, when among people he comes, 'tis best that he shut up. None knows that he nothing knows, unless he speak too much. Man knows not, who nothing knows, although he speak too much.^a ^aThat is, mindless speech will not make him any wiser.

28 Fróðr sá þykkisk, · es fregna kann,
 2 ok segja hit sama,
 eyvitu leyna · megu yta synir
 4 því es gengr of guma.

Learned seems he who can ask and answer the same. Naught may the sons of men conceal of that^a which goes about a man.

^aRumours and gossip.

29 Örna melir, · sá's éva þegir,
 2 staðlausu stafi;
 hraðmelt tunga, · nema haldendr egi,
 4 opt sér ógótt of gelr.

Quite enough speaks he—who never shuts up—utterings of absurdity. A quick-spoken tongue—unless it be held in place^a—oft sings evil [into being] for itself.

^alit. 'unless holders own it' or 'unless it own holders'. The 'holders' may perhaps refer to the teeth holding the tongue in places.

30 At augabragði · skal-a maðr annan hafa,
 2 þótt til kynnis komi;
 margr fróðr þykkisk, · ef freginn es-at 4 ok nái þurrfjallr þruma.

As a laughing-stock shall man not have another, although he come to visit. Many a one seems learned if he is not asked, and manages to loiter about dry-skinned.^a

2 þótt “although”] Perhaps an error? es ‘when’ would surely work better in context.

^aThis sense of fall is apparently almost non-existent in Old Norse literature, but compare Swedish ffäll ‘scale (on fish and reptiles)’. The meaning is in any case figurative, equivalent to the English “get one’s feet wet”.

31 Fróðr þykkisk · sá’s flóttu tēkr
 2 gęstr at gęst hęðinn;
 vęit-a gęrla · sá’s of verði glissir,
 4 þótt með gręmum glami.

Learned seems he who takes to flight^a when a guest at a guest is scoffing. He knows not clearly, who grins above the food, that he with fiends be prattling.

^aProbably not literally, rather “pulls back, does not take part”.

32 Gumnar margir · erusk gagnhollir,
 2 ęn at virði vrekask;
 aldar róg · þat mun ę vesa;
 4 órir gęstr við gęst.

Many men are loyal to each other, but over a meal drive each other away. The strife of mankind will that ever be; guest raves against guest.

33 Árliga verðar · skyli maðr opt fáa,
 2 nema til kynnis komi;
 sittr ok snópir, · lętr sęm solginn sé,
 4 ok kann fregna at fęu.

An early meal should man oft get, unless he come to visit: he sits and idles haplessly, makes as if starved, and can ask about little.

34 Afhvarf mikit · es til ills vinar,
 2 þótt á brautu húi,
 ęn til góðs vinar · liggja gagnvegir,
 4 þótt hann sé firr farinn.

A great detour 'tis to a wicked friend, although he on the highway live; but to a good friend lie the shortest ways, although he far gone be.

35 Ganga skal, · skal-a gęstr vesa
 2 ęy í ęinum stað;
 ljúfr verðr lęiðr, · ef lęngi sitr

A dwelling is better, though small it be: each is a warrior at home. Though two goats he own, and a cord-roofed hall, that is yet better than begging.

37 Bú es bętra, · þótt lítit sé,
 2 halr es hęima hvęrr;
 blóðugt es hjarta · þęim's biðja skal
 4 sér í mál hvęrt matar.

A dwelling is better, though small it be: each is a warrior at home. Bloody is the heart of the one who shall beg for himself each meal of food.

 4 gęirs of þorf guma.

From his weapons shall man on the plain not take one step further; for uncertain 'tis to know, when on the ways outside, man comes in need of a spear.

2 feti ganga framarr ‘take one step further’] Cf. Lock 1: svát einugi feti gangir framarr, ‘so that thou not take one step further’.

39 Fann’k-a mildan mann · eða svá matar góðan,
 2 at veri-t þiggja þegit;

 4 at þeð se laun, ef þegi.

I found not a generous man, or one so good of meat^C, that a gift were not accepted; or one of his fee^C so not [...], that the rewards were loathed, if he accepted [them].^a

1 matar góðan ‘good of meat’] A Viking Age expression; see Index.

3 [...] It is doubtless that a word has been lost here; the meter and sense require it. Finnur Jónsson (1932) suggests glöggvan ‘miserly, stingy’, giving a litotes ‘so not stingy’, i.e., ‘so generous’.

^aNo man is so generous that he would refuse a gift presented to him, nor loathe receiving a favour as thanks for his generosity.

40 Féar sins, · es fengit hefr,
 2 skyli-t maðr þorf þola;
 opt sparir leiðum · þat’s hefr ljúfum hugat;
 4 mart gengr verr an varir.

Of his own fee^C, which he has earned, should man not suffer need. Oft one saves for the loathed what was meant for the loved; many a thing goes worse than one expects.

41 Vópnum ok voðum · skulu vinir gleðjask;
 2 þat ’s á sjölfum synst;
 viðrgefendr ok endrgefendr · erusk vinir lengst,
 4 ef þat biðr at verða vel.

With weapons and garments shall friends gladden each other; that is most seen on oneself.^a Mutual givers and return-givers are friends for the longest, if it^b is to last long.

^ai.e. in one’s own lived experience.

^bThe friendship.

42 Vin sinum · skal maðr vinr vesa,

- 2 ok gjalda gjöf við gjöf;
 hlátr við hlátri · skyli hólðar taka,
 4 en lausung við lygi.

With his friend shall man be a friend, and reward gift against gift; laughter against laughter should men take, but duplicity against lie.

- 43 Vin sínum · skal maðr vinr vesa,
 2 þeim ok þess vin;
 en óvinar síns · skyli engi maðr
 4 vinar vinr vesa.

With his friend shall man be a friend, with him and his friend; but with his enemy's, should no man, friend's friend be.

- 44 Veiðt, ef þú vin átt, · þann's þú vel trúir
 2 ok vilt af hönum gótt geta,
 gæði skalt við þann · ok gjöfum skipta,
 4 fara at finna opt.

Know: if thou have a friend, one on which thou well trust, and wilt receive good from: thoughts and gifts shalt thou exchange with him; travel to see find oft.

- 45 Ef þú átt annan, · þann's þú illa trúir,
 2 vilt af hönum þó gótt geta,
 fagrt skalt mæla, · en flátt hyggja
 4 ok gjalda lausung við lygi.

If thou have another, one on which thou badly trust, and wilt yet receive good from: fairly shalt thou speak, but falsely think, and pay duplicity against lie.

- 46 Þat 's enn umb þann, · es þú illa trúir
 2 ok þér es grunr at gæði,
 hléja skalt við þeim · ok of hug mæla;
 4 glík skulu gjöld gjöfum.

'Tis yet regarding that one, on which thou badly trustest, and who causes thy senses doubt:^a laugh shalt thou with him, and speak with care; rewards shall be equal to gifts.^b ^alit. "and for thee is doubt in senses".

^bEquivalent to the last line of the previous v. ("reward duplicity against lie").

47 Ungr vas'k forðum, · for'k ęinn saman,
2 þá varð'k villr vega;
 auðigr þóttumk, · es annan fann'k,
4 maðr es manns gaman.

Young was I once, I travelled alone; then I became lost about the ways. Wealthy I thought myself when another one I found; man is the pleasure of man.

48 Mildir fróknir · menn bazt lifa,
2 sjaldan sút ala;
 ósnjallr maðr · uggir hvatvetna,
4 sýtir ę gløggr við gjofum.

Generous, bold men live the best; seldom they nourish sorrow. The unvalorous man is frightened by whatever; ever the stingy man laments at gifts.^a ^aRefer back to v. 39; after receiving a gift, one was culturally obliged to give something back.

49 Váðir mínar · gaf'k velli at 2 tveim trémønnum;
 rekkar þat þóttusk, · es rípt hofðu;
4 neįss es nokkviðr halr.

My garments I gave on the plain, to two tree-men. Champions they seemed when cloaks they had; shameful is the naked warrior.^a ^aOne of the hardest verses in the poem. After much thought I consider the probable sense to be that the clothes make the warrior; under expensive gear a thin tree-man might be hiding, and likewise even a strong man (I see the choice of the word halr 'warrior' rather than the more neutral maðr 'man, person' as intentional) when naked and facing a heavily armoured opponent becomes as vulnerable as the 'tree-man' on the plain.

50 Hrørnar þoll, · sú's stęndr þorpi á,

- 2 hlýrat henni borkr né barr;
 svá es maðr, · sá's manngi ann;
 4 hvat skal hann lengi lifa?

Wilters the pine that stands on the yard; shields her not bark nor needle. So is the man who loves none; for what shall he live for long?

- 51 Eldi heitari · brinnr með illum vinum
 2 friðr fimm daga,
 en þá sloknar, · es hinn setti kómr,
 4 ok versnar allr vinskapr.

Hotter than fire burns peace among bad friends, for five days^C;^a but then goes out when the sixth one comes, and all the friendship worsens.

^aA reference to the five-day week (see also v. 74); the number is symbolic. See further Index.

- 52 Mikit ęitt · skal-a manni gefa;
 2 opt kaupir sér í litlu lof,
 með holfum hleif · ok með hollu ķeri
 4 fekk ek mér félaga.

Much at once shall one not give a man; oft one buys oneself praise for little. With half a loaf and an awry cask, I got me a companion.

- 53 Litilla sanda, · litilla sęva,
 2 lítil eru gęð guma;
 því't allir menn · urðu-t jafnspakir;
 4 holf es old hvar.

Of small sands, of small seas; small are the senses of man. For all have not become evenly foreseeing; half is each man.^a ^aWhere shores are small, seas are small. Compared to the power of the natural forces man is but a grain of sand in the desert, a drop of water in the sea. His wisdom will always be half, that is, incomplete. This verse nicely sets up the following three.

- 54 Meðalsnotr · skyli manna hvęrr,

Middle-clever should each man be; never too clever. For those men 'tis fairest to live, who know well enough.

Middle-clever should each man be; never too clever. The clever man's heart is seldom gladdened, if he is all-clever that owns [it].

Middle-clever should each man be; never too clever. His own orlay^C ought none to know ahead; his is the most sorrowless mind.^a ^aWho knows not his fate. It is fitting that Weden would say this, having knowledge of the inevitable destruction of the world and himself.

Fire by fire burns until it burnt is; flame is kindled from flame. Man by man becomes known for speech, but the too dull by his delusion.

58 Ár skal rísa, · sá's annars vill
2 f́e eða f́jor hafa;
 sjaldan liggjandi ulfr · lér of getr,

4 né sofandi maðr sigr.

Early shall rise he who another's fee^C or life will have. Seldom does the lying wolf get a thigh, or the sleeping man victory.

59 Ár skal rísa, · sá's á yrkjendr fáa,
2 ok ganga síns verka á vít;
mart of dveḷr · þann's umb morgin sefr,
4 halfr es auðr und hvotum.

