Introduction to poetry

Don't go too indepth on individual poems! Each one will have its own introduction.

The presentation of poetry

1. Lines are broken at each long-line rather than each half-line. This follows traditional practice for the publication of West Germanic poetry, while departing from that of Old Norse poetry.
2. Cæsuræ are represented with the interpunct (·).
3. Alliterating sounds are marked with red colour.

About the present corpus

The scope of the present corpus is large, containing most alliterative poetry extant in Old Germanic languages. It may be divided into the following categories:

1. Mythic poetry, i.e., that which directly treats the Germanic mythology; for historical reasons, the poetry in this category is exclusively written in Old Norse. See also Galders, below.
2. Heroic poetry of the Codex Regius. Since the heroic portion of the Codex Regius forms a coherent text, it is edited in full in the format of the manuscript.
3. Other Heroic poetry, i.e., heroic poetry from sources other than the Codex Regius. This category includes heroic poetry in Old English and Old High German.
4. Galders, i.e., alliterative spells and charms, both from runic inscriptions and from manuscripts.
5. Christian poetry. This category includes a few explicitly Christian poems, where the new religion is at the core of the work (thus Christianised heroic poems like Beow and Hild are not included here). This poetry has been included for its value in the study of poetic expression, and because it may still provide valuable cultural evidence, for instance in the form of glosses.
6. Runic poetry, apart from that already edited under Galders above.

Exclusions

The corpora formed by the (non-mythological) Norse Scoldic corpus and the Norse poetry found in old legendary saws (the forð-aldar-sǫgur) are explicitly excluded. They have been excellently edited in the SkP series, such that I, a single editor, could scarcely produce something as thorough. The latter is problematic in another way. Being entirely embedded in saws, the underlying poetry is often impossible to take out of its prose context, and in some cases one may ask whether it ever had a life of its own, or whether it were simply composed on occasion by the author. For these reasons I think it would be more conscientious to simply edit the whole saws, rather than artificially extract the poetry found scattered therein.

Manuscripts

Norse poetry

The so-called Eddic poetry is foremost found in two medieval Icelandic manuscripts.

The first and most important is GKS 2365 4to, here R. It dates to the 1270s and has 45 surviving leaves, containing 100 poems. Of these 10 are mythological; the rest heroic, dealing with legends mostly of the Migration Period. Notably, following fol. 32, there is a gap of missing pages in the heroic section, specifically cutting off Sdr. It is unclear how many leaves and poems are missing. R is not just a compilation of poems, it shows editorial input as well. Several of the mythological poems are separated by short prose sections, which tie them together into a loose frame narrative, though it is clear from their style and composition that they are originally separate works. When it comes to the heroic poems long prose sections occur both within and between them, creating a saw^C-like prosimetrical form, where the prose in many cases holds up the poetry, rather than the reverse. The heroic half of R clearly forms the basis for the later WalsS. For further literature see TODO.

The second ms. is AM 748 I a 4to, here A. It dates to the 1300s and is but a fragment, consisting of just 6 leaves. It contains only mythological poems, and in a different order from R; unlike it there is no trace of a frame narrative. On the first two leaves are contained the final stanzas of Hbl (1r–v), the complete Bdr (1v–2r), and the first verses of Shir, after which a single leaf has been lost. The next four leaves follow each other and contain the second half of Webth, the complete Grmn and Hym, and the beginning of the prose introduction to Wayl. A is the only medieval manuscript attesting Bdr, and its variants of the poems attested in R are clearly not copied from it, but rather derive from a common ancestor. This makes it very valuable for textual criticism. For further literature see TODO.

Several Eddic poems are quoted in Yilv, namely (TODO): Wsp, Webth, Grmn. The text also cites a few fragmentary Eddic stanzas, which are edited under “Eddic fragments from Snorre’s Edda”. For Yilv I give variants from the following four main mss.:

1. The Codex Regius of the Prose Edda S (GKS 2367 4to; 1300–1350)
2. The Codex Trajectinus T (Traj 1374; a c. 1595 paper copy of a ms. closely related to S.)
3. The Codex Wormianus W (AM 242 fol.; 1340–70)
4. The Codex Upsaliensis U (DG 11; 1300–25)

For discussion on their internal stemmatics and origins I refer to Haukur Þorgeirsson (2017). When all employed witness mss. of Yilv agree on a reading, I use in the critical apparatus the siglum G, which is thus equivalent to STWU.

A few other Eddic-style poems are also included. One of them, Righ, partially survives in W, though it is sadly incomplete (see its Introduction). Grot is quoted in full in Scold. Other Eddic poems survive only in younger Icelandic paper mss., namely TODO. While I have not consulted such paper mss. for poems attested in medieval mss., I have had to rely on them for these poems. Of these poems it must be said, that their late attestation not necessarily proves them to be late compositions. This is most clearly shown by Bdr, which is first attested in the fragmentary A, and in longer form in later paper mss. It thus cannot be excluded that some of these poems would have existed in other lost medieval mss., perhaps even on the now-lost pages of R or A.

Old English poetry

The edited Old English poetry primarily derives from a few manuscripts. Particularly important are the Exeter Book and Lacning.

About the original language edition

My goal with the edition of the texts has been to hold close to the original mss., without excessive emendation. Still, emendation is inevitable, and where it has done it is (apart from any oversight on my part) always marked.

