Germanic alliterative poetry

Historical significance

The historical-literary significance of the Old Germanic poetry is twofold. On the one hand it forms the oldest extensive monuments in its respective languages, and indeed the earliest indigenous Germanic literature (the Gothic being wholly derivative and translational). It lays the ground for the Nibelungenlied and Chaucer, who in turn precede such famous writers as Shakespeare and Wagner. It forms the first and most important source of our knowledge about the ancient folk-life of Northern Europe.

On the other hand it is by no means an innovative or newly created genre. Already, and perhaps especially, in our oldest sources the language is rich with expressions and images, many of great antiquity: "sea-stallions" sail across the ocean; the sun is drawn across Heaven in her chariot; feasts are held in great chiefly halls. These motifs are mirrored by Homer and the Rigveda, and must go back as far as the Bronze Age.

The language likewise overflows with archaic poetic synonyms. Indo-European words otherwise extinct in all Germanic languages find their last refuge in the alliterative poetry. Such are the Old English eoh, Old Norse jór, corresponding to the Sanskrit áśva, Latin equus, all meaning 'god'; Old Norse týr 'god', corresponding to Sanskrit dēvá, Latin deus, all meaning 'god'; Old English and Old Norse fold 'earth, land', corresponding to Sanskrit pr̥thivī́ 'id.' The fact that many of these relate to the cult shows that the Germanic religion was not as innovative as is commonly supposed.

The organizing poetic principle of alliteration must also have been in effect for some time. Even the earliest scalds and scops have dozens of synonyms for words like man, sword, horse, and hall. Needless to say, many of them—like jór above—are very old, and only found in poetry.

Meter(s)

The Old Germanic poetry has two primary structural elements: stress and alliteration. The exact count of syllables is less important, and end-rhyme is only used as a sporadic flourish.

Stress

When scanning alliterative meter each syllable is generally classed as having either primary stress (p), secondary stress (s), or no stress (x).

Primary stress is reserved for the root syllable in a word, which is not always the same as the first syllable. Compare the English word beginning, where the stress pattern is xPx; the primary stress falls on the syllable ginn-.

Secondary stress falls on the second element in a compound word.

Not all words have the same stress; the general rule is that nouns and adjectives have stronger stress than verbs, which in turn have stronger stress than prepositions and pronouns. Where exceptions occur this coincides with semantic stress, e.g. in a statement like "It was you!"

Alliteration

The following rules describe Germanic alliteration:

1. Alliteration is the resonance between two stressed syllables beginning with the same "sound", e.g. sand with receive, or great with begin.
2. Any vowel or diphthong can alliterate with any other vowel or diphthong.

3. s and the clusters sk, sp and st are counted as four distinct “sounds”.

Further, in West Germanic poetry,

4. g and j are treated as the same sound.

In the present edition alliterating sounds are marked with red font.

Lines

Most alliterative poetry is written in the same common meter, which in Old Icelandic poetics gets the name fornyrðislag ‘measure of ancient words’. The smallest metrical division is the position, a concept related but not identical to the syllable. For instance, two short syllables (that is, one where a short vowel is followed by a single consonant) can resolve into a single position.

Four positions—two stressed, two unstressed—make up the normal half-line or verse. Two half-lines separated by a short break or *cæsur*a (here represented by the interpunct “.”) form a couplet or long-line. The first half-line (or a-verse) may have either one or two alliterations on the stressed positions, with preference for the first position over the second. The second half-line (or b-verse) must always have an alliteration on its first stressed position; never on its second.

In the present edition each long-line is printed on a new line. This is already standard for the publication of West Germanic poetry, whereas many editions of Scandinavian poetry print each half-line.

Fits and stanzas

Bigger structures are fits and stanzas. The former are found in the Old Saxon and English traditions, the latter only in the Scandinavian.

A fit is a section or canto in a longer epic poem. It does not have a fixed length, but is generally around 70–85 lines long. Thus the 3182-line Beow is divided into 44 fits (for an average of 72 lines per fit); the surviving 5983 lines of Healend are divided into 71 (for an average of 84 lines per fit). It is probably not a coincidence that the length of the fit is similar to the length of shorter legendary poems like Guðr I or Hildebrand. In Healend a new fit can begin in the *cæsur*a; this does not happen in Beow.

In Scandinavian poetry a stanza is a group of long-lines, typically (but far from always) four. The regularity of stanza-length varies from poem to poem.

The present corpus

The scope of the present corpus is large; when complete it will contain most alliterative poetry extant in Old Germanic languages. The poetry is grouped into the following categories:

1. Norse Mythic poetry, i.e., that which directly treats the Germanic mythology. This category is exclusively Norse for the simple reason that no West Germanic or Gothic mythic narrative poetry survive.
2. Heroic poetry of the Codex Regius. Since the heroic portion of the Codex Regius forms a coherent text, it is edited in full.
3. Other Norse Heroic poetry from sources other than the Codex Regius.
4. West Germanic Heroic Poetry in Old English and Old High German.
5. Galders, i.e., alliterative spells and charms, both from runic inscriptions and latinate manuscripts.
6. Poetry on Christian subjects. This category includes explicitly Christian poems where the new religion or its stories are at the core of the work (Christian heroic poems depicting native legends, like Beow and Hildebrand, are not included here).
7. Runic poetry, apart from that already edited under Galders above.

Exclusions

The (non-mythological) Norse alliterative poetry found in the saws of Icelanders and of ancient ages (forð-aldar-sögur) is excluded. It has already been admirably rendered in the SkP series. It would also require a somewhat different structure in terms of how it is rendered; the underlying poetry is often impossible to take out of its prose context, and in some cases it is questionable whether it ever existed on its own, or whether it was simply composed on by the prose author. I think it would be more conscientious to edit the whole saws as prosimetra; this falls outside of the scope of the present edition, but I am not adverse to such an undertaking in the future.

Manuscripts

Norse Eddic poetry

The by far most important manuscript is GKS 2365 4to, here R. It dates to the 1270s and has 45 surviving foll., containing TODO poems. The poems can be split into two groups; the first (on foll. 1–20) dealing mostly with mythology, the second (on foll. 20–45) with heroic legend. Scribal characteristics show that these two parts have been copied from separate source manuscripts.

R is not a mere anthology of poems, but shows substantial editorial input as well. Short prose sections tie a group of the mythological poems together into a loose narrative, though it is clear from their style and language that they have originally been separate works. When it comes to the heroic poems long prose segments occur both within and between them, creating a saw[†]-like prosimetrical form where the prose sometimes comes to dominate the poetry. A manuscript closely related to the heroic half of R has clearly served as the main source for large swathes of the younger VǫlsS.

A large gap famously occurs in the heroic half; between foll. 32 and 33 one quire has gone missing. Its contents are mostly unknown, but it would have included the end of Sigrdr and the beginning of the Fragmentary Lay of Siward (TODO). Some of the stanzas probably contained in it may be restored from the VǫlsS, and these are edited in Fragments from the Saw of the Walsings below. For further literature on R see TODO.

Second in importance stands is AM 748 I a 4to, here A. It dates to the C14th and is but a fragment, consisting of just 6 foll. It contains only poems found in the mythological part of R, but in a different order from that ms., nor is there any trace of a frame narrative. R and A do share a fair bit of prose, a fact which suggests that both stem from a common manuscript archetype, rather than being independent witnesses of oral tradition.

On the first two foll. are contained the final stanzas of Hárþ (1r–v), the complete Bdr (1v–2r), and the first stanzas of Skm (2r–v). After this there is a gap; the next four foll. contain the second half of Vǫfþ (3r–v), the complete Grm (3v–5v) and Hym (5v–6v), and the beginning of the prose introduction to Vkv (6v). A is the only medieval attestation of Bdr, and the poems shared with R are clearly not directly copied thence. This makes it very valuable for textual criticism. For further literature on A see TODO.

We find quotations from several Eddic poems in Gylf and Skm, the first two sections of Snorre's Edda. Snorre reproduces stanzas from (TODO) Vsp, Vǫfþ, and Grm in Gylf; Grotta is attested in full in Skm. Apart from these, Snorre also reproduces a few otherwise unknown stanzas in Eddic meters, which are edited below under Eddic fragments from Snorre's Edda. The four main mss. for the Prose Edda are:

1. Codex Regius of the Prose Edda S (GKS 2367 4to; 1300–1350)

2. Codex Trajectinus T (Traj 1374; a c. 1595 paper copy of a ms. closely related to S.)
3. Codex Wormianus W (AM 242 fol.; 1340–70)
4. Codex Upsaliensis U (DG 11; 1300–25)

When all four mss. agree on a reading the abbreviation G is used synonymously with STWU. For discussion on their internal stemmatics and origins I refer to Haukur Þorgeirsson (2017).

A few other Eddic-style poems from various sources are also included in the present edition. The fragmentary Rþ is found at the end of W. TODO (Svipdagsmál and Grg) are found only in post-reformation Icelandic paper mss., namely TODO. While I have not consulted such paper mss. for poems attested in medieval mss., I have had to rely on them for these poems. About these poems it must be said that their late attestation does not necessarily prove them to be late compositions. A good proof of this is Bdr, which is first attested in the fragmentary A, and then (with some interpolated stanzas) in much later paper mss. We cannot exclude that some of these poems would have existed in other lost medieval mss., perhaps even on the now-lost pages of R or A.

Old English poetry

The edited Old English poetry primarily derives from a few manuscripts. Particularly important are the Exeter Book and Lacning.

Old Saxon and High German poetry

There are no collections of alliterative poetry in these languages; instead the manuscript situation will be discussed in the Introduction to each individual text.

The present edition

The present edition is divided into two equally large parts, presented side by side. Each stanza or group of verse lines is presented first in the original Old Germanic language, and then in English translation.

The Old Germanic text

In the present edition are found texts in four Old Germanic languages: Old Norse, Old English, Old Saxon, and Old High German. All texts have been normalized according to my own standardised orthography for the respective languages. The orthographies are all designed to follow three core principles:

1. A faithfulness to the spoken language at the time when the texts were written, and the distinctions demonstrably found therein.
2. A respect for the etymological origin of words, and their distinctions.
3. A striving for a uniform orthography across the various languages, so that the same etymological sound should be written with the same character.

These choices often stand in conflict with the orthography of the original manuscripts and with most earlier philological tradition, whence there is some reason to justify them. My goal is to render the texts themselves in a manner that gives as much philological information to the reader as possible—not to present a facsimile edition for students of paleography. This follows the philological methods used for printing e.g. the RV, which is generally printed in an entirely scholarly latinized orthography, not the original devanagari. Regardless, such important traits of the original manuscript tradition as the long ſ, arbitrary punctuation, arbitrary spelling, and lack of line breaks, are seldom reproduced in modern editions of Old Germanic poetry.

General orthographic conventions

The following orthographic conventions are followed for all Old Germanic languages:

1. The voiceless dental fricative is always written with the letter þ, never th.
2. Long vowels are marked with the acute accent, never the macron or circumflex, excepting
3. those which have their origin in earlier diphthongs, which are written with the circumflex.
4. In compounds where the first element has primary stress the elements are separated with a dash,
5. but where the first element is a preposition they are separated with an interpunct.

Below follow specifications for each specific language.

Normalization of Old Norse

My Old Norse orthography is inspired by Finnur Jónsson (1932) in that it strives for a more archaic form than that of the surviving mss.; a form that instead represents the poetry as it may (in many cases, must) originally have looked. For this reason, it often has more in common with the proposed orthography of the First Grammatical Treatise than with the standard Old Icelandic orthography seen in most editions. The following list describes the differences from the standard Old Icelandic orthography:

1. I distinguish short e (from etymological short e) and short ɛ (from etymological short a + i-umlaut).
2. I distinguish long á and ǫ, as done by the First Grammatical Treatise.
3. I use ó and é rather than the traditional œ and æ, to represent the vowels descended from Proto-Norse ō and ā after i-umlaut (cf. the short ø, ɛ < o, a + i-umlaut).
4. I distinguish long nasal vowels ā, ē, ī, ō, ū from long oral á, é, í, ó, ú, as done in the First Grammatical Treatise.
5. I restore the old s—which in modern Scandinavian and even in most Old Norse manuscripts has become r, but which is found consistently in old manuscripts such as AM 237 a fol (c. 1150), and fossilized in forms like þaz (i.e. þat's) in R—in the words es ‘which, that, where, when’, and in inflections of vesa (later vera) such as es ‘is’ (3rd sg. pres. ind.) and vas (3rd sg. pret. ind.). The following forms retain the r, as it is there the result of Verner’s law, and not of this (much younger) sound change: the pl. pres. ind. (erum etc.), the pl. pret. ind. (vǫrum etc.), and the pl. pret. subj. (vǫrim etc.)
6. When metrically benefactor, I contract ek ‘I’, eru ‘are’, and es ‘which; is’ to ’k, ’ru and ’s, respectively.
7. I use Finnur Jónsson (1932)’s way of distinguishing between the relative particle es and the verb es: the first is appended to the previous word with only an apostrophe (e.g. bann's ‘he who’), while the second is separated by a space (e.g. bann ’s ‘he is’).

Normalization of Old Swedish and Danish

I employ the same conventions as those described for Old Norse above, including the marking of u-mutated a > ø (that this was indeed found in the Eastern Nordic dialects is most clearly seen by the third-person personal pronoun, which shows u-mutation in such forms as Swedish honom ‘him’ < hǫnum, hon ‘she’ < hǫn).

According to rule 3 in the general orthographic conventions above, I distinguish between ó (< ō) and ô (< au, ey); é (< ē) and ê (< ēi).

Where unstressed vowels have been reduced into an schwa-like sound spelled e, this is written with ɛ.

Normalization of Old English

I spell fronted or brightened etymological a and á with æ and é, for instance in dæg ‘day’ (< dagar*) and réd ‘advice, counsel’ (< rádar). These are contrasted with ē and é, which represent i-mutated a and á, for instance in ellen ‘zeal, courage’ (< aljanq*).

An assimilated n is marked with an overpoint, like in rule 3 of Old Norse above.

The English translation

There is now a very large number of translations of the most popular alliterative poetic texts, namely Beow and the Poetic Edda. These generally fall into two camps:

1. poetic translations, which distort the precise meaning of the text for the sake of meter, often quite radically; and
2. prose translations, which nowise preserve the style or feeling of the original.

Almost all translations, of both types, also tend toward the following inadequacies: obscuring or glossing over difficult technical and cultural terminology; rendering identically repeated phrases and words (formulae) differently at various places; and simplifying or rewriting kennings and other poetic expressions. Even worse this is often done with little in the way of notes or commentary, to a point where the reader is sometimes left entirely oblivious to the sense of the original text.

What sets my translation apart from previous English translations is that it aims to follow the style and register of the original text, without sacrificing the literal sense of the words. This unfortunately means that literality and consistency at times must sometimes come at the cost of fluid idiomatic English, but it has the advantage of giving the reader an image of not just what the original text actually says, but how it says it. The reader should keep in mind that he is in a very foreign land, that he is reading words ancient and long forgotten—not the New York Times.

Maybe this is a pointless effort? One could argue that a translation always is a betrayal, and that those truly interested in the exact meaning of every word in the original text should study just the original (in the original language). While I do agree that the sufficiently interested reader should study the original texts in the languages in which they were written (something made much easier by the present edition with its notes and parallel edition), it is still a “hard ask” for those readers who are not philologically inclined, but instead students and scholars of history, comparative mythology and religion, anthropology, or literature; those who, for whatever reason, are interested in exploring the oldest poetic heritage of the Germanic peoples of northern Europe.

Anglish proper nouns

Perhaps the single most idiosyncratic part of the present translation will be its handling of proper nouns. I have opted to render all cultural and religious terms, names of places, heroes, gods, and other entities by their English cognates (thus Thunder for Old Norse Þórr) and where such do not exist, their philologically expected English (Anglish) forms (e.g. wallow for Old Norse vǫlva).

There are two reasons for this. The first is ideological. I believe that the Old Germanic myths and poems, their gods and heroes, are a shared heritage of Northern Europe. When you translate texts from across Germany, England and Scandinavia you quickly come to notice how similar the diction is, how many names reappear. The Scandinavian Vǫlundr is the same character as the English Wēlund; likewise Norse Óðinn is the same as English Wóden. These are ultimately mere distinctions in pronunciation.

The second is aesthetic. Commonly accepted forms like Odin and Thor are debased. They do not even represent the Old Norse pronunciation as accurately as possible within the constraints of English orthography (for instance, Odin would be better anglicized as Othin). Many are also difficult for English speakers to pronounce, or lead to absurd confusions. I shudder at hearing the word ésir pronounced /aɪ'sɪːr/; even worse is when Ós-garðr becomes “ass-guard”.

Introduction

The Spae of the Wallow (Vsp) is the most comprehensive mythological text surviving from Heathen times. The poem is a spae[†] (spó ‘prophecy’) in the form of a monologue spoken by a wallow[†] (völva ‘seeress, sibyl, prophetess’) summoned by the god Woden in order to relate mythological knowledge. Woden’s frequent journeys to question various beings about mythological lore should be seen in the light of his incessant lust for knowledge and wisdom. The most similar instance is Bdr, wherein Woden summons another wallow out of her grave in Hell[†] in order to find out why the god Balder[†] is having ominous nightmares. There is also Vafþ, wherein Woden challenges the wise ettin Webthrithner[†] to a wisdom contest and defeats him. These journeys are further alluded to in Hárþ TODO.

In its being a mythic catalogue Vsp also resembles (parts of) poems like Háv, Grm, Sigrdr, and Alv, but it differs from them all in a key way: instead of being a motley collection of scattered mythological lore, Vsp offers a chronological overview of the whole Norse mythic timeline, from the creation of the world to its demise and rebirth. That is not to say that the events in it clearly described; they are related in a highly allusive fashion that presupposes that the audience is already familiar with them. There may also be some later omissions and inserts that make the poem more difficult to read.

Vsp is attested in full in two independent recensions. The first and most important is R, where it is the first poem and found on foll. 1r–3r; the other is H, where it is found in the middle of a large collection of saws and Catholics works at 20r–21r.

Many stanzas from the poem are also cited or paraphrased in Gylf, for which Vsp was clearly one of the main sources. These paraphrases are still of critical value, e.g. in st. 19, where sal ‘hall’ in the paraphrase agrees with H against R sé ‘lake’. For the four mss. of Gylf—S, T, W, and U—see the General Introduction.

For the differences between the mss. the reader may consult the following table prepared by the editor. The several stanzas in Gylf, which are quoted independently and with little relation to the order of the original poem, are marked with plus signs. The sequences containing uninterrupted quotations of several stanzas are marked with an incrementing alphabetic symbol, so that B1 is the first stanza in the second sequence, and so on. When a stanza found in a ms. is strongly divergent (e.g. st. 10, where Gylf omits the first two half-lines), its number is followed by a star. The stanzas beginning with Þá gingu regin öll ‘Then went the Reins all’ are represented by the half-line immediately following.

The poem begins with a bid for silence (1), and the wallow recalling her earliest memories (2). She then recounts the ordering of the world by the gods (3–6) and the golden age of peace and plenty (7–8), which is, however, interrupted by the intrusion of three unidentified ettin-maidens (8, and see note there). After this follow two verses about the shaping of the dwarfs (9–10), and then several originally separate dwarf-tallies (11–15), which are without doubt later inserts. Returning to the main narrative thread is described the creation and endowment of the first man and woman (16–17), Ugdrassle's Ash (18), and the three norns[†] living under it (19).

This is where the two full recensions of the poem diverge. Because of its older age and larger count of verses I have here followed the order of R: the wallow recalls how a woman named Goldwey was sacrificed and reborn three times (20), and how she, under the name Heath, practiced sorcery and witchcraft (21). She then recalls the first war in the world, between the Eese and Wanes (22–23), and alludes to the slaying of the smith, who according to Gylf 42 was promised Frow[†] and the sun and moon in exchange for building the wall of Osyard (24–25). This is followed by a cryptic verse describing Homedal's hidden silence or hearing (26).

In H the structure is quite different. After the description of the norns (19), the Eese go to decide what action to take regarding the promising of Frow to the ettin (my 24–25), and Homedal's hearing is described (26). Then follows the two verses about the old hag in Ironwood who raises the wolves that will swallow the sun and moon (40–41). After this come verses 20–23 in the same order as R (see above).

2 meiri ok minni ‘greater and lesser’ | The noun being modified is ambiguous. It may either be (a) ‘greater and lesser holy kindreds’, in which case it may be equivalent to the phrase Eese and Elves[†] (both earthly and heavenly supernatural beings; see Encyclopedia for occurrences) or (b) ‘greater and lesser lads of Homedal [MEN]’. (b) is probably to be preferred for reasons of syntax, but should not most likely be seen as referring to varying social classes; it seems unlikely that there would be slaves present in the audience of a poem like this. In any case, the wallow seems to be asking all intelligent beings present for silence, with the expression being a merism of the type ‘gods and men’; see West (2007)[99-100].

2 mögu Hëim-dalar; ‘lads of Homedal [MEN]’ | Cf. Rþ, wherein Righ, identified by the prose as Homedal, sires the ancestors of the three castes of men.

¹Cf. Vafþ 34–35 with similar phrasing. The whole introductory formula is positively Indo-European, see West (2007)[63,92–93,312].

3 jorð ... né upp-himinn ‘Earth ... nor Up-heaven’ | A well-attested formulaic cosmological word-pair found in all four Old Germanic languages with poetic traditions (ON, OE, OS, OHG), especially in concern the creation and destruction of the world. See Earth and Upheaven[†].

4 gap vas ginnunga ‘there was the Gap of Ginnings’ | See Index for suggested etymology.

²A more extensive creation narrative is found in Gylf 4–5, according to which the world first consisted of two extremities: the frozen Nivelham in the north and scorching Muspellsham in the south. From Nivelham the freezing venom-rivers called the Ilewaves[†] ran until they froze to ice, while burning lava flowed from Muspellsham. The ice and lava met in the Gap of Ginnings, “which was as calm as windless air”, and there combined to form the first being, Yimer[†], who was the ancestor of the ettins.

Sun shone from the south on the stones of the hall;
then was the ground grown with green leek.

1 Burs synir ‘the Sons of Byre’ | In Gylf 6 identified as Weden, Will and Wigh, who sacrificed Yimer and shaped the cosmos out of his body. For this see also Vafþ 20–21 and Grm 41–42.

4 grønum lauki ‘green leek’ | A sign of the golden age, since the leek was believed to be the noblest plant and had important cultural significance. This is seen from Guðr II 2, where Siward[†]’s superiority to the Yivickings[†] is compared to a stag among wild beasts, gold among silver, and a green leek in grass. The leek was valued in folk magic, as seen already on gold bracteates from the C5th and C6th, where it appears as a charm word in the form 𐌺𐌹𐌺𐌰 laukar, in one inscription paired with 𐌺𐌹𐌺 lína ‘linen’. Classical Norse attestations of magic use include Sigrdr 8, where the leek is thrown into mead against poison; and the Vǫlsþ, where a horse penis is said to be líni góddr · en laukum studdr ‘endowed with linen and supported by leeks’ in a poetic line. The leek was particularly associated with women and domestic life, as seen by its pairing with “linen”. Kennings for women frequently have the leek as a determinant (TODO: Meissner reference?), and Anon Sveinfl 1 (SkP I TODO.) sarcastically states that a battle was not sem manni · mǣr lauk eða ǫl bęri ‘as if a maiden brought a man leek or ale’.

The Sun cast from the south—the Moon’s companion—her right hand over heaven’s rim.

The Sun knew not where halls she had;
the stars knew not where seats they had;
the Moon knew not what sort of might he had.

1–2 Sól ... himin-jǫður ‘Sun ... heaven’s rim’ | om. G. 2 himin-jǫður ‘heaven’s rim’ | composite; himin fiodyr† R; ioður H. 4 stjörnur ... óttu | In G this line comes last, so that the order is sun, moon, stars.

1–2 Sól ... himin-jǫður ‘Sun ... heaven’s rim’ | Probably a poetic description of the dawn; the Sun lifted herself up over the horizon and rose for the first time.

1 sinni Mána ‘Moon’s companion’ | At times translated as ‘its moon’. This cannot be correct, as máni ‘moon’ is masculine, while sinni, dat. sg. of sinn ‘its (reflexive)’ is feminine.

2 himin-jǫður ‘heaven’s rim’ | Some recent editors have taken it upon themselves to normalize the reading of R as himin-jó-dýr ‘heaven-horse-beast’, which is not just nonsensical but also unmetrical due the stress pattern. On the other hand the reading of H, normalized to jǫður ‘rim, edge’, is clearly deficient since it lacks the necessary alliteration on b. If we see iodyr R as corrupted from iodur* we can restore himin-jǫður, as done here.

5 Máni ... átti ‘Moon ... had’ | The moon was believed to have supernatural powers and could be invoked in conflict (cf. Háv 137/7.)

Then went the Reins all onto the rake-seats:
the Yin-holy Gods, and from each other took counsel of this.
To night and the moon-phases names they gave;
morning they named, and middle day, afternoon and evening, the years for to tally.

1–2 Þà ... gétusk ‘Then ... of this.’ | A formulaic expression for the convening of the Thing of the Gods[†], identically repeated below in sts. 9/1–2, 22/1–2, and 24/1–2. Cf. also the formula shared between Bdr 1/1–3 and Prk 14/1–3, which follows the structure of the present formula very closely: Senn vǫru ǧsir · allir à þingi // ok ǧsynjur · allar à máli, // ok umb þat reðu · ríkir tívar. ‘Soon were the Eese[†] all at the Thing[†], // and the Ossens[†] all at speech, // and of this counseled the mighty Tews[†].’

In the five occurrences of these two formulae outside of the present stanza, the demonstrative pronoun þat ‘this’ clearly refers to an immediately following question introduced by a hv-word (e.g. Prk 14/4: hvé þeir Hlórriða · hamar of sótti? ‘how they Lorde’s (= Thunder’s) hammer would find?’) Following this pattern we would expect to find such a question after umb þat gétusk ‘took counsel of this’ in the present stanza, and it seems most likely to presume that they have been lost in transmission.

3–5 Nøtt ... tēlja ‘To night ... tally’ | Cf. Vafþ 23, where it is said that the sun and moon turn round in heaven ǫldum at ár-tali ‘for mankind’s tally of years’, and 25, where it is said that the Reins created the moon-phases for the same purpose.

2 þęir’s ... hę-timbruðu ‘they who ... timbered on high’ | afls kostuðu · alls freistuðu ‘[their] strength they tried; everything they tempted’ H

2 þęir’s ... hę-timbruðu ‘they who ... timbered on high’ | Two formulæ. hęrg ok hof ‘harrow and hove’ is a merism, i.e. ritual structures made of stone and wood; cf. Vafþ 38 and HHj ‘TODO’, as well as the Norwegian Christian laws that impose ‘the burning of hoves and the breaking of harrows’ (brenna hof ok brjóta hęrga). hę-timbra ‘high timber, timber on high’ is a rare compound and only occurs at one other place in the ON corpus, viz. in Grm 16, where it describes a harrow ruled by Nearth. This line has often been wondered at; why would the Gods themselves make cultic buildings? Yet they partake in ritual slaughter of beasts, divination, and feasting (e.g. Vsp 61, Hym 1, 39, Lok, Haustl 2), and their deeds form the precedent for upright human behaviour.

1–4 ALL | The whole stanza is paraphrased in Gylf ch. 14:

*Ok því nęst smíðuðu þęir málm ok stein ok tré ok svá gnóg-liga þann málm, er gull heitir, at ęll bús-gogn ok ęll reiði-gogn hęfðu þęir af gulli, ok er sú ęld kęlluð gull-aldr, áðr en spilltist af

‘And after this they smithed ore and stone and wood, and so abundantly [did they smith] that ore which is called gold, that all their house tools and riding tools were golden. And that age is called the golden age, before it was spoiled by the arrival of the women; they came from Ettinham.’

after which he describes the creation of the dwarfs (see next stanza)

1 Tęfðu ‘played Tables’ | A verb derived from tafl ‘board game’, an old borrowing from Latin tabula. “Tables” is used as a cognate translation; the exact type of board game referred to is unimportant.

3 þrjár ... þursa meýjar ‘three maidens of Thurses’ | These three maidens are never mentioned again (unless they are taken to be the three norns in st. 19, but they would then be introduced twice). It is possible that an additional stanza giving further information about them has been lost. If it originally existed, it was already absent from the version employed by the author of Gylf, who gives no new information.

4 ám-átkar ‘uncanny’ | The word ám-áttigr has a clear association with supernatural beings; trolls and ettins. It occurs in four other places in R. In Grm 11, Skm 10 and HHj 17 it modifies jotunn ‘ettin’ in a Leeds-meter c-line. In HHj 14 it is used by the daughter of an ettin to refer to a human hero.

Then went the Reins all onto the rake-seats:
the Yin-holy Gods, and from each other took counsel of this:
Who would shape the retinue of Dwarfs[†],
from the bloody surf and from the blue-black legs?

3 Hvęrr skyldi dverga ‘Who would ... of dwarfs’ | so RWU; at skyldi dverga ‘That they would ... of dwarfs’ ST; hverir skyldu dvergar ‘Which dwarfs would [shape the retinues]’ H 3 drótt ‘the retinue’ | so G; drotin ‘the lord’ R; dróttir ‘the retinues’ H 3 of skęþja ‘shape’ | spekja ‘soothe’ U 4 brimi blóðgu ‘bloody surf’ | so HSWU; Brimis blóði ‘the blood of Brimmer’ RT 4 blęum ‘blue-black’ | metr. emend. from blám R; Bláins ‘Blown’s’ HW; Bláms STU is prob. a corrupt form of Bláins

4 őr brimi ... lęggjum ‘out of the bloody ... legs’ | I think that the poem simply telling of “the bloody surf” and “the blue-black legs” fits better with its general allusive style, but the resulting composite reading may be somewhat controversial.

According to Gylf 14 the dwarfs first originated as maggots in the corpse of Yimer, out of whose bones the rocks were made (Grm 41, Vafþ 21). Dwarfs dwell in the rocks and earth; cf. for instance IngT 2, where the Swedish king Swayther (Sveigðir) disappears into a rock in pursuit of a dwarf. More difficult to explain is the creation of dwarfs out of Yimer's blood (from which was made the sea, Grm 41, Vafþ 21), since dwarfs are never said to dwell in water. — If one chooses the reading Bláinn 'Blown' (named in the thules[†] as a dwarf) instead of blám 'blue-black', then following Gurevich (Skp 2017, p. 693) one may see a kenning "the legs of Blown <dwarf> [STONE]". Blown has otherwise been read as a poetic name for Yimer, but that is never attested elsewhere.

There was Moodsowner made the worthiest of all dwarfs, but Dorn [was] second.
 They man-likenesses many did make:
 dwarfs in the earth, as Dorn said.

1 Þar vas Móðsognir | so H; Þar fómótfofnir vitnirf 'there Mootsowner wolf(?)' R. The prose of Gylf 14 agrees with H that the correct form of the name is Móðsognir, not Mótsognir. 3 þeir ... gerðu 'They ... did make' | so RHU; þar man-líkun · mǫrg of gerðusk 'There man-likenesses many were made' STW 4 i 'in' | so GH; ór 'out of' R 4 sēm Durinn sagði 'as Dorn said' | so RHSW; sem fður mennf sagði 'as door-men(?) said' T; sem fþeim dyrrinn kendiþ 'as the beasts(?) taught them' U

1–2 Þar ... annarr 'There ... second' | om. G, but the author must have had the full verse, since he paraphrases these lines in the following way: Móðsognir var ęðstr ok annarr Durinn. 'Moodsowner was the highest in rank, and Dorn the second.' before citing

3–4 þeir ... sagði 'They ... said.' | There are two conflicting interpretations of the creation of the dwarfs. Either they arose on their own; this is supported by the prose of Gylf (see note to previous st.) and by the form of the stanza quoted there (but it may have been changed to correspond to the author's vision). On the other hand, both R and H have the dwarfs Moodsowner and Dorn shaping "man-likenesses" out of soil. The present edition follows the second version.

Sts. 11–15 contain two originally distinct lists of dwarf-names; part of them are almost certainly later inserts. There is a repetition of names (Oakenshield, Great-grandfather), and more than one formulaic conclusion.

Sts. 11–13, having no repeated names, seem to belong together. If they do, st. 12, which contains the formulaic conclusion to the list, should probably switch places with 13.

Sts. 14–15 form the second group, having an introduction and a conclusion which both mention the dwarf Loffer.

3 þęir | þeim H

⁴Cf. Gylf 14: “But these came from Swornshigh (Svarinsbaugr) to the Earwongs on the Erwolds, and thence Lofer is come; these are their names: Sherper (Skirpir), Werper (Virpir), Showfind, Great-grandfather, Elf and Ing (Ingi), Oakenshield, Fale (Falr), Frost, Finn, Ginner.”

⁵Two archaic formulæ. The first literally ‘that will ever [be] up above’, cf. HarS TODO: “We two are cursed, brother, thy bane am I become! That will ever be remembered (þat mun ę uppi, but both mss. þat mun enn uppi), evil is the doom of the norons!” The second is found in a runic inscription, U 323 (980–1015): “Ever will lie—while the age lives (meþ + altr + lifir með aldr lifir)—the hard-hammered bridge, broad, after a good man.” An especially close parallel is found in Þstf Stuttdr (st. 5, Kari Ellen Gade ed. in SkP II): Ey mun uppi · Ekdils, meðan stęndr // sól-borgar salr, · svęr-gęðis fęr. ‘Always will be remembered—while the hall of the sun’s stronghold [SKY/HEAVEN > EARTH] stands—the journey of the fattener of Andle’s bird [RAVEN/EAGLE > WARRIOR].’

[R 1v/1, H 20r/26]

Until three came out of that host:
 strong and lovely Eese along the settlement;

 Ash and Emble, orlay[†]-less.⁶

1 þrír | gramm. emend.; þrjár RH 1 ór því liði | þussa brúðir ‘brides of thurses’ H is probably corrupt due to the influence of st. 8; the adjectives in l. 2 are in the masculine. 2 qflgir ok ástkir ‘strong and lovely’ | ástkir ok qflgir (norm.) ‘lovely and strong’ H

1 Unds ‘Until’ | We seem to be missing a preceding sentence here, probably being contained in a now-lost stanza. What this st. would have contained is of course impossible to know, but it may have given a reason for the creation of men.

2 at húsi ‘along the settlement’ | An adverbial, lit. ‘along the house’; the gods were not walking in the wilderness.

⁶This verse is paraphrased in Gylf 9: Þá er þeir gengu með sévar-ströndu Bors synir, fundu þeir tré tvau ok tóku upp trén ok sköpuðu af menn. Gaf inn fyrsti qnd ok líf, annarr vit ok bręring, þriði á-sjónu, mál ok heyrn ok sjón, gáfu þeim klęði ok ngfn. Hét karl-maðrinn Ask, en konan Embla, ok ólst þaðan af mann-kindin, sú er byggðin var gefinn undir Mið-garði. ‘When the sons of Byre (cf. st. 4) walked along the sea-shore they found two trees and they took up the trees and shaped men from them. The first one gave breath (qnd) and life, the second wit and movement, the third sight, speech, appearance and sight; they gave them clothes and names. The male was called Ash, and the woman Emble, and from them mankind was begotten, to whom were given the dwelling within Middenyard.’

The ON cognate of tree, tré, can also mean ‘pieces of wood’, and it is traditionally seen as referring to pieces of driftwood. Yet as pointed out by Hultgård (2006) the comparative evidence suggests that the two were in fact living, growing trees (they would thus be part of the foliage described in st. 4) and there is nothing in the sources that speaks against this.

While Ash is easily identified with the same-named wood species (Fraxinus excelsior), the etymology of Emble is much more difficult. The shaping of men from trees is used by poets in various kennings for men and women, especially in Scaldic poetry (for a short discussion see SkP I, p. lxxv ff.). While this is rarer in the Eddic corpus it does occur, e.g. in Sigrdr 5: bryn-þings apaldr ‘apple-tree of the byrnie-Thing[†] [BATTLE > WARRIOR]’.

4 skóru á skiði ‘they scored billets’ | Unclear; perhaps they carve markings for the number of years each man has to live.

⁸i.e. ‘they have carved on boards, they have laid laws, they have chosen lives’. It is well known that in Old Norse as in other old Germanic languages the simple past can have both perfective and imperfective sense. — This st. is paraphrased in Gylf 15: Þar stendr salr einn fagr undir askinum við brunninn, ok ór þeim sal koma þrjár meyjar, þær er svá heita: Urðr, Verðandi, Skuld. Þessar meyjar skapa mönnum aldr; þær kollum vér nornir. ‘There is a single fair hall beneath the ash-tree by the well, and from that hall come three maidens, who are called thus: Weird, Werthing, Shild. These maidens shape the ages of men (formulaic! TODO.); we call them norns.’

[R 1v/17, H 20v/11]

Weden hurled and shot into the troop;¹⁰ that was yet a troop-conflict earlier in the Home[†].
Broken was the plank-wall of the stronghold of the Eese;
the Wanes by a war-spae[†] did tread the fields.¹¹

2 fýrr 'earlier' | so H; fýrst 'first' R. The R reading cannot be correct as this st. is describing a different war, and thus not the first. It has probably arisen due to the similarity with st. 20/1.

¹⁰The object, a spear, is understood. This seems to reference a ritual, well-attested in the literature, wherein a war-chief would dedicate an opposing army as a human sacrifice to Weden by throwing a spear over them, typically with the incantation Óðinn á yör alla 'Weden owns you all!'; he would then own the battle-slain in that they joined him as Oneharriers[†] in Walhall[†]. Weden is also described as "owning" dead men in Hárþ 24 (namely slain nobles, contrasted with Thunder[†] who is insultingly said to "own the kin of thralls") and in runic inscription N B380 (edited below under Galders), a sort of greeting wherein the receiver is wished to be owned by Weden (and "received" by Thunder). For further literature see PCRN HS II:24, p. 560, II:25, p. 617, and especially III:42, p. 1166ff.

¹¹The Wanæs used magic spells to win the battle.

3 aurgum 'muddy' | Which should be the same mud (aurr) as in st. 19, there said of Weird's Well.

4 veði Val-fǫðrs 'Walfather's pledge' | Weden placed his eye in Mimer's well, which gives wisdom to any man who drinks from it. So Gylf 15: Þar kom Alfǫðr ok beiddisk eins drykkjar af brunninum, en hann fékk eigi, fyrr en hann lagði auga sitt at veði. 'There came Allfather and asked for a single drink from the well, but he did not get it before he laid down his eye as a pledge.'

4 Vituð ér ɛnn eða hvat? 'Know ye yet, or what?' | "Do you, Weden, know enough now, or what?", repeated in 28, 33, 34, 38, 40, 47, 60, and 61. Similar refrains are found in Bdr and Hdl.

2 fekk spjöll spak-lig ‘got foresighted tidings’ | emend.; fē spioll spaclic R

2 fekk spjöll spak-lig ‘got foresighted tidings’ | The reading of R may be interpreted either as (1): fē-spjöll spak-lig ‘foresighted wealth-spells’ or (2) fē, spjöll spak-lig ‘wealth, foresighted tidings’; both are metrically deficient. In (1) a second element in a cpd. like fē-spjöll cannot carry alliteration, and (2) has three strongly stressed nominals; in both cases fē which stands first would be expected to carry the alliteration. The word fē ‘wealth, cattle’ also makes little sense in context, since Weden is the one giving her expensive jewellery. The emendation places the verb fekk ‘got, received’ for fē. Verbs carry less stress than nouns, and the line is thus metrically equivalent to 28/3b drekkir mjöð Mímir. The line parallels st. 1, where the wallow likewise says that she will relate spjöll ‘tidings, sayings’ (cf. English gospel lit. ‘good news’ which originally translates the Greek εὐαγγέλιον). For discussion on this reading see Haukur Þorgeirsson (2020, pp. 51–53), Males (2023, p. 16).

She saw Walkirries[†] come from afar,

 Shild held a shield and Shagle another,
 Guth, Hild, Gandle and Goreshagle—now are tallied the Nans of Harn (= Weden), ready to ride the ground, the walkirries.

2 goð-hjóðar ‘land of the Gots’ | Ambiguous; ON goð-hjóð may mean either (1) ‘land of the Gots’ or (2) ‘land of the Gods’, for the difficult cluster th in Got-hjóð ‘land of the Gots’ was at some point changed to ðh. Sense (1) is preferred since it is attested in three other places in R, viz. Helr TODO and Ghv TODO and TODO; (2) is entirely unattested. One may note that ON Got-hjóð reflects the attested Gotnish self-name, Gut-þiuda, found in the October 29 entry of the Gotnish calender (TODO: reference).

The Walkirries have a particular association with the Gots, who fought the greatest battles of the Migration Period; cf. note to Vkv 1/1b.

3–6 Skuld ... val-kyrjur Shild | Judging especially by the out-of-place phrase nú eru talðar ‘now are tallied’, these four lines seem to be a later insert from a thule[†] counting the walkirries.

Told allusively in Vsp 31–33 is the myth about Balder’s death. Balder, the son of Weden and Frie, was slain with an arrow shot by his blind half-brother Hath, whose hand was guided by Lock. Weden could not slay Hath, who was his son, and so he seduced the woman Rind, apparently through love-magic (Cormac Awmundson’s TODO: seið Yggir til rindar ‘Ug won Rind through sorcery’). Rind gave birth to Wonnell, who grew very fast; after just one day he was big enough to kill Hath, which he also did, avenging Balder’s death. The other important sources for this myth are Bdr 8–11, Gylf 49, and Saxo Grammaticus (2015, pp. 3.4.1–8).

The language of Bdr is so similar to the present sts. that they must be of common origin; Bdr 11/2–4 is near-identical to Vsp 32/4–33/2. The biggest narrative difference is that Bdr mentions Rind, who is not found in Vsp.

The most elaborate narrative is found in Gylf 49, which may be shortly summarised as follows: Balder has terrible nightmares about his own death, and so his mother Frie makes all sorts of things (fire, water, venom, metals, stones, trees, diseases, beasts, et. c.) swear oaths not to harm him. After this the Eese make sport of shooting and striking at him, since he cannot be harmed. Lock is annoyed by this and approaches Frie while disguised as a woman. He finds out from her that there is one thing that did not swear the oath—the mistletoe, which was thought too young. Lock takes a mistletoe and a bow and gives it to the blind god Hath, showing him where to shoot. Hath does so, and kills Balder. After this Gylf describes Balder’s funeral (treated poetically in Wolf Ugson’s fragmentary House-drape, ÚlfrU Húsdrip in SkP III) and how the gods attempted to “weep Balder out of hell”, which failed (see Eddic Fragments in the present ed.) Gylf 50 goes on to describe how the Eese punished Lock (see st. 34 below.)

It is notable that Gylf 49–50 fails to mention Wonnell. This part of the myth may have been left out for moral reasons, but was certainly known to the author of the Prose Edda; cf. Gylf 30: Áli eða Váli heitir einn, sonr Óðins ok Rindar. Hann er djarfr í orrostum ok mjök happ-skeytr ‘Onnel or Wonnell one is called, the son of Weden and Rind. He is brave in battles and a very lucky shot’ and Skm 19: Hvernig skal kenna Vála? Svá, at kalla hann son Óðins ok Rindar, [...] hefni-ás Baldrs, dólgr Haðar ok bana hans, [...] ‘How shall one ken Wonnell? Namely by calling him the son of Weden and Rind, [...] avenging os[†] of Balder, the foe of Hath and his bane, [...]’.

The last source is Saxo Grammaticus (2015)[3.4.1–8], who retells the revenge narrative in typical euhemerized form; his versions of Hath and Balder are distinctly human generals and rulers. It may be summarized as follows: Weden takes counsel from a group of seers; one of them, Horsethief the Finn, foretells that Rind, daughter of the Russian king, will bear him another son to avenge Balder. Weden soon enlists in the king's army and leads it to great victories, but is continually spurned by the daughter. He tries various other disguises but is still refused. At last he disguises himself as an old woman and becomes her physician. When she turns sick, he binds her, supposedly in order to give her a certain foul potion—he instead rapes her, apparently with her father's consent. Their son, Bo, grows up to become a fierce raider. One day Weden summons him and reminds him of his duty to avenge his brother, Balder. Bo slays Hath in a duel, but soon perishes from his wounds.

1 tífur 'victim's' | This word is rather difficult and possibly corrupt. It may be connected with týr 'tew, god', but the dat. sg. of týr is tívi and the intrusive r is unexplained. A better explanation is given by CV, who connect it with OE tiber, tifer 'victim, hostage', but this also has some problems. blóðgum 'bloody' is masc. dat. sg., but OE tiber is neuter. If we are dealing with a masc. noun tífurr* with the same declension as jǫfurr, we would expect dat. sg. tífri*, not tífur (which would however be the expected acc. sg.).

2 folgin 'sealed' | Or "hidden". The verb fela 'hide, conceal' is used in poetry to describe burial in mounds, as in IngT 24 ("[...] And afterwards the victory-havers hid (fǫlu) the ruler on Borrey.") or the C10th Karlevi stone ("Hidden (fulkin folginn) in this mound lies he whom the greatest deeds followed; [...]")

 Wonnell, being oathbound and on the mission to avenge his brother, could not engage in such acts of personal vanity.

4 vę Val-hallar 'the woe of Walhall' | The deaths of two sons; Balder and Hath.

After Balder was avenged the Eese went to catch lock. They bound him up with his son's intestines. A snake was then placed over his face to drip venom onto it. His wife, Syein, sat over him and caught the venom in a small basin; when she had to empty it he writhed so greatly that the earth shook. This myth is found in From Lock (the prose at the end of Lok) and Gylf 50.

The following sts. are paraphrased in Gylf 52:

Þá mēlti Gangleri: „Hvat verðr þá eptir, er brenndr er himinn ok jörð ok heimr allr, ok dauð goðin öll ok allir Einherjar ok alt mann-folk, ok hafið ér áðr sagt, at hverr maðr skal lifa í nokkvörum heimi um allar aldir?“

Þá svarar Þriði: „Margar eru þá vistir góðar ok margar illar; batst er þá at vera á Gimléi á himni, ok all-gótt er til góðs drykkjar þeim, er þat þykkir gaman, í þeim sal, er Brimir heitir; hann stendr ok á himni. “Then spoke Gangler: “What will then remain, when heaven and earth and the whole world is burned, and gods are dead and all the Oneharriers and all mankind—and [still] ye have said earlier, that each man will live in some world for all ages?”

Then answers Third: “Many good dwellings are there then, and many ill: it is then best to be in Gimlee in the heaven, and it is very good of good drink for those who find joy in that, in the hall which is called Brimmer; it also stands in heaven. Another good hall is the one which stands on the Nithfells, made from red gold; it is called Sinder. In these halls good and well-mannered men will dwell.

On Neestrand is a great and bad hall, and its doors face north. It is all woven with the spines of serpents like a wicker-house, but the heads of the serpents all look into the house and blow venom, so that through the hall rivers of venom run, and in those rivers wade oath-breakers and murder-wargs, as is said here:”

after which are quoted sts. 37 and 38/1–2, followed by the prose: En í Hver-gelmi er verst ‘But in Wharvelmer is is worst’ and 38/4.

¹⁵In this st. is clearly described watery punishment in the Heathen afterlife, also seen in Reg 3–4 and possibly in Grm 21. The crimes are what one might expect from the Germanic worldview: perjury, shameful murder, and adultery with a married woman. In Anglo-Saxon and Nordic laws the committer of such crimes gained the title of nothing[†], that is, one afflicted with nithe[†] (severe shame). It is not surprising then that such nithings would be tortured by a creature named Nithehewer 'Nithe-striker'. The practice of burying in bogs and flood-marks (or generally outside of settlements) is well attested in sources about Germanic culture from Taciti Germania onwards—I consider it likely that the heavy streams in this stanza and others represent such graves. This is further elaborated on in GermanicGems2<empty citation>.

As the young agentive suffix -ari is found nowhere else in the poem it is possible that this word is corrupt. If it is, it must have occurred early in the transmission, as reflexes of tjúgari are found in all surviving mss.

1 Austr 'In the east' | The cardinal direction associated with ettins and other monsters.

¹⁶The old hag raises the cubs of the wolf Fenrer, of which a particularly fierce one will swallow the moon. According to Grm 40 the sun is chased by a wolf called Skoll, while another wolf, Hate Rothswitner's son, runs in front of her. This is elaborated upon in Gylf 12, where it is said that Skoll swallows the moon, while Hate swallows the sun. High then explains that “A lone troll-woman (gýgr) lives to the east of Middenyard in that forest called Ironwood”, and “feeds the sons of many ettins, all in the likenesses of wolves, and thereof these wolves (i.e. Skoll and Hate) come. And it is also said that from that lineage a single one becomes the mightiest, and he is called Moongarm[†]. He fills himself with the life of all those men who die and he swallows the moon and stains heaven and all the air with blood. Thereof the sun loses its rays and the winds are violent and moan hither and thither, and thus it says in the Spae of the Wallow: [...]” after which this and the following st. are quoted. This seems very much like a composite from several sources—probably Vsp 40–41 and Grm 40—but becomes contradictory when it states that two wolves swallow the moon. Assuming that this is only a confusion on the part of the author of Gylf, this st. and the next must be describing Skoll, but it is of course not impossible that there was confusion about the exact details of these events among the Heathen poets. In favour of that seems to speak Vafþ 46–47, where the sun is said to be swallowed by Fenrer (but see note there).

There sat on the mound and struck the harp
the gow's herdsman, glad Edgethew[†].¹⁷
Over him crowed in Galewood¹⁸
a fair-red cock, he who is called Feller.

1 Sat þar á haugi ‘There sat on the mound’ | The motif of ettins sitting on burial mounds is also found in Prk 6 and Skm P2. The significance of this is uncertain.

¹⁸*gagl* ‘wild goose’, maybe here referring to carrion-eating ravens? Galewood is probably the same location as Ironwood.

With the crowing of these three cocks (the first in Ettinham, the second in Walhall, the third in Hell) the destruction of the world begins, and immediately afterwards we get the first occurrence of the refrain stanza (ON stęf).

 Boulders clash and the fiends reel;
 men tread the Hellway[†] and heaven is split.

1 Surtr | Svartr U 3 gífir rata 'fiends reel' | guðar brata '[but] the gods stagger' U

2 sól val-tíva 'sun of the slain-Tew' | val-tíva is here taken as gen. sg. of val-tívar 'slain-Tews', for which cf. st. 60 below, but the sense of this is obscure. Perhaps it means that Surt's sword shines as bright as the heavenly Gods? The word may also (so CV) be read as gen. sg. of unattested val-tívi* 'tew of the slain', referring to Surt, but this is tautological: "Surt comes from the south with fire; from his sword shines the sun of Surt".

3 gífir rata 'fiends reel' | The reading of U is wo. doubt corrupt; the anachronistic masc. pl. ending -ar is proof enough, for gōð - guð 'gods' was always neuter in heathen times.

4 hęl-veg 'Hellway' | The road on which one has to travel after death to reach his final resting place. Cf. Helr.

For the following two sts. cf. the account of Vafþ 53.

1 Hlínar · harmr annarr ‘Line’s second sorrow’ | The first sorrow being the death of Balder. Line is described in Gylf 35 as a minor goddess sett til gézlu yfir þeim mǫnnum, er Frigg vill forða við háska nǫkkurum ‘placed to watch over those men which Frie wishes to protect against any particular danger’. In spite of this almost all translators and editors have understood Line as synonymous with Frie, or even asked whether her existence as a distinct goddess is not something invented by the author of Gylf. Hopkins (2017) argues that this need not be the case; as a maidservant of Frie, Line’s two sorrows would consist in her failure to protect both the son and husband of her mistress.

With the last repetition of the refrain stanza the destruction reaches its apex. Sts. 57–60 are paraphrased in Gylf ch. 53:

Þá męlti Gangleri: „Hvart lifa nokkur goðin þá, eða er þá nokkur jörð eða himinn?“ Hárr segir: „Upp skýtr jörðunni þá ór sęnum, ok er þá grōn ok fęgr. Vaxa þá akrar ó-sánir. Viðarr ok Váli lifa, svá at eigi hefir sęrinn ok Surta-logi grandat þeim, ok byggja þeir á Iða-velli, þar sem fyrr var Ás-garðr, ok þar koma þá synir Þórs, Móði ok Magni, ok hafa þar Mjöllni. Því nęst koma þar Baldr ok Hęðr frá Heljar, setjast þá allir samt, ok talast við, ok minnast á rúnar sínar, ok róða of tíðendi þau, er fyrrum hęfðu verit, of Mið-garðs-orm ok um Fenris-úlf. Þá finna þeir í grasinu gull-tęflur þęr, er ęsirnir hęfðu átt. Svá er sagt:“

“Then spoke Gangler: “Do any of the gods survive then, or is there then any earth or heaven?” High says: “Then the earth shoots up from the seas, and it is then green and fair. Then grow acres unsown. Wider and Wonnell live, for the sea and Surt’s flame have not harmed them, and they settle on the Idewolds where there earlier was Oyard; and then the sons of Thunder, Mood and Main, come there, and there they have Millner. Next come Balder and Hath from Hell; then they all make peace with each other and discuss and think back on their runes, and speak about the tidings which had been in antiquity, about the Middenyardsworm and about the Fenrerswolf. Then they find in the grass those golden game-bricks which the Eese had owned. So it is said:”

after which is quoted Vafþ 51.

2 bróðra tveggja 'the two brothers' | The present translation understands tveggja as the gen. pl. of tvęir 'two'; the two brothers are presumably Hath and Balder, mentioned in the previous stanza. Since the original ms. does not capitalize proper nouns one could also read bróðra Tveggja 'the brothers of Tway (= Woden)'. Speeches of the High One

(Hávamól)

Dating: See individual sections.

Meter: Leeds-meter, Galders-law, Speeches-meter

Introduction

The Speeches of the High One is the second poem of R, which is the only medieval witness manuscript. Several sts. are however cited or alluded to in other places, such as Eyv Hák (TODO: formatting) 21 and FbrS TODO.

The poem before us does not very much seem like a single composition by one poet, but instead much more like a collection of scattered traditional poetry associated with the god Woden. It seems to contain at least two poems of practical life advice, two mythological narratives, scattered gnomic poetry about runes, and a list of galders. These various strands are united by their presumed speaker, namely Woden in His function as God of Wisdom.

Following previous authors, I identify the following strands, excepting various lone sts. that are probably later inserts. In the present edition each of the following is given a separate, short introduction:

1. 1–79 The Guest-strand; practical life advice, beginning with a guest arriving at a homestead
2. 81–90 Various scattered sts. of advice
3. 91–102 Woden's failed seduction of Billing's daughter
4. 103–110 Woden's obtaining of the Mead of Poetry
5. 111–137 The Speeches of Loddfathomer; Woden's advice to Loddfathomer

6. 138–146 The Rune-tally; various sts. relating to runes and their magical use
7. 146–165 The Leed-tally; Woden's listing of 18 galders

Two questions shortly arise: who was the redactor (i.e., the person who set these strands together, and gave the new work the title Háva mól), and what was his motive? While a detailed and sufficient answer will probably never be found, a careful reading of the final stanza, 165, gives us some clues. By its prayer-like blessing, which brings up the Heathen dichotomy between the Gods and Ettins (the friends and enemies of Mankind, respectively) and calls the contents of the poem (which include unambiguous Heathen ritual instructions) “very useful” (all-þorrf); and by its reference to the process of oral transmission, the whole poem in something resembling the current form must (it seems) have been put together no later than the early 11th century, in a pre-scribal, pre-monastic, Heathen context. (Iceland converted around year 1000, but people surely clung to the old traditions for some time longer.)

As seen by the emphasis on the usefulness of the poetry, the reason for this redaction was not strictly antiquarian, but foremost utilitarian; the redactor gathered an amount of traditional poetry he found useful (whether for its life-advice or mythology) into a single poem, which could then be learned by heart by anyone. In this he certainly achieved his goal. The Háv is by far the greatest surviving collection of pre-Christian Norse advice poetry, and has functioned like a Noah's Ark—or Hoardmimer's Wood—for that genre. Thus, those scattered stanzas which were not included by the redactor—and many must have existed—are now forever lost.

The Guest-strand (1–79)

The Guest-Strand (Old Norse: Gæsta-þáttir) is one of the most interesting surviving works of Norse poetry. Sadly, its structure has been obscured by the insertion of unrelated sts. and by poor translations. My hope is to shed some light on the original coherence of the strand, while respecting the text as it appears in the manuscript. As I do not think it can do each stanza justice, and since there is not exactly a clear progression of themes, I will not here attempt a stanza-by-stanza summary of this strand. Rather, I will give some important observations and then let the reader read for himself.

The Strand is a piece of advice poetry, and takes its outset in a wanderer's arriving as a guest at a Norse farmstead. It first (roughly sts. 1–4) discusses the mutual responsibilities between guest and host, and then moves on to broader human interactions, with a particular focus on alcohol, war, friendship and human wisdom. While there is some coherence and nice transitions are frequently employed in order to shift from one theme to another (e.g. between sts. 4 and 5, or 10 and 11), the poem is not clearly divided into sections, nor is there (after the very first stanzas) a linear progression from one theme to another.

At all turns the poem advises caution and shrewdness. A man should always carry his “manwit” (ON man-vit, a word somewhat analogous with the English “common sense”) with him; he should think before he speaks

The poem moves seamlessly between various parts of life. To do so the poet often employs transitions where a st. repeats the structure of the previous one, but with a new subject. This is particularly evident in sts. 4–5 and 10–11.

O givers, hail! A guest has come in;

 Very hurried is he who on the fires shall

3 á bröndum ‘on the fires’ | Possibly referring a Norwegian folk custom, wherein a guest would sit down on the wood-pile outside of the door, waiting until being let in; see further TODO SOME ARTICLE on this custom. The speaker is announcing to the hosts (or “givers”) that a guest, frozen, wet and tired, is currently sitting on the wood-pile, and ought to be let in.

4 síns of freista frama ‘test his furtherance’ | Try his luck, see how far he gets. The same line is also found in Vafþ 11, 13, 15, 17.

Of water there is need for the one who comes for a meal,
 of a towel and a hearty welcome;
 of a good reception—if he might get one—of a word, of and silence in return.

1–4 ALL | There is a good train of thought throughout the st.: the guest must first wash and dry himself, and then be welcomed to sit and eat at the table. After the host has furnished him with these amenities the need for proper conduct now shifts onto the guest, who must speak and speak wisely.

4 endr-þǫgu ‘silence in return’ | One may note that the verb þegja ‘shut up, be silent’—of which þaga*, which only appears in the present cpd., is a derivative formed in the same way as saga ‘saw, history’ to sęgja ‘say, speak’—and the related noun þęgn ‘silence’ are frequently used at the beginning of Scaldic poems (e.g. Arn Magnðr 1¹¹: þęgi sęim-brotar ‘may gold-breakers [GENEROUS MEN] be silent’, Egill Berðr 1^V: byggj... til þagnar þinn lýðr ‘may thy retinue focus on silence’, Glúmr Gráf 1¹: biðjum vér þagnar ‘we ask for silence’).

3 at auga-bragði 'Into a laughing-stock' | Idomatic. auga-bragð literally means 'twinkling of an eye, moment'; the sense here is thus something like 'a quick glance of derision'.

6 At hyggjandi sinni · skyli-t maðr hrósinn vesa,

Of his thinking should man not be boastful,
but rather guarding of his senses
when sharp and silent he comes to a homestead; sudden harm seldom strikes the wary, for an unfickler friend man never gets than much manwit[†].

5 maðr 'man' | In R abbreviated with the rune ʝ m "man", the first of 45 such instances in the present poem. Whereas Anglo-Saxon Latin-script mss. use several runes ideographically (e.g. ʀ o for OE óðel 'homeland, patrimony'), there do not seem to be any Scandinavian examples with runes other than ʝ. The tradition of ideographic runes is in any case ancient, and goes back to the time before Latin writing as shown by the pre-Christian inscriptions from Stentoften (DR 357) and Ingelstad (Ög 43); DR 357 uses the rune ʃ j for ár 'year, good harvest' and Ög 43 uses ʀ d for dagr 'day'. For the names of the runes see the Three Rune Poems, edited below under Miscellaneous Runic Poetry.

4 svá nýsisk fróðra hverr fyrir.

The wary guest—when for a meal he comes—shuts up and listens closely.
With ears he listens and with eyes he watches;
so looks each learned man ahead.

2 þunnu hljóði þegir 'shuts up and listens closely' | lit. 'shuts up with thin (i.e. attentive) listening'.
4 nýsisk fyrir 'looks ahead' | This verb underlies the noun för-njósn as found in Sigrdr 25.

8 Hinn es séll, · es sér of getr

 4 annars brjóstum í.

This one is blessed, who for himself does get praise and staves of liking.
 It is uneasy regarding that which one shall own in another man's chest.

2 lof ok líkn-stafi 'praise and staves of liking' | líkn 'liking' is a very interesting word. It is defined by ONP as: 'mercy, compassion, relief, comfort, help'. In the present poem its precise meaning seems to be something like 'the state of being liked by your surroundings to the point where people are willing to help you out'. Cf. its two other occurrences in the present poem: sts. 120 and especially 123 (where it is likewise paired with lof 'praise').

 4 annars brjóstum ór.

A better burden bears man not on the road
than much manwit.
Worse way-provision he drags not along on the plain than a too great drink of ale.

3 velli at ‘on the plain’ | Formulaic, the word vǫllr ‘plain, (uncultivated) field’ is also used in sts. 38 and 49. It is easily understood that the wild heaths and plains of Iron Age Norway were particularly unsafe places where a traveller needed to keep his wits about him, lest he fall victim to robbers or murderers (so st. 38).

12 Es-a svá gótt, · sēm gótt kveða, man of his own senses.

he robs man of his senses.
By that bird's feathers I was fettered in the yards of Guthlathe[†].

1 Ó-minnis-hegri ‘Forgetfulness-heron’ | Lit. “unmemory-heron”, the personification of drunkenness as a hovering bird.

14 Ǫlr ek varð, · varð ofr-ǫlvi,

15 Þagalt ok hugalt · skyli þjóðans barn
 2 ok víg-djarft vesa;

 4 unds sinn bíðr bana.

Silent and thoughtful should the king's child
 —and battle-bold—be.
 Glad and cheerful should every man be,
 until he suffer his bane.

16 Ó-snjallr maðr · hyggsk munu ey lifa,

The unvalorous man thinks he will always live
 if he of war be wary;
 but old age gives him no peace,
 which yet spears would give him.²⁰

²⁰The unvalorous man might have been spared by the spears, but death will still find him through miserable old age. Since death is unavoidable it is better to live bravely, even if one risks dying in battle, than to live cowardly and die of sickness. This connects well to the ancient view of the 'straw-death' (TODO).

17 Kópir af-glapi, · es til kynnis kómr,
 2 þylsk hann umb eða þrumir;

 4 uppi 's þa gëð guma.

Gapes the oaf when to visit he comes;

 All at once—if a sip he gets—exposed is the mind of the man.

- 18 Sá einn v^eit, · es víða ratar
 2 ok hefr fj^olð of farit,

 4 sá es vitandi 's vits.

He alone knows, who widely roams,
 and has journeyed much,
 which sort of mind every man wields,
 who is knowing of his wits.