Early shall rise he who owns workers few, and go his work to meet. Much is kept back from him who in the morning sleeps; half the wealth is due to the brisk.^a ^aHalf of a man's wealth is due to his briskness.

60 Þurra skíða · ok þakinna néfra,
2 þess kann maðr mjot,
ok þess viðar, · es vinnask megi
4 mál ok missæri.

Of dry planks and of thatching birch bark: thereof man knows the measure—and of that firewood which may be used for a season and half-year.^a ^aOver the winter.

61 Þvegin ok meṭtr · ríði maðr þingi at,
2 þótt hann sé-t vęddr til vęl;
skúa ok bróka · skammisk ęngi maðr
4 né hests in heldr,
þótt hann hafi't góðan.

Washed and filled ought man to ride to the Thing, although he might not be dressed too well; of his shoes and breeches ought no man to be ashamed, nor indeed of his horse, (although he might not have a good one.)

5 þótt ... góðan “although ... good one”] As Finnur Jónsson (1932) points out, surely a late insertion. Whoever made it was not aware of the rules of the Leed-meter, interpreting the c-line as a Fornwordslaw a-line, and then insreting the supposed b-line.

- 62 Snapir ok gnafir, · es til sévar kømr,
 2 orn á aldinn mar;
 svá es maðr, · es með morgum kømr
 4 ok á formélendr fáa.

Shuffles and stoops—when to the sea it comes—the eagle on the aged ocean. So is the man, as among the many comes, and has spokesmen few.

- 63 Fregna ok sęja · skal fróðra hvęrr,
 2 sá's vill hęitinn horskr;
 ęinn vita · né annarr skal,
 4 þjóð vęit ef þrír 'ró.

Ask and speak shall each learned man, who wishes to be called sharp; one shall know, but not another: thirty^a know if there are three.

^aþjóð lit. 'people, nation'; cf. Scold (TODO): þjóð eru þrír tígir "thirty are a people".

- 64 Ríki sitt · skyli ráðsnotra
 2 hvęrr í hófi haða;
 þá hann þat finnr, · es með fróknum kømr,
 4 at ęngi es ęinna hvatastr.

His power should each counsel-clever man use in moderation; then he finds it—when among the bold he comes—that none is the briskest of all.^a

^ai.e., every man has his match. For the expression compare particularly Wals TODO þviat hvęrr sa, er með maugum kemr, ma þat finna eitthvert sinn, at einge er einna hvatastr "for each one who comes among the many must at some point find that none is the briskest of all."

- 65 Orða þęira, · es maðr oðrum sęgir,
 2 opt hann gjöld of getr.

For those words which man to another says, he oft gets recompense.

- 66 Mikilsti snimma · kom'k í marga staði,
 2 ęn til síð í suma;

4 ól vas drukkit, · sumt vas ólagat;
sjaldan hittir leiðr í lið.

Much too early I came to many places, and too late to some. The ale was drunk, at other times yet unbrewed;^a seldom finds the loathsome man his place.

^alit. “some [of it] was unbrewed”

67 Hér ok hvar · myndi mér heim of boðit,
2 ef þyrpta’k at mólungi mat,
 eða tvau lér hengi · at hins tryggva vinar,
4 þar’s ek hafða eitt etit.

Here and there would I to a home be invited, if at no meal-time I needed food; or [if] two hams would hang at the trusty friend’s [home], where I one had eaten.^a ^aNot everyone is hospitable, especially with regards to food, which was valuable and had to be closely counted among subsistence farmers. The poet notes that even a “trusty friend” (might be sarcastic) would invite him to eat at his house more often if he brought more food than he ate.

68 Eldr es baztr · með yta sonum
2 ok sólar sýn,
 heylyndi sitt, · ef hafa náir,
4 án við lost at lifa.

Fire is best among the sons of men, and the sight of the sun; one’s good health—if he manage to keep it—and living without vice.

69 Es-at maðr alls vesall, · þótt sé illa heyll,
2 sumr es af sonum séll,
 sumr af frændum, · sumr af fē órnú,
4 sumr af verkum vel.

Man is not all wretched, though he of poor health be: someone is blessed by sons, someone by kinsmen, someone by ample fee^C, someone by works done well.

70 Bętra es lifðum, · ok séllifðum,

2 ey getr kvikr kú;
 eld sá'k upp brinna · auðgum manni fyr,
 4 en úti vas ðauðr fyr ðurum.

'Tis better with the living, and the joyfully living: ever gets the quick^a a cow.^b A fire^c I saw burning high for a wealthy man, but outside he was dead before the door.

^ai.e. the living.

^bA reference to the cattle-based economy (see also v. 76), the cow being used as a metonym. The meaning is that new opportunities always present themselves.

^cHis funeral-pyre.

71 Haltr ríðr hrossi, · hjorð rekr handarvanr,
 2 dauftr vegr ok ðugir;
 blindr es betri, · an brenðr séi;
 4 nýtr manngi nás.

A halt man rides a horse; a handless drives a herd; a deaf fights and avails. Blind is better than be burnt; no man has use for a corpse.

72 Sonr es betri, · þótt sé síð of alinn
 2 eptir ginginn guma;
 sjaldan bautarsteinar · standa brautu nér,
 4 nema ręisi niðr at nið.

A son is better, although he late be born after a passed-on man^a; seldom beat-stones^b near the highway stand, save by kinsman for kinsman raised.

^ai.e. after the father is dead.

^bLarge menhirs raised as memorial stones, later and especially in Upland decorated with Runic inscriptions.

73 Tvęir 'ro ęins hęjar, · tunga es hofuðs bani;
 2 mér 's í heðin hvęrn · handar vęni.

Two are of one host;^a the tongue is the head's bane;^b in every cloak I expect a hand.

1-2 Tvęir ... vęni] Whole v. undoubtedly a later insertion, the divergent meter is proof enough.

^a*hęrrjar* gen. sg. of hęrr ‘host’ may alternatively be read as the nom. pl. meaning ‘harriers, raiders,’ present in ęinhęrrjar (Ownharriers^p). Thus ‘two are the destroyers of one (i.e. the person)’.

^bThe tongue and the head are part of the same body and need each other, yet the former often leads to the demise of the latter. — For this phrase cf. especially the Old Swedish Heathen Law (Läffler 1879): Faldr þan orð havr giuit · Glöpr orða verstr · Tunga bouuðbani · Liggi i vğildum acri ‘Falls the one who has given the word—wickedness is the worst of words; the tongue the head’s bane-man—may he lie in an unpaid field (i.e. no weregild will be paid for him).’

- 74 Nótt verðor fęginn, · sá’s nesti trúir,
 2 skammar ’ro skips ráar,
 hverf es haustgríma;
 4 fjólð of viðrir · á fimm døgum,
 ęn męir á mánaði.

At night he rejoices, who can rely on his provisions; short are the ship’s sailyards;^a fickle is the autumn night. The weather shifts much in five days^c,^b but more in a month.

- 75 Vęit-a hinn, · es vętki vęit,
 2 margr verðor af aurum api;
 maðr es auðigr, · annarr óauðigr,
 4 skyli-t þann yítka yáar.

The one knows not, who nothing knows: many a man becomes by treasures the fool.^a A man is wealthy, another not wealthy; one oughtn’t to curse him for his woe.

2 af aurum] ‘aflaðrom’ ms.

^aFor api, here “fool”, see ape^c.

- 76 Dęyr fę, · dęyja fręndr,
 2 dęyr sјalfr hit sama;
 ęn orðstírr · dęyr aldrigi
 4 hvēim’s sér góðan getr.

Fee^c dies, kinsmen die, oneself dies the same;^a but a word-glory never dies, for whomever gets himself a good one.

^aThe power of this succinct merism may be less clear to the modern reader. In Germanic Iron Age society a man's wealth was reckoned by how many heads of cattle (for which compare particularly English chattel 'tangible, movable property' and the etymology of capital) he owned, and his social power by the number of able male relatives ready to side with him in conflict. The meaning is thus: all your power will pass away, and so too must you. — For poetic analogues, see West (2007, pp. 99 ff.).

- 77 Deyr fé, · deyja fréndr,
 2 deyr sjafr hit sama;
 ek veit einn · at aldrigi deyr:
 4 dómr of ðauðan hvern.

Fee dies, kinsmen die, oneself dies the same. I know one that never dies: the Doom^C over each man dead.

- 78 Fullar grindr · sá'k fyr Fitjungs sonum,
 2 nú bera þeir vánar völ;

Full pens I saw for the sons of Fitting; now they carry the staff of hope.^a So is wealth like the twinkling of an eye; it is the ficklest of friends.

^aA beggar's staff.

- 79 Ósnotr maðr, · es eignask getr
 2 fé eða fljóðs munuð;
 metnaðr hönun þróask, · en manvit aldrigi;
 4 framm gengr hann drygt í dul.

The unclever man, if he gets to own fee or a girl's grace: his conceit flourishes, but never his manwit; far he goes forth in delusion.

'Tis time to thill^C, upon the chair of the thyle^C. At the well of Weird, I saw and I was silent: I saw and I pondered: I heeded the matters of men. Of runes I heard them speak, nor about counsels were they silent, at the hall of the High One <= Weden> [= Walhall], in the hall of the High One, I heard [them] say thus:^a ^aThe speaker, describing himself as a thyle (þulr 'sage, chanter of memorized poetry'), says that he will relate what he has heard said at the hall of the High One <= Weden> [= Walhall]. Considering the location, it seems almost certain that the giver of this advice was Weden^P. The receiver of the advice, Loddfathomer^P (see Index for etymologies), is otherwise unknown.

The Rune-Tally

These verses are labelled as Rúnatal's þáttur (The strand of the Runecount) in younger Eddic paper manuscripts. Many give an archaic, pagan impression. It is as if they were drawn from the lips of an Odinic priest.

Nine fimble-songs I took from the famous son of Balethorn^P, the father of Bestle^P—and a drink I got, of that expensive mead poured to Woderearer^P.^a ^aThis verse fits poorly here and is almost certainly an insert. It mentions ljóð '(magical) songs, incantations' rather than runes, and has nothing to do with Woden's hanging on the tree.

^aA symmetric structure would be attained if the first four verbs refer to runes^C—carving, interpreting, painting (with blood?), and divining—while the latter four refer to sacrifice—praying, sacrificing, sending (the sacrifice or the prayer; making sure the gods receive it), and slaying the victim. See further relevant Index entries. The meter of the v. is unusual, but bears some resemblance to Vg 216 (the Högstena galder). TODO: Elaborate.

'Tis better unbid than over-blooded^C; a gift always sees recompense. 'Tis better unsent than over-sooed^C; [...].^a 4 [...] Last line probably missing here; the meter and sense require it.