Normalization

In the present edition are found texts in four languages, namely Old Norse, Old English, Old Saxon, and Old High German. All texts have been normalized according to my own orthography, which is based on two principles:

1. Faithfulness to the language at the time when the texts were written, and the distinctions found therein, without neglecting etymology.
2. Striving for a uniform orthography across the various treated idioms, where the same etymological sound is generally written with the same character.

Both of these choices entail disregarding local manuscript traditions and philological tradition, something I see as justified. My goal is to render the texts themselves in a manner that gives as much information to the reader as possible—not to present a facsimile edition for students of paleography. Anyway, such important traits of the original manuscript tradition as the long ſ, arbitrary punctuation, arbitrary spelling, and lack of line breaks, are seldom reproduced in modern editions of Old Germanic poetry.

Normalization of Old Norse

The orthography is inspired by Finnur Jónsson (1932) in that it strives for a more archaic form than that of the surviving mss., one that instead represents the poetry as it may (in many cases, must) originally have looked. For this reason, it often has more in common with the proposed orthography of the First Grammatical Treatise than with the standard Old Icelandic orthography seen in most editions. The following list describes the differences from the standard Old Icelandic orthography:

1. I distinguish short e (from etymological short e) and short ɛ (from etymological short a + i-umlaut).
2. I distinguish long á and ǫ́, as done by the First Grammatical Treatise.
3. I use ø and ɛ́ rather than the traditional æ and æ, to represent the vowels descended from Proto-Norse ō and ā after i-umlaut (cf. the short ø, ɛ < o, a + i-umlaut).
4. I distinguish long nasal á, é, ǿ, ú from long oral á, é, í, ó, ú, as done in the First Grammatical Treatise.
5. I restore the old s—which in modern Scandinavian and even in most Old Norse manuscripts has become r, but which is found consistently in old manuscripts such as AM 237 a fol (c. 1150), and fossilized in forms like þaz (i.e. þatʰ) in R—in the words es ‘which, that, where, when’, and in inflections of vesa (later vera) such as es ‘is’ (3rd sg. pres. ind.) and vas (3rd sg. pret. ind.). The following forms retain the r, as it is there the result of Verner’s law, and not of this (much younger) sound change: the pl. pres. ind. (erum etc.), the pl. pret. ind. (vórum etc.), and the pl. pret. subj. (vérím etc.)

6. When metrically benefactory, I contract ek ‘I’, eru ‘are’, and es ‘which; is’ to ’k, ’ru and ’s, respectively.
7. I use Finnur Jónsson (1932)’s way of distinguishing between the relative particle es and the verb es: the first is appended to the previous word with only an apostrophe (e.g. hann’s ‘he who’), while the second is separated by a space (e.g. hann ’s ‘he is’).

Normalization of Old Swedish and Danish

I employ the same conventions as those described for Old Norse above, including the marking of u-mutated a > ø (that this was indeed found in the Eastern Nordic dialects is most clearly seen by the third-person personal pronoun, which shows u-mutation in such forms as Swedish honom ‘him’ < hónum, hon ‘she’ < hón). Where diphthongs have been contracted into monophthongs, these are marked with a circumflex accent, giving ô < au, ey and ê < ei. Where unstressed vowels have been reduced into an e-like sound, this is written with ē.

Normalization of Old English

I write fronted or brightened etymological a and á with æ and ǣ, for instance in dæg ‘day’ and rǣd ‘advice, counsel’. These are contrasted with ē and ǣ, which represent i-mutated a and á.

An assimilated n is marked with an overpoint, as in rule 4 of the Old Norse orthography described above.

About the English translation

Point about literal translation for use by scholars of comparative mythology The “guiding star” of this translation effort has been literality and consistency. All previous translations (to my knowledge) have such issues as: rendering identically repeated phrases differently at various places; covering up or obscuring technical and cultural terminology; simplifying kennings and other expressions—and this often without notes, to a point where the original meaning is, at times, unrecognizable. While I wholly encourage all readers of sufficient interest to study Old Norse (and other ancient Germanic languages!), perhaps even using the present edition as a tool, I also realize that this is a demanding ask which not all interested students and scholars of comparative mythology, anthropology, literature, religion and other fields will be able to fulfill. I therefore want these groups to be able to have a text that is as close to the original as possible, at the very least when it regards sense and expression.

English proper nouns

One of the most idiosyncratic parts of the present edition will be its handling of proper nouns. I have opted to render all cultural and religious terms, names of places, heroes, gods, and other entities by their English cognates (thus Thunder for Old Norse Þórr) and where such do not exist, their philologically expected English (Anglish) forms (e.g. wallow for Old Norse vǫlva). One reason for this is ideological. I believe that these myths and poems are a common Germanic or Northern European heritage, and should be treated as such. The English once knew gods such as Woden and Thunder, and called them by names naturally evolved in their language. So too did the Germans and Scandinavians, of course, and I would hope that any translators into those languages would follow this spirit and render the names in their natural forms there as well.¹ Another is philological. Forms like Odin and Thor are, while now commonly accepted, debased. They do not even represent the Old Norse pronunciation as accurate as would be possible (for instance, Odin would be better anglicized as Othin; the dental fricative still survives in English!), and many are difficult for English speakers to pronounce. I shudder when hearing a word like ǣsir pronounced /aɪ'sɪr:ɪ/¹For instance in German perhaps Wuten, Donner, Froh, in Swedish Oden, Tor, Frö.