2 hefr fj^olð of farit 'has journeyed much' | Cf. Vafþ 3, 44, et.c., where Woden repeats: Fj^olð ek fór, · fj^olð fr^eistaða'k, // fj^olð ek r^eynda r^egin 'Much I journeyed, much I tried, much I tested the Reins[†].'

- 19 Haldi-t maðr á k^eri, · drekki þó at hófi mj^oð, 2 m^eli þarft eða þ^egi;
 ó-kynnis þess · váar þik ^engi maðr,
 4 at gangir snimma at sofa.

Man ought not to hold onto the cask, but still drink mead in moderation;
 he ought to speak the needful or shut up.
 For that uncouthness will no man blame thee, that thou go early to sleep.

1 Haldi-t maðr á k^eri 'Man ought not to hold onto the cask' | Perhaps referring to a toast wherein a drinking vessel would be passed around in a circle and each member would drink. Such toasts were drunk for a long time in Northern Europe—indeed this is the origin of the Scandinavian toasting-word, skál 'prosit, cheers!', lit. 'bowl!'. "Holding onto" the vessel (and not letting the next person drink) was surely seen as very rude; as late as 1519 a man in Jämtland was killed in an argument resulting from his refusal to pass on the bowl (see Sjöberg (1907)). The sense is thus: "Do not refuse a toast when offered (but do not drink too much, either!)"

2 m^eli þarft eða þ^egi 'he ought to speak the needful or shut up' | Formulaic, line occurs identically in Vafþ 10/2.

- 20 Gróðugr halr, · nema g^eðs viti, 2 ^etr sér aldr-trega;
 oft f^er hl^ogis, · es með horskum k^omr,
 4 manni h^eimskum magi.

The gluttonous man—unless he know his sense—eats himself a life-sorrow.
 Oft the belly, when among the sharp he comes,
 brings the foolish man ridicule.

21 Hjarðir þat vitu, · nér hëim skulu,
 2 ok ganga þà af grasi;
 en ó-sviðr maðr · kann éva-gi
 4 síns of mál maga.

Herds know when home they shall [go],
 and then part from the grass;
 but an unwise man never knows his own belly's measure.

22 Ve-sall maðr · ok illa skapi
 2 hlér at hví-vetna;
 hitt-ki hann vëit, · es vita þyrpti,
 4 at hann es-a vamma vanr.

The wretched man and badly turned out laughs at anything.
 This he knows not, which he might need to know:
 that he is not free of blemishes.

4 hann es-a vamma vanr 'he is not free of blemishes' | Formulaic, cf. Lok 30: es-a þér vamma vant 'thou art not free of blemishes'.

23 Ó-sviðr maðr · vakir umb allar nêtr
 2 ok hyggr at hví-vetna;
 þà es móðr, · es at morni kømr;
 4 alt es víl sëm vas.

The unwise man is awake for all nights and thinks of anything.
 Then he is weary when the morning comes:
 all the trouble is as it was.

24 Ó-snotr maðr · hyggr sér alla vesa
 2 við-hléjendr vini;
 hitt-ki hann fiðr, · þótt of hann fàr lesi,
 4 ef með snotrum sitr.

The unclever man thinks all those who laugh with him his friends.
 This he finds not, that they yet make sport in him,
 if among the clever he sits.

25 Ö-snotr maðr · hyggr sér alla vesa
 2 við-hljéðndr vini;
 þá þat fiðr · es at þingi kómr,
 4 at á for-méleðndr fáa.

The unclever man thinks all those
 who laugh with him his friends.
 Then he finds, when to the Thing[†] he comes,
 that he has spokesmen few.

4 á for-méleðndr fáa ‘has spokesmen few’ | Repeated in st. 62. He has few who are ready to take his side and speak up for him (in legal proceedings); true friends are proven in hard times, not in drunken chatter. The Thing was the old Germanic legal assembly, where smaller disputes might easily turn into deadly feuds.

26 Ö-snotr maðr · þykkisk allt vita,
 2 ef á sér í vǫ veru;
 hitt-ki hann vǣit, · hvat skal við kveða,
 4 ef hans frǣista firar.

The unclever man seems to know everything
 if he takes shelter in a nook.
 This he knows not, what he shall answer
 if men test him.

2 vǫ ‘nook’ | From earlier *vrǫ; cf. Swedish vrå ‘corner, nook’, rare English wroo ‘id.’ The present stanza is to my knowledge the only Norse attestation of the form vǫ, which features a rare Western sound change from vr- to v-. The more common change vr- to r- yields rǫ, which is the normal Norse form. — Tangentially this word is brought up in FGT (1950) as an example of a word with nasal ǫ, and contrasted with oral ǫ in rǫ ‘sailyard’.

27 Ö-snotr maðr, · es með aldir kómr,
 2 þat ’s batst at hann þegi;
 ęngi þat vǣit, · at hann ękki kann,
 4 nema hann mǣli til mart.

6 væt-a maðr, · hinn's væt-ki væt, þótt hann mæli til mart.
 The unclever man when among people he comes—it is best that he shut up.
 No one knows that he nothing knows,
 unless he speak too much.
 The man knows not, who nothing knows,
 that he speak too much.

28 Fróðr sá þykkisk, · es fregna kann,
 2 ok segja hit sama,
 ey-vitu leyna · megu ýta synir
 4 því es gengr of guma.
 Learned seems he who can ask and answer the same [way].
 In no way may the sons of men hide that which eludes a man.

1–2 fregna ... segja 'ask ... answer' | Perhaps specifically in the context of a riddling contest of wisdom.

29 Órna mæli, · sá's éva þegir,
 2 stað-lausu stafi;
 hrað-mélt tunga, · nema haldendr eigi,
 4 opt sér ó-gótt of gælr.
 He who never shuts up speaks plenty many utterings of absurdity.
 A quick-spoken tongue—unless it be held in place—oft sings evil [into being] for itself.

3–4 hrað-mélt ... of gælr 'A quick-spoken ... for itself' | Formulaic. Cf. Lok 31.

3 nema haldendr eigi 'unless it be held in place' | lit. 'unless holders own it' or 'unless it own holders'.
 The 'holders' are perhaps the teeth which hold the tongue in place.

30 At auga-bragði · skal-a maðr annan hafa,
 2 þótt til kynnis komi;
 margr fróðr þykkisk, · ef freginn es-at 4 ok nái þurr-fjallr þruma.

 For a laughing-stock shall man not have another when he comes to visit.
 Many a one seems learned if he is not asked,
 and gets to loiter about dry-skinned.

4 þurr-fjallr ‘dry-skinned’ | i.e. ‘untested’, equivalent to the English idiom get one’s feet wet. The word fell - fjall ‘skin, pelt’ is rare in Old Norse literature and only occurs in cpds, e.g. Vkv 11: ber-fjall ‘bear-pelt’. It survives in modern Swedish fjäll ‘scale (on fish and reptiles)’

31 Fróðr þykkisk · sá’s flótta tēkr
 2 gęstr at gęst hęđinn;
 vęit-a gęrla · sá’s of verđi glissir,
 4 þótt með gręmum glami.
 Learned seems he who takes to flight,
 the guest, from a scoffing guest.
 He knows not clearly, who grins over the food,
 that he be flirting with fiends.

2 gęstr ‘guest’ | The situation hinted at in this and the following stanza is that two guests—unknown to each other—have come to the same homestead. The sense is that when mocked by a stranger it is best not to engage, since the dealing may quickly turn violent. Cf. sts. 122, 123, and 125.

32 Gumnar margir · erusk gagn-hollir,
 2 en at virđi vrekask;
 aldar róg · þat mun ę vesa;
 4 órir gęstr við gęst.
 Many men are well true to each other,
 but over food drive each other away.
 The strife of mankind will that ever be;
 guest raves against guest.

33 Ár-liga verđar · skyli mađr opt fāa,
 2 nema til kynnis komi;
 sitr ok snópir, · lętr sęm solginn sé,
 4 ok kann fregna at fęu.

An early meal should man oft get,
 unless he come to visit:
 he sits and sulks, sounds as if starved,
 and can ask about little.

34 Af·hvarf mikit · es til ills vinar,
 2 þótt à brautu búi,
 en til góðs vinar · liggja gagn-vegir,
 4 þótt hann sé firr farinn.

A great detour it is to a bad friend,
 although he live on the road;
 but to a good friend lie the finest ways,
 although he far gone be.

35 Ganga skal, · skal-a gęstr vesa
 2 ę í ęinum stað;
 ljúfr verðr leiðr, · ef lengi sitr
 4 annars fletjum à.

One shall go; he shall not be a guest forever in one place.
 The loved becomes loathed if for long he sits on another man's benches.²¹

1 skal | emend.; om. R

²¹The customary length of stay in old times was three nights. So Eyel's saw, ch. 78: þat var engi siðr, at sitja lengr en þrjár nætr at kynni. 'it was not customary to stay longer than three nights when visiting.' Compare a much Jutish saying: en tredje dags gjæst stinker 'a third day's guest stinks', which closely resembles a maxim attributed to Benjamin Franklin: "Guests, like fish, begin to smell after three days." It is probably with respect to such proverbs that Auden and Taylor translate the latter half of the present stanza "He starts to stink who outstays his welcome, / in a hall that is not his own."

36 Bú es bętra, · þótt lítit sé,
 2 halr es hęima hveřr;

 4 þat's þó bętra an bón.

A dwelling is better though small it be;
 each is a hero at home.
 Though two goats he own and a cord-roofed hall,
 it is yet better than begging.

1 Bú es bættra, · þótt lítit sé 'A dwelling is better though small it be' | The b-line is missing the necessary alliteration, but no good emendation suggests itself.

37 Bú es bættra, · þótt lítit sé,
 2 halr es heima hverr;
 blóðugt es hjarta · þeim's biðja skal
 4 sér í mál hvert matar.

A dwelling is better though small it be;
 each is a hero at home.
 Bloody is the heart in him who shall beg for his every meal of food.

 4 gæirs of þorðf guma.

From his weapons shall man on the plain not take one step further;
 for it is unsure to know, when on the ways outside,
 man comes in need of a spear.

1 velli á 'on the plain' | Formulaic, see note to st. 12.

2 feti ganga framarr 'take one step further' | Formulaic. Cf. Lok 1: svá't einu-gi feti gangir framarr 'so that thou not take one step further'.

39 Fann'k-a mildan mann · eða svá matar góðan,

I found not a generous man or one so good of meat[†],
 that a gift were not accepted;

or one with his fee[†] so not [...],
that the repayments were loathed, if he accepted [them].²²

1 matar góðan ‘good of meat’ | A Viking Age expression; see Encyclopedia.

3 [...] | It is doubtless that a word has been lost here; the meter and sense require it. Finnur Jónsson (1932) suggests gloggvan ‘miserly, stingy’, giving a litotes ‘so unstingy’, i.e., ‘so generous’.

²²No man is so generous that he would refuse a gift presented to him, nor loathe receiving a favour as thanks for his generosity.

40 F’ear síns, · es fengit hęfr,
2 skyli-t maðr þqrf þola;

4 mart gęngr verr an varir.

Of his own fee[†] which he has earned should man not suffer need.
One oft saves for the loathed what one meant for the loved;
much goes worse than expected.

41 Vópnum ok vǫðum · skulu vinir glęðjask;
2 þat ’s á sjölfum sýnst;
viðr-gefęndr ok ęndr-gefęndr · erusk vinir lęngst,
4 ef þat bíðr at verða vęl.

With weapons and garments shall friends gladden each other;
that is best seen on oneself.
Givers-back and givers-again are friends for the longest if it comes to last long.

1 Vópnum ok vǫðum ‘With weapons and garments’ | i.e. weapons and armour (the “garments” are probably no silks); friends are supposed to help each other and strengthen their “violence capital”. This alliterative word-pair is formulaic and in other occurrences exclusively refers to implements of war; cf. e.g. Beow 39, where Shield[†]’s pyre-ship is loaded with bilde-wǣpnum ęnd beaðo-wǣdum ‘war-weapons and battle-garments’.

2 þat ’s á sjölfum sýnst ‘that is best seen on oneself’ | i.e. in one’s own experience.

4 þat ‘it’ | The friendship.

42 Vin sínum · skal maðr vinr vesa,

4 en lausung við lygi.

With his friend shall man be a friend,
and pay gift against gift;
laughter against laughter should men employ,
but duplicity against lie.

43 Vin sínum · skal maðr vinr vesa,
2 þeim ok þess vin;
en ó-vinar síns · skyli engi maðr
4 vinar vinr vesa.

With his friend shall man be a friend,

If thou have another whom thou badly trust,
and wilt yet receive good from him:

fairly shalt thou speak with him, but falsely think,
and pay duplicity against lie.

3 fagrt ... mēla ... flátt hyggja ‘fairly ... speak ... falsely think’ | Formulaic, cf. sts. 90, 91.

46 Þat ’s ęnn umb þann, · es þú illa trúir
2 ok þér es grunr at ęði, hléja skalt við þeim · ok of hug mēla;
4 glík skulu gjöld gjöfum.

It is yet regarding the one whom thou trust badly,
and whose intentions toward thee are suspect:
thou shalt laugh with him and speak with care;
repayments shall be equal to gifts.²⁴

²⁴Equivalent to the last line of the previous st. (“pay duplicity against lie”).

47 Ungr vas’k forðum, · fór’k ęinn saman,
2 þá varð’k villr vega;
auðigr þóttumk, · es annan fann’k,
4 maðr es manns gaman.

Young was I once; I travelled alone;
then I became lost of ways.
Wealthy I thought myself when another one I found;
man is man’s pleasure.

48 Mildir fróknir · męnn batst lifa,
2 sjaldan sút ala;
en ó-snjallr maðr · uggir hvat-vetna,
4 sýtir ę glöggr við gjöfum.

Generous, brave men live best:
seldom they nourish sorrow—
but the unvalorous man is frightened by anything, the stingy always grieves over gifts.

3 ó-snjallr, glöggr ‘unvalorous, stingy’ | Contrasting respectively with frókn, mildr ‘brave, generous’ in the first half of the stanza; very fine parallelism.

4 sýtir ... gjöfum 'the stingy man ... gifts' | Cf. st. 39. After receiving a gift, one was culturally obliged to give something back.

49 Váðir mínar · gaf'k velli at 2 tveim tré-mönnum;
rekkar þat þóttusk, · es rípt höfðu;
4 neiss es nokkviðr halr.

My garments I gave, on the plain,
to two tree-men.
Champions they seemed when cloaks they had;
shameful is the naked hero.²⁵

²⁵One of the harder sts. in the poem. The probable sense is that “the clothes make the man” (or warrior): under expensive gear a thin tree-man might be lurking, and likewise even a mighty man (the choice of the word halr ‘hero, warrior’ (cf. sts. 36, 37) rather than the more neutral maðr ‘man, person’ is surely intentional) can never defend himself against a heavily armoured opponent. Without his arms, he becomes as vulnerable as the “tree-man” on the plain.

50 Hrørnar þoll, · sú's stendr þorpi á,
2 hlýr-at henni þqrkr né barr;
svá es maðr, · sá's mann-gi ann;
4 hvat skal hann lengi lifa?

Wilters the pine that stands on the yard;
shields her not bark nor leaf.
So is the man who loves no man;
why shall he live for long?

51 Eldi heitari · brinnr með illum vinum
2 friðr fimm daga,
en þa sloknar, · es hinn sétti kómr,
4 ok versnar allr vin-skapr.

Hotter than fire burns love among bad friends,
for five days[†];
but then goes out when the sixth one comes,
and all the friendship worsens.

2 fimm daga ‘for five days’ | i.e. “for a week”, which was originally five days long. See also st. 74 and the Encyclopedia: five days[†].

52 Mikit ęitt · skal-a manni gefa;
 2 opt kaupir sér í lítlu lof, með hqlfum hleif · ok með hqlllu kęri 4 fekk ek mér fę-laga.

Much at once shall one not give a man;
 oft one buys oneself praise for little.
 With half a loaf and an awry cask
 I got myself a partner.

53 Lítilla sanda, · lítilla séva,
 2 lítil eru gęð guma;
 því-at allir męnn · urðu-t jafn-spakir;
 4 hqlf es qlđ hvar.

Of small sands, of small seas:
 small are the senses of man.
 For all have not become evenly knowing;
 half is every man.

1 Lítilla sanda, · lítilla séva ‘Of small sands, of small seas’ | Probably a partitive genitive, the sense being that man’s “horizons” are small; the universe will always be far greater than him.

3–4 því-at ... qlđ hvar. ‘For ... every man.’ | On the meaning of the second half of this stanza I find the view of Guðmundur Finnbogason (1929) most convincing; namely that every man has both strengths and weaknesses in terms of wisdom. As nobody can excel at everything, nobody is complete; every person is “half” (and it should be added that ON halfir has a more general sense of incompleteness than its English cognate). This interpretation fits particularly closely with sts. 71 and 132. — This stanza introduces several stanzas dealing with wisdom and foolishness.

54 Meðal-snotr · skyli manna hvęrr,
 2 ęva til snotr séi;
 þęim es fyrða · fęgrst at lifa,
 4 es vęl mart vıtu.

Middle-clever should each man be;

For those men it is fairest to live,
who know well enough.

- 55 Meðal-snotr · skyli manna hværr,
2 éva til snotr séi;
 snotrs manns hjarta · verðr sjaldan glatt,
4 ef sá 's al-snotr es á.

Middle-clever should each man be;
never too clever.
The clever man's heart is seldom glad,
if its owner is all-clever.

- 56 Meðal-snotr · skyli manna hværr,
2 éva til snotr séi;
 ør·lög sín · viti engi maðr fyrir;
4 þeim es sorga-lausastr sefi.

Middle-clever should each man be;
never too clever.
His own orlay[†] ought no man to know ahead;
his is the most sorrowless mind.

4 þeim es sorga-lausastr sefi. 'his is the most sorrowless mind.' | i.e. he who is ignorant of his fate. It is surely fitting that Woden should say this, having knowledge of the inevitable destruction of the world and himself (see Rakes of the Reins[†]).

- 57 Brandr af brandi · brinnr unds brunninn es, 2 funi kvęykisk af funa;
 maðr af manni · verðr at máli kuðr;
4 en til dólskr af dul.

Fire by fire burns until it is burned [out];
flame is quickened by flame.
Man by man becomes known through speech,
but the too hickish from his folly.

4 dólskr 'hickish' | Derived from an ablaut variant of dalr 'valley, dale' + -iskr '-ish', the sense being 'provincial, not having left his (home) valley'. Cf. the Icelandic tribal names like vatns-dólr and lang-dólr 'inhabitants of Vatns-dalr (Waterdale), Lang-dalr (Longdale)'.

58 Ár skal rísa, · sá's annars vill

Early shall he rise who has workmen few,
 and go his work to meet.
 Much is kept back from him who in the morning sleeps;
 the brisk has half the wealth.

4 halfr es auðr und hvǫtum 'the brisk has half the wealth' | i.e. the brisk man has already claimed half of a fortune by simply choosing to wake up early.

Of dry billets and thatching birch bark—of this man knows the measure—and of that firewood which he may use for a season and half-year.

4 mál ok missæri 'for a season and half-year' | Over nine months.

61 Þvegin ok meṭtr · ríði maðr þingi at,

 4 né hests in heldr,

þótt hann hafi-t góðan.

Washed and full ought a man to ride to the Thing[†],
 although he be not clothed too well;
 of his shoes and breeches ought no man to be ashamed,
 nor the more of his horse,
 even though he haven't a good one.

1 Þveginn ok męttir 'Washed and full' | A formulaic collocation. Cf. Reg 25 (kęmbör 'combed' — þveginn 'washed' — męttir 'full') and Vsp 33: (þó 'washed' — kęmböi 'combed'). These examples attest to the importance of personal hygiene in the culture, something further seen by the ubiquity of combs in pre-Christian graves (TODO: archeological reference). The whole thing reminds of the passage from Germania ch. 22: Statim ē somnō, quem plērūmq̄ in diem extrabunt, lavantur, saepius calidā, ut apud quōs plūrimum biems occupat. Lautī cibum capiunt: sēparātae singulīs sēdēs et sua cuique mēnsa. Tum ad negōtia nec minus saepe ad convīvia prōcēdunt armātī. 'On waking from sleep, which they generally prolong to a late hour of the day, they take a bath, oftenest of warm water, which suits a country where winter is the longest of the seasons. After their bath they take their meal, each having a separate seat and table of his own. Then they go armed to business, or no less often to their festal meetings (convivia, i.e., their Things).'

5 þótt hann hafi-t góðan 'although he has not a good one' | Finnur Jónsson (1932) considers this a late insert, and I agree. It seems that the inserter was not aware of the rules of the Leeds-meter meter and interpreted the preceding c-verse (né hęsts in hęldr) as an a-verse of Ancient-words-law.

The two following sts. are written in opposite order in R, but a symbol at the start of each indicates that they should switch places.

62 Snapir ok gnapi, · es til sęvar kōmr,
 2 ǫrn á aldin mar;
 svá es maðr, · es með mǫrgum kōmr
 4 ok á for-męlęndr fáa.

He snaps and stoops when to the sea he comes,
 the eagle on the aged ocean.
 So is the man who among the many comes,
 and has spokesmen few.

4 á for-męlęndr fáa 'has spokesmen few' | Shared with st. 25.

63 Fregna ok sęgja · skal fróðra hvērr,

2 sá's vill h^eitinn horskr;

 4 þjóð v^eit ef þrír 'ru.

Ask and answer shall each learned man who wishes to be called sharp.
One shall know, another shall not;
 thirty know if there are three.

4 þjóð 'thirty' | Or "people, nation"; the sense is in any case "many, everybody". For the translation "thirty" cf. Skm 82, a list of poetic expressions for various numerals: þjóð eru þrír tígir 'a nation is thirty' etc.

64 Ríki sitt · skyli ráð-snotra

His own power should each counsel-clever man use in moderation.
 This he then finds when among the bold he comes—that none is the briskest of all.²⁶

3–4 þá ... ^çinna hvatastr 'then ...briskest of all' | Almost identical to Reg TODO/3–4, which however has fl^eirum 'more men' instead of fróknum 'the bold'.

²⁶i.e., every man has his match.

65 Orða þ^eira, · es maðr qðrum s^egir,
 2 opt hann g^jöld of g^etr.

For those words which man says to another he oft gets recompense.

 4 sjaldan hittir l^eiðr í lið.

Much too early I came to many places,
 and too late to some:

The ale was drunk up, some was unbrewed—seldom finds the loathed his place.²⁷

1 Mikils til ‘Much too’ | written as one word mikilsti R

²⁷i.e., “there are no wrong times, only wrong people”.

67 Hér ok hvar · myndi mér hęim of boðit,
2 ef þyrpta’k at mólun-gi mat,

Here and there would I to a home be invited,
if at meal-time I needed no food;
or if two hams should hang at the trusty friend’s [home], where I had eaten one.²⁸

²⁸Not everyone is hospitable, especially with regards to food, which was scarce and closely watched among the Norse subsistence farmers. The poet notes that even a “trusty friend” (possibly sarcastic) would invite him over more often if he brought more food than he ate.

68 Ełdr es batstr · með ýta sonum
2 ok sólar sýn,
 hęilyndi sitt, · ef maðr hafa náir,
4 án við lęst at lifa.

Fire is best among the sons of men,
and the sight of the sun;
one’s good health, if he manage to keep it—
[and] living free from vice.

69 Es-at maðr alls ve-sall, · þótt sé illa hęill,
2 sumr es af sonum sęll,
 sumr af fręndum, · sumr af fę órnu,
4 sumr af verkum vęl.

Man is not all unblessed, though he of poor health be:
someone is blessed with sons;
someone with kinsmen, someone with ample fee[†], someone with works done well.

1 ve-sall ‘unblessed’ | Or ‘woe-blessed’. I have elsewhere translated this word as ‘wretched’, but have presently rendered it this way to show the etymological relationship. The second element in this compound is sęll, which lacks i-umlaut due to a shortening of the vowel before the umlaut became phonemic. The ancestral Proto-Norse forms would be sālir* and wajē-sālir*. Cf. 𐀓𐀚𐀓𐀚𐀓𐀚𐀓𐀚 wajē-marir ‘infamous’ on the Tjurkö bracteate, where the second element is the ancestor of ON męrr ‘renowned, famous’; the expected descendant ve-marr* is not attested. I have chosen to translate sęll as ‘blessed’, but it is not a past participle and could also be rendered as ‘lucky’ or ‘blissful’. It carries a certain sense of innateness that is foreign to modern Western culture. Thus a king whose land experiences bountiful harvests (ár) is said to be ár-sęll ‘blessed with harvests’, while one whose kingdom is at peace (fríðr) is said to be fríð-sęll ‘blessed with peace’. In this worldview the state of the realm is not due to uncontrollable environmental or political factors, but rather arises from the very person of the king (TODO: Reference PCRN chapter).

2 sonum ... fręndum ‘sons ... kinsmen’ | Cf. st. 72 below, which stresses the importance of sons and kinsmen.

70 Bętra ’s lifðum, · an séi ð-lifðum,
2 ęy getr kvikr kú;
 ęld sá’k upp brinna · auðgum manni fyr,
4 en úti vas dauðr fyr durum.

It is better for the living than it may be for the unliving:
ever the quick gets the cow.

A fire I saw burning high for a wealthy man,
but outside he was dead before the doors.²⁹

1 an séi ð-lifðum ‘than with the unliving’ | emend.; ȝ sęl lifðom R.

1 an séi ð-lifðum ‘than with the unliving’ | The reading of R, which would be normalized as ok sęl-lifðum ‘and for the blessed living’, is metrically defect since sęl- is strongly stressed and should carry alliteration. For the original form of the line we may instead cf. Fáfn 30: Hvętum ’s bętra · an séi ð-hvętum ‘It is better for the brisk than it may be for the unbrisk’. The corruption has probably happened in the following way: en* (younger form of an ‘than’) in the prototype was misinterpreted as en ‘and, but’ and copied as ȝ (the tironian et), while séi ólifðom* (probably with the words cramped together) became sęl lifðom.

2 ęy getr kvikr kú ‘always gets the quick a cow’ | i.e., “new opportunities always present themselves for the living”. A reference to the cattle-based economy (see also st. 76), the cow being used as a metonym: (cf. churchly English ‘the quick and the dead’, i.e. ‘the living and the dead’).

²⁹The fire is presumably the man’s funeral pyre, on which a considerable amount of his wealth has been spent; according to ibn Fadlan (TODO) two thirds of a dead chieftain’s estate was spent on his funeral. One notes the contrastive en ‘but’ and may understand it as follows: “I saw a lavish funeral held for a man, but he was still dead.” This interpretation is supported by the Háv 71 below, which expresses the same sentiment.

71 Haltr ríðr hrossi, · hȝorð rekr handar vanr,

2 daufn veqr ok dugir;
 blindr es bętri, · an bręnnr sęi;
 4 nýtr mann-gi nás.
 A halt man rides a horse; a handless drives a herd;
 a deaf fights and avails.
 Blind is better than be burned;
 no man has use for a corpse.

72 Sonr es bętri, · þótt sé síð of alinn
 2 ęptir ginginn guma;
 sjaldan bautar-stęinar · standa brautu nęr,
 4 nema ręisi niðr at nið.
 A son is better, though he late be born after a passed-on man.
 Seldom beat-stones stand near the road,
 save by kinsman for kinsman raised.

1 Sonr es bętri ‘A son is better’ | i.e. it is better for a man to have a son and heir than not, even if the father should die some time before he is born. The son can further his father’s lineage and memory (as exemplified by the raising of a “beat-stone”), and as the poet says, it is rare for a non-relative to do so.

3 bautar-stęinar ‘beat-stones’ | Large standing stones raised in memory of someone. Numerous such stones with runic inscriptions are known from migration period Norway, often near grave fields. Some hold only single personal names or short phrases, like the stone from Sunde in Sunnfjord, western Norway (signum KJ 90): ÞIMNXXETIY widugastir ‘Woodguest’, or the one from Bø in Rogaland, southwestern Norway (signum KJ 78): HTTBMTZ HTTB hnabdas hlaiwa ‘Naved’s grave’. Others hold longer inscriptions, like the one from Kjølevik in Rogaland (signum KJ 75): HTBNTHTY MTHTXNXTTMTY HTTBHTBMTHTHTX hadulaikaz ekhagustadaz hlaaiwidomaguminino ‘Hathlac [lies here]. I, Haystald, buried my lad.’

73 Tveir ’ru ęins hęrjar, · tunga es hęfuðs bani;
 2 mér ’s í heðin hveřn · handar vēni.

Two are of one host: the tongue is the head’s bane;
 in every cloak I expect a hand.

1–2 ALL | The whole st. fits poorly in context, and the metre and style are very out of place; it is probably a later insert.

1 Tveir ’ru ęins hęrjar ‘Two are of one host’ | i.e. “the tongue and head belong to the same body (but the former often leads to the latter’s demise).” — hęrjar is an inflected form of hęrr ‘host, army’, but its function is ambiguous; it can either be (1) the gen. sg., as adopted here, or (2) the nom. pl. ‘harriers, raiders’ (cf. ęin-hęrjar ‘Oneharriers’[†]) which would translate as “two are the destroyers of one”, i.e. “the tongue and head often lead to the demise of the body”.

1 tunga es höfuðs bani ‘the tongue is the head’s bane’ | Formulaic or proverbial. Cf. the Old Swedish “Heathen Law”, which describes how a duel should be conducted following an insult to a man’s honour (my norm. and trans. following Löffler (1879)): Fallr þann orð havr givit—glépr orða verstr, tunga hovuð-bani—liggi i ú-gildum akri ‘If he falls who has given the [insulting] word—an insult is the worst of words, the tongue the head-bane—may he lie in an unhallowed field.’

74 Nótt verðr feginn, · sá’s nesti trúir,
2 skammar ’ru skips ráar,
 hverf es haust-gríma;
4 fjöld of viðrir · á fimm dögum, en meir á mánaði.

At night he rejoices, who trusts in his provisions;
short are a ship’s sailyards;
shifty is a stormy fall night.
The weather changes much in five days[†];
even more in a month.

2 skammar ’ru skips ráar ‘short are a ship’s sailyards’ | TODO: Write about the varying interpretations (Finnur, Cleasby, Skp) of this line.

4 fimm dögum ‘five days’ | i.e. “in a week” (which was originally five days long), paralleling “month” in the next line. See note to st. 51 and Encyclopedia.

75 Væt-a hinn, · es vêtki væt,
2 margr verðr af aurum api;

4 skyli-t þann vítká váar.

The one knows not, who nothing knows:
many a man turns an ape[†] from wealth.
A man is wealthy, another not wealthy;
one oughtn’t to curse him for his woe.

2 af aurum ‘from wealth’ | emend. from meaningless †aflaðrom† R

2 margr verðr af aurum api ‘many a man turns an ape from wealth’ | Cf. Sun 34/4: margan befr auðr apat ‘wealth has aped many a man’, which also lends support to the emendation.

76 Deyr fé, · deyja frændr,

2 deyr sjalfr hit sama;
 en orðs-tírr · deyr aldri-gi
 4 hvæim's sér góðan getr.

Fee[†] dies, kinsmen die,
 oneself dies the same [way];
 but a word-glory never dies, for whomever gets himself a good one.

1 fé ... frændr 'Fee ... kinsmen' | The import of this merism may be less clear to the modern reader. In the Germanic Iron Age farming society a man's wealth was reckoned by how many heads of cattle (and the Norman loan-word cattle is itself the same word as capital) he owned (cf. st. 70 above, where "a cow" is used to express "an opportunity"), and his social power by the number of able male relatives ready to side with him in conflict (cf. st. 72 above and TODO: reference?). The meaning is thus: all your power will pass away, and so too must you, but if you leave a good reputation behind it can live on. For Indo-European poetic analogues, see West (2007, pp. 99 ff.).

 2 deyr sjalfr hit sama;
 ek veit einn · at aldri-gi deyr:
 4 dómr of dauðan hværn.

Fee dies, kinsmen die,
 oneself dies the same [way].
 I know one that never dies:
 the Doom[†] o'er each man dead.

It is likely that the original Guest-Strand ended here. The three following stanzas, especially the third, are poorly placed and seem like later inserts.

78 Fullar grindr · sá'k fyr Fitjungs sonum, 2 nú bera þeir vánar vql;
 svá es auðr · sem auga-bragð,
 4 hann es valtastr vlna.

Full pens I saw for the sons of Fitting;
 now they carry the staff of hope.

So is wealth like the twinkling of an eye:
it is the ficklest of friends.

2 vánar vǫl ‘the staff of hope’ | A beggar’s staff.

79 Ó-snotr maðr · es ǣignask getr
2 fé eða fljóðs mun-úð;
 metnaðr hǫnum þróask, · en man-vit aldri-gi;
4 framm gengr hann drjúgt í dul.

The unclever man who comes to own fee or a girl’s loving grace:
his pride flourishes, but never his manwit;
he goes forth far in folly.

80 Þat ’s þá rǣynt, es þú at rúnum spyrr, · hinum rǣgin-kunnum,
2 þeim’s gørðu ginn-rǣgin
 ok fáði Fimbul-þulr;
4 þá hefr hann batst, ef hann þegir.

That is then proven, which thou learnest from the runes, those born of the Reins, those which the yin-Reins[†] made,
and the Fimble-Thyle (= Weden) painted.—
Then he has it best, if he shuts up.³⁰

1 rúnum ... rǣgin-kunnum ‘runes ... born of the Reins’ | This expression also appears on the C4th–6th Noleby stone (in the acc. sg. rúnó ragina-kundó ‘a rune born of the Reins’), which proves that the Eddic rune-magic is (at least in part) founded in oral tradition going back to the Heathen age. See also Encyclopedia rune[†].

2–3 þeim’s ... Fimbul-þulr ‘those which ... Fimble-Thyle’ | Formulaic. Cf. st. 142 where these two lines occur almost identically, but in reverse order.

³⁰This stanza, which deals with runic magic and shares expressions with sts. in the Rune-Tally section (beginning with st. 138 below), hardly fits in its current place. The last line with its shift in person is likely to be a later insert.

Scattered stanzas of practical advice (81–90)

The following stanzas are distinguished by a prevalence of Speeches-meter and the common subject matter.

- 81 At kveldi skal dag leyfa, · konu es brænd es, 2 mēki es reyndr es, · mēy es gefin es, ís es yfir kōmr, · ǫl es drukkit es.

At evening shall one praise day, a woman when she is burned, a sword when it is tried, a maiden when she is given,³¹ ice when one crosses over, ale when it is drunk.

³¹i.e. in marriage.

- 82 Í vindi skal við höggva, · veðri á sé róa, 2 myrkri við man spjalla— · mǫrg eru dags augu—
 á skip skal skriðar orka, · en á skjöld til hlífar, 4 mēki til höggs, · en mēy til kossa.

In wind shall one cut wood, in weather row at sea, in darkness speak with a maiden—many are the eyes of day.
 A ship shall one have for speed, and a shield for protection;
 a sword for striking, and a maiden for kisses.

1 veðri ‘weather’ | i.e. ‘in good weather’; elsewhere the word veðr typically means ‘storm’, but that can hardly be the sense here.

- 83 Við ǫld skal ǫl drekka, · en á ísi skriða, 2 magran mar kaupa, · en mēki saurgan, hejma hēst fēita, · en hund á búi.

One shall drink ale by fire and skate on ice;
 buy a starved steed and a rusty sword;
 fatten the horse at home and the hound in its dwelling.

2 mar ... mēki ‘steed ... sword’ | Formulaic pair, also occurring in Lok 12/1, Vkv 33/3, Akv 7/3.

- 84 Meyjar orðum · skyli mann-gi trúa,

In R the following two sts. come in the opposite order, but it seems probable from its Speeches-meter meter and the dative case of the words that 89 should follow 87. On the other hand st. 88, with its Leeds-meter meter and self-enclosed form seems a separate composition, and was probably inserted after 87 due to its first line (akri ár-sǫnum), which is also in the dative.

89 bróður-bana sínum · þótt á brautu móti, in one's brother's bane—though on the road ye meet—in half-burned house, in all-fleet horse—

the steed is useless if one foot breaks.
No man be so trusting that he trust in all this!

88 Akri ár-sǫnum · trúi ęngi maður,

In an early sown field ought no man to trust,
nor too soon in a son.
The weather rules the field and the wits the son:
there is risk to them both.

So is the love of those women who falsely think like one rode an unshod horse on slippery ice—a merry one, two winters old, and ill-tamed—or in mad wind tacked a rudderless [ship], or a halt man should catch a reindeer on a thawing fell.

5 í þá-fjalli ‘on a thawing fell’ | i.e. in springtime, when the melting ice on the ground is most slippery.

Weden’s failed seduction of Billing’s daughter (91–102)

The following sts. are united by their meter, Leeds-meter (unlike most of the preceding sts., see introduction to them above), style and content. The strand begins with general maxims about love and relations between the sexes, before moving on to the narrative about Billing’s daughter.

91 Bært nú mēli’k, · því-at bæði væt’k,
2 brigðr es karla hugr konum, þá fęgrst mēlum, · es flást hyggjum;
4 þat tēlir horska hugi.

Plainly I now speak, for I know them both:
fickle is men’s thought towards women.
Fairest we speak when falsest we think;
that entraps sharp minds.

1 bæði ‘both’ | i.e. both sides, both sexes. The (male) poet declares that he will not attack the fair sex unfairly; he is also aware of men’s faults.

3 fęgrst mēlum ... flást hyggjum ‘speak fairest ... think falsest’ | Formulaic. Cf. st. 45.

4 þat tēlir horska hugi ‘that entraps sharp minds’ | Love (or sexual infatuation—the poet does not distinguish between them) turns even wise men into liars or otherwise dishonest persons. Cf. Mbkv 20/1–2, which is probably partly based on this stanza: Ást-blindir ’ru seggir svá · sumir, at þykkja mjök fás gá; þannig verðr um man-söng mēlt: · marga hefr þat hyggna tēlt. ‘Some men are so love-blind, that they seem to heed very little; // for that sake it is said about love-song: many thinking men has it entrapped.’

92 Fagrt skal mēla · ok fé bjóða,

2 sá's vill fljóðs óst fāa,

 4 sá fêr, es fríar.

Fairly shall speak, and offer fee[†],
 he who will win a woman's love;
 praise the body of the bright girl—
 he wins, who woos.

1 Fagrt skal mēla 'Fairly shall speak' | Formulaic. Cf. st. 45.

4 sá fêr, es fríar 'he wins, who woos' | I.e., "he who courts her will win her hand."

93 Ástar firna · skyli ęngi maðr

 4 lost-fagrir litir.

For [matters of] love should no man ever blame another;
 oft they seize the sharp when they seize not the foolish, the lust-fair hues.

4 lost-fagrir litir 'lust-fair hues' | i.e. a (woman with a) countenance so beautiful that men cannot help but lust after her.

94 Ey-vitar firna, · es maðr annan skal,
 2 þess es of margan ęngr guma;

 and awaited my love.
 My flesh and heart was that sharp maiden—
 I have her none the more.

97 Billings mey · ek fann bæðjum á
 2 sól-hvíta sofa;

 4 nema við þat lík at lifa.

Billing's maiden I found on the beds,
 sun-white, asleep.
 An earl's pleasure seemed me naught to be,
 save living alongside that body.

1 mey 'maiden' | i.e. unmarried (virgin) daughter.

[Billings mér:] 98 „Auk nér aptni · skalt Óðinn koma, 2 ef vilt þér męla man,
 allt eru ó-skop, · nema ęin vitim
 4 slikan lęst saman.“

“And by evening shalt thou, Woden, come,
 if thou wilt get for thee the girl [me];
 everything is misshapen unless we alone should know such a vice together.”

- 99 Aptr ek hvarf · ok unna þóttumk
 2 vísum vilja frá;
 hitt ek hugða, · at hafa mynda’k
 4 gæð hennar allt ok gaman.

Back I turned—and thought myself in love—away from my wise will;
this I thought, that I would have her senses all, and pleasure.

2 vísum vilja frá ‘away from my wise will’ | i.e., “against my better judgment”; the wise choice would have been to walk away.

- 100 Svá kom’k nýst, · at hin nýta vas 2 víg-drótt ǫll of vakin, með brinnǫndum ljósum · ok bornum viði,
 4 svá vas mér víl-stígr of vítaðr.

So I came next as the useful war-troop was all awake;
 with burning lights and with carried sticks;
 so a sad path was marked out for me.

1 nýta ‘useful’ | Sarcastic. Billing’s daughter had apparently summoned a lynch mob.

3 bornum viði ‘carried sticks’ | The mob was armed with clubs.

4 víl-stígr ‘sad path’ | Ambiguous, referring either to the beating he would have received at the hands of the mob, or to his walk of shame away from the hall. The latter is perhaps more likely.

- 101 Auk nér morni, · es vas’k ęnn of kominn, 2 þa vas sal-drótt of sofin;
 grey ęitt þa fann’k · hinnar góðu konu
 4 bundit bæðjum á.

And by morning when I had come again,
 then was the hall-troop asleep.
 A lone bitch I then found, by the good woman bound upon the beds.

1 Auk nér morni ‘And by morning’ | Mirroring the beginning of st. 97 above.

3 grey ęitt ‘A lone bitch’ | The insult is clearly understood; Weden is compared to a horny dog, and mockingly asked to make love to one—“this is all you get, you dog!”

3 góðu ‘good’ | Possibly not sarcastic, but rather referring to her chastity.

102 Mǫrg es góð mér, · ef gǫrva kannar,
 2 hug-brigð við hali;
 þá þat reynda’k, · es hit ráð-spaka 4 tægðá’k á flérðir fljóð;
 hǫðungar hværrar · leitaði mér hit horska man
 6 ok hafða’k þess vêt-ki vífs.

Many a good maiden—if one comes to know her well—is heart-fickle towards men.
 I found that out when the counsel-clever lady into sins I lured;
 every disgrace that sharp girl sought out for me, and I had naught of the woman.

1 góð mér ‘good maiden’ | A formulaic expression; the “goodness” here refers to faithfulness and chastity.

Weden’s theft of the Mead of Poetry (103–110)

The intricate myth of how Weden came to own the Mead of Poetry is told more fully in Skm 5–6. That narrative goes as follows, with minor details left out: After the war between the Eese and Wanes, the two tribes of gods reconcile through spitting into a vat. Not wanting to discard this token of their truce, they instead create a man out of the spit, calling him Quasher[†]; he is so wise that he can answer any question posed to him, and so travels around the world in order to share his wisdom with humans. Quasher eventually comes to the dwelling of two dwarfs, Fealer and Galer. They kill him and drain his blood into three vessels: two vats named Soon and Bothem, and a kettle named Woderearer[†]. Through mixing the blood with honey they make a mead, with the power to turn anyone who drinks from it “a scold or man of learning (skald eða fróða-maðr)”. The dwarfs then lie to the Eese about the murder, telling them that Quasher drowned in his own wisdom. Some time later, the dwarfs murder an ettin named Gilling[†] and his wife. Gilling’s son, Sutting[†], learns of this and prepares to drown the dwarfs. In exchange for their lives and as recompense for his father’s slaying, the dwarfs offer Sutting the “dear mead” (mjǫðinn dýra; cf. here sts. 105 and 140). Sutting accepts the ransom and takes the mead home with him. He makes his daughter

Guthlathe[†] guard it. Some time later, Weden is out journeying, and finds nine thralls mowing hay. He sharpens their scythes with a special whetstone, and the mowing improves greatly. He then throws it in the air and the thralls shortly kill each other over it. By evening Weden comes to the owner of the thralls, Bigh, Sutting's brother. Bigh laments the death of his workmen, and so Weden, who calls himself Baleworker[†], offers to do the work of the thralls over the summer, in exchange for one drink of Sutting's mead. Bigh tells him that Sutting alone owns the mead, but that he will accompany Baleworker to Sutting to ask for the drink. The two arrive at Sutting, who as expected refuses to give any part of the mead away. Baleworker then tells Bigh that he will get to it anyway; he takes out the drill Rate[†], and tells Bigh to drill through the mountain, into the room where the mead is stored. Bigh first attempts to trick him by only drilling halfway, but eventually creates a narrow passage. Baleworker turns himself into a snake and crawls through it; as he does, Bigh tries to strike him the drill, but misses. After coming through, Baleworker sees Guthlathe watching over the mead. He goes on to sleep with her for three nights, after which she promises him three sips of the mead. With each sip he swallows the contents of one of the three vessels, so that all of the mead ends up in his belly. Having taken the mead, he dons his eagle-hame and flies away from the mountain. Sutting sees him, takes his own eagle-hame, and gives chase. The Eese see Weden in flight, and set out several large vat on the ground, into which Weden, still flying, spits out the mead. At this point Sutting has almost caught up with him, and so Weden "sends back" (sęnda aptr, usually interpreted being sent out from the anus) some of the mead, presumably into his face. This portion becomes the lot of foolish poets (skald-fifla blutr), while the rest of the mead is given to the Eese and to skilled poets (ęeim męnnum, er yrķja kunnu 'those men who can compose [poetry]').

The core of this many-twisted myth is old. A close parallel is found in RV hymns 4.26–27. In these two hymns the soma plant (who in the Vedic mythology is not just the plant and its resulting drink, but also a god, perhaps somewhat like Quasher) is first held within "a hundred iron forts" (4.27.1c: śatām púraḥ āyasīḥ) by the archer Kṛṣānu, before being stolen by a sweeping falcon. The falcon brings Soma to Manu, the ancestor of the Aryans and first sacrificer.

The resemblance to the last part of the Skm account should be obvious, but, notably, the detail of the falcon is not found in any of the sts. below. This shows that the narrative of Skm cannot be exclusively based on the sts. here below, but instead also relies on other, now-lost sources. This is also supported by the present sts. leaving out the narratives about Quasher, the two dwarfs, and Baye, along with some subtler narrative differences.

The order of the present sts. follows that of R, their main witness manuscript. The strand begins with some social advice (103), after which the narrative follows (104–110). It is narrated in the first person by Weden himself. The sts. do not tell the myth in chronological order and leave much up to the listener; they are surely composed for an audience that already knows the story. The following narrative details are given:

104. Weden visits Sutting's home, but does not receive a good reception.
105. Guthlathe falls in love with Weden, and gives him a drink of the Mead.
106. Weden has to bore through the mountains with the drill Rate.
107. Weden has "bought [the Mead] well"; possibly a euphemistic reference to sleeping with Guthlathe for it.
108. Guthlathe indeed does sleep with Weden, though not expressly in exchange for the Mead.
109. The following day (bins bindra dags, see note to this word in the edited text below), a group of Rime-Thurses come to Weden's hall, to ask him whether a Baleworker is among the Gods, or if he has been slain by Sutting.
110. Switching to the third person (which may indicate that this is his answer to the Rime-Thurses), Weden says that he "thinks" that Weden has sworn an oath, but that his words cannot be trusted. After the "simble" (i.e. drinking feast, banquet; probably referring to the drink of the Mead), Weden betrayed Sutting and made Guthlathe weep.

The underlying narrative seems to generally agree with that of Skm, but unlike its more transactional affair, we here find a stronger emphasis on Weden's cruel betrayal of Guthlathe. A notable detail not found in Skm is Weden's oath in st. 109. The content of the oath was most likely that Weden would marry Guthlathe, something supported by the language used (see note to st. 108: bins bindra dags). The recipient of the oath, which Weden clearly broke, was either Sutting or Guthlathe. That Weden swore it to Sutting, and thus asked him for Guthlathe's hand in marriage, may be suggested by the description of Sutting as svikvinn 'betrayed' in st. 109. This view, however, has an internal narrative problem: in st. 103 Weden describes his interaction with Sutting as poor, and in st. 105 Weden is said to have had to bore through the mountains, but this may just have been to reach Sutting, rather than Guthlathe as in Skm. The recipient of the oath being Guthlathe would agree better with the Skm narrative, and Sutting's betrayer would instead be her.

1–4 Vǫl ... jaðar | Taken on its own this st. would be somewhat difficult, but in context the import is clear: Woden says that He has made good use of the Mead of Poetry by bringing it to earth, making poetry (and surely likewise other intellectual disciplines) available to men.

3 Óð-rórir 'Woderearer' | One of the vessels in with the Mead of Poetry was held (see introduction to the present section above), here standing in for all the Mead.

4 jaðar 'rim' | metr. emend.; jaðar R has a long root-syllable, and does not fit grammatically.

The following day went the Rime-Thurses to ask for the High One's counsel, in the High One's hall.
 About Baleworker (= Weden) they asked, if he were come among the bonds (gods), or if Sutting had slain him.

1 Hins hindra dags 'The following day' | This is the only occurrence of the comparative bindra 'following, next' in the Norse (i.e. 'belonging to Norway and its colonies') literature. The superlative bindstr 'last, final' does occur more often (e.g. indsta sinni 'the last time', with loss of the b-; see CV: bindri), and the possible derivative bindar-dags 'day after tomorrow, two days after' is found twice, both times in the Gula, chh. 37 and 266. If we, however, search in the broader Scandinavian sphere, we find in the Swedish provincial laws an exact equivalent of the present phrase, namely OSwe. bindra-dagber, a law-word referring specifically to the 'day after the wedding', used both on its own and in the expression bindra-dags gígf 'morning gift'. If this is indeed the sense in the present stanza, two interpretations are possible: it either (i) refers sarcastically to Weden's sleeping with Guthlathe (as would be done on the wedding night), or (ii) means that Weden actually married, or promised to marry, Guthlathe. The latter interpretation may find support in st. 109, see notes there.

110 Baug-ęið Óðinn · hygg at unnit hafi,
 2 hvat skal hans tryggðum trúa?
 Suttung svikvinn · hann lét sumbli frá
 4 ok grótta Gunn-löðu.

A high-oath[†] I ween that Weden has sworn—how shall one trust his truces?
 Away from the simble[†] he left Sutting betrayed, and Guthlathe, made to weep.

1–4 Baug-ęið ... Gunn-löðu 'A high-oath ... brought to tearsTM' | The exact narrative referred to in the stanza is hard to pin down, but I find the following most likely: Weden swore an oath on a high, its contents being that he would marry Guthlathe. Sutting then hosted a simble (banquet, drinking feast) for the new couple (cf. bins hindra dags in st. 108), and Weden slept with her, but after. svikvinn 'betrayed' and grótta 'brought to tears' are (respectively masc. and fem.) acc. sg. past participles of the transitive verbs svíkva 'to betray' and gróta 'to make weep, bring to tears'. I read lét as meaning 'left, abandoned, forsook'.

The Speeches of Loddfathomer (Loddfáfnis mól, 111–137)

A series of advice stanzas addressed to Loddfathomer[†], an otherwise unknown figure who is clearly mythological. The name is a compound: the first element, lodd-, is related to ON loddari 'juggler, tramp', OE loddere 'pauper, beggar'; the second, Fáfnir

The section division is found in R. Stanza 111 has a large initial M, albeit smaller than those which introduce new chapters and poems, and the beginning of the following section, the Rune-Tally, is also clearly marked by an initial.

I counsel thee, O Loddfathomer, that thou learn the counsels;

thou wilt have use if thou learn,

they will be good for thee if thou get:

At night do not rise, unless thou be scouting, or thou look for thy place outside.

5 leitir þér innan út staðar ‘or thou look for thy place outside’ | Lit. word-for-word “or thou look for thee from within out a place”, which becomes nonsensical. leita sér staðar ‘look for one’s place’ is a euphemism, i.e. “to relieve oneself”, which was done outside.

- 113 Rǫðumk þér Loddfáfnir, · at rǫð nemir,

1 gair ‘heed’ | The nasal vowel here is based on Elfdalian gǽ.

5 eyra-rúnu ‘ear-whisperer [LOVER]’ | This word is also used in Vsp 38, in which male seducers of married women are among those being forced to wade through “heavy streams” in the afterlife.

4 fjalli eða firði ‘on fell or firth’ | i.e. ‘hiking through mountains or travelling at sea’; a very Norwegian expression. This word pair is a formulaic merism; this is its only poetic attestation, but it is found a few times in the Old Norwegian laws.

1 Ofar-la ‘Sorely’ | Contraction of ofar-liga ‘CV: high up, in the upper part’, presumably meaning that the words were particularly grievous or insulting, i.e., they “got to him”. Whether he was murdered or committed suicide is not clear.

4 líkn-fastan ‘steadfast in liking’ | The first element líkn ‘liking’ is somewhat difficult; see sts. 8 (with note) and 120. For the present cpd La Farge and Tucker (1992) give a tentative ‘assured of favour’, while CV gives ‘fast in goodwill, beloved’.

³⁴i.e. “if somebody puts a curse on you, do not ignore it, but respond decisively”. This st. has often been interpreted as a command to call out evil, even when committed towards somebody else, and while there is nothing in it that speaks clearly against that interpretation, it does not agree with the general spirit of the Háv., which is one of caution and shrewdness.

Up shalt thou not look in battle —alike to a madman become the sons of men—
lest men bewitch thy [sense/life/face].³⁵

³⁵A very difficult st. CV explains gjalti as an old dative of gǫltr ‘boar, hog’, and thus sees the closely related phrase verða at gjalti as “to be turned into a hog”, i.e. ‘to turn mad with terror’, esp. in a fight”. The vowel breaking is however unexpected here, since gǫltr (< Proto-Norse galtur*) is an u-stem, which makes the stem-vowel in the dat. sg. gēlti (< galtiu*, cf. kunimudiu, dat. sg. of Kunimundur*, on the Tjurkö 1 bracteate) the result of i-umlaut rather than an original short e*.

La Farge and Tucker (1992) instead explain the word as a borrowing from Old Irish geilt ‘insane, mad’. Pettit (1986) follows this, and argues that the whole theme of the st. probably be of Celtic origin, giving several examples from Celtic literature of warriors going mad upon looking up into the sky during battle. In this case the men (halir, which word seems to have an association with warriors; cf. 36–37, 49) would be to quote Pettit some sort of “supernatural sky warriors”, in my opinion most likely the Oneharriers[†].

The Rune-Tally (138–146)

This group of stanzas is introduced by a large initial in R, marking the beginning of a new section. In younger paper manuscripts they have the header Rúna-tals þáttur ‘Strand of the Rune-Tally’, and generally give an archaic, mystic impression; at times one gets a feeling that they were drawn from the lips of an Odinic priest.

Apart from these stanzas there are a few other manuscript attestations of similar Runic magic. Closest at hand is st. 80 above, which would fit seamlessly into the present section. Outside of Háv there is Sigrdr 5–17, also preserved in R.

1 Fimbul-ljóð níu ‘Nine fimble-leeds’ | Nine very great chants or spells (galders[†]), compare the eighteen leads below (st. 147 onward). It is unclear what this has to do with Weden’s Hanging; this stanza may be an insert.

1–2 hinum frégja syni Bǫlþorns, Bęstlu fǫður ‘the famed son of Balethorn, Bestle’s father’ | According to Gylf 6: [Borr] fekk þeirar konu, er Bestla hét, dóttir Bǫlþorns jötuns, ok fengu þau þrjá sonu; hét einn Óðinn, annarr Vili, þriðji Vé [...] ‘[Byre] got the wife called Bestle, the daughter of the ettin Balethorn, and they had three sons: one was called Weden, the other Will, the third Wigh.’ Balethorn’s son is then Weden’s uncle, an instance of the old Indo-European custom of sending sons away to be fostered by the mother’s male relations. Cf. TODO: some reference.

Then I took to flourish and be wise,

 My word from a word a word sought out;
 my work from a work a work sought out.

1 nam'k frévas̥k 'I began to flourish' | A notorious mistranslation popularized by David F. Greenberg (1988) has rendered these words as "I took semen". They would supposedly reference Weden stealing the ejaculate from hanged men in order to replenish his own powers—something not otherwise attested. This preposterous notion makes no sense in the context of the text and has no philological grounding. While Old Norse frę does mean "seed", it only refers to the seeds of plants, not the seed animals or men. Regardless, frévas̥k is without doubt a reflexive verb literally meaning something like 'cultivate oneself'.

3–4 orð ... leitaði. 'My word ...sought out.' | Every good speech led to another; every good deed likewise.

6 ragna 'of the Reins' | 'ręgna' R

1 Rúnar munt finna · ok ráðna stafi 'Runes wilt thou find, and interpreted staves' | A strong resemblance is found in the long-line on the medieval runestone N 13: rúnar ek ríst · ok ráðna stafi 'runes I carve, and interpreted staves.'

 Knowest thou how one shall paint? Knowest thou how one shall try?
 Knowest thou how one shall bid? Knowest thou how one shall blood[†]?
 Knowest thou one shall send? Knowest thou how one shall soo[†]?^{39,40}

³⁹The first four verbs seem to refer to runes: carving, interpreting, colouring (with blood?), and divining from them.

The latter four refer to sacrifice: supplication, worship, sending (the sacrifice or the prayer to the gods), and wasting the victim. The following stanza repeats these verbs in what looks like a sacrificial context. See further relevant Encyclopedia entries.

 It is better unsent than over-sooed[†];
 [...].⁴¹

4 [...] | For metrical reasons it is very likely that a line has been lost here.

⁴¹An identical progression of four verbs suggests a close relation with the previous st. — The sense seems to be that it is better not to sacrifice at all than to sacrifice in excess, since even a small gift (to the gods) will be rewarded. A ritual cycle of gifts and rewards between men and the gods is also seen in other Indo-European pagan literatures. Compare the Sanskrit Dehí me, dádāmi te ‘Give to me, I give to thee’ and Latin dō ut dēs ‘I give that thou might give’.

The Leed-Tally (147–165)

This section of Háv, the so-called the Leed-Tally (Ljóðatal), is not separated from the preceding section (which is marked out with a large initial), but is usually taken as separate since it is a self-contained list not much concerned with runes. The speaker, Weden, addressing Loddfathomer, lists eighteen galders or spells he knows. The spells themselves are not given; only their purpose. They are aristocratic and Odinic in character and deal with such things as battle (3, 4, 5, 8, 11, 13), healing (galder 2, 12), countering sorcery (6, 10), controlling the elements (7, 9), and seduction (16, 17). The eighteenth and last spell is a mystery; not even its purpose is told, and it is known only by Weden and his closest women.

There is a clear relation to other known Germanic galders. The fourth bears a strong likeness to Grg 10, and its effect (removing fetters) is shared with the High German Mers I, an actual galder of that type. The mysterious eighteenth spell finds an interesting parallel in the unknowable eighteenth question posed by Weden in Vaff 54.

I dull the edges of my opponents;
for them bite no weapons nor staffs.

4 vǣlir ‘staffs’ | Plural of vǣlr, here referring to the magic staff or sceptre used by witches and warlocks; the word vǣlva ‘wallow’[†] (seeress, prophetess) is probably derived from this word. The reading vélir ‘wiles, tricks, deceits’ must be excluded for metrical reasons, since a c-verse in Leeds-meter cannot end in a trochée.

150 Þat kann’k fjórða, · ef mér fyrðar bera
2 bǫnd at bóg-limum, svá ek gæl, · at ganga má’k, 4 sprettr mér af fótum fjǫturr, en af hǫndum hapt.

This I know fourth, if men bear bonds onto my shoulder-limbs:
so I gale that I may walk;
springs from my feet the fetter,
and from my hands the bond.⁴³

⁴³Cf. Grg 10, which is very similar to the present stanza, and Mers I (edited below under Galders), a galder that seems to have actually been used for the purpose of removing fetters.

151 Þat kann’k fimta, · ef sé’k af fári skotinn
 2 flein í folki vaða, flýgr-a svá stint, · at stöðvi’g-a’k,
 4 ef hann sjónum of sé’k.

This I know fifth, if I see a dangerously shot arrow in the troop wading:
 it flies not so stiff that I may not stop it,
 if I see it with my sights.

152 Þat kann’k sétta, · ef mik sérir þegn
 2 á rótum rás viðar, þann hal, · es mik heipta kveðr,
 4 þann eta megin heldr an mik.

This I know sixth, if athane wounds me on the roots of a raw/sappy tree:
 that man who sings hatred against me,
 him the harms eat instead of me.

1–2 ef mik sérir þegn á rótum rás viðar ‘if athane wounds me on the roots of a raw/sappy tree’ | I.e., “if a man carves a runic curse against me”. The sappy wood was apparently of importance for the curse; cf. the curious account of GrettS 79, where a hag curses Grettir in the following way: after finding a small tree and planing a small smooth surface onto a scorched side of it, she carves runes in its roots and reddens them with her own blood. She then chants galders[†] while walking counter-clockwise around it. Lastly she pushes it out to sea, praying for it to drift to Grettir’s homestead and curse him. Cf. also Skm 32 where Shirner goes to a brár viðr ‘raw/sappy tree’ to get a certain curse-object.

2 rás ‘raw/sappy’ | The normal form of this word is brár (cf. Skm 32), but the required alliteration with rótum makes it impossible here.

153 Þat kann’k sjaunda, · ef sé’k hōvan loga
 2 sal of sess-mogum, brinnr-at svá breitt, · at hōnum bjargi’g-a’k;
 4 þann kann’k galdr at gala.

This I know seventh, if I see a high hall blazing over seat-lads [WARRIORS]:

it burns not so broadly that I may not save it⁴⁴—that galder I can gale.

⁴⁴i.e. “if I see a hall burning with men trapped inside, no matter how large the flame is I can save both the hall and the men.”

154 Þat kann’k átta, · es ǫllum es
2 nyt-sam-ligt at nema, hvar’s hatr vęx · með hildings sonum,
4 þat má’k bóta brátt.

This I know eighth, which for all men is useful to learn:
wherever hatred grows among a prince’s sons,
it I may shortly mend.

3 hatr ‘hatred’ | i.e. with regard to the father’s inheritance.

155 Þat kann’k níunda, · ef mik nauðr of stęndr
2 at bjarga fari mínu á floti, vind ek kyrrí · vági á 4 ok svęfi’k allan sę.

This I know ninth, if I come in need of saving my ride on a floater [SHIP]:
the wind I calm upon the wave,
and put all the sea asleep.

156 Þat kann’k tíunda, · ef sé’k tún-riður
2 lęika lopti á,
ek svá vinn’k, · at þęr villar fara 4 sinna hęim-hama
sinna hęim-huga.

This I know tenth, if I see town-rideresses[†] playing aloft:
I work it so that they go astray
of their home-hames[†], of their home-minds.

3 þeir villar fara ‘they (fem.) go astray’ | emend.; þeir villir fara ‘they (masc.) go astray’ R

1 tún-riður ‘town-rideresses’ | The riður ‘rideresses’ were witches who would leave their original human shapes or skins (hamir) in order to fly around in the air tormenting and poisoning villagers. Their original bodies would then be lying in a coma-like state, something like “astral projection”. It was not the case that their whole mental faculties would disconnect from their bodies, but rather they would leave behind something of their humanity, which was thought to be inextricably linked to their human bodies. Through his second sight, Woden was able to see these riders, and would then use his superior magical wisdom to confuse them so that they would not be able to return to their human “home-shapes” or minds, but would instead be forced to stray as tormented bodyless ghosts; a cruel fate. Woden also brags about tricking riders in Hárþ 20.

157 Þat kann’k elliþta, · ef skal’k til orrostu
2 leiða lang-vini,
und randir gelf’k, · en þeir með ríki fara, 4 heilir hildar til,
heilir hildi frá,
6 koma þeir heilir hvaðan.

This I know eleventh, if I shall into the fray lead old friends:
beneath the shields I gale, and they go with power healthy to the battle, healthy from the battle;
they return healthy anywhence.