^aIdentical wording (bįðja 'to bid; to pray' : blóta 'to bloot; to sacrifice'; senda 'to send' : sóa 'to soo; to slay') suggests a close relation to the previous verse. — The sense seems to be that it is better not to sacrifice at all than to sacrifice in excess, since even a small gift (to the gods) will be rewarded. This mechanistic system of gifts and rewards between man and the gods is also seen in other Indo-European pagan literatures. Compare the Sanskrit Dehí me, dádāmi te 'Give to me, I give to thee' or Latin dō ut dēs 'I give that thou might give'.

- 144 Svá pundr of řęist · fyr þjóða řęk

Thus Thound^P <= Weden> carved for the rakes of nations, where up he rose as back he came.^a ^aA very cryptic v. TODO.

The Leed-Tally

This final section of the poem has fittingly been called the Leed-Tally (Ljóðatal). The speaker (certainly Weden) recounts eighteen spells, aristocratic and Odinic in character; they deal with such things as healing (2, 12), battle (3, 4, 5, 8, 11, 13), countering sorcery (6, 10), stilling the elements (7, 9), and seduction (16, 17).

In particular the fourth spell bears a strong likeness to the first Merseburg charm.

145 Ljóð þau kann’k, · es kann-at þjóðans kona

The Speeches of Grimner (Grímnismól)

The Speeches of Grimmer are preserved whole in both R and A.

The poem itself is preceded by a long explanatory prose section, which contains several old motifs:

- Weden choosing the younger brother.
- Weden and Frie picking different sides in human affairs.
- Weden's patronage of hospitality towards strangers, in the same role as the Greek Zeus Xenios.

In spite of the age of these motifs, from which it seems clear that the introduction not be that of a late scribe, the poem is quite capable of standing on its own.

The structure of the poem is mostly clear; the first three verses set the stage, repeating some of the details told in the prose. It is certain that Weden is the speaker.

After this various lore is touched on, not always clearly. In this the poem aligns closely with other gnomic poems such as Hígh, Webthritbner, Sighdrive, Allwise.

First are listed the halls of the gods (4–17), though the numbering does not seem to agree with the count of locations mentioned. Then the conditions and surroundings of Weden's animals and hall are elaborated on (18–23). Mentioned are the preparation of food (18), his wolves (19) and ravens (20), the river through which dead men have to wade (21), the gate through which they have to pass (22), the count of doors in the hall (23) and the two animals who gnaw on the branches of the tree (25–26). We then have a long list of rivers (28–30) and horses ridden by the gods (31). Then is told of the conditions and animals of Ugdrassle (32–36).

Thereafter follow several discordant verses. A list of Walkirries (37), the progression of the sun and moon (38–40), the first blood^C and creation of the world from Yimer's body (41–42), the significance of the blood for men in the present (43), the creation of the ship Shidebladner (44) and finally a list of the noblest of several categories of things and groups (45).

After all of this Weden utters an unclear verse invoking the gods (46), before listing many of his names and the circumstances in which they were used (47–50). He then turns to Garfrith, disappointed by the inhospitality and poor conduct of his former protégé, and predicts his imminent death (51–53). He finally reveals himself by his true name, daring Garfrith to face him (53). After this he repeats several of his names (54), and the poem ends.

In the final prose section we are told that Garfrith tripped and fell on his sword, after which his son Eyner ruled for a long time.

Frá sonum Hraðungs konungs

From the sons of king Reeding

BPG BPA Hraðungr konungr átti tvá sonu. Hét annarr Agnarr, enn annarr Geirrðör. BPA Agnarr var tíu vetra enn Geirrðör átta vetra. Þeir reru tveir á báti með dorgar sínar at smáfiski. BPA Vindr rak þá í haf út. Í náttmyrkri brutu þeir við land ok gingu upp; fundu kotbónda einn. BPA Þar vóru þeir um vetrinn. Kerling fostraði Agnar enn karl Geirrøð. BPA At vári fekk karl þeim skip. Enn er þau kerling leiddu þá til strandar, þá mælti karl einmæli við Geirrøð. BPA Þeir fengu byr ok kvömu til stöðva fōður síns. Geirrøðr var fram í skipi. BPA Hann hljóp upp á land enn hratt út skipinu, ok mælti: "Far þú þar er smyl hafi þik." BPA Skipit rak út. Enn Geirrøðr gekk út til bójar; hánú var vel fagnat; þá var faðir hans andaðr. BPA Var þá Geirrøðr til konungs tekinn, ok varð maðr ágétr.

BPB King Reeding owned two sons. One was called Eyner, and the other Garfrith. BPB Eyner was ten winters old, and Garfrith eight winters. The two were rowing in a boat with their trolling-lines for small fishing. BPB The wind then drove them out into the sea. In the darkness of night they crashed into land and walked up; they found a lone cottage-farmer. BPB There they were over the winter. The wife fostered Eyner, but the husband Garfrith.^a BPB By spring the man gave them ships, but when they, led by the farmer's wife, brought them to shore, the husband spoke privately with Garfrith.^b BPB They got a good gust, and came to their father's harbour. Garfrith was in the front of the ship. BPB He leapt up onto land and pushed out the ship, and spoke: "Go thou whither the fiends may have thee!" BPB The ship drove out. But Garfrith walked towards the farm; he was welcomed well; by then his father was passed-on. BPB Then Garfrith taken was as king, and became an excellent man. EPG

BPG BPA Óðinn ok Frigg sátu í Hliðskjölfu ok sá um heima alla. BPA Óðinn mælti: Sér þú Agnar fōstra þinn, hvar hann elr bōrn við gýgi í hellinum? BPA En Geirrøðr, fōstri minn, er konungr ok sitr nú at landi. BPA Frigg segir: Hann er matníðingr sá at hann kvelr gesti sína ef hánú þykkja ofmargir koma. BPA Óðinn segir at þat er in mesta lygi. Þau veðja um þetta mál. BPA Frigg sendi eskismey sína, Fullu, til Geirrøðar. Hon bað konung varask at eigi fyrgerði hánú fjōlkunnigr maðr sá er þar var kominn í land ok sagði þat mark á at engi hundr var svá ólmr at á hann myndi hlaupa. BPA En þat var inn mesti hégómi at Geirrøðr vëri eigi matgōðr ok þó lét hann handtaka þann mann er eigi vildu hundar á ráða. BPA Sá var í feldi blám ok nefndisk Grímnir ok sagði ekki fleira frá sér þótt hann vëri atspurðr. BPA Konungr lét hann pína til sagna ok setja milli elda tveggja ok sat hann þar átta nëtr. BPA Geirrøðr konungr átti son tíu vetra gamlan ok hét Agnarr eftir bróður hans. BPA Agnarr gekk at Grímnir ok gaf hánú horn fullt at drekka, sagði að konungr gerði illa er hann lét pína hann saklausan. BPA Grímnir drakk af. Þá var eldrinn svá kominn at feldrinn brann af Grímnir. Hann kvað:

BPB Weden and Frie sat in Litheshelf^G and looked about all the Homes. BPB Weden spoke: "Seest thou Eyner, thy foster-son, where he begets children with the troll-woman in the cave?^c BPB But Garfrith, my foster-son, is king and now sits at land." BPB Frie says: "He is such a meat-nithing that he tortures his guests if he judges too many are coming."

^aThe wife was Frie, and the husband Weden; this is clarified by the following prose. The motif of Weden preferring the youngest brother is also found in Rígh.

^bSurely instructing him to push his brother out to sea.

^cThis may relate to Frie's role as love-goddess. Eyner is in any case a degenerate^C man, what one would call a 'coomer'.

BPB Weden says that this is the greatest lie; they make a wager about this matter. BPB Frie sent her handmaid Full to Garfrith's. She bade the king be wary, that he not be ended by that feel-cunning^C man who was come in the land, and said that his sign was that no hound was so fierce that he would leap at him. BPB But that was the greatest vainglory that Garfrith were not meat-good, and yet he has that man seized, whom the hounds would not touch. BPB He was clad in a blue cloak, and called himself Grimner, and did not tell any more about himself, even though he was interrogated. BPB The king had him tortured that he would speak, and set him between two fires, and he sat there for eight nights. BPB King Garfrith had a son ten winters old, and he was named Eyner after his brother. BPB Eyner walked up to Grimner, and gave him a full horn to drink, saying that the king did ill as he had him tortured without cause. BPB Grimner drank from it. Then the fire had come such that the cloak burned on Grimner. He quoth: EPG

The holdness^C of Woulder^P—and of all the gods—has each who first touches the fire; for the Homes^C become open o'er the sons of the Ease, when the cauldrons are heaved off.^a

1 hylli 'holdness'] I.e. 'favour, loyalty, grace'. This word and its adjectival equivalent bolrr 'hold; favourable, loyal, gracious'

^aThis verse is one of the most difficult in the poem, and many interpretations have been made (for a summary see Nordberg (2005)). Finnur Jónsson (1932) and Sijmons and Gering (p. 208, TODO) interpret this verse as relating to the frame narrative, with Weden still bound between the two fires, wishing for the gods to rescue him. This, however, scarcely makes sense given its placement in the middle of various gnomic verses. I believe instead (and here I agree with (Nordberg, 2005)) that the verse refers to the cooking and eating of sacred stew in large cauldrons during the blood^C, and Woulder's role in the setting of the ritual fire (see Index and (af Edholm, 2009)). This interpretation is especially interesting in that this verse immediately follows two verses dealing with the primordial sacrifice of Yimer to create the world. This shows that the blood was viewed as a ritual reenactment of the creation of the world by the gods (and indeed a continuation of that creation), something that is well attested comparatively (see (Lincoln, 1986), especially the first two chs., for its Indo-European analogues).

^aThis verse contains an interesting description of Viking age bridal dress: As the everyday manager of the household, keys were the mark of a respectable married woman. The “broad stones” on the breast are probably tortoise brooches, while the tipping of the head refers to some sort of bridal hat (TODO: Literature). Breast-brooches are also mentioned in Wayland 25, 36.

Soon he-goats^{Ca} were driven home, hasted onto the cart-poles; they were to run well. Crag burst, the earth burned with flame; the son of Weden [= Thunder] drove into the Ettin-homes.^b ^aThunder's cart was driven by he-goats, and he is likewise called “the lord of he-goats” in Hymner 20, 31. See Index.

^bA very similar but more detailed description of Thunder driving is found in Thedwolf's Harvest-long 14–16. In both poems his wagon is drawn by he-goats, causing great cosmic disturbance: crags (bjǫrg in both) are rent asunder and fires rage before him. See also Dreams 3 for a related description of Weden riding.

^aAccording to Webbthritbner 31 the Ilewaves were the poisonous wild rushes out of which the ettins emerged, and so it only makes sense that they would be found in the east, where the ettins dwell. Hymer’s dwelling even further east than them illustrates his fierceness.