The Spae of the Wallow (Völuspó)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C10th (0.865)–early C11th (0.121)

Meter: Firnwörðslaw

The Spae of the Wallow is the most comprehensive mythological text surviving from Heathen times.

The poem is attested in full in two independent recensions. The first is R, where it is the first poem, found on folios 1r–3r. The second is H, where it is found at 20r–21r in the middle of a large collection of saws and Catholics works. Many verses are also cited in Ylva, large parts of which are directly based on the poem. Other verses are not attested directly, but are instead paraphrased. The paraphrases may still have critical value (so e.g. st. 19, where sal in the paraphrase corroborates H). For its constituent manuscripts see the General Introduction.

As seen from the title, the poem is a spae^C (spó ‘prophecy’) in the form of a monologue spoken by a wallow^C (völva ‘seeress, sibyl, prophetess’), summoned by Woden in order to relate mythological knowledge. The motif of Woden journeying to ask beings (whether ettins or wallows) is also seen in other sources. Closest is Bdr, wherein Woden summons a wallow out of her grave in Hell^L in order to understand why the god Balder^P is having ominous nightmares. There is also Webth, wherein Woden challenges the wise ettin Webthrithner^P to a wisdom contest and defeats him. These journeys are also alluded to in Hbl 43–46.

In its being a mythic catalogue it also resembles the latter part of Hgh, Grmn, Sdr and Alw, though it differs from them in a key way: it gives a (mostly?) complete chronological overview of the whole mythic timeline, from the creation to the end and rebirth of the world. That is not to say that the events are clearly described; they are related in a highly allusive fashion—certainly presupposing that the audience already be familiar with them. There may also be gaps and later inserts that make the poem more difficult.

The poem begins with a bid for silence (1), and the wallow recalling her earliest memories (2). She then recounts the ordering of the world by the gods (3–6) and the golden age of peace and plenty (7–8), which is, however, interrupted by the intrusion of three unidentified ettin-maidens (8, and see note there). After this follow two verses about the shaping of the dwarfs (9–10), and then several originally separate dwarf-tallies (11–15), which are without doubt later inserts. Returning to the main narrative thread is described the creation and endowment of the first man and woman (16–17), Ugdrassle's Ash (18), and the three norns^G living under it (19).

This is where the two full recensions of the poem diverge. Because of its older age and larger count of verses I have here followed the order of R: the wallow recalls how a woman named Goldwey was sacrificed and reborn three times (20), and how she, under the name Heath, practiced sorcery and witchcraft (21). She then recalls the first war in the world, between the Eese and Wanes (22–23), and alludes to the slaying of the smith, who according to Yilv 42 was promised Frow^P and the sun and moon in exchange for building the wall of Osyard (24–25). This is followed by a cryptic verse describing Homedall's hidden silence or hearing (26).

In H the structure is quite different. After the description of the norns (19), the Eese go to decide what action to take regarding the promising of Frow to the ettin (my 24–25), and Homedall's hearing is described (26). Then follows the two verses about the old hag in Ironwood who raises the wolves that will swallow the sun and moon (40–41). After this come verses 20–23 in the same order as R (see above).

To illustrate the differences between mss., and which verses are attested in which, I have prepared the following table showing the order of stanzas by manuscript, compared to the present edition. As several stanzas in G are quoted on their own, with little relation to the order of the original poem, they are simply marked with plus signs. When stanzas are quoted in sequence, they are preceded by an alphabetically incrementing letter denoting which sequence they belong to. When a stanza found in a ms. differs majorly from the pres. ed. (e.g. st. 10 where G omits the first two half-lines), it is marked with a star. The stanzas beginning with Þá gingu regin öll 'Then went the Reins all' are represented by the half-line immediately following.

“For hearing I ask all holy kindreds, greater and lesser, sons of Homedall¹ [MEN]! Wilt thou, O Walfather (= Weden), that I well count forth the ancient tidings of men, those which I foremost recall?²

1 hęlgar] om. R

2 męiri ok minni ‘greater and lesser’] It is unclear what is being modified by these adjectives. It may either be ‘greater and lesser holy kindreds’, in which case it may be equivalent to the phrase Eese and Elves^F (both earthly and heavenly supernatural beings; see Encyclopedia for occurrences.) or ‘the greater and lesser sons of Homedall [MEN]’, in which case it refers to all social classes. It seems rather out of character for such a high ranking person in Norse society as the poet must have been to invoke an ancestral relationship between human social classes, considering how biologically such distinctions were otherwise regarded (cf. my introduction to the Rígh), but on the other hand this may be part of the likely liminal nature of the performance. In any case, the wallow is clearly asking all intelligent beings that may be present for silence, and the expression is a merism of the type ‘gods and men’; see West (2007)[99-100].

¹Cf. Rígh, wherein Rígh, identified by the prose as Homedall, sires three castes of men (namely earls, churls and thralls).

²Cf. Webth 34, 35 with very similar phrasing. The whole introductory formula is positively Indo-European, see West (2007)[63,92-93,312].