2 lang-vini ‘old friends’ | In Germanic paganism the followers and protégés of a god were his friends (vinir); already in Beow we see that the Shieldings are called the Ing-wine ‘friends of Ing’¹. Two other places where it is used of Woden are Grm 54 and Sont 22, where Eyel speaks about his friendship (vinan) with Woden. In Hym 11 Thunder is the vinr ver-liða ‘friend of manly retainers’.

158 Þat kann’k tolþta, · ef sé’k á tré uppi
2 váfa virgil-ná,
svá ek ríst · ok í rúnum fá’k, 4 at sá gengr gumi.
ok mēlir við mik.

This I know twelfth, if I see in a tree up high a gallow-corpse dangling:
so I carve and paint in the runes,

that that man walks
and speaks with me.

159 Þat kann'k þrettánda · ef skal'k þegn ungan
2 verpa vatni á,
mun-at hann falla · þótt í folk komi,
4 hnígr-a sá halr fyr hjörum.

This I know thirteenth, if on a young thane
I shall sprinkle water:
he will not fall though he come into battle;
that warrior sinks not down before swords.

1–2 ef skal'k þegn ungan verpa vatni á 'if on a young thane I shall sprinkle water' | A reference to the Heathen name-giving ceremony in which the infant would be sprinkled with water; cf. the attestations in Rb 7, 21, 34.

160 Þat kann'k fjórtánda, · ef skal'k fyrða liði
2 tēlja tíva fyr,
ása ok alfa · ek kann allra skil,
4 fār kann ð-snotr svá.

This I know fourteenth, if before a retinue of men
I shall count forth the Tews:
of the Eese and Elves all I know the discernments;
few unwise men can do so.

3 skil 'discernments' | Their unique traits. Cf. Hym 38, where the corresponding verb skilja 'to discern, understand' is used in the context of god-lore.

161 Þat kann'k fimtánda, · es gól þjóð-rórir
2 dvergr fyr Dēllings durum, afl gól ósum, · en oľfum frama,
4 hyggju Hropta-tý.

This I know fifteenth, which Thedrearer galed, the dwarf, before Delling's doors.
Strength he galed for the Eese, and fame for the Elves, thought for Roft-Tew (= Weden).

- 162 Þat kann’k sextánda, · ef vil’k hins svinna mans 2 hafa gæð allt ok gaman, hugi hverfi’k · hvit-armri konu
 4 ok sný’k hennar öllum sefa.

This I know sixteenth, if I will from the smart girl have her senses all, and pleasure:
 the heart I change of the white-armed woman,
 and I twist her whole mind.

- 163 Þat kann’k sjautjándá · at mik seint mun firrask
 2 hit man-unga man.

This I know seventeenth, that the girl-young girl will lately shun me.

- 164 Ljóða þessa · munt Loddfáfnir 2 lengi vanr vesa;
 þó sé þér góð ef getr, 4 nýt ef nemr,
 þörf ef þiggr.

These leeds wilt thou, Loddfathomer, for long be lacking!
 Though they would be good for thee if thou get,
 useful if thou learn,
 needful if thou receive.

- 165 Þat kann’k átjándá, · es éva kenndi’k 2 mey né manns konu,
 —allt es bættra · es einn of kann,
 4 þat fylgir ljóða lokum—
 nema þæiri einni, · es mik armi verr, 6 eða mín systir séi.

This I know eighteenth, which I never teach a maiden nor man’s woman—everything is better which one alone knows;

that follows the last of the leeds—save for her alone who holds me in her arm, or is my sister.

5 mik armi vęrr ‘holds me in her arm’ | A similar expression is also used Vkv 2. The one who wraps Weden in her arm may be his wife, Frie[†].

166 Nú eru Háva mól kveðin · Háva hollu í;
 2 all-þorǫf ýta sonum,
 3 ó-þorǫf jǫtna sonum;
 4 heill sá’s kvað, · heill sá’s kann,
 njóti sá’s nam,
 6 heilir þeir’s hlýddu.

Now are the High One’s speeches sung in the High One’s hall, of great use for the sons of men,
 of harm for the sons of ettins.
 Hail he who sang; hail he who knows;
 may he use who learned;
 hail they who heeded!

3 jǫtna ‘ettins’ | corrected in margin from yta ‘men’ R

4–6 kvað, kann, nam, hlýddu ‘sang, knows, learned, heeded’ | The implied subject is the speeches, i.e. ‘hail he who sang them, hail he who knows them,’ et.c.

Speeches of Webthrithner

Introduction

A wisdom contest poem, known by the author of Gylf.

Far from being a loose collection of pieces of mythic information, the poem is tightly structured. There is a logical plan to the questions asked, and they are clearly divided into groups. It is probably not a coincidence that Weden asks exactly 18 questions, this being the same number as the spells in the Leed-tally section (sts. 147–165) of Háv. Eighteen is of course a multiple of the sacred number nine. It is of special note that the eighteenth item in both lists is an unknowable mystery.

Weden first asks his wife, Frie, for counsel, as he is curious about the ancient wisdom which the ettin Webthrithner might possess (1). Frie expresses worry, as she considers Webthrithner wiser than all other ettins (2), but Weden says that he has travelled far and wide, and wishes to know what Webthrithner's hall is like (3). Frie wishes Weden good luck against the ettin (4) and he departs, to challenge Webthrithner's orð-spēki 'word-wisdom' (5). He arrives at hall of Webthrithner (6), who promptly declares that Weden will not come out of the hall unless he be wiser than him (7). Weden introduces himself as Gainred, saying that he has travelled far in need of Webthrithner's hospitality (8). Webthrithner invites this Gainred to sit down (9), but he instead utters a gnomic stanza (10) not unlike those of the first section of Háv.

Webthrithner begins by asking four mythological questions, each answered by Gainred in turn. The questions concern which horses pull the day (11–12) and night (13–14), the river which divides the gods and ettins (15–16), and the plain where Surt[†] and the gods will fight (17–18).

því-at ęngi jǫtun · hugða’k jafn-ramman
 4 sęm Vaf-þrúðni vesa.“

“At home would I keep the Father of Hosts [= Weden], in the yards of the Gods—for no ettin have I judged to be as strong as Webthrithner.”

[Óðinn kvað:]

3 „Fjǫlð ek fór, · fjǫlð fręistaða’k,
 2 fjǫlð ek ręynda ręgin;
 hitt vil’k vita, · hvé Vaf-þrúðnis
 4 sala-kynni sei.“

[R 7v/13]

“Much I journeyed, much I tried,
 much I tested the Reins[†].
 This I wish to know: how Webthrithner’s halls may be.”

[Frigg kvað:]

4 „Hęill þú farir, · hęill þú aptr komir,
 2 hęill á sinum seir;
 óði þér dugi · hvar’s skalt, Alda-fǫðr,
 4 orðum męla jǫtun.“

[R 7v/15]

“Whole journey thou, whole come thou back, whole be thou on thy paths!
 Thy wisdom avail thee where thou, Father of Men, with words shalt address the ettin!”

[R 7v/17]

Then journeyed Weden to test the word-wisdom of that all-wise ettin.
 He came to the hall which Hymer[†]’s father [= Webthrithner] owned;
 Ug[†] <= Weden> went soon inside.

3 es | ok R 3 Hymis | metr. emend. following Finnur Jónsson (1932); Íms R

“Why then, Gainred, speakest thou from the floor before me?
Take a seat in the hall!

Then it shall be tried, which of the two might know more:
the guest, or the old thyle[†].”

[Óðinn kvað:]

10 „Ó-auðigr maðr, · es til auðigs kómr, 2 mēli þarft eða þegi;
ofr-mēlgi mikil · hygg’k at illa geti
4 hvēim’s við kald-rifjaðan kómr.“

[R 7v/26]

“An unwealthy man who to a wealthy comes ought to speak the needful or shut up.
Great over-speaking I think brings ill for him who comes by a cold-ribbed man.”

2 mēli þarft eða þegi ‘ought to speak the needful or shut up’ | Formulaic, this line occurs identically in Háv 19.

4 kald-rifjaðan ‘cold-ribbed’ | i.e. ‘cold-hearted, cunning’.

11 „Seg mér, Gagnráðr, · alls á golfi vill
2 þíns of fręsta frama, hvē hęstr hętir, · sá’s hverjan dregr
4 dag of drótt-mögu?“

[R 7v/28]

“Tell me, Gainred, since on the floor thou wilt test thy furtherance,
what the horse is called which pulls every day over the lads of the retinue [MEN]?”

2 þíns of fręsta frama ‘test thy furtherance’ | i.e. “try your luck, see how far you get”. Formulaic; cf. Háv 2.

[Óðinn kvað:]

12 „Skin-faxi hętir, · es hinn skíra dregr
2 dag of drótt-mögu;
hęsta batstr · þykkir með Hreð-gotum;
4 ęy lýsir mōn af mari.“

[R 7v/30]

“Shinefax[†] is he called who pulls the bright day over the lads of the retinue.
The best of horses he seems among the Reth-Gots[†];
ever shines that stallion’s mane.”

[Vafþrúðnir kvað:]

13 „Seg þat, Gagn-ráðr, · alls á golfi vill
 2 þíns of fręista frama,
 hvé jór heitir, · sá's austan dregr
 4 nött of nýt regin?“

[R 7v/32]

“Tell this, Gainred, since on the floor thou wilt test thy furtherance,
 what the steed is called which from east does pull night over the useful Reins[†]?”

[Óðinn kvað:]

14 „Hrím-faxi heitir, · es hverja dregr
 2 nött of nýt regin;
 mél-dropa fellir · morgin hverjan;
 4 þaðan kómr dōgg of dala.“

[R 7v/33]

“Rimefax[†] is he called who pulls every night over the useful Reins.
 Drool from his bit he lets fall each morning;
 from thence comes the dew of the dales.”

4 þaðan kómr dōgg of dala ‘from thence comes the dew of the dales’ | For another explanation of the origin of dew, see Vsp 18.

[Vafþrúðnir kvað:]

15 „Seg þat, Gagnráðr, · alls á golfi vill
 2 þíns of fręista frama,
 hvé ó heitir, · sú's deilir með jōtna sonum
 4 grund, ok með goðum.“

[R 8r/1]

“Tell this, Gainred, since on the floor thou wilt test thy furtherance,
 what the river is called which divides the land between the sons of ettins and the gods.”

[Óðinn kvað:]

16 „Ífing heitir ó, · es deilir með jōtna sonum
 2 grund, ok með goðum;
 opin rinna · hón skal umb aldr-daga;
 4 verðr-at íss á óu.“

[R 8r/2]

“Iving[†] is the river called which divides the land between the sons of ettins and the gods.
 Open shall it flow through its days of life;
 there forms no ice on that river.”

[Vafþrúðnir kvað:]

17 „Sæg þat, Gagnráðr, · alls á golfi vill
 2 þíns of fręista frama, hvé vǫllr heitir, · es finnask vígi at 4 Surtr ok hin svǫsu goð?“

[R 8r/3]

“Tell this, Gainred, since on the floor thou wilt test thy furtherance,
 what the plain is called where they find each other at war, Surt[†] and the excellent Gods.”

Óðinn:

18 „Vígriðr heitir vǫllr, · es finnask vígi at 2 Surtr ok hin svǫsu goð;
 hundrað rasta · hann ’s á hverjan veg;
 4 sá ’s þeim vǫllr vitaðr.“

[R 8r/4]

“Wighride[†] is the plain called where they find each other at war,
 Surt and the excellent gods.

A hundred rests[†] it stretches in every way;
 for them that plain is marked out.”

Vafþrúðnir:

19 „Fróðr est nú gęstr, · far á bękk jǫtuns,
 2 ok męlumk í sessi saman;
 hǫfði vęðja · vit skulum hǫllu í
 4 gęstr, of goð-spęki.“

[R 8r/6]

“Learned art thou now, guest; take the ettin’s bench and let us speak on the seat together!
 Wager a head shall we two in the hall,
 O guest, over god-wisdom!”

R begins here has the header capitulum ‘(new) chapter’ and begins st. 20 with a large initial.

Óðinn: 20 „Sęg þat hit ęina, · ef þitt óði dugir [R 8r/9, A 3r/1]
 2 ok þú Vaf-þrúðnir vitir, hvaðan jorð of kom, · eða upp-himinn
 4 fyrst, hinn fróði jötunn.“
 “Tell this one, if thy wisdom avails,
 and thou, Webthrithner, mightst know,
 from whence Earth did come, or Up-heaven[†],
 first, O learned ettin.”

1 óði | The first word on fol. 3r. of A; from this point we have the poem in both manuscripts.

Vafþrúðnir: 21 „Ór Ymis holdi · vas jorð of sköpuð, [R 8r/10, A 3r/2] 2 en ór bęinum björg, himinn ór hausi · hins hrím-kalda jötuns,
 4 en ór svęita sęr.“
 “From Yimer[†]’s flesh was the earth shaped, and from his bones the mountains;
 heaven from the skull of that rime-cold ettin, and from his blood the sea.⁴⁶”

4 svęita ‘blood’ | Cf. Sont 3/3 jötuns bals · undir þjóta ‘the neck-wounds of the ettin [SEAS] roar’. In poetry svęiti ‘sweat’ almost always means ‘blood’. This is shared with OE swât, as seen e.g. in Beow 1286a: sweord swâte fāh ‘sword stained with “sweat”’, 2689b–2690: bé ge-blódegod wearð // sâwul-dríore; · swât jðum wéoll. ‘he was bloodied in soul-gore; the “sweat” gushed in waves’.

⁴⁶The present st. very closely resembles Grm 41; lines 1 and 4 here are identical to lines 1–2 there, and lines 2 and 3a here are very similar to line 3a and 4 there. Although the stanzas are clearly related, they are still distinct enough that the one cannot be a direct scribal copy of the other. I think that the relation is most likely to be oral, and that the two stanzas were both composed in the same, most likely West Norwegian, community of poets, or perhaps even by the same individual.

Óðinn: 22 „Sęg þat annat, · ef þitt óði dugir [R 8r/12, A 3r/3]
 2 ok þú Vaf-þrúðnir vitir, hvaðan Máni of kom, · svá’t fęrr męnn yfir,

4 eða Sól hit sama?“

“Tell this other, if thy wisdom avails,
and thou, Webthrithner, mightst know,
from whence Moon did come, so that he journeys over men, or Sun likewise.”

Vafþrúðnir: 23 „Mundil-fari heitir, · hann ’s Mána faðir 2 ok svá Sólur hit sama;
himin hverfa · þau skulu hverjan dag
4 öldum at ár-tali.“

[R 8r/13, A 3r/4]

“Mundlefare[†] he is called—he is the father of Moon, and so of Sun likewise.
Turn round heaven shall they every day,
for mankind’s tally of years.”

4 öldum at ár-tali ‘for mankind’s tally of years’ | Cf. Vsp 6, where the Reins gave names to night, the moon-phases, morning, midday, afternoon, and evening órum at tēlja ‘the years for to tally’.

Óðinn: 24 „Sæg þat þriðja, · alls þik svinnan kveða
2 ok þú Vafþrúðnir vitir,
hvaðan Dagr of kom, · sa’s færr drótt yfir,
4 eða Nótt með niðum?“

[R 8r/15, A 3r/6]

“Tell this third, since they call thee wise,
and thou, Webthrithner, mightst know,
from whence Day did come, who journeys over the folk,
or Night with the moon-phases.”

Vafþrúðnir: 25 „Dellingr heitir, · hann ’s Dags faðir, 2 en Nótt vas Nqrvi borin;
ný ok nið · skópu nýt regin
4 öldum at ár-tali.“

[R 8r/17, A 3r/8]

“Delling[†] he is called—he is the father of Day[†], but Night[†] was born to Narrow[†].
The waxing and waning did the useful Reins create for mankind’s tally of years.”

3 ný ok nið ‘The waxing and waning’ | i.e. “the moon-phases”. Cf. Vsp 6.

Óðinn kvað: 26 „Sæg þat fjórða, · alls þik fróðan kveða, [R 8r/18, A 3r/9]
 2 ok þú Vaf-þrúðnir vitir,
 hvaðan vetr of kom · eða varmt sumar
 4 fyrst með fróð rēgin?“
 “Tell this fourth, since they call thee learned,
 and thou, Webthrithner, mightst know,
 from whence winter did come, or warm summer,
 first, amidst the learned Reins.”

Vafþrúðnir: 27 „Vind-svalr heitir, · hann’s Vetrar faðir, [R 8r/20, A 3r/10]
 2 en Svósuðr Sumars.“
 [...]

“Windswoll[†] is he called; he is Winter[†]’s father;
 but Sosuth[†] [is] Summer[†]’s.”

3 [...] | The second half of the st. seems to be missing; its contents are completely unknown. No gap is indicated in the mss.

Óðinn kvað: 28 „Sæg þat fimta, · alls þik fróðan kveða, [R 8r/21, A 3r/11]
 2 ok þú Vaf-þrúðnir vitir,
 hvęrr ása ęldstr · eða Ymis niðja
 4 yrði í ár-daga?“
 “Tell this fifth, since they call thee learned,
 and thou, Webthrithner, mightst know:
 Who oldest of the Eese[†], or of Yimer’s kinsmen [ETTINS], arose in days of yore?⁴⁷”

⁴⁷i.e. “which was the oldest, first being?” Cf. the question on the C9th Malt Stone (DR NOR1988;5):
 huarisi : alistiąsa, perhaps Hvar es inn ęlisti ąsa? ‘Who is the eldest of the Eese?’

Vafþrúðnir: 29 „Ør-ófi vetra · áðr vęri jorð of sköpuð, [R 8r/22, A 3r/12]
 2 þá vas Ber-gęlmir borinn,

4 Þrúð-gælmir · vas þess faðir, en Aur-gælmir afi.“ “Uncountable winters before the Earth was created,
 then was Bareyelmér[†] born.
 Thrithyelmér[†] was that one’s father,
 and Earyelmér[†] the grandfather.”

Óðinn kvað: 30 „Sæg þat rétta, · alls þik svinnan kveða,
 ok þú Vaf-þrúðnir vitir,
 hvaðan Aur-gælmir kom · með jöttna sonum
 fyrst, hinn fróði jötunn.“
 “Tell this sixth, since they call thee wise,
 and thou, Webthrithner, mightst know:
 From whence Earyelmér came amidst the sons of ettins,
 first, O learned ettin?”

[R 8r/23, A 3r/14]

Vafþrúðnir: 31 „Ór Éli-vógum · stukku eittr-dropar, svá óx unds ór varð jötunn;
 þar órar éttir · kómu allar saman;
 því’s þat é alt til atalt.“ “From the Illewaves[†] splashed venom-drops;
 so it grew until it formed an ettin.
 Our lineages came there all together, thus it is ever all too fierce.”

[R 8r/25, A 3r/15, G]

1–4 ALL | Over æons the splashing venom-drops combined until they formed a sentient being: this was Earyelmér, whom Gylf identifies with Yimer[†]. This stanza is cited in support of the lengthy and embellished creation narrative found in Gylf, but it is not certain that this is what our poet had in mind. The Illewaves are probably a reflex of the chaotic primeval Waters found in many West Eurasian mythologies, including Genesis 1:1–3 and RV 10.129. Of these two foundational religious sources the latter is closer to the present stanza, and probably holds the more archaic conception. Where we find in the Jewish narrative a proper creation; at the very beginning of time God’s spirit is on the Waters and He makes the light shine over them, we find in these two Indo-European texts a spontaneous emergence of a single primeval entity long before the Gods are born—here from the violent splashing of venom, in RV 10.129.3 from “the power of heat” (tápasah mabinā). This entity in turn asexually begets sexual beings—here through rubbing his limbs together, in RV 10.129.4 simply giving rise to “desire” (kāma) which serves as the “primal seed of thought” (mānasaḥ rétaḥ prathamām)—and it is from these that the world is populated.

3–4 órar ... atalt ‘Our ... fierce’ | so G; om. RA.

4 þat ‘it’ | i.e. the ettin race.

Óðinn kvað: 32 „Sæg þat sjaunda, · alls þik svinnan kveða,

[R 8r/26, A 3r/16]

“Tell this seventh, since they call thee wise,
 and thou, Webthrithner, mightst know:
 How that one begot bairns, the stubborn ettin,
 when he knew not a troll-woman’s pleasure?”

3 baldni ‘stubborn’ | so A; aldni ‘the aged, old’ R breaks alliteration

Vafþrúðnir kvað: 33 „Und hendi vaxa · kvóðu hrím-þursi 2 mey ok mög saman;
 fótr við fóti · gat hins fróða jötuns
 4 sex-höfðaðan son.“

[R 8r/27, A 3r/17]

“In the hand of the rime-thurse[†], they said, did grow a maiden and lad together.
 Foot by a foot begat for the learned ettin
 a six-headed son.”

1–3 Und hendi ... fótr við fóti ‘Within the hand ... Foot against foot’ | The image is masturbatory. The stanza is paraphrased in Gylf 5: En svá er sagt, at þá er hann svaf, fékk hann sveita. Þá óx undir vinstri bendi bonum maðr ok kona, ok annarr fótr hans gat son við öðrum, en þaðan af kómu ettir. ‘But so is said, that when he slept he began to sweat. Then grew within his left hand a man and a woman, and one foot of his begat a son by the other, and thereof come the lineages [of Ettins].’

Óðinn kvað: 34 „Sæg þat óttunda, · alls þik fróðan kveða,
 2 ok þú Vaf-þrúðnir vitir,
 hvat fyrst of mant · eða fremst of veltst,
 4 þú est al-sviðr jötunn.“

[R 8r/29, A 3r/18]

“Tell this eighth, since they call thee learned,
 and thou, Webthrithner, mightst know:
 What recallest thou first, or knowest foremost?
 Thou art all-wise, ettin!”

Vafþrúðnir kvað: 35 „Ør-ófi vetra · áðr véri jörð of sköpuð,

[R 8r/30, A 3r/19, G]

2 þá vas Ber-gelmir borinn;
þat fyrst of man'k, · es hinn fróði jötunn
4 á vas lúðr of lagiðr.“

“Uncountable winters before the Earth was created,
then was Bareymer born.

It I first remember, when the learned ettin on the tree-trunk was laid.⁴⁸”

⁴⁸An obscure mythological reference. According to the prose of Gylf, after the sons of Byre[†] (that is, Weden[†], Will[†] and Wigh[†]) slew Yimer, so much blood flew from his wounds that all the race of Ettins were drowned, save for Bareymer and his family, who survived by getting up on his lúðr. This is clearly a variant of the flood myth, but it may be of Biblical origin.

In regular prose, lúðr usually means ‘trumpet, blowing horn’, less commonly ‘flour-bin’; the underlying sense seems to be ‘hollowed-out wood’. Considering the transitive nature of Bareymer being laid (of lagiðr) upon it, the stanza might instead be referring a ship burial, so that the first thing Webthrithner remembers is Bareymer’s funeral.

Óðinn kvað: 36 „Sę þat níunda, · alls þik svinnan kveða,
2 ok þú Vafþrúðnir vitir,
hvaðan vindr of kœmr · svá't fęrr vág yfir,
4 ę męnn hann sjalfan of sęa.“

[R 8r/32, A 3r/21]

“Tell this ninth, since they call thee wise,
and thou, Webthrithner, mightst know:
From whence the wind comes which fares over the wave;
men always see his very self?”

4 ę męnn hann sjalfan of sęa ‘men always see his very self’ | Most likely a negative clitic -t has been lost from the verb sęa ‘see’, which would have given the proper reading: “men never see his very self”.

Vafþrúðnir: 37 „Hrę-svelgr hętir, · es sitr á himins ęnda, 2 jötunn í arnar ham;
af hans vęngjum · kveða vind koma
4 alla męnn yfir.“

[R 8r/34, A 3r/22]

“Rawswallower[†] is he called who sits at heaven’s end;
an ettin in an eagle’s hame[†].
From his wings they say that the wind comes over all men.”

[Óðinn kvað:]

38 „Seg þat tíunda, · alls þú tíva røk
 2 qll Vaþrúðnir vitir, hvaðan Njörðr of kom · með ása sonum;
 4 hofum ok horgum · rēðr hund-morgum ok varð-at ósum alinn.“

[R 8v/1, A 3r/24]

“Tell this tenth, since thou of the Rakes of the Tews[†] all, O Webthrithner, mightst know:
 From whence Nearth[†] did come amidst the sons of the Eese[†]?
 Hoves[†] and harrows[†] he rules a hundred-many,
 and he was not by the Eese begotten.”

4 hofum ok horgum ‘hoves and harrows’ | A formulaic merism, see note to Vsp 7 for other occurrences. This stanza seems to be referring to the large count of cultic places named after Nearth in Norway (TODO: source this); cf. here Grm 16, where it is said that Nearth rēðr hó-timbruðum horgi ‘rules a high-timbered harrow’. Also of interest is Lok 51, where a goddess speaks about her véum ok vøngum ‘wighs and wongs’, other cultic names. All of these examples suggest something about the Heathen view of shrines.

[Vaþrúðnir kvað:]

 2 ok seldu at gíslingu goðum, í aldar røk · hann mun aptr koma
 4 heim með vísum voðnum.“

[R 8v/3, A 3r/26]

“In Waneham[†] the wise Reins[†] created him, and sold him as a hostage to/for the gods.
 In the Rakes of the Age[†] he will come back home amidst the wise Wanes[†].”

1 rēgin ‘Reins’ | rēgin ‘the Reins, Powers’ is generally used simply to refer to the gods as a collective, but here seems to refer specifically to the Wanes[†], in contrast with the Eese[†].

3 aldar røk ‘the Rakes of the Age’ | The Rakes of the Reins[†], the End Times.

Stanzas 40–41 are malformed in both R and A, and thus have to be reconstructed. R has only what is here st. 40; A has only the very beginning of st. 40 (“Tell this eleventh”), followed by the full st. 41. In diplomatic transcription:

R Segðv þat et .xi. hvar ytar tvnom i hoggvaz hverian dag. Val þeir kiosa oc riða vígi fra sitia meirr vm sáttir saman.

A Seg þat et .xi. allir eins heriar oðins tvnvm i hogguaz hverian dag. Val þeir kiosa ok riða vígi fra sitja meirr vm sáttir saman.

[Óðinn kvað:]

val þeir kjósa · ok ríða vígi frá, 4 sitja meirr of sáttir saman.“

[R 8v/5, A 3r/28]

“Tell this eleventh, where men in yards strike at each other every day?
 The slain they choose and they ride from the fray;
 then they sit at peace together.”

3 val þeir kjósa ‘The slain they choose’ | It is from this verbal phrase that the female agent noun val-kyrja ‘walkirie[†]’ is derived.

41 „Allir ein-herjar · Óðins túnum í

[A 3r/28]

“All the Oneharriers[†] in Woden’s yards

 The slain they choose and they ride from the fray;
 then they sit at peace together.”

[Óðinn kvað:]

[R 8v/6, A 3v/1]

“Tell this twelfth, why thou the Rakes of the Tews

[Vaðprúðnir kvað:]

43 „Frá jǫtna rúnum · ok allra goða

 4 níu kom’k heima · fyr nifl-hel neðan; hinig deýja ór helju halir.“

[R 8v/8, A 3v/2]

“From the runes of the ettins and of all the gods
 I can speak truly,
 for I have come into each Home[†].
 Into nine Homes I came beneath Nivelhell[†];
 that way men die out of Hell[†].”

4–5 níu ... halir. ‘Into nine ... of Hell.’ | Perhaps lower infernal underworlds. Finnur Jónsson (1932) considers ór helju ‘out of Hell’ a later interpolation, probably for metrical reasons.

[R 8v/13, A 3v/6]

“Life[†] and Lifethrasher[†]—but they will hide themselves in Hoardmimer[†]’s wood.
 Morning dew will they have for food;
 from thence is mankind begotten.”

2 holti Hodd-mímis ‘in Hoardmimer’s wood’ | Perhaps the hollowed-out Uggdrassle’s Ash.[†]

[Óðinn kvað:]

[R 8v/15, A 3v/8]

“Much I journeyed, much I tried,
much I tested the Reins!
From whence comes Sun onto the smooth heaven, when Fenrer[†] has destroyed this one?”

4 þessa ‘this one’ | The present sun, as explained in the following st.

4 Fēnrir ‘Fenrer’ | Perhaps not the same “Fenrerswolf” that fights against Woden (cf. st. 53 below); the word, which originally prob. means “Fen-creature”, may here simply mean “Wolf”. For the wolves who chase the sun and moon see Vsp 40 and Grm 40.

[Vafþrúðnir kvað:]

- 47 „Eina dóttur · berr alf-røðull, 2 áðr hana Fēnrir fari;
sú skal ríða, · þá’s regin deýja,

[R 8v/16, A 3v/9]

“One daughter the Elf-wheel (= Sun) bears before Fenrer might slay her.
She shall ride—when the Reins die—
the maiden, her mother’s paths.”

1 alf-røðull ‘Elf-wheel’ | A rare poetic synonym (hēiti) for the sun. It occurs in two other places: Skm 4/3, and a Scaldic loose stanza by Iewind Spoiler-of-scalds (Eyv Lv 9 in SkP 1). It also appears in two lists of names for the sun: Skm 69, Þul Sólar 1/7 in SkP 3, but these do not count as independent attestations since they may be drawing from any of the three earlier poems.)

Depending on the age of the cpd. the first element may reflect the semantics of PIE albʰós ‘white’ (cf. Latin albus ‘id.’). The second element røðull is not the normal ON word for “wheel”; it is inherited from PGmc. radulaz* - raduraz*, whence also OE rædor ‘heaven, sky’, OS radur, radul ‘id.’ It is composed of the root of German Rad ‘wheel’ with the agentive suffix -ulaz* - -uraz* ‘(habitually) doing’ and thus means something like ‘circler, turner, revolver’. The PIE root is Hreth₂-* which e.g. yields Latin rota ‘wheel’, Sanskrit rata ‘chariot’. In conclusion a more etymological translation may ‘white circler’.

[R 8v/18, A 3v/10]

“Much I journeyed, much I tried,
much I tested the Reins!
Who are the maidens that pass over the ocean;
wise-minded they go?”

3–4 hverjar ... fara? ‘Who ... go?’ | The identity of these maidens is very mysterious, and Webthrithner’s answer in the next st. does not give much more information. Considering all other questions introduced with the words fjölð ek fór et.c. have something to do with the end times, this one should as well. With this in mind they are probably to be identified with the maidens Woden asks about in Bdr 12.

[R 8v/27, A 3v/19]

“Much I journeyed, much I tempted,
 much I tested the Reins!
 What spoke Woden, before he would step onto the pyre, himself in his son’s [= Balder’s] ear?”

3 á bál stigi ‘step onto the pyre’ | The phrase stíga á ‘step onto, mount’ is also used to refer to one stepping aboard a ship or mounting a horse (see CV: stíga for citations). Its use for a person being borne onto the funeral pyre has been compared with Beow 1118b: güð-rinc á-stâh ‘the war-champion mounted [his pyre]’, but the interpretation of that line is controversial; Fulk et al. (2008)[186] follow Grundtvig in emending güð-rinc to güð-réc ‘war-smoke’ and compare it with Beow 3144b (wudu-réc á-stâh ‘wood-smoke rose up’, which also describes a cremation; (according to them) the present stanza “almost certainly refers not to Baldr but to Óðinn, probably imagined to mount the pyre in order to set fire to it.”

[R 8v/28, A 3v/19]

“Never will man know what thou in days of yore saidst in the ear of thy son.

With a fey[†] mouth I spoke my ancient staves[†], and about the Rakes of the Reins.

Now with Weden have I shared my word-wisdom—thou art ever wisest of men!”

1 mann-gi | manni dat. sg. RA is impossible; a subject is needed.

3 fęigum ‘fey’ | A word with strong fatalistic connections. Webthrithner realises that he was bound to die from the moment he proposed the wager (st. 19), as no being can outwit Weden.

3 mína forna stafi ‘my ancient staves’ | Referencing st. 1.

5 orð-spęki ‘word-wisdom’ | Referencing st. 5.

6 vera ‘of men’ | verr means ‘husband, man’ and is here used for reasons of alliteration; it does not imply that Weden is not a God.

Introduction

The Speeches of Grímnir (Grm) are preserved whole in both R and A.

The poem itself is enclosed by prose passages. It is hard to say for how long these have accompanied the poem, but since they are found in both R and A they must go back to a now-lost archetypal manuscript. Together with sts. 1–3 and 53–55 of the poem they form a narrative frame for the gnomic stanzas. The gnomic stanzas themselves, the bulk of the poem, are mythological and sometimes obscure. They align closely with other Eddic gnomic poems like Háv, Vafþ, Sigrdr, and Alv.

Weden begins by listing the individual dwellings of the gods (4–17). The locations are numbered, but a few facts speak to these numbers being a later insert:

1. The alliteration is never reliant on the numbers; if one compares the numbered questions in Vafþ 20–42 the difference is striking.
2. The numbering is inconsistent; Thunder's realm (st. 4) is not counted, and Wider's land (st. 17) has no numeral (perhaps since the form of the stanza would not allow it.)
3. In sts. 11–15 cited in Gylf, the numbers are missing.

After this list come several stanzas relating to Weden and his hall, Walhall (18–23). Mentioned are the preparation of food in Walhall (18), Weden's wolves (19) and ravens (20), the river through which the dead have to wade (21) and the gate through which they have to pass (22), the count of doors in Walhall (23), the count of doors in Thunder's hall Bilshirner (24), and two animals which stand on the hall and gnaw on the branches of the tree Leered (25–26). From the latter animal's—the stag Oakthirner's—horns droplets fall into Wharyelmer, which is the origin of all rivers (26).

This introduces a list of mythic rivers (27–28), ending with the waters through which Thunder must wade on his way to Ugdrassle (29). This leads to a list of the horses ridden by the other gods on their way to Ugdrassle (31) which is followed by a description of the roots of Ugdrassle (31), then its animals (32–36) the Walkirries (37), and beings associated with the sun and moon (38–40), the things created from Yimer's body (41–42) with a digression on the significance of the bloot[†] for men in the present (43, see note there!), the creation of the ship Shidebladner (44) and finally a list of the noblest of several categories of things and groups (45).

After these lists Weden utters an unclear st. invoking the gods (46), before listing many of his names and the circumstances in which they were used (47–50). He then turns to Garfrith, disappointed by the inhospitality and poor conduct of his former protégé, and predicts his imminent death (51–53). He finally reveals himself by his true name, daring Garfrith to face him (53). After this he repeats several of his names (54), and the poem ends.

In the final prose section we are told that Garfrith, after learning that he was torturing Weden, hurried up to take the god away from the fires, but tripped and fell on his sword and died. After this his son Ayner ruled for a long time.

From the sons of king Reading (Frá sonum Hraðungs konungs)

- P1 Hraðungr konungr átti tvá sonu. Hét annarr Agnarr, enn annarr Geirrøðr. [R 8v/31, A 3v/23]
 2 Agnarr var tíu vetra enn Geirrøðr átta vetra. Þeir reru tveir á báti með dorgar sínar at smá-fiski. Vindr rak þá í haf út. Í nátt-myркri 4 brutu þeir við land ok gingu upp; fundu kot-bónda einn. Þar vöru þeir um vetrinn. Kerling fostraði Agnar, enn karl Geirrøð. At vári fekk 6 karl þeim skip. Enn er þau kerling leiddu þá til strandar, þá mælti karl ein-méli við Geirrøð. Þeir fengu byr ok kvömu til stöðva fýður síns.
 8 Geirrøðr var fram í skipi. Hann hljóp upp á land enn hratt út skipinu, ok mælti: „Far þú þar er smyl hafi þik.“ Skipit rak út. Enn Geirrøðr 10 gekk út til bójar; hánun var vel fagnat; þá var faðir hans andaðr. Var þá Geirrøðr til konungs tekinn, ok varð maðr ágétr.

King Reading had two sons. One was called Ayner, and the other Garfrith. Ayner was ten winters old, but Garfrith eight winters. The two were rowing in a boat with their trolling-lines for small fishing. The wind drove them out into the sea. In the dark of night they crashed onto land and walked ashore; they found a lone cottage farmer. There they stayed over the winter. The wife fostered Ayner, but the husband Garfrith.⁴⁹ In the spring the husband gave them ships, but when he and his wife led them to the shore, the husband spoke privately with Garfrith.⁵⁰ They caught good wind, and came to their father's harbour. Garfrith was in the front of the ship. He leapt onto land and pushed out the ship, and spoke: "Go thou whither the fiends may have thee!" The ship drove out. But Garfrith walked towards the farm; he was welcomed well; by then was his father ended. Garfrith was then taken as king, and became an excellent man.

⁴⁹The wife was Frie, and the husband Weden; this is clarified by the following prose. The motif of Weden preferring the youngest brother is also found in Rþ.

⁵⁰Surely instructing him to push his brother out to sea.

Weden and Frie sat in the Lithshelf[†] and looked over all the Homes.⁵¹ Weden spoke: "Dost thou see Ayner, thy foster-son, where he begets children with a troll-woman in her cave?"⁵² But Garfrith, my foster-son, is king and now rules his land." Frie says: "He is such a meat-nothing that he torments his guests if he thinks too many are coming!" Weden says that this is the greatest lie; they make a wager over this matter. Frie sent her handmaid, Full, to Garfrith's hall. She bade the king be wary, lest he be destroyed by the many-cunning[†] man who had come to his land; and said that his mark was that no hound was so fierce that it would rush at him. But it was the greatest falsehood that Garfrith was not good of meat[†]; and yet he has that man bound whom the hounds would not touch. He was in a blue cloak and called himself Grimner, and did not tell anything more about himself, even though he was asked. The king had him tortured that he would speak, and set him between two fires; and he sat there for eight nights. King Garfrith had a son ten winters old, and he was called Ayner after his brother. Ayner went up to Grimner and gave him a full horn to drink, saying that the king did badly as he had him tortured without cause. Grimner drank it up. Then the fire had grown so much that the cloak burned on Grimner. He quoth:

⁵¹Very similar to the Longbeard Origin Myth (TODO: reference and elaborate).

⁵²This may relate to Frie's role as love-goddess. Ayner is in any case to be understood as a weak, effeminate man.

Bower is (the third) one, where the blithe Reins with silver thatched a hall.
 Waleshef is it called which he won through wiles,
 the Os in days of yore.

3 es vélti sér ‘won through wiles’ | Several previous editors and translators (e.g. Finnur Jónsson (1932), Pettit (1986), Larrington (2014)) have rendered this phrase with variants of “craftily made for himself”, where the verb véla would mean ‘craftily make’. To my knowledge this sense is never otherwise attested, and its common meaning is ‘defraud, trick, betray’. A simpler reading would be to see this as a reference to the myth of the Ettin-smith who built the wall of Osyard. The Gods had promised him Sun, Moon, and Frow, if he could build it in a year, but employed various tricks to hinder him. When it at last looked like he would make it in time, Thunder slew him. This myth is told in Gylf 42 and alluded to in Vsp 24–25.

In A the order of the following two sts. is reversed.

- 9 Mjök 's auð-kennnt · þeim's til Óðins koma [R 9v/9, A 4r/31] 2 sal-kynni at séa, vargr hangir · fyr vestan dyrr
 4 ok drúpir qrn yfir.

Very easily recognized, for those who come to Weden, is the hall to see:
 A wolf hangs before the western door,
 and an eagle droops over.⁵⁴

2 sal-kynni at séa | 'sia at sia' A

⁵⁴Something very similar is found in Widukind's History of the Saxons, book 1:12. The Saxons have just conquered a fortress, and mane [...] facto ad orientalem portam ponunt aquilam, aramque victoriae construentes secundum errorem paternum sacra sua propria veneratione venerati sunt 'at the coming of morning they set an eagle at the eastern gate, and, building an altar of victory, they worshipped it with their own holy worship in accordance with their ancestral error.' The altar was pledged to Ermin[†], whom the author identifies with Mars or Hermes, but who is surely Weden.

According to Hylltén-Cavallius (1863)[156] it was custom in Wärend, southern Sweden to hang the bodies of killed wolves high up in old oaks, and killed birds of prey above the stable-door.

1 eru (hin ǫttu) ‘are (the eighth)’ | heita ‘[they] are called’ G.

3 vörðr goða ‘Watchman of the Gods’ | Formulaic epithet of Homedal, also occurring in Lok 49 and possibly in Skm 28: vörðr með goðum ‘the Watchman among the Gods’. Gylf 27, where the present stanza is cited, gives some further details: Hann býr þar er heitir Himinbjörg við Bifrost. Hann er vörðr goða ok sitr þar við himins enda at gæta brúarinnar fyrir berg-risum. Hann þarf minna svefn en fugl. Hann sér jafnt nótt sem dag hundrað rasta frá sér; hann heyrir ok þat, er gras vex á jörðu eða ull á sauðum, ok allt þat er héra léttr. ‘He lives at the place called the Heavenbarrows near Bivrest. He [= Homedal] is the Watchman of the Gods and sits there at Heaven’s end to guard the bridge against barrow-risers. He needs less sleep than a bird. Both night and day he sees a hundred rests away from him; he also hear when grass grows on the ground or wool on sheep, and everything which sounds louder.’

Folkwong is (the ninth), and there Frow decides the choice of seats in the hall;
 half the slain she chooses each day,
 but half does Weden own.⁵⁵

1 es (hinn níundi) ‘is (the ninth)’ | hétir ‘[one] is called’ G

⁵⁵This st. is cited and closely paraphrased in Gylf 24. — The roots of kjósa val ‘choose the slain’ are the same as those in walkirrie[†] (val-kyrja ‘chooser of the slain’), and as Frow is a prominent goddess this would surely make her the chief walkirrie. This is paralleled by Sarle, where Frow assumes the name Gandle[†] (Göndul, a name attested in several lists of walkirries; see Vsp 30 and Notes) and incites the legendary never-ending Conflict of the Headnings (Hjaðningavíg). In spite of this parallel, there are good reasons to believe that the chief walkirrie was Frie[†], Weden’s wife. First, one of the functions of the walkirries is to bear ale to the Oneharriers (Grm 37). This mirrors royal Germanic banquets attested in heroic poetry, where the host’s wife or daughter would pour ale to his retainers and guests (the so-called ‘lady with a mead cup’ ritual; see Enright (1996) and Riseley (2014)). As Weden’s wife, we would expect Frie to have this role. Second, at Balder’s funeral as attested in Gylf (TODO. chapter number), Weden rides with Frie and the Walkirries, while Frow rides alone with her cats. If she were chief walkirrie, it is rather strange that she should not ride with them. Third, there are two separate myths where Frie and Weden contend over the fates of armies and men. These are the prose introduction to the present poem and the Longbeard origin myth (for which see Introduction to the present poem).

3 manna þengill · hinn męins-vani ‘The lord of men, the guileless one’ | Interesting epithets probably relating to Nearth’s roles in upholding the bounty of the land and the law. Cf. my article on pre-Christian oaths (TODO).

4 hó-timbruðum horgi rēðr ‘rules the harrow timbered on high’ | The rare verb hó-timbra ‘timber on high’ otherwise only occurs in Vsp 7, likewise in connection with the horgr ‘harrow’. The harrow is an outdoors holy place; see Encyclopedia. Cf. also Vafþ 38 where Nearth is said to rule a great many hoves and harrows.

 4 Óđinn ę lifir.
 Gar and Freak[†] does the battle-accustomed glorious Father of Hosts (= Weden) feed;
 but on wine alone, esteemed of weapons,
 Weden ever lives.

1–4 Gera ... lifir ‘Gar ... live’ | With what Weden feeds his two hounds it is not said, but it is most likely with the corpses of dead warriors. The wine on which he subsists may perhaps be identified with drink offerings. Cf. the 7th century vita of Saint Columban (TODO: cite source), describing a rite of the Swabians: Quo cum moraretur, et inter habitatores loci illius progredereetur, reperit eos sacrificium profanum litare velle, vasque magnum, quod vulgo cupam vocant, quod viginti et sex modios amplius minusve capiebat, cervisia plenum in medio habebant positum. Ad quod vir Dei accessit, et sciscitatur quid de illo fieri vellent. Illi aiunt Deo suo Vodano, quem Mercurium vocant alii, se velle litare. ‘While he was satying there and going about the dwellers of that place, he found out that they were going to offer a profane sacrifice, and a large cask called a cupa, which held about twenty-six measures, was filled with beer and set in their midst. When the man of God asked what they wanted to do with it, they answered that they were wanted to offer to their God Wodan, whom others call Mercury.’

 4 þó séumk meir of Munin.
 Highen and Minden fly every day over the ermin-ground [EARTH].
 I worry for Highen, that he might not come back,
 yet I fear more for Minden.

2 jormun-grund ‘ermin-ground’ | i.e. ‘the immense ground’ (for the rare prefix ermin-[†] see Encyclopedia), denoting the earth as a vast flat expanse of land. This compound also occurs in a kenning in the st. on the late C10th Karlevi stone (Öl 1) referring to the unbounded sea as Ēndils jormungrund ‘Andle’s ermin-ground’ (Andle being a known “sea-king”), and in Beow 859 as eormen-grund carrying the same sense.

21 Þýtr Þund, · unir Þjóð-vitnis 2 fiskr flóði í;
áar-straumr · þykkir of-mikill
4 val-glaumi at vaða.

[R 9v/30, A 4v/17]

Thound[†] roars; Thedwitner’s fish thrives in the flood.
The river-stream seems far too great for the noisy slain host to wade.⁵⁸

1–2 Þjóðvitnis fiskr ‘Thedwitner’s fish’ | Þjóðvitnir is easily analyzed as þjóð- ‘great, main’ + vitnir ‘wolf’. The great wolf is naturally the Fenrerswolf[†], the brother of the Middenyardswyrm. That the Wyrm can be called a fish is shown by Hym 24.

⁵⁸ A difficult stanza. Thound may be the river surrounding Walhall, which the dead have to pass over to reach it. The stanza may also be referring to the punishment of criminals in waters; see note to Vsp 38 for discussion on that.

Five hundred doors, and around fourty,
 so I judge there to be on Walhall.
 Eight hundred Oneharriers[†] go out of one door,
 when to fight with the wolf they go.

3 átta hundruð 'eight hundred' | The hundred is probably here the long hundred (120, rather than 100), which gives a sum of $640 * 960 = 614\ 400$ Oneharriers.

25 Hēið-rún hēitir gēit, · es stēndr hōllu á Hērja-fōðrs [R 10r/4, A 4v/24]

Gangler spoke: “What more great marks are there to be said about the ash?” High says: “There is much to say about it. An eagle sits in the limbs of the ash, and he is much knowing, but between his eyes sits the hawk called Weatherfalconer. The squirrel, which is called Wratetush, runs up and down along the ash and carries words of spite between the eagle and Nithehewer.”

⁶³According to Gylf 11 the gods took two horses to pull the sun’s chariot—Yorewaker and Allswith—and “under the shoulders of the horses the gods placed two wind-bellows to cool them, but in some sources (í sumum fróðum, presumably this st.) they are called iron-cooling (ísarn-kol).”

Swalen one is called, it stands before the sun:

 Crags and surf I know shall burn,

⁶⁴The sun-disc was apparently thought to be a translucent shield, which protected the earth from the full power of the Sun behind it. Without it the whole world (“crag and surf”, LAND and SEA; the totality of the earth) would burn up. Cf. Sigrdr 15a/1, which mentions the “shield that stands before the shining god [SUN]”.

The holdness[†] of Woulder[†] and of All Gods[†] has each who first touches the fire, for the Homes[†] become open for the sons of the Eese, when men lift off the kettles.⁶⁶

1 Ullar ‘Woulder’ | The exact reason for why Woulder is invoked here is unclear, but it suggests that he has a role in the setting of the ritual fire, something possibly attested by the archeological finds at Lilla Ullevi, Sweden. See Encyclopedia: Woulder[†] and af Edholm (2009) for more.

1 hylli ‘holdness’ | i.e. ‘favour, loyalty, grace’. This word and the corresponding adjective holtr ‘hold; favourable, loyal, gracious’ and verb hylla ‘to make hold’ are often used when speaking about divine grace, not just of the Christian God, but also (as here) of the Heathen Gods. See Encyclopedia: hold[†] and holdness[†].

1 allra goða ‘All Gods’ | Cf. Sigrdr 3–4, Lok 11, which both hail the Gods as a collective (the former as part of a genuine prayer, the latter subversively). For the oneness of the Gods, see Encyclopedia: All Gods[†].

4 hvera ‘kettles’ | acc. pl. of hverr, from PGmc. hweraz*, from PIE k^wer-* ‘pot, vessel’. Interestingly the Sanskrit cognate carú is occasionally used in reference to the vat wherein the ritual drink soma is prepared (e.g. RV 10.167.4).

⁶⁶This st. is one of the most difficult in the poem and many interpretations have been made (for a summary see Nordberg (2005)). Many commenters (e.g. Finnur Jónsson (1932) and Sijmons and Gering (p. 208, TODO)) interpret it as relating to the poem’s frame narrative. In this view Woden, still bound between the two fires, cryptically asks for a cauldron to be lifted off so that the Gods can see him through the smoke vent and rescue him. This, however, scarcely makes sense given the current stanza’s placement in the gnomic wisdom section of the poem, unless this whole section is taken to be a later insert (as suggested by Finnur), something for which there is little support. The invocation of the obscure god Woulder is also left unexplained, and there is no mention of a cauldron elsewhere in the poem. I agree with Nordberg’s interpretation, namely that the present st. refers to the cooking of the sacrificial meal in large cauldrons

during the blood[†], as described in the kings' saws. More specifically, Weden is speaking of the divine grace (bylli 'holdness', see Note to l. 1) gained by the ritualist who sets the fire onto which the cauldron is placed, since this act enables the Gods to become present among those partaking in the ritual meal. Cf. HGoodS 14, describing the traditional blood in the Thronclaw (Þrónða-lög), Norway: At veizlu þeiri skyldu allir menn þá eiga; þar var ok drepinn alls konar smali ok svá bross, [...] en slátr skyldi sjóða til mann-fagnaðar; eldar skyldu vera á miðju gólfi í hofinu ok þar katlar yfir. 'At that gathering all men should have ale; thereat was also slain every kind of small cattle and likewise horses, [...] and the fresh meat would be cooked for men to enjoy. There would be fires on the middle of the floor in the hove and kettles over them.' This interpretation is especially interesting when one considers the immediately preceding two sts. (41, 42), which deal with the ordering of the world through the dismembering of Yimer, the primordial sacrificial victim slain by the Gods. It is well attested in other Indo-European branches that the ritual sacrifice in the present was seen as a reenactment of the primeval sacrifice in the mythic past, which reenactment was necessary for the continued upholding of the world, and Grm 41–43 would then seem to attest this conception also in the Germanic tradition. See Lincoln (1986)—especially the first two chapters—for the Indo-European analogues.

Dreams of Balder

(Baldrs draumar)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C10th (0.890)

Meter: Ancient-words-law

Introduction

Rather unusually for Norse mythic poems, the Dreams of Balder (Bdr) are not preserved in R, but rather in the early C14th ms. A. The poem also survives in much younger paper mss., where a number of post-medieval stanzas have been inserted.

The poem begins in medias res; Balder[†] has been having nightmares, which the Gods meet at the Thing to discuss (1). Woden[†] rides to Hell[†], where he has an encounter with a bloody hound; he passes it and continues to “the high house of Hell[†]” (2–3), from which he rides west, to the grave of a certain wallow[†] whom he revives using magic (4). She asks which man has forced her out of the grave (5), and Woden introduces himself as Waytame, before asking for whom the benches of Hell are covered with gold (6). The wallow responds that barrels of mead stand brewed for Balder and that the gods are very anxious (7). Woden asks her who will slay Balder (8), and she responds that it is Hath, carrying a “high fame-beam” (9). Woden asks who will avenge Balder’s death (10), the wallow responds that Rind[†] will give birth to Woden’s son Wonnell[†], who will slay Hath when only one night old (11). Woden then asks about some mysterious maidens (12), which apparently betrays his identity. The wallow announces that she now knows that it is Woden, who in turn retorts that she is not a wallow, but rather the “mother of three thurses” (13). The wallow tells him to ride home and “be famous” and taunts him over his unavoidable death at the Rakes of the Reins[†] (14).

Leeds of Hoarbeard

Introduction

The Leeds of Hoarbeard are preserved in full in R, and in part in A. The poem might be seen as an allegory on class relations, namely between the self-owning yeomen farmers and the warlike earls, represented through their patron gods.

Of all Eddic poems Hárþ is probably the strangest in terms of form. Verse length varies greatly, and many of the lines (see especially the final verse) are of an obscene length reminiscent of late continental Germanic poems like the Heliand; some simply have no metrical qualities at all. The young clitic definite is (uniquely) employed frequently throughout the poem. These criteria would seem to point towards a late origin for the poem (though not later than the late C13th, when R was written).

Against this late origin speaks the presence of rare words (e.g. ǫgurr v. 13) and a thorough understanding of the personalities of the two gods which would seem unlikely to stem from several centuries after the conversion of Iceland. The model devised by Sapp gives the poem a 57.8% likelihood of being from the early C11th, and a 37.7% likelihood of being from the late 11th. These scores are most similar to those obtained by Gríp, a poem that on the surface seems much more archaic.

What could we then be dealing with? It may of course be that the poem is heavily corrupt, but there is no good evidence for this (apart from the above-mentioned irregularities). Most lines are readily understandable and fit well both within their respective context and the poem as a whole. I think a better solution to this problem is to assume that the poem has been acted out as a sort of carnivalesque theatre, with two masked actors, each playing one of the gods. This would explain the variations in meter and line length, and the prose; some lines were simply shouted out, and the lack of alliteration in them would then have a kind of discordant effect.

This is shown also by uses of the word 'here' in sts. 9 and 14. TODO: mention concept of "double scene" by Lars Lönnroth?

The Leed of Hoarbeard

P1 Þórr fór ór austr-vegi ok kom at sundi einu. Qðrum megum sundsins [R 12r/30]
2 var ferju-karlinn með skipit. Þórr kallaði:

Thunder journeyed from the Eastern Way and came to a sound. At the other side of the sound was the ferryman with the ship. Thunder called out:

1 „Hvęrr ’s sá sveinn sveina · es stęndr fyr sundit handan?“ [R 12r/32]
“Who is that swain of swains, standing here across the sound?”

Hann svaraði: 2 „Hvęrr ’s sá karl karla · es kallar of váginn?“ [R 12v/1]
“Who is that churl of churls, calling out over the wave?”

3 „Fęr þú mik of sundit, · fðði’k þik á morgun; [R 12v/2]
2 meis hefi’k á baki, · verðr-a matr inn bętri.
Át’k í hvíld · áðr ek heiman fór,
4 síldr ok hafra; · saðr em’k ęnn þęss.“

“Ferry me over the sound, I feed thee in the morning!
A basket have I on my back; better food will not be found.
I ate for a while before I journeyed from home, herring and oatmeal/he-goats; I am still full from that.”

4 hafra ‘oatmeal/he-goats’ | The easiest reading here is the acc. pl. of hafr ‘he-goat’. Thunder also eats his goats in Gylf 44, where he butchers and cooks them in the evening and brings them back to life by blessing them with his hammer at dawn. Finnur Jónsson (1932) and Pettit (1986) prefer this reading; see also note to next stanza.—Many other scholars have here read an accusative plural of hafri ‘oat’, i.e. ‘porridge, oatmeal’. Stiles (forthcoming TODO) connects this with Indra’s (who is the Vedic equivalent of Thunder) “partner and yokemate” (RV 6.56.2) Pūṣān’s eating porridge (e.g. 6.56.1, 57.2). Another similarity Stiles notes between Thunder and Pūṣan is that both have chariots driven by goats (e.g. 6.57.3: “Goats are the draft-animals for the one”, 58.2: “Having goats as his horses”). Whether the Vedic tradition has split an original god into two or whether Thunder has absorbed elements of another god is hard to say.

- 4 „Ár-ligum verkum hrósar þú, verði’num; · veitst-at-tu fyr gǫrla, [R 12v/5]
2 dǫpr ’ru þín heim-kynni, · dauð hygg’k at þín móðir sé.“

“Of early works boastest thou; of eating!⁷¹ Thou seest not clearly ahead:
dire is the state of thy home—I think that thy mother is dead!”

⁷¹TODO. This is pretty difficult. From the previous stanza verðinum seems to be referring to eating.

- 5 „Þat sęgir þú nú · es hverjum þikkir [R 12v/6]
2 męst at vita— · at mín móðir dauð sé.“

“Thou now sayest that which to every man seems of most weight to know—that my mother is dead!”

- 6 „Þęygi ’s sem þú · þrjú bú ęgir góð; [R 12v/8] 2 bęr-bęinn þú stęndr · ok hęfir brautinga gǫrvi, · þat-ki at þú hafir brękr þínar.“

bare-legged thou standest, and hast the gear of a tramp; it is not even as if thou own thy breeches!”

- 7 „Stýr-ðu hingat ęikjunni, · ek mun þér stǫðna kęnna [R 12v/9]
2 eða hveřr á skipit · es þú hęldr við landit?“

“Steer hither the boat! I will show thee to the harbour—or who owns the ship which thou holdest by the shore?”

- 8 „Hildólfr sá hēitir · es mik halda bað, [R 12v/11]
 2 rekr inn ráð-svinni · es býr í Ráðs-eyjar-sundi;
 bað-at hann hlēnni-mēnn flytja · eða hrossa-þjófa, 4 góða ęina · ok þá's ek gørva kunna;
 sęg-ðu til nafns þíns · ef þú vill of sundit fara.“

“Hildolf is he called who asked me to hold it,
 the counsel-wise man who lives in Redeseyound.
 He bade me not ferry highwaymen nor horsethieves;
 good men only, and those I know well—speak to thy name if thou wilt go over the sound!”

- 9 „Sęgja mun'k til nafns míns · þótt ek sękr sjá'k [R 12v/15]
 2 ok til alls øðlis: · Ek em Óðins sonr, Meila bróðir · ęn Magna faðir,
 4 þrúð-valdr goða · við Þór knátt-u hér dóma!
 Hins vil'k nú spyrja, · hvat þú hēitir.“

“I will speak to my name—even though I should be charged—and to all my origin: I am Woden's son, Male's brother and Main's father,
 the strength-wielder of the Gods; with Thunder dost thou here speak!
 Now I will ask this, what thou art called.”

- 10 „Hár-barðr ek hēiti, · hyl'k of nafn sjaldan.“ [R 12v/18] “Hoarbeard I am called; I seldom conceal my name.”

- 11 „Hvat skalt-u of nafn hylja · nema þú sakar ęigir?“ [R 12v/18] “Why shalt thou conceal thy name, unless thou have charges?”

- 12 „En þótt ek sakar ęiga, · fyr slíkum sem þú est [R 12v/19]
 2 þá mun'k forða fjörvi mínu · nema ek fęigr sé.“

“Even though I had charges—for such a one as thou art
 I would then protect my life, unless I be fey†.”

- 13 „Harm ljótan mér þikkir í því [R 12v/21] 2 at vaða of váginn til þín · ok vęta ęgur mín; skylda’k launa kęgur-sveini · þínum kangin-yrði · ef ek komumk
 yfir sundit.“

“An ugly harm it seems to me to wade o’er the wave to thee, and wet my burden.
 I would repay thee, swaddle-swain, for thy mocking words, if I could bring myself over the sound.”

2 ęgur ‘burden’ | The sense of this word is not clear, though it is probably the same as the first element of the compound ęgur-stund ‘burdensome hour’, found in Vkv 42. Some authors have read it as a crude euphemism for “penis”, which would not stand out much in this poem. Another interpretation is that it refers to the food Thunder carries on his back (st. 3).

- 14 „Hér mun’k standa · ok þín heðan bíða; [R 12v/23]
 2 fannt-a-tu mann inn harðara · at Hrungni dauðan.“

“Here will I stand and hence await thee;
 thou foundest not a harder man since Rungner[†] died!⁷²”

⁷²Rungner was a famous ettin slain by Thunder in a fierce battle. Hoarbeard’s mention of that battle sets off a long argument over their respective accomplishments.

- 15 „Hins vilt-u nú geta · es vit Hrungnir deildum, [R 12v/25] 2 sá inn stór-úðgi jötunn, · es ór steini vas hęfuðit á, þó lét’k hann falla · ok fyrir hníga;
 4 hvat vannt-u þá meðan, Hárbarðr?“

“Of this wilt thou now speak, when I and Rungner dealt with each other, that great-minded ettin on whom the head was of stone.
 Yet I made him fall, and kneel down before [me]—
 what didst thou then meanwhile, Hoarbeard?”

- 16 „Vas’k með Fjöl-vari · fimm vetr alla [R 12v/27]
 2 í ęy þęiri · es Al-grón heitir;
 vega vér þar knóttum · ok val fęlla,
 4 margs at fręista, · mans at kosta.“

“I was with Felwar for five winters all in that island which is called Allgreen.

There we did fight and fell the slain,
many a girl tempt and win.⁷³

⁷³I read margs ‘many a’ as modifying mans ‘girl’.

17 „Hversu snúnuðu yðr konur yðrar?“
“How did your women pleasure (TODO!!!) you?.⁷⁴”

[R 12v/30]

18 „Sparkar óttum vér konur · ef oss at spökum yrði;
2 horskar óttum vér konur · ef oss hollar véri, þér ór sandi · síma undu
4 ok ór dali djúpum
grund of grófu;
6 varð’k þeim einn ǫllum · øfri at rǫðum;
hvílda’k hjá systurum sjau 8 ok hafða’k gæð þeira allt ok gaman; hvat vannt-u þá meðan, Þórr?“

[R 12v/30]

“We had smart women if we found them pleasing;
we had clever women if they were hold[†] toward us.
They wound a rope out of the sand, and out of a deep dale dug up the ground.
I alone became superior to them all in counsels,
I rested beside those sisters seven,
and had their senses all, and pleasure—
what didst thou then meanwhile, Thunder?”

19 „Ek drap Þjatsa, · hinn þrúð-móðga jǫtun,
2 upp ek varp augum · All-valda sonar á þann hinn heiða himin;
4 þau ’ru merki mest · minna verka, þau’s allir menn síðan of séa;
6 hvat vannt-u þá meðan, Hárbarðr?“

 onto the clear heaven.

 what didst thou then meanwhile, Hoarbeard?”

 2 þá’s ek vélta þér frá verum.

 4 gaf hann mér gamban-tęin en ek vélta hann ór viti.“

“Great girl-tricks I had against mirk-rideresses[†], when I lured them away from men.⁷⁶
 A hard ettin I judged Leebeard to be;
 he gave me a gombentoe[†],
 but I tricked him out of his wits.”

⁷⁶Alternatiely ‘away from [their] husbands’. The riður ‘(female) riders’ were witches thought to torment people and cause disease and suffering. See Háv 156 for discussion.

21 „Illum huga launaðir þú þá góðar gjafar.“ [R 13r/7, A 1r/3]
 “With an evil heart didst thou then repay the good gift.”

22 „Þat hefir ęik · es af annarri skęfr;

 hvat vannt-u þá meðan, Þórr?“ [R 13r/8, A 1r/4]

“The oak has that which it chafes from the other;
 each man is for himself in such—
 what didst thou then meanwhile, Thunder?”

23 „Ek vas austr · ok jętna barða’k [R 13r/9, A 1r/4]

2 brúðir bǫl-vísar · es til bjargs gingu;
 mikil myndi étt jǫtna · ef allir lifði,
 4 vétr myndi manna · undir Mið-garði—

“I was in the East and Ettins I bashed, bale-wise brides who walked to the mountain.
 Great would the line of ettins be if all lived, naught would remain of men within Middenyard⁷⁷—
 what didst thou then meanwhile, Hoarbeard?”