The precise meaning of galkn ‘monster’ (plural gǫlkn) is unclear; but it is attested in three Scoldish verses, always in kennings of the type “troll-woman of the shield [AXE]”. While the mss. ‘galkn’ (norm. gálkn) could be both singular and plural, the form of the verb precludes the former. This means that the word cannot be referring to the Middenyardsworm, refuting the interpretation of Larrington (2014): “the sea-wolf shrieked”.

^a*gøð-mólu* ‘able to speak about the god-lore; versed in the mythology’ is a hapax.

^bAs pointed out in Finnur Jónsson (1932) a verse containing such an address to the audience is otherwise unheard of. — What myth is being referred to is unclear. TODO: What do other authors write

The valour-mighty one [= Thunder] came onto the Thing^C of the gods, and had that cauldron which Hymer owned; but the Wigh-beings^G <= Gods> shall well drink an ale-feast at Eagre’s, every flax-cutting [FALL?].

4 ęitt hǫrmęitið “one ... flax-cutting”] A very obscure kenning. La Farge and Tucker (1992) give several interpretations, viz. ęitr-hǫr-męitir ‘poison-rope-cutter [SNAKE > WINTER]’, ęitr-orm-męiðir ‘poison-worm-injurer’ [WINTER]. The solution with the minimal amount of emendation is to read ęitt ‘one’ as modifying ǫlðr ‘ale-feast’, and hverjan ‘every’ as modifying hǫr-męitiðr ‘flax-cutting’, a compound made up of hǫrr ‘flax, cord’ and męita ‘to cut’ and referring to an obscure harvest festival. The interpretation is by no means certain.

The Flyting of Lock (Lokasenna)

Preserved in R, directly following Hymer, though the poems without doubt were originally separate; the stylistic differences are drastical.

From Eage and the gods

Égí, er qðru nafni hét Gymer, hann hafði búit ásum ql þá er hann hafði fengit ketil inn mikla sem nú er sagt. Til þeirar veizlu kom Óðinn ok Frigg kona hans. Þórr kom eigi þviát hann var í austrvegi. Þar var Njorðr ok kona hans Skaði; Freyr ok Freyja; Víðarr son Óðins. Loki var þar, ok þjónustumenn Freys, Byggvir ok Beyla. Mart var þar ása ok alfa. Égí átti tvá þjónustumenn; Fimafengr ok Eldir. Þar var lýsigull haft fyr eldsljós; sjalft barsk þar ql. Þar var griðastadr mikill. Menn lofuðu mjök hversu góðir þjónustumenn Égis vóru. Loki mátti eigi heyra þat, ok drap hann Fimafeng. Þá skóku ésir skjöldu sína ok óptu at Loka, ok eltu hann braut til skógar, en þeir fóru at drekka. Loki hvarf aptr ok hitti úti Eldi; Loki kvaddi hann:

Eage^P, who by another name is called Gymer^P, had prepared an ale-feast for the Ease when he had got the great kettle as now is told.^a

To that gathering came Weden^P and Frie^P, his woman. Thunder^P came not, for he was in the East-way^L. Sib was there, Thunder's woman; Bray^P and Idun^P, his woman. Tue^P was there, he was one-handed. The Fennerswolf^P tore his hand off when it was bound.^b There was Nearth^P, and his woman Scathe^P; Free^P and Frow^L; Wider^P, the son of Weden^P. Lock^P was there, and the servants of Free: Bew^P and Beal^P. There was a great many of the Ease^G and Elves^{Gc}.

Eage had two servants: Femfinger^P and Elder^P. There was glowing gold used instead of fire; the ale there poured itself. There was a great grith-stead^C.^d Men greatly praised how good the servants of Eage were. Lock could not stand that, and he slew Femfinger.

Then the Ease shook their shields and screamed at Lock,^e and chased him away to the forest, but then they went to drink. Lock came back and found Elder outside; Lock greeted him:

1 „Seg þú þat, Eldir, · svá't einugi

2 feti gangir framarr,

hvat hér inni · hafa at qlmólum

4 sigtíva synir.“

“Say thou it, Elder, so that thou take not one step further: what here within they bring up over the ale,^a the sons of the victory-Tues [GODS].”

^aSee the immediately preceding Hymer.

^bThis detail is probably brought up to chronologically date the events of the poem as happening after the binding of Fenrer in the mythology.

1–2 svá't ... framarr 'so that ... further'] Cf. Hígh 38: feti ganga framarr 'take one step further'.

^alit. 'have for their ale-speeches'

Elder quoth:

2 „Of vǫpn sín dǫma · ok of vígrisni sína
2 sigtíva synir;
ása ok alfa, · es hér inni eru,
4 manngi 's þér í orði vinr.“

“Of their weapons they converse, and of their fight-valiance, the sons of the victory-Tues [GODS]; of the Ease and Elves which are here within, none is thee a friend in words.”

4 manngi ... vinr “none ... words.”] i.e. “none of them say anything good about you.” — The (lack of) alliteration here is very notable, and also occurs in v. 10. Both of these verses are otherwise perfect, and so it may be that v /w/ is rarely alliterating with the vowel. While this is never seen in Scoldish poetry, it could have been delegated to the simpler Eddic styles. Alternatively the poem is of such age that it was composed before the North Germanic loss of /w-/ before rounded vowels. This is supported by the fact that in both this verse and v. 10 the words that alliterate with /w-/ have cognates in other Germanic languages that begin with /w-/, in the case of ulfr in v. 10 this consonant is well attested in old runic inscriptions. To be clear, this retention does not require dating the whole poem to the Proto-Norse period; perhaps the poet was aware of the change which had taken place a few generations before him, and employed it as an archaism. For metrical reasons it must certainly post-date the syncope period (in the 6th century), but we know from the transitional 7th century Blekinge runestones from Stentofen (DR 357), Gummarp (DR 358) and Istaby (DR 359) that syncope occurred before the loss of /w-/ anyway. A 7th century Proto-Norse form of the c-line might be: mannagí 's þér in wordé winr.

Lock quoth:

3 „Inn skal ganga · Égis hallir í
2 á þat sumbl at séa,
jǫll ok ófu · föri'k ása sonum
4 ok blænd'k þeim svá męini mjǫð.“

“In shall I go into Eagre's halls, for to see that feast; scorn and strife I bring to the sons of the Ease, and I mix for them so the mead with harm.”

3 jǫll ok ófu “scorn and spite”] ioll oc áfo R These two interesting words have been interpreted in a variety of ways: CV sees the first word as jǫll ‘wild angelica’, whereas the second is taken to be an error for áfr ‘a beverage [...] translated by Magnaeus by sorbitio avenacea, a sort of common ale brewed of oats’.

Elder quoth:

- 4 „Veizt, ef inn gęngr · Ęgis hallir í

4 á þér munu þau þerra þat.“

“Know, if thou in goest into Eagre’s halls, for to see that feast: if with slander and hatred thou pourest onto the hold^a Reins^G, they will dry it off on thee.”

^aGods are also called by the adjective hollr ‘hold; faithful, favourable’ in Ordrun 10, and in the oath formula of the West Geatish law: svá sé mér/þér goð holl “so may the gods be hold towards me/thee” TODO.

Lock quoth:

The Speeches of Shirner (Skírnismól)

The Speeches of Shirner

För Skírnis

Shirner's Journey

BPG BPA Freyr, sonr Njarðar, hafði einn dag setsk í Hliðskjálf ok sá um heima alla; hann sá í Jötunheima ok sá þar mey fagra, þá er hon gekk frá skála fður síns til skemmu; þar af fekk hann hugsóttir miklar. Skírnir hét skósveinn Freys. Njarðr bað hann kveðja Frey máls. Þá mælti Skaði: EPA

BPB Free^P, son of Nearth^P, had one day sat himself down in Lithshelf^L and looked about all the Homes^C. He looked into the Ettinhomes^L and saw there a fair maiden as she walked from her father's hall to her bower; thereof he got great heart-aches. Shirner^P was called the shoe-swain of Free. Nearth asked him to speak with Free. Then Scathe^P spoke: EPB EPG

- 1 „Rís-tu nú Skírnir · ok gakk at þeiða
2 okkarn mála mög,
ok þess at fregna · hveim hinn fróði séi
4 ofvræiði afi.“

“Rise thou now, Shirner, and go to ask our lad [= Free] to speak; and to learn at whom the learned man [= Free] might be cross.”

4 afi ‘man’] While this word usually means ‘father’ or ‘grandfather’, it must here certainly mean ‘man’ without a connotation of old age. See further CV.

Shirner quoth:

- 2 „Illra orða · es mér ón at ykrum syni,
2 ef ek geng at mæla við mög,
ok þess at fregna, · hveim hinn fróði séi
4 ofvræiði afi.“

“Bad words I expect from your son, if I go with the lad to speak; and to learn at whom the wise man might be cross.”

Shirner quoth:

- 3 „Sæg þat Freyr, · folkvaldi goða,
2 ok ek vilja vita,
hví þú ertinn sitr · endlanga sali
4 minn dróttinn of daga.“

— “Say that, Free, troop-wielder of the gods, I too would want to know: why thou alone stayest in the endlong halls, my lord, during the days.”

Free quoth:

4 „Hví of sęgja’k þér, · sęgr hinn ungi,
2 mikinn móðtrega?
því’t alfrøðull · lýsir of alla daga
4 ok þęgi at mínum munum.“

— “Why should I say to thee, young man, about great mood-grief? For the elf-wheel [SUN] shines during all days, and naught to my delight.”

Shirner quoth:

5 „Muni þína · hykk-a svá mikla vesa,
2 at þú mér sęgr né sęgir;
ungir saman · vorum í árdaga,
4 vęl męttim tveir trúask.“

“Thy delights I do not think so large, that thou to me, man, oughtst not to say them. Young together were we in days of yore; we two might well trust each other.”

2 sęgr ‘man’, originally ‘messenger’] Here used in reference to Free’s addressing Shirner as sęgr hinn ungi ‘the young man’. Shirner points out that the two are of equal age, so Free is as much of a young man as he.

Free quoth:

6 „Í Gymis gørdum · ek ganga sá
2 mér tíða męy;
armar lýstu, · ęn af þaðan
4 allt lopt ok loęr.“

“In Gymer’s yards I saw walking a maiden, dear to me. The arms shone, but thereof all the air and sea.”

7 „Męr es mér tíðari · an manna hveim
2 ungum í árdaga;
ása ok alfa · þat vill ęngi maðr,

4 at vit sátt séim.“

“The maiden is dearer to me than to any young man in days of yore. Of the Ease and Elves^G no man^a wants that we two be reconciled.”

^aFor other examples of gods being called men see TODO.

It is likely that a verse is missing here, where Free asks Shirner to go to fetch the maiden for him.

Shirner quoth:

8 „Mar gef mér þá, · es mik of myrkvan beri
2 vísan vafrloga,
ok þat sverð, · es sjalft vegisk
4 við jötna étt.“

“Then give me the steed, which might bear me over the dark, wise wavering-flame; and that sword, which by itself might strike against the aught^C of the Ettins^G.”