3 íviðjur] so all. R has previously been as read íviðit, but this was disproven by an x-ray scan undertaken by Stefan Karlsson (1979).

³Certainly Ugdrassle^P, “beneath the soil” likely referring to it still being a seed.

[R 1r/8, H 20r/5]

before the sons of Byre^P lifted the flatlands, they who shaped the renowned Middenyard^L.
Sun shone from the south on the stones of the hall;
then was the ground grown with green leek.

1 Burs synir ‘the sons of Byre’] In Yilv 6 identified as Weden, Will and Wigh. They “lifted” the earth (apparently both land and water, as in st. 3 there is no sea) out of the primordial chasm.

4 grǫnum lauki ‘green leek’] The leek had great cultural significance in the North. A fine example is Guth II 2, where Siward’s superiority to the Yivickings is compared to a stag among wild beasts, gold among silver and a green leek in grass. The leek was also valued for its magical use, as seen already on C5th–6th bracteates where it appears as a charm word in the form 𐱃𐱃𐱃𐱃 laukar, in one inscription paired with 𐱃𐱃 lína ‘linen’. Later attestations of magic use include Sdr TODO, where the leek is to be used along with runes to prevent mead from being poisoned, and the WalsTh, where the eponymous worshipped horse-penis is lini gǫddr • en laukum studdr ‘endowed with linen and supported by leeks’. The leek has a particular association with women; women-kennings frequently have the leek as a determinant (TODO: Meissner reference?), and Anon Sveinfl 1 (SkP I TODO.) sarcastically states that a battle was not sem manni • męr lauk eða ǫl bęri ‘as if a maiden brought a man leek or ale’.

Sun cast from the south—the companion of Moon^P—her right hand over heaven’s rim;⁵

2 of himin-jǫður ‘over heaven’s rim’] Composite reading; of himin ęiodyr ‘over the heaven-horse-deer(?)’ R is both nonsensical and unmetrical and must be rejected; of iǫður ‘over the rim’ H is unmetrical, lacking alliteration and being too short.

1 sinni Måna ‘the companion of Moon’] At times translated as ‘its moon’. This cannot be correct, as måni ‘moon’ is masculine, while sinni, dative singular of sinn ‘its (reflexive)’ is feminine.

⁵The sun heaved herself up over the horizon and rose for the first time.

Sun knew not where halls she owned;
 stars knew not where steads they owned;
 Moon knew not what sort of might he owned.

4 stjornur ... ǫttu] In G this line follows 5, so that the order is sun, moon, stars.

5 Māni ... átti 'Moon ... owned'] The moon was believed to have supernatural powers; see note to High TODO (Mána skal heiptum kveða).

Then went the Reins all onto the rake-seats:
 the yin-holy Gods, and from each other took counsel of this.
 To night and the moon-phases names did they give;
 morning they called, and middle day;
 afternoon and evening, the years for to tally.

1–2 Þà ... gēttusk 'Then ... of this.'] A formulaic expression for the convening of the Thing^C of the Gods (for which see Encyclopedia: All Gods^G), identically repeated below in sts. 9/1–2, 22/1–2, and 24/1–2. Cf. also the three lines shared between Bdr 1/1–3 and Thrim 14/1–3, which follow the structure of the present stanza(s) very closely: Senn vǫru ǣsir · allir á þingi // ok ǫsynjur · allar á máli, // ok umb þat reðu · ríkir tívar: 'Soon were the Eese^G all at the Thing^C, // and the Ossens^G all at speech, // and of this counseled the mighty Tews^G.'. In all five occurrences other than the present stanza (three from Wsp, the present poem, one from Bdr, one from Thrim), the demonstrative pronoun þat 'this' clearly refers to the matter at hand, expressed with the verb in the subjunctive case (e.g. in Thrim 14/3–4: ok umb þat reðu · ríkir tívar: // hvé þeir Hlórriða · hamar of sótti? 'and of this counseled the mighty Tews^G: How they Lorde's (= Thunder's) hammer would find?'). Following this pattern we would surely expect to find two lines after umb þat gēttusk 'took counsel of this' and before nōtt 'night' in the present stanza, and it seems most likely to presume that they have simply been lost in transmission.

3–5 Nōtt ... tēlja 'To night ... tally'] Cf. Webb 23, where it is said that the sun and moon turn round in heaven ǫldum at ár-tali 'for the year-tally of mankind', and 25, where it is said that the Reins created the moon-phases for the same purpose.

The Eese found each other on Idewolds^L,

2 þeir's ... hǫ-timbruðu 'they who ... timbered'] afís kostuðu · alls freistuðu '[their] strength they tried; everything they tempted' H

2 þeir's ... hǫ-timbruðu 'they who ... timbered'] Two formulae. hǫrgr ok bof 'harrow and hove' is a merism referring to ritual structures and is also found (in reverse order) in Webth 38 and HHarw TODO, as well as in Norwegian Christian laws that mandate 'the burning of hoves and the breaking of harrows' (brenna bof ok brjóta hǫrga). hǫ-timbra 'high-timber, timber high' is a rare poetic compound, and only occurs once elsewhere in the entire corpus, namely in Grmn 16 where it describes a harrow ruled by Nearth. — It is rather interesting that the Gods themselves build ritual structures.