⁷⁷Thunder is the defender of Middenyard (the home of men) against the Ettins. For Thunder’s killing of women cf. sts. 37–39 below and Lindow (1988).

24 „Vas’k á Vallandi · ok vígum fylgðak,
 2 atta ek jǫfrum · en aldri-gi sétta’k;
 Óðinn á jarla · þá’s í val falla
 4 en Þórr á þræla kyn.“

[R 13r/11, A 1r/6]

“I was in Walland[†] and followed battles;
 I provoked princes, but I never reconciled them.
 Weden owns the earls which fall among the slain,
 but Thunder owns the race of thralls.⁷⁸”

⁷⁸Weden expresses an aristocratic disregard for lower life and life as mere life; where Thunder boasts of saving men, Weden sarcastically responds that he made them slay each other so that he could have the best of them for himself.

25 „Ó-jafnt skipta · es þú myndir með ósum liði

[R 13r/14, A 1r/9]

“Thunder has strength enough, but no heart.
 For fear and heart-softness didst thou tread into a glove,
 and then seemedest thou not to be Thunder.
 Thou daredst not—for thy fear—sneeze nor fart lest Feller should hear.⁷⁹”

⁷⁹This story is also referenced in Lok 60, and is told in full in Gylf 45: Lock, Thunder, and his servants Thelvé and Wrash had journeyed east for a long time when they came upon a large hall, with an opening on one end as wide as the building. They rested inside, but in the middle of the night they were awakened by a great earthquake. Thunder rose and led the party to a side-room to the right in the middle of the hall. He stayed closest to the opening with his hammer ready, while the terrified others were further inside. At daybreak they left the hall and found the huge ettin Skrymir (Shrimer[†]) asleep outside. His snoring had caused the earth-quakes, and the hall was his mitten; the side-room was its thumb.

“I was in the east and spoke with a certain woman;

I gladdened the gold-bright—the maiden enjoyed pleasure.”

⁸⁰þing (see Thing†) usually means ‘legal assembly’, but clearly not here.

“I am not such a heel-biter as an old hide-shoe in spring.⁸¹”

⁸¹Proverbial (a heel-biter being someone who betrays his companions); the leather of a shoe would become very stiff and chafing over the winter.

- 36 „Hvat vannt-u þá meðan, Þórr?“ [R 13r/28, A 1r/20]

 to raise the war-standard, to redden the spear.”

- 41 „Þess vilt-u nú geta, es þú fórt oss ó·ljúfan at bjóða!“ [R 13v/1, A 1r/24]
 “This wilt thou now mention, that thou didst journey to hurt us!”

 2 sem jafnęndr unnu · þęir’s okkr vilja sętta.“

“Then I shall repay thee for that with a hand-bigh, bestowed by the mediators who wish to reconcile us two.”

1 hó ‘lover’ | Most translators take this acc. sg. word as an alternative form of bórr m. ‘adulterer’ (gen. bórs), containing the same root as bóra f. ‘whore, prostitute’, bór n. ‘adultery, fornication’, ModEngl. whore. The -r has presumably been interpreted as the masc. nom. sg. ending, giving nom. bór*, gen. bós*. Further, this accusation is also found in Lok TODO, where Lock says that he has been Sib’s lover (bórr). Notably, CV interprets this word as the unrelated bór m. ‘pot-hook’, “insinuating that Thor busied himself with cooking and dairy-work.” This seems very unlikely when considering Thunder’s response in the next verse: “I think that thou liest!” and the parallel in Lok.

let us cease the taunting; come to the father of Main [= Thunder = me]!”

54 „Far þú firr sundi, · þér skal fars synja!“

[R 13v/17, A 1v/10]

“Go far away from the sound; passage shall be denied thee!”

55 „Vísa þú mér nú leiðina · alls þú vill mik eigi of váginn fərja!“

[R 13v/17, A 1v/11]

“Show me now the way, since thou wilt not ferry me o’er the wave!”

56 „Lítit ’s at synja, · langt ’s at fara;

[R 13v/18, A 1v/11]

2 stund ’s til stokksins, · onnur til stęinsins, halt svá til vinstra vegsins · unds þú hittir Ver-land;

4 þar mun Fjörgyn · hitta Þór, son sinn, ok mun hōn kenna hōnum óttunga brautir · til Óðins landa.“

“It is little to deny. It is long to journey; an hour to the log, another to the stone;
hold thus to the left road until thou dost find Wereland;
there will Firgyn find Thunder, her son, and she will teach him the ancestral roads to Weden’s lands [= Osyrd].”

57 „Mun’k taka þangat í dag?“

[R 13v/22, A 1v/14]

“Will I get thither today?”

58 „Taka við víl ok erfiði · at upp-vesandi sólu

[R 13v/22, A 1v/14]

2 es ek get þána.“

“[Thou wilt] get there with toil and hardship at the rising of the sun, for I guess it be thawing.”

59 „Skammt mun nú mál okkat vesa, · alls þú mér skótingu einni svarar;

[R 13v/23, A 1v/15]

2 launa mun ek þér far-synjun · ef vit finumk í sinn annat.

Far þú nú þar’s þik hafi allan gramir!“

“Short will now our speech be, since thou answerest me with scoffing alone.
I will reward thee for this ferry-denial if we meet another time.
Go now whither the fiends may have thee whole!”

Speeches of Shirner (Skírnismál)

Introduction

The whole poem is attested in both R and A. The name Skírnismál ‘Speeches of Shirner’ comes from A; R has in the typical titular red ink För Skírnis ‘Shirner’s journey’.

The same myth is told in prose in Gylf 37. A single stanza of the present poem is quoted there, namely the last one, with some minor differences in wording that would seem to stem from oral tradition (see Note to st. 42 below). It is unlikely that the author of Gylf knew of the narrative through an oral tradition which included only the last verse, chiefly since his paraphrase does not add a single detail not found in the present poem, but on the other hand condenses and abbreviates. So, Shirner’s journey and curse (roughly sts. 10–38 here) is simply summarized in the following manner: “Then Shirner journeyed and requested the woman [i.e. Gird] for him [i.e. Free], and received her promise, that nine nights later she would come to the place which is called Barrey, and have a wedding with Free.” The summarising of a narrative mythic poem with a single verse quotation in the form of a dialogue-stanza is something done several times in Gylf; see Eddic fragments from Snorre’s Edda below.

On the other hand, the paragraph in Gylf 37 corresponding to what is here P1 is much more detailed and reads: “Gymer was a man called, and his woman Earbode; she was of the lineage of mountain-risers. Their daughter is Gird, who is fairest of all women. It was one day when Free had gone to Lithshelf and looked about all the Homes, but when he looked to the north he saw on a farm a great and fine house, and to that house walked a woman, and when she lifted her hands and closed the doors before her, then it did shine from her hands both into the air and onto the waters, and all the homes were brightened by her. And that beauty, which he had seen in that holy seat, harmed him so that he walked away filled with pain, and when he came home he spoke nothing; he neither slept nor drank; nobody dared to get words out of him. Then Nearth had Shirner, Free's shoe-swain, called unto himself, and asked him to go to Free and ask him to speak, [...]"

The Speeches of Shirner

- P1 Freyr, sonr Njarðar, hafði einn dag setsk í Hlið-skjálfr ok sá um heima [R 11r/10, A 2r/11]
 2 alla; hann sá í Jotun-heima ok sá þar mey fagra, þá er hon gekk frá skála
 4 fǫður síns til skemmu; þar af fekk hann hug-sóttir miklar. Skírnir hét skó-sveinn Freys. Njörðr bað hann kveðja Frey máls. Þá mælti Skaði:

Free[†], son of Nearth[†], had one day set himself in Lithshelf[†] and looked about all the Homes[†]. He looked into the Ettinhomes[†] and saw there a fair maiden as she walked from her father's hall to her bower; thereof he got great heart-aches. Shirner[†] was called the shoe-swain of Free. Nearth asked him to speak with Free. Then Shede[†] spoke:

- 1 „Rís-tu nú Skírnir · ok gakk at beiða [R 11r/14, A 2r/15] 2 okkarn mál mǫg,
 ok þess at fregna · hveim hinn fróði séi
 4 of-reiði afi.“

“Rise thou now, Shirner, and go to ask our lad for speech;
 and to learn at whom the wise

1 rís ... beiða ‘Rise ... ask’ | Alliteration is missing here. A simple solution would be to replace gakk ‘go’ with a synonym like rinn ‘run’ or ráð ‘resolve’, but this lessens the semantic mirroring with l. 2/2 below (though, the insertion of the verb ganga in the present stanza may in fact be due to influence from 2/2).

4 afi ‘man’ | While this word usually means “father” or “grandfather”, it should here mean “man” without a connotation of old age. See further CV.

- Skírnir kvað: 2 „Illra orða · es mér ón at ykkrum syni, [R 11r/15, A 2r/17] 2 ef ek geng at mēla við mǫg,
 ok þess at fregna, · hveim hinn fróði séi

4 of-reǵði afi.“ “Bad words I expect from your son, if I go to speak with the lad,
 and to learn at whom the wise

Skírnir: 3 „Sæg þat Fręyr, · folk-valdi goða, 2 ok ek vilja vita,
 hví þú ęinn sitr · ęnd-langa sali,
 4 minn dróttinn, of daga?“
 [R 11r/17, A 2r/18]
 “Tell it, O Free, troop-wielder of the gods—
 I too would wish to know,
 why thou sittest alone in the endlong halls,
 my lord, during the days.”

Fręyr: 4 „Hví of sęgja’k þér, · sęggr hinn ungi, 2 mikinn móð-trega?
 því-at alf-ręðull · lýsir of alla daga
 4 ok þęygi at mínum munum.“
 [R 11r/19, A 2r/20]
 “Why should I tell thee, O young youth, my great heartache?
 For the elf-wheel (= Sun) shines during all days,
 and nowise to my liking.”

3 alf-ręðull ‘elf-wheel’ | A rare poetic synonym (hęiti) for the sun; see note to Vafþ 47/1.

Skírnir: 5 „Muni þína · hykk-a svá mikla vesa, 2 at þú mér sęggr né sęgir;
ungir saman · vorum í ár-daga,
 4 vęl męttim tveir trúask.“
 [R 11r/20, A 2r/21]
 “Thy liking I do not think so great, that thou, O youth, should not tell me.

[R 11r/25, A 2r/25]

“The steed then give me, which might bear me over the dark, wise wavering-flame;
and that sword, which by itself might strike against the line of the Ettins[†].”

Freyr: 9 „Mar þér þann gef’k, · es þik of myrkvan berr [R 11r/27, A 2r/27] 2 vísan vafr-loga,
auk þat sverð, · es sjalft mun vegask,
4 ef sá’s horskr es hęfr.“

“That steed I give thee, which bears thee over the dark,
wise wavering-flame;
and that sword which by itself will strike,
if he is wise who owns it.”

1–4 berr ‘bears’; mun vegask, ef sá’s horskr es hęfr ‘will strike, if he is wise who owns it’ | In his response Free replaces the subjunctive verb forms (beri ‘might bear’, vegisk ‘might strike’) with indicative and future forms, giving a sense of certainty and authority. The steed and sword are faultless, and if Shirner fails on the mission, it would be only due to his own fault (“if he is sharp who owns it”).

P2 Skírnir męlti við hest’inn:

Shirner spoke with the horse:

10 „Myrkt es úti, · mál kveð’k okkr fara [R 11r/29, A 2r/28]
2 úrig fjöll yfir
þursa þjóð yfir;
4 báðir vit komumk · eða okkr báða tękr sá hinn ám-átki jętunn.“

“Tis dark outside; I declare it time for us to journey over the drizzling mountains, over the tribe of Thurses[†].
We will both come, or us both does take that uncanny ettin.⁸⁴”

3 þursa ‘of the Thurses’ | so A; þyria R

5 ám-átki jętunn ‘uncanny ettin’ | Formulaic. See note to Vsp 8.

⁸⁴Shirner declares his intention not to abandon the horse given to him by his lord; they will either both make it, or both perish.

P3 Skírnir reið i Jötun-heima til Gymis garða; þar váru hundar ólmir ok bundnir fyrir skíð-garðs hliði þess, er um sal Gerðar var. Hann reið at þar, er fé-hirðir sat á haugi, ok kvaddi hann: [R 11r/31, A 2v/1]

Shirner rode into the Ettinhomes, to Gymer's yards. There were fierce hounds bound in front of the slope of the wooden fence which surrounded Gird's⁸⁵ hall. He rode to where a shepherd sat on a mound, and greeted him:

⁸⁵It is first now that we are informed of the maiden's name.

11 „Seg þat hirðir, · es á haugi sitr ok varðar alla vega:
hvé ek at and-spilli · komumk hins unga mans
fyr greyjum Gymis.“ [R 11v/2, A 2v/4]

“Tell this, O herdsman, who on the mound sittest, and watchest all the ways,
how I to discourse might come with the young girl [= Gird], past the greyhounds of Gymer.”

[Hirðir] kvað: 12 „Hvart est fęigr, · eða est framm ginginn
[...];
and-spillis vanr · þú skalt ę vesa góðrar meýjar Gymis.“ [R 11v/4, A 2v/5]

“Either art thou fey, or gone forth [dead];
[...].
Discourse-less shalt thou always be,
with the good maiden of Gymer [= Gird].”

⁴ góðrar meýjar ‘good maiden’ | Formulaic, carrying with it a sense of chastity. See note to Háv 102/1 for further occurrences.

[Skírnir] kvað: 13 „Kostir ’ru bętri · an klökkva séi
hveim es fúss es fara, [R 11v/6, A 2v/7]

4 ^ęinu dógri · mér vas aldr of skapaðr ok alt líf of lagit.“

“Choices are better than sobbing might be for whomever is eager to journey.
In one half-day my age was shaped,
and all my life laid down.⁸⁶”

1 an ‘than’ | so A; hēldr an at ‘rather than to [be]’ R

1 Kostir ‘Choices’ | i.e. ‘alternatives, other ways’.

⁸⁶An excellent example of the fatalistic Germanic worldview, in which one’s course of life was determined (“laid down”) at birth (“in one half-day”). Presumably after uttering these words Shirner rides through the fire surrounding the fortress. — The causative leggja ‘to lay (down, in place)’ is closely connected to fate; the expression is formulaic. Cf. Lok 48: í ár-daga vas þér hit ljóta líf of lagit ‘in days of yore was thy ugly life laid down’ and Vsp 19: þér log leggðu ‘they [= the Norns] laid down laws’.

[Gērðr] kvað: 14 „Hvat ’s þat hlym hlymja · es hlymja heyrir’k nú til 2 ossum rønnum í?
 jǫrð bifask, · en allir fyr
4 skjalfa garðar Gymis.“

[R 11v/7, A 2v/8]

“What is that din of dins, which I of dins now hear in our halls?
The earth quakes, and before me tremble
all Gymer’s yards.”

Ambótt kvað: 15 „Maðr ’s hér úti, · stiginn af mars baki,
2 jó léttr til jarðar taka.“

[R 11v/9, A 2v/10]

“A man is here outside, stepped down off horseback;
he lets take his steed to the ground.⁸⁷”

⁸⁷“He lets his horse graze.” According to Finnur Jónsson (1932) an Icelandic expression still known in his time.

[Gērðr] kvað: 16 „Inn bið þú hann ganga · í okkarn sal
2 ok drekka hinn mēra mjǫð, þó ek hitt óumk, · at hér úti séi

[R 11v/10, A 2v/11]

4 minn bróður-bani.“
 “Bid thou him to go in into our hall, and to drink the renowned mead;
 though I fear that here outside should be my brother’s bane.”

[Gerrör] kvað: 17 „Hvat ’s þat alfa · né ása sona, [R 11v/12, A 2v/13]
 2 né víska vana;
 hví ęinn of komt · ęikinn fúr yfir
 4 ór sal-kynni at séa?“
 “What kind is that, not of Elves, nor of sons of the Eese, nor of wise Wanes?
 Why camest thou alone over the raging fire,
 to see the state of our hall?”

[Skirnir kvað:] 18 „Em’k-at alfa · né ása sona [R 11v/14]
 2 né víska vana,
 þó ęinn of kom’k · ęikinn fúr yfir
 4 yður sal-kynni at séa.
 “I am not of Elves, nor of sons of the Eese,
 nor of wise Wanes—
 yet I came alone over the raging fire, to see the state of your hall.

19 Epli ęllifu · hér hef’k al-gullin, [R 11v/15, A 2v/14]
 2 þau mun’k þér Gerrör gefa, frið at kaupa, · at þú þér Frey kveðir
 4 ó·lęiðastan at lifa.“
 Eleven apples have I here, all-golden; those I will to thee, O Gird, give to buy [thy] love, that thou callest Free for thee most unloathsome [lovely] in life.⁸⁸”

[Gērðr] kvað:

20 „Epli ellifu · ek þigg aldri-gi
2 at manns-kis munum,
né vit Frēyr, · meðan okkart fjor lifir, 4 byggum béði saman.“

[R 11v/17, A 2v/15]

“Eleven apples will I never take,
to any man’s liking;
nor will I and Free while our life remains dwell both together.”

[Skírnir kvað:]

21 „Baug þér þá gef’k, · þann’s brēndr of vas
2 með ungum Óðins syni;
átta ’ru jafn-hofgir, · es af drjúpa
4 hina níundu hverja nótt.“

[R 11v/19, A 2v/17 (ll. 1–2)]

“The bigh[†] I then give thee, which was burned with Weden’s young son [= Balder].
Eight are even-heavy, which from it drip, every ninth night.⁸⁹”

3–4 áttu ... nótt ‘Eight ... night.’ | In A these lines and 22:1–2 are missing. Instead 1–2 here and 22:3–4 are combined into one.

⁸⁹ The bigh, while not named, is clearly Dleepner as known from Gylf 49, describing Balder’s funeral: “Weden laid on the pyre that gold ring which is called Dleepner. Its nature was such that every ninth night, eight even-heavy golden rings dripped from it.” When Harmod[†] later comes to Hell[†] to try to bring Balder back, Balder tells him to bring the ring back to Weden, as a token of memory.

[Gērðr] kvað:

22 „Baug þikk-a’k, · þótt brēndr séi,
2 með ungum Óðins syni;
es-a mér gulls vant · í gørðum Gymis
4 at deila fé føður.“

[R 11v/21, A 2v/18 (ll. 3–4)]

“The bigh I take not, though it may have been burned
with Weden’s young son [= Balder];

I'm not wanting gold in Gymer's yards, in sharing the fee[†] of my father."

[Skírnir kvað:]

23 „Sér þú mēki, mēr, · mjóvan, mál-faan,
2 es hef'k í hendi hér?
høfuð hoggva · mun'k þér halsi af,
4 nema mér sétt segir.“

[R 11v/23, A 2v/19]

“Seest thou this sword, maiden—slender, pictured-painted—,
which I have in my hand here?
Strike the head will I from thy neck, unless thou come to terms with me.”

1 mál-faan ‘picture-painted’ | The sword is inlaid with metal (perhaps gold or silver) forming a pattern.
The expression is formulaic; cf. TODO.

[Gerdur kvað:]

24 „Á-nauð þola · vil'k aldri-gi
2 at manns-kis munum,
þó hins get'k, · ef it Gymer finniðsk
4 vígs ó-trauðir · at ykkv vega tíði.“

[R 11v/25, A 2v/20]

“Stand coercion will I never,
to any man's liking;
though I get this, if thou and Gymer meet—men unreluctant of conflict—that ye two will come to fight.⁹⁰”

2 manns-kis ‘any man's (lit. ‘no man's’) | manns þenskis A

⁹⁰Gird says that she will never let herself be forced to marry Free, even if that means that her father and Shirner should fight over her.

[Skírnir kvað:]

25 „Sér þú mēki, mēr, · mjóvan, mál-faan,
2 es hef'k í hendi hér?
fyr þessum eggjum · hnígr sá hinn aldni jötunn,
4 verðr þinn fęigr faðir.

[R 11v/27, A 2v/22]

which I have in my hand here?
By these edges sinks the aged ettin [= Gymer] down;
fey[†] becomes thy father.

- 26 Tams-vęndi þik drep'k, · ęn þik tęmja mun'k, [R 11v/28, A 2v/24] 2 męř, at mínum munum, þar skalt ganga · es þik gumna synir
 4 síðan ęva séi.

With the taming-wand I strike thee—and thee I will tame,
 O maiden, to my liking!
 Thou shalt go where the sons of men never since may see thee!

1 Tams-vęndi ‘taming-wand’ | Has been interpreted as a sword, TODO.

- 27 Ara þúfu á · skalt ár sitja, [R 11v/30, A 2v/26] 2 horfa hęimi ór;
 snugga hęljar til;
 4 matr sé þer męřir lęiðr · an manna hveim hinn fráni ormr með firum.

On an eagle's perch shalt thou sit at dawn;
 turn away from the world,
 hanker after Hell[†]!
 Let thy food be more loathsome than to any man
 the gleaming serpent [= the Middenyardswyrm] among the folk.⁹¹

1 Ara þúfu á · skalt ár sitja ‘On an eagle's perch shalt thou sit at dawn’ | ár skalt sitja · ara þúfu á ‘at dawn shalt thou sit on an eagle's perch’ A 2–3 horfa hęimi ór; snugga hęljar til ‘turn out of the world; hanker after Hell’ | horfa ok snugga hęljar til ‘turn and hanker after Hell’ A

2–3 horfa hęimi ór; snugga hęljar til ‘turn out of the world; hanker after Hell’ | i.e. “you will look toward and yearn for the underworld”.

5 firum | This is the last word of fol. 2v of A, after which the text cuts off.

⁹¹Her food will be more disgusting than the Middenyardswyrm[†], for which cf. Hym 22.

- 28 At undr-sjónum verðir · es út of kęmr, [R 11v/32]
 2 á þik Hrímnir hari á þik hot-vetna stari, 4 víð-kunnari verðir · an vęrðr með goðum,
 gapi þú grindum frá.

A wondrous sight be thou when thou comest out;
 at thee let Rimner ogle;
 at thee let anyone stare!
 Be thou more widely known than the Watchman among the Gods [= Homedal];
 may thou gape from the gates!

29 Tópi ok ópi, · tjǫsull ok ó·þoli, [R 12r/2]
 2 vaxi þér tór með trega;
 sętsk þú niðr · en mun'k sęgja þér 4 sváran sús-breka, ok tvinnan trega.

Toop and woop, tarsle and restlessness—may thy tears grow with grief!
 Sit thyself down, and I will tell thee
 a heavy roaring-breaker, and a twined grief.

1 Tópi ok ópi, · tjǫsull ok ó·þoli 'Toop and woop, tarsle and restlessness' | The first three words are magic curse words without clear meaning; I have left them untranslated. tjǫsull may perhaps be related to OE teors 'penis' and mean 'little phallus'.

30 Tramar gneypa · þik skulu gęstan dag [R 12r/3]
 2 jǫtna gǫrðum í, til hrím-þursa hallar · þú skalt hverjan dag 4 kranga kosta-lauss;
 kranga kosta-vǫn;
 6 grát at gamni · skalt í gogn hafa ok leiða með tórum trega.

Fiends shall pine thee on a gloomy day,
 in the yards of the Ettins.
 To the hall of Rime-Thurses shalt thou every day crawl choice-less;
 crawl choice-lacking.
 Weeping for joy shalt thou have in exchange, and nurse grief with tears.

- 31 Með þursi þrí-höfðuðum · þú skalt é nara [R 12r/7] 2 eða ver-laus vesa, þitt gæð grípi;
 4 þik morn morni
 ves þú sem þistill, · sá's þrunginn vas 6 í ofan-verða önn.

With a three-headed thurse shalt thou always live, or be husband-less.
 May thy senses seize;
 may murrain mourn thee;
 be thou like the thistle that was pressed during highest harvest!

1 þursi þrí-höfðuðum 'three-headed thurse' | Ettins often have an abnormal number of body parts. For their "manyheadedness" see note to Hym 8/2.

- 32 Til holts ek gekk · ok til hrás viðar [R 12r/9] 2 gamban-tēin at geta gamban-tēin ek gat.

To the wood I went, and to the raw/sappy tree,
 the gombentoe[†] for to get;
 the gombentoe I got.

2 gamban-tēin 'gombentoe' | Perhaps "curse-twig". A compound consisting of the very rare word gamban 'magic/curse?' and tēinn 'twig, branch' (cf. mistil-tēinn 'mistle-toe'). This may be the stick on which the runic curse in st. 36 below should be carved, or it is to be identified with the tams-vöndr 'taming-wand' of st. 26 above. Cf. Háv 152, which speaks about a runic curse carved on rótum rás viðar 'the roots of a raw/sappy tree'.

- 33 Reïðr 's þér Óðinn, · reïðr 's þér Ása-bragr, [R 12r/10] 2 þik skal Freyr fiask, hin firin-illa mér, · en fingit hefr
 4 gamban-reiði goða.

Wroth with thee is Woden; wroth with thee is Bray of the Eese (= Thunder);
 thee shall Free come to hate,
 O most wicked maiden, if thou hast earned the gomben-wrath of the gods.

- 34 Hęyri ȝotnar, · hęyri hrím-þursar, [R 12r/12]
 2 synir Suttunga, · sjalfir ás-liðar, hvé fyrir býð'k, · hvé fyrir banna'k 4 manna glaum mani, manna nyt mani.

Let hear Ettins, let hear Rime-thurses, sons of Sutting, the very Os-Troops [= Eese] themselves!
 how I forbid, how I forban
 men's fellowship from the maid, men's joy from the maid!

- 35 Hrímgrímnir hęitir þurs, · es þik hafa skal [R 12r/14] 2 fyr ná-grindr neðan, þar þér víl-męgir · á viðar rótum 4 gęita-hland gefi;
 óðri drykkju · fá þú aldri-gi, 6 męr, af þínum munum,
 męr, at mínum munum.

Rimegrimner is called the thurse who thee shall have down beneath Nawgrind, where the lads of toil [THRALLS] on the roots of a tree, goat-piss will give thee.
 A finer drink do thou never get,
 O maiden, against thy liking,
 O maiden, to my liking!

- 36 Þurs rist'k þér · ok þría stafi, [R 12r/16] 2 ęrgi ok óði ok óþola, svá ek þat af rist · sem ek þat á ręist,
 4 ef gęrask þarfar þęss.“

Thurse[†] I carve for thee, and three staves:
 queerness[†] and madness and restlessness.—
 So I carve it off, like I carved it on,
 if there be need for that.⁹²

1 Þurs 'thurse' | Thurse is the name of the þ-rune (þ); it is carved as part of the curse.

1 þrjá stafi ‘three staves’ | Three runic letters (or phrases) representing the three following words (ęrgi ‘queerness, degeneracy’ etc.). The ritual practice of carving “three staves” is first found on the C7th Gummarp stone: haþuwołafR sate staba þrjá fff ‘Hathwolf placed three staves: fff’, where the f-rune (Ƿ) stands for its name fee[†] (i.e. ‘wealth, cattle’) and is thus meant to bring wealth.

2 ęrgi ok óði ok ó·þola ‘queerness and madness and restlessness’ | Both ęrgi ‘queerness, degeneracy’ and ó·þoli ‘restlessness’ (here probably from strong lust) are found in the love magic charm on the rune stick B257 from Bryggen (edited below under Galders). ęrgi is also found in the curse-formula on the C7th Proto-Norse runestones from Stentofte and Björketorp. See further introduction to B257.

⁹²Shirner has carved the curse (which will make true the curse), but tells Gird that he will scrape it off if she accepts his demands. She promptly does.

Lay of Hymer (Hymiskviða)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C10th (0.694)

Meter: Ancient-words-law

Introduction

The Lay of Hymer (Hym) is attested in both R and A. The two mss. agree very well with each other; they share the same stanzas in the same order. The most substantial difference is the title; A has Hymis kviða ‘the lay of Hymer’ while R instead has Þórr dró Miðgarðs-orm ‘Thunder pulled the Middenyardsworm’.

Content

At its core Hym is a comedy about Thunder’s adventures in Ettinland. This seems to have been a popular genre, which in the Poetic Edda is also represented by Þrk and to some degree Hárb. Other related stories are Thunder’s journey to Outyards-Lock in Gylf 44–47, his fight with Rungner in Skm 24, and his journey to Garfrith in Skm 26 (edited in the present edition under Eddic fragments). These tales involve fantastical events and a fair bit of humour, and usually end with Thunder having slaughtered yet more Ettins.

The otherness of the Ettins

The Ettins are very much an other to the Gods, and this is something which Hym strongly emphasizes:

- They live in the far east (st. 5) in an inhospitable, frozen climate (st. 10) of mountains (sts. 2, 17) and lavafields (sts. 36, 38);

- they are physically deviant: misshapen (st. 10), grey-haired (st. 16), many-headed (sts. 8, 35), having bodies harder than stone (sts. 30–31);
- they are likened to apes (st. 20), whales (st. 36) and Danes (st. 17, see note!);
- they are stingy and inhospitable (sts. 9, 16);
- they are snide and cowardly (sts. 19–20, 25–26, 28–32).

In general the Ettins stand in direct opposition to the Old Germanic social norms, as represented by the Gods; they live in a lush green land and are young, beautiful, generous, and brave. The one exception in the poem is Tew's mother in st. 8, who is blonde, beautiful, and hospitable; the mother of a god must also be godlike.

As natural inferiors and a threat to the social order the Ettins must be subjugated by the Gods, and the agent of this is Thunder. Throughout the poem he constantly humiliates the ettins Eagre and Hymer, recurringly through completing their challenges, which follow a similar scheme: Thunder is given a dangerous or near-impossible test of strength, but quickly accomplishes it through a combination of brawn and brain, humiliating the challenger. The challenges consist of finding an enormously large kettle (st. 3, explicitly called Eagre's "revenge"), wrestling one of Hymer's oxen for bait (sts. 17–18), carrying home Hymer's whales and boat (st. 26), breaking Hymer's finest chalice (st. 28), and perhaps also taking away the cauldron (st. 33)—though that may just be Hymer wishing to finally be rid of the pestering gods.

In the end Thunder delivers justice by slaughtering Hymer and his troop of many-headed Ettins, probably his clansmen.

The fishing expedition

At the center of the poem stands Thunder's fishing expedition, where he gets the Mid-denyardswyrm on his hook but ultimately fails to catch it. One here finds a more reverent tone than elsewhere in the poem, especially in sts. 22–24.

This myth was very popular in the Wiking Age and is dealt with in five fragmentary Scaldic poems from the 9th or 10th centuries. These are all found in quotations in Skm; they are (by their SkP 3 sigla) Bragi Þórr, ÚlfrU HúsdR 3–6, Qlv Þórr, EVald Þórr, and Ggnæv Þórr. In their present state the fragments are not complete narratives, but specifically focus on Thunder in the boat facing off against the hooked Wyrms pressed against the gunwale. They also disagree on the course of events; in some of them the staring contest ends when the cowardly Hymer cuts the fishing line and the Wyrms sink back unscathed into the sea (the version preferred by Gylf 48)—in others Thunder strikes the head off the Wyrms, slaying it.

In addition to literary sources there are also numerous pictorial depictions of the myth from the Wiking Age. These are the Swedish runestones from Altuna (U 1611) and Linga (Sö 352), several Jutlandic picture stones from Hørdum, a Cumbrian picture stone from Gosforth, and the Gotlandic picture stone GP 21 from Ardre church. The images depict the same scene as the Scaldic fragments: Thunder stands in the boat above the hooked Wyrm, often depicted as a fish; next to him is one companion. Some of them have additional details like the use of the ox-head for bait (U 1611, Sö 352), or Thunder's foot going through the boat (U 1611, Hørdum).

Other than Hym the only complete retelling of the myth is found in Gylf 48, which may be summarized as follows:

Thunder goes out alone into Middenyard in the shape of a young man (ungr dręngr) without his goats and chariot. In the evening he comes to the ettin Hymer and asks to stay the night. At dawn Hymer plans to go fishing and Thunder asks to join him. Hymer insults Thunder's small size and youth, and warns him that he usually takes long and arduous trips. Thunder, angered, says that he will row very far, and then asks Hymer what bait they will use. Hymer tells him to find it himself and so he turns to the flock of oxen, where he tears off the head from the greatest ox, one called Heavenrid (Himin-brjóðr).

The two go out to sea, and Thunder rows far past Hymer's usual fishing waters. Hymer, unhappy, warns him that if they row any further out they will be in danger of the Middenyardswyrms, but Thunder keeps on. After some time he puts down the oars, readies his fishing line, hooks the ox-head and lowers it. The Wyrms soon bites, and struggles so hard that Thunder is pressed against the gunwale. In rage he brings himself into his Os-might (ás-męgin) and pulls back with such force that his feet go through the bottom of the ship and press into the seabed. The Wyrms's head goes up against the gunwale. The two enemies ferociously stare at each other, Thunder "sharpening his eyes" and the Wyrms spitting venom. Hymer is frightened, reaches for his bait-cutting knife, and cuts the line—the Wyrms then sinks back into the sea. Thunder throws his hammer after it, "and men say that he struck off the monster's head, but I think it true to tell thee that the Middenyardswyrms still lives and is lying in the outer sea." Thunder gives Hymer a punch to the ear so that he flies headfirst overboard; the god then wades back to land.

This account is clearly based on multiple sources, certainly including the Scaldic fragments cited in Skm. It is hard to say whether Snorre had access to Hym; the closest agreement is when it is said that Miðgarðs-ormr gein yfir uxa-hęfuð'it, en ęngull'inn vá í góm'inn orm'inum 'The Middenyardswyrms snapped at the ox-head and the hook went into the roof of the wyrms's mouth', which has some resemblance to st. 22, but it is not conclusive. Some details must derive from now-lost texts available to Snorre: the detail of Thunder's feet going through the boat is also found on the Swedish Altuna stone and the Danish Hørdum stone (but see note to st. 34/2 below), and the name Heavenrid is attested in thules[†] listing names of oxen.

More broadly, Thunder's fishing reflects the archetypal fight between the Storm-god and the Dragon found in a great many mythologies. Important examples of this include Vedic Indra and Vṛtra (RV 1.32 et. c.), Babylonian Marduk and Tiamat (Enūma Eliš), Greek Zeus and Typhon, Hebrew Yahweh and Leviathan (TODO: references). With these analogies in mind it seems that the versions where Thunder slays the Wyrms reflect an older layer of Germanic mythology, before the lethal fight between Thunder and the Wyrms had been transposed to the End Times (see Vsp 54).

Hym as a composite

In Hym one can roughly identify the following strands:

1. 1–6 The Gods wish to drink, and Thunder goes to Eagre to make him host; Eagre in turn asks for a cauldron big enough to brew enough ale for all the Gods.
2. 7–16 Thunder and Tew go to visit Tew's father, the stingy ettin Hymer, who owns such a cauldron; horrified at Thunder's great appetite during the evening he tells them that they must go fishing for food.
3. 17–19 Thunder says that he will do it, if he is given bait; Hymer challenges him to kill one of his oxen; Thunder tears off the head from one of them.
4. 20–25 The three go fishing; Hymer pulls up some whales; with the ox-head as bait Thunder manages to hook the Middenyardswyrm itself; he loses it.
5. 26–27 Hymer challenges Thunder to carry the boat and whales back to his farm; he does.
6. 28–32 Hymer challenges Thunder to break a supposedly indestructible chalice; he succeeds by smashing it against the ettin's forehead.
7. 33–36 Thunder and Tew depart with the cauldron; they find themselves followed by Hymer and his ettins; Thunder kills them all.
8. 37–38 One of Thunder's goats goes halt.
9. 39 Thunder returns to the Gods with Hymer's cauldron; they host a banquet.

The fishing expedition as found in the Scaldic fragments and Gylf 48 is represented by 3–4. Hym is the only source that places it within the context of Thunder and Tew obtaining a huge cauldron from Hymer for the sake of brewing ale, and also scatters several other incidents throughout. It seems inescapable to presume, both from the other sources just mentioned and broader comparative mythology, that these additional narratives originally had nothing to do with Thunder's encounter with the Wyrn.

These strands have been woven together into a single narrative, perhaps even by the poet himself for the sake of a more entertaining and complete story. This weaving has not been entirely successful, and there are a few loose threads. The halt goat of sts. 37–38 finds a parallel in Gylf 44, where it serves as the origin story of Thunder's two servants who are to play an important part in the narrative, but it is here an entirely superfluous detail—something the poet himself anticipates in his address to the audience. It is also strange that Lock should appear at this point, since he is never mentioned before or since.

Another loose strand is the god Tew, who plays no role at all in the fishing expedition: he is last alluded to in st. 16 where Hymer speaks of “[us] three”, and then reappears in st. 33 where he fails to lift the cauldron. The simplest explanation for this is that he originally had nothing to do with fishing; his role is to bridge the frame-narrative of the cauldron and the fishing expedition. In the other variants of the latter Thunder only has one companion, Hymer; this includes the pictorial depictions, which only show two figures on the boat. Moreover, it is strange that Tew has no reaction to the murder of his father in front of him, although that paternity is in doubt; Tew is elsewhere called the son of Weden[†] (Skm 16), so that Hymer may perhaps be his stepfather. This would reflect the common motif of a god mating with a beautiful ettin-woman, e.g. in Skm.

Style

When speaking of a composite poem, one must distinguish between a text where several separate works have been put together mostly unchanged and a text composed by a single author drawing from multiple sources. A likely example of the former is Háv, but Hym undoubtedly belongs to the latter category. It has a distinct style and meter throughout which is unlike anything else in the Poetic Edda; indeed, the sharpest contrast is with the poem most similar content-wise, Þrk. Where Þrk is written in a rustic style with fairly loose Ancient-words-law meter and few kennings, Hym uses an unusually strict meter and is filled with kennings, difficult grammatical constructions, and highly unnatural word order (see especially sts. 16, 20, and 39).

These are all traits one associates more closely with Scaldic poetry in intricate measures like Court-recited meter than Eddic poetry in Ancient-words-law, and it seems clear that the anonymous poet of Hym had some training in the Scaldic art and was familiar with compositions in that genre. Two Scaldic-type kennings (17/4a brjótr berg-Dana, 22/4 umb-gjprð allra landa) are even shared identically with poems in Court-recited meter.

Meter

The meter of Hym is Ancient-words-law, but of a more strict variant than any other Eddic poem; this is especially true when it comes to the count and weight of syllables. The poet also has a notable preference for lines of types A1s, C, and D, where the first two syllables are heavy and the third one is light, e.g. 1/4b ør-kost hvera (type A1s), 1/2a ok sumbl-samir (type C), and 2/4b opt sumbl gora (type D). For the ambiguity between A1s and D see Suzuki (2014:116–119).

This preference probably explains his tendency to place the two-syllable preposition fyrir ‘before, in front, (up) ahead’ at the end of the b-verse (never the a-verse), which he does 6 times—more frequently than in any other Ancient-words-law poem of the Poetic Edda.

The Lay of Hymer

Of yore the slain-Tews ⟨Gods⟩ had caught game, and assembled at the simble[†] before they might eat
 they shook the twigs and looked at the leat[†];
 they found at Eagre’s a great choice of cauldrons.

2 áðr saðir yrði ‘before they might eat’ | Lit. “might become sated”.

3 hristu tęina · ok á hlaut sǫu ‘they shook the twigs and looked at the leat’ | The Gods performed an augury, the means of which are not clear from this stanza alone. The term “leat” (blaut) is explained in HGoodS and Eb as the sacrificial blood of the slaughtered beasts, which was sprinkled by means of “leat-twigs” (blaut-tęinar). If we trust these sources the simplest explanation is that the Gods sprinkled the animal blood and interpreted the pattern formed. In any case they found it most auspicious to feast at Eagre’s.

The crag-dweller [ETTIN = Eagre] sat merry like a child before [him] much alike to the lad of Misherblind.
 Into his eyes looked the Ug's <Weden's> child [= Thunder] stubbornly:
 "Thou shalt for the Eese oft make simbles!"⁹⁴

4 gøra 'make' | gefa 'give' A

2 megi · Miskur-blinda 'lad of Misherblind' | An unexplained reference. Misherblind might be another name for Firneet, Eagre's father, in which case the line would be a tautology: "he looked much like himself".

⁹⁴Having seen that Eagre has a great store of cauldrons, Thunder orders him to brew ale for the feasts of the Eese.

3 Qnn fekk jǫtni · orð-béginna halr, [R 13v/31, A 5v/29]
 2 hugði at hefndum · hann nēst við goð, bað Sifjar ver · sér fōra hver,
 4 „þann's ek ǫllum ǫl · yðr of heita.“

Great toil for the ettin the word-peevisish man [= Thunder] caused;
 he [= Eagre] thought of revenge, soon, against the god.
 He bade Sib's husband [= Thunder] bring him a cauldron,
 "that one with which I for you all ale might warm."⁹⁵

⁹⁵Eagre gets back at Thunder by telling him that he needs a single cauldron which can hold enough ale to supply all the Eese.

4 Né þat mǫttu · mérir tívar [R 14r/1, A 5v/30]
 2 ok ginn-ręgin · of geta hver-gi, until, out of loyalty, Tew to Loride (= Thunder)

 a great loving counsel told alone:

5 „Býr fyr austan · Éli-vága [R 14r/3, A 6r/2]
 2 hund-víss Hymir · at himins ęnda,

4 rúm-brugðinn hver · rastar djúpan.“

“Dwells to the east of the Ilewaves[†]

Owns my father [= Hymer], fierce, a kettle:
a size-famed cauldron one rest[†] deep.”

4 rúm-brugðinn | ṛumbrygðanṛ A

2 hund-víss ‘hundred-wise’ | Alternatively “hound-wise”; the prefix simply means “very”.

⁹⁶According to Vafþ 31 the Ilewaves were the poisonous wild rushes from which the ettins emerged, and so it makes sense that they would be found in the east, where the ettins dwell. That Hymer should dwell even to the east of them then illustrates his unusual ettin-ness.

“Knowest thou if we will receive that liquid-boiler [CAULDRON]?” —

⁹⁷Like elsewhere in this poem the speakers are not indicated, but it is most sensible that Thunder asks and Tew answers.

they turned to the hall which Hymer owned.

1 dag þann framan ‘from the beginning of the day’ | emend. after Finnur Jónsson (1932); dag þann fram ‘on that day forth’ R; dag frálíga ‘swiftly at day’ A 2 Egils ‘Eysel’ | so R; Egis ‘Eagle’ A is probably from confusion with Eagle (the ettin) described earlier in the poem, though the shepherd may have shared his name.

3 hirði hafra · horn-gøfgasta ‘he kept the he-goats noblest of horns’ | Eysel is not otherwise known but he seems to have been familiar to the original audience. In any case he takes possession of Thunder’s two goats until he returns.

 But another woman, all-golden, walked forth,
 white-browed, bringing a beer-draught for [her] son [= Tew]:

2 hafði hqfða · hundruð níu ‘of heads she had nine hundred’ | Malformed bodies, especially with a deviant number of body parts, are typical of ettins. Other examples include a three-headed thurse in Skm 31, the nine-headed ettin Thriwold (Bragi Frag 3 in SkP 3), and the eight-armed Starked Eldreng. Cf. Introduction and st. 35 below.

3 qnnur ‘another woman’ | The use of the word “son” in the following line reveals this as Tew’s mother. The poet stresses her beauty of dress and countenance, in contrast to the grandmother.

- [Týs móðir:] 9 „Átt-niðr jōtna · ek vilja’k ykk

“O clansman of ettins [= Tew]! I would wish to put

 Many a time has my lover [= Hymer] been stingy with guests, quick to ill mood.”

3 fríi ‘lover’ | so R; fāðir ‘father’ A

4 glōggr ... hugar ‘stingy ... mood’ | Ettins are characteristically inhospitable, in stark opposition to the Old Germanic social norms; see Introduction to the poem above. This statement foreshadows the later hunting expedition starting at st. 16 below.

1 síð-búinn ‘come late’ | om. A

3 jöklar ‘icicles’ | In Hymer’s frozen beard. In modern Icelandic the word jökull has come to mean ‘glacier’, but its original sense (as found here) is that of its English cognate “icicle”.

1 Ves þú heill, ... í hugum góðum! ‘Be thou hale ... in good spirits!’ | A formulaic greeting; cf. the almost identical greeting in N B380 (edited below under Galders). Further afield cf. the type exemplified by Beow 407a: Wæs þú, Hrōðgār, hāl ‘Be thou, Rothgar, hale!’

[R 14r/19, A 6r/16]

His heart did not please him when he saw the gow[†]'s distresser [= Thunder] come on the floor.
There were three bulls a-taken:
the ettin bade them at once go cooking.

[R 14r/21, A 6r/18]

Each one they let shorten by a head,
and onto the cooking-pit then did bear:
Sib's husband [= Thunder] ate—before he might go sleep—alone by himself two of Hymer's oxen.⁹⁹

⁹⁹Cf. Þrk 24 for another instance of Thunder's great eating, which curiously also uses the kenning Sifjar verr 'Sib's husband [= Thunder]'.

4 „munum at aptni · qðrum verða

To Rungner's hoary friend [= Hymer] did seem Loride's <Thunder's> eating far too great;
“the next evening we three will on game-meat have to live.”

3–4 munum ... lifa. ‘the next ... live.’ | The poet is pushing at the limits of Old Norse syntax. In prose word order it should be construed as: at qðrum aptni munum vér þrír verða lifa við vęiði-mat, where verða ‘have to, must’ is used like its modern German cognate werden.

Hymer's stinginess—he refuses to share more of his own food but instead forces his guests to go hunt—breaks all Indo-European rules of hospitality and illustrates the otherness of the Ettins. See the Introduction above.

Wighward called himself willing to row on the wave,

“Turn to the herd—if thou trust in thy heart,
O breaker of boulder-Danes [ETTINS > = Thunder]—to seek pieces of bait.

3 hjarðar | ballar corr. A

4 brjótr berg-Dana ‘breaker of boulder-Danes [ETTINS > = Thunder]’ | This kenning for Thunder also occurs in Haustl 18. The ettin-kenning emphasises their otherness (see Introduction to the poem above) by equating them with ethnic foreigners. Cf. Þdr, where ettins are called Scots, Swedes, Danes, Ruges and Hareds; all peoples hostile to the Norwegian Earl Hathkin, at whose court that poem may have been composed.

[R 14r/26, A 6r/23]

I ween that the baits from the ox will not be an easy catch for thee!”—
The swain [= Thunder] swiftly turned to the wood, where an ox stood, all-black, before [him].

1 vęntir mik | so A; vęnti ek R 1 myni-t ‘will not’ | so A; myni ‘will’ R. The A reading is preferable since it makes this the first of Hymer’s several challenges of strength to Thunder, which the god, to the ettin’s humiliation, easily accomplishes.

3 Svęinn ‘The swain’ | Thunder was apparently in the shape of a young boy. This detail is also found in Gylf 48: Gekk hann út of Miðgarð svá sem ungr drengr ... ‘He went out about Middenyard in the shape of a young man’.

4 oxí ... al-svartr ‘ox ... all-black’ | Formulaic, also occurring in Þrk 23; see note there for further parallels to the custom of sacrificing animals of certain colours. It seems that all-black oxen were thought the noblest, and so Thunder’s slaying one instead of an inferior beast is probably intended to humiliate the stingy Hymer.

In Gylf 48 we read that: Hann tók inn mesta uxa’nn, er Himin-brjóðr hét, ok sleit af höfuð’it ok fór með til sjávar. ‘He took the greatest ox, which was called Heavenrid, and tore off its head and went with it to the sea’.

“Worse by far thy works do seem

(The scene now shifts, and the party is out at sea. It is possible that a stanza has here been lost, or that it would be indicated in some other way in the original performance.)

2 átt-runni | †atrænn† A 3 talði | milldi corr. A 4 lēngra at róa | metr. emend.; at róa lēngra RA

2 apa ‘ape’ | The specific sense of api ‘ape’ is uncertain. It seems to generally refer to a fool, but see Encyclopedia.

3–4 en ... róa. ‘but ... longer.’ | Thunder’s humorous humiliation of Hymer continues with the snide ettin now forced to row against his will.

Snapped at the bait the one whom the Gods hate [= Middenyardswýrm]— the engirdler of all lands—from below.

3 agni ‘bait’ | so A; ęngli ‘hook’ R

4 umb-gjęrð ... allra landa ‘engirdler of all lands’ | Also found in a fragment by Alewigh Snub (SkP: Qlv Þórr) quoted in Skm 11: Þstisk allra landa · umb-gjęrð ok sonr Jarðar. ‘The engirdler of all lands and the son of Earth surged.’ Cf. also the Wýrm-kenning in Braye’s fragment quoted in the same chapter (SkP: Bragi Þórr 3): ęndi-sęiðr allra landa ‘boundary-saithe of all lands’.

The poetic juxtaposition between the Storm-god and the Wýrm may be very old; cf. RV 1.32.13c: Índras ca yád yuyudbátay Ábis ca ‘When Indra and the Wýrm (ábi) fought each other.’

Bravely pulled deed-ready Thunder
 the venom-gleaming Wyrms up on the gunwale.
 With the hammer he struck the high mountain of hair [HEAD]— very hideous, from above—on the Wolf's clash-brother [= Middenyardswyrms].

1 Þóurr 'Thunder' | Out of 8 three-syllable lines in Hym, this is the only one which is present in both R and A, and which cannot easily be emended by restoring an hiatus form. In the quite strict meter (see Introduction above) observed by the poet we should expect a disyllabic form in this spot, and this may be had if we restore an archaic *Þóurr or *Þóarr. This form is less secure than other hiatus forms, but is also required by the meter of Hym 28/2b below and Þdr 2/2b. This issue is treated more fully in Haukur Þorgeirsson (2023).

3 hǫ-fjall skarar 'high mountain of hair [HEAD]' | A rather unfitting kenning, since serpents do not have hair.

1 hrutu | so A; hlumðu 'dashed' R. End-rhyme is also used by the poet in st. 3/3.

1 Hraun-gǫlkn 'The desert-monsters' | Both mss. have hręin-, which may mean either 'clean' or 'reindeer', neither of which fit. On the other hand braun ONP: 'stone/barren area, wasteland; lavafield' is well attested in Scaldic kennings for ettins. The precise meaning of galkn 'monster' (plural gǫlkn) is unclear; but it is attested in three Scaldic verses, always in kennings of the type "troll-woman of the shield [AXE]". While the mss. spelling 'galkn' (norm. gǫlkn) could reflect either singular and plural, the form of the verb is plural. This means that the word cannot be referring to the Middenyardswyrms, refuting the interpretation of Larrington (2014): "the sea-wolf shrieked".

3 [...] | It is very likely that a line is missing here, since the stanzas in the poem otherwise consistently have four lines. In other tellings of the myth it is at this point that Hymer cuts Thunder's fishing line, so that is probably what has been lost.

For the reader's enjoyment, based on other poets and Gylf 48, the translator has composed the following variant lines: unds vinr Hrunnis · vað Þórs of skar 'until the friend of Rungner [= Hymer] Thunder's fishing-line did cut'; unds fęlr Hymir · fekk á saxi 'until pale Hymer grasped the knife'.

4 fiskr ‘fish’ | The Middenyardsworm may also be called a fish in Grm 21; see note there. In Scaldic sources it is often called a saithe (seiðr).

 he pulled the oar against the wind:

2 [...] | Another likely missing line. As said in the previous stanza the meter usually requires four lines; more importantly the first half of the sentence is incomplete without a verb.

3 ár ‘in early morn’ | Finnur Jónsson (1932) suggests svá't at ór ‘so that by the oar’, but this burdens the strict meter. Assuming the present interpretation is correct, the three would have been out fishing throughout the night.

2 bratt-stein glęri ‘steep stone with the glass’ | He probably broke the stone columns in Hymer's house with the chalice.

3 sitjandi ‘standing’ | This word is ambiguous and can modify either Thunder (in which case it would mean “sitting”) or the columns (súlur). I have chosen the latter and read it as signifying their stability.

1 reís | om. A

3–4 kná’k-at ... of heitt. ‘I cannot ... warmed!’ | Hymer laments that with the loss of his finest vessel he will never be able to enjoy his drink again. This is ironic since it was he who challenged Thunder to break it in the first place.

 Tew attempted, twice, to move it—each time stood the cauldron still before [him].

2 ǫl-kjól ‘ale-vessel [CAULDRON]’ | ǫl-kjól is the accusative of ǫl-kjóll, but in this construction (CV: koma, B) we would expect the dative ǫl-kjóli. Since the meter does not allow for this the poet has probably taken a grammatical liberty.

2 hofi ‘hall’ | This is the only Old Norse occurrence of the word hof in the sense “hall, house”—it otherwise only means “temple” (hove[†]). The West Germanic cognates consistently mean “hall”, but that is probably the original sense, so it is unclear if this is an instance of foreign (if so, most likely Anglo-Saxon) influence or just a poetic archaism.

The father of Moody [= Thunder] grasped the brim, and stepped down through the floor in the hall.¹⁰²
 Sib’s husband [= Thunder] heaved the cauldron up on his head,

4 hringar skullu ‘the rings clattered’ | i.e. the chain-links. This detail is mentioned in an example sentence contrasting long and short phonemes in FGT (1950): heyrði til þǫddu, þá er þórr bar hverinn ‘the sound of the pot-links (þadda) was heard when Thunder bore the cauldron’. According to Finnur Jónsson (1932) the chain (or þadda) on a Wiking-age cauldron would have reached across, in which case this would be a reference to the cauldron’s enormous size, with its diameter—mentioned in st. 5 as one rest[†]—being roughly the same as Thunder’s height.

¹⁰²In the account of Gylf Thunder is said to have stepped through the boat when trying to pull up the Middenyardsworm. This detail is also seen on the carving of the Altuna stone from Uppland, Sweden; it may have been transposed to this place in the narrative. TODO.

4 folk-drótt ... fjol-hofðaða 'war-troop ... many-headed' | The adjective fjol-hofðaðr means 'many-headed, polycephalic' and is not referring to the size of the host. For many-headed ettins see st. 8 and for their malformed bodies in general see Introduction.

2 morð-gjörnum 'murder-eager' | By this adjective the poet gives the Hammer something of a life of its own. For this notion cf. Skm 43, where the Hammer is said to always return to Thunder when thrown, and the numerous amulets where the Hammer is given eyes, most famously the Scanian silver amulet from Claes Kurck's collection (106659 HST).

3 skęr | emend. from meaningless skirr* RA

1–4 ALL | The detail of Thunder's halt goat is also found in Gylf 44:

Thunder and Lock were on the way to visit Outyards-Lock and stayed the night at a certain farmer's. For supper Thunder cut his two goats and asked the farmer and his family to eat with him. After they had eaten he spread the goatskins before the fire and asked the housefolk to throw the bones of the goats onto them. Thelvé, the farmer's son, secretly pried open the thigh of one of the goats and ate the marrow. At dawn Thunder blessed the goatskins with his hammer and the goats came back to life, but one of them had a halt leg. The farmer begged for his life and offered to give up his two children: Thelvé, his son, and Wrash, his daughter. Thunder accepted this, and the two became his servants.

The present stanza probably references a version of the myth where Lock had a part to play in the halting of the goat, perhaps by encouraging Thelvé to pry the bone open.

1 ér 'ye' | The listeners. A direct address to the audience of this type is otherwise unparalleled in Eddic mythological poetry. Such are, however, typical for the Scaldic poetry with which this poem shares several traits; see Introduction above.

1–2 hvęrr ... goð-mólugra 'each god-speaking man' | Literally "each of the god-speaking ones". goð-mólugr 'god-speaking' is an hapax, but easily understood as "learned in the (lore of) the gods".

The valour-strong man [= Thunder] came to the Thing[†] of the Gods, and had the cauldron which Hymer had owned,
 and the Wighers[†] <Gods> well shall drink an ale-feast at Eage's, each flax-cutting [FALL?].

4 ęitt hęr-meitiđ ‘an ... flax-cutting’ | The latter word is an hapax and very obscure. La Farge and Tucker (1992) give several suggestions based on WINTER-kennings of the type “harm of the snake”, viz. ęitr-hęr-meitir ‘poison-rope-cutter [SNAKE > WINTER]’, ęitr-orm-meidiđir ‘poison-worm-injurer’ [WINTER]. A solution without emendation is to read ęitt ‘one’ n. acc. sg. as modifying ęlđr n. acc. ‘ale-feast’, and hverjan masc. acc. sg. ‘every’ as modifying hęr-meitiđr masc. acc. ‘flax-cutting’, a compound made up of hęrr ‘flax, cord’ and meita ‘to cut’. The whole thing might refer to an obscure harvest festival and give the poem something of an etiological purpose. If this interpretation is correct it is not unlikely that Hym was originally composed for performance at such a festival.

Flyting of Lock (Lokasenna)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C10th (0.965)

Meter: Leeds-meter

Introduction

The Flyting of Lock (Lok) is only preserved in R, where it follows Hym and comes before Þrk. In R it is tied together with Hym by the prose passage “From Eagle and the Gods”, but the two poems are certainly distinct compositions, for they are drastically different in style and meter, and Hym stands alone in A.

The author of Gylf seems to have had access to an alternate version of the poem, for in ch. 20 he cites the following stanza attributed to Woden, where l. 1 corresponds to st. 21/1, l. 2 to st. 47/2, and ll. 3–4 to st. 29/3–4.

2 „Örr est, Loki, · ok ør-viti, hví né lętsk-a þú, Løki?
 ør-løg Frigg · hyg at øll viti
4 þótt høn sjølf-gi sęgi.“

“Mad art thou, Lock, and out of wits,
why holdest thou not back, O Lock?
All orlays I think that Frie should know,
though she say them not herself.”

The poem has been interpreted as blasphemous (TODO: elaborate), but there is nothing in the language to suggest a late dating.

Eagre[†], who by another name was called Gymer[†]—he had prepared an ale-feast for the Eese when he had got the great kettle as is now told.¹⁰³ To that gathering came Woden[†] and Frie[†] his wife. Thunder[†] came not, for he was on the Eastern Way[†]. Sib was there, Thunder's wife; Bray[†] and Idun[†] his wife. Tew[†] was there; he was one-handed; the Fenrerswolf[†] tore his hand off when it was bound.¹⁰⁴ Nearth[†] was there and his wife Shede[†]; Free[†] and Frow[†]; Wider[†] the son of Woden[†]. Lock[†] was there, and the servants of Free, Bew[†] and Beal[†]. A multitude of Eese[†] and Elves^{†105} were there.

¹⁰³ See the immediately preceding Hym.

¹⁰⁴ This detail is probably brought up to chronologically date the events of the poem as happening after the binding of Fenrer.

¹⁰⁵ A formulaic expression, see Eese and Elves[†].

P2 Égir átti tvá þjónustu-menn, Fimafengr ok Eldir. Þar var lýsi-gull haft
 2 fyr elds-ljós; sjálft barsk þar ǫl. Þar var griða-stadr mikill. Menn lofuðu mjök hversu góðir þjónustu-menn Egis vóru. Loki mátti eigi heyra þat, 4 ok drap hann Fimafeng. Þá skóku ęsir skjöldu sína ok óptu at Loka, ok eltu hann braut til skógar, en þeir fóru at drekka. Loki hvarf aptr ok 6 hitti úti Eldi; Loki kvaddi hann:

Eagre had two servants, Femfinger[†] and Elder[†]. There glowing gold was used instead of fire; the ale there carried itself. It was a great grith[†]-place there.¹⁰⁶ The men greatly praised how good the servants of Eagre were; Lock could not stand to hear that, and he slew Femfinger. Then the Eese shook their shields and screamed at Lock,¹⁰⁷ and drove him away to the forest, and they went [back] to drinking. Lock turned back around and met Elder outside. Lock greeted him:

¹⁰⁶ A place wherein all violence was forbidden, see Encyclopedia.

¹⁰⁷Some sort of ancient war dance. Cf. the Old Swedish Heathen Law: “He screams three nothing-screams TODO”.

The Flyting of Lock

1 „Sęg þú þat, Ełdir, · svá't ęinu-gi
2 feti gangir framarr, hvat hęr inni · hafa at ęl-mólum
4 sig-tíva synir.“

“Tell this, O Elder, so that thou not take one step further:
What here within they say over the ale
the sons of the victory-Tews [GODS]?”

1–2 svá't ... framarr ‘so that ... further’ | Shared with Háv 38.

3 hafa at ęl-mólum ‘they say over the ale’ | Lit. “they have for their ale-speeches”.

Ełdir: 2 „Of vępn sín dǫma · ok of víg-risni sína
2 sig-tíva synir;
ása ok alfa, · es hęr inni eru,
4 mann-gi 's þęr í orði vinr.“

“Of their weapons they speak, and of their battle-prowess,
the sons of the victory-Tews [GODS].
Of the Eese and Elves which are here within none is thee a friend in words.”

4 mann-gi 's þęr í orði vinr. ‘none is thee a friend in words.’ | I.e., “nobody says anything good about you.”

The alliteration here is notable, and also occurs in st. 10 (Viðarr : ulfs, see note there). There are no signs of corruption, and so there are two possible explanations. Either (1) the semi-vowel v (/w/) is participating in vowel-alliteration with o— such alliteration between v and true vowels is never encountered in Scaldic poetry, but there are some examples from Eddic styles—or (2) the poem (or the relevant lines) was composed before the North Germanic loss of v before rounded vowels. (2) finds support in the notable fact that in both the present st. and st. 10 the words orð ‘word’ and ulfr ‘wolf’ originally began with v; in the case of the word ulfr this consonant is attested in old Scandinavian runic inscriptions. For metrical reasons the lines must postdate the syncope of most unstressed short vowels, but on the basis of the three closely related C7th runestones from Blekinge (DR 357–359, from Stentofte, Gummarp, and Istaby) the loss of w before rounded vowels is shown to have occurred later; so DR 359 haþuwulafir Haþuwulʹfir. If the alliteration indeed should fall on v, this would not require dating the whole Lok to the late Proto-Norse period (indeed, according to the analysis done by Sapp (2022), it is not even the linguistically oldest poem preserved); the older forms could, for instance, reflect archaic poetic formulae.

A C7th Proto-Norse form of this c-line might be: mann-gí's þér in wordé winir*.

Loki kvað: 3 „Inn skal ganga · Égis hallir í
2 á þat sumbl at séa,
 jǫll ok ǫfu · fóri'k ása sonum
4 ok blænd'k þeim svá męini mjoð.“

“In shall I go Egre’s halls into,
on that simble[†] for to see.
Scorn and hatred I bring the sons of the Eese,
and I mix for them so the mead with harm.”

2 sumbl ‘simble’ | The Germanic word for “feast, banquet”.

3 jǫll ok ǫfu ‘scorn and hatred’ | Two rare words to which the present translation hardly does justice. The former occurs nowhere else, while the latter only otherwise occurs in Sigsk 33. They have been interpreted in a variety of ways: CV sees the first word as jóll ‘wild angelica’, whereas the second is taken to be an error for áfr (“a beverage [...] translated by Magnaeus by sorbitio avenacea, a sort of common ale brewed of oats”). TODO: What do other editors say? Esp. Kommentar.

4 blænd'k ... męini mjoð ‘I mix ... the mead with harm’ | Formulaic, cf. Sigrdr 8 (and others TODO).