Free quoth:

9 „Mar þér þann gef’k, · es þik of myrkvan berr
2 vísan vafrloga, ok þat sverð, · es sjalft mun vegask, ef sá ’s horskr es hefr.“

“That steed I give thee, which bears thee over the dark, wise wavering-flame; and that sword, which by itself will strike, if he is wise who owns it.”

1–3 berr ‘bears’; mun vegask, ef sá ’s horskr es hefr ‘will strike, if he is wise who owns it’] Responding, Free switches out the subjunctive verb forms (“might bear [...] might strike”), giving a sense of certainty and authority. The steed and sword are faultless, and if Shirner fails on the mission, it would be only due to his own fault.

Shirner spoke with the horse:

10 „Myrkt es úti, · mál kveð’k okr fara
2 úrig fjöll yfir
þursa þjóð yfir;
4 báðir vit komumk · eða okr báða tækir sá hinn ámatki jötunn.“

“Tis dark outside; I call it time for us two to journey: over the drizzling mountains, over the people of the Thurses^G. Both two we come, or us both that terrifying ettin takes.^a”

4 ámatki jötunn ‘terrifying ettin’] Formulaic. ámáttigr ‘terrifying’ seems to have a supernatural connotation, and only occurs in four other places in the Poetic Edda: in WSpae 8, Grimner 11 and HHarw 17 it is paired with jötunn ‘ettin’, while in HHarw 14 it describes a man with clearly supernatural attributes.

^aShirner declares his intention not to abandon his horse.

BPG BPASkírnir reið i Jötunheima til Gymis garða; þar váru hundar ólmir ok bundnir fyrir skíðgarðs hliði þess, er um sal Gerðar var. Hann reið at þar, er féhirðir sat á haugi, ok kvaddi hann: EPA

BPBShirner rode into the Ettinhomes to Gymer’s yards. There were hounds, fierce and bound in front of the slope of that wooden fence which surrounded Gird’s¹ hall. He rode to where a shepherd sat on a mound, and greeted him: EPB EPG

“Choices are better, rather than sobbing, for whomever is eager to depart. On a single day was my age shaped, and all my life was laid.^a”

1 kostir ‘choices’] i.e. ‘alternative choices, other ways’.

^aThe Germanic fatalistic beliefs, wherein one’s course of life was predetermined at birth, are here clearly seen. Cf. WSpae 19, Lock 48.

^aThe food will either ‘loathe’ Gird (i.e., she will be deprived of it), or the food that she must eat will be as disgusting as the Middenyardsworm. — The threat seems to be that Gird will be forced to stay alone on an eagle’s nest, deprived of food and (probably) longing to die.

1 þurs ‘thurse’] The þ-rune, here being used as a curse.

1 þría stafi ‘three staves’] Three runic letters. This formula also appears on the 7th c. Gummarp stone: haþuwolafr sate staba þria fff ‘Hathwolf placed three staves: fff’, where the ƿ-rune is standing for its name, fee^C (i.e. wealth, cattle). This attestation clearly shows that the Runic magic in this verse is authentic.

^aShirner has carved the curse, but tells Gird that he will scrape it off if she will accept his demands. She then responds:

The Lay of Wayland (Vǫlundarkviða)

The Lay of Wayland (Wayland) is a story of immense psychological complexity, one of the greatest masterpieces of Norse poetry.

The poem begins with a prose introduction, which survives in both R and A.

Wayland gets his revenge on the whole royal household. He murders Nithad's two young sons (affectionately, his "bear-cubs") and thus ends his male lineage. Likewise he defangs Nithad's "cunning wife" (she is never called anything else) by reducing her once powerful counsels to cold words; and finally he rapes Beadhild, depriving her of her maidenhood and value in marriage. They are thus reduced to the same state of complete powerlessness as he himself experienced, something clearly seen in the repetition of the adjective viljalauss 'powerless'; in v. 12 it describes Wayland after he wakes in shackles, but in v. 31 Nithad uses it to refer to his own mental state after the deaths of his sons. This sense of hopelessness is also seen in Beadhild's haunting concluding speech. "I knew by naught struggle against him; I could by naught struggle against him."

From the other versions of the story it is known that Beadhild gave birth to a son, Woody (Old English Wudga, ThedS Viðga, in Danish ballads Vidrik Verlandson). He went on to become a great hero, and in the later heroic ballads by far eclipses his father. His birth seems heavily foreshadowed by Wayland forcing Nithad to swear an oath in v. 33, but he is nowhere directly mentioned in the poem, probably for artistic reasons.

Apart from this lay there is one other telling of the full story, namely the Strand of Wayland the Smith in ThedS. While written in Old Norse, it is clear from the proper names and content that it is based on German sources (probably heroic ballads). Thus the native form Vplundr is replaced with Velent [sic], Niðuðr with Niðungr. Interestingly there is a note within it showing that the native form was still known, namely about "Velent, the excellent smith, whom Warrings (Væringjar) call Wayland (Vplundr)". Apparently Wayland was so famous that "all men seem to praise his workmanship so, that the maker of any smith's work which is made better than other works, is called a Wayland (Vplundr) with regards to workmanship."

Far more stark than minor differences of language is that of tone. The psychological complexity and tension of the older redaction is almost entirely gone: Wayland is no longer a mysterious wild man, but a chivalrous knight who can escape from any peril through his ingenuity and craftsmanship. He is not kidnapped out of Nithad's greed, nor hamstrung out of the suspicion of his cruel wife, but rather a loyal servant of Nithad's, banished from the kingdom after defending himself against the king's corrupt steward, and hamstrung after being caught attempting to poison the king's food in revenge.

Most frustratingly the personality of Beadhild is entirely expulged. She is the anonymous "king's daughter", an unnamed maiden (jungfrú, a borrowing from Low German) who is peacefully seduced by Wayland and quickly falls in love with him. Likewise the person of Nithad's cunning wife is completely gone, and the murder of his sons no longer ends his lineage, since he has another, older son who survives him and takes over the kingdom. Wayland still flies away laughing after telling Nithad what he has done, but only four years (his son with Beadhild is three years old) later reconciliates with Nithad's son, retrieves Beadhild and their son and lives a long life as a famous craftsman.

With this it is clearly seen that the story by the time of the ThedS had been heavily distorted, a tragic victim of medieval romantic sensibilities. It does not have any high literary value, but is of interest since it shows the wide reception and variation of the narrative.

Finally there are also traces of the story in the Anglo-Saxon tradition, where it is alluded to in both Walder and Dear, the latter of which particularly emphasising the powerlessness felt by Wayland and Beadhild (thus being much closer in spirit to the present poem than to ThedS). Parts of the narrative are depicted on the early 8th century Frank's casket, where it is as prominent as the depiction of the Adoration of the Magi—a true testament to the weight with which it was regarded within that culture.

To illustrate the narrative correspondences and differences of the various redactions, I present the following table:

BPB Nithad was named a king in Sweden. BPB He owned two sons and one daughter;

she was called Beadchild. BPB There were three brothers, the sons of a king of the Finns. BPB One was called Slayfinn, another Agle, the third Wayland. BPB They travelled on skis and hunted wild animals. They came into the Wolfdales and made for themselves houses there. BPB There is a water there, called Wolfsea. BPB Early in the morning they found on the lake-shore three women, and they were spinning linen. BPB By them were their swan-hames^C; they were Walkirries. BPB Two of them were the daughters of king Ladwigh: Ladguth Swanwhite and Harware Allwit, the third was Alerune, daughter of Kear^P of Walland^{Ga}. BPB The brothers brought the maidens with them to their halls. Agle got Alerune, but Slayfinn Swanwhite, but Wayland Allwit. BPB They lived there for seven winters, then they left to attend battles, and did not return. BPB Then Agle left on skis to look for Alerune, but Slayfinn sought out Swanwhite; but Wayland stayed in the Wolfdales. BPB He was the most skilled craftsman, as men know, in the ancient saws. BPB King Nithad had him captured, about which this has been sung: EPG

- 1 Męyjar flugu sunnan · Myrkvið í gognum
- 2 alvitr ungar, · ørløg drýgja;
- þęr á sęvarströnd · sęttusk at hvílask
- 4 drósir suðrónar, · dýrt lín spunnu.

Maidens flew from the south through Mirkwood^a—young allwits^b—to fulfill orlay^C. They on the lake-shore set down to rest; the southern ladies span expensive linen.

^aMirkwood is surely referenced for its association with the war-ravaged lands of the Gots and Huns; a natural environment for Walkirries.

^bMaybe look at what this means. TODO.

- 2 Eın nam þęira · Eęil at vęrja

- 6 varði hvítan · hals Vęlundar.

One of them began—the fair maiden of men—to ward Agle by her light bosom. Another was Swanwhite—her swan-feathers she pulled; but the third sister warded the white throat of Wayland.

4 [...] wo. doubt a line has gone missing here, mentioning the name of Slayfinn.

 2 en hinn átta · allan þróðu,
 en hinn níunda · nauðr of skilði,

Then they stayed for seven winters at that, but all the eighth they yearned, but the ninth did need divorce them: the maidens longed for the mirky wood: the young allwits, to fulfill orlay.^a ^aAs Walkirries the orlay of the sisters is to preside over battles for Woden. Remembering this duty they become increasingly anxious, until they one day decide to finally leave, as seen from the next verse without telling their husbands. For the significance of Mirkwood, see note to v. 1.

And they took off and they put back on; but for one, which away they put.^a—Came there from the hunt the weather-eyed shooter: Wayland passing over a long way.

^aThat this is the bigh mentioned by itself in vv. 17 and 26 seems likely. Finnur Jónsson (1932) writes: "The ring which Nithad kept must have had special properties, and distinguished itself before others. There is no doubt that the ring is a flight ring; whether this was clear to the poet is however questionable. This much is certain, that Wayland seems to be able to fly away only after he has got back the ring; that is, the one which Beadhild brings him." (My translation from the Danish).—The reader may for himself judge the plausibility of this, but it seems that Wayland, being an exceptionally handy craftsman, may just as well have crafted wings for himself without need for magical rings. This agrees with the Low German verison and the Daedalus myth, for both of which see the introduction to the poem.

Out called Nithad, lord of the Nears: “Where gottest thou, Wayland, leader of elves, our ounces in the Wolfdales? Gold was there not on Grane^P's path; far I thought our land from the fells of the Rhine.^a” ^aGrane was the horse of the legendary hero Siward^P, slayer of the dragon Fathomer^P. These events were thought to have taken place in Germany. The sense of the is thus sarcastic: “Where did you get that gold? A dragon’s hoard?”.