[R 1r/18, H 20r/12]

They played Tavel^C in the yards; merry were they:
 for them was nothing golden wanting⁶—until three did come, maidens of Thurses^G, very unnatural out of Ettinham^L.⁷

4 ám-átkar 'unnatural'] This word (nom. sg. ám-áttigr) has a clear supernatural connotation, and only occurs in four other places in R: Grmn 11, Shir 10, HHarw 17 and HHarw 14. In the first three it modifies jǫtunn 'ettin', while in the fourth it describes a man with clearly supernatural attributes.

⁶Indeed, even the gaming bricks were made out of gold; cf. st. 59.

⁷These three maidens are never mentioned again (unless they are taken to be the norns in st. 19, but they would then be introduced twice). It's possible that an additional verse would have come after this one, giving further information about them, but if it did, it was already lost in the version employed by the author of Yilv who transparently paraphrases (ch. 14):

Ok því næst smíðuðu þeir málms ok stein ok tré ok svá gnóg-liga þann málms, er gull heitir, at öll bús-gagn ok öll reiði-gagn þyðu þeir af gulli, ok er sú öld kǫlluð gull-aldr, áðr en spilltist af til-kvámu kvinnanna; þær kómu ór Jǫtun-beimum.

'And just after this they smithed metal and stone and wood, and so abundantly [did they smith] that metal which is called gold, that all their house-tools and riding-tools were golden, and that age is called the golden age, before it was spoiled by the arrival of the women; they came out of Ettinham.'

after which he describes the creation of the dwarfs (see next stanza).

3 Hvęrr skyldi dverga ‘Who would ... of dwarfs’] so RWU; at skyldi dverga ‘That they would ... of dwarfs’ ST; hverir skyldu dvergar ‘Which dwarfs would [shape the retinues]’ H 3 drótt ‘the retinue’] so G; drotin ‘the lord’ or ‘the retinue’ (with late clitic definite) R; dróttir ‘the retinues’ H 3 of skępja ‘shape’] spekja ‘soothe’ U 4 brimi blóðgu ‘bloody surf’] so HSWU; Brimis blóði ‘the blood of Brimmer’ RT 4 blqum ‘blue-black’] metr. emend. from blám R; Bláins ‘Blown’s’ HW; Bláms STU is prob. a corrupt form of Bláins

4 ór brimi ... lęggjum ‘out of the bloody ... legs’] I think that the poem simply telling of “the bloody surf” and “the blue-black legs” fits better with its general allusive style, but the resulting composite reading may be somewhat controversial.

According to Yilv 14 the dwarfs first originated as maggots in the corpse of Yimer, whose bones are described in Grmn TODO and Webth TODO as being used to make rocks. Dwarfs dwell in the rocks and earth; cf. for instance IngT 2, where the Swedish king Swayther (Sveigðir disappears into a rock in pursuit of a dwarf. More difficult to explain is the creation of dwarfs out of Yimer’s blood (which according to Grmn TODO and Webth TODO is the sea), since dwarfs are never said to dwell in water. — If one chooses the reading Bláinn ‘Blown’ (named in the thules^C as a dwarf) instead of blqum ‘blue-black’, then following Gurevich (Skp 2017, p. 693) one may see a kenning “the legs of Blown (dwarf) [STONE]”. Blown has otherwise been read as a poetic name for Yimer, but that is never attested elsewhere.

1–2 Þar ... annarr ‘There ... second’] om. G, but the author must have had the full verse, since he paraphrases these lines in the following way: Móðsognir var ęðstr ok annarr Durinn. ‘Moodsowner was the highest in rank, and Dorn the second.’ before citing

3–4 þęir ... sagði ‘They ... said.’] There are two conflicting interpretations of the creation of the dwarfs. Either they arose on their own; this is supported by the prose of Yilv (see note to previous st.) and by the form of the stanza quoted there (but it may have been changed to correspond to the author’s vision). On the other hand, both R and H have the dwarfs Moodsowner and Dorn shaping “man-likenesses” out of soil. The present edition follows the second version.

Sts. 11–15 contain two originally separate lists of dwarfs. That they are separate is seen by the repetition of names (Oakenshield, Great-grandfather), and their having their own conclusions.

Sts. 11–13, having no repeated names, seem to belong together. If they do, st. 12, which contains the formulaic conclusion to the list, should probably switch places with 13.

Sts. 14–15 form the second group, having an introduction and a conclusion which both mention the dwarf Loffer.

’Tis time to tally the dwarfs in Dwollen’s retinue [back] to Loffer for the kindreds of men;⁸
 they who sought, from the stone of the hall,
 the abode of Earwongs^L to the Erwolds^L.⁹

3 þeir] þeim H

⁹Cf. Yilv 14: “But these came from Swornshigh (Svarinsbaugr) to the Earwongs on the Erwolds, and thence Lofer is come; these are their names: Sherper (Skirpir), Werper (Virpir), Showfind, Great-grandfather, Elf and Ing (Ingi), Oakenshield, Fale (Falr), Frost, Finn, Ginner.”