Þldir kvað: 4 „Veitst, ef inn gęngr · Égis hallir í
2 á þat sumbl at séa,
 hrópi ok rógi · ef ęyss á holl ręgin,
4 á þér munu þau þerra þat.“

“Thou knowest if in thou wilt go Egre’s halls into,
on that simble for to see—
if slander and strife thou pour on the hold[†] Reins[†], on thee will they dry it off!”

Loki kvað: 5 „Veitst þat Ełdir, · ef ęinir skulum
 2 sár-yrðum sakask,
 4 auðigr verða · mun’k í and-svqrum, ef þú męlır til mart!“

“Thou knowest that, Elder, if one-on-one we shall banter with wounding words, wealthy will I in my answers become,
 if thou speak too much!”

4 ef þú męlır til mart! ‘if thou speak too much!’ | Formulaic; cf. Háv 27.

P3 Síðan gekk Loki inn í hollina; en er þeir sá, er fyrir váru, hverr inn var
 2 kominn, þognuðu þeir allir.

Thereafter Lock went into the hall, but when those who were there before him saw who was come inside, they all turned silent.

Loki kvað: 6 „Þyrstr ek kom · þęssar hallar til
 2 Loptr of langan veg,
 4 ósu at biðja, · at mér ęinn gefi
 męran drykk mjaðar.

“Thirsty I came to these halls,
 Loft (= Lock), over a long way, to bid the Eese that they give me but one renowned drink of mead.

4 męran drykk mjaðar ‘renowned drink of mead’ | Formulaic language for describing mead; cf. Háv 105,
 140, Skm 16. TODO: more parallels.

 7 Hví þęgið ér svá · þrungrin goð,
 2 at męla né męguð;
 4 sessa ok staði · vęlið mér sumbli at, eða hęitið mik heðan!“

Why shut up so, ye pressed Gods,
 that ye cannot speak?
 Choose seats and places for me at the simble, or call away me hence!”

3–4 sessa ... heðan! ‘Choose ... hence!’ | That is, “Cease your dallying; give me a seat or tell me to leave!”

Bragi: 8 „Sessa ok staði · veltja þér sumbli at 2 ésir aldri-gi;
 því-at ésir vitu · hveim alda skulu
 4 gamban-sumbl of geta.“
 “Choose seats and places for thee at the simble
 the Eese will never do, for the Eese know for which man they shall prepare the gomben-simble.”

3 hveim alda ‘which man’ | Here “person, being”. See note to Vaff 55/6.

4 gamban-sumbl ‘gomben-simble’ | gamban ‘gomben’ being an obscure prefix which only occurs in Lok, Skm and Hárb. CV suggest it means something like “costly”.

[Loki:] 9 „Mant þat Óðinn, · es vit í ár-daga
 2 blendum blóði saman?
 qlvi berþgja · létsk ęigi mundu,
 4 nema okkr vęri bóðum borit.“ “Recallest thou, Weden, when we two in days of yore blended our blood together?
 Taste ale wouldst thou never do,
 unless it were for us both borne forth!”

[Óðinn:] 10 „Rís þú Víðarr · ok lát ulfs fęður 2 sitja sumbli at,
 síðr oss Loki · kvęði lasta-stęfum
 4 Ęgis hęllu í.“
 “Rise thou, Wider, and let the Wolf’s father [= Lock] sit at the simble, lest Lock should greet us with words of vice in Eage’s hall.”

1 Rís ... fęður ‘Rise ... father’ | For the alliteration see note to st. 2. A C7th Proto-Norse form of the line might be: Rís þú Víðarr · auk lát wulfs fęður*.

P4 Þá stóð Víðarr upp ok skenkti Loka, en áðr hann drykki, kvaddi hann 2 ásuna:

Then Wider stood up and poured a drink to Lock, but before he [= Lock] drank, he greeted the Eese:

11 „Hęilir ęsir, · ęęilar ęsynjur
2 ok ęll ginn-ęęilęg goð, nema sá ęinn ęss · es innar sitr 4 Bragi bękkjum á.“

“Hail the Eese[†]! Hail the Ossens[†], and all yin-holy[†] Gods!¹⁰⁸
Save for that one os[†] who sits further within:
Bray, on the benches.”

¹⁰⁸The first two half-lines are identical to the prayer Sigrdr 3–4. The prayer formula may actually have been used in Heathen toasts, where the second half of the stanza was used to ask for a boon. Lock subverts it by instead insulting one of the gods present, which would have come off as blasphemous to the Heathen audience.

[Bragi] kvað: 12 „Mar ok męki · gef’k þęr mįns fęar
2 ok bętir þęr svá baugi Bragi, sįðr þú ęsum · ęfund of gjaldir;
4 gręm þú ęigi goð at þęr!“

“Steed and sword I give thee of my own wealth, and so restores thee Bray with a bigh[†], lest thou repay the Eese with envy;
anger not the Gods against thee!”

1 Mar ok męki ‘Steed and sword’ | Formulaic pair; see Háv 83/2.

[Loki] kvað: 13 „Jós ok arm-bauga · munt ę vesa
2 bęggja vanr Bragi,
ása ok alfa, · es hęr inni eru,
4 þú est við vįg varastr, ok skjarrastr við skot.“

“Of steed and arm-highs both wilt thou always be lacking both, O Bray!
Of the Eese and Elves which are here within,
thou art with war wariest and shiest with shot.”

[Bragi] kvað: 14 „Veit’k, ef fyr útan véra’k, · svá sem fyr innan em’k,
2 Égis holl of kominn, höfuð þitt · béra’k í hendi mér;
4 lit’k þér þat fyr lygi.“

“I know if outside I were as inside I am come into Eage’s hall,¹⁰⁹ that head on thee would I bear in my hands;
this I see for thy lie.”

4 lit’k þér þat fyr lygi | ‘litt ec þer þat fyr lygi’ R. A variety of emendations have been proposed for this line. Simplest would be litt es þér þat fyr lygi ‘that is little [punishment] for thee for lying’. Based on the similarity of é (= tt) and c Finnur Jónsson (1932) gives lykak þér þat fyr lygi ‘so I would bring to thee for thy lie’.

¹⁰⁹As said in P1, the rule of grith[†] (a truce of non-violence, even between enemies; see Encyclopedia) applied inside the hall. Bray and the other gods are thus bound not to injure Lock.

[Loki] kvað: 15 „Snjallr est í sessi, · skal-at-tu svá gæra,
2 Bragi bekkk-skrautuðr;
 vega þú gakk · ef vreiðr séir;
4 hyggsk vétr hvatr fyrir.“

“Valiant art thou in the seat; thou shalt not do so,
O Bray the bench-adornor!
Go to fight if thou art wroth;
the bold thinks not ahead.¹¹⁰”

¹¹⁰Lock attacks Bray’s excuse; a true brave would fight regardless of the grith.

[Íðunn] kvað: 16 „Bið ek, Bragi, · barna sífar duga
2 ok allra ósk-maga,

“I bid thee, Bray, to respect the bond of children and all beloved sons, that thou not greet Lock with words of vice
in Eagre’s hall.”

[Loki] kvað: 17 „Þegi þú, Iðunn, · þik kveð’k allra kvinna
2 ver-gjarnasta vesa síðst þú arma þína · lagðir ítr-þvegna
4 umb þinn bróður-bana.“

“Shut up thou, Idun! Thee I call of all women the most man-eager, since thy clean-washed arms thou didst cast about thy brother’s bane.”

[Iðunn] kvað: 18 „Loka ek kveð’k-a · lasta-stofum
2 Égis hollu í;
 Braga ek kyrrri · bjór-ræifan,
4 vil’k-at at it vræiðir vegisk.“

“I greet not Lock with words of vice,
in Eagre’s hall.
Bray I calm, made rowdy from beer—
I wish not that ye two wroth ones should fight.”

[Gefjun] kvað: 19 „Hví it ésir tvær · skuluð inni hér
2 sár-yrðum sakask?
 Lopts-ki þat veit · at hann lækinn es
4 ok hann fjörg-vall fría.”

“Why shall ye two Eese here within,

Loft (= Lock) knows not that he is being played,
and him TODO.”

[Loki] kvað:
 2 „Þegi þú, Gefjun, · þess mun'k nú geta
 es þik glapði at gæði:
 4 svæinn inn hvíti · es þér sigli gaf ok þú lagðir lér yfir.“

“Shut up thou, Giben! Of him will I now speak, who seduced thy senses:
 the white swain who gave thee a necklace, and thou cast o’er him thy leg!”

[Óðinn kvað] þat:

21 „Þrarr est, Loki, · ok þr-viti,

“Mad art thou, Lock, and out of wits,
as thou earnest Giben’s anger against thee,
for all the orlays of men I think she knows,
just as clearly as I.”

1 Ørr ... ok ørr-viti ‘Mad ... and out of wits’ | Formulaic, occurs at two other places (TODO). Cf. also st. 47 below.

[Loki] kvað: 22 „Þegi þú, Óðinn, · þú kunnir aldri-gi 2 deila víg með verum;
 opt þú gaft · þeim's gefa skyldir-a,
4 inum slévurum, sigr.“

“Shut up thou, Weden! Thou couldst never deal out war midst men—oft hast thou given them thou shouldst not have given,
the slower men, victory.”

[Óðinn] kvað:

2 23 „Véitst ef ek gaf · þeim's gefa né skylda,
 inum slévurum, sigr,
 átta vetr · vast fyr jorð neðan
4 kír mólkandi ok kona

- 6 ok hugða'k þat args aðal.“ “Thou knowest, that if I have given them I should not have given,
 the slower men, victory;
 for eight winters wast thou beneath the earth
 a milch cow and a woman, and thou hast there borne children,
 and I've judged that a queer†'s nature.”

4 kýr mólkandi 'a milch cow' | May also be read as “milking cows”, the nom. sg. kýr being identical to the nom./acc. pl. kýr, and mólka meaning both ‘to milk’ and ‘to give milk’. “Milch cow” is preferable for two reasons, viz. (i) that the phrase is followed by ok kona ‘and a woman’ rather than sem kona ‘as a woman’ or similar, and (ii) that it agrees with another instance where Lock is gives birth in the form of a female animal (cows, of course, only giving milk after calving), namely the episode of the building of the wall around Oyard as told in Gylf 42.

- [Loki] kvað: 24 „En þik síga kóðu · Sámseyju í 2 ok drapt á vett sem vqlur, vitka líki · fórt ver-þjóð yfir,
 4 ok hugða'k þat args aðal.“
 “But thou, they said, didst sink down into Samsy, and didst beatst the drum like do wallows.
 In a warlock's likeness thou didst journey through mankind,
 and I've judged that a queer's nature.”

- [Frigg kvað:] 25 „Or-lögum ykkrum · skylið aldri-gi

 “Shut up thou, Frie! Thou art Firgyn’s maiden, both in thy bosom taken.”

[Frigg kvað:] 27 „Veitst ef inni étta’k · Égis hollum í

 “Thou knowest, if within I owned, in Eagre’s halls, a boy alike to Balder:
 out came thou not from the sons of the Eese,
 and thou wouldst be fought with wrath.”

[Loki kvað:] 28 „Einn vill þú, Frigg, · at ek flēiri tēlja mína mēin-stafi:
 ek því rēð · es þú ríða sér-at síðan Baldr at sólum.“ “Still wilt thou, Frie, that I recount more of my harmful deeds:
 I did plan that thou shouldst not see Balder riding to the halls henceforth.”

[Freyja kvað:] 29 „Örr est, Loki, · es þú yðra tēlr ljóta leið-stafi;
 ør-lög Frigg · hygg at oll viti
 þótt hōn sjolf-gi sēgi.“ “Mad art thou, Lock, as thou dost count your ugly, loathsome deeds:
 all orlays I think that Frie should know,
 though she say them not herself.”

2 vamma vant ‘free of blemishes’ | Formulaic, cf. Háv 22: hann es-a vamma vanr ‘he is not free of blemishes’.

1–2 Fló ... gala; ‘False ... thee’ | The language is again strikingly similar to Háv, particularly 29/3–4: “A quick-speaking tongue—unless it be held in place—oft sings evil [into being] for itself (opt sér ó-gótt of gegl).” and 116/3–4: “a false-counseling tongue (flá-rǫð tunga) brought his life to its end, and in no way over a truthful charge.”

4 hryggur munt heim fara 'grieved wilt thou journey home' | Frow here shows her ability to foresee the future. Lock will come to regret his insults.

“Shut up thou, Frow! Thou art an evil-working woman,
and much mixed with harm,
since against thy brother the blithe Reins bewitched thee,
and thou wouldst then, O Frow, fart.”

Njörðr: 33 „Þat ’s vá-lítit · þótt sér varðir vers fái,

“It is little woe that women should get themselves a man,

Loki: 34 „Þegi þú, Njörðr, · þú vast austr heðan
 2 gísl of sendr at goðum;
 Hymis meyjar · hófðu þik at hland-trogi
 4 ok þér í munn migu.“

“Shut up thou, Nearth! Thou wast east hence sent as hostage for the Gods.
 Hymer’s maidens had thee for a lant-trough,
 and pissed thee in the mouth!”

Njörðr: 35 „Sú esumk líkn · es vas’k langt heðan
 2 gísl of sendr at goðum:

 4 ok þikkir sá ása jaðarr.“

“This is my relief, as I was far-away hence
 sent as hostage for the Gods:
 I afterwards begot the lad whom no man hates,
 and he seems the peak of the Eese.”

3 mōg ... þann’s mann-gi fiar ‘the lad whom no man hates’ | Free.

Loki: 36 „Hétt-u nú, Njörðr, · haf á hófi þik;

“Free is the best of all bold riders

“A hand am I lacking, but thou Rothwitner;

Qln né þenning · hafðir þess aldri-gi
 4 van-réttis, vę-sall.“

“Shut up thou, Tew! It happened to thy woman, that she had a lad by me!
 Neither ell nor penny hadst thou ever for that injustice, O wretch!”

3 Qln ‘ell’ | Wool, measured in ells, was often used for barter in Iceland and Norway.

Fręyr: 41 „Ulf sé’k liggja · áar-ósi fyr

Byggvir: 43 „Vęitst ef øðli ętta’k · sem Ingunar-Fręyr,

 why holdest thou not back, O Lock?”

For over-drinking causes for every man that he no more recalls his speech.”

[Loki kvað:] 48 „Þegi þú, Heimdallr, · þér vas í ár-daga 2 ít ljóta líf of lagit;
 ǫrgu baki · munt é vesa
4 ok vaka vǫrðr goða.“

“Shut up thou, Homedal! For thee was in days of yore thy ugly life laid [down]; with a stiff back wilt thou ever be and waking, O Watchman of the Gods.”

2 líf of lagit ‘life laid [down]’ | His course of life was decreed (by the Norns). Formulaic; see TODO.

4 vǫrðr goða ‘Watchman of the Gods’ | Formulaic epithet of Homedal, who had to guard the rainbow bridge of the Gods against their enemies. See note to Grm 13.

[Skaði kvað:] 49 „Létt ’s þér, Loki; · mun-at-tu lengi svá 2 lēika lausum hala, því at þik á hjörvi skulu · ins hrím-kalda magar
4 gǫrnum binda goð.“

“Tis light for thee, Lock—thou wilt not for long play so with loose tail, for on a sword shall, with thy rime-cold lad’s guts, the Gods bind thee.”

3–4 því ... goð. ‘for ... thee.’ | See From Lock below.

[Loki kvað:] 50 „Veitst ef mik á hjörvi skulu · ins hrím-kalda magar
2 gǫrnum binda goð,
 fyrstr ok øfstr · vas’k at fjör-lagi
4 þar’s vér á Þjatsa þrifum.“

“Know, if on a sword shall, with my rime-cold lad’s guts, the Gods bind me:
first and highest was I in life-taking when we laid hands on Thedse.”

[Skaði kvað:]

- 51 „Veitst ef fyrstr ok øfstr · vast at fjör-lagi 2 þá's ér á Þjatsa þrifuð, frá mínum véum · ok vǫngum skulu
 4 þér ę kǫld rǫð koma.“

“Thou knowest, if first and highest thou wast in life-taking when ye laid hands on Thedse:
 from my wighs and wongs shall for thee ever cold counsels come.”

[Loki kvað:]

- 52 „Léttari í mólum · vast við Laufeyjar son 2 þá's létsk mér á beð þinn boðit;
 getit verðor oss slíks · ef vér gǫrva skulum
 4 tēlja vǫmmin vǫr.“

“Lighter in speech wast thou with Leafie's son [= Lock = me] when thou hadst me bid to thy bed; such will be said of us, if we clearly shall recount our blemishes.

P5 Þá gekk Sif fram ok byrlaði Loka í hrím-kálki mjǫð ok mēlti:

Then Sib walked forth and poured for Lock mead in a rime-chalice, and spoke:

- 53 „Hęill ves þú nú, Loki, · ok tak við hrím-kálki 2 fullum forns mjaðar, hęldr þú hana ęina · látir með ása sonum
 4 vamma-lausa vesa.“

“Hale be thou now, O Lock, and receive this rime-chalice, full of ancient mead, that thou rather let her alone among the sons of the Eese remain blemish-less.¹¹¹”

¹¹¹Sib attempts to bribe Lock with drink, so that she alone will remain unaccused among the gods.

P6 Hann tók við horni ok drakk af:

He received the horn and drank from it:

54 „Ein þú vérir · ef þú svá vérir,
 2 vör ok grōm at veri;
 einn ek v^eit, · svá't ek vita þikkjumk, 4 hór ok af Hlórriða, ok vas þat sá inn l^e-vísi Loki.“

“Alone wert thou, if thou so wert wary and wroth against man.
 I know one—whom I think myself to know—adulterer behind even Lorida[†]'s back, and that was the guile-wise Lock!”

5 l^e-vísi Loki ‘guile-wise Lock’ | Formulaic, also occurring in Hym 37. Cf. also Vsp 35 where Lock is called l^e-gjarn ‘guile-eager’ and note to Vsp 17 where Lothar (possibly to be identified with Lock) gives men l^e, which may be an accusative form of l^e.

[Beyla kvað:] 55 „Fjöll ǫll skjalfa, · hygg á för vesa
 2 heiman Hlórriða;
 hann réðr ró · þeim's rógir hér
 4 góð ǫll ok guma!“

“The fells all quake—I think on the journey from home Lorida to be.
 He brings to rest him who here maligns
 all Gods and men!”

1 Fjöll ǫll skjalfa ‘The fells all quake’ | The movement of gods, especially Thunder, is often signalled by cosmic disturbances. See note to Þrk 21.

[Loki kvað:] 56 „Þegi þú, Beyla, · þú est Bbyggvis kvæn 2 ok męini blandin mjök;
 ó-kynjan męira · kom-a með ása sonum;
 4 ǫll est, dęigja, dritin.“

“Shut up thou, Beal! Thou art Bewe's wife,
 and much mixed with harm;
 a greater disgrace came not among the sons of the Eese;
 thou art all, O kneaderess, shitty!”

P7 Þá kom Þórr at ok kvað:

Then Thunder arrived and quoth:

57 „Þegi þú, rög vetttr, · þér skal mín þrúð-hamarr,
2 Mjöllnir, mál fyr-nema!
Hərða klett · drep’k þér halsi af,
4 ok verðr þá þínu fǿrvi of farit.“

“Shut up thou, queer wight! Thee shall my thrith-hammer
Millner, deprive of speech!
The shoulder-rock [HEAD] I strike off thy neck, and then is thy life destroyed!”

1 þrúð-hamarr ‘thrith-hammer’ | “Strength-hammer”, þrúðr ‘thrith’ being an obsolete word for strength used only in connection with Thunder or ettins. Thrith[†] is also the name of Thunder’s daughter.

[Loki kvað:] 58 „Jarðar burr · es hér nú inn kominn;
2 hví þrasir þú svá, Þórr?
En þá þorir ękki · es skalt við ulfinn vega
4 ok svelgr hann allan Sig-fǿður.“

“Earth’s Son is now here come inside, why dost thou thrash so, O Thunder?
But then darest thou not, when with the Wolf thou shalt fight, and he swallows Syefather (= Weden) whole.”

[Þórr kvað:] 59 „Þegi þú, rög vetttr, · þér skal mín þrúð-hamarr,
2 Mjöllnir, mál fyr-nema!
Upp ek þér verp · ok á austr-vega
4 síðan þik mann-gi sér.“

“Shut up thou, queer wight! Thee shall my thrith-hammer
Millner, deprive of speech!
Up I throw thee, and onto the eastern ways;
thereafter no man sees thee!”

[Loki kvað:] 60 „Austr-fǿrum þínum · skalt aldri-gi

“Shut up thou, queer wight! Thee shall my thrith-hammer
 Millner, deprive of speech!
 Rungner’s bane will take thee to hell, down beneath Neegrind!”

[Loki kvað:]

64 „Kvað’k fyr ósum, · kvað’k fyr ása sonum,
 2 þat’s mik hvatti hugr, en fyr þér einum · mun’k út ganga
 4 því-at ek veið at þú vegr.
 “I spoke before the Eese; I spoke before the sons of the Eese, whatever my heart did goad me.
 but for thee alone will I walk out,
 for I know that thou strikest.

65 Ql gørðir þú, Égir, · en þú aldri munt
 2 síðan sumbl of gøra;
eiga þín qll, · es hér inni es, 4 l*ei*ki yfir logi ok brenni þér á baki.“

Ale hast thou made, Eagre, but thou wilt never since make a simble!
 All thy estate which is here within—may flame play over it, and burn thee on the back!”

From Lock (Frá Loka)

The binding of Lock is known from two other places. Closest at hand is Vsp 34, but it offers no full narrative.

Gylf 50 has a longer account, somewhat different from the present prose. There the Eese captured Lock’s two sons, Wonnell and “Nare or Narve”. They turned Wonnell into a wolf (vargr, which also means ‘outlaw’) and had him tear his brother Narve apart. Narve’s intestines were then taken and used to bind Lock on top of three pointed stones, with one digging into his shoulder-blades, the other digging into his loins, and the third digging into his houghs. At last the intestines turned into iron and Lock was bound.

Since the author of Gylf knew Vsp, it is possible that he combined a text similar to From Lock with st. H1, interpreting Vála víg-bönd as 'Wonnell's war-bonds'. Wonnell is otherwise only known as the son of Weden, and there is no reason as to why he could not have bound Lock.

- 2 P8 En eptir þetta falst Loki í Fránangrs-forsi í lax líki. Þar tóku ésir hann.
 Hann var bundinn með þormum sonar Nara; en Narfi, sonr hans, varð 4 at vargi. Skaði tók eittr-orm ok festi upp yfir and-lit Loka; draup þar ór eittr. Sigyn, kona Loka, sat þar ok held munn-laug undir eitrit. En er 6 munni-laugin var full bar hon út eitrit, en meðan draup eitrit á Loka. Þá kipptist hann svá hart við, at þaðan af skalf jörð öll; þat eru nú kallaðir land-skjálftar.

And after this Lock hid himself in the Freenangersforce in the form of a salmon. There the Eese took him. He was bound with the intestines of his son Nare, but his son Narve was made a wolf/outlaw. Shede took a venomous serpent and fastened it up above Lock's face; from it ran venom. Syein, Lock's wife, sat there and held a basin under the venom. And when the basin was full she carried out the venom, but meanwhile the venom ran onto Lock. Then he struggled so hard that thereof all the earth quaked; that is now called earth-quakes.

Lay of Thrim

Introduction

The Lay of Thrim (Þrk) is only found in R, where it follows Lok and precedes Vkv. It has long been considered the oldest poem in the collection, with which Sapp's model agrees.

Comedic stories involving Thunder and his ettin-bashing seem to have been very popular in Wiking age Norway and Iceland, and the god himself is not infrequently the butt of the joke. Apart from Þrk there are also Hym and Hárb in the present edition, and the Scaldic poems Þdr and Haustl. A lost Eddic poem about Thunder's fight with the ettin Garfrith and his daughters survives in fragmentary quotations in Gylf; see Eddic fragments below.

Wroth was then Wing-Thunder[†] when he woke,
and of his hammer was bereaved.

His beard he took to rustle, his locks he took to rip;
the son of Earth resolved to grope about.

1 Vreǰðr ‘Wroth’ | The vr- is restored for the sake of the alliteration, but is not strictly metrically necessary; cf. st 13. The manuscript has r-. In any case the poem (generally considered to be the oldest Eddic poem) most likely predates the change vr- > r-.

1 Ving-Þórr ‘Wing-Thunder’ | A rare poetic synonym for Thunder; it only elsewhere occurs in Alv 6. See Encyclopedia for etymology.

3 skęgg ... dýja ‘beard ... pull’ | Apparently formulaic. Cf. a certain heroic poem (TODO).

- 2 2 Ok hann þat orða · alls fyrst of kvað: [R 17r/15]
2 „Hęyr-ðu nú, Loki, · hvat ek nú męli es ęigi vęit · jarðar hęr-gi
4 né upp-himins: · áss es stolinn hamri!“

And he this word first of all did say:

“Hear thou now, Lock, what I now speak, which no man knows anywhere on earth

nor in up-heaven: the os[†] [= Thunder = I] is robbed of His hammer!”

1 Ok ... of kvað ‘And ... did say’ | The whole line is formulaic, occurring in five other places: sts. 3, 9 and 12 of the present poem; st. 3 of Oddrgr; st. 5 of Brot.

3–4 jarðar ... upp-himins ‘earth ... up-heaven’ | Formulaic, see Encyclopedia: Earth and Up-heaven[†].

- 3 3 Gingu þęir fagra · Freyju túna [R 17r/17]
2 ok hann þat orða · alls fyrst of kvað:
 „Munt-u mér, Freyja, · fjaðr-hams léa
4 ef ek mín hamar · mętta’k hitta?“

Went they to the fair yards of Frow[†],

and he this word first of all did say:

“Wilt thou me, O Frow, the feather-hame[†] lend,

if I my hammer might find?”

3 fjaðr-hams ‘feather-hame’ | A “feather-skin” by which the wearer can transform or fly like a bird.

- Freyyja kvað: 4 „Þó mynda’k gefa þér · þótt ór gulli vęri [R 17r/19]
2 ok þó sęlja · at vęri ór silfri.“

“Yet would I give it to thee though it were golden, and yet hand it to thee if it were silvern.”

2 selja ‘hand’ | selja, cognate of English sell, here has its older sense of ‘hand over’, cf. Gotish saljan Streitberg (1910, p. 116): ‘opfern; θúeiv’.

5 Fló þá Loki, · fjaðr-hamr dunði, [R 17r/20]
2 unds fyr útan kom · ása garða ok fyr innan kom · jǫtna heima.

Flew then Lock—the feather-hame rustled—
until he came outside the Yards of the Eese[†], and he came inside the Homes of the Ettins[†].

1 Loki ‘Lock’ | Though Thunder is the one asking for the feather-hame (“if I my hammer might find”), Lock is the one that takes off flying with it.

6 Þrymr sat á haugi, · þursa dróttinn, [R 17r/22]
2 greyjum sínum · gull-bönd snøri ok mǫrum sínum · mǫn jafnaði.

Thrim sat on the mound, the lord of Thurses[†]:
on his greyhounds the golden leashes he twirled,
and on his steeds the manes he evened.

1 sat á haugi ‘sat on the mound’ | Apparently a typical seat for ettins. See Vsp 42 for other attestations.

1 þursa dróttinn ‘lord of Thurses’ | This formulaic expression also occurs in several Runic charms against such thursen lords (see below under Galders); an example of the close connection between mythology and ritual.

2–3 greyjum sínum ... mǫrum sínum ‘his greyhounds ... his steeds’ | Thrim sits surrounded by dogs and horses. The scene is reminiscent of the ancient “master of animals” motif, especially as attested on panel A of the Gundestrup cauldron.

[Þrymr kvað:] 7 „Hvat ’s með ǫsum? · Hvat ’s með ǫlfum? [R 17r/23]
2 Hví est ǣinn kominn · í jǫtun-heima?“
[Loki kvað:] „Illt ’s með ǫsum, · illt ’s með ǫlfum!
4 Hefir þú Hlórriða · hamar of folginn?“

“What’s with the Eese? What’s with the Elves?
Why art thou alone come into the Ettin-homes[†]?”—

“Tis ill with the Eese! ’Tis ill with the Elves!
Hast thou the hammer of Lorida (= Thunder) hid?”

3 illt ’s með ǫlfum | Required by the meter; om. R

1 Hvat ’s með ǫsum? · Hvat ’s með ǫlfum? ‘What is with the Eese? What is with the Elves?’ | Formulaic, the same line occurs in Vsp 47.

[Þrymr kvað:]

8 „Ek hēfi Hlórriða · hamar of folginn
2 áttar ǫstum · fyrir jǫrð neðan;
hann ęngi maðr · aptr of heimtir
4 nema fǫri mér · Freyju at kvęn.“

[R 17r/25]

“I have the hammer of Lorida hid eight rests[†] beneath the earth!
It no man will fetch back,
unless he bring me Frow for a wife.”

9 Fló þá Loki, · fjaðr-hamr dunði,
2 unds fyrir útan kom · jǫtna hęima ok fyrir innan kom · ása garða;
4 mótta hann þór · miðra garða
ok hann þat orða · alls fyrst of kvað:

[R 17r/27]

Flew then Lock—the feather-hame rustled—
until he came outside the Homes of the Ettins and he came inside the Yards of the Eese.
He met Thunder in the middle yards,
and he [= Thunder] that word first of all did say:

5 hann þat | emend.; þat hann R, with elsewhere unprecedented word order. Cf. note to st. 2.

10 „Hęfir þú ęrendi · sem ęrfiði?
2 Segðu á lopti · lęng tíðendi!
Opt sitjanda · sęgur of fallask,
4 ok liggjandi · lęgi of bełlir.“

[R 17r/29]

“Hast thou an errand of hardship?
Tell thou the long tidings aloft!

Oft the sitting man's stories fail each other and the lying blows up his lie.”¹¹²

1 Hęfir þú ørendi · sem ęrfiði? ‘Hast thou an errand of hardship?’ | Thunder asks Lock if he has bad news. The pair ørendi ‘errand’ ... ęrfiði ‘trouble, hardship’ is formulaic and occurs in X other (TODO!!) places, including HHj 5.

¹¹²Proverbial. If one sits or lies (liggjandi means to ‘lie down’; it is rather unfortunate that the two sound the same in English) down and thinks too much over bad news, details will be left out, excuses thought up. It is best that Lock immediately tell Thunder what he has learned.

[Loki kvað:]

11 „Hefi’k ørendi, · ęrfiði ok:
2 Þrymr hęfir þinn hamar, · þursa dróttinn;
hann ęngi maðr · aptr of hęimtir
4 nema hōnum fōri · Freyju at kvęn.“

[R 17r/31]

“I have an errand, hardship also:
Thrim has thy hammer, the lord of Thurses.
It no man will fetch back,
unless he bring him Frow for a wife.”

12 Ganga þęir fagra · Freyju at hitta
2 ok hann þat orða · alls fyrst of kvað:
„Bitt-u þik, Freyja, · brúðar líni!
4 Vit skulum aka tvau · í jōtun-hęima.“

[R 17r/33]

Go they the fair Frow to find,
and he this word first of all did say:
“Bind thyself, Frow, with a bride’s linen!
We two shall drive into the Ettin-homes.”

2 hann ‘he’ | The speaker is either Thunder or Lock.

3 brúðar líni! ‘bride’s linen’ | i.e. bridal cloth.

13 Vreįð varð þá Freyja · ok fnasaði, 2 allr ása salr · undir bifðisk,
stōkk þat it mikla · męn Brísinga:
4 „Mik vęitst verða · ver-gjarnasta ef ek ęk með þér · í jōtun-hęima.“

[R 17v/1]

Wroth became Frow then, and snorted;
 the whole hall of the Eese shook beneath;
 down crashed the great Torc of the Brisings[†]— “Thou knowest that I will become the most man-eager, if I drive with thee into the Ettin-homes.”

3 męn Brisinga ‘Torc of the Brisings’ | A legendary jewel owned by Frow.

4 verða · ver-gjarnasta ‘become the most man-eager’ | Presumably Frow is speaking out of self-awareness of her own lustful inclinations, i.e., she will be gripped by uncontrollable lust. It is also possible that she complains about being accused of promiscuity by the other gods, but that is not the literal sense. For Frow’s promiscuity cf. Lok 30, and also st. 26 of that poem where Frie is likewise called ver-gjörn ‘man-eager’.

- 14 Sęnn vǫru ęsir · allir á þingi [R 17v/3] 2 ok ęsynjur · allar á máli, ok umb þat réðu · ríkir tívar:
 4 hvé þeir Hlórriða · hamar of sótti?

Soon were the Eese[†] all at the Thing[†],
 and the Ossens[†] all at speech,
 and of this counseled the mighty Tews[†]:
 How they Loride’s (= Thunder’s) hammer would get?

1–3 Sęnn ... tívar ‘Soon ... Tews’ | The exact same three lines also occur Bdr 1/1–3; see Note there.

- 15 Þá kvað þat Hęimdallr, · hvítastr ása, [R 17v/5]
 2 vissi vęl framm · sęm vanir aðrir:
 „Bindu vér Þór þá · brúðar líni;
 4 hafi hann it mikla · męn Brisinga!

Then quoth this Homedal[†], whitest of the Eese;
 he foreknew well like the other Wanes[†]:
 “Let us bind Thunder then, with a bride’s linen;
 he may have the great torc of the Brisings.

2 vissi vęl framm ‘he foreknew well’ | i.e. saw the future. Compare the derived adjective fram-víss ‘forth-wise, prescient.’

- 16 Lótum und hǫnum · hrynja lukla [R 17v/6]
 2 ok kven-váðir · umb kné falla

4 en á brjósti · bręiða steina ok hag-liga · umb hǫfuð typpum!“

Let us set by his side keys to jingle,
and women's garments to fall about the knees,
but on the breast broad stones,
and skillfully let us tip his head.¹¹³”

¹¹³ An interesting description of Wiking age bridal dress. As the everyday manager of the household, keys were the mark of a respectable married woman. The “broad stones” on the breast may be tortoise brooches (also mentioned in Vkv 25, 36.) or beads. The tipping of the head refers to some sort of bridal hat, perhaps a veil (TODO: Literature).

17 Þá kvað þat Þórr, · þrúðugr áss:
2 „Mik munu ęsir · argan kalla ef ek bindask lét · brúðar líni!“

[R 17v/8]

Then quoth this Thunder, the mighty Os: “Me will the Eese call queer†,
if I let myself be bound with a bride's linen!”

18 Þá kvað þat Loki · Laufęyar sonr:
2 „Þęgi þú, Þórr, · þęira orða!
Þęgar munu jǫtnar · Ǫs-garð búa
4 nema þú þinn hamar · þér of heĩmtir.“

[R 17v/9]

Then quoth this Lock, Leafie's son:
“Shut up thou, Thunder, with those words!
Shortly the Ettins will settle Osyard, unless thou thy hammer for thyself dost fetch!”

3–4 Þęgar ... heĩmtir. ‘Shortly ... dost fetch!’ | Guarding Osyard from transgressive and destructive forces was Thunder's task, and the hammer his most important tool. Cf. Hárþ TODO, and a couplet by the obscure poet Thurbern Disescold, cited in Skm 11: Þórr hefr Yggs með ǫrum · Ǫsgarð af þrek varðan. ‘Thunder has with the messengers of Ug [GODS] mightily guarded Osyard.’

19 Bundu þęir Þór þá · brúðar líni
2 ok hinu mikla · męni Brísinga, létu und hǫnum · hrynja lukla
4 ok kven-váðir · umb kné falla

[R 17v/11]

6 en á brjósti · bręða stęina ok hag-liga · of hęfuð typpðu.

Bound they Thunder then with a bride's linen,
and with the great Torc of the Brisings.
They set by his side keys to jingle,
and women's garments to fall about the knees,
but on the breast broad stones,
and skillfully they tipped his head.

20 Þá kvað þat Loki · Laufęjar sonr: „Mun'k auk með þér · ambótt vesa, vit skulum aka tvau · í jętun-ęęima.“

[R 17v/13]

Then quoth this Lock, Leafie's son:
“I will also with thee be a handmaid;
we two¹¹⁴ shall drive into the Ettin-homes.”

¹¹⁴The form used, tvau, is the neuter plural, i.e. one of the pair is female and the other male. This is either an error due to mindless copying of v. 11, or a backhanded insult against Thunder.

21 Sęnn vęru hafrar · ęęim of vrek­nir, skyndir at skęklum, · skyldu vęl renna;
bjęrg brotnuðu, · brann jęrð loga;
4 ók Óðins sonr · í jętun-ęęima.

[R 17v/14]

Soon were the he-goats[†] driven home, hastened onto the cart-poles—they were to run well.
Crag­ burst, earth burned with flame;
Weden's son [= Thunder] drove to the Ettin-homes.

1 hafrar ‘he-goats’ | Thunder's chariot was driven by his two goats; cf. the kenning Lord of He-goats (hafrar dróttinn, Hym 20, 31).

3 bjęrg brotnuðu, · brann jęrð loga ‘Crag­ burst, earth burned with flame’ | Thunder's driving is often heralded by cosmic disturbance. So, his arrival in Lok 55 is signalled by the mountains quaking. The description most similar to the present stanza is found in Thedwolf's Haustl 14–16, where crags (bjęrg) burst asunder and fires rage before him as he rides to fight Rungner[†]. A possibly Indo-European parallel is the Vedic myth of Indra breaking the mountains and releasing the rivers (as described most famously in RV 1.32). Cf. also Bdr 3 where the ground rumbles beneath the riding Weden.

22 Þá kvað þat Þrymr, · Þursa dróttinn:

[R 17v/16]

- 2 „Standið upp, jǫtnar, · ok stráið þekki!
 Nú fǫrið mér · Freyju at kván,
 4 Njarðar dóttur · ór Nóa-túnun.

Then quoth this Thrim, the lord of Thurses:

“Stand up, ye ettins, and strew the benches!

Now bring me Frow for a wife,

Nearth[†]’s daughter from the Nowetowns[†]!

- 23 Ganga hér at garði · gull-hyrnðar kýr,
 2 øxn al-svartir, · jǫtni at gamni,
 fjǫlð á’k męiðma, · fjǫlð á’k męnja;
 4 ęinnar mér Freyju · á-vant þykkir.“

[R 17v/18]

Here march to the estate golden-horned kine, all-black oxen to the ettin’s [my] pleasure.

A multitude I own of treasures, a multitude I own of torcs—only Frow I think me wanting.”

2 øxn al-svartir ‘all-black oxen’ | Formulaic, also occurring in Hym 18. That all-black (i.e. spotlessly black) oxen were most valued is seen by the pairing with “golden-horned”. One may also compare Saxo Grammaticus (2015)[1.8.12], where the hero Hadding has to atone for his slaying of a heavenly being by a sacrifice of dark-coloured victims (furvae hostiae): Siquidem propiciandorum numinum gratia Frø deo rem diuinam furuis hostiis fecit. Quem litationis morem annuo feriarum circuitu repetitum posteris imitandum reliquit. Frøblod Sueones uocant. ‘In order to mollify the divinities he [= Hadding] did indeed make a holy sacrifice of dark-coloured victims to the god Frø. He repeated this mode of propitiation at an annual festival and left it to be imitated by his descendants. The Swedes call it Frøblot.’ This ancient ritual taboo finds parallel even in the Tanakh, where animals dedicated to YHWH were to be without blemish (עֲדָנָה; Leviticus 1:3)

- 24 Vas þar at kveldi · of komit snimma
 2 ok fyr jǫtna · ǫl framm borit.
 ęinn át oxa, · áttu laxa,
 4 krásir allar, · þęr’s konur skyldu, drakk Sifjar verr · sáld þrjú mjaðar.

[R 17v/20]

There was the evening come early,

and for the ettins ale brought forth.

He [= Thunder] alone ate an ox, eight salmons,

all the dainties meant for the women;

drank Sib’s husband three sieves of mead.

3–5 Einn ... mjaðar. 'He alone ... of mead.' | Thunder is renowned for his great appetite; cf. Hym 15, where he eats two of Hymer's oxen. It is curious that the same kenning (Sifjar verr 'Sib's husband') is used in that stanza.

- 25 Þá kvað þat Þrymr, · þursa dróttinn: [R 17v/23]
 2 „Hvar sát-t-u brúðir · bíta hvassara?
 Sá'k-a brúðir · bíta enn bręðara
 4 né enn meira mjöð · mey of drekka!“

Then quoth this Thrim, the lord of Thurses:
 “Where sawest thou brides bite sharper?
 I never saw brides bite yet broader;
 nor yet more mead a maiden drink!”

- 26 Sat hin al-snotra · ambótt fyrir [R 17v/25]
 2 es orð of fann · við jötuns máli:
 „Át vętr Freyja · áttu nóttum,
 4 svá vas hón óð-fús · í jötun-heima.“

Sat the all-clever handmaid [= Lock] in front,
 who a word did find against the ettin's speech:
 “Frow ate naught for eight nights;
 so madly she longed for the Ettin-homes.”

- 27 Laut und línu, · lysti at kyssa, [R 17v/27]
 2 en hann útan stökk · ęnd-langan sal:
 „Hví eru ęndótt · augu Freyju?
 4 Þykki mér ór · augum brenna!“

He [= Thrim] looked 'neath the linen, lusted to kiss—but flung back out across the length of the hall—“Why are the eyes of Frow blazing?
 Methinks it burning from the eyes!”

4 Þykki mér ór · augum brenna! 'Methinks it burning from the eyes!' | The meter of this line is very poor: the first half-line is only three syllables long, and the alliteration falls on ór 'from', which has no reason to be stressed. It would be much improved by inserting ęldar 'fires' between augum 'eyes' and brenna 'burns', and this expression is actually attested in Gylf 51: Eldar brenna ór augum hans ok nęsum 'Fires burn from his eyes and nostrils'.

- 28 Sat hin al-snotra · ambótt fyrir [R 17v/29]
 2 es orð of fann · við jǫtuns máli:
 „Svaf vétr Freyja · átta nóttum,
 4 svá vas hón óð-fús · í jǫtun-hęima.“

Sat the all-clever handmaid in front,
 who a word did find against the ettin's speech:
 “Frow slept naught for eight nights;
 so madly she longed for the Ettin-homes.”

1 fyrir | add. f.f. R.

- 29 Inn kom hin arma · jǫtna systir, [R 17v/30]
 2 hin's brúð-féar · biðja þorði:
 „Lát þér af hǫndum · hringa rauða
 4 ef þú ǫðlask vill · ástir mínar, ástir mínar, · alla hylli!“

In came the wretched sister of the ettins, she who for the bride-fee [= Millner] dared ask:
 “Slide off from thy hands the red rings,
 if thou wilt win my love;
 my love, [and] all [my] holdness[†].”¹¹⁵

5 ástir mínar, · alla hylli ‘my love; all [my] holdness’ | Probably formulaic. There are no preserved parallels in poetry, but there may be one in Gylf 49 (excerpt, following the death of Balder): En er goðin vitkuðust, þá mælti Frigg ok spurði, hvern sá véri með ásum, er eignast vildi „allar ástir mínar (so TW; ástir hennar ‘her loves’ SU) ok hylli, ok vili bann riða á hel-veg ok freista, ef bann fái fundit Baldr, ok bjóða Helju útlausn, ef þon vill láta fara Baldr heim í Ás-garð.“ ‘But when the gods came back to their wits, then Frie spoke and asked which one among the Eese would own “all my loves and holdness, and will ride on the Hellway[†] and see if he may find Balder and offer Hell a ransom if she will let Balder come home to Osyrd.” We can tell from the citation of a Leeds-meter stanza at the end of ch. 49 (see Eddic Fragments below) that Snorre knew one or more now-lost Eddic poems about Balder's death, and it may be that one of these poems contained the same two long-lines as the present stanza. For such a sharing of whole lines cf. e.g. st. 14/1–3 above, which are identical to Bdr 1/1–3.

¹¹⁵The sister, who was apparently the one who asked for the Hammer, now has the audacity to ask Thunder (disguised as Frow) to give her the very rings on his hands.

- 30 Þá kvað þat Þrymr, · þursa dróttinn: [R 17v/32]
 2 „Berð inn hamar · brúði at vígja,

4 lęggið Mjöllni · í meýjar kné, vígið okkr saman · Várar hendil!“

Then quoth this Thrim, the lord of Thurses:
“Bear ye in the hammer the bride for to bless;
lay ye Millner in the maiden’s knee;
bless ye us together by Ware[†]’s hand!”

4 Várar ‘Ware’ | According to Snorre one of the goddesses, presiding over vows between men and women.
See Encyclopedia.

31 Hló Hlórriða · hugr í brjósti
2 es harð-hugaðr · hamar of þekki;
 Þrym drap hann fyrstan, · þursa dróttin,
4 ok étt jǫtuns · alla lamði.

[R 17v/34]

Laughed Lorida’s (= Thunder’s) heart in his chest, when, hard-hearted, he recognised the hammer.
Thrim he smote first, the lord of Thurses, and all the ettin’s lineage he beat lame.

32 Drap hann ina ǫldnu · jǫtna systur,
2 hin’s brúð-féar · of beðit hafði;
 hǫn skell of hlaut · fyr skillinga,
4 en hogg hamars · fyr hringa fjöld.
 Svá kom Óðins sonr · ęndr at hamri.

[R 18r/1]

He smote the aged sister of the ettins, she who for the bride-fee had asked;
she got a smiting for shillings,
and a blow of the hammer for a multitude of rings.
So came Weden’s son back to his hammer.

Introduction

A list of poetic synonyms set in a frame narrative of Thunder encountering a dwarf who wishes to marry his daughter. The synonyms are often archaic, representing older common Indo-European and Germanic words which have been displaced by innovations in the common register. Some are not found elsewhere.

The translation is currently incomplete.

The Speeches of Allwise

1 „Bękki bręiða · nú skal brúðr með mér
2 heim í sinni snúask;
hratat of męgi · mun hverjum þikkja;
4 hęima skal-at hvíld nema.“

“Spread out on the benches shall now the bride with me, turn home by my side.

A hurried engagement it will seem to each;
at home shall she not take rest!”

2 „Hvat ’s þat fira; · hví ert svá fölr umb nasar;
 2 vast-u í nótt með ná?
Þursa líki · þikki mér á þér vesa;
 4 ert-at-tu til brúðar borinn.“
 “What sort of man is this; why art thou so pale about the nose;
 wast thou tonight with a corpse?
 The likeness of a thurse methinks there to be on thee;
 thou art not born for a bride!”

3 „Al-víss ek hēiti · bý’k fyr jörð neðan
 2 á’k undir stēini stað.
vagna vers · ek em á vit kominn
 4 bręðði ęngi föstu hēiti fira.“
 “Allwise I am called; I live beneath the earth;
 I own under a stone my home.
 The man of wagons [= Thunder] I am come to visit;
 let no man break a firm promise!”

3 vagna vers ‘man of wagons’ | The “wagons” may here be constellations in the heavens, namely the Charles’ Wain (Great Bear, “Big Dipper”) and Women’s Wain (Little Bear, “Little Dipper”). Cf. Skm 31, where heaven/the sky is kenned land sólar ok tungls ok himin-tungla, vagna ok veðra ‘the land of sun and moon, and the heavenly bodies, wagons and winds.’

4 „Ek mun bręda · því-at ek brúðar á vas’k-a ek hęima · þá’s þér hęitit vas

 4 at sá ęinn es gjþf es með goðum.“
 “I will break it, for with the bride
 I have the greatest say as the father.
 I was not at home when it was promised thee,
 but he [I] alone is the giver among the gods!”

5 „Hvat ’s þat rekka · es í róðum tęlsk
 2 fljóðs ins fagr-glóa;
fjarra-flęina · þik munu fair kunna;
 4 hvęrr hęfir þik baugum borit?“

4 ok þat gjaf-orð geta.

“Wing-Thunder† am I called; I have widely roamed;
the son am I of Sidegrane.
Against my agreement shalt thou have this young girl,
and get that gift-word!”

7 Sáttir þínar · es ek vil snemma hafa
2 ok þat gjaf-orð geta.
 eiga vilja · heldr an án vera 4 þat it mjall-hvíta man.

“Thy agreement I wish to have soon,
and get that gift-word,
I would rather have than be without this snow-white girl.”

8 „Meyjar óstum · mun-a þér verða
2 vísi gæstr of varið, ef þú ór heimi kant · hverjum at segja

Introduction

The Thule of Righ (Rþ) is an interesting poem. It is only preserved in a single leaf in the C14th ms. W, where it follows and is written in the same hand as the Prose Edda and four grammatical treatises. Numerous leaves are unfortunately missing from the manuscript, among them the conclusion to Rþ.

The poem itself is difficult to date.

TODO: Dumezil three-part society. Irish influence + racial caste system. Many interesting things to write here!

The language of Rþ is highly formulaic, but also often unique to it. Of particular note are the alliteration between the adverb meirr ‘further’ and miðra, e.g. in st. 2/1: gekk meirr at þat.

The Thule of Righ

- 2 P1 Svá segja menn í fornum sǫgum, at einn-hverr af ǫsum, sá er Heimdallr [W 78r/1] hét, fór ferðar sinnar ok framm með sjóvar-ströndu nokkurri, kom at einum húsa-bó ok nefndisk Rigr; ęptir þęiri sǫgu er kvęði þetta.

So say men in ancient saws[†], that one of the Eese[†], he who was called Homedal[†], went on his journey and passed forth along a certain lake shore, came upon a lone homestead and called himself Righ—according to that saw is this poem.

came to a house—the door was wide open.
He took to go inside; fire was on the floor.
A couple sat there, hoary by the hearth:
Great-Grandfather and Great-Grandmother, old-fashioned.

 swarthy of skin, they called it Thrall.

2 hǫrund-svartan 'swarthy of skin' | emend.; hǫrfi svartan 'swarthy with flax(?)' W

1 jósu vatni ‘they sprinkled it with water’ | A reference to the Heathen naming ceremony wherein water would be poured on a newborn, somewhat resembling the Christian baptism. See Háv 156.

- 8 Hann nam at vaxa · ok v̥el dafna; [W 78r/TODO]
 2 vas þar á h̥ondum · hrokkít skinn, kropnir knúar, · [...]
 4 fingr digrir, · fúlligt and-lit, lotr hryggr, · langir h̥élar.

He took to grow and have it well;
 there on his hands was wrinkled skin,
 crooked knuckles, [...],
 stubby fingers, loathsome face,
 stooping back, long heels.

- 9 Nam m̥eirr at þat · magns of kosta, [W 78r/TODO]
 2 bast at binda, · byrðar g̥ørva; bar h̥eim at þat · hrís g̥erstan dag.

He took further after that to try his strength:
 bast to bind, burdens to make;
 he carried home after that brushwood on a gloomy day.

- 10 Þar kom at garði · g̥engil-b̥eina, [W 78r/TODO]
 2 aurr vas á iljum, · armr sól-brunninn, niðr-bjúgt es n̥ef, · n̥efndisk þír.

There came to the farm a gangle-boned woman:
 mud was on her footsoles, her arm sunburnt, downturned her face—she called herself Thew.

1 g̥engil-b̥eina ‘gangle-boned woman’ | Derogatory, somebody who (due to poverty) only travels by foot.

3 Þír ‘Thew’ | The name probably means ‘maid-servant’ or ‘female slave’. Unlike Thrall, it is not attested in any prose texts, but probably corresponds to OS thiwi ‘maid(-servant)’, being further root-related to þéa - þjá ‘to enthrall’, Proto-Norse þewar ‘servant’, OE þéow ‘slave, servant’.

- 11 M̥eirr settisk h̥on · miðra fl̥etja, [W 78r/TODO]

4 róddu ok ryndu, · rekkju gørðu
 Þrél ok Þir · Þrungrin dógr.

Further she set herself down on the middle of the bench;
 by her sat the son of the house [= Thrall].
 They spoke and whispered, made a bed—
 Thrall and Thew—in hard-pressed nights.

1 Meirr ... flætja | emend. based on other sts.; miðra flætja · meirr settisk hön W

Children they begot—they settled and were content—
 I think that they were called Rame and Feesner, Clour and Cledge, Chafser, Foulner, Drumbr, Digrald, Drant and Hazer, Lout and Ledgald.—They laid yard-fences, dunged fields, fed swine,
 herded goats, dug turf.

The daughters were Drumb and Cumb;
 Inkencalf and Arn-neb,
 Yeaze and Ambight, Oakentezen, Tattryhip and Tranebone—
 from thence are come the lines of thralls.

- 14 Gekk Rígr at þat · réttar brautir [W 78r/TODO]
 2 kom hann at hǫllu · hurð vas á skiði inn nam at ganga, · ęldr vas á golfi
 4 hjón sǫtu þar · heldu á syslu.

Went Rígr after that on straight highways;
 he came to a hall—the TODO.

He took to go inside; fire was on the floor.
 A couple sat there, busy with their chores:

2 hǫllu ‘hall’ | sens. and metr. emend., cf. st. TODO; om. W

- 15 Maðr tęlgði þar · męið til rifjar, [W 78r/TODO]
 2 vas skęgg skapat, · skǫr vas fyr ęnni skyrtu þręngva · skokkr vas á golfi.

A man there carved a stick into a loom-beam.
 His beard was shapely, locks hung down his forehead,
 his shirt tight; a toolbox was on the floor.

- 16 Sat þar kona, · sveigði rokk, [W 78r/TODO]
 2 bręiddi faðm, · bjó til váðar;
 sveigr vas á hǫfði, · smokkr vas á bringu,
 4 dúkr vas á halsi, · dvergar á ǫxlum;
 Afi ok Amma · ǫttu hús.

There sat a woman, twirled a distaff, stretched out her arms, readied a cloth.
 A scarf was on her head, a smock on her breast,
 a kerchief on her throat, brooches on her shoulders—Grandfather and Grandmother owned a house.

- 17 Rígr kunni þeim · rǫð at sęja, [W 78r/TODO]

 6 liðu męirr at þat · mǫnuðr níu.

Rígh knew to tell them counsels;
 rose from the table, resolved to sleep.
 Further he laid himself down in the middle of the bed,
 and on either side the couple of the hall.
 There he was after that for three nights in all;
 passed further after that nine months.

18 Jóð ól Amma, · jósu vatni, [W 78r/TODO]
 2 kǫlluðu Karl · kona sveip rípti rauðan ok rjóðan · riðuðu augu.

Grandmother begot a child, they sprinkled it with water, called it Churl; the woman wrapped him in cloth,
 red and ruddy; his eyes trembled.

19 Hann nam at vaxa · ok vǫl dafna, [W 78r/TODO]
 2 oxn nam at tǣmja · arðr at gørva hús at timbra · ok hlöður smíða
 4 karta at gørva · ok keyra plóg.

He took to grow and have it well;
 oxen he took to tame, the ard to make,
 houses to timber and barns to craft,
 carts to make and drive the plough.

20 Hęim óku þá · Hangin-luklu [W 78r/TODO]
 2 geita kyrtlu · giptu Karli.
 Snqr hęitir sú, · sęttisk und rípti.
 4 Bjuggu hjón, · bauga deildu, breiddu bléjur, · ok bú gørðu.

Homewards then drove Hangenkey,
 TODO, married her to Churl.
 Daughter-in-law she is called; she set herself under a cloth.
 The couple settled, shared their money, spread fine cloth and made a home.

- 21 Börn ólu þau, · bjuggu ok unðu;
 2 hét Halr ok Drengr, · Hǫldr, Þegn ok Smiðr, Bræðr, Bónði, · Bundin-skęggi,
 4 Búi ok Boddi · Bratt-skęggr ok Sęggr.

[W 78r/TODO]

Children they begot—they settled and were content—
 they were called Hale and Drang, Haled, Thane and Smith, Broad, Bond, Boundenshag,
 Bower and Bod, Brantshag and Sedge.

- 22 Enn hétu svá · ǫðrum ȳfnum

The linen hood jutted out, a brooch was on her chest, a long-hanging gown, her serk dyed blue;
her brow was brighter, her chest lighter,
her throat whiter than purest snow.

27 Rigr kunni þęim · rǫð at sęja; [W 78v/TODO]
2 męirr sęttisk hann · miðra flętja en á hlið hvára · hjón sal-kynna.

Rígh knew to tell them counsels,

Then took Mother a patterned cloth,
white of flax—she covered a platter.
She took after that thin loaves,
white of wheat—and covered the cloth.¹¹⁶

¹¹⁶Note the strong parallelism. The household can afford an excess of expensive fabric and bread; Mother can cover the platter with a patterned (męktr) flaxen cloth, and then cover the cloth with wheat-bread.

 2 jósu vatni— · Jarl létu heita;
 bleikt vas hár, · bjartir vangar,
 4 ǫtul vǫro augu · sem yrmlingi.

Mother begot a swain, swaddled him in silk;
 they sprinkled him with water—let him be called Earl.
 Pale was his hair, bright his cheeks, fierce were his eyes, like the young serpent.

4 ǫtul ... yrmlingi ‘fierce ... the young serpent’ | A person of noble stock being recognised as such through their appearance is a motif in Norse literature. Cf. esp. the incident at the beginning of HHund II, where Hallow, disguised as a thrall-woman, is almost caught due to his unslavelike eyes, which are, as in the present stanza, likewise said to be ǫtul ‘fierce, terrible’.

- 33 Upp óx þar · Jarl á flętjum; [W 78v/TODO]

 6 sverðum bregða, · sund at frémja.

Up grew Earl there on the floor-benches;
 he took to shake shields, fasten bow-strings,
 bend elmwood, shaft arrows,
 throw javelins, hoist frankish spears, ride horses, throw hounds (TODO)
 , brandish swords, practice swimming.

[W 78v/TODO]

There came out of a brush Righ, walking:
 Righ, walking, taught runes;
 he gave his own name; said that he had a son;
 he bade him take the ethel-plains:
 the ethel-plains, the ancient villages.

1–5 Kom ... bygðir. | Righ approaches his son, Earl. He reveals himself as his father and initiates him into the warrior aristocracy through teaching him the runes and giving him the noble title Righ (henceforth he will be known as Righ Earl). Finally he instructs him to set out and win land for himself, which Righ Earl soon does.

[W 78v/TODO]

He [= RIGH-EARL] rode further thence through the mirky wood, through the frosty fells, until to a hall he came—the shaft he took to hoist, shook the linden shield, leapt with the horse, and brandished the sword;

war he took to rouse, the plain he took to redden,
men he took to fell—he won the land.

There grew up the sons of Earl:

horses they tamed, shield-rims they bent, smoothened shafts, shook ashen spears.—

But Kin the Young knew runes:

ever-runes and life-runes.

4 Konr ungr ‘Kin the Young’ | The name is clearly a folk etymological pun on ON konungr ‘king’, who held the highest social rank, above even the earls.

Kin the Young rode through brushes and woods, flung bolts, hunted birds.
 Then quoth a crow—sat on a branch alone—
 “Why shalt thou, Kin the Young, hunt birds?
 Better it fit thee horses to ride,

- 44 Á Danr ok Danpr · dýrar hallir; [W 78v/TODO]
 2 ǫðra ǫðal · an ér hafið;
 þęir kunnu vel · kjól at ríða,
 4 ęgg at kęnna, · undir rjúfa.

Dan and Danp own costly halls:
 nobler ethel than ye do—
 they know well the ship to ride,
 the blade to teach, wounds to tear.

2 ér ‘ye’ | metr. emend.; þér ‘id.’ W, which is simply a younger form of ér, and shows that the poem has been linguistically modernised.

2 ǫðal ‘ethel’ | Ancestral farmland, in this case the eighteen homesteads owned by Earl.

3 kjól at ríða ‘ship to ride’ | i.e. to sail.

⁴ ęgg at kęnn ‘the blade to teach’ | i.e. to fight, wage war. A euphemism; to “teach someone the blade” is to fight him.

At this point leaf 78 ends. The rest of the poem is lost.

Eddic fragments from Snorre's Edda

A number of Eddic lines, stanzas and groups of stanzas are quoted in Snorre's Edda. The majority of them are taken from longer Eddic poems preserved in full in other manuscripts (primarily R and A), but a few are found nowhere else. These fragments will be edited in the present section.

The fragments have some things in common: they are generally pieces of spoken dialogue quoted in the context of longer narrative prose sections, and are, with one exception (Homedal's galder, see below), not introduced by reference to their source but rather with phrases like þá kvað hann 'then he quoth'.

A lost riddle-poem

This half-stanza is quoted in Gylf 2, being the second Eddic verse in the text, following Háv 1 in the same chapter, which is uttered by Yilfer himself when he enters the hall of the Eese. The whole section is clearly referencing other Eddic mythic wisdom contests and particularly reminiscent of Vaff.

- P1 Hann sá þrjú há-sėti ok hvert upp frá ǫðru, ok sátu þrír menn sinn í 2 hverju. Þá spurði hann, hvert nafn höfðingja þeira véri. Sá svarar, er hann leiddi inn, at sá, er í inu neðsta háseti sat, var konungr, ok heitir 4 Hárr, en þar nēst sá, er heitir Jafnhárr, en sá ofast, er Þriði heitir. Þá spyrr Hárr komandann, hvárt fleira er erendi hans, en heimill er matr 6 ok drykkir honum sem ǫllum þar í Háva holl. Hann segir, at fyrst vill hann spyrja, ef nokkurr er fróðr maðr inni. Hárr segir, at hann komi 8 eigi heill út, nema hann sé fróðari,

He [= Yilfer] saw three high-seats and each higher than the other, and three men sat there, each in his own seat. Then he asked what the names of those chieftains were. He who led him in answers that the one who sat in the lowest high-seat was a king called High, and next to him he who is called Evenhigh, and uppermost he who is called Third. Then High asks the guest whether he has any other errands, but food and drink will be freely offered him, like all men there in the High One's hall. He [= Yilfer] asks whether anyone within is a learned man. High says that he will not come out whole unless he be more learned [than he],

1 „ok statt-u framm · meðan þú fregn
2 sitja skal sá es segir.“

“and stand forth while thou askest; sit shall he who speaks!”

Nearth and Shede

The following passage is almost the whole of Gylf 23, excepting at the very end svá er sagt ‘so it is said’, after which is quoted Grm 11. Notably, the two stanzas cited here are also found translated in Saxo Grammaticus (2015)[1.8.18–19], where they are said to have been spoken by Hadding and Rainhild, respectively. For discussion Hopkins (2021).

P2 Inn þriði áss er sá, er kallaðr er Njorðr. Hann býr á himni, þar sem 2 heitir Nóatún. Hann reðr fyrir göngu vinds ok stillir sjá ok eld. Á hann skal heita til sé-fara ok til veiða. Hann er svá auðigr ok fé-séll, at 4 hann má gefa þeim auð, landa eða lausa-fjár. Á hann skal til þess heita.
Eigi er Njorðr ása étta. Hann var upp fódðr í Vana-heimi, en Vanir 6 gísluðu hann goðunum ok tóku í mót at gíslingu þann, er Hónir heitir.
Hann varð at sétt með goðum ok Vönum. Njorðr á þá konu, er Skaði 8 heitir, dóttir Þjatsa jötuns. Skaði vill hafa bú-stað þann, er átt hafði faðir hennar, þat er á fjöllum nokkurum, þar sem heitir Þrym-heimr, 10 en Njorðr vill vera nér sé. Þau séttust á þat, at þau skyldu vera níu nér í Þrym-heimi, en þá aðrar níu at Nóa-túnnum. En er Njorðr kom aftur 12 til Nóatúna af fjallinu, þá kvað hann þetta:

The third Os is that one who is called Nearth. He lives in the heaven in the place called Nowetowns. He rules the course of the wind, and stills sea and fire. On him shall one call for sea-faring and for hunting. He is so wealthy and blessed with money that he may give them a wealth of lands or loose property; on him shall one call for that sake. Nearth is not of the lineage of the Eese. He was brought up in Wanehome, but the Wanes gave him as a hostage to the gods, and in return got as hostage that one who is called Heener. He was used to reconcile the gods and the Wanes. Nearth has that woman who is called Shede, the daughter of the ettin Thedse. Shede wishes to have the dwelling which her father had owned, which lies on some fells in the place called Thrimham—but Nearth wishes to live by the sea. They agreed with each other that they would live for nine nights in Thrimham, but the other nine at Nowetowns. But when Nearth came back to the Nowetowns from the fell, he quoth this:

2 „Leĩð erumk fjöll, · vas'k-a lęngi á,
 2 nętr ęinar níu;
 ulfa þytr · mér þótti illr vesa
 4 hjá sęngvi svana.“

“Loathsome are the fells for me; I was not long thereon—but for nine nights.
 The wolves' howl seemed me evil next to the song of swans.”