[Wayland quoth:]

“I remember that we owned greater wealth, when we a whole household were at home: Ladguth, and Harware was born to Ladwigh; known was Alerune, Kear’s daughter.”^a ^aWayland responds rather cryptically. It seems that by asserting the noble lineage of the three swan-wives he gives a legitimate reason for his wealth, although he seems to be aware, judging by the tone, that the greedy Nithad neither cares nor believes him.

Thus was done, that the sinews in his houghs were cut, and he was placed on a lonely islet which there lay before the land, which was called Seastead. There he smithed for the king all manner of jewels. No man dared journey to him, save for the king alone. Wayland quoth:

2 [...]] The meter requires a half-line here, likely containing a more specific description of the bigh.

^aThe verse is without doubt incomplete, but the story can be gleaned: Beadhild breaks the bigh she has been given by her parents (previously mentioned in vv. 10—see the note there—and 17), and is afraid that her parents may become upset. She thus goes to Wayland in secret, asking him to repair it.

[Wayland quoth:]

^a*C-V: fit* ‘the webbed foot of water-birds’, the reader may picture for himself. Wayland has crafted a mechanism to take flight, regaining his mobility which he lost when he was hamstrung.

“Rise up Thankred, my best thrall; ask Beadhild—the brow-white maiden—to go fair-clothed, with her father to counsel.”

[Nithad quoth:]

- 40 „Es þat satt Bøðvildr, · es sōgðu mér,
 2 sōtuð it Völundr · saman í holmi?“

“Is it true, Beadhild, as they said to me: stayed thou and Wayland together on the island?”

[Beadhild quoth:]

 2 sōtum vit Völundr · saman í holmi
 ęina oęurstund, · ęva skyldi;
 4 ek vętr hōnum · vinna kunna'k,

“It is true, Nithad, as he said^a to thee: I and Wayland stayed together on the island, for one grave moment—it should never have been! I knew by naught struggle against him; I could by naught struggle against him.^b”

^aBeadhild, knowing that the only one who is aware of what happened is Wayland, makes the subtle change in the conjugation, from her father’s general plural (“what they said”), to the specific singular (“what he said”).

^bShe was both mentally (CV: kunna ‘know, understand’) and physically (CV: mega ‘to have strength to do, avail’) incapable of struggling against him. As Finnur comments, a potent final verse.

Hjörvarðr konungr hafði þess heit strengt at eiga þá konu er hann vissi vænsta. Hann spurði at Sváfni konungr átti dóttur allra¹ fegrsta; sú hét Sigrlinn. Iðmundr hét jarl hans; Atli var hans sonr er fór at biðja Sigrlinnar til handa konungi. Hann dvalðisk vetr langt með Sváfni konungi. Fránmarr hét þar jarl, fóstir Sigrlinnar; dóttir hans hét Álf. Jarlinn réð, at meyjar var synjat, ok fór jarlinn heim. Atli jarls sonr stóð einn dag við lund nokkurn, en fugl sat í limunum uppi yfir hánun ok hafði heyrt til, at hans menn kylluðu vænstar konur þær, er Hjörvarðr konungr átti. Second Lay of Hallow Hundingsbane
(Helgakviða Hundingsbana aðra)

BPG BPA Helgi fekk Sigrúnar ok áttu þau sonu; var Helgi eigi gamall. Dagr Høgna sonr blótaði Óðin til fǫðurhefnda. Óðinn léði Dag geirs síns. Dagr fann Helga, mág sinn, þar sem heitir at Fjǫturlundi. Hann lagði í gǫgnum Helga með geirnum. Þar fell Helgi en Dagr reið til fjalla ok sagði Sigrúnu tíðindi:

BPB Hallow got Sighrun, and they owned sons; Hallow was not old. Day, son of Hain, blooted^C to Weden to take revenge for his father. Weden lent Day his spear. “Noble beast I am called, but I have walked as the motherless lad. A father I own not, like the sons of men do; I walk alone.”

[Fathomer quoth:]

3 „Veizt, ef föður né átt-at · sem fira synir,
2 af hverju vastu undri alinn?“

“Knowest thou, if thou haddest not a father like the sons of men, by which wonder thou wast born?”

[Siward quoth:]

4 „Étterni mitt · kveð’k þér ókunnigt vesa
2 ok mik sjalfan hit sama:
Sigurðr ek heiti · Sigmundr hét minn faðir
4 es hef’k þik vápnum vegit.“

“My lineage I say is unknown to thee, and my self the same.^a Siward I am called—Sighmund was called my father—who with weapons have struck thee.”

^aThe meaning is that Fathomer would not recognize Siward's lineage (i.e. his father) or name, since he is an orphan who up until this point has not won any glory. He is not saying that he is lineage is unknown even to himself, since sjalfan mik ‘my self’ is accusative, not dative.

[Fathomer quoth:]

5 „Hværr þik hvatti, · hví hvætjask lézt,
2 mínu fjörvi at fara?
 Hinn fránęgi sveinn, · þú áttir fōður bitran,
4 ábornu skjór á skęð.“

“Who goaded thee—why didst thou let thyself be goaded—my life for to destroy? Gleaming-eyed swain, thou haddest a sharp father; inborn traits show quickly.^a”

^aThe original is unclear. á skęð means roughly ‘rapidly, quickly’; thus riða á skęð CV: ‘to ride at full speed’, but the other words are uncertain. La Farge and Tucker (1992) read ‘your innate qualities show quickly’, suggesting two unattested words: an adjective áborinn* ‘innate, inborn’ and a verb skjóa* ‘to show’. Yet the lack of i-umlaut in the supposed 3rd sg. pres. ind. skjór is difficult. We would expect skýr*, as in skjóta ‘to shoot,’ with 2nd/3rd sg. pres. ind. skýtr. A solution here would be reading a 2nd sg. pres. subj. skjóir, with a vowel TODO

The Lay of Attle (Atlakviða)

BPG Dauði Atla.

Guðrún Gjúkadóttir hefndi bróðra sinna, svá sem frégt er orðit. Hon drap fyrst sonu Atla, en eptir drap hon Atla ok brendi hollina ok hirðina alla; um þetta er sjá kviða ort.

The Death of Attle

Guthrun Yivicksdaughter avenged her brothers, as has become famous. She first killed the sons of Attle, and after that she killed Attle, and burned the hall and the whole hird. Regarding that this lay is wrought.

- 1 Atli sendi · ár til Gunnars
- 2 kunnan segg at ríða, · Knéfrøðr vas sá heitinn;
at gorrðum kom hann Gjúka · ok at Gunnars hollu,
- 4 þekkjum aringreypum · ok at bjóri svósum.

Attle sent early to Guthur a well-known messenger to ride; Kneefred that one was called. To the estates of Yivick he came, and to the hall of Guthur; to the hearth-surrounding benches, and to the lovely beer.

- 2 Drukku þar dróttmęgir · —ęn dyljęndr þęęđu—
- 2 vın ı valhollu, · vręiði sęusk þęir Húna;
kallaði þa Knéfrøðr · kaldri røddu,
- 4 sęęgr inn suðrøni · sat hann á bękk hóm:

There the dright-lads drank—but the concealed ones were silent—wine in the walhall; wary were they of the wrath of the Huns. Then Kneefred, the southern man, called with cold voice; he sat on a high bench:

1 dyljęndr ‘concealed ones’] Finnur Jónsson (1932) reasonably interprets this as referring to Attle’s spies at Guthur’s court.

2 valhollu ‘the walhall’] The interpretation of this compound is difficult in context. The first element val- could be (1) valr ‘falcon’, referring to the aristocratic hunting practice; (2) valr ‘Wale’^G, cognate with ‘Welsh’ but in ON referring to the French or Romans, stressing the southern location or appearance of the hall; or (3) valr ‘(collective) the battle-slain’, foreshadowing the inevitable death (feyness^C) of the Yivickings^G. In this case it is linguistically identical to Walhall^L, Weden’s hall, whither the battle-slain go.

- 3 “Atli mik hingat sendi · ríða øręndi,

Additional heroic poetry

The Lay of Hildbrand

For the text of original poem I generally present the manuscript text. I have found it impossible to produce a normalization without too heavily distorting the received text, being as it is, a blend of several dialects. I have, however, added acute accents to signify long vowels, capitalized proper names, consistently replaced p (wynn) and uu with w, and made minor corrections where the manuscript is clearly in error—these are noted in the critical apparatus. The punctuation of the original, entirely consisting of interpuncts, at times representing line breaks and cæsuræ and at others sporadically placed, has not been retained.

Where they appear in cæsuræ, the words quad Hiltibrant “Hildbrand quoth” (found in ll., 30, 49, and 58) replace the usual interpunct. I had originally planned to remove these as hypermetrical, instead indicating the speaker above the verse, but after comparison with Ylfer 3, wherein the words kvað Loki appear in the first cæsura of the verse, I have come to believe that these represent an ancient oral indication, seemingly going back as far as the Migration Period (as it seems incredulous to think that the scribe of Hild ms. would have influenced the scribe of R four centuries later in such a minor point.)

Hathbrand spoke, Hildbrand’s son: “It told me our people, the old and learned, those who earlier lived, that Hildbrand was called my father — I am called Hathbrand. Long ago he hurried east — he fled Edwaker’s hate — thither with Thedrich, and his great many thanes. He left in the land a little one to stay, a bride in the bower, a bairn ungrown, without inheritance; he rode east thither, as Thedrich was in great need of my father; — that was so friendless a man. He was to Edwaker exceptionally hostile, the dearest of thanes under Thedrich. ²Armlets used as currency during the Migration Period; ON baugr, OE béag. — The giving of rings and armlets in exchange for loyalty was common across all of Germanic Europe, as seen in the many ruler-kennings of the type “breaker of rings” (like béaga brytta “the breaker of bighs” Beowulf ll. 35, 352, 1487.) Index and dictionary

Index (INCOMPLETE!)

NOTE: This index or rather dictionary is both incomplete and inconsistently formatted. New entries will be added, and old ones be corrected and expanded in the future.

Cultural and religious expressions (C) ape (ON. api, OE. apa, OS. apo, OHG. affō, PNWGmc. apō*) In the Old Norse the word seems to mean ‘fool, buffoon’, in the other old languages apparently ‘monkey’, though this sense should be a later development of the former; why would the early Germanic tribes have a word for an animal that they had never encountered?

aught (ON. étt, OE. éht ‘possession, property’) The Nordic (paternal) clan or family line.

begale (OHG. bigalan) To affect, bewitch something using galders^C. See also gale^C.

bigh (ON. baugr, OE. béag, OHG. boug) A torc or armlet, in the migration period used as currency or tokens of loyalty (see particularly Hildbrand). often referenced in ruler-kennings.

bloot (ON. blót, OE. blót, OHG. bluoz) A sacrifice or a sacrificial feast, one of the best attested Germanic pagan practices. The animals would be sacrificed by the host, cooked in large kettles and eaten communally.

bloot-kettle The large pots used for cooking the bloot-stew.