There was Dleepner and Dollowthrasher,

 Sherper, Werper, Showfind, Great-grandfather,
 Elf and Ing, Oakenshield, Feller and Frost, Finn and Ginner:

 the tally of descendants heaved to Lofer.¹¹

6 é] om. R 7 til] om. H

¹⁰Two archaic formulae. The first literally ‘that will ever [be] up above’, cf. HarS TODO: “We two are cursed, brother, thy bane am I become! That will ever be remembered (þat mun é uppi, but both mss. þat mun enn uppi), evil is the doom of the norms!” The second is found in a runic inscription, U 323 (980–1015): “Ever will lie—while the age lives (meþ + altr + lifir með aldr lifir)—the hard-hammered bridge, broad, after a good man.” An especially close parallel is found in Þstf Stutttr (st. 5, Kari Ellen Gade ed. in SkP II): Ey mun uppi · Eñdils, meðan stēndr // sól-borgar salr, · svǫr-gōðis fǫr. ‘Always will be remembered—while the hall of the sun’s stronghold [SKY/HEAVEN > EARTH] stands—the journey of the fattener of Andle’s bird [RAVEN/EAGLE > WARRIOR].’

[R 1v/1, H 20r/26]

Until three came out of that host:
 strong and lovely Eese along the settlement;
 they found on land the little availing
 Ash and Emble, orlay^C-less.¹²

1 þrír] gramm. emend.; þrjár RH 1 ór því liði] þussa brúðir 'brides of thurses' H is probably corrupt due to the influence of st. 8; the adjectives in l. 2 are in the masculine. 2 qflgir ok ástkir 'strong and lovely'] ástkir ok qflgir (norm.) 'lovely and strong' H

1 Unds 'Until'] We seem to be missing a preceding sentence here which would have completed the semantics; it was probably contained in a now-lost stanza. What this st. would have contained is of course impossible to know, but it may have given a reason for why the gods needed to create men.

2 at húsi 'along the settlement'] An adverbial, lit. 'along the house'; the gods were not walking in the wilderness.

¹²This verse is paraphrased in Yilv 9: Þá er þeir gengu með sývar-ströndu Bors synir, fundu þeir tré tvau ok tóku upp trén ok sköpuðu af menn. Gaf inn fyrsti qnd ok líf, annarr vit ok hręring, þriði á-sjónu, mál ok beyrn ok sjón, gáfu þeim klęði ok ngfn. Hét karl-maðrinn Ask, en konan Embla, ok ólst þaðan af mann-kindin, sú er byggðin var gefinn undir Mið-garði. 'When the sons of Byre (cf. st. 4) walked along the sea-shore they found two trees and they took up the trees and shaped men from them. The first one gave breath (qnd) and life, the second wit and movement, the third sight, speech, appearance and sight; they gave them clothes and names. The male was called Ash, and the woman Emble, and from them mankind was begotten, to whom were given the dwelling within Middenyard.'

The ON cognate of tree, tré, can also mean 'pieces of wood', and it is traditionally seen as referring to pieces of driftwood. Yet as pointed out by Hultgård (2006) the comparative evidence suggests that the two were in fact living, growing trees (they would thus be part of the foliage described in st. 4) and there is nothing in the sources that speaks against this.

While Ash is easily identified with the same-named wood species (Fraxinus excelsior), the etymology of Emble is much more difficult. The shaping of men from trees is used by poets in various kennings for men and women, especially in scoldic poetry (for a short discussion see SkP I, p. lxxv ff.). While this is rarer in the Eddic corpus it does occur, e.g. in Sdr 4: brynþings apaldr 'apple-tree of the byrnie-Thing^C [BATTLE > WARRIOR]'.

Thence come maidens, much knowing:

2 þolli 'fir'] Here simply meaning 'tree' and used only for the alliteration. Perhaps the same applies for askr 'ash' in the phrase askr Ygg-drasils 'Ugdrassle's Ash', with its species not being as fixed to the ancients as it has now become?

¹⁴i.e. 'they have carved on boards, they have laid laws, they have chosen lives'. It is well known that in Old Norse as in other old Germanic languages the simple past can have both perfective and imperfective sense. — This st. is paraphrased in Yilv 15: Þar stendr salr einn fagr undir askinum við brunninn, ok ór þeim sal koma þrjár meýjar, þér er svá beita: Urðr, Verðandi, Skuld. Þessar meýjar skapa mōnnum aldr; þér kōllum vér nornir. 'There is a single fair hall beneath the ash-tree by the well, and out of that hall come three maidens, who are called thus: Weird, Werthing, Shild. These maidens shape the ages of men (formulaic! TODO.); we call them norns.'

¹⁵While reading folk-víg as ‘ethnic conflict’ (between the Eese and Wanes) is appealing, I more cautiously read the first element folk as carrying its earlier, more common sense of ‘troop, group of warriors’.

Weden hurled, and into the opposing troop did shoot;¹⁹ that was yet a troop-conflict [WAR] earlier in the Home^L.
Broken was the board-wall²⁰ of the fortress of the Eese;
the Waners did by a conflict-spae^C tread the fields.²¹

2 fyrr ‘earlier’] so H; fyrst ‘first’ R. The R reading cannot be correct as this st. is describing a different war, and thus not the first. It has probably arisen due to the similarity with st. 20/1.