P3 Þá kvað Skaði þetta:

Then Shede quoth this:

3 „Sofa né mát'k-a'k · sęvar beðjum á
 2 fugls jarmi fyrir;
 sá mik vękr · es af víði kęmr
 4 morgun hverjan mār.“

“I could not sleep on the beds of the sea for the bleating of the bird.
 He awakes me, when from the wide sea he comes,
 every morning, the mew.”

- 2 P4 Þá fór Skaði upp á fjall ok byggði í Þrym-heimi, ok ferr hon mjök á skíðum ok með boga ok skýtr dýr. Hon heitir ǫndur-goð eða ǫndur-dís.

Then Shede went up to the fells and dwelled in Thrimham, and she often goes on skis with her bow and shoots beasts. She is called ski-god or ski-dise.

Homedal's Galder (Heimdallargaldr)

This mysterious fragment is quoted in Gylf 27, the chapter describing Homedal, which is here reproduced in full. The fragment consists of two c-lines and appears to be the end of a stanza in the fitting meter Galders-law.

The same poem is mentioned again in Skm 15: Heimdallar hǫfuð heitir sverð. Svá er sagt, at hann var lostinn manns hǫfði í gegnum. Um þat er kveðit í Heimdallar-galdri, ok er síðan kallat hǫfuð mjǫtuðr Heimdallar 'A sword is called Homedal's head. So is said that he was run through with a man's head. About that it is sung in Homedal's galder, and henceforth the head is called Homedal's bane.'

- 2 P5 Heimdallr heitir einn. Hann er kallaðr hvíti áss; hann er mikill ok heilagr. Hann báru at syni meyjar níu ok allar systr; hann heitir ok Hallinskiði ok Gullintanni; tennr hans váru af gulli. Hestr hans heitir
4 Gulltoppr. Hann býr þar er heitir Himinbjörg við Bifröst; hann er vǫrðr goða ok sitr þar við himins enda at gæta brúarinnar fyrir berg-risum.
6 Hann þarf minna svefn en fugl. Hann sér jafnt nótt sem dag hundrað rasta frá sér; hann heyrir ok þat, er gras vex á jörðu eða ull á sauðum,

His horse is called Goldtop. He lives at the place called the Heavenbarrows near Bivrest. He is the Watchman of the Gods and sits there at Heaven's end to guard the bridge against barrow-risers. He needs less sleep than a bird. Both night and day he sees a hundred rests away from him; he also hear when grass grows on the ground or wool on sheep, and everything which sounds louder. He has the basoon called the Horn of Yell, and his blowing can be heard in all realms. Homedal's sword is called a man's head. Here it says so: [...] And further he himself says in Homedal's Galder:

Gna and the Wanes

The following passage is from Gylf 35, which lists the Ossens[†].

P6 Fjórtánda Gná, hana sendir Frigg í ymsa heima at ørindum sínum. Hon
2 á þann hest, er renn lopt ok lög, er heitir Hóf-varpnir. Þat var eitt sinn, er hon reið, at vanir nokkvörir sá reið hennar í loptinu. Þa mælti einn:

The fourteenth is Gna; Frie sends her into every home to do her errands. She owns the horse who runs through air and sea, and is called Hoofwarpner. It was one time when she rode that some Wanes saw her riding in the air. Then one spoke:

5 „Hvat þar flýgr, · hvat þar ferr,
2 eða at lopti liðr?“

“What flies there, what fares there, or passes through the air?”

P7 Hon svarar:

She answers:

6 „Né ek flýg, · þó ek fæ
2 ok at lopti lið'k á Hóf-varpni, · þeim's Ham-skæpir
4 gat við Garð-rofu.“

“I fly not, though I fare,
and pass through the air,
on Hoofwarpner, whom Hamsherper
begot with Yardrove.”

P8 Af Gnár nafni er svá kallat, at þat gnéfar, er hátt ferr:

From Gna's name it is so called that something which fares high up protrudes.

Balder's Death

Gylf 49 contains the narrative of Balder's death, beginning with his ominous dreams, and ending with the Eese failing to “weep him out of Hell” (for a summary and discussion of the myth and its attestations, see the introduction to Vsp 31–33). At the end of the chapter, a single Leeds-meter speech-stanza is quoted.

P9 Því nēst sendu  sir um allan heim  rind-reka at bi ja, at Baldr v ri
2 gr tinn  r Helju, en allir ger u þat, menninir ok kykvendin ok j r in

6 g gr sat; hon nefndist Þ kk. Þeir bi ja hana gr ta Baldr  r helju, hon segir:

Next after that the Eese sent an errand-runner through all the Home[†], to ask that Balder be wept out of hell. And all did that, the men and the beasts and the earth and the stones and trees and all bedrock, as thou must have seen, that these things weep when they come out of cold and into heat. When the messengers journeyed home, and had ran their errand well, they find in a certain cave that a gow[†] sat there; she called herself Thanks. They ask her to weep Balder out of hell. She says:

7 „Þökk mun gráta · þurrum tórum
2 Baldrs bál-farar;
kyks né dauðs · naut'k-a Karls sonar
4 hafi Hæl því's hęfir.“

“Thanks will weep—with dry tears for Balder's pyre-journey [DEATH].
Neither alive nor dead did I benefit from Churl's son [= Balder];
let Hell have what she has!”

P10 En þess geta menn, at þar hafi verit Loki Laufeyjarson, er flest hefir illt 2 gørt með ásum.

But men guess that this must have been Lock, Leafy's son, who has done the most evil among the Eese.

Thunder's Journey to Garfrith

Skm 26, here edited in part, is the only surviving retelling of Thunder's journey to the ettin Garfrith, and his following fight with, and slaying of, him and his two daughters, Yelp and Grope. This was apparently a well-known story, and is also mentioned in Vetr 1/1b (quoted in Skm 11, which lists kennings for Thunder): stétt of Gjǫlp dauða 'thou didst step over the dead Yelp'. The prose of Skm 26 seems to be based on an earlier, now-lost poem in Leeds-meter, from which it quotes two stanzas. The first is found in all four main manuscripts, while the second is found only in U. Both are spoken by Thunder and closely resemble each other stylistically, which is why they most likely come from the same poem.

- P11 Þá fór Þórr til ár þeirar, er Vimur heitir, allra á mest. Þá spennti hann sik
 2 megin-gjörðum ok studdi for-streymis Gríðar-völ, en Loki helt undir megin-gjarðar. Ok þá er Þórr kom á miðja ána, þá óx svá mjök áin, at 4 uppi braut á ǫxl honum. Þá kvað Þórr þetta:

Then Thunder journeyed to that river which is called Wimbre, greatest of all rivers. Then he wrapped his might-girdle around himself and leaned upon Grith's stave against the stream, and Lock held up the might-girdle. And when Thunder came to the middle of the river, then it waxed so great that it broke over his shoulders. Then Thunder quoth this:

- 8 „Vax-at-tu nú, Vimur, · alls mik þik vaða tíðir 2 jǫtna garða í;
 vætst, ef þú vœx · at þá vœx mér ős-męgin
 4 jafn-hátt upp sem himinn.“

“Wax not now, O Wimbre, as I wish to wade through thee into the yards of the ettins.
 Thou knowest, if thou waxest, then my os-might waxes up as high as the heaven.”

- P12 Þá sér Þórr uppi í gljúfrum nokkurum, at Gjalp, dóttir Geirrðar stóð
 2 þar tveim megin árinna, ok gerði hon ár-vøxtinn. Þá tók Þórr upp ór ánni stein mikinn ok kastaði at henni ok mælti svá: „At ósi skal á 4 stemma.“ Eigi missti hann, þar er hann kastaði til, ok í því bili bar hann at landi ok fekk tekit reyni-runna nokkurn ok steig svá ór ánni. Því er 6 þat orð-tak haft, at reynir er björg Þórs.

Then Thunder sees that up in some certain gorges Yelp, daughter of Garfrith, stood on both sides of the river, and she caused the river's growth. Then Thunder took up from the river a great stone and threw it at her and spoke so: “At its source shall the river be dammed.” He did not miss his target, and in that moment he threw himself towards land and got hold of a certain rowan shrub, and thus stepped out of the river. From this comes the saying that the rowan is Thunder's deliverance.

1–2 stóð þar tveim megin árinna, ok gerði hon ár-vøxtinn. ‘stood on both sides of the river, and she caused the river's growth’ | She stood with her legs spread and befouled the river.

- P13 En er Þórr kom til Geirrððar, þá var þeim fé-lögum vísat fyrst í geita-
 2 hús til her-bergis, ok var þar einn stóll til sētis, ok sat Þórr þar. Þá varð hann þess varr, at stóllinn fór undir honum upp at réfri. Hann 4 stakk Gríðar-veli upp í raftana ok lét sígast fast á stólinn. Varð þá brestr mikill, ok fylgði skrékr. Þar hófðu verit undir stólinum dótr Geirrððar, 6 Gjálp ok Greip, ok hafði hann brotit hrygginn í báðum. Þa kvað Þórr:

And when Thunder came to Garfrith's home the fellows were first shown into a goathouse for lodgings, and therein one chair was for sitting, and Thunder sat down on it. Then he noticed that the chair beneath him was moving up toward the roof. He thrust Grith's stave up against the rafters and made it push firm onto the chair. Then there was a great crack, followed by a shriek; there beneath the chair had been the daughters of Garfrith, Yelp and Grope, and he had broken both their backs. Then Thunder quoth:

- 9 „Einu sinni · neytta'k alls meginis
 2 jǫtna gǫrðum í þá's Gjǫlp ok Greip, · dótr Geir-raðar, 4 vildu hefja mik til himins.“

“Only one time I used all my might
 in the yards of the ettins,
 when Yelp and Grope, daughters of Garfrith, would lift me to the heaven.”

On the Making of Glapner

The following stanza about the making of Glapner, the fetter used to bind the Fenrerswolf, is found in the short work on kennings today called the Little Scald (Lítla skálda), which text was probably used as a source by Snorre; see further Males (2020, pp. 129–47). A variant of this stanza is transparently paraphrased in Gylf 28: Hann var gorr af sex blutum: af dyn kattarins ok af skeggi konunnar ok af rótum bjargsins ok af sinum bjarnarins ok af anda fisksins ok af fogls bráka. ‘It [Glapner] was made of six things: of the cat’s din and of the woman’s beard and of the mountain’s root and of the bear’s sinews and of the fish’s breath and of the fowl’s spittle.’ The two differences—bráka ‘spittle’ for mjolk ‘milk’, and the inverted order of lines 2 and 3—suggest that Snorre had access to a somewhat different version. It is not attributed to any named poem.

10 Ór kattar dyn · ok ór konu skeggi,
2 ór fískis anda · ok ór fugla mjólk, ór bergs rótum · ok bjarnar sinum,
4 ór því vas hann Gleipnir gǫrr.

“From cat’s din and from woman’s beard;
from fish’s breath and from fowls’ milk;
from mountain’s roots and bear’s sinews;
from this was Glapner made.”

Norse Heroic Poetry

Lay of Wayland (Vǫlundarkviða)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C10th (0.428)–early C11th (0.475)

Meter: Ancient-words-law

Introduction

The Lay of Wayland (Vkv) is a psychologically complex, finely wrought poem.

Wayland gets his revenge on the whole royal household. He murders Nithad's two young sons (affectionately, his “bear-cubs”) and thus ends his male lineage. Likewise he defangs Nithad's “cunning wife” (she is never called anything else) by reducing her once powerful counsels to cold words; and finally he rapes Beadhild, depriving her of her maidenhood and value in marriage. They are thus reduced to the same state of complete powerlessness as he himself experienced, something clearly seen in the repetition of the adjective viljalauss ‘powerless’; in st. 12 it describes Wayland after he wakes in shackles, but in st. 31 Nithad uses it to refer to his own mental state after the deaths of his sons. This sense of hopelessness concludes the poem in Beadhild's haunting words: “I nowise knew withstand him; I nowise could withstand him.”

From the other versions of the story it is known that Beadhild gave birth to a son, Woody (OE Wudga, ThidS Viðga, in Danish ballads Vidrik Verlandson). He went on to become a great hero, and in the later heroic ballads by far eclipses his father. His birth seems heavily foreshadowed by Wayland forcing Nithad to swear an oath in st. 33, but he is nowhere directly mentioned in the poem, probably for artistic reasons.

Apart from this lay there is one other telling of the full story, namely the Strand of Wayland the Smith in ThidS. While written in Old Norse, it is clear from the proper names and content that it is based on German sources (probably heroic ballads). Thus the native form Vǫlundr is replaced with Velent [sic], Niðuðr with Niðungr. Interestingly there is a note within it showing that the native form was still known, namely about “Velent, the excellent smith, whom Warrings (væringjar) call Wayland (Vǫlundr)”.

Apparently Wayland was so famous that “all men seem to praise his workmanship so, that the maker of any smith’s work which is made better than other works, is called a Wayland (Völundr) with regards to workmanship.”

Far more stark than minor differences of language is that of tone. The psychological complexity and tension of the older redaction is almost entirely gone: Wayland is no longer a mysterious wild man, but a chivalrous knight who can escape from any peril through his ingenuity and craftsmanship. He is not kidnapped out of Nithad’s greed, nor hamstrung out of the suspicion of his cruel wife, but rather a loyal servant of Nithad’s, banished from the kingdom after defending himself against the king’s corrupt steward, and hamstrung after being caught attempting to poison the king’s food in revenge.

Most frustratingly the personality of Beadhild is entirely expulged. She is the anonymous “king’s daughter”, an unnamed maiden (jungfrú, a borrowing from Low German) who is peacefully seduced by Wayland and quickly falls in love with him. Likewise the person of Nithad’s cunning wife is completely gone, and the murder of his sons no longer ends his lineage, since he has another, older son who survives him and takes over the kingdom. Wayland still flies away laughing after telling Nithad what he has done, but only four years (his son with Beadhild is three years old) later reconciliates with Nithad’s son, retrieves Beadhild and their son and lives a long life as a famous craftsman.

With this it is clearly seen that the story by the time of the ThidS had been heavily distorted, a tragic victim of medieval romantic sensibilities. It does not have any high literary value, but is of interest since it shows the wide reception and variation of the narrative.

Finally there are also traces of the story in the Anglo-Saxon tradition, where it is alluded to in both Walder and Deer, the latter of which particularly emphasising the powerlessness felt by Wayland and Beadhild (thus being much closer in spirit to the present poem than to ThidS). Parts of the narrative are depicted on the early C8th Frank’s casket, where it is as prominent as the depiction of the Adoration of the Magi—a true testament to the weight with which it was regarded within that culture.

Nithad was a king called in Sweden. He had two sons and one daughter; she was called Beadhild. Three brothers were there; the sons of a king of the Finns. One was called Slayfinn, the other Eyel, the third Wayland. They fared on skis and hunted wild beasts. They came into the Wolfdales and made for themselves houses there. There is a lake there which is called the Wolfsea. Early in the morning they found on the lake-shore three women, and they span linen. There were by them their swan-hames[†]; those were Walkirries. There were two daughters of king Ladwigh: Ladguth Swanwhite and Harware Elwight. The third was Alerune, daughter of Choser[†] of Walland[†]. The men took the women to their halls with them. Eyel got Alerune, and Slayfinn Swanwhite, and Wayland the Elwight. The couples lived there for seven winters; then the women left to attend battles, and did not come back. Then Eyel fared on skis to search for Alerune, but Slayfinn searched for Swanwhite—but Wayland stayed in the Wolfdales. He was the most skilled craftsman whom men know of in the ancient saws. King Nithad had him taken, as it is here sung of:

Maidens flew from the south through Mirkwood
 —young elwights—to fulfill orlay[†].
 They on the lake-shore set down to rest;
 the southern ladies span costly linen.

1 Myrk-við ‘Mirkwood’ | Mirkwood is surely referenced for its association with the war-ravaged lands of the Gots and Huns; a natural environment for Walkirries.

2 al-vitr ‘elwights’ | i.e. “strange beings, foreign wights”, continuing a hypothetical alja-wibtiz*.

2 ør-løg drýgja; ‘fulfill orlay’ | That is, to fulfill their preordained destinies, and act according to their innate nature, as described in P1 and st. 3. Clunies Ross (2005)[103] and some other editors see a sign of English influence in these words; they translate drýgja ør-løg as “engage in war”, considering ør-løg a semantic borrowing from the OE cognate of Dutch oorlog ‘war’. This is unnecessary; ON ør-løg otherwise means ‘fate, destiny’, and so may its OE cognate, as seen by the equivalent phrase found in l. 29 of a poem on the Christian Doomsday (TODO?), where a man going to Hell for his sins qnd þonne á tó ealdre · or·leg dreógeð ‘and then for ever and ever [he] suffers his orlay’.

They stayed then for seven winters after that,

 and the ninth did need divorce them.

The maidens longed for the Mirky wood:
the young elwights, to fulfill orlay.

2 linn-baugum ‘serpent-bighs’ | It is unclear whether this word refers to rings actually shaped like snakes or is merely a poetic description of twisted rings. Archeological examples of the former include the so-called “snake-head rings” (German Schlangenkopfringe, Swedish ormbuvudringar) from the Migration Period, and the snake- or dragon-shaped armet from the Wiking Age found in a hoard in Undrom, Ångermanland, northern Sweden (108822 HST). <https://samlingar.shm.se/object/5C5658C4-0813-4DFF-947F-E5E4C4BAB965>.

1 Níara ‘the Nears’ | An obscure tribe, perhaps the residents of Närke, an ancient province of Sweden. See Encyclopedia.

3 nęglðar vǫru brynjur ‘nailed were their byrnies’ | The “byrnies” here are apparently some kind of costly plate armour.

English “livelong”) occurs in three other places: sts. 16 and 30 of the present poem, and st. 3 of Oddrgr. ęnd-langr salr ‘endlong hall’ occurs in two additional places: st. 27 of Þrk and st. 3 of Skm.

 Came there from the hunt the stormy-eyed shooter:
 Wayland passing over a long way.

2 fyr ęinn útan, · es af létu ‘save for one, which off they slid’ | This high is probably the one mentioned in sts. 17 and 26, since Beadhild has it already when Wayland is brought back after being captured. It may have been kept for its particular beauty. Finnur Jónsson (1932) writes (my translation from the Danish): “The ring which Nithad kept must have had special properties, and distinguished itself before others. There is no doubt that the ring is a flight ring; whether this was clear to the poet is however questionable. This much is certain, that Wayland seems to be able to fly away only after he has got back the ring; that is, the one which Beadhild brings him.” This is by no means certain. Wayland was a craftsman of legendary skill and could certainly have built wings for himself without a magical flight-ring. That is what he does in the Low German version; it is also what happens in the related Daidalos myth. For both of these see the introduction to the present poem.

1 bauga talði ‘bighs he counted’ | Wayland’s grief and loneliness are skilfully illustrated by his counting all seven hundred rings, something which had apparently become a habit for him.

2 alfa ljóði ‘prince of elves’ | Probably referring to Wayland’s nature as a half-dæmonic Wild Man, something also seen by his hunting of bears, skiing, and fierce gaze. Cf. 14/2b and 32/1b, where Nithad calls him vísi alfa ‘overseer of elves’.

óra aura, · í Ulf-dölum?
4 Gull vas þar eigi · á Grana leiðu, fjarri hugða’k vart land · fjöllum Rínar.“

[R 18v/10]

Now called Nithad, lord of the Nears:
“Where didst thou, Wayland, overseer of elves, get our ounces in the Wolfdales?
Gold was there not on Grane[†]’s path;
far I thought our land from the fells of the Rhine.¹¹⁷” ¹¹⁷Grane was the horse of the legendary hero Siward[†], who slew the dragon Fathomer[†] and took his gold.

Nithad’s speech is sarcastic: “Is there a dragon’s hoard in the Wolfdales?”

[Völundr kvað:] 15 „Man’k at meiri · męti óttum,
2 es vér heil hjú · heima vorum:
Hlaðguðr ok Hęrvor · borin vas Hlōðvé,
4 kunn vas Qlrún · Kíars dóttir.“

[R 18v/13]

“I recall that we owned greater wealth
when we a whole household were at home.
Ladguth and Harware were born to Ladwigh;
known was Alerune, Choser’s daughter.”¹¹⁸

¹¹⁸Wayland responds rather cryptically and almost seems to be speaking to himself. By asserting the noble lineages of the three swan-wives he gives a legitimate origin for his wealth, but he is aware that Nithad neither believes him nor cares.

His teeth are bared when he is shown the sword, reminiscent are his eyes to the gleaming serpent’s.

 Snithe ye from him the might of his sinews,

 4 Völundr kvað:

So it was done that the sinews in his houghs were cut, and he was placed on the lonely islet which there lay before the land, which was called Seastead. There he forged for the king every kind of jewelry. No man dared go to him save the king alone. Wayland quoth:

 and I hardened as most pleasingly seemed.

 And the bowls which were under their curls

1 húna 'bear-cubs' | An affectionate term for young boys, perhaps relating to warrior-initiations done in bear-skins. This word is repeated by Nithad in st. 32 and mirrored by Wayland in st. 34.

2 fēn fǫturs 'the fetter's fen' | Unclear. The smithy or islet may be Wayland's "fetter", in which case he buried them in a fen on the island.

3 þér skálar, · es und skǫrum vǫru 'those bowls which were under their curls' | i.e. their skulls.

[R 19r/5]

And from the eyes arkenstones
 he sent to the cunning wife of Nithad.
 And from the teeth of the two
 he struck breast-brooches, sent to Beadhild.

1 jarkna-stęina 'arkenstones' | Probably round crystals.

Something appears to be missing here, but the narrative can be gleaned. Beadhild breaks the high given to her by Nithad (mentioned above in sts. 10—see note there—and 17), and fears her father's anger. She goes to Wayland in secret and asks him to mend it. The sight of this ring reminds Wayland of his wife, and he decides to rape Beadhild.

26 Þá nam Bǫðvildr · baugi at hrósa
 2 [...] · es brotit hafði,

[R 19r/7]

Then Beadhild began the bigh to praise, [...] which she had broken,
 “I dare not tell, save to thee alone.”

2 [...] | The meter requires a half-line here, perhaps containing a repetition of 1a: baugi at brósa ‘the bigh to praise’.

Völundr kvað: 27 „Ek bóti svá · brest á gulli, [R 19r/8]

He overcame her with beer—for he knew better—so that she in the seat did fall asleep.
 “Now have I avenged my harms, all, save one, on the insidious ones.”

1 því-at bętr kunni ‘for he knew better’ | i.e. he was more cunning than her.

4 nema ęinna ‘save one’ | Presumably the deprivation of his mobility due to the hamstringing, which he resolves by crafting his flight suit.

4 i-við-gjarna ‘insidious ones’ | King Nithad and his house.

 29 „Vęl ek,“ kvað Völundr, · „verða’k á fitjum, [R 19r/12]

Laughing, Wayland threw himself in the air;
weeping, Beadhild went from the island,
grieved the lover’s flight and the father’s wrath.

1 fitjum ‘paddles’ | CV: fit ‘the webbed foot of water-birds’, here a reference to the flight-suit which allows Wayland to regain his freedom.

2 30 Úti stendr kunnig · kv̥on Níðaðar, [R 19r/14]

But he on the courtyard set down to rest.

“I am always awake, powerless;
I sleep the least since my sons died.
My head turns cold; cold seem thy counsels—
I would now but that I with Wayland may speak.”

1 Vaki’k á-valt · vilja-lauss ‘I am always awake, powerless’ | This line references sts. 12 and 20, but there Wayland was the powerless man who never slept. By his revenge the suffering has been transferred onto Nithad.

3 k̥old erumk r̥oð þín ‘cold seem thy counsels’ | A severe insult to a woman of power, for such counsels to her husband was how she would influence worldly affairs. In this way Wayland’s revenge reaches also Nithad’s wife.

by the steed’s bough and the sword’s edge—that thou shalt not torment the wife of Wayland, nor of my bride become the bane,
though a wife we might own whom ye might know;
or a babe might own within the hall.

2–3 at skips ... egg ‘by deck ... of sword’ | Nithad must swear the oaths by his tools of trade as a warrior; by extension on his martial honour. Cf. HHund II, where broken oaths are to come back “biting” the oath-breaker by cursing his ship, horse, and sword, in that order.

4 kvelj-at ‘shalt not torment’ | A negative imperative. The normal 2nd. sg. imper. of kvelja is kvel, but the negative clitic -at causes the -j- to reappear in a rare liaison effect. See Rosenberg (2024): “A Norse sandhi?” (TODO: add to bibliography).

4–5 kvön Völundar ‘wife of Wayland’, brúði minni ‘my bride’ | Beadhild, who is now pregnant.

And from the teeth of the two
I struck breast-brooches, sent to Beadhild.
Now goes Beadhild swollen with child;
the only daughter of you both.”

4 ǵinga dóttir · ykkur þeggja. ‘the only daughter of you both’ | Formulaic, near-identical to HarS st. 25/1–2: (Vaki, Angantýr, · vǵkr þik Hǵrvǫr, // ǵinga dóttir · ykkur Svǵfu. ‘Wake, Ogentew: Harware awakes thee, the only daughter of thee and Sweve.’ Cf. also Beow 375a, 2997b: árgan dohtor ‘only daughter (accusative)’.)

 “Rise up, O Thankred, my best thrall; bid Beadhild, the brow-white maiden,
 to go, fair-clothed, with her father to counsel.”
- 2–3 mey hina brá-hvítu ... fagr-varið ‘the brow-white maiden ... fair-clothed’ | Nithad still has some doubt in his heart and by these words tries to convince himself of the innocence of his daughter (mér ‘maiden, virgin’).

 “True it is, Nithad, as he told thee—
 I and Wayland stayed together on the islet for one heavy hour—it should never have been.
 I nowise knew withstand him;
 I nowise could withstand him.”

4 vinna | metr. and sens. emend.; om. R

1 sagði ‘he told’ | Beadhild knows that Wayland is the only one aware of the rape and thus deduces that he told her father. She makes a subtle change in the conjugation from her father’s general third person plural (“what they told”), to the specific singular form (“what he told”).

4–5 kunna ‘knew’, mátta ‘could’ | Beadhild was totally incapable of defending her honour, both mentally (kunna ‘to know, understand’) and physically (mega ‘to have strength to do, avail’. — As Finnur Jónsson (1932) comments, an excellent final stanza.

3 Skríði-at þat skip, · es und þér skríði,
2 þótt óska-byrr · eptir leggisk!
Renni-a sá marr, · es und þér renni,
4 þótt fiendr þína · forðask ęigir!

May the ship not glide, which glides beneath thee,
though it has a wished-for gust behind it!
May the sea not run, which runs beneath thee,
though from thy foes thou must escape!

4 Bíti-a þér þat sverð, · es þú bregðir,
2 nema sjölfum þér · syngvi of hofði!
Þá vęri þér hęfnt · Hęlga dauða,
4 ef þú vęrir vargr · á viðum úti,

6 hęfðir ęigi mat, · nema á hręum spryngir!“

May the sword not bite for thee, which thou brandishest, save it sing over thy very own head!
Then were on thee Hallow’s death avenged,
if thou wert a wolf in the woods outside,

deprived of wealth and all pleasure;
hadst no food, save thou plundered carrion!“

Dagr kvað: 5 „Ör ert, systir, · ok ör-vita,

 4 brúðr baug-varið · ok búrir þínir.

Thee thy brother offers red bighs,
all Wendelswigh and the Wighdales.
Have half the realm as recompense for the injury,
O bigh-adorned bride—and thy sons, too.

“I will not sit so happy in the Sevefells, at dawn nor night, that I should be content with life, unless the retinue of the man of praise were struck with light:
[and] beneath the ruler ran Wighblaw hither, wont to the golden bit—[and] I might greet the prince!

8 Svá hafði Hēlgi · hrēdda gǫrva
 2 fjáendr sína alla · ok frēndr þeira, sem fyr ulfi · óðar rynni
 4 gēitr af fjalli, · gēiska fullar!

So would Hallow have terrified his enemies all and their kinsmen, like from a wolf did madly run goats down a fell, full of fright.

So did Hallow surpass the princes like the nobly shaped ash the thorn, or the deer-calf, dew-besprinkled, who fares higher than all beasts,
 and its horns gleam against heaven itself.”

1–5 ALL | Cf. the very similar description of Siward in Guðr II 2.

P2 Haugr var gǫrr eptir Helga. En er hann kom til Valhallar, þá bauð
 2 Óðinn hánnum ǫllu at ráða með sér. Helgi kvað:

A barrow was made for Hallow. But when he came to Walhall Woden offered him to rule everything together with him. Hallow quoth:

10 „Þú skalt, Hundingr, · hversjum manni
 2 fót-laug geta · ok funa kynda;
 hunda binda, · hesta gétu,
 4 gefa svinum soð, · áðr sofa gangir!“

“Thou shalt, Hunding, for every man make a foot-bath and kindle the fire, bind the hounds, feed the horses, give broth to the swine—before thou mightst go to sleep!”

P3 Ambótt Sigrúnar gekk um aptan hjá haugi Helga ok sá at Helgi reið til 2 haugs'ins með marga menn. Ambótt kvað:

Syerun's maid-servant walked by Hallow's barrow at evening, and saw that Hallow rode to the barrow with many men. The maid-servant quoth:

11 „Hvart 'ru þat svik ein · es séa þikkjumk
2 eða ragna rök · ríða mennt dauðir, es jóa yðra · oddum keyrið,
4 eða es hildingum · hæim-för gefin.“

“Either these are only tricks, as I seem to see —or the Rakes of the Reins[†]?—dead men riding;
as ye drive your steeds on by spear-points—or are the princes granted leave to go home?”

[Einn þeira kvað:]

12 „Es-a þat svik ein · es séa þikkisk
2 né aldar rof · þótt-u oss lítir, þótt vér jóa óra · oddum keyrim,
4 né es hildingum · hæim-för gefin.“

“It is not only tricks, as thou seemest to see—nor the Ripping of the Age, although thou behold us;
although we drive our steeds on by spear-points
the princes are not granted leave to go home.”

2 aldar rof ‘Ripping of the Age’ | Formulaic. Cf. TODO rjúfask regin. This is the same root, only zero-grade.

P4 Heim gekk ambótt ok sagði Sigrúnu:
The maid-servant walked home and said to Syerun:

13 „Út gakk Sigrún, · frá Sęfa-fjollum
2 ef þik folks jaðarr · finna lystir;
upp 's haugr lokinn, · kominn es Hęlgi!
4 Dólg-spor dreyra · döglingr bað þik at þú sár-dropa · svęfja skyldir.“

“Go out, O Syerun from the Sevefells, if thou hast lust to find the leader of the troop!
 The barrow is unlocked; Hallow is come!
 The ruler of bloody wounds bade thee that thou his wound-drops shouldst soothe.”

P5 Sigrún gekk í haug’inn til Helga ok kvað:

Syerun walked into Hallow’s barrow, and quoth:

- 14 „Nú em’k svá fegin · fundi okkrum
 2 sem át-frękir · Óðins haukar es val vitu, · varmar bráðir,
 4 eða dǫgg-litir · dags-brún séa.“

“Now do I so rejoice at our meeting, like do the ravenous hawks of Weden [RAVENS]
 when they know corpses, warm venison, or, gleaming with dew, they see the day’s brow [DAWN].

- 15 Fyrr vil’k kyssa · konung ó·lifðan
 2 an þú blóðugri · brynju kastir;
 hár ’s þitt, Helgi, · hélu þrungit, 4 allr es vísi · val-dǫgg slęinn, hendr úr-svalar · Hǫgna mági;
 6 hvé skal’k þér, buðlungr, · þess bót of vinna?“

Sooner would I kiss the unliving king, than thou the bloody byrnie mightst cast away!
 Thy hair is, O Hallow, with hoarfrost swollen;
 the prince is all with corpse-dew [BLOOD] whipped;
 the hands spray-cold on Hain’s in-law [= Hallow].—
 How shall I for thee, O noble, remedy that?”

4 allr es vísi · val-dǫgg slęinn ‘the prince is all with corpse-dew whipped’ | Cf. Bdr 5, where the dead wallow says something similar.

[Hēlgi kvað:]

- 16 „Eín veldr þú, Sigrún · frá Sefafjollum,
 2 es Hēlgi es · harm-dogg sléinn:
 Grétr þú, gull-varið, · grimmum tórum,
 4 sól-björt suð-rón, · áðr þú sofa gangir, hvørt fellr blóðugt · á brjóst grami,
 6 úr-svalt, inn-fjalgt · ękka þrungit.

“Thou alone causest, O Syerun from the Sevefells, that Hallow be with harm-dew whipped.
 Thou weepst—O gold-covered—bitter tears—
 O sun-bright southern lady—before thou go to sleep.
 Each one falls bloody on the prince’s chest,
 spray-cold, stifled, pressed forth by grief.

- 17 Vęl skulum drekka · dýrar vęigar
 2 þótt misst hafim · munar ok landa!
 Skal ęngi maðr · angr-ljóð kveða
 4 þótt mér á brjósti · bęnjar líti.
 Nú eru brúðir · byrgðar í haugi,
 6 lofða dísir, · hjá oss liðnum!”

Well shall we drink dear draughts, although we have lost both love and land!
 Let no one sing songs of sorrow,
 although he behold the wounds on my chest.
 Now are the brides shut within the barrow,
 the praised one’s dises[†], next to us, passed-on.”

5–6 brúðir, dísir, oss ‘brides, dises, us’ | Hallow speaks in the plural. “Now has my bride, my goddess, come into the barrow, next to me, who am dead.”

P6 Sigrún bjó sęing í haug’inum.

Syerun made a bed in the barrow:

- 18 „Hér hęfi’k þér, Hēlgi, · hvílu gørva, 2 angr-lausa mjøk, · Ylfinga niðr;
 vil’k þér í faðmi, · fylkir, sofna

4 sem'k loðungi · lifnum mynda'k!“

“Here I've for thee, Hallow, made a place of rest, all without sorrow, O kinsman of the Wolvings!
I will in thy arms, O marshal, fall asleep,
like I would with the living man of praise.”

4 sem'k loðungi · lifnum mynda'k! 'like I would with the living man of praise' | i.e. “just as I would if you were still alive.”

[Hęłgi kvað:] 19 „Nú kveð'k ęnskis · ęr-vęnt vesa,
2 síð né snimma, · at Sefa-fjollum es þú á armi · ó·lifðum søfr, 4 hvít, í haugi, · Hęgna dóttir, ok est-u kvik, · in konung-borna!“

“Now, I say, there is naught more missing neither late nor soon from the Sevefells, when thou dost sleep on the unliving arm,
O white daughter of Hain—in the barrow,
and thou art alive!—of kingly birth.”

(The night has passed; dawn is breaking, and Hallow speaks. The manuscript does not indicate the change of scene.)

[Hęłgi kvað:] 20 „Mál 's mér at ríða · roðnar brautir, 2 láta fólvan jó · flug-stíg troða;
skal'k fyr vestan · vind-hjalms brúar
4 áðr Sal-gofnir · sigr-þjóð vęki.“

“Tis time for me to ride the reddening roads, to let my pale steed tread the path of flight [SKY/HEAVEN].
I shall go west of the wind-helm's bridges [SKY/HEAVEN > CLOUDS?], before Salgovner may awaken the victorious folk.”

1 roðnar ‘reddening’ | From the rising dawn.

2 P7 Þeir Hēlgi riðu leið sína, en þær fóru heim til bójar. Annan aptan lét Sigrún ambótt halda vörð á haugi’num. En at dag-setri, es Sigrún kom til haugs’ins, hón kvað:

Hallow and his men rode on their way, but the women journeyed home to the farm.
The next evening Syerun made her maid-servant keep watch on the barrow. And at sunset as Syerun came to the barrow, she [= the maid-servant] quoth:

21 „Kominn væri nú, · ef koma hygðoi,
2 Sigmundar burr · frá solum Óðins;
kveð’k grams þinig · grénask vánir
4 es á ask-limum · ęrnir sitja ok drífr drótt ęll · draum-þinga til.“

“Come were now, if to come he had thought, Syemund’s son [= Hallow] from Weden’s halls;
hopes fade, I say, of the prince’s coming,
when on ashen branches eagles sit,
and all mankind drifts off to dream-Things[†].

4 es á ask-limum · ęrnir sitja ‘when on ashen branches eagles sit’ | i.e. “when the eagles roost on yonder trees”. This is a sign of Hallow and his men not coming; if they were, the eagles would be following them and picking at their bodies.

5 drífr ... draum-þinga til ‘drifts off to dream-Things’ | i.e. “falls asleep”. A fine metaphor.

22 Ves ęigi svá őr · at ęin farir,
2 dís skjöldunga, · draug-húsa til!
Verða ęflgari · allir á nóttum
4 dauðir dólgar, mér, · an of daga ljósa.“

Be not so mad that thou journey alone,
O dise of the Shieldings, to the ghost-houses!
Mightier at night do all become dead fiends, O maiden, than during the bright days!”

- 2 P8 Sigrún varð skamm-líf af harmi ok trega. Þat var trúa í forneskju, at menn véri endr-bornir, en þat er nú kǫlluð kerlinga-villa. Helgi ok 4 Sigrún er kallat at véri endr-borin. Hét hann þá Helgi Haddingjaskati en hon Kára Hálfðanar dóttir, svá sem kveðit er í Kárljóðum, ok var hon val-kyrja.

Syerun became short-lived for pain and grief. It was the belief in olden times that men were born again, but that is now called an old wives' tale. Of Hallow and Syerun it is said that they were born again. He was then called Hallow Hardingskate and she Cheer Halfðanesdaughter, as is told in the Leeds of Cheer, and she was a walkirrie.

Spae of Griper (Grípisspó)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): early C11th (0.616)–late C11th (0.313).

Meter: Ancient-words-law

TODO: Introduction. This poem is uniquely regular and well preserved; every single one of its 53 Ancient-words-law stanzas all is four lines long.

The title is “From Sinfittle’s death”.

P1 Grípir hét sonr Eýlima, bróðir Hjörðisar. Hann réð lǫndum ok vas 2 allra manna vitrastr ok fram-víss. Sigurðr reyð einn saman ok kom til hallar Grípis. Sigurðr vas auð-kenndr. Hann hitti mann at máli úti fyr 4 holl’inni; sá nefndisk Geitir. Þá kvaddi Sigurðr hann máls, ok spyrr:

Griper was called the son of Ilime, Hardise’s brother. He ruled lands and was wisest of all men, and forthwise. Siward rode alone and came to Griper’s hall. Siward was easily recognized. He approached a man for speech outside of the hall; he was named Goater. Then Siward greeted him with a speech, and asks:

1 „Hverr byggir hér · borgir þessar?
2 Hvat þann þjóð-konung · þegnar nefna?“
 „Grípir heitir · gumna stjóri,
4 sá’s fastri reyðr · foldu ok þegnum.“

“Who bedwells here these forts?

What is this great king called by thanes?”

“Griper is called the steerer of men, who rules the steadfast land, and thanes.”

They began to speak and chatter much,
when the council-wise champions met each other.
“Tell me, if thou knowest, O mother's brother:
how will Siward's age turn out?”

3 „Þú munt maðr vesa · méztr und sólu ok hęstr borinn · hverjum jǫfri;
 gjǫfull af gulli · en glǫggr flugar,

„Thou wilt be a man noblest 'neath the sun,
and borne higher than every ruler, giving with gold but stingy of flight, radiant of hue and wise in words.“

Thou wilt rest, O spear-point-knower of the host, renowned, beside a maiden as if she were thy mother.
 For that will remembered while mankind lives,
 O prince of the nation, thy name be.

TODO.

6 Því skal hugga þik, · hęrs odd-viti,

For that [she] shall soothe thee, O spear-point-knower of the host;
 she will have laid poison in the ruler's age.
 No nobler man will come onto the earth beneath the sun's seat [SKY/HEAVEN], than thou, Siward, seemest!

7 Skiljumk hęilir; · mun-at sköpum vinna!
 2 Nú hęfir þú, Grípir, vęl · gørt sem þęddak;
 fljótt myndir þú · fríðri sęgja
 4 mína ęvi · ef þú męttir þat!

Let us part in good health; one will not conquer the shapes[†]!
 Now hast thou, Griper, well done as I asked;
 shortly wouldst thou speak prettier of my age, if thou mightst do that!

Speeches of Rein

(Ręginsmól)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C10th (0.666)–early C11th (0.259)

Meter: Leeds-meter, Ancient-words-law

Reg is the first of a group of three similarly structured “poems” in an unbroken narrative sequence in R; it is followed by Fáfn and Sigrdr. The division into three poems (indeed their very names) is a product of later philology, and as Bellows says, is perhaps not logically sound. The titles in the R serve more like chapter headings than titles of new poems, and their placement does not exactly agree with the editorial boundaries of the three poems. In the present edition the division into three poems has been kept for reasons of convention, since the vast majority of readers will be expecting to find the familiar Ręginsmól or Fáfnismól.

The whole group is probably best seen as a long prosimetrum that should be read as a single text, rather than three distinct poems. Indeed almost all of the narrative is carried by prose, while the poetry is almost exclusively dialogue.

The poetry comes in two meters, Leeds-meter and Ancient-words-law. The Leeds-meter stanzas of Reg–Fáfn–Sigrdr are greatly alike in style, and probably originally derive from the same composition; this may also be said for the Ancient-words-law-stanzas.

Reg clearly serves as the basis for VǫlsS 14–15 and 17–18 (for ch. 16 see Gríp), where sts. 1–2, 6 and 18 below are quoted directly.

- P1 Sigurðr gekk til stóðs Hjálp-reks ok kaus sér af hest einn er Grani 2 var kallaðr síðan. Þá var kominn Reginn til Hjálp-reks, sonr Hreiðmars. Hann var hverjum manni hagari ok dvergr of vǫxt. Hann var 4 vitr, grimmr ok fjǫl-kunnigr. Reginn veitti Sigurði fóstr ok kennslu ok elskaði hann mjök. Hann sagði Sigurði frá for·ellri sínu ok þeim

6 at·burðum at Óðinn ok Hónir ok Loki hófðu komit til And-vara-fors;
 í þeim forsi var fjölði fiska. Einn dvergr hét And-vari; hann var lǫngum 8 í forsinum í geddu líki ok fekk sér þar matar. „Otr hét bróðir várr,“ kvað Reginn, „er oft fór í forsinn í otrs líki. Hann hafði tekit einn lax ok sat 10 á ár-bakkanum ok át blundandi. Loki laust hann með steini til bana.
 Þóttust ésir mjök heppnir verit hafa ok flógu belg af otrinum. Þat sama 12 kveld sóttu þeir gisting til Hreið-mars ok sýndu veiði sína. Þá tóku vér þá hǫndum ok lögðum þeim fjör-lausn at fylla otr-belginn með gulli 14 ok hylja útan ok með rauðu gulli. Þá sendu þeir Loka at afla gullsins.
 Hann kom til Ránar ok fekk net hennar ok fór þá til And-vara-fors ok
 16 kastaði netinu fyr gedduna en hon hljóp í netit. Þá mælti Loki:

Siward went to Helpric's stable and thereof chose for himself one horse which was thenceforth called Grane. Then Rein, son of Rethmar, was come to Helpric. He was craftier than every man and a dwarf in stature; he was clever, cruel and many-cunning[†]. Rein granted Siward fosterage and teaching, and loved him much. He told Siward about his parentage, and about the events that Weden, Heener and Lock had come to Andwaresforce; in that force was a multitude of fish. One dwarf was called Andware; he was for a long time in the force in the likeness of a pike and got his food there. "Otter was our brother called," said Rein, "who often went forth in the force in the likeness of an otter. He had taken a salmon and sat on the riverbank and ate it with his eyes closed. Lock beat him with a stone to his death. The Eese thought themselves to have been very lucky and flayed the skin from the otter. The same evening they sought lodgings at Rethmar's house, and showed their catch. Then we bound them and gave them as a life-ransom to fill the otter-skin with gold and cover even the outside with red gold. Then they sent Lock to procure the gold. He came to Ran and got her net, and then journeyed to Andwaresforce and threw the net in front of the pike, and it jumped into the net. Then spoke Lock:

1 „Hvat 's þat fiska · es rinn flóði í;
 2 kann-at sér við víti varask?
 Höfuð þitt · leys-tu helju ór;
 4 finn mér lindar loga!“

“What kind of fish is this that runs in the flood?
 It cannot ward itself from harm.
 Redeem thy head out of Hell;
 find me the linden's flame [GOLD]!”

2 „And-vari ek hęiti, · Óinn hét minn faðir,
2 margan hęfi’k fors of farit.
Aumlig norn · skóp oss í ár-daga
4 at ek skylda í vatni vaða.“

“Andware I am called; Owen was called my father;
through many a force have I fared.
A wretched norn shaped for us in days of yore,
that I should in the water wade.”

3 „Sęg-ðu þat, And-vari, (kvað Loki) ef þú ęiga vill
2 líf í lýða solum:
Hver gjöld · fāa gumna synir
4 ef hoggvask orðum à?“

“Tell this, Andware—quoth Lock—if thou wilt own life in the halls of men:
Which recompense do the sons of men get,
if they hew at each other with words?”

4 „Ofr-gjöld · fāa gumna synir
2 þęir’s Vað-gelmi vaða;
ó-saðra orða · hverr’s á annan lýgr,
4 of lęngi lęiða limar.“

“Great recompense do the sons of men get,
those who in Wadyelmer[†] wade.
By the branches of untrue words is each who lies to another long followed.¹²¹”

¹²¹Watery torment in the afterlife for oath-breakers and liars is well attested in the Germanic sources. See note to Vsp 39 for discussion.

P2 Loki sá allt gull þat er And-vari átti. En er hann hafði fram reitt gullit, 2 þá hafði hann eftir einn hring ok tók Loki þann af hánun. Dvergrinn gekk inn í steininn ok męlti:

Lock saw all the gold which Andware owned. But when he had readied all the gold, then he still had one ring, and Lock took it from him. The dwarf went into the stone and spoke:

5 „Þat skal gull · es Gustr átti
2 bróðrum tveim · at bana verða ok ǫðlingum · áttá at rógi;
4 mun míns féar · mann-gi njóta.“

“That gold which Gust owned shall for two brothers become the bane, and for eight nobles the [cause of] strife;
of my wealth will no man benefit.”

P3 Ésir reiddu Hreið-mari féit ok tráðu upp otr-belginn ok reistu á fœtr;
2 þá skyldu ésirnir hlaða upp gullinu ok hylja. En er þat var gørt gekk Hreið-marr framm ok sá eitt grana-hár ok bað hylja. Þá dró Óðinn
4 framm hringinn And-vara-naut ok hulði hárit.

The Eese readied the wealth for Rethmar and stuffed the otter-skin and raised it on its feet. Then the Eese should fill it up with gold and cover it. But when that was done Rethmar stepped forth, and saw a single whisker-strand and bade it be covered. Then Weden drew forth the ring Andwaresgift and covered the strand.

6 „Gull’s þér nú reitt (kvað Loki) en þú gjöld hefir
2 mikil míns hofuðs;
syni þínum · verðr-a sēla sköpuð;
4 þat verðr ykkarr bæggja bani!“

“The gold is now readied for thee—quoth Lock—and thou hast the great payment for my head.
For thy son no welfare will be made;
it will be the bane of you both!”

Hreiðmarr sagði:

7 „Gjafar þú gaft— · gaft-at óst-gjafar,
2 gaft-at af heilum hug!
Fjörvi yðru · skylduð ér firrðir vesa

4 ef vissa'k þat fār fyrir.“ “Thou gavest a gift—gavest not a gift of love;
 gavest not out of true heart!
 From your lives would ye be far taken,
 if I had known that danger before!”

8 „Enn es verra, · þat vita þikkjumk,
 2 niðja stríð um nept;
 jōfra ó-borna · hygg þá enn vesa
 4 es þat 's til hats hugat.“
 “TODO.”

9 „Rauðu gulli (kvað Hreiðmarr) hygg ek mik ráða munu
 2 svá lengi sem ek lifi;
 hót þín · hréðumk ekki lyf
 4 ok haldið heim heðan!“
 “The red gold—quoth Rethmar—I think that I will rule so long as I live.
 Thy threats I fear not at all (TODO) and hold home from hence!”

P4 Fáfñir ok Reginn krōfðu Hreið-mar nið-gjalda eptir Otr, bróður sinn.
 2 Hann kvað nei við. En Fáfñir lagði sverði Hreið-mar, fōður sinn, sofanda. Hreið-marr kallaði á dótr sínar:

Fathomer and Rein demanded from Rethmar the kin-payment after Otter, their brother.
 He said no to it. But Fathomer ran the sword through Rethmar, his father, sleeping.
 Rethmar called on his daughters:

10 „Lýng-heiðr ok Lofn-heiðr, · vitið mínu lífi farit!
 2 Mart 's þat's þōrf þéar!“
 Lyngheiðr svaraði: „Fó mun systir, · þótt fōður missi,
 4 hefna hlýra harms!“

“O Lingheath and Lovenheath, witness my life destroyed!

Much does need compel!”
 “Few a sister, though she miss her father, will avenge her brother’s harm!

2 Mart ’s þat’s þorfr þéar! ‘Much does need compel!’ | Or “Much is required by necessity”. Rethmar refers to the duty of his daughters to avenge him, even by killing their own brother.

11 „Al þú þó dóttur, (kvað Hreiðmarr) dís úlf-huguð,
 2 ef þú getr-at son · við siklingi;
 fà þú mey manni · megin-þarfur,
 4 þá mun þeirar sonr · þíns harms vreaka.“

“Beget yet a daughter—quoth Rethmar—a wolf-minded lady,
 if thou gettest no son by the prince.
 Wed that maiden to a man of great need,
 then her son will avenge thy harm!¹²²”

3 manni · megin-þarfur | mann imeginþarfur R

¹²²Rethmar’s last words foretell the life of Siward, whose mother, Hardise, would then be Lingheath’s daughter.

P5 Þá dó Hreið-marr, en Fáfniir tók gullit allt. Þá beiddisk Reginn at 2 hafa fǫður-arf sinn, en Fáfniir galt þar nei við. Þá leitaði Reginn ráða við Lyng-heiði, systur sína, hvernig hann skyldi heimta fǫður-arf sinn.
 4 Hon kvað:

Then Rethmar died and Fathomer took all the gold. Then Rein begged to have his father’s inheritance, but Fathomer gave back a no. Then Rein sought counsel from Lingheath, his sister, over how he should take his father’s inheritance. She quoth:

12 „Brúðar kvęðja · skalt blíð-liga
 2 arfs ok óðra hugar;
 es-a þat hóft · at þú hjörvi skylir
 4 kvęðja Fáfni féar!“

“From the bride shalt thou blithely call for heritance and nobler thoughts;
 it is not fitting that thou shouldst by sword call for Fathomer’s wealth!”

1 Brúðar 'From the bride' | "From me." It seems that Lingheath here offers Rein her part of the inheritance.

2 P6 Þessa hluti sagði Reginn Sigurði. Einn dag, er hann kom til húsa Regins, var hánun vel fagnat. Reginn kvað:

These things Rein told Siward. One day when he came to Rein's house he was greeted heartily. Rein quoth:

2 13 „Kominn 's hingat · konr Sig-mundar,

4 ok es mér fangs vón · at frekum ulfi.

"Hither is come the son of Syemund [= Siward],

He has greater heart than an old man,
and I expect a catch from the hungry wolf.

2 14 Ek mun fōða · folk-djarfan gram;
nú 's yngva konr · með oss kominn;
sjá mun rēsir · ríkstr und sólu,
4 þrymr um ǫll lōnd · ør-lōg-símu."

I will raise the troop-bold prince;
now the son of the king is come amidst us!
This ruler will become mightiest under the sun;
he fastens through all lands his orlay-strands!"

4 þrymr ... ør-lōg-símu 'he fastens ... orlay-strands' | "His fate is being fixed through all lands." Cf. the first four sts. of HHund I.

2 P7 Sigurðr var þá jafnan með Regin ok sagði hann Sigurði at Fáfnir lá á Gnita-heiði ok var í orms líki. Hann átti ógis-hjalm er ǫll kvikvendi hréddusk við. Reginn gerði Sigurði sverð er Gramr hét. Þat var svá
4 hvasst at hann brá því ofan í Rín ok lét reka ullar-lagð fyr straumi ok

6 tók í sundr lagðinn sem vatnit. Því sverði klauf Sigurðr í sundr steðja Regins. Eptir þat eggjaði Reginn Sigurð at vega Fáfnir. Hann sagði:

Thereafter Siward was always with Rein, and he told Siward that Fathomer lay on the Gnit-heath and was in a Wyrms likeness; he owned the helm of awe by which all living things were frightened. Rein made Siward the sword called Gram; it was so sharp that he plunged it down into the Rhine, and let a lock of wool float down the stream, and it split the lock like it did the water. With that sword Siward split asunder the anvil of Rein; after that Rein urged Siward to slay Fathomer. He said:

15 „Hátt munu hléja · Hundings synir
2 þeir's Ey-lima · aldrs synjuðu, ef męirr tiggja · munar at sόkja
4 hringa rauða · an hefnd fōður.“

“Loudly laugh will Hunding's sons
—they who denied Ielime's old age—if the chief is more eager to seek red rings than to avenge his father.”

2 P8 Hjálpr-rekr konungr fekk Sigurði skipa-lið til fōður-hefnda. Þeir fengu storm mikinn ok beittu fyr bergs-nōs nakkvara. Maðr einn stóð á berginu ok kvað:

Helpric got Siward a ship-retinue for the avenging of his father. They caught a great storm, and tacked the ships before a group of crags. A lone man stood on the crag and quoth:

16 „Hvęrir ríða þar · Ręfils hestum
2 hávar unnir, · haf glymjanda?
Segl-vigg eru · sveita stokkin,
4 mun-at vág-marar · vind of standask.“

“Which men ride there Revil's horses [SHIPS] on the high waves, the roaring sea?
The sail-steeds are spattered with blood;
the wave-chargers will not bear the wind!”

17 „Hér eru vér Sig-urör · á sę-tréum;
 2 es oss byrr gefinn · við bana sjalfan;
 fellr brattr breki · bröndum héri,
 4 hlunn-vigg hrapa— · hvęrr spyrr at því?“
 “Here are we, Siward [and his men], on sea-trees [SHIPS];
 we are given a gust toward death itself!
 The steep breaker falls higher than flames;
 the launcher-steeds rush forth—who asks of this?”

18 „Hnikar hétu mik · þá’s Hugin gladdi
 2 Völsungr ungi · ok vegit hafði;
 nú mátt kalla · karl af bergi,
 4 Feng eða Fjölni; · far vil’k þiggja.“
 “Nicker they called me when young Walsing gladdened Highen and had conquered.
 Now mayst thou call me churl-from-the-crag,
 Feng or Fillner—I wish to beg passage.”

1 Hugin gladdi ‘gladdened Highen’ | A variant of the extremely common motif “feed the raven”, i.e., by the corpses of slain foes on the battlefield.

2 Völsungr ungi ‘young Walsing’ | Siward’s grandfather, the founder of the Walsing dynasty.

P9 Þeir viku at landi, ok gekk karl á skip, ok léęði þá veörít.
 They turned to land and the man went on the ship, and then the weather calmed down.

19 „Sęg mér þat, Hnikarr, · alls hvár-tveggja vęitst,

20 „Morg eru góð · ef gumar vissi,

No man shall fight facing

 They have the victory who can see —men brisk in sword-play [BATTLE]—or draw up the flying wedge.

4 hamalt fylkja ‘draw up the flying wedge’ | This formation, known as the swine-array (svín-fylking), was favoured by the Germanic peoples. It is mentioned already in Tacitus Germania ch. 6: acies per cuneos componitur ‘their line of battle is drawn up in a wedge-like formation’. In the legendary saws it has a particular association with Weden; according AncKings it was taught by Weden to the Danish king Harold Hildtooth, who went on to win great victories with it. At last his rival, the Swedish king Siward Ring, was also taught it, and went on to slay Harold at the battle of the Browolds (Brávęllir). Cf. AncKings 8: Brúni segir: „Svá lítst mér sem Hringr muni búinn at berjask ok hans lið. Hann befir undarlíga fylkt. Hann befir svín-fylkt her sínum, ok mun eigi gott at berjask við hann.“ Þá segir Haraldr konungr: „Hverr mun Hringi bafa kennt hamalt at fylkja? Ek hugða engan kunna nema mik ok Óðin, eða mun Óðinn vilja skjóplast í sigr-gjöfnni við mik? [...]“ ‘Brown says: “It seems to me that Ring is ready to fight, and his troop too. He has drawn up them in a wondersome way; he has drawn up his host in the swine-shape, and it will not be good to fight against him. Then says king Harold: “Who will have taught Ring to draw up the flying wedge? I thought noone knew it save for me and Weden; or will Weden wish to fail in his giving me victory? [...]”

¹²³The wording of the first half of this stanza is very close to Háv 61 and Vsp 33; for discussion on personal hygiene and bathing see note to the former.

- P10 Sigurðr átti orrustu mikla við Lyngva Hundings son ok bróðr hans. Þar
 2 fell Lyngvi ok þeir þrír bróðr. Eptir orrustu kvað Reginn:

Siward had a great battle with Ling Hunding's son and his brothers. There fell Ling and three of his brothers. After the battle Rein quoth:

- 26 Nú 's blóðugr ǫrn · bitrum hjǫrvi
 2 bana Sigmundar · á baki ristinn;
 ǫngr es fremri, · sá's fold ryði,
 4 hilmis arfi · ok Hugin gladdi!

Now the bloody eagle with a bitter sword is carved on the back of Sigmund's bane.
 No chieftain's heir is more successful,
 who clears the earth and has gladdened Highen!

4 Hugin gladdi 'has gladdened Highen' | i.e. "has fed the raven (with corpses)."

- P11 Heim fór Sigurðr til Hjalpreks. Þá eggjaði Reginn Sigurð til at vega
 2 Fáfni. Sigurðr ok Reginn fóru upp á Gnitaheiði ok hittu þar slóð Fáfnis þá er hann skreið til vats. Þar gørði Sigurðr grōf mikla á veginum ok 4 gekk Sigurðr þar í. En er Fáfni skreið af gullinu blés hann eitri ok hraut þat fyr ofan hōfuð Sigurði. En er Fáfni skreið yfir grōfina þá 6 lagði Sigurðr hann með sverði til hjarta. Fáfni hristi sik ok barði hōfði ok sporði. Sigurðr hljóp ór grōfinni ok sá þá hvárr annan. Fáfni kvað:

Siward journeyed home to Helpric. Then Rein incited Siward to smite Fathomer. Siward and Rein journeyed up on the Gnit-heath and found there Siward's trail as he was slithering to water. There Siward made a great trench in the way, and Siward went down into it. And when Fathomer slithered off the gold he blew venom, and it flew over Siward's head. But when Fathomer slithered over the trench, then Siward ran him through with the sword to the heart. Fathomer shook himself and struck his head and spurned. Siward leapt out of the trench, and then each of them saw the other. Fathomer quoth:

Titled Frá dauða Fáfnis ‘From Fathomer’s death’ in R. The poem directly continues Reg.

1 „Sveinn ok sveinn! · Hverjum est sveini of borinn?
2 Hverra est manna mögr?
es þú á Fáfni rautt · þinn hinn frána mēki;
4 stöndumk til hjarta hjörr!“

“O swain and swain! To which swain art thou born;
of which men art thou the son?
When on Fathomer thou hast reddened this thy gleaming blade;
the sword stands unto my heart!”

P1 Sigurðr dulði nafns síns fyr því at þat var trúa þeira í forneskju at orð
2 feigs manns mētti mikit ef hann bölvæði óvin sínum með nafni. Hann kvað:

Siward hid his name, for it was belief of those in ancient times that a fey[†] man’s word could do much if he cursed his foe by his name. He quoth:

2 „Göfugt dýr ek heiti · en ek gengit hef”k

2 hinn móður-lausi mögr, fǫður ek á'kk-a · sem fira synir,
 4 geng ek einn saman.“

“Noble Deer am I called, and I have gone
 as the motherless lad.
 A father I have not like the sons of men;
 I go alone.”

3 „Veitst, ef fǫður né átt-at · sem fira synir,
 2 af hverju vastu undri alinn?
 [...]“

“Knowest thou, if thou hast no father like the sons of men, by which wonder thou wast begotten?”

4 „Étterni mitt · kveð'k þér ó-kunnigt vesa
 2 ok mik sjalfan hit sama:
 Sigurðr ek heiti · Sigmundr hét minn faðir
 4 es hef'k þik vópnum vegit.“

“My lineage, I say, is unknown to thee, and my self the same.¹²⁴
 Siward am I called—Sigmund was called my father—who with weapons have smitten thee.”

¹²⁴The sense is that Fathomers would not recognize Siward's lineage (i.e. his father) or name, since he is an orphan who up until this point has not accomplished much. He is not saying that he is lineage is unknown even to himself, since sjalfan mik 'my self' is accusative, not dative.

5 „Hverr þik hvatti, · hví hvetjask lést,
 2 mínu fjörvi at fara?
 Hinn frán-eygi sveinn, · þú áttir fǫður bitran,
 4 á-bornu skjór á skęð.“

“Who goaded thee; why didst thou let thee be goaded my life for to destroy?
 O gleaming-eyed swain, thou hadst a sharp father;
 inborn traits show quickly!”

4 á-bornu skjór á skēið. ‘inborn traits show quickly’ | The original is cryptic. á skēið means roughly ‘rapidly, quickly’, whence the expression ríða á skēið ‘CV: to ride at full speed’, but the other words are uncertain. La Farge and Tucker (1992) read ‘your innate qualities show quickly’, suggesting two unattested words: an adjective áborinn* ‘innate, inborn’ and a verb skjóa* ‘to show’. Yet the lack of i-umlaut in the supposed 3rd sg. pres. ind. skjór is difficult. We would expect skýr*, as in skjóta ‘to shoot,’ with 2nd/3rd sg. pres. ind skýtr. A solution here would be reading a 2nd sg. pres. subj. skjóir, with a vowel TODO

- 6 „Hugr mik hvatti, · hęndr mér full-týðu
2 ok minn inn hvassi hjorr;
fár es hvatr · es hrøðask tękr
4 ef í barn-esku es blauðr.“

“My heart goaded me; my hands availed me,
and this my sharp sword.
Few a man is bold when he takes to grow,
if he in youth is soft.”