Doom (ON. dómr, OE. dóm) Commonly ‘judgement, verdict’ (whence Doomsday, ‘Judgement Day’), in the Norse and Anglo-Saxon poetry often specifically referring to one’s fame or good reputation (that is, how others will judge one’s character and deeds). Thus High 77: “I know one that never dies: the Doom over each man dead.” is illuminated by passages in Beewolf like 884b–887a:

... · Sigemunde gesprong
æfter deaðdæge · dóm unlytel syþðan wíges heard · wyrn ácwealde hordes hyrde · ...

“For Sighmund sprang up after his day of death an unlittle [= great] Doom, since hard in conflict he defeated the Worm^C, the herder of the hoard.”;
 and 953b–955a:

... · þú þé self hafast
dédum gefremed · þæt þín dóm lyfað áva tó aldre · ...

“Thou hast for thyself by deeds accomplished that thy Doom lives for ever and ever.”

fee (ON. fé, OE. fēoh) Originally ‘cattle’, however also used in a broader sense to refer to one’s mobile wealth. For this cf. particularly High TODO.

feel-cunning (ON. ffolkunnigr) Literally ‘much-cunning, cunning in many ways’. Skilled with sorcery.

fey (ON. fēigr, OE. fēge, OHG. feigi ‘cowardly’) One doomed or fated to die, with a sense of predestination and inevitability. Its earliest use is on the Rök stone: aft uamuþ stanta runar þar + n uarin faþi faþir aft faikiā sunu “After Woemood (Vámóðr) stand these runes^C, but Warren (Varinn) painted, the father after the fey son.” It was believed that one’s See PCRN HS II:35, p. 928 ff. (TODO) fimble- (ON. fimbul-) The ultimate, final, greatest. See Fimblethyle^P, Fimblewinter^L.

five days (ON. fimm dagar) That the old Scandinavian week was five days long is well attested. According to the GolL there were six weeks in a month, and the expression five days is used as the equivalent of week in High 51 and 74, in the second of which it is contrasted with month. Related to this is the legal term fifth (ON. fimmt, OSw. fæmt), a meeting or gathering set to be held at a five-day notice. See fimt in CV, Love et al. (2020) for further discussion.

galder (ON. galdr, OE. gealdor, OHG. galdar) A magical spell or song. See the Merseburg charms (TODO?) for examples. See also gale^C.

gale (ON. gala, OE. galan, OHG. galan) To sing galders^C.

gand (ON. gandr, Latin gandus) A witch’s familiar, a spirit sent out to do her bidding. See PCRN HS I:17, p. 361 and II:26, p. 656. TODO gin- (ON. ginn-) A rare augmentative prefix. TODO.

gin-holy (ON. ginnheilagr) Sacrosanct, highest holy.

good of meat (ON. matar góðr) An old expression, appearing not just in High 39 (“I found not a generous man, or so good of meat, that a gift were not accepted;”) but also several Viking Age Runic inscriptions, such as Sm 39: mildan orða · ok matar góðan ‘mild of words and good of meat’, U 805: bónða góðan matar ‘a farmer good of meat’, U 703: mandr matar góðr · auk máls risinn ‘a man good of meat and proud in speechTM’; compare also U 739: bann var mildr matar · auk máls risinn ‘he was mild of meat and proud in speech’. — See meat-nothing^C for its opposite.

hame (ON. hamr) A skin, shape. Individuals can through magic “shift hames” (ON. skipta hōmum), and leave their human hames behind, instead entering into the shapes of wolves, bears, birds. During this process the original hame would be sleeping in a vulnerable state, as described in the Saw of the Walsings, chap. TODO: . See also feather-hame^P, town-riders^C, evening-riders^C.

harrow (ON. hǫrgr, OE. hearg, PNWGmc. harugar*) A cairn constructed for ritual purposes. Hindle 10 describes one: “A harrow^C he made for me, loaded with stones; now that stone-pile is become into glass. He reddened [it] in fresh blood of oxen; Oughtthere^P ever trusted on the Ossens^G.” See also wigh^C.

hold (ON. hollr, OE. hold, OS. hold, OHG. hold) ‘Favourable, loyal, gracious’, often of a ruler towards his subject (in the sense of ‘gracious, benevolent’) or the reverse (in the sense of ‘loyal, devoted’). Mirroring these earthly relations, it is likewise often used to refer to divine grace, both of the Christian God—thus in the Ecclesiastical Laws of King Cnut ALIE I (p. 372): Ðam byþ witodlice God hold þe bið his bláforde rihtlice hold ‘Indeed God is hold towards him who is rightly hold towards his lord’—but in the oldest Scandinavian material likewise of the Heathen gods. Thus Lock 4: holl rēgin ‘hold Reins^G’, and Ordrun 10 (TODO: Numbering is very uncertain):

Svá hjalpi þér · hollar vettir,

Frigg ok Freyja · ok fleiri goð

‘So help thee hold wights^C; Frie^P and Frow^P, and more gods [...]’.

The word is also used in this way several medieval oath-formulæ, for instance in the Elder West-Geatish Law: Svá sé mér goð holl ‘So may the gods(!) be hold towards me,’ in medieval Norwegian laws (NGL2[197,397]) and Grey-Goose (TODO: cite): Guð sé mér hollr ef ek satt segi, gramr ef ek lýg ‘God be hold towards me if I speak truly, wroth if I lie,’ in Grey-Goose (TODO) also: Sé guð hollr þeim er heldr griðum, en gramr þeim er grið rýfr ‘God be hold towards him who keeps the truce, but wroth against him who breaks the truce’. I refer to Löffler (1895) for further discussion on these formulæ.

holdness Closely connected to this is of course the abstract noun holdness (ON. hylli, OE. hyldu, OHG. huldi) ‘favour, loyalty, grace,’ with the same semantics as the adjective.

Notably, this word appears three times in connection with the grace of gods in the poetry, namely in Grimner 43, where (according to my interpretation) the preparer of food at the bloot is said to earn the “holdness of Woulder^P and of all the gods;” and Grimner 51 where the disgraced king Garfrith is said to have been bereft of “my [= Weden’s] support; of all the Ownharriers (see note to the v.), and of Weden’s holdness”. Weden’s holdness (Óðins hylli; the phrase is identical in both occurrences) is also mentioned in a verse by Hallfred (edited as Hfr Lv 7 by Diana Whaley in SkP V) where the scold states that: ‘The whole race of man has wrought songs to win the holdness of Weden; I recall the fully rewarded works of our kinsmen/ancestors.’

From all these citations the Germanic view on divine favour is clear: the gods are hold towards those who do good works, which in the aforementioned instances include swearing true oaths, faithfully observing truces, partaking in the bloot, following rules of hospitality and composing poetry—and gram^C ‘wroth’ towards those who do the opposite.

- thule (ON. þula) A poetic list, typically of various items of a category (e.g. gods, legendary horses) or poetic synonyms (e.g. for swords, men, Weden). Degoratively also a ditty, poorly composed poem.

thyle (ON. þulr, OE. þyle, PNWGmc. þulir*) A sage who through rote learning has acquired a large amount of mythological lore (cf. þula ‘a list in poetic form; a ditty, bad poem’ and þylja ‘to recite, to chant’). Thus Weden^P is the Fimblethyle^P, being the unbeaten master of lore, as can be seen in his wisdom contests (like Webþrithner). Runic inscription DR 248 (Snoldelev) suggests the thyle may have tied to a specific place, and in Beowulf it seems to have been a court position, with the poet Unferth being described (l. 1456) as the “thyle of Rothgar”.

wale (ON. vǫlr) The staff or sceptre, especially of a wallow. TODO: archeological finds, mention Sutton Hoo.

wallow (ON. vǫlva, OE. wealwe* (cf. ON. svǫlva, OE. swealwe ‘swallow’)) A sibyl, seeress, oracle. The word derives from the wale^C, a staff or sceptre probably used for ritual purposes.

wigh (ON. vé, OE. wéoh, wīh, PNWGmc. wīhą*) A holy shrine or sanctuary. It seems that where the harrow^C was a pile of stones or cairn used for carrying out rituals, the wigh was an enclosed space. The earliest Norse attestation is the runic inscription Ög N288 (Oklunda), which reads: “Guthar <= Gunnarr> painted these runes, and he fled, guilty. Sought this wigh, and he fled into this clearing. And he bound. [...]” The implication seems to be that the wigh was considered so sacred that Guthar could not be apprehended or punished for his crime while in it. — In Old English the word means ‘pagan idol’. It is not immediately clear which meaning is the original one, but in this edition the Norse sense has been adopted, since the Anglo-Saxon sources are all of a Christian nature. The Beowulf name Wighstone (Wīh- or Wēohstān) in any case suggests it is the Norse meaning, since ‘idol-stone’ makes little sense.

wode (ON. óðr, OE. wód, PNWGmc. wōþur*) Heener^P’s gift to men, though the name would suggest it be from Weden^P. The word has several related meanings: ‘poetic inspiration, madness, rage’.

People and objects (P)

Attle (Attila, ON. Atli, OE. Ætla, MHG. Etzel, PNWGmc. Attilō*) The ruler of the Huns^G (historically from 434–453). Husband of Guthrun^P, and with her father of Earp and Oatle^P. and murderer of I HHb 54, SiL 11, I Gr 23, ShS 28, 29, 33, 37, 54, 56, 57, II Gr 26, 38, 45, III Gr 1, 9, BnOr 0, OdW A, 2, 22, 23, 25, 26, 30, 31, AtD 0, AtL 1, 3, 15, 17, 18, 27, 31, 32, 34, 36, 37, 38, 41, 43, B, AtS 2, 4, 21, 22, 44, 52, 60, 64, 71, 73, 77, 80, 86, 87, 97, 98, 108, 113, 117, FGr 0, GrB 12, Ham 6.

Balder (ON. Baldr, OE. Bældæg (not directly cognate), OHG. Balter, PWGmc. Baldrar*) The beautiful son of Weden^P, slayed by his brother Hath^P, avenged by his other brother Wonnel^P.

Earp and Oatle (ON. Erpr ok Eitill) The sons of Attle^P and Guthrun^P.

Earth (ON. jǫrð, OE. eorþe, OHG. erda, PNWGmc. erþu*, PGmc. erþō*) The personified Earth. Through Weden^P the mother of Thunder^P.

Feather-hame (ON. ffaðrbamr) A hame^C owned by the Ease, by which its wearer flies like a bird, more specifically a falcon, between the Homes^C.

Frie (ON. Frigg, OE. Frige*, OHG. Frija, PNWGmc. Frijju*) Wife of Weden^P, mother of Balder^P. Related to Full^P, who is either her sister (Second Merseburg Charm, though this may be metaphorical, as in Hindle 1) or her maid-servant (the Norse sources).

Earp and Oatle (ON. Erpr ok Eitill) The sons of Attle^P and Guthrun^P.

Guthrun (ON. Gudrún) Daughter of king Yivick^P, sister of Guthur^P and Hain^P. The wife of Attle^P.