¹⁹The object, a spear, is understood. This seems to reference a ritual, well-attested in the literature, wherein a war-chief would dedicate an opposing army as a human sacrifice to Weden by throwing a spear over them, typically with the incantation Óðinn á yðr alla ‘Weden owns you all!'; he would then own the battle-slain in that they joined him as Oneharriers^G in Walhall^L. Weden is also described as “owning” dead men in Hbl 24 (namely slain nobles, contrasted with Thunder^P who is insultingly said to “own the kin of thralls”) and in runic inscription N B380 (edited below under Galders), a sort of greeting wherein the receiver is wished to be owned by Weden (and “received” by Thunder). For further literature see PCRN HS II:24, p. 560, II:25, p. 617, and especially III:42, p. 1166ff.

 Shild held a shield, but Shagle another,
 Guth, Hild, Gandle and Goreshagle—now are tallied the Nannies of Harn (= Weden), ready to ride the ground, walkirries.

3–6 Skuld ... val-kyrjur Shild] Judging especially by the out-of-place phrase nú eru talðar ‘now are tallied’, these four lines seem to be a later insert from a thule^C counting the walkirries.

5 Nǫnnur Herjans ‘Nannies of Harn (= Weden) [WALKIRRIES]’] Nanna ‘Nanny^P’ (the name itself is a nursing word) was the wife of Balder^P, but the word is here certainly being used to refer generically to ‘maidens, women’. A similar kenning is found in the thule listing female divinities (Þul Ásynja in SkP III), where the walkirries are called Óðins meyjar ‘Weden’s maidens’.

Told allusively in Wsp 31–33 is the myth about the Balder’s death at the hands of his blind brother Hath, and the revenge killing of Hath by his half-brother Wönnel, who was specifically begotten for that purpose. The other important sources for this myth are Bdr 8–11, the detailed description in Yilv 49, and Saxo Grammaticus (III.4.1–8).

The account and language of Bdr 8–11 is strikingly similar to the present sts. (and Bdr 11/2–4 is near-identical to Wsp 32/4–33/2), and they give only one detail not found in the present sts., namely that Wönnel, the slayer of Hath, was born from a woman named Rind “in the western halls”.

Yilv 49 contains a much longer and more detailed narrative. It may be shortly summarised as follows: After Balder has terrible nightmares about dying, his mother Frie makes all sorts of things (fire, water, venom, metals, stones, trees, diseases, beasts, etc.) swear oaths not to harm him. Since Balder is now practically unharmable, the Eese make sport out of shooting and striking him. Lock is annoyed by this game, and in disguise as a woman, he finds out from Frie that a single thing did not swear the oath: the mistletoe, since it was thought too young. Lock grabs a mistletoe and gives it to the blind god Hath, telling him where to shoot. Hath does so, and Balder dies.

Yilv 49 continues with the rest of the narrative, namely the failed attempt by the Eese at “crying Balder out of hell” (for which see Eddic Fragments in the present volume) and Balder’s funeral (which is treated poetically in Wolf Ugson’s fragmentary House-drape, ÚlfU Húsdrip in SkP III.) For the revenge taken by the Eese on Lock, treated in Yilv 50, see st. 34 below.

A very notable omission in Yilv 49–50 is the slaying of Hath by his half-brother Wönnel. This brother-slaying may have been left out for moral reasons, but was certainly known to the author, as seen by Yilv 30, which reads in full: Áli eða Váli heitir einn, sonr Óðins ok Rindar. Hann er djarfr í orrostum ok mjök happ-skęytr. ‘Onnel or Wönnel one is called, the son of Weden and Rind. He is brave in battles and a very lucky shot’, and by Scold 19, where we find the following relevant kennings for Wönnel (with case changed from the acc. to the nom. for clarity): sonr Óðins ok Rindar ‘son of Weden and Rind’ and hefni-áss Baldrs, dólgr Haðar ok bani hans ‘avenging os^C of Balder; the enemy of Hath and his bane’.

The revenge narrative is also dealt with by Saxo (III.4.1–8) in his typical euhemerized form (for Saxo’s Latin forms of relevant names see respective Encyclopedia entries): Weden learned from the Finnish wizard Horsethief that Rind, daughter of the Russian king, Weden (who could not murder his own son) seduced the woman Rind (in the by Cormac Awmundson’s TODO: spíð Yggr til rindar), who gave birth to Wönnel.

1 tifur 'victim's'] This word is rather difficult (and possibly corrupt). It may be connected with týr 'tew, god', but I see two problems with this. First, the dat. sg. of týr is tívi and the intrusive r is hard to explain. Second, although it must have at some point been used in the singular in the generic sense 'god', and this survives in compounds like Sig-týr 'Victory-tew (= Weden)' and in the plural tívar 'tews; gods', in the ON corpus the simplex form týr exclusively refers to the god Tew^C. I follow CV, who connect it with OE tiber, tifer 'victim, hostage', but this also has problems: As seen by blóðgum the present word is certainly masculine, but tiber is neuter. Assuming a nom. sg. tífurr with the same declension as jofurr, we would expect tífri* in the dat. sg., not tifur (which would however be the expected acc. sg.).

³¹This myth is retold both in Yilv and From Lock below. The basic story is that after Lock was caught after Balder's death and bound with his son's intestines. A snake was then placed to drip venom over his face. His wife, Syein, sat over him and caught the venom in a hand-washing basin. 34b þar sitr Sigyn · þeygi of sínum

[R 2r/9, H 20v/13]

2 veri vęl-glýjuð. · Vituð ér ęnn eða hvat?