- 7 „Veit’k, ef þú vaxa nęðir · fyr þinna vina brjósti,
2 séi-t maðr þik vręiðan vega;
nú ert haptr · ok hęr-numinn,
4 ę kveða bandingja bifask.“

“I know that if thou hadst managed to grow up at the breasts of thy friends, no man would see thee wrathfully fight.
Now art thou a captive and war-taken;
the boundling is ever said to tremble.”

- 8 „Því bregðr þú nú mér, Fáfñir, · at til fjarri sjá’k 2 mínun fęðr-munum,
ęigi em’k haptr · þótt véra hęr-numi;
4 þú fannt, at ek lauss lifi!“

“For this thou now upbraidest me, Fathomer, that I be too far from my fathers’ love.
I am no captive, though I be war-taken;
thou hast found that I live loose!”

9 „Hęipt-yrđi ęin · tęlr þu þer í hví-vętna
 2 en ek þer satt ęitt sęgi'k:
 It gjalla gull · ok it glóđ-rauđa fé,
 4 þer verđa þęir baugar at bana!“

“With hateful words alone dost thou answer anything, but I tell thee truth alone:
 The clanging gold and the glowing red wealth—
 those bighs will be thy bane!”

10 „Féi ráđa · skal fyrđa hvęrr
 2 ę til ins ęina dags
 því-at ęinu sinni · skal alda hvęrr
 4 fara til hęljar heđan.“

“Rule his wealth shall every man, ever, until the one day;
 for at one time shall every man
 journey hence to Hell.”

2 ins ęina dags ‘the one day’ | i.e. his predetermined day of death. Siward dismisses the curse; he must die regardless of whether he takes the gold or not, and it is better to die wealthy and renowned than wretched and unknown.

11 „Norna dóm · munt fyr nęsjum hafa
 2 ok ó-svinns apa;
 í vatni þu drukknar · ef í vindi ręr;
 4 allt es fęigs forað.“

“The doom of the Norns shalt thou have before the headlands, and that of an unwise ape.
 In water wilt thou drown if thou row in wind;
 everything is the pit of the fey[†].¹²⁵”

1 fyr nęsjum ‘before the headlands’ | i.e. ‘close at hand, imminent’. An established metaphor for imminent death, cf. the last st. of Sont (TODO).

¹²⁵The man fated to die will find his death no matter where he turns.

12 „Sęg mér, Fáfmir, · alls þik fróđan kveđa

2 ok vël mart vita:
 Hverjar 'ru þér nornir · es nauð-gönglar 'ru
 4 ok kjósa móðr frá mögum?“

“Tell me, Fathomer, as they call thee wise,
 and knowing well enough:
 Who are the Norns that attend in need,
 and choose mothers from their lads?”

3 es nauð-gönglar 'ru 'attend in need' | lit. 'are attendant in need', i.e. help ailing mothers during child-birth. Cf. Sigrdr 9.

13 „Sundr-bornar mjök · hygg at nornir sé,
 2 ęigu-t þér ęt saman;
 sumar 'ru ős-kunngar, · sumar alf-kunngar,
 4 sumar dótr Dvalins.“

“Of most sundry birth I judge the norns to be,
 they come not from a common lineage:
 some are Os-born, some Elf-born,
 some are the daughters of Dwoollen [DWARFESSES].”

14 „Seg mér þat, Fáfnir, · alls þik fróðan kveða
 2 ok vël margt vita, hvé sá holmr heitir · es blanda hjör-lęgi
 4 Surtr ok ęsir saman.“

“Tell me this, Fathomer, as they call thee wise,
 and knowing well enough:
 What is the islet called, where Surt and the Eese blend sword-water [BLOOD] together?”

15 „Ó-skópnir heitir · en þar ęll skulu
 2 geirum lęika goð;
 Bil-ręst brotnar · es á brott fara
 4 ok svima í móðu marir.“

“Unshopner it is called, and there shall all the Gods play with spears [MAKE WAR];

Bilrest shatters when they go away,
and the steeds swim in the sea.”

Fathomer continues speaking, but there is probably something missing here, since the transition is abrupt. Between its paraphrases of st. 15 and of st. 16, N has Ok enn mēlti Fáfnir: „Reginn bróðir minn veldr mínum dauða, ok þat hlégir mik, er hann veldr ok þínum dauða, ok ferr þá, sem hann vildi.“ ‘And further spoke Fathomer: “My brother Rein causes my death, and it gladdens me that he also causes thy death, and then it will go like he has willed.”’, which may perhaps be a paraphrase of a lost st.

16 „Ógis hjalm · bar’k of alda sonum
2 meðan of męnjum lá’k;
ęinn rammari · hugðumk ęllum vesa,
4 fann’k-a’k marga męgu.“

“The helmet of terror I carried over the sons of men while on the neckrings I lay;

17 „Ógis hjalmr · bergr ęinu-gi

2 ok ríð heim heðan;

“Rein fooled me; he will fool thee;
he will become the bane of us both!
Let up his life I think that Fathomer will—thy strength was now the greater.”

2 P2 Reginn var á brott horfinn meðan Sigurðr vaf Fáfni ok kom þá aptr er Sigurðr strauk blóð af sverðinu. Reginn kvað:

Rein had disappeared while Siward smote Fathomer, and then came back as Siward wiped the blood off the sword. Rein quoth:

2 23 „Heill þú nú, Sigurðr, · nú hefir sigr vegit
 ok Fáfni of farit;
 manna þeira · es mold troða
4 þik kveð’k ð-blauðastan alinn.“

“Hail thee now, Siward—now thou hast won victory and Fathomer destroyed!
Of those men who tread on the earth
I declare thee unsoftest begotten.”

27 Þá gekk Reginn at Fáfni ok skar hjarta ór hánnum með sverði er Riðill heitir ok þá drakk hann blóð ór undinni eptir.

Then Siward walked up to Fathomer and cut the heart out of him with the sword called Riddle, and then he drank blood from the wound afterwards.

28 „Sit-tu nú, Sigurðr, · en ek mun sofa ganga
 2 ok halt Fáfnis hjarta við funa!

[Rein quoth:]

“Sit thou now, Siward—but I will go to sleep—and hold Fathomer’s heart by the fire!
 The heart-strings I wish to eat,
 after this drink of blood.”

3 Eisköld ‘heart-strings’ | An obscure poetic synonym for heart, it is here in the plural. The translation “heart-strings” is probably inaccurate.

29 „Fjarri þú gekkt · meðan ek á Fáfni rauð’k
 2 minn inn hvassa hjör;
 afli mínu · átta’k við orms megin
 4 meðan þú í lyngvi látt.“

“Far didst thou go while I on Fathomer reddened this my sharp sword.

My strength I held against the Wyrms’ might,
 while thou in the heather layst.”

30 „Lengi liggja · létir þú þann lyngvi í,
 2 inn aldna jötun,
 ef þú sverðs né nytir, · þess es ek sjalfr gørða,
 4 ok þíns ins hvassa hjörs.“

[Rein quoth:]

“Lie long in the heather wouldst thou have let this ancient ettin [me], if the blade thou hadst not used, which I myself made,
 and this thy sharp sword.”

31 „Hugr es bættri · en sé hjörs megin
 2 hvar’s vręiðir skulu vega, því at hvatan mann · ek sé harð-liga vega
 4 með slévu sverði sigr.

“Heart is better than might of sword may be wherever worth men should fight, for a bold man I see fighting a hard victory with sluggish sword.

32 Hvötum ’s bętra · en sé ó·hvötum
 2 í hildi-leik hafask
 glöðum es betra · en sé glúpanda
 4 hvat sem at hęndi kęmr.“

For the bold it is better than it may be for the unbold, in battle-play to hold themselves;

for the glad it is better than for the gloomy, whatever comes to their hands.”

- P3 Sigurðr tók Fáfnis hjarta ok steikði á teini. Er hann hugði at full-steikt 2 vęri ok freyddi sveitinn ór hjartanu þá tók hann á fingri sínum ok skyn-jaði hvárt full-steikt vęri. Hann brann ok brá fingrinum í munn sér.
4 En er hjart-blóð Fáfnis kom á tungu hánnum ok skildi hann fugls rødd.
Hann heyrði at igður kløkuðu á hrisinum. Igðan kvað:

Siward took Fathomer's heart and roasted it on a stick. But when he thought that it was fully roasted and the blood frothed out of the heart then he touched it with his finger to see whether it was fully roasted. He burned himself and threw his finger in his mouth. But when the heart blood of Fathomer came on his tongue and he understood the speech of birds. He heard that some tits were chirping in the brushes. The tit quoth:

- 33 „Þar sitr Sigurðr · sveita stokkinn,
2 Fáfnis hjarta · við funa stęikir;
spakr þøtti mér · spillir bauga
4 ef hann fęor-sega · fránan ęti.“

“There sits Siward spattered by blood,
Fathomer's heart by the fire he roasts.
Wise would seem me the spiller of rings
if he the gleaming life-muscle ate.”

- 34 „Þar liggr Ręinn, · ręðr umb við sik, 2 vill tęla męg · þann's trúir hęnum;
berr af vręði · vręng orð saman,
4 vill bęlva smiðr · bróður hefna.“

“There lies Rein, counsels with himself, wants to betray the lad who trusts in him.
From wrath he carries ill words together;
the smith of bales wants to avenge his brother.”

35 „Hofði skemmmra · láti hann inn hára þul
 2 fara til hēljār heðan!
 Öllu gulli · þá kná hann ęinn ráða,
 4 fjǫlð, því's und Fáfni lá.“

“Shorter by a head he should make the hoary thyle journey hence to Hell!
 All the gold he can then wield alone:
 the trove which under Fathomer lay.”

P4 Sigurðr hjó höfuð af Regin ok þá át hann Fáfnis hjarta ok drakk blóð
2 þeira beggja, Regins ok Fáfnis. Þá heyrði Sigurðr hvað igður mæltu:

Siward struck the head off Rein and then he ate Fathomer's heart and drank the blood of them both, Rein and Fathomer. Then Siward heard what the tits spoke:

42 „Bitt þú, Sigurðr, · bauga rauða;
2 es-a konung-ligt · kvíða mǫrgu.
Mey velt'k ęina, · myklu fęgrsta,
4 gulli gǫdda, · ef þú geta męttir.

“Bind, O Siward, the red bigs;
it is not kingly to fear much.
I know one maiden fairest by much, endowed with gold—if thou mightst get her!”

43 „Liggja til Gjúka · grónar brautir, 2 framm vísa skǫp · folk-líðǫndum;
þar hęfir dýrr konungr · dóttur alna,
4 þá munt, Sigurðr, · mundi kaupa.“

“Toward Yivick lie green highways:
the Shapes show [the way] forth for wandering exiles.
There the wealthy king has begotten a daughter;
her wilt thou, Siward, for a bride-fee buy!”

44 „Salr 's á hǫu · Hindar-fjalli, 2 allr 's hann útan · ęldi sveipinn;
þann hafa horskir · halir um gǫrvan
4 ór ǫ-dǫkkum · ógnar ljóma.“

“A hall is on the high Hinderfell, it is all outside in a fire enwrapped;

that one have wise men made from an un-dark radiance of fear.”

- 45 „Veit’k á fjalli · folk-vitr sofa
2 ok leikr yfir · lindar váði;
Yggr stakk þorni— · aðra fældi
4 hqr-Gefn hali · es hafa vildi.“

“I know on the fell a war-wight sleeping and over her licks the linden’s harm [FIRE].
Ug has stung her with a thorn; the flax-Yevn [LADY] felled the other men who wished to have her.”

- 46 „Knátt, mqr, séa · mey und hjalmi
2 þá’s frá vígi · Vingskorni reið;
má-at Sigrdrífar · svefni bręða,
4 skjoldunga niðr, · fyr skqum norna.“

“Thou canst, lad, see a maiden beneath a helmet, she who from the fray rode on Wingshorner.
One may not break Syedrive’s sleep,
O kinsman of the Shieldings, before the Shapes of the Norns!”

- P5 Sigurðr reið eptir slóð Fáfnis til bólis hans ok fann þat opit ok hurðir af
2 járne ok gétti; af járne vóru ok allir timbr-stokkar í húsinu en grafit í jorð niðr. Þar fann Sigurðr stór-mikit gull ok fyllði þar tvær kistur. Þar tók 4 hann ógis-hjálms ok gull-brynju ok sverðit Hrotta ok marga dýr-gripi ok klyfjaði þar með Grana. En hestrinn vildi eigi fram ganga fyrr en 6 Sigurðr steig á bak hqnum.

Siward rode along Fathomer’s trail to his dwelling and found it open and doors and rabbets of iron. Of iron were also all the timber trunks in the house, and dug down into the earth. There Siward found very much gold and filled there two chests. Then he took the helmet of terror and a golden byrnie and the sword Rotte and many precious things and loaded Grane with them. But the horse did not want to go forth before Siward mounted his back.

Sigrdr is attested in full in R, where it directly proceeds Fáfn. In the manuscript there is no marker of any kind, not even an initial, separating the two “poems”, so that their existence is strictly editorial.

A number of stanzas are also attested in N, the main ms. of VǫlsS. VǫlsS ch. 21 begins:

Brynhildr segir, at tveir konungar þrðust. Hét annarr Hjalmgunnarr; hann var gamall ok hinn mesti hermaðr, ok hafði Óðinn honum sigr heitit, en annarr Agnarr eða Auða bróðir. „Ek fellda Hjalmgunnarr í orrostu, en Óðinn stakk mik svefn-þorni í hefnd þess ok kvað mik aldri síðan skyldu sigr hafa ok kvað mik giptast skulu. En ek strengða þess heit þar í mót at giptast engum þeim, er bręðast kynni.“ Sigurðr męlti: „Kenn oss ráð til stórra hluta.“ Hun svarar: „Þér munuð betr kunna, en með þökkum vil ek kenna yðr, ef þat er nokkut, er vér kunnum, þat er yðr mętti líka, í rúnum eða ǫðrum hlutum, er liggja til hvers hlutar, ok drekkum bæði saman, ok gefi goðin okkr góðan dag, at þér verði nýt ok fregð at mínum vitrleik, ok þú munir eptir þat, er vit réðum.“ Brynhildr fylldi eitt ker ok féřði Sigurði ok męlti:

‘Byrnhild says that two kings fought. One was called Helmguther; he was old and the greatest warrior, and Woden had promised him victory. And the other was called Eyner or Eade’s brother. “I felled Helmguther in battle, but Woden stung me with a sleeping-thorn as revenge for that, and declared that I should never thenceforth have victory, and said that I must marry. But in response I made the vow to marry no man who could be frightened.” Siward spoke: “Teach us counsels regarding great things.” She answers: “Ye will know better, but with thanks I will teach you, if there is anything which we know that may please you, of runes or other things of importance; and let us both drink together, and may the gods give us two a good day, that thou have use and joy from my wisdom and that thou afterwards recall that which we two speak of.” Byrnhild filled a vessel and brought it to Siward and spoke:’

After this the saw cites sts. 5–13 and 15–19 in uninterrupted sequence, and paraphrases sts. 20 ff. (TODO: edit these!). The order of stanzas in N is rather different from that of R. Both mss. have sts. 5–6 and 13, 15–19 in the same place, but the order of sts. 7–12 in between is divergent, as seen by the following table:

- P1 Sigurðr reið upp á Hindarfjall ok stefndi suðr til Frakklands. Á fjallinu 2 sá hann ljós mikit svá sem eldr brynni ok ljómaði af til himins. En er hann kom at þá stóð þar skjald-borg ok upp ór merki. Sigurðr gekk 4 í skjald-borgina ok sá at þar lá maðr ok svaf með ǫllum her-vápnum.
Hann tók fyrst hjálminn af höfði hánun; þá sá hann at þat var kona.
6 Brynjan var fōst sem hon vęri hold-gróin. Þá reist hann með Gram frá

8 höfuð-smátt brynju í gognum niðr ok svá út í gognum báðar ermar.
 Þá tók hann brynju af henni en hon vaknaði ok settisk hon upp ok sá Sigurð ok mēlti:

Siward rode up on the Hinderfell and stood looking south toward Frankland. On the fell he saw a light as great as if a fire burned, and the rays from it went up to heaven. But when he came there, there was a shield-wall rising up out of the ground. Siward went into the shield-wall and saw that a man lay there, and he was asleep in full gear of war. He first took the helmet off his head; then he saw that it was a woman. The byrnie was as fast as if it were grown out of her flesh. With Gram he then cut the byrnie from the head hole down through it and then out through both sleeves. Then he took the byrnie off her, and she awakened and sat herself up and saw Siward and spoke:

1 „Hvat beit brynju? · Hví brá’k svefni?
 2 Hvęrr fēlldi af mér · fōlvar nauðir?“
 „Sigmundar burr, · slēit fyr skōmmu
 4 hrafns hrygg-lundir · hjōrr Sigurðar.“

“What bit the byrnie? Why did I break my sleep?
 Who loosened from me these death-pale chains?”
 “Syemund’s son did just tear off the raven’s loins, and Siward’s sword.”

4 hrygg-lundir | emend.; brē-lundir R

“Long I slept, long was I asleep, long are the guiles of men.
 Weden has caused that I could not break the staves of sleep.”

P2 Sigurðr settisk niðr ok spýrr hana nafns. Hón tók þá horn fullt mjaðar 2 ok gaf hōnum minnis-veig.

Siward set himself down and asks for her name. Then she took a horn full of mead and gave him a draught of memory:

“Hail Day[†]! Hail Day’s sons!
 Hail Night and the kinswoman [= Earth]!
 With unwrathful eyes look ye the way of us two,
 and give the sitters [= us] victory.

1 Dags synir ‘Day’s sons’ | Their identity is uncertain.

2 nipt ‘the kinswoman [= Earth]’ | According to Gylf 10 Earth is the daughter of Night; nipt typically refers to a younger female relative.

3 Ó-řeiðum augum · lítið okkr þinig ‘With unwrathful eyes look ye the way of us two’ | i.e. “behold us two with friendly gaze”. An archaic conception; the grace or wrath of the Gods is conveyed by their “eyes” or “face” looking upon the worshipper. Cf. Hdl 6/2–3. The same thing is found in other ancient literatures, e.g. in the Hebrew Bible, where the most famous example would be the Priestly Blessing of Numbers 6 (“25 May Yahweh light up His face to you and grant grace to you; / 26 May Yahweh lift up His face to you and give you peace.”) Other Biblical examples include Psalms 4:6 (“Lift up the light of Your face to us, Yahweh) and the chorus of Psalm 80 (“Yahweh God of Armies, bring us back. / Light up Your face, that we may be rescued.”)

Hail the Eese[†]! Hail the Ossens[†]!
 Hail this much-giving Fold[†]!
 Speech and manwit[†] give ye to us renowned two,
 and a leecher’s hands, while we live.”

1 Hēilir ésir, · hēilar ósynjur ‘Hail the Eese! Hail the Ossens!’ | Probably formulaic, subverted by Lock in Lok 11; see note there for possible ritual use.

2 sjá in fjöl-nýta fold ‘this much-giving Fold’ | i.e. “the bountiful Earth[†]”; an Old Indo-European expression. In the Norse poetic corpus fold elsewhere refers to ‘land, earth’ without mythological associations, the present st. being the only exception. It is probably a ritual archaism; cf. the Old English Acreboot: Hāl wes þú Folde · fira móðor! ‘Hail be thou, Fold, mother of men!’ and the Old Indian cognate name Pṛthivī (Mother Earth), found frequently in RV. The common Indo-European root is p̥l̥th₂-éwih₂* ‘flat, broad one’; cf. Hfr Hákr 8 (in SkP III), where Earth is the brēið-lēita brúðr Bálgygs ‘broad-faced bride of Baleeyed (= Weden)’. For the epithet ‘much-giving’ cf. Iliad 3.89: ἐπὶ χθονὶ πολυβοτείρῃ ‘upon the much-nourishing earth’, where πολυ- is cognate with ON fjöl-, both coming from PIE pélh₁u-* - pólh₁u-* ‘much, many’.

4 lēknis-hendr ‘a leecher’s hands’ | The hands of a physician, i.e., hands with healing powers. The singular lēknis-bond occurs on the Ribe galder stick (DR EM85;493), edited below under Galders.

- P3 Hon nefndisk Sigrdrífa ok var valkyrja. Hon sagði, at tveir konungar í orrostunni. En Óðinn stakk hana svefn-þorni í hefnd þess ok kvað 6 hana aldri skyldu síðan sigr vega í orrostu, ok kvað hana giftask skyldu, „en sagða’k hánú at strengða’k heit þar í mót, at giptask öngom þeim

 8 manni er hréðask kynni.“ Hann segir ok biðr hana kenna sér speki ef
 hon vissi tíðendi ór ǫllum heimum. Sigrdrífa kvað:

She called herself Syedrive and was a walkirrie. She said that two kings fought. One was called Helmguther; he was then old and the greatest warrior, and Weden had promised him victory. And the other was called Eyner, Eade’s brother, who in no way wished to surrender. Syedrive felled Helmguther in the battle, but Weden stung her with the sleeping-thorn as revenge for that, and declared that she should never thenceforth win victory in battle, and said that she must marry, “but I told him that I in response made a vow to marry no man who could be frightened.” He [= Siward] speaks and asks her to teach him wisdom; if she knew any tidings out of all the Homes[†]. Syedrive quoth:

This emendation is favourable for two reasons: (i) it makes more sense, since the semantic pair bót ‘cure’ : bjarg ‘rescue’ is surely stronger than bók ‘book, beech’ : bjarg ‘rescue’, and since the present stanza is specifically referring to the practical use of the runes; (ii) the pair bót-rúnar : bjarg-rúnar is already found in a runic charm (B 257, edited under Galders from Bryggen).

Grim strands follow the troth-breach;
wretched is the outlaw of vows.¹³⁰

3 simar ‘strands’ | i.e. ‘strands of fate’; cf. HHund I 3, where the norns are said to twist such strands. Often emended to limar ‘ramifications’ in accordance with Reg 4, where that word is used in basically the same context. Such a scribal confusion is easily understood, since s in this position was always spelled with long ʃ in the old mss. The paraphrase (see other note) is not conclusive, since it replaces this word with befnd ‘revenge’.

¹³⁰The punishment is one of torment in the afterlife; see note to Vsp 39. — The whole stanza is paraphrased in VpLS ch. 21: Ok sver eigi rangan eið, því at grimm befnd fylgir gríðrofi. ‘And swear no wrong oath, for grim revenge follows the grith-breach.’

This I counsel thee fourth: if there lives an evil-working woman,

Fragments from the Saw of the Walsings

Introduction

In R, Sigrdr ends abruptly at stanza 27, after which a number of pages have gone missing; the so-called “great lacuna”. The poetry contained in them undoubtedly belonged to the Walsing cycle, specifically concerning the life of Siward.

The author of Vǫls drew heavily from a collection of Walsing-cycle poetry closely related to R. He quotes many stanzas known from R, but also some which do not survive anywhere else—these are the stanzas edited here. They correspond to the story which would have been found in the great lacuna, and it is probable that they derive from the now-lost poems found there.

Outside stood Guthrun, Yivick's daughter, and she this word first of all did say:
“Where is now Siward, the lord of men,
when my kinsmen ride in front?”

- 6 Einn því Hogni · and-svør veitti:
2 „Sundr hofum Sigurð · sverði hogginn;
gnapir é grár jór · yfir gram dauðum.“

Alone did Hain this answer grant:
“We have cut Siward asunder by sword;
the grey steed always neighs over the dead prince.”

- 7 Þá kvað þat Brynhildr · Buðla dóttir:
 2 „væl skuluð njóta · vápna ok níu landa;
 3 einn myndiv Sigurðr · öllu ráða
 4 ef hann lengr lítlu · lifi heldi.“

Then quoth this Byrnhild, Budle's daughter:
 "Well shall ye enjoy weapons and nine lands!
 Alone would Siward rule them all
 if a little longer he had held his life."

Then Byrnhild laughed—the farm all resounded—a single time out of her whole heart:
 "Well shall ye enjoy the lands and thanes, since ye made the brave prince to fall."

- 10 Þá kvað þat Guðrún · Gjúka dóttir:
 2 „Mjök mælir þú · miklar firnar

2 hrafn at meði · hátt kallaði:
 „Ykkir mun Atli · eggjar rjóða

Dead was Siward to the south of the Rhine;
 a raven on a branch loudly called out:
 “On you two will Atle redden his blades;
 the warriors will be destroyed by the oaths!”

Alone did Guthur wake longer than all;
 his foot he took to move, much he took to speak.
 Of that the army-destroyer thought:
 what in the fray they both had said,
 the raven always and the eagle, when home they rode.

First Lay of Guthrun

(Guðrúnarkviða fyrsta)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C10th (0.988)

Meter: Ancient-words-law

Introduction

After Siward's death Guthrun is so upset that she cannot make herself weep.

From the Death of Siward (Frá dauða Sigurðar)

P1 Hér er sagt í þessi kviðu frá dauða Sigurðar ok víkr hér svá til sem þeir
2 drépi hann úti. En sumir segja svá at þeir drépi hann inni í rekkju sinni sofanda. En þýðverskir menn segja svá at þeir drépi hann úti í skógi ok 4 svá segir í Guðrúnar kviðu inni fornu at Sigurðr ok Gjúka synir hefði til þings riðit þá er hann var drepinn—en þat segja allir einnig at þeir 6 sviku hann í tryggð ok vógu at hán um liggjanda ok ó-búnum. Guðrún sat yfir Sigurði dauðum. Hon grét eigi sem aðrar konur en hon var búin 8 til at springa af harmi. Til gengu bēði konur ok karlar at hugga hana en þat var eigi auð-velt. Þat er sagn manna at Guðrún hefði etit af Fáfnis 10 hjarta ok hon skilði því fugls rødd. Þetta er enn kveðit um Guðrúnu:

Here it is said in this lay about the death of Siward, and it is at this point that they slew him outside. But some say that they slew him inside in his chamber asleep. But German men say that they slew him outside in the forest, and so it says in the Ancient Lay of Guthrun that Siward and the sons of Yivick had ridden to the Thing when he was slain—but this they all say in agreement that they betrayed him while he trusted them, and struck at him lying and unarmed. Guthrun sat over Siward, dead. She did not weep like other women, but she was ready to burst apart from sorrow. Both women and men came to her to console her, but that was not easily done. It is the saying of men that Guthrun had eaten of Fathomer's heart, and she therefore understood the speech of birds. This is further said about Guthrun:

The First Lay of Guthrun

- 1 Ár vas þat's Guðrún · gørðisk at deyja, 2 es hön sat sorg-full · yfir Sigurði, gørði-t hön hjúfra · né hön dum sláa
 4 né kvęina umb · sem konur aðrar.

It was of yore that Guthrun made ready to die
 as she sat sorrowful above Siward.
 She did not pant nor beat her hands nor wail about it like other women.

- 2 Gingu jarlar · al-snotrir framm,
 2 þęir's harðs hugar · hana lottu;
 þęgi Guðrún · gráta mátti,
 4 svá vas hön móðug; · mundi hön springa.

Came earls all-clever forth,
 they who would loosen her hard heart;
 nowise could Guthrun weep,
 so moody was she—she would burst apart.

- 3 Sötu ítrar · jarla brúðir
 2 golli búnar · fyr Guðrúnu;
 hver sagði þęira · sinn of-trega
 4 þann's bitrastan · of beðit hafði.

Sat the splendid brides of the earls adorned with gold, before Guthrun.

Each one of them told her own great sorrow,
the most bitter one that she had suffered.

- 4 Þá kvað Gjaflaug, · Gjúka systir:
2 „Mik veit’k á moldu · munar-lausasta;
hefi’k fimm vera · for-spell beðit, 4 tveggja dótra, · þriggja systra, átta bróðra, · þó ek ein lifi.“

Then quoth Yeflie, Yivick’s sister:
“I know myself on earth the most joyless.
Of five husbands I have suffered the loss,
of two daughters, three sisters,
eight brothers—yet I alone live.”

- 5 Þeygi Guðrún · gráta mátti;
2 svá vas hön móðug · at mög dauðan
ok harð-huguð · um hrør fylkis.

Nowise could Guthrun weep;
so moody was she after the lad’s death,
and hard-hearted over the marshaller’s corpse.

- 6 Þá kvað þat Hərborg, · Húna lands dróttning:
2 „Hefi’k harðara · harm at segja:
mínir sjau synir · sunnan lands,
4 verr inn átti, · i val fellu.

Then quoth this Harbury, queen of Hunland:
“I have a harder harm to tell.
My seven sons south of the land,
—my husband the eighth—in battle fell.”

- 7 Faðir ok móðir, · fjórir bróðr,
2 þau á vági · vindr of lék, barði bára · við borð-þili.

My father and mother, four brothers—them on the wave the wind outplayed;
 the breaker beat over the ship-side.

8 Sjölf skylda'k gøfga, · sjölf skylda'k gøtva,
 2 sjölf skylda'k hōndla, · hēl-fōr þeira;
 þat ek allt of þeið · ęin misseri

- 2 svá vas hön mǫðug · at mǫg dauðan
ok harð-huguð · um hrør fylkis.

Nowise could Guthrun weep;
so moody was she after the lad's death,
and hard-hearted over the marshaller's corpse.

- 12 Þá kvað þat Gullrond, · Gjúka dóttir:
2 „Fó kannt, fóstura, · þótt fróð séir, ungu vífi · and-spjöll bera.“
4 Varaði hön at hylja · umb hrør fylkis.

Then quoth this Goldrand, Yivick's daughter:
“Thou canst, foster-mother—though thou be wise—to the young wife give few answers.”
She bade the corpse of the marshal be uncovered.

- 13 Svipti hön bléju · af Sigurði

She cast the cover off of Siward and turned his face before the wife's knees: “Look upon the loved one! Lay your mouth to his lips like thou didst embrace the hale prince.”

- 14 Á leit Guðrún · ęinu sinni;
2 sá hön dǫglings skǫr · dreýra runna,

4 hug-borg jǫfurs · hjǫrvi skorna.

On him looked Guthrun a single time;
she saw the noble's locks run with blood,
the gleaming gaze of the marshaller gone,
the heart-fort [CHEST] of the ruler cut by the sword.

- 15 Þá hné Guðrún · holl við bólstri;
 2 haddr losnaði, · hlýr roðnaði en regns dropi · rann niðr umb kné.

Then Guthrun sank down, slooped against the bolster;
 her hair loosened, her cheek reddened,
 and a drop of rain ran down to her knee.

 2 svát tór flugu · tresk í gognum ok gullu við · gæss í túni,
 4 mérir fuglar · es mér átti.

Then wept Guthrun, Yivick's daughter, so that the tears flew through her veil(?)
 and in response shrieked the geese in the yard,
 the famous fowls which the maiden owned.

2 tresk 'veil(?)' | Guess translation; this word is an unexplained hapax.

- 17 Þá kvað þat Gullrond, · Gjúka dóttir:
 2 „ykkar vissa'k · ástir mestar
 manna allra · fyr mold ofan;
 4 unðir þú hvárki · úti né inni, systir mín, · nema hjá Sigurði.“

Then quoth this Goldrand, Yivick's daughter:
 “I knew the love of you two to be the greatest of all men above the earth.
 Thou wast never content, not outside nor inside,
 O my sister, save beside Siward.”

- 18 „Svá vas mín Sigurðr · hjá sonum Gjúka

 eða véri bjartr steinn · á band dręinn:
 4 jarkna-steinn · yfir ǫðlingum.

“So was my Siward beside the sons of Yivick like were a garlic out of grass grown,

or were a bright stone drawn on a band:
an arkenstone[†] over the athlings.

1–2 Svá vas ... vaxinn ‘So was ... grown’ | These two lines are almost identical to Guðr II 2/1–2. Since the present poem is probably older (Sapp, 2022), it is likely the source.

2 gęir-laukr ‘garlic’ | or ‘spear-leek’. I have opted for this translation based on etymology (cf. OE gār-léac ‘spear-leek’), but the botanical identity is unclear. Guðr II 2 has grónn laukr ‘green leek’ instead. For the cultural importance of leeks and onions see note to Vsp 4.

3–4 eða véri ... ǫðlingum. ‘or were ... athlings.’ | Beaded necklaces were commonly worn by Scandinavian women of the time, and the beads were mostly of opaque coloured glass. Siward is likened to a bright crystal, the sons of Yivick to dull glass.

19 Ek þóttu auk · þjóðans rekkum
2 hverri hērri · Hęrjans dísi;
nú em’k svá lítil · sem lauf séa
4 opt í jǫlstrum · at jǫfur dauðan.

I seemed even to the ruler’s champions higher than each of the Lord of Hosts’ dises [WALKIRRIES].
Now I am as small as if a leaf I were,
high in the willows, after the ruler’s death.

20 Sakna’k í sessi · ok í sęingu
2 míns mál-vinar— · valda męgir Gjúka;
valda męgir Gjúka · mínu bǫlvi
4 ok systr sinnar · sǫrum gráti.

I miss in the seat and in the bed
my confidant—the lads of Yivick are the cause;
the lads of Yivick are the cause of my bale,
and their sister’s [my] bitter weeping.

21 Svá ér of lýða · landi ęyðið
2 sem ér of unnuð · ęiða svarða;
man-a þú, Gunnarr, · gulls of njóta; 4 þęir munu þér baugar · at bana verða es þú Sigurði · svarðir ęiða.

So will ye make the land deserted by folk,
 like ye treated the sworn oaths!
 Thou wilt not, Guthur, enjoy the gold;
 those bigs will for thee become the bane,
 on which thou to Siward didst swear oaths.

Hell-ride of Byrnhild

TODO: INTRODUCTION.

P1 Eptir dauða Brynhildar vóru gōr bōl tvau: annat Sigurði, ok brann þat vefjum var tjōlduð. Svá er sagt at Brynhildr ok með reið'inni á hel-veg 4 ok fór um tún þar er gýgr nōkkur bjó. Gýgr'in kvað:

After Byrnhild's death two pyres were made: one for Siward, and it burned earlier; but Byrnhild was burned on the other, and she was in that chariot which was covered with godweb[†]. It is said that Byrnhild drove with the chariot onto the Hellway and passed through a plot where there lived a certain gow[†]. The gow quoth:

2–3 í reið þeiri er guð-vefjum var tjōlduð 'in that chariot which was covered with godweb' | The tent-covering of the chariot was made of precious garments. For the burial of women in wagons and chariots, cf. TODO (Oseberg ship?).

3 Brynhildr ok með reið'inni á hel-veg 'Byrnhild drove with the chariot on the Hellway' | This gives us some interesting insight into old afterlife beliefs. After Byrnhild is burnt she ends up between the worlds of the dead and the living, the so-called "Hell-way", or road to Hell (the underworld); she is buried in a chariot so that she will be able to travel comfortably. We may presume that the animals driving the chariot were slaughtered and burnt with her on the pyre.

Guther and Hain then took all the gold, Fathomer's inheritance. Hatred was then between the Yivickings and Attle; he blamed the Yivickings for Byrnhild's passing. These were their terms, that they would marry off to him Guthrun; and they gave her a forgetfulness-draught to drink before she agreed to be married off to Attle. The sons of Attle were Earp and Oatle, and Swanhild was Siward's daughter and Guthrun's. Attle invited to his home Guthrun and Hain, and sent Winge or Kneefrith[†]. Guthrun knew his wiles and sent a word with runes, that they should not come, and as a sign she sent Hain the ring Andwaresneat, and tied through it a wolf's hair. Guthrun had asked for Ordrun's hand, Attle's sister, and did not get her; then he got Gleamware, and Hain had Costbeare. Their sons were Solwer and Snower and Yivick. And when the Yivickings came to Attle, then Guthrun asked her sons that they should ask for the life of the Yivickings, but they would not. The heart was cut out of Hain, and Guthrun set in the serpent-yard. He struck his harp and soothed the serpents, but an adder stung him unto the liver. King Thedric was with Attle, and had there lost almost all of his men. Thedric and Guthrun recounted their griefs to each other. She spoke to him and quoth:

1 „Mér vas'k meýja; · móðir mik fódði,
2 björt í búri; · unna'k vel bróðrum—
unds mik Gjúki · gulli reifði,
4 gulli reifði, · gaf Sigurði.

Third Lay of Guthrun

(Guðrúnarkviða þriðja)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C10th (0.731)–early C11th (0.178)

Meter: Ancient-words-law

Introduction

A very short narrative poem of ballad-type, depicting just a single scene. It is especially notable for its depiction of a trial by ordeal (trial by cauldron) and the mention of a woman being drowned in a bog.

Herch, one of Attle's concubines tells Attle that she has seen his wife Guthrun sleeping with Thedric. Attle becomes distressed upon hearing this (P1). Guthrun asks him what is wrong (1), and he responds that Herch has accused her of sleeping with Thedric (2). Guthrun promises to prove her innocence through a trial by ordeal involving picking up a white stone from boiling water (3). She further says that while she and Thedric did sit down together, they did so in mutual grief over the deaths of her brothers (4–5). She tells Attle to summon a German lord named Saxe, who knows how to carry out the trial. Seven hundred men arrive to witness the event (6). Before picking up the stone, Guthrun laments over her brothers' deaths, saying that they would have disputed the accusation through violence, but that she must now prove her innocence by herself (7). She then puts her hand in the boiling water, and unscathed takes out the stones. She holds it up and shows it to the witnesses (8). Attle laughs, knowing that his wife has been faithful, and orders Herch to pick up the stone (9). She does so, but her hands are horribly scorched, and men lead her to a "foul bog", presumably to be drowned. The poet ends by laconically stating that Guthrun in such a way was "reconstituted for her affronts".

The Third Lay of Guthrun

P1 Herkja hét ambótt Atla; hón hafði verit frilla hans. Hón sagði Atla at 2 hón hefði sét Þjóðrek ok Guðrúnu bæði saman. Atli var þá allókátr. Þá kvað Guðrún:

Herch was named the female thrall of Attle; she had been his concubine. She told Attle that she had seen Thedric and Guthrun both together. Attle was then wholly displeased. Then Guthrun quoth:

1 „Hvat ’s þér, Atli? · é, Buðla sonr,
 2 es þér hryggd í hug; · hví hlér þú éva?
 Hitt myndi óðra · jörllum þykkja
 4 at við menn mæltir · ok mik séir.“

“What is with thee, Attle? Always, O son of Bodle, art thou sad at heart—why laughest thou never?

 2 mér í hollu · Herkja sagði

 4 ok léttliga · líni verðið.“

“This troubles me, Guthrun, Yivick’s daughter: in the hall has Herch told me that thou and Thedric beneath thatched roof slept, and ye lightly warded the linen.¹³¹”

¹³¹i.e., they threw off their clothes and slept together.

3 „Þér mun’k alls þess · eiða vinna
 2 at inum hvíta · helga steini, at ek við Þjóðmar · þat-ki átta’k,
 4 es vörðr né verr · vinna knátti,—

“To thee I will swear oaths of all of that—by the white, holy stone—that I did not do such a thing with Thedmar,¹³² which neither wife nor husband has been able to swear upon,—¹³³

¹³²Historically, Thedmar was the father of Thedric, who took over the kingdom after his father's death (see Encyclopedia). Thedmar may here be a scribal error for Thedric, a scribal error for "Thedmar's son", or a nickname due to conflation of the father and son.

¹³³Guthrun says that she will prove her innocence through a trial by ordeal (that is, by lifting "the white holy stone" out of boiling water; see st. 8). She further strengthens her position by pointing out that no reliable person has sworn an oath attesting to her guilt.

4 nema ek halsaða · hęrja stilli,

1 Saxa, · sunn-manna gram 'Saxe, the lord of Southmen' | It seems that the trial by cauldron was still foreign to the poet, who associated it with the Christian Saxons (or "Southmen"). This may date the poem to the time shortly before conversion period, something supported by Sapp (2022)'s statistical model.

Lay of Attle

Introduction

A famously archaic poem.

Attle sends his messenger Kneefrith to Guthur (1). He arrives at Guthur's hall, where the mood is one of unease, and addresses Guthur (2). Kneefrith invites him and his brother Hain to Attle's court (3), offering them treasures, weapons and land (4–5). Guthur asks his brother Hain for advice, since he has not heard of Attle having gold to give away (6).

The Death of Attle (Dauði Atla)

- 2 P1 Guðrún Gjúkadóttir hefndi bróðra sinna, svá sem frégt er orðit. Hon drap fyrst sonu Atla, en eptir drap hon Atla ok brendi hollina ok hirðina alla; um þetta er sjá kviða ort.

Guthrun Yivicksdaughter avenged her brothers, as has become famous. She first killed the sons of Attle, and after that she killed Attle, and burned the hall and the whole hird. Regarding that this lay is wrought.

The Lay of Attle

- 1 Atli sęndi · ár til Gunnars
 2 kunnan sęgg at ríða, · Knéfrøðr vas sá hęitinn;
 at gorðum kom hann Gjúka · ok at Gunnars hęllu, 4 bękkjum arin-gręypum · ok at bjóri svósum.

Attle sent—of yore—to Guthur a well-known messenger to ride; Kneefrith[†] he was called.
 To the yards of Yivick he came, and to the hall of Guthur;
 to the hearth-surrounding benches, and to the lovely beer.

- 2 Drukku þar drótt-męgir · —ęn dyljęndr þogðu—
 2 vín í val-hęllu, · vręiði sýusk þęir Húna;
 kallaði þá Knéfrøðr · kaldri røddu,
 4 sęggr inn suð-røni · sat hann á bękk hóm:

There the dright-lads [WARRIORS] drank—but the concealed ones shut up—wine in the walhall; they feared the wrath of the Huns.
 Then called Kneefrith with cold voice,
 the southern messenger, he sat on a high bench:

1 dyljęndr ‘concealed ones’ | Finnur Jónsson (1932) reasonably interprets this as referring to Attle’s spies at Guthur’s court.

2 val-hęllu ‘the walhall’ | The interpretation of this compound is difficult in the current context. The first element val- could be (1) valr ‘falcon’, referring to the aristocratic hunting practice; (2) valr ‘Wale’[†], cognate with ‘Welsh’ but in ON referring to the French or Romans, stressing the southern location or appearance of the hall; or (3) valr ‘(collective) the battle-slain’, foreshadowing the inevitable death (feyness[†]) of the Yivickings[†]. If (3) is correct the word is linguistically identical to Walhall[†], Weden’s hall, whither the battle-slain go.

- 3 „Atli mik hingat sęndi · ríða øręndi,
 2 mar inum mél-gręypa, · Myrk-við inn ó·kunna at biðja yðr, Gunnarr, · at it á bękk kómið
 4 með hjolmum arin-gręypum · at sókja hęim Atla.

“Attle sent me hither to ride with an errand, on the bit-champing steed through Mirkwood uncharted—to ask you, O Guthur, that ye two [= Guthur and Hain] on the bench come, with hearth-surrounding helmets, to seek the home of Attle.

- 4 Skjöldu kneguð þar veltja · ok skafna aska,
 2 hjalma gull-roðna · ok Húna mengi,
 silfr-gyllt sǫðul-kléði, · sęrki val-rauða,
 4 dafar, darraða, · drǫsla mál-grępa.

There ye might choose shields, and shaven ash-spears, helmets gold-reddened, and the multitude of the Huns, silver-gilt saddle-cloths, blood-red serks,
 daves, spears, bit-champing steeds.

- 5 Vǫll létsk ykkur ok myndu gefa · víðrar Gnit-heiðar 2 af gęiri gjallanda · ok af gylltum stǫfnum, stórar meißmar · ok staði Danpar,
 4 hris þat it męra · es meðr Myrk-við kalla.“

He also declared himself willing to give you two the field of wide Gnit-heath,
 [and] of yelling spears and of gilded prows, great treasures and the place of Danp;
 the renowned brush which men call Mirkwood.

- 6 Höfði vatt þá Gunnarr · ok Hǫgna til sagði:
 2 „Hvat ręðr þú okkr, sęgr hinn ǫri, · alls vit slíkt heyrum?
 Gull vissa’k ękki · á Gnit-heiði,
 4 þat’s vit ętlim-a · annat slíkt.

His head turned Guthur then, and said to Hain:
 “What dost thou counsel us two, O younger man, as such a thing we hear?
 I knew of no gold on the Gnit-heath which we two should not own as much of.

- 7 Sjau ęigu vit sal-hús · sverða full,
 2 hverju ’ru þęira · hjǫlt ǫr gulli;
 mín vęit’k mar bętstan · en męki hvassastan,
 4 boga bękk-sǫma · en brynjur ǫr gulli;

We own seven hall-houses filled with swords—
 on each of them is a golden hilt;
 I know my horse to be the best and [my] sword the sharpest,

[my] bow bench-fit and [my] byrnies golden,

- 8 hjalm ok skjöld hvítastan, · kominn ór höll Kíars;
2 çinn 's mínn betri · en sé allra Húna.“

[my] helmet and shield the whitest, come from Choser's hall;
mine alone is better, than [those] of all of the Huns might be!”

- 9 „Hvat hyggr brúði bendu · þá's hón okkr baug sendi,
2 varinn vóðum heiðingja? · Hykk at hón vornuð byði!
 Hár fann'k heiðingja · riðit í hring rauðum;
4 ylfskr es vegr okkarr · at riða ørenði.“

“What thinkest thou the bride meant when she sent us a bigh covered by a heath-dweller's [WOLFS] cloth? I think she offered a warning!
A heath-dweller's hair I found wrapped round the red ring:
wolver is our road, if we ride that errand!¹³⁵”

¹³⁵That it is the more cautious Hain who speaks here is clear from Guthur's response in the following stanzas. Whereas Hain judges the wolf-hair to be a warning of Hunnish treachery, Guthur thinks that it is a warning that wolves will steal his treasure if he does not show up.

- 10 Niðjar-gi hvottu Gunnar · né náungr annarr, 2 rýnendr né ráðendr, · né þeir's ríkir vóru;
 kvaddi þá Gunnarr · sem konungr skyldi,
4 mérr í mjóð-ranni · af móði stórum:

No kinsmen Guthur, nor any other relation,
not counselors nor advisors, nor those who were powerful.
Then Guthur announced—as a king should,
renowned in the mead-hall—with great spirit:

- 11 „Rís-tu nú, Fjörnir, · lát-tu á flet vaða
2 greppa gull-skálir · með gumna höndum!

“Rise now, Ferner! Let on the benches wade forth the golden bowls of warriors along the hands of men!

1 Fjörnir ‘Ferner’ | An otherwise unknown servant.

- 12 Ulfur mun ráða · arfi Niflunga, 2 gamlir gran-varðir, · ef Gunnars missir;
 birnir blakk-fjallir · bíta þref-tønnum, 4 gamna grey-stóði, · ef Gunnarr né kómr-at.“

The wolf will rule the inheritance of the Nivlings—
 the old grey guardians [WOLVES]—if Guthur is absent.
 Black-furred bears will bite with wrangling teeth—amusing the bitch-pack—if Guthur comes not.”

- 13 Leiddu land-rögni · lyðar ó·neisir, 2 grátendr, gunn-hvatan, · ór garði Húna;
 þá kvað þat inn øri · ęrfi-vorðr Högna:
 4 „Heilir farið nú ok horskir · hvar's ykkur hugr tęgir!“

Unshamed men led the lord of the land, weeping, the battle-bold man out of the yards of the Huns.
 Then quoth this the young inheritance-ward [SON] of Hain:
 “Fare ye two now whole and wise wherever your heart may draw you!”

1 lyðar ó·neisir ‘unshamed men’ | Compare the long-line on the Thorsberg chape (- 160–240 AD): ulþuþe-war · ni wajē-mārik ‘Wolthew, the not ill-famed [FAMOUS]’.

- 14 Fetum létu fróknir · of fjöll at þyrja
 2 mar ina mél-greypu, · Myrk-við inn okunna;
 hristisk ǫll Hún-mörk · þar's harð-móðgir fóru,
 4 vróku þeir vand-styggva · völlu al-gróna.

With strides the braves made the bit-champing steed
 rush o'er the fells through Mirkwood uncharted.
 All Hunmark shook where the hard-minded went forth;
 they drove the whip-shy horse along the allgreen fields.

- 15 Land sǫu þeir Atla · ok lið-skjalfar djúpar;
 2 Bikka greppar standa · á borg inni höu, sal of suðr-þjóðum, · slęinn sess-meðum,

 4 bundnum rōndum, · blęikum skjōldum,

The land of Attle they saw, and ravines deep,
 Bicke[†]'s soldiers standing on the high stronghold,
 the hall of the southfolk built with seat-beams,
 with bound rims, with pale shields,

16 dafar, darraða; · en þar drakk Atli
 2 vín í val-hōllu; · vęðir sōtu úti at varða þeim Gunnari · ef þeir hér vitja kōmi 4 með gęiri gjallanda · at vękja gram hildi.

daves, spears. And there drank Attle wine in the wal-hall—watchmen sat outside to watch for Guthur's men, if they came here to visit, with yelling spears to wake the ruler with war.

17 Systir fann þeira snemmst · at þeir í sal kvōmu,
 2 brōðr hęnnar báðir, · bjōri vas hōn líttr drukkin:
 „Ráðinn est nú, Gunnarr, · hvat munt, ríkr, vinna
 4 við Húna harm-brōgðum? · Hōll gakk þú ór snemma!

Their sister found soonest they they had come into the hall—her brothers both—on beer was she lightly drunk: “Betrayed art thou now, Guthur; what wilt thou, powerful man, work against the Hunnish harm-tricks? Go soon out of the hall!¹³⁶” ¹³⁶Before anything evil might happen.

18 Bętr hęðir þú, brōðir, · at þú í brynju fōrir,
 2 sęm hjōlmum arin-greypum · at sęa hęim Atla;
 sętir þú í sōðlum · sól-hęiða daga,
 4 nái nauð-fōlva · létir nornir gráta,

Better hadst thou, brother, if thou hadst gone in byrnie with hearth-surrounding helmets, to see the home of Attle;
 if thou hadst set in the saddle during sun-bright days need-pale corpses; if thou madest the norns cry,

- 19 Húna skjald-meyjar · hęrfi kanna
 2 en Atla sjalfan · létir í orm-garð koma;
 nú 's sá orm-garðr · ykkir of folginn.“

[and] the Hunnish shield-maidens to know the harrow;¹³⁷ and Attle himself hadst thou brought in the snake-pit—now that snake-pit has swallowed you two!”

¹³⁷i.e. if he turned the Hunnish shield-maidens into enslaved farmhands.

Guther answers:

- 20 „Sęinað 's nú, systir, · at samna Niflungum, 2 langt 's at lęita · lýða sinnis til, of rosmu-fjöll Rínar, · rekka ó·nęissa.“

“Tis late now, sister, to gather the Nivlings;
 'tis far to look for the support of men:
 over the great fells of the Rhine for unshamed warriors.”

- 21 Fengu þęir Gunnar · ok í fjǫtur settu, 2 vin Borgunda, · ok bundu fastla;
 sjau hjó Hǫgni · sverði hvǫssu
 4 en inum átta hratt hann · í ęld hęitan.

They caught Guther and in fetters placed him
 —the friend of the Burgends—and bound him firmly.
 Hain smote seven with a sharp sword,
 and the eighth one he threw into hot fire.

2 vin Borgunda ‘the friend of the Burgends’ | The historic Guther was king of the Burgundians. The manuscript has a small stroke above the n that abbreviates the syllable ir, indicating the plural vinir ‘friends’, who would then be the people binding Guther. This is probably due to a scribal misunderstanding of a not uncommon type, since the significance of the kenning had been forgotten. It is clearly old, for in Walder 46 Walder addresses Guther, whom he is just about to fight, by the identical phrase wine Burgenda.

- 22 Svá skal frókn · fjǫndum vęrjask;
 2 Hǫgni varði · hęndr Gunnars.
 frógu fróknan · ef fjǫr vildi
 4 Gotna þjóðann · gulli kaupa.

So shall a brave guard himself against foes;
 Hain guarded the hands of Guthur.
 They asked the brave [Guthur] if his [Hain's] life he wished—the ruler of the Gots—to buy with gold.¹³⁸

1 Svá ... vęrjask | Line moved from the last st. to this one since it seems to connect semantically with the immediately following line, and results in two typical four-line stanzas.

¹³⁸The Huns try to make Guthur (the “ruler of the Gots”, cf. sts. 1, 3, 10) pay for Hain's life. Guthur instead responds with the following.

23 „Hjarta skal mér Hǫgna · í hendi liggja blóðugt, ór brjósti · skorit bald-riða, saxi slíðr-bęitu, · syni þjóðans.“

“The heart of Hain shall lie in my hands:
 bloody from the breast, cut from the bold rider [= Hain], with a slide-biting sax, from the son of the sovereign [= Hain].”

3 saxi slíðr-bęitu ‘slide-biting sax’ | A short-sword with a blade so sharp that it draws blood when one slides the finger across it.

24 Skóru þęir hjarta · Hjalla ór brjósti, blóðugt, ok á bjóð lögðu · ok bǫru þat fyr Gunnar.

They cut the heart of Helle from the breast, bloody, and on a platter laid it, and bore it before Guthur.

25 Þá kvað þat Gunnarr, · gumna dróttinn:
 „Hér hefi’k hjarta · Hjalla ins blauða, ólíkt hjarta · Hǫgna ins frókna,
 es mjök bifask · es á bjóði liggr;
 bifðisk hǫlfu meirr · es í brjósti lá!“

Then quoth this Guthur, the lord of men:
 “Here have I the heart of Helle the soft—unlike the heart of Hain the bold!— which quivers greatly when on the platter it lies;
 it quivered twice as much when in the breast it lay.”

- 26 Hló þá Hogni · es til hjarta skóru
 2 kvikvan kumbla-smið · —klökkva síðst hugði.
 Blóðugt þat á bjóð lögðu · ok bóru fyr Gunnar.

Hain then laughed as to the heart they cut the living wound-smith [WARRIOR = Hain]; he thought least of sobbing.
 Bloody on a platter they laid it, and bore it before Guthur.

- 27 Męrr kvað þat Gunnarr, · Gęir-Niflungr:

Renowned Guthur quoth this, the Spear-Nivling:
 “Here have I the heart of Hain the bold —unlike the heart of Helle the soft!— which quivers lightly when on the platter it lies;
 it quivered not so much when in the breast it lay.

Greenlendish Speeches of Attle

(Atlamól in grónlęndsku)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): late C11th (0.472)

Meter: Speeches-meter

Introduction

The Greenlendish Speeches of Attle are only preserved in R. The poem is composed in Speeches-meter throughout. Unlike the preceding Akv, it seems actually to have been composed in one of the Norse settlements on Greenland, for in st. 18 the poet makes reference to a “white bear”. The polar bear (Ursus maritimus) is indeed found on Greenland, but not on Iceland or the Scandinavian peninsula. To what inhospitable northern wastes the Norse had brought the legends about Attle (Attila)!

The language of the poem is noticeably younger than its predecessor; most notably the sound change vr- > r- is consistently applied.

8 Guðrún þá kvaddi hon sonu sína.

Guthrun then went to the sea after she had slain Atle; walked out into the sea and wanted to take her own life. She could not sink. She was driven across the firth to the land of king Enacker. He got her. Their sons were Sarrel and Earp and Hamthrew. There Swanhild, Siward's daughter was raised up. She was married to Erminric the powerful; with him was Bicke[†]. He counseled that Randwigh, the king's son, should rape her; this Bicke told the king. The king had Randwigh hanged and Swanhild trampled under horses' feet. But when Guthrun learned of this she called on her sons.

West Germanic Heroic Poetry

Lay of Hildbrand

(Hildebrandslied)

Dating: C8th

Meter: Ancient-words-law

Introduction

For the text of original poem I present the manuscript text with as few textual emendations as possible. As for the orthography, I have found it impossible to produce a normalised without too heavily distorting the received text, being as it is, a blend of several dialects (one need only observe the treatment of the name Thedric, which appears thrice, and each time in a markedly different form). Apart from my typical practice of capitalising proper names, marking prefixes with ⟨·⟩ and compounds with ⟨-⟩, and using acute accents to signify long vowels, circumflex accents to signify now-monophthongised original diphthongs, and overdots to mark nasal vowels, I have done the following changes in order to clarify etymological relationships and make the text somewhat more wieldy. Of these, 8–10 have also been noted in the apparatus where they occur:

1. Consistently replaced both p (wynn) and uu with w.
2. Consistently replaced c with k.
3. Consistently replaced qu with kw.
4. Consistently replaced t with t̥ in positions affected by the Second Sound Shift.
5. Replaced th with þ.
6. Replaced e with ē when reflecting an original a-vowel affected by i-mutation.
7. Replaced ó with ō where originally an a.

8. Removed unetymological double nn.
9. Restored initial h- where etymological and/or metrically required.
10. Removed initial h- unetymological and/or metrically deficient.

The punctuation of the original, entirely consisting of interpuncts, at times representing metrical breaks, at others sporadically placed, has not been retained.

Where they appear in cæsuræ, the words kwad Hilti-brant ‘Hildbrand quoth’ (found in ll. 30, 49, and 58) replace the usual interpunct. Due to their hypermetrical nature, I had originally planned to remove these, and instead indicate the speaker in the margins—but after comparison with various Norse stanzas (e.g. Reg 3, wherein the words kvað Loki ‘Lock quoth’ appear in the stanza’s first cæsuræ), I have come to believe that these represent an ancient oral interjection, seemingly going back as far as the Migration Period (as it seems incredulous to think that the scribe of ms. should have influenced the four centuries younger scribe of R in such a minor point.)

Summary

The poet begins with a short formulaic introduction; he is relating older stories (1–2). The two duellists, Hildbrand and Hathbrand, father and son, arm themselves and ride into battle at the head of two opposing armies (3–6). They speak, and Hildbrand asks Hathbrand for his name and lineage (7–13). Hathbrand gives his name and ancestry; his father was the warrior Hildbrand, who abandoned him as a newborn. This was long ago, and Hathbrand does not think him still alive (14–29). Hearing this, Hildbrand calls on God as witness, and offers his son a golden torc as a token of loyalty (30–34). Hathbrand takes this as an insulting trick. He proclaims that wealth should be won by struggle alone and accuses Hildbrand of having grown old through treachery (35–40); he has heard from sailors on the Mediterranean that his father is dead (41–43).

After this straight-forward narrative sequence three short speeches follow, in the ms. all spoken by Hildbrand. The second is certainly spoken by Hildbrand, but the other two may be misplaced or misattributed.

1. Hildbrand reflects on his son’s prosperity: from his clothes he can tell that he has a good lord, and that he, unlike himself, has not suffered the fate of exile (44–47).
2. Hildbrand calls on God, and laments that, after thirty years at war, he is now forced to fight against his own son. Still, Hathbrand should easily be able to kill such an old man as Hildbrand, if he has strength and fate on his side (48–56).
3. Hildbrand (or Hathbrand, and there is a case for emending here) says that only the most cowardly easterner could refuse the fight so greatly desired. Let both men fight their hardest, and when the duel is over the winner will strip the armour of the other (57–61).

The two men then throw their javelins into each other's shield and rush at each other, hacking away at their shields until they become worthless (62–67). Here the poem abruptly ends.

Hathbrand spoke, Hildbrand’s son:
 “This our liegemen have said to me—
 the old and learned, they who earlier lived:
 that Hildbrand was my father called—I am called Hathbrand.
 Of yore he turned east; he fled Edwaker’s hate, away with Thedric and his multitude of thanes.
 He left in the land a little one to stay;
 a bride in the bower, a bairn ungrown, heritage-less. He rode away to the east,
 at the time when Thedric was in great need of my father—that was so friendless a man!
 He was toward Edwaker utterly hostile;

the dearest of thanes under Thedric.
 He was always in the front of the troop; him did always the fighting gladden;
 known was he among keen men.—
 I guess not that he still live.”

¹⁴²The association between bighs[†] (armlets, torcs) and a warrior’s honour is well attested; see Encyclopedia.
 This encounter is particularly reminiscent of Hárþ 42.

Hathbrand spoke, Hildbrand’s son:
 “By his spear shall man win gifts,

 Thou art for thee, old Hun, utterly clever;
 thou dost tempt me with thy words—at me wilt thou hurl thy spear!
 Thou art thus an aged man, since thou always didst work deceit.—
This seafarers said to me in the west over the Wendle-sea: that war took that man; dead is Hildbrand, Harbrand’s son!”

40 bist | pist ms.

36 mit gêru skal man · geba in·fahan ‘By his spear shall man win gifts’ | This ancient mindset was codified by the Indians as part of the kṣatra-dharma, the code of the Warrior-caste (kṣatriya), which explicitly forbade them from taking gifts. So in Mahabharata 12.192.73, a kṣatriya king refuses a gift from a priest (brāhmaṇa), for “it is the duty prescribed for a kṣatriya that he must fight and protect (people). Kṣatriya are said to be the givers, then, how can I take (this) from you?” (Hara (1974) transl., see further there.)

42 Wëntil-sêo ‘Wendle-sea’ | The Mediterranean, the name referring to the Wandals who for a time ruled North Africa.

 I roamed for sixty summers and winters from the land, where I always was placed in the troop of shooters,

 as at no fortress my bane was fastened.—
 Now shall my very child hew at me with his sword, strike me with his blade, or I become his bane.
 Yet mayst thou now easily—if thy zeal avail thee—
 from such a hoary man win the garb, bear away the booty—if thou have any right thereto!”

56 bi·rahanen | bibrahamen ms.

48 waltant got ‘O Ruler God!’ | Cf. OE wealdend god, OS waldand god. Apparently a common West Germanic poetic expression.

48 wê-wurt ‘woeful weird’ | wurt ‘weird’ here meaning ‘inexorable course of events’, not the norn; cf. ON grimmar urðir ‘grim “weirds”’ TODO.

49 sumaro ġnti wintro · sehs-tik ‘sixty summers and winters’ | i.e. thirty years. Cf. Beow 1498, 1769: bund misséra ‘a hundred half-years’. Hathbrand must then be thirty years old, while Hildbrand is in his fifties or sixties.

50 skeotāntero ‘shooters’ | Cf. Beow 702, where the OE cognate sceótend stands for “warriors” in general.

54 ibu dir dín ġllen taok ‘if thy zeal avail thee’ | Formulaic. Cf. Beow 572b–573: [...] · Wýrd oft nęreð // un-fęgne eorl · þonne his ġllen déab. ‘Weird often saves the un-fey[†] earl[†] when his zeal avails.’

60–61 hręgilo hruomen muotġi ... desero brunnóno bêdero waltan ‘of these garments may boast ... both these byrnies wield’ | Like in the Iliad, the winner is expected to strip the loser of armour.

Widsith spoke, unlocked his word-hoard,
he who through the most tribes on earth and nations had journeyed. Often on the bench he received delightful treasures. From the Mirgings his ancestry stemmed. Together with Elhild, the good peace-weaveress, for the first time he had sought out the Reth-King's realm, east of the Angles, [the realm of] Erminric[†], the fierce oath-breaker. He then began a long speech:

6 freoþu-wębban ‘peace-weaveress’ | A woman used in a political marriage to bring peace between two tribes or families, in this case apparently between King Edwin (see ll. 97–98) and the Gots.

7 Hreð-cyniges ‘Reth-King’ | i.e. the king of the Reth-Gots, which is apparently just a poetic name for the (Eastern) Gots; cf. ll. 18, 57, 88–89.

So passing through fates they wander,
 the song-men of mankind, through many lands;
 they say their needs, speak thoughtful words;
 whether in the south or north they meet some one,

gay in songs, unstingy with gifts,
who for the old troop will rear up doom[†], accomplish earlship until all goes away, light and life together. He who works praise has under the heavens a high, firm doom.