Hain [Hain 1] (ON. Hogni, OE. Haguna, Hagena, OHG. Hagano, Ger. Hagen, PNWGmc. Hagunō*) A Nifling^G and Yivicking^G, son of king Yivick^P, brother of Guthur^P and Guthrun^P. In AtL he defeats seven warriors before being captured by Attle^P, who has his heart cut out at the request of Guthur.

Hain 2 [2] A petty king of East Geatland^L, contemporary with Granmer^P, the king of Southmanland^L and Ingeld Illred, the Ingling^G king of Upland^L.

Hath (ON. Hǫðr) The blind son of Weden^P, the slayer of his brother Balder^P.

Heener (ON. Hónir, PNWgmc. Hónijar) An obscure god. Rydberg1886[552] has convincingly argued that he is connected with the stork, connecting his name with the Greek ῥακίς 'swan' and Sanskrit śakuna 'bird of omen', and noting that his epithets langi fōtr 'long foot' and aurkonungr 'mud-king' (both found in Scold 22) accurately describe the stork.

He gives wode^C TODO.

Hindle (ON. Hyndla) A witch awoken by Frow in Hindle.

Millner (ON. Mjöllnir, OE. Meldne*, PNWGmc. Meldunjar*) Powerful hammer owned by Thunder.

Oughter (ON. Óttarr, OE. Óththere, PNWGmc. Ōhtabarjar*) TODO

Rotholf (ON. Hrólfr kraki, OE. Hrǫpulf, PNWGmc. Hrōpiwulfar*) A king of the Shieldings^G (see family tree). As foreshadowed in Beewolf 1017–9, 1180–90, he betrays the sons of Rothgar^P, his cousins Rethrich and Rothmund^P, in order to take the throne for himself. In the later Icelandic tradition this has been forgotten, and he is consistently portrayed as a heroic king.

- Rothgar (ON. Hróarr, OE. Hrōþgár, PNWGmc. Hrōþigairar*) A king of the Shieldings^G (see family tree), one of the main characters in Beowulf.
- Thunder (ON. Þórr, OE. Þunor, OHG. Donar, PNWGmc. Þonarar*) Son of Weden^P and Earth^P.
- Weden (rhymes with leaden; ON. Óðinn, OE. Wóden, Wēden, OHG. Wuotan, PNWGmc. Wōdanar*) Chief of the Ease^G, his name is clearly related to wode^C, referring to his role as the patron of scolds^C and berserks^C. Husband of Frie^P, and by her father of Balder^P. Also father of Thunder^P by Earth^P. Brother of Heener^P and Lothar^P.
- Wider (ON. Víðarr) A son of Weden^P, who avenges him at the Rakes of the Reins^L.
- Wonnell (ON. Váli, PWgmc. Wanila ‘the little Wane^G (uncertain)’) The son of Weden^P, who one-night old avenged his brother Balder^P through slaying Hath^P, his half-brother.
- Woulder (ON. Ullr) A rather obscure god. He is mentioned in connection with oath-rings (TODO) and the setting of ritual fires (Grimner TODO). These obscure references are likely related to the interesting finds at Lilla Ullevi (‘the small wigh^C of Woulder’) in Upland, Sweden, consisting of several dozen fire striker-shaped iron amulet rings dating to 660–780 (for a detailed description see (af Edholm, 2009)).
- Yimer (ON. Ymir, OE. Yime*) The first ettin, probably equivalent to Earyelmer^P.
- Yivick (ON. Gjúki, OE. Gifca, OHG. Gibicho, MHG. Gibeche) King of the Burgends^G (historically from late 300s–407) of the Nifling dynasty, ancestor of the Yivickings^G. Father of Guthrun^P, Guther^P and Hain^P.

Groups and tribes (G)

TODO: Map of rough tribal areas. Genealogies.

- Danes (ON. danir, OE. dene, PNWGmc. danír*) A tribe in eastern modern-day Denmark and southern Sweden. They probably originated in Scania in southern Sweden, before moving westwards into the Danish isles and eventually Jutland, driving out the Earls^G and Jutes^G. Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO
- Dwarfs (ON. dvergar, OE. dweorgas, OHG. twerca, PNWGmc. dvergór*) Earthly (chthonic) supernatural beings, often referred to as living in rocks and mountains. Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO
- Ease (rhyming with geese; ON. ésir, OE. ése, PNWGmc. ansiwir*; sg. os, ON. áss, OE. ós, PNWGmc. ansur*) A group of Gods, though the word can also refer to all the Gods. See Gods^G, Tues^G, Wanes^G, Reins^G. Noted members: Weden^P, Thunder^P, Frie^P, Hath^P and Balder^P Attestations: TODO

- Ease and Elves (ON. ésir ok alfar, OE. ése ende ielfe, PNWGmc. alβīr jah ansiwīr*) A merism; both heavenly and earthly spiritual beings. Notably the two words always occur in this order (never ‘Elves and Ease’), even in the Old English.
- Elves (ON. alfar, OE. ielfe, PNWGmc. alβīr*) Earthly (chthonic) supernatural beings. Possibly ancestral spirits? Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO
- Ettins (ON. jötnar, OE. eotenas, PNWGmc. etunór*) The fundamental enemies of the Gods, the agents of chaos and disorder. See Rises^G, Thurses^G. Noted members: Hymer^P, Thrim^P, Webthritner^P, Yimer^P Attestations: TODO
- Geats (ON. gautar, OE. géatas, PNWGmc. gautór* from geut-* ‘to pour’, perhaps ‘the libators’) A tribe in what is today southern-central Sweden. See also Geatland^L, Swedes^G. Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO
- gin-Reins (ON. ginnregin) gin-^C + Reins^G. The sacrosanct, highest divine powers.
- Gods (ON. goð, OE. godu, OHG. gota, PNWGmc. godu*) TODO. Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO
- Huns (ON. búnir, OE. Húne, OHG. Húni, Hunni, PNWGmc. búnir*) An invading Asiatic tribe in the Migration Period. In the legendary material their cultural and ethnic foreignness is not seen. Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO
- Inglings (ON. yinglingar, PNWGmc. ingwalingōr* ‘the descendants of Ing^P’) Difference between this term and Shelvings^G is a bit unclear. They seem to be used synonymously in the Norse sources, whereas the English only use the later.
- Nears (ON. níarar njárar) A Swedish tribe, only mentioned in Wayland, where it is ruled by king Nithad^P. The name and location may allow us to connect them with the Swedish province of Närke, cf. Old Swedish: Nærikjar ‘inhabitants of Närke’, Nærisker ‘belonging to Närke; Nearish’, in which case the Old Swedish stem nær- (with unclear vowel length, though it is probably long) would be a reduced form of níar-, njár-.
- Ossens (ON. ósynjur) The women of the Ease^G, see there.
- Ownharriers (ON. einherjar, OE. ánbergas*) Earthly (chthonic) supernatural beings, often referred to as living in rocks and mountains. Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO
- Reins (ON. rogn, regin) The divine powers. Based on Webthritner (TODO) the term may be more closely associated with the Waness^G than the Ease^G.
- Saxons (ON. saxar, OE. Seaxan, Seaxe) TODO. Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO

- Shieldings (ON. skjöldungar, OE. Scyldingas, PNWGmc. skeldungóR*) The descendants of Shield^P; the legendary Danish^G royal dynasty. With Harward^P's death after his slaying of Rotholf^P their rule ended. TODO Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO
- Shelvings (ON. skilfingar, OE. scilfingas, PNWGmc. skilþingóR*) The descendants of Shelf^P; the legendary Swedish^G royal dynasty. The exact difference between the terms Shelvings and Ingling^G is unclear, but the first may have referred to the old royal family in Sweden, while the latter to the Norwegian branch which claimed descent from the former. TODO Noted members: TODO Attestations: Hindle 15, 20
- Swedes (ON. svíar, OE. swéon, PNWGmc. swibanír*) The tribe around the Mälar valley in eastern Sweden. Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO
- Thurses (sg. Thurse; ON. þurs, OE. þyrs, OS. thuris, OHG. duris, PNWGmc. þurisar*) Possibly a poetic synonym for Ettin^G. See also Rime-Thurses^G. Noted members: TODO Attestations: Wäl 8, Shr 31, 35, 36, Hyme 17, Thr 5, 10, 21, 24, 29, 30, Alw 2, I HHb 40, HHb 27.
- Tues (ON. tívar, PNWGmc. tíwóR*) A poetic synonym for Gods^G. Attestations: TODO
- Wanes (ON. vanir, OE. wan-?) A subgroup or tribe of the gods, associated with fertility, harvests and fishing. Noted members: Nearth^P, Ing^P, Frow^P Attestations: TODO
- Yivickings (ON. gjúkungar) The descendants of Yivick^P, including Guthur^P, Guthrun^P and Hain^P. Attestations: TODO

Place names, locations and events (L)

- Ettinham (ON. Jötunhæimr, Jötunabæimr) The 'Ettin^G-Home^C' or 'home of the Ettins'; the eastern realm of chaotic and inhospitable beings. See also Eastway^L, Outyard^L.
- Hell (ON. hēl, PNWGmc. halju*, Got. halja) The underworld, personified as and formally identical with Hell^P. After Christianity the word came to refer to the Christian hell (= Gehenna), as is the case in all attested languages apart from the Old Norse. See also Nivelhell^L.
- Middenyard (ON. Miðgarðr, OE. Middangeard, OS. Middilgard, OHG. Mittilgart, Got. midjun-gards) The 'middle enclosure'; the realm of men. See also Osyard^L, Outyard^L.
- Nivelhell (ON. niflhel) 'Mist-Hell', from the poetic evidence it seems like it may originally have been a synonym for Hell^L. In poetry it is attested in Webthritbner TODO: níu kom 'k þeima | hld fyr Niflhel neðan, hinig deýja ór helju halir. 'into nine homes I came, beneath Nivelhell; thither die men out of Hell', the second by Dreams 2: reð niðr þaðan | hld niflheljar til;

mótti hvelpi, |bld þeim's ór hǣlju kom. '[Weden] rode down thence to Nivel-hell; met the whelp that out of Hell came.' Possibly the distinction was held by the first poet but not the second.

Osyard (ON. Ásgarðr) The 'enclosure of the Ease'^G; the heavenly realm. See also Middenyard^L, Outyard^L.

Outyards (ON. Útgarðar) Not eddic. The 'outer enclosures', described in Ylfær. See also Ettinham^L, Middenyard^L, Osyard^L.

Rakes of the Reins (ON. ragna røk) The 'fates of the Reins'^G, euphemism for the destruction of the world.

Rakes of the Tues (ON. tíva røk) The Rakes of the Reins^L.

Up-heaven (ON. Upphiminn, OE. Uþheofon, OS. Upphimil, OHG. úfbimil) Highest heaven. See also Earth and Up-heaven^L.