Deer

(Deor)

Dating: TODO

Meter: Ancient-words-law

A dirge from the Exeter Book. The poem briefly summarizes the tragic lives of five figures from Germanic heroic legend, each ending with the refrain þæs ofer-eode · þisses swá mæg ‘That passed over; this may likewise.’ After this he reflects on fate, and finally tells of his own tragedy.

1. Wayland the Smith, who was captured by the tyrant Nithad and forced to make jewelry for him and his family. He took revenge by raping
2. Nithad’s daughter, Beadhild. The child born from this act was Woody (OE Wudga), an obscure hero.
3. Mathild, the protagonist of a poorly attested love tragedy.
4. Thedric the Great, who ruled over the Gots before
5. Erminric.

The name Déor is the ancestor of modern English “deer”, and can mean this in Old English as well, but it can also mean ‘beast, animal’. It is not otherwise known as a personal name, but we may perhaps compare Fáfn 2, where the young hero Siward[†] calls himself gǫfugt dýr ‘noble beast/deer’.

Wayland[†] with worms his exile experienced;
 the one-minded earl hardship did suffer;
 had him for companions sorrow and longing, winter-cold exile; woes he often found,
 since Nithad[†] on him fetters did lay;
 heavy sinew-bonds on the better man.
That passed over; this may likewise.

For Beadhild[†] was not her brothers' deaths on her heart so sore, as her own thing, that she clearly had understood, that she was pregnant. Never could she bravely think out what about that she should do.
That passed over; this may likewise.

We have learned of Erminric[†]'s wolver nature; he wielded widely the folk of the realm of the Gots—that was a grim king!
 Sat many a man by sorrows bound,
 woes in his thoughts; wished aplenty that the kingdom might be overcome.
That passed over; this may likewise.

23 þæt wæs grim cyning! 'that was a grim king!' | Formulaic; cf. Beow 11b: þæt wæs gód cyning! 'That was a good king!'

One sits grieved with sorrow, of blessings bereft;
 his heart darkens; to himself he thinks that endless must be his share of hardships.
 He may then think that throughout this world

the Wise Lord turns coat aplenty.
 To many an earl honour he shows,
 sure success—to another a share of woes.

36 þæt ic bi mé sylfum · sæcgan wille, þæt me eorla hléo · ær ge·sealde.

 42 Þæs ofer-eode, · þisses swá mæg!

This of myself I wish to say,
 that for a while I was the Heedenings's shop,
 dear to their lord—Deer was my name.
 I had for a multitude of winters a good retinue,
 a hold[†] bread-giver, until Harrend now,
 the lay-crafty man the land-right has received,
 that to me the shelter of earls of yore did grant.
That passed over; this may likewise.

Miscellaneous Runic Poetry

Introuction to Runic Poetry

Not all poetry preserved in Runic inscriptions is included here; see below under Galders. The stanza from the Rök runestone will be found under Norse Heroic Poetry, and the Runic version of the Dream of the Rood under Christian poetry.

Metrically the poetry is generally in Ancient-words-law. A few fragments from Jutland are in Leeds-meter and two from Sweden are in Court-recited meter.

Three Rune Poems

Introduction to the Rune Poems

TODO: Acrophonic principle

The order and names of the letters in the Runic alphabets or futharks stayed relatively consistent throughout the many centuries and countries in which they were used. This can probably be ascribed to the rune poems—poetic lists of the names of each rune with a short explanation, passed down orally as mnemonic devices to aid early Germanic learners, who were doubtless far more accustomed to learn by heart spoken poems than written letters.

Three such rune poems survive, from three countries: England, Norway, and Iceland. The English rune poem documents the English futhorc, while the Norwegian and Icelandic document the Scandinavian younger futhark.

When compared to the Common Germanic elder futhark, these two daughter scripts have taken opposing paths. Whereas the English futhorc has appended several letters for new vowels to the end of the rune row, the Scandinavian futhark has instead done away with numerous runes, namely those for ng, plosives d, g, p, the semi-vowel w and the vowels o and e, along with the obscure hook-shaped rune (TODO). That much of this simplification was probably intentional, rather than the result of neglect or language change, is seen from the following facts.

First, several of the lost runes stood for sounds that did not undergo any major sound shifts in the North Germanic languages in the relevant time period. For instance, all modern Scandinavian dialects still clearly distinguish between the initial consonants in the descendants of dagr ‘day’ and Týr ‘Tew[†]’, and most even have the same articulation of these consonants as modern English.

Second, in two archaic runic inscriptions we find clear proof that the names and sound values of some of the lost runes were still remembered and passed down even after the adoption of the simplified younger futhark. On the Swedish Rök stone (Ög 136), which is mostly composed in the younger futhark, runes of the elder futhark are used in a cipher, which works in the following way: Every younger futhark rune representing two distinct phonemes, where one of those was the sound value of that rune in the elder futhark system, and the other has been assimilated from a lost rune, is replaced by the elder futhark rune whose value it assimilated. For instance, the k rune, which in the elder futhark stood for only /k/, but which in the younger futhark stands for both /k/ and /g/, is replaced with the old g rune. A similar instance of two-scriptedness is found on the Ingelsta stone (Ög 43), where the old d rune is used in an otherwise younger futhark inscription, probably standing for its name dagR ‘day’, which is also attested as a male given name.

Third, there is virtually no regional variation in which runes disappear in the transition from elder to younger futhark. There is some variation in their shapes, but there is no region which, say, simplifies only the plosive consonants t/d, k/g, b/p > t, k, b, but retains the written distinction between o and u—they all go away at once.

These facts point away from neglect or a natural development of the script—they instead suggest deliberate reform. Since we lack historical sources, the motivations behind such a reform can only be guessed at, but making the script simpler may have been intended to increase literacy by making it easier to learn and faster to write. If this were the case it was certainly successful: the transition to the simplified younger futhark brings with it a huge increase in inscriptions in Scandinavia, along with interest in various ciphers, and a new tradition of inscribed stones in Denmark, where they were previously unknown.

This new system also quickly gave rise to even more simplified systems, like the “short-stave” runes found already on the C9th Rök stone, or the “staveless” runes known from northern Sweden. Both of these variants make it even faster to write on materials like wood, wax and bone; the runes also take up less space—very useful for carvers writing on limited surfaces.

In any case, the names of the runes seem to have survived these developments. Of the 16 runes found in both the English and Icelandic (which appears to be more conservative than the Norwegian) rune poems, 10—f, r, h, n, i, j, s, b, m and l—have etymologically identical names. Three of the remaining six—þ, a and t—in the Icelandic stand for words with clear Heathen associations—Thurse, Os, and Tew—and so may have been changed deliberately after the conversion of England, rather than lost in the process of oral transmission. Two more—u and k—have names which agree in form but not in meaning. Thus it is only the old ᚱ-rune where this is total disagreement about its ancient name. This is easily understood, since the sound which that rune designated was lost in early Old English.

The Norwegian Rune Poem

Dating: Medieval.

Meter: Unclear.

The Norwegian rune poem is clearly very closely related to the Icelandic. With the exception of runes 2 (úr 'slag') and 4 (óss 'river-mouth'), the names of the runes are identical, as are many of the kennings used to describe them.

Still the language is unmistakably that of mediæval Norway. As can be seen from the rhymes and alliteration the following uniquely Norwegian sound changes have occurred:

- hl, hn, hr > l, n, r (2 leypr < hleypr; 8 neppa < hneppa; 5 rossum < hrossum).
- rst > st (5 vęsta < versta)

1 𐀀 Fé vęldr fręnda rógi; · fōðisk ulfr í skógi.

Wealth causes the strife of kinsmen; the wolf feeds itself in the wood.

2 𐀁 Úr 's af illu jarni; · opt leypr ręinn á hjarni.

Galders: Poetic Charms, Spells, and Curses

Under this section are gathered sundry galders[†] (metrical magic charms) attested in Old Germanic languages. I have only included those with clear Heathen or otherwise traditional elements (especially certain poetic formulae known from older texts). Thoroughly Christian prayers are found below under “Poetry on Christian Subjects”.

Continental Germanic galders

The Two Merseburg galders

Dating: TODO.

Meter: Ancient-words-law, Galders-law

These two galders, preserved in a manuscript (TODO) are some of the only surviving examples of genuine Heathen galders from the continent. Both share a common two-part structure, each beginning with an historiola—a “historical” account describing the successful effects of the galder in the mythic past—followed by an imperative commanding that the willed magic effect take place in the present.

The first galder begins with the historiola describing a group of supernatural women in the midst of a battle, affecting its outcome by fastening or loosening fetters. The imperative then commands that some fetters in the present be destroyed, so that captive(s) may escape.

The second galder begins with the historiola describing a group of Gods riding through the woods. Among them is Balder[†], whose young foal sprains its foot. Three Gods—the otherwise unknown goddess Sithguth[†], the goddess Sun[†], the god Weden[†]—in turn chant a healing galder over it. The imperative—apparently the galder sung by Weden—then commands that a present sprain be healed.

2 suma hapt heptidun · suma hẽri lẽzidun suma klubodun · umbi kuonjo-widi 4 in·sprink hapt-bandun · in·far fĩgandun
 .H.

Of yore sat dises, sat here, then there:
some fastened fetters, some hindered armies,

some cleaved shackles (TODO!).—
 Destroy the fetter-bonds, lead the way from the fiends!
 .H.

5 .H. | The meaning of this letter, which is very clear and written in the same hand as the galders, is uncertain. To me the most convincing suggestion is that it be read as .N., short for Latin nomen ‘name’, presumably the name of the person whom the singer wishes to free from the fetters.

Phol and Weden journeyed in the woods;
 then was the foot of Balder’s foal sprained.
 Then him Sithguth[†] begaled[†]—Sun[†] her sister;
 then Frie[†] begaled him—Full[†] her sister;
 then Weden begaled him, as well he knew:
 “Like bone-sprain, like blood-sprain, like joint-sprain!
 Bone to bone,
 blood to blood,
 joint to joints, like were they glued together!”

3 bi·guol ‘begale’ | third past singular of bi-galan ‘begale’, transitive of galan ‘gale, sing a galder’. This verb is the origin of the noun “galder”, literally ‘something galed’. Cf. Oddrgr TODO, wherein a woman “gales” “bitter galders” over another in order to help her in childbirth.

4 bi·guol en ‘begaled him’ | i.e. “sang galders over him”

Against wyrms (Contra vermes)

Dating: ?

Meter: Ancient-words-law

A manuscript charm against wyrms located in the bone-marrow, probably thought to cause aching. The galder calls upon a chief worm, Nesse, and its nine offspring, to depart from the patient. It lays out a path for the worms, who are to leave the sufferer's body and instead go into an arrow or sharp point (strála), probably a ritual implement used to pierce the affect area.

The structure “Go from X to Y, from Y to Z” may be very old, as it is also found in Romani charms collected by Leland (1891, pp. 27, 28, 95) The charm on p. 95 is also against wyrms. Like in our galder the wyrms (kirmora, from Sanskrit kṛmi, which is probably related to Germanic wurmiz*, although the difference in the initial consonant is unusual—perhaps a taboo formation?) are to leave the body and instead go into the ritual implement, in the Gypsy charm an ointment. I take me the freedom to reproduce this charm in full, with Leland's introduction and translation:

“Before sunrise wolf's milk (Wolfsmilch, rukeskro tçud) is collected, mixed with salt, garlic, and water, put into a pot, and boiled down to a brew. With a part of this the afflicted spot is rubbed, the rest is thrown into a brook, with the words:—

Kirmora jánen ándre tçud Andrál tçud, andré sir Andrál sir, andré páñi, Pansá kiyá dádeske, Kiyá Niváseske Pçándel tumen shelehá Eñávárdesh teñá!

“Worms go in the milk, From the milk into the garlic, From the garlic into the water, With the water to (your) father, To the Nivasi, He shall bind you with a rope, Ninety-nine (yards long).”

2 Gang út, Nesso, · mid nigun nessi-klínon, ut fana þemo marge an þat bæn, · fan þemo bène an þat fleşg, ut fan þemo fleşgke an þia húd, · ut fan þera húd an þesa strála.
 4 Drohtin, werþe só.

Go out, O Nesse, with the nine small Nesses!

Out from the marrow into the bone, from the bone into the flesh, out from the flesh into the skin, out from the skin into this arrow.

Lord, may it be so.

1 Nesso ‘Nesse’ | The naming of the daemon or being which is to be excised is common in ancient magic, including several other galders edited here. The idea is that knowledge of the name of the entity gives the healer power over it.

Old Norse galders

Ribe galder stick (DR EM85;493)

Dating: Medieval.

Meter: Ancient-words-law, Galders-law

A wooden stick from the Danish city of Ribe. The galder is syncretic, and as such contains numerous pre-Christian elements, albeit in a Christian(ised) context.

The inscription may be conveniently divided into four parts. Part one (ll. 1–4) contains an introductory prayer where the healer asks for the support of natural forces (Earth, Up-heaven and the Sun) and Christian divinities (God and Saint Mary), that the healing may be successful. Part two (ll. 5–8) ritually exorcises any sickness which may have entered any part of the body. Part three (ll. 9–14) apparently warns the addressee that they will be haunted by “nine needs” (an old Heathen formula; see Note) until they pray. Part four (ll. 15, which is probably prose) gives the personal name “Bonde”, perhaps the addressee, and concludes with an “Amen”.

The Canterbury Galder

Dating: c. 1075

Meter: Ancient-words-law

This Old Norse galder is found in the Anglo-Saxon manuscript Cotton Caligula A XV. It runs across the bottom margin of the two facing pages 123v and 124r and is written in very clear runes of Wiking Age long-stave type. One rune, viz. g in vigi vegi ‘smite’ is “stung”. The text has no word separators.

The galder is very similar to those on the amulets from Sigtuna (U Fv1933;134, U NOR1998;25) below. They all belong to a type of magical healing where an illness-causing devil is commanded to leave the suffering person. The final line, viðr áðra-vari ‘against pus of veins’ is probably a declaration of purpose.

Galders from Bryggen

Several galders or magical inscriptions are part of the cache of medieval rune-inscribed objects found at Bryggen in the city of Bergen, Norway. For simplicity's sake, they are here listed in ascending order of their runological numbers.

A stick inscribed on four planed sides. Part of the stick is broken off, which renders the text incomplete. The inscription is clearly a “love-charm” (that is, a piece of sexually coercive magic), addressed—as shown by the feminine dative sjalfri þér ‘thy self’ on side D—to a woman. The language closely resembles that of Skm 36, in which Shirner, Free’s servant, threatens to carve a runic inscription which will curse the ettin-woman Gird with ęrgi ‘queerness, degeneracy’, ęđi ‘madness’, and ó·þoli ‘restlessness, impatience’ unless she sleep with his master. It seems that we are here dealing with just such a surviving runic curse, and that Skm 36 is reflecting an authentic form of Norse “love magic” (for it is unlikely that the present inscription should derive directly from that poem) by which a woman is cursed with sexual restlessness until she succumb to the will of the male curser.

A more distant parallel may be seen in the curse-formula found on the two C7th runic inscriptions from Stentofte and Björketorp (see TODO), wherein the destroyer of the respective monuments is cursed to become berma-lauser argjú ‘restless (a different root from ó·þoli above!) with queerness’, i.e. ‘incessantly randy’.

Side D ends with a string of fake-Latin gibberish, a clear sign of Christian syncretic influence on the Old Norse-Germanic magical tradition.

A short little charm explicitly invoking the two most important Heathen Gods, Thunder[†] and Weden[†]. The inscription postdates the official conversion of Norway by over a hundred years, and it is an open question whether the two mentioned gods were still seen in a good light or whether they had already been assimilated into the Catholic system of demons and devils. This question is important since it determines the context of the letter: was it well-wishing, assuming that the receiver was of like mind to the sender, or did he have more sinister intent than the first line lets on? Judging from the first line, and from the half-Heathen contents of many other inscriptions found at Bryggen (some from as late as the C14th), I see it as crypto-Heathen.

2 Hęill sé þú · ok í hugum góðum;
 Þórr þik þiggi,
 Óðinn þik ęigi.

May thou be hale and in good spirits;
 may Thunder receive thee,
 may Weden own thee.

1 Hęill sé þú · ok í hugum góðum ‘May thou be hale and in good spirits’ | A formulaic greeting. The very same line is found in Hym 41; see note there for parallels.

3 Óðinn þik ęigi ‘may Weden own thee’ | See note to Vsp 23.

Poetry on Christian Subjects

Old Saxon Baptismal Vow

Dating: ?

Meter: Prose.

While not an alliterative poem in the slightest, this short text is important for its mention of Saxon Heathen Gods, and as I have no section for Miscellanea, I have here set it first among the Christian poetry, in order to give relevant cultural context. The format of the text is straight-forward and resembles the modern Catholic questions asked to participants during the Sacrament of Confirmation (TODO: reference). The person to be baptised is to respond positively to three denying and three affirming questions; first to forsake the Devil (P1), all “Devil-yields” (i.e. non-Christian rituals, see note to that word) (P2), and all the Devil’s “works and words” and his followers, among which are listed the three Germanic-Saxon gods Thunder, Woden, and Saxneet (P3); and then to profess belief in each member of the Trinity: God the almighty father (P4), Christ God’s son (P5), and the Holy Ghost (P6).

P1 „For·sachistu diobole?“ et respondeat: „ec for·sacho diabile“

“Forsakest thou the Devil?” and he should respond: “I forsake the Devil.”

P2 „end allum diabol-gelde?“ respondeat: „end ec for·sacho allum diabol-gelde.“

“And all devil-yields?” he should respond: “I forsake all devil-yields.”

1 diabol-gelde ‘devil-yields’ | An obvious calque of OE TODO, which means TODO.

- 2 P3 „End allum dioboles wercum?“ respondeat „end ec for·sacho allum dioboles wercum and wordum, Thuner ende Wóden ende Sax-nôte ende allem them un·holdum the hira ge·nôtas sint.“

“And all the Devil’s works” he should respond: “and I forsake all the works and words of the Devil; Thunder and Weden and Saxneet and all those unhold ones who are their fellows.”

- 2 P4 „Ge·lôbistu in Got ala-męhtigun fader?“ „Ec ge·lôbo in Got ala-męhtigun fader.“

“Believest thou in God, the almighty father?” “I believe in God, the almighty father.”

- P5 „Ge·lôbistu in Crist Godes suno?“ „Ec ge·lôbo in Crist Gotes suno.“ “Believest thou in Christ, God’s son?” “I believe in Christ, God’s son.”

- P6 „Ge·lôbistu in hâlogan gâst?“ „Ec ge·lôbo in hâlogan gâst.“ “Believest thou in the Holy Ghost?” “I believe in the Holy Ghost.”

Heliand

Dating: 830s

Meter: Ancient-words-law

The Heliand or ‘Saviour’ (cf. OE Hēlend) is an Old Saxon epic poem that narrates the life of Jesus. It is essentially a verse paraphrase of Tatian’s C2nd gospel harmony, the Diatessaron.

The following edition is very much a work in progress; the radically normalized orthography has been implemented, as has the marking of alliterations, but the original text has not been critically edited, nor is there any English translation.

Notes on the normalization:

- Long vowels are marked by the acute rather than by the circumflex accent or macron. This is both faithful to the original manuscripts and concordant with my practice in normalising other Germanic languages.
- Long vowels ê and ô resulting from monophthongisation of diphthongs ai and au are, however, written with the circumflex accent. That these were in fact articulated separately is seen by the following circumstance: in the mss. etymological é and ó are frequently written as ie and uo, but this is never done for ê and ô.
- When attested in all mss., epenthetic (svarabhakti) vowels are marked with an underdot. Otherwise they are deleted.
- Long vowels resulting from nasal assimilation are marked with an overdot. i is written as ĩ.
- ms. e and i, when occurring between vowels are written as j.
- ms. i, when word-initial or following g and corresponding to etymological j is written as j.
- ms. e as resulting from i-mutation is written as ē.

- ms. b or ḃ, when representing the voiced bilabial fricative, is written as v.
- ms. th is written as þ.
- ms. uu is written as w.

The following is an exhaustive list of source mss. in chronological order.

C	950–1000	TODO	(Cotton Caligula A. VII sign. 3–11)

The two main mss. of the poem are M and C. Fragments L and P are identical in terms of handwriting and page layout and appear to have originally belonged to the same codex.

Muspell

(Muspilli)

Dating: C9th

Meter: Ancient-words-law

Introduction

Found in the margins of a single theological manuscript from the 820s, CLM 14098.

The second sound shift is applied consistently. That this was the case at composition is seen by the alliteration between Latin words starting with p- and Germanic words which originally began with b-:

- l. 16: Germanic pú (= OE, ON bú) with borrowed pardísu (< Latin paradisum),
- l. 21: Germanic piutit (= OE biētt, ON býðr) with borrowed pebbes (< Latin pix) and pína (< Latin poena),
- l. 25: Germanic prinnan (= OE biernan, ON brinna), palw- (= OE bealu, ON bǫlv-) with borrowed pebbe (see above).

Hymn from Wessobrunn

Dating: late 700s

Meter: Ancient-words-law

This text can be split into two parts, the poem and the prayer. Following my principle of including sources rather than excluding (TODO: see Introduction), I here present both.

The first part is a short alliterative poem describing the earliest beginning of the world. The poet describes “the greatest of wonders”, namely that the universe began as a void, where neither earth nor heaven existed. In this void was, however, the almighty God, along with his many spirits (presumably the Heavenly Host or the Angels). While the cosmogony expressed is clearly Jewish-Christian rather than Germanic, the poem does contain two word-pairs also found in Norse Heathen stanzas about the creation of the world (see Notes to ll. 2, 3.), which may point toward a repurposing of older Heathen motifs and expressions in the new, Christian context.

The second part is a thoroughly Christian prayer. The author first thanks God for creating the earth and heaven, this is presumably why the poem was included, and for giving good things to mankind. He then asks for faith, strength and wisdom to help him in his mission.

I have learned among men that greatest of wonders, that earth was not nor up-heaven,
nor wood nor mountain was not,
nor any [...]; nor did the sun shine,
nor the moon give off light, nor the glittering sea.
Then there was no kind of end or border,
and then was the One Almighty God,
the Mildest of Men [= Christ], and there were also many with Him:
good ghosts, and Holy God.

2 erdo | ero ms.

2 erdo ... úf-himil ‘earth ... up-heaven’ | A formulaic merism attested across the Germanic world, expressing the totality of the universe. Cf. especially Vafþ 21, where the god Woden asks the ettin Webthrithner about the origin of “earth and up-heaven”, and Vsp 3/3, where it is said, about the time before the World existed, that “earth and up-heaven” never existed.

3 noh paum · noh perek ni was ‘nor wood nor mountain was not’ | The same word-pair is found in Grm 40 (describing the creation of the world from Ymer’s body by the Gods) and in Muspilli 50 (describing the Christian destruction of the world prior to the Judgment.) The meter of the line is very poor; there may perhaps originally have been a third word starting with p-.

P1 Kot al-mahtiko, dú himil ęnti erda ga·worahtós, ęnti dú mannun só

O God almighty! Thou didst work heaven and earth and Thou didst give men so much good. Give me in Thy mercy right belief and good will; wisdom and foresight and power to withstand devils and to reproach queerness and to work thy will.

NOTE: This encyclopedia is both incomplete and inconsistently formatted. New entries will be added, and old ones be corrected and expanded in the future.

Cultural and religious terms and expressions (C)

- ape (ON api, OE apa, OS apo, OHG affo, PNWGmc. apó*) In the Old Norse the word seems to mean ‘fool, buffoon’, in the other old languages apparently ‘monkey’, though this sense should be a later development of the former; why would the early Germanic tribes have a word for an animal that they had never encountered?
- aught (ON étt, OE éht ‘possession, property’) The Nordic (paternal) clan or family line.
- begale (OHG bi-galan) To enchant, bewitch something or someone by singing a galder[†]. Transitive of gale[†].
- bigh (ON baugr, OE béag, OHG boug) Armlets used as currency during the Migration Period. — The giving of rings and armlets in exchange for loyalty (holdness[†] being the word used for a warrior’s loyalty towards his lord, and of a lord’s grace towards his servants) was common across all of Germanic Europe, as seen in the many poetic ruler-kennings of the type “breaker of rings” (e.g. béaga brytta ‘the breaker of bighs’ in Beow ll. 35, 352, 1487). An illustrative example of this is Hildebrand 33–35. This is also connected with the oath-ring, and the famous ring-swords. TODO? reference some literature on this.
- blood (ON blót, OE blót, OHG bluoz) A sacrifice or a sacrificial feast, one of the best attested Germanic pagan practices. The animals would be sacrificed by the host, cooked in large kettles and eaten communally. See also blood-house[†].
- blood-house (ON blót-hús, OHG bluoz-hús) A heathen temple. Glosses Latin fānum in OHG. See also harrow[†], hove[†], wigh[†].
- Doom (ON dómr, OE dóm) Commonly ‘judgement, verdict’ (whence Doomsday, ‘Judgement Day’), in the Norse and Anglo-Saxon poetry often specifically referring to one’s fame or good reputation (that is, how others will judge one’s character and deeds), especially after death. It is clear that this verdict was of utmost importance to the ancient Germanic people. The clearest examples are Háv 77 (see there): I know one that never dies: the Doom o’er each man dead. and Beow 1384–1389, where Beowulf consols king Rothgar after Grendle’s mother has slain his trusted advisor Asher (Æschere): Ne sorga, snotor guma! · Sélre bið ég-hwém, / þæt hé his fréond wrece, · þonne hé fela murne. / Úre éghwylc sceal · ende ge·bídán / worolde lífes; · wyrce sé þe móte / dómes ér déape; · þæt bið driht-guman / un·lifgendum · æfter sélest.

‘Grieve not, wise man! ’Tis better for each one / that he avenge his friend than that he mourn much. / Each one of us shall suffer the end / of worldly life—win he who might / Doom before death: that is for the warrior, / unliving, afterwards the best.’ Other illustrative examples in Beow include 884b–887a: [...] Sige-munde ge-sprong / æfter déað-dæge · dóm un-lýtel / syððan wíges heard · wyrm á-cwealde / hordes hyrde [...] ‘For Syemund[†] sprang up / after his death-day an unlittle [great] Doom, / since hard in conflict he defeated the wyrm[†], / the hoard’s herder.’ and 953b–955a: [...] þú þé self hafast / dēdum ge-frēmed · þæt þín dóm lyfað / áwa tó aldre [...] ‘Thou hast for thyself / by deeds accomplished that thy Doom lives / for ever and ever.’

feather-hame (ON fjaðr-hamr, OE fēðer-hama, OS fēðar-, fēðer-hamo) A plumage which when donned by the wearer lets him fly like, or become a bird. One is owned by Frow and used by Lock to fly between the homes in Þrk. In the Christian Healend feather-hames are donned by angels who fly from heaven to earth. See also hame[†].

fee (ON fé, OE fēoh) Originally ‘cattle, kine’, however also used in a broader sense to refer to one’s mobile wealth; for that cf. particularly Háv.

fey (ON fēigr, OE fēge, OHG feigi ‘cowardly’) Being doomed or fated to die, with a sense of predestination and inevitability. Its earliest documented Scandinavian use is on the Rök stone: aft uamuþ stanta runar þar + n uarin faþi faþir aft faikiqn sunu Apt Vámóð standa rúnar þár, en Varinn fáði, faðir aft feigjan sonu ‘After Woemood (Vámóðr) stand these runes[†], but Warren (Varinn) painted, the father after the fey son.’ See PCRN HS II:35, p. 928 ff. (TODO) feyness (ON fēigð) The state of being fey[†].

fimble- (ON fimbul-) The ultimate, final, greatest. See Fimblethyle[†], Fimble-winter[†].

five days (ON fimm dagar) The Old Scandinavian (and perhaps Germanic) week was originally five days long, the seven-day week being a later import, as seen by the names of the days, which are obviously calqued from the Latin (Dies Mercurii = Weden’s day, et.c.). According to the Gula there were six weeks in a month, and “five days” is used as a generic period of time in Háv 51 and 74; in st. 74 it is contrasted with month. Related to this is the legal term fifþ (ON fimmt, OSw. fæmt), a meeting or gathering set to be held at a five-day notice. See fimt in CV, Love et al. (2020) for further discussion.

galder (ON galdr, OE gealdor, OHG galdar) A magical song or incantation, probably synonymous with leed[†]. Verbal noun formed to gale[†] ‘to sing, chant’.

- gale (ON gala, OE galan, OHG galan) To sing, chant, especially of magical songs; verbal root of galder[†] ‘something sung, chanted’.
- gand (ON gandr, Latin gandus) A witch’s familiar or foul spirit sent out to do her bidding. See PCRN HS I:17, p. 361 and II:26, p. 656. TODO
- gid (ON goði, OE Gydda masc. given name) A heathen priest or master of ceremonies.
- gidden (ON gyðja, OE gyden ‘goddess’) The womanly equivalent or wife of a gid[†].
- good of meat (ON matar góðr, góðr matar) An old formula appearing in Háv 39 and numerous Swedish Wiking Age Runic inscriptions Sm 39, Sm 44, Sö 130, U 703, and U 805. Cf. U 739 which has the related mildr matar ‘mild of meat’. Antonyms are matar illr ‘evil of meat’ and meat-nothing[†].
- guest (ON gestr, OE giest, OS gast, OHG gast, Got. gasts, PGmc. gastiz) Guests were often strangers, wanderers, who would come to beg for food and lodgings. The Old Germanic peoples placed great value on hospitality. TODO.
- hame (ON hamr) A skin, shape. People could “shift hames” (ON skipta hǫmum), leaving their human hames behind and instead entering into the shapes of wolves, bears, birds. During this process the original hame, that is, the human body, would be sleeping in a vulnerable state. A concise description of this is found in IngS 7: Óðinn skipti hǫmum, lá þá búkr’inn sem sofinn eða dauðr, en hann var þá fugl eða dýr, fiskr eða ormr, ok fór á einni svípstund á fjarlæg lǫnd at sínum erendum eða annarra manna. ‘Weden shifted hames; then lay the trunk of his body as if sleeping or dead, but he was then a fowl or beast, a fish or serpent, and journeyed in a short while to foreign lands with his errands or those of other men.’.
- See also feather-hame[†], town-rideresses[†], evening-rideresses[†].
- harrow (ON hǫrgr, OE hearg, PNWGmc. harugar*) A hallowed cairn or stone-heap. Hdl 10 describes the construction of one. The Norwegian laws prescribe the “breaking of harrows and burning of hoves”.
- See also hove[†], wigh[†].
- hold (ON hollr, OE hold, OS hold, OHG hold) ‘Favourable, loyal, gracious’, often of a ruler towards his subject (in the sense of ‘gracious, benevolent’) or vice-versa (in the sense of ‘loyal, devoted’). Mirroring these earthly relationships, it is often used to refer to divine grace, both of the Christian God—thus in the Ecclesiastical Laws of King Cnut ALIE I (p. 372): Þam byþ witod-líce God hold, þe bið his bláforde riht-líce hold ‘Indeed God is hold to him who is rightly hold to his lord’—but in the oldest Scandinavian material likewise of the Heathen gods. So Lok 4 (e.): holl ręgin ‘hold Reins[†]’, and Oddręgr 9/1: Svá hjalpi þér · hollar véttr ‘So help thee hold wights[†]’.

This word is common in old Scandinavian oath formulæ, e.g. in the elder redaction of the West-Geatish Law: Svá sé mér goð holl ‘So may the Gods(!) be hold to me,’ in medieval Norwegian laws (NgL II[197,397]) and Grey-Goose (TODO: cite): Guð sé mér hollr ef ek satt segi, gramr ef ek lýg ‘God be hold to me if I speak truly, wroth if I lie,’ in Grey-Goose (TODO) also: Sé guð hollr þeim er heldr griðum, en gramr þeim er grið rýfr ‘God be hold to him who keeps the truce, but wroth against him who breaks the truce’. I refer to Löffler (1895) for further discussion on these formulæ.

holdness (ON hylli, OE hyldu, OHG huldi) Abstract noun formed to hold[†], meaning ‘favour, loyalty, grace,’ with the same semantics as the adjective.

Notably, this word appears three times in connection with the grace of gods in the poetry, namely in Grm 43, where (according to my interpretation) the preparer of food at the blót is said to earn the “holdness of Wouder[†] and of all the gods;” and Grm 53 where the disgraced king Garfrith is said to have been bereft of the support ęengi of Weden and all the Oneharriers, and of “Weden’s holdness” (Óðins hylli). “Weden’s holdness” is also mentioned in a stanza by Hallfred (edited as Hfr Lv 7 by Diana Whaley in SkP V), who laments that: “The whole race of man has wrought songs to win the holdness of Weden; I recall the fully rewarded works of our kinsmen/ancestors.”

From the semantics of this word the Germanic view on heavenly grace is clear: the Gods are hold towards those who do good works, which include swearing true oaths, faithfully observing truces, partaking in the blót, following rules of hospitality, and composing poetry—and gram[†] ‘wroth’ towards those who do the opposite.

Home (ON heimr, OE hám, PNWGmc. haimar*) In the Norse often referring to a realm in the cosmology (Vsp 2: “I remember nine Homes”, Vaff TODO: “From the runes of the Ettins[†] and of all the gods I can speak truly, for I have come into each Home”). Thus Ettinham[†] is the ‘Home/realm of the ettins’. When used on its own it means ‘the world (that we inhabit)’. See also Nine Homes[†], Thrithham[†].

leat (ON blaut) In some saws explained as the blood drained from the offered animal; the verbal root is bljóta ‘to get by lot’ and this word certainly refers to the use of the blood for auguries.

leat-twig (ON blaut-tęinn) A twig used to sprinkle the leat[†]. The pattern of the blood would presumably be inspected for the augury; cf. Hym 1.

leed (ON ljóð, OE léod) A magical chant or incantation, as seen by Háv 153 near-synonymous with galder[†]. See also gale[†], begale[†].

manwit (ON man-vit) Common sense and wits.

many-cunning (ON fl̥ol-kunnigr) Skilled with sorcery or the dark arts.

meat-nithing (ON mat-niðingr) One who is a nithing[†] with food, i.e. one who does not properly furnish his guest[†].

See also good of meat[†].

nithe (ON nīð, OE nīþ, OHG nīd) Originally ‘hatred, enmity’. In the Norse the sense has developed in the direction of ‘shame’, not just as a social abstract, but almost a tangible thing. So the curse ritual of Eyel, where the curser will “turn nithe” (snýja nīð against his enemy to cause him misfortune. Scolds[†] would “compose nithe” (yrkja nīð) through singing slanderous verses, which likewise had an adverse supernatural effect on their subject. See also nithing[†].

nithing (ON nīðingr, OE nīþing) One afflicted with nithe[†]; a villain, criminal. Among the Scandinavians a legal term; a nithing could not swear oaths or bear witness and was forbidden to marry.

orlay (ON ørlog, OE orlæg) One’s predetermined fate, destiny, purpose as decreed by the Norns[†].

queer (ON argr, ragr (with metathesis), OE earg, OHG arg) This derogatory adjective refers to gendered sexual deviancy, typically promiscuity for women and effeminacy or cowardice for men. This is the reason for the present English translation. Unlike the English word, the Old Germanic arg was always a severe insult, and this from an early period; so the Longbeardish Edict of Rothari, codified in 643 AD: Si quis alium arga per furorem clamaverit et negare non potuerit et dixerit, quod per furorem dixisset, tunc iuratus dicat, quod eum arga non cognovisset; postea conponat pro ipso iniurioso verbo solidos duodecim. Et si perseveraverit, convincat per pugnam, si potuerit, aut certe conponat, ut supra. ‘If anyone calls another man queer in anger, and cannot deny it, and says that it was said in anger, then in his oath he says that he does not know him as queer; let him thereafter settle for the insulting word with twelve solidi. But if he persists, let him prove it by fighting if he can, or otherwise settle it as above.’

rest (ON rōst) The distance between two rest-stops, a geographical mile (about 1850 metres). See CV: rōst.

- rune (ON rún, OE rūn, OS rúna, OHG rúna, Got. rúna, PNWGmc. rünü) An (esoteric) secret message or formula. That this—rather than ‘letter (of a Runic alphabet)’—is the original and proper sense is apparent from among others the Finnish borrowing runo ‘poem; poetry; a division of a poem (specifically of the Kalevala)’, and its use in the singular in the earliest Runic inscriptions (e.g. Noleby Vg 63, which contains the linguistically indecipherable string of letters ᚱᚦᚲᚳᚨᛞᚷᚢᚾᚱᚵᚴᚩᚫᚪᚻ[–]ᚠᚣᚡᚢ, a rune in the proper sense or the recently discovered Svingerud fragment.) Thus, Weden’s taking of the runes should not be interpreted as merely a myth for the invention of profane writing, but rather the origin of esoteric incantations, not at all unlike Indian mantras. The word for letter was instead stave[†], see also there.
- scold (ON skald) A Scandinavian court poet. The name probably comes from their ability to slander with words.
- simble (ON sumbl, OE symbol) A banquet, symposium.
- soo (ON sóa) To ritually waste, to slay in a sacrificial context.
- spae (ON spǿ) Prophecy, foresight.
- Tables (ON táfl, OE tæfl) Generic term for board games (e.g. chess). In the golden age[†] the Eese[†] played such games (Vsp 8). Pre-Christian Germanic burials commonly feature boards and bricks (TODO: reference, maybe to the Salme ship burials).
- thill (ON þylja) To recite poetry learned by heart. Cf. the so called thules[†] (poetic lists) and the title thyle[†].
- Thing (ON, OE þing, OS thing, OHG dīng) The Old Germanic assembly, where cases were settled and the law determined. In connection with the Thing certain rituals were in order, viz. the enclosing of the space wherein the judges sat by means of wigh-bonds[†] or sacred ropes. Cf. Háv 61 for an excerpt from Germania ch. 22. See also the Thing of the Gods[†].
- thule (ON þula) A poetic list, typically of various items of a category (e.g. gods, legendary horses) or poetic synonyms (e.g. for swords, men, Weden). Decoratively also a ditty, poorly composed poem. See thyle[†].
- thyle (ON þulr, OE þyle, PNWGmc. pulir*) A sage who through rote learning has acquired a large amount of mythological lore (cf. thule[†] ‘a list in poetic form; a ditty, bad poem’ and thill[†] ‘to recite, to chant’). Thus Weden[†] is the Fimblethyle[†], being the unbeaten master of lore, as can be seen in his wisdom contests (like Vaffb). Runic inscription DR 248 (Snoldelev) suggests that the thyle may have tied to a specific place, and in Beow it seems to have been a court position, with the poet Unferth being described (l. 1456) as the “Rothgar’s thyle”.

wale (ON vǫlr) The staff or sceptre of a wallow[†]. TODO: archeological finds, mention Sutton Hoo.

wallow (ON vǫlva, OE wealwe* (cf. ON svǫlva, OE swealwe ‘swallow’)) A sibyl, seeress, oracle. The word derives from the wale[†], a staff or sceptre probably used for ritual purposes.

wigh (ON vé, OE wéoh, wíh, PNWGmc. wihq*) A holy place or sanctuary. It seems that where the harrow[†] was a pile of stones or cairn used for carrying out rituals, the wigh was an enclosed space. The earliest Norse attestation is the runic inscription Ög N288 (Oklunda), which reads: “Guthar <= Gunnarr> painted these runes, and he fled, charged (with a crime, sought out this wigh, and he fled into this clearing. [...]” The implication seems to be that the wigh was considered so sacred that Guthar could not be apprehended or punished for his crime while in it.

In OE the word means ‘pagan idol’. It is not immediately clear which meaning is the original one, but in the present edition the Norse sense has been adopted, since the Anglo-Saxon sources are all of a Christian nature. The name Wighstone (Wíh- or Wéobstān) as found in Beow in any case suggests it is the Norse meaning, since ‘idol-stone’ makes little sense.

wode (ON óðr, OE wód, PNWGmc. wódur*) Heener[†]’s gift to men, though the name may suggest it be from Weden[†]. The word has several related meanings: ‘mind, (poetic) inspiration, rage’. See also Woderearer[†].

wyrm (ON ormr, OE wyrm, PNWGmc. wurmīr*) A dragon, serpent. The distinction between “wyrm” and “worm; snake” is purely editorial and not made in the original languages.

yin- (ON ginn-) A rare augmentative prefix. TODO.

yin-holy (ON ginn-heilagr) High holy, sacrosanct. Used of the Gods in the formula ginn-heilög goð ‘yin-holy Gods’.

Persons and objects (P)

Attle (Attila, ON Atli, OE Ætla, MHG. Etzel, PNWGmc. Attiló*) The ruler of the Huns[†] (historically from 434–453). Husband of Guthrun[†], and with her father of Earp and Oatle[†].

- Balder (ON Baldr, OE Bældæg (not directly cognate), OHG Balter, PWGmc. Baldrar*) The beautiful son of Woden[†], slayed by his brother Hath[†], avenged by his other brother Wonnel[†]. Husband of Nan[†].
- Beadhild (ON Bǫðvildr, OE Beadobild) The daughter of the tyrannical king Nithad[†]. She is raped by her father's prisoner, Wayland[†].
- Bicke (ON Bikki) A servant or general of Attle[†].
- Earp and Oatle (ON Erpr ok Eitill) The sons of Attle[†] and Guthrun[†].
- Earth (ON jörð, OE eorþe, OHG erda, PNWGmc. erþu*, PGmc. erþō*) The personified Earth. By Woden[†] the mother of Thunder[†].
- Erminric (ON Jǫrmunrekr, OE Eormanric, MHG Ermenrich) Legendary king of the eastern Gots[†], based on the historical Ermanaric (dead 376). TODO: Jordanes.
- Fathomer (ON Fáfnir) The son of Rethmar[†], brother of Otter[†] and Rein[†]. He turns into a great wyrm[†] and is eventually slain by Siward[†], who takes his treasure.
- Fimblethyle (ON Fimbulþulr) The 'ultimate thyle[†]' or sage; name for Woden[†].
- Fold (ON Fold, OE Folde) A poetic or ritual name of Earth[†], especially in her role as Mother Earth. In Germanic poetry the word fold is typically used to simply refer to 'land', however. It is cognate with Sanskrit TODO.
- Foresitter (ON Forseti) An obscure god associated with legal proceedings. TODO.
- Free (ON Freyr, OE fréa 'lord', PNWGmc. Frawjar*) Son of Nearth[†], brother of Frow[†]. See also Ing[†].
- Frie (ON Frigg, OE Frige*, OHG Frija, PNWGmc. Friju*) Wife of Woden[†], mother of Balder[†]. Related to Full[†].
- Frow (ON Frǫgja) Cat-goddess, daughter of Nearth[†], sister of Free[†], wife of Wode[†]. Promised to the Ettin. Possibly = Easter?
- Full (ON Fulla, OHG Folla) In the Norse sources the maid-servant of Frie[†]. Mers II has her as Frie's sister, though this need not be literal (cf. Hdl 1).
- Guther (ON Gunnarr, MHG Gunther) The lord of the Gots[†]. In the Norse sources the brother of Hain[†]. Historically he is based on king Gundabarius (Gunþibarjaz*) of the Burgundians.

Guthrun (ON Guðrún) Daughter of king Yivick[†], sister of Guth[†] and Hain[†]. The wife of Attle[†].

Hain [Hain 1] (ON Hogni, OE Haguna, Hagena, OHG Hagano, Ger. Hagen, PNWGmc. Hagunô*) A Nivling[†] and Yivicking[†], son of king Yivick[†], brother of Guth[†] and Guthrun[†]. In Akv he defeats seven warriors before being captured by Attle[†], who has his heart cut out at the request of Guth[†].

Hain 2 [2] A petty king of East Geatland[†], contemporary with Granmer[†], the king of Southmanland[†] and Ingeld Illred, the Ingling[†] king of Upland[†].

Hath (ON Hǫðr) The blind son of Weden[†], the slayer of his brother Balder[†].

Heener (ON Hónir, PNWGmc. Hónijar ‘the little swan(?)’) An obscure god. Rydberg (1886)[552] has convincingly argued that he is connected with the stork, connecting his name with the Greek κύκνος ‘swan’ and Sanskrit śakuna ‘bird of omen’, and noting that his epithets langi fótr ‘long foot’ and aurkonungr ‘mud-king’ (both found in Skm 22) accurately describe the stork. He gives wode[†] TODO.

Hell (ON Hell) Owneress of Hell[†].

Hindle (ON Hyndla) A witch awoken by Frow[†] in Hdl.

Homedal (ON Hēimdallr, OE Hámdall*) The Watchman of the gods, whitest of the Eese[†].

Hymer (ON Hymir) Tew[†]’s father according to Hym.

Ing (ON Yngvi, OE Ing) Probably an older name of Free[†]. The legendary ancestor of the Inglings[†]. Cf. the Old English Rune Poem.

Life and Lifethrasher (ON Líf ok Líf-prasir) The only surviving humans after the Rakes of the Reins[†].

Lock (ON Loki) The bound Os. TODO.

Loride (ON Hlórriði) “The Loud/Bellowing Rider”, poetic name of Thunder[†].

Lothar (ON Lóðurr, OS Logaþore, PNWGmc. Logaþorjar* ‘Flame-darer(?)’) Gives three gifts to man. The Old Saxon attestation is uncertain.

Millner (ON Mjöllnir, OE Meldne*, PNWGmc. Meldunjar*) The hammer of Thunder[†].

Moon (ON Máni) The personified moon. Son of Mundlefare[†] and brother of the Sun[†] (Vafþ 23). For ritual invocations of the Moon see Note to Háv TODO (þeiptum kveða).

- Mundlefare (ON Mundilfari) The father of Sun[†] and Moon[†] (Vafþ 23).
- Nearth (ON Njörðr) One of the Waness[†]. Father of Free[†] and Frow[†].
- Nithad (ON Níðuðr, OE Níþhad, PNWGmc. Níþa-baduz*) The king that imprisoned Wayland[†], father of Beadhild[†] and two unnamed sons (Vkv, Deer).
- Oughter (ON Óttarr, OE Óththere, PNWGmc. Óhta-harjar*) Legendary Swedish king.
- Reading (ON Hraudungr) A king in the prologue to Grm.
- Rotholf (ON Hrólfr kraki, OE Hróþulf, PNWGmc. Hróþi-wulfar*) A king of the Shieldings[†] (see family tree). As foreshadowed in Beow 1017–9, 1180–90, he betrays the sons of Rothgar[†], his cousins Rethrich and Rothmund[†], in order to take the throne for himself. In the later Icelandic tradition this has been forgotten, and he is consistently portrayed as a heroic king.
- Rothgar (ON Hróarr, OE Hróþgár, PNWGmc. Hróþi-gairar*) A king of the Shieldings[†] (see family tree), one of the main characters in Beow.
- Shede (ON Skaði, OE Scede(?), PGmc. Skadi*) A female figure, possibly the namesake of Shedeny[†] and the Shedelands[†], in which case she was in an early period closely associated with, and perhaps thought to guard, the Scandinavian (or properly Scadinavian, see Shedeny) peninsula. In the Norse tradition the daughter of Thedse[†], and later wife of Nearth[†]. Their marriage is the subject of Gylf which preserves.
- Shield (ON Skjöldr, OE Scyld, PNWGmc. Skelduz*) Legendary Danish king, founder of the Shieldings[†].
- Syemund (ON Sig-mundr, OE Sige-mund, MHG. Sieg-mund, PNWGmc. Sigi-mundur*) In the Norse tradition the son of king Walsing[†]. He begets Siward[†], the slayer of the wyrm Fathomer[†]. In Beow it is Syemund himself who slays an unnamed wyrm. Connected with his nephew Sinfittle[†].
- Sithguth (OHG Sinthgunt, PNWGmc. Sinþa-gunþir*(?)) Only known from Mers II as the sister of Sun[†].
- Siward (ON Sigurðr) A hero of the Walsings[†], slayer of the wyrm[†] Fathomer[†].
- Sun (ON Sól, OHG Sunna) The personified Sun, who in the Germanic mythology is a woman. In Vafþ 22 the daughter of Mundlefare[†] and sister of Moon[†]. In Mers II the sister of Sithguth[†].

Thedse (ON Þjatsi) An ettin slain by the Gods; his myth is told at length in Haustl. Father of Shede[†].

Thrim (ON Þrymr) Ettin who steals Thunder's hammer in Þrk and is later killed.

Thunder (ON Þórr, OE Þunor, OHG Donar, PNWGmc. Þonarar*) Son of Weden[†] and Earth[†]. Friend of men, guarding of Middenyard.

Tew (ON Týr, OE Tíw) Son of Hymer[†]. One-handed god. The name is not identical to Sanskrit Dyāus, Greek Zeus, Latin Iuppiter.

Wayland (ON Vǫlundr, OE Weland, Wélund) A legendary smith captured by the tyrannical king Nithad[†]. In both the Norse Vkv and English Deer he takes his revenge by first killing Nithad's unnamed sons and then raping his daughter Beadhild[†]. In the Norse version he is married to Harware Elwight[†].

Webthritner (ON Vafþrúðnir) An Ettin defeated by Weden in the wisdom contest in Vafþ.

Weden (rhymes with leaden; ON Óðinn, OE Wóden, Wéden, OHG Wuotan, PNWGmc. Wóðanar* 'Lord of wode[†] (poetry, intelligence)') Chief of the Eese[†], God of Wisdom, Galder, Poetry, War. Husband of Frie[†], and by her father of Balder[†]. Father of Thunder[†] by Earth[†]. Brother of Heener[†] and Lothar[†] or Will[†] and Wigh[†].

Wider (ON Við-arr, OE Wid-here*, PNWGmc. Wīda-harjar*) Son of Weden[†], who avenges him at the Rakes of the Reins[†].

Wigh (ON Vei, PNWGmc. Wīhā* 'hallow, (heathen) priest') Brother of Weden[†] and Will[†].

Will (ON Vili, PNWGmc. Wīljā*) Brother of Weden[†] and Wigh[†].

Wing-Thunder (ON Ving-Þórr) A rare name of Thunder. The first element is not véngr 'wing (of a bird)'. It may mean 'swinging' (cf. Swedish vingla), referring to the swinging of his hammer, or 'victorious', representing a n-infix extension of the verb vega 'to strike, smite, fight' (cf. Latin vincere 'to win, vanquish').

Occurs in Þrk 1, Alv 6.

Wode (ON Óðr, OE Wód) Husband of Frow[†] of whom very little is known. His name seems to be the same word as wode[†].

Wonnel (ON Váli, OE Wonela*, PNWGmc. Wanilô* 'the little Wane[†]?) Son of Weden[†], who just one night old avenges his brother Balder[†] through slaying Hath[†], his half-brother.

- Woulder (ON Ullr, Wuldor*, PNWGmc. Wulpuz*) Obscure god mentioned in connection with oath-rings (TODO) and the setting of ritual fires (Grm 43). These details may be related to the interesting finds at Lilla Ullevi ('the small wigh[†] of Woulder') in Upland, Sweden, consisting of several dozen fire striker-shaped iron amulet rings dating to 660–780 af Edholm (2009).
- Yimer (ON Ymir, OE Yime*) The primeval ancestor of the Ettins[†], probably equivalent to Earyelmer[†]. The first Gods slew Yimer and arranged the world out of his corpse.
- Yivick (ON Gjúki, OE Gifca, OHG Gibicho, MHG. Gibeche) King of the Burgends[†] (historically from late 300s–407) of the Nivling dynasty, ancestor of the Yivickings[†]. Father of Guthrun[†], Guther[†] and Hain[†].

Groups and tribes (G)

TODO: Map of rough tribal areas. Genealogies.

- All Gods (ON ǫll goð) Occurs especially in ritual or ritual-adjacent use (Grm 43, Lok 11; cf. Hákm 18, where the piety of the dead king Hathkin is shown by his being greeted by rǫð ǫll ok regin 'all the Redes and Reins[†]', and the prayer in Sigrdr 3–4, which collectively invokes the Eese[†] and Ossens[†]). This suggests a native Germanic conception of Godly Oneness (Divine Unity); see also the Thing of the Gods[†], where the Gods convene and together steer the world.

Similar expressions are found in other pre-Abrahamic religions, e.g. the Vedic viśve devāḥ 'All Gods', to Whom are dedicated numerous hymns of RV, and the Greek Πάν·θειον, that is, a temple dedicated to All Gods.

The idea of Godly Oneness may have been disputed; an interesting anecdote is given by Saxo (i.7.2). After Weden departs he is usurped by an obscure figure Mithothin (perhaps "With-Weden"), who reforms the cult:

Cuius secessu Mithothyn quidam prestigiis celebr, perinde ac celesti beneficio vegetatus, occasionem et ipse fingende divinitatis arripuit barbarasque mentes novis erroris tenebris circumfusas prestigiatarum fama ad cerimonias suo nomini persolvendas adduxit. Hic deorum iram aut numinum violationem confusis permixtisque sacrificiis expiari negabat ideoque eis vota communiter nuncupari prohibebat, discreta superum cuique libamenta constituens. Qui cum Othino redeunte relicta prestigiatarum ope latendi gratia Pheoniam accessisset, concursu incolarum occiditur.

'A certain Mithodin, a famous illusionist, was animated at his departure as if by a kindness from heaven and snatched the chance to pretend divinity himself; his reputation for magicianship clouded the barbarians' minds with the murk of a new superstition and led them to perform holy rites to his name. He asserted that the gods' wrath and the profanation of their divine authority could not be expiated by confused and mingled sacrifices; so he arranged that they must not be prayed to as a group, but separate offerings (libamenta) be made to each deity. When Odin returned, the other no longer resorted to his conjuring but went off to hide in Funen, where he was rushed upon and killed by the inhabitants.'

It is possible that this account reflects an historical attempted religious reform. It does not appear to have been successful.

- Danes (ON danir, OE dene, PNWGmc. danír*) A tribe in eastern modern-day Denmark and southern Sweden. They probably originated in Scania in southern Sweden, before moving westwards into the Danish isles and eventually Jutland, driving out the Earls[†] and Jutes[†]. Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO
- Dwarfs (ON dvergar, OE dweorgas, OHG twerca, PNWGmc. dvergór*) Earthly (chthonic) supernatural beings, often referred to as living in rocks and mountains. Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO
- Eese (rhyming with geese; ON ésir, OE ése, PNWGmc. ansiwir*; sg. os, ON óss, OE ós, PNWGmc. ansur*) The (male) gods. Snorre has them as a separate tribe from the Wanés[†]. See also Gods[†], Tews[†], Reins[†]. Noted members: Weden[†], Thunder[†], Frie[†], Hath[†] and Balder[†] Attestations: TODO
- Elves (ON alfar, OE ielfe, PNWGmc. alþír*) Earthly (chthonic) minor deities. Possibly ancestral spirits? Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO
- Ettins (ON jotnar, OE eotenas, PNWGmc. etunór*) The fundamental enemies of the Gods, the agents of chaos and disorder. See Rises[†], Thurses[†]. Noted members: Hymer[†], Thrim[†], Webthrithner[†], Yimer[†] Attestations: TODO
- Geats (ON gautar, OE géatas, PNWGmc. gautór* from geut-* 'to pour', perhaps 'the libators') A tribe in what is today southern-central Sweden. See also Geatland[†], Swedes[†]. Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO
- yin-Reins (ON ginn-rggin) yin-[†] + Reins[†]. The sacrosanct, highest Divine Powers.
- Gods (ON goð, OE godu, OHG gota, PNWGmc. godu*) TODO. Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO
- Huns (ON búnir, OE Húne, OHG Húni, Hunni, PNWGmc. búnir*) An invading Asiatic tribe in the Migration Period. In the Scandinavian legends they have been assimilated into the Germanic framework, and are not presented as racially or culturally distinct. Noted members: Attle[†], TODO Attestations: TODO

Inglings (ON ynglingar, PNWGmc. ingwalingór* ‘the descendants of Ing[†]’) The oldest known Swedish kingly lineage. The difference between this term and Shelvings[†] is a bit unclear; Beow knows them only by the latter term, while they seem to be used synonymously in the Norse sources.

Nears (ON njárar - níarar) An old Swedish tribe mentioned in Vkv, where it is ruled by king Nithad[†]. The location may allow us to connect them with the Swedish province of Närke, cf. Old Swedish Neríkjar ‘inhabitants of Närke’, Nerisker ‘belonging to Närke’. The Old Swedish stem nær- (with unclear vowel length, though it is probably long) would then be a reduced form of níar-, njár-.

Norns (ON nornir) Supernatural women responsible for the fates (orlay[†]s) of men. Probably synonymous with Dises[†], Mothers[†].

Ossens (ON ósynjur) The wives of the Eese[†], the goddesses.

Oneharriers (ON ein-herjar, OE án-hergas*) Woden’s chosen warriors, probably corresponding to the Vedic Maruts. The Ownharriers have some agency (Grm TODO) and were probably also invoked in rituals. Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO Reins (ON rogn, regin) The heavenly powers. Judging from Vafþ TODO the term may be more closely associated with the Wanes[†] than the Eese[†].

Saxons (ON saxar, OE Seaxan, Seaxe) TODO. Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO

Shieldings (ON skjöldungar, OE Scyldingas, PNWGmc. skeldungór*) The descendants of Shield[†]; the legendary Danish[†] royal dynasty. With Harward[†]’s death after his slaying of Rotholf[†] their rule ended. TODO Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO

Shelvings (ON skilfingar, OE scilfingas, PNWGmc. skilþingór*) The descendants of Shelf[†]; the legendary Swedish[†] royal dynasty. The exact difference between the terms Shelvings and Inglings[†] is unclear, but the first may have referred to the old royal family in Sweden, while the latter to the Norwegian branch which claimed descent from the former. TODO Noted members: TODO Attestations: Hdl 15, 20

Swedes (ON svíar, OE swéon, PNWGmc. swihanír*) The tribe around the Mälar valley in eastern Sweden. Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO

Thurses (sg. Thurse; ON þurs, OE þyrs, OS thuris, OHG duris, PNWGmc. þurisar*) Possibly a poetic synonym for Ettins[†]. See also Rime-Thurses[†]. Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO

Tews (ON tívar, PNWGmc. tíwór*) A poetic synonym for Gods[†]. The word derives from the PIE deywós* and is thus cognate with Sanskrit devá ‘god’, Latin deus ‘id.’ Attestations: TODO Walsings (ON vǫlsungar) The descendants of king Walsing[†].

Wanes (ON vanir, OE wan?) A subgroup or tribe of the gods, associated with fertility, harvests and the sea. Noted members: Nearth[†], Free[†], Frow[†] Attestations: TODO

Yivickings (ON gjúkungar) The descendants of Yivick[†], including Guther[†], Guthrun[†] and Hain[†]. Attestations: TODO

Places and events (L)

Eastern Way (ON Austr-vegr) In the mythology the eastern lands of the Ettins[†], to which Thunder[†] goes to fight the Ettins and protect the realms of Gods and men. Probably the same as Ettinham[†]. In Scandinavian (especially Swedish) runic inscriptions this word refers to Eastern Europe and Asia.

Ettinham (ON Jǫtun-heimr, Jǫtna-heimar) The ‘Ettin[†]-Home[†]’ or ‘home of the Ettins’; the eastern realm of chaotic and inhospitable beings. See also Eastern Way[†], Outyards[†].

Fimble-winter (ON fimbulvetr) The great winter, which kills all humans apart from Life and Lifethrasher[†].

Geatland (ON Gaut-land, Gauta-land) The land of the Geats[†].

Hell (ON hēl, PNWGmc. halju*, Got. halja) The Underworld, personified as and formally identical to Hell[†]. After the arrival of Christianity the word came to refer to the Christian hell-fire (= Gebenna), which is the case in all attested languages apart from the Old Norse. See also Nivelhell[†].

Lithshelf (ON Hlið-skjǫlf) The ‘Cliffside Shelf’; the lookout post of the gods from which they can see the whole world. See Grm, Skm.

- Middenyard (ON Mið-garðr, OE Middan-geard, OS Middil-gard, OHG Mittil-gart, Got. midjun-gards) The 'Middle Enclosure'; the home of men. The enclosing poles were the hair-strands of Yimer's eyebrows (Grm 42); Middenyard is defended by Thunder (Hárþ TODO). See also Osyard[†], Outyards[†]. Occurrences: Vsp 4, 54, Grm 42, Hárþ TODO.
- Nivelhell (ON nífl-hell) 'Mist-Hell'. From the poetic evidence it seems like it may originally have been a synonym for Hell[†].
- Osyard (ON Ós-garðr) The 'Enclosure of the Eese'[†]; the heavenly realm. See also Middenyard[†], Outyards[†].
- Outyards (ON Út-garðar) Not Eddic. The 'Outer Enclosures', described in Gylf. See also Ettinham[†], Middenyard[†], Osyard[†].
- Rakes of the Reins (ON ragna røk) The 'judgments, fated events of the Reins'[†], namely the destruction of the world as narrated most completely in Vsp.
- Rakes of the Tews (ON tíva røk) See Rakes of the Reins[†].
- Thing of the Gods (ON þing goða) The Divine Council or Assembly, where the Gods convene and make decisions; a conception well known from Near Eastern literature. Like the historical Germanic assemblies, the Thing is only attended by the male Eese[†], whereas the Ossens[†] are á máli 'at speech' (Bdr 1, Þrk 14). The Thing is held every day at Ugdrassle's Ash[†]; Thunder wades to it, and the other Eese ride to it (Grm 29–30). Thirteen Gods were present at the Thing: Weden[†], Thunder[†], Nearth[†], Free[†], Tew[†], Homedal[†], Bray[†], Wider[†], Wonnell[†], Woulder[†], Heener[†], Foresitter[†], Lock[†]) (Gylf TODO). With Lock excluded this makes twelve, which corresponds to the Old Germanic jury of twelve men.
- The Germanic Thing of the Gods has Near Eastern equivalents, including in the Hebrew Bible. TODO.
- Occurrences: Vsp 6, 9, et c.; Bdr 1; Grm 29–30; Þrk 14; Hym 39.
- Thrithham (ON Þrúð-hęimr) Thunder[†]'s home[†]. See thrith[†].
- Ugdrassle's Ash (ON askr Yggdrasils) The noblest tree; the site of the Thing of the Gods[†].
- Up-heaven (ON upp-himinn, OE up-heofon, OS upp-himil, OHG úf-himil) Highest Heaven; used in Earth and Up-heaven[†].

Poetic formulæ (F)

All formulæ are given in English translation, their attested forms and a Proto-Germanic rendition. For those consisting of two words bound together by a conjunction, & is written in its place.

Earth and Up-heaven (ON ǵrð & upphiminn, OE eorþe & upheofon, PGmc. erþō & uphīminaz*) An ancient poetic merism, i.e. “the whole world, cosmos”. It has a particular connection to the creation and destruction of the world, and in prayers. ON: Vsp 3/3, Vafþ 20, Þrk 2, Oddrgr 17, DR EM85;493 (under Galders), Sö 154 (under Runic Poetry); OE: Acreboot; OS: Healend 2886; OHG: Wessobrunner Hymn 2.

Eese and Elves (ON ǵsir & alfar, OE ése & ielfe, PNWGmc. alþír & ansiwīr*) A merism; both heavenly and earthly spiritual beings. Notably the two words always occur in this order (never ‘Elves and Eese’), even in OE.

words and works (ON orð & verk, OE word & weorc, PGmc. wurdó & werkô*) Beow 289, 1100, 1833