There sits Syein not at all cheerful, o'er her husband.—Know ye yet, or what?

The follow sts. are paraphrased in Yilv ch. 52:

Þá męlti Gangleri: „Hvat verðr þá ęptir, er brenndr er himinn ok jorð ok heimr allr, ok dauð goðin ęll ok allir Einherjar ok alt mann-folk, ok hafið ér áðr sagt, at hverr maðr skal lifa í nokkvęrum heimi um allar aldir?“

Þá svarar Þriði: „Margar eru þá vistir goðar ok margar illar; batst er þá at vera á Gimléi á himni, ok all-gótt er til góðs drykkjar þeim, er þat þykkir gaman, í þeim sal, er Brimir heitir; hann stendr ok á himni. Sá er ok góðr salr, er stendr á Niða-fjollum, gorr af rauðu gulli; sá heitir Sindri. Í þessum solum skulu byggja góðir menn ok sið-látir.

Á Ná-stręndum er mikill salr ok illr ok horfa norðr dyrr; hann er ok ofinn allr orma-hryggjum sem vanda-hús, en orma hęfuð ęll vitu inn í húsit ok blása eitri, svá at ęptir salnum renna eittr-ár, ok vaða þęr ár eið-rofar ok morð-vargar, svá sem hēr segir.“

‘Then spoke Gangler: “What will then be afterwards, when heaven and earth and all the world is burned, and dead are the gods and all Oneharriers and all man-kind—and ye have said earlier, that each man will live in some world for all ages?”

Then answers Third: “Many good dwellings are there then, and many bad: it is then best to be on Gimlee in heaven, and it is all-good with good drink, for those who find that pleasurable, in the hall which is called Brimmer; it also stands on heaven. That one is also a good hall which stands on the Nithfells, made of red gold; it is called Sinder. In these halls good and well-mannered men will dwell.

On Neestrand is a great and bad hall, and the doors face north. It is all woven with the spines of serpents like a wicker-house, but the heads of the serpents all face into the house and blow venom, so that along the hall run venom-rivers, and in those rivers wade oath-breakers and murder-wargs, as is said here:”

after which are quoted sts. 37 and 38/1–2, followed by the prose: En í Hver-gelmi er verst ‘But in Wharyelmer is is worst’ and 38/4.

Stood to the north, on the Nithwolds, the beer-hall of an ettin, and Brimmer is that one called.

³³In this st. is clearly described watery punishment in the Heathen afterlife, also seen in Rein 3–4 and possibly in Grmn 21. The crimes are what one might expect from the Germanic worldview: perjury, shameful murder, and adultery with a married woman. In Anglo-Saxon and Nordic laws the committer of such crimes gained the title of nothing^C, that is, one afflicted with nithe^C (severe shame). It is not surprising then that such nithings would be tortured by a creature named Nithehewer ‘Nithe-striker’. The practice of burying in bogs and flood-marks (or generally outside of settlements) is well attested in sources about Germanic culture from Tacitī Germania onwards—I consider it likely that the heavy streams in this stanza and others represent such graves. This is further elaborated on in GermanicGems2<empty citation>.

In the east³⁴ dwells the old woman, in Ironwood^L, and nourishes there the kindreds of Fenrer^P [WOLVES];
from them all comes one most particular:
a seizer of the Moon in a troll's hame^C.³⁵

1 býr 'dwells'] so HG; sat 'sat/stayed' R 1 aldna 'old'] arma 'wretched' U 1 Éarn-viði 'Ironwood'] metr. emend.; Járnviði RHSWU; Járn-viðjum 'Ironwoods' T 2 föðir 'nourishes'] so HG; föddi 'nourished' R 3 af] ór TS 4 tjugari 'seizer'] †tuigan† T; tregari 'griever' U. As the young agentive suffix -ari is found nowhere else in the poem it is possible that this word is corrupt. If it is, it must have occurred early in the transmission, as reflexes of tjugari* are found in all surviving mss.

³⁴The cardinal direction associated with Ettingham, which is presumably where Ironwood is located.

³⁵The old hag raises the cubs of the wolf Fenrer, of which a particularly fierce one will swallow the moon. According to Grmn 40 the sun is chased by a wolf called Skoll, while another wolf, Hate Rothswitner's son, runs in front of her. This is elaborated upon in Yilv 12, where it is said that Skoll swallows the moon, while Hate swallows the sun. High then explains that "A lone troll-woman (gygr) lives to the east of Middenyard in that forest called Ironwood", and "feeds the sons of many ettins, all in the likenesses of wolves, and thereof these wolves (i.e. Skoll and Hate) come. And it is also said that from that lineage a single one becomes the mightiest, and he is called Moongarm^P. He fills himself with the life of all those men who die and he swallows the moon and stains heaven and all the air with blood. Thereof the sun loses its rays and the winds are violent and moan hither and thither, and thus it says in the Spae of the Wallow: [...]" after which this and the following st. are quoted. This seems very much like a composite from several sources—probably Wsp 40–41 and Grmn 40—but becomes contradictory when it states that two wolves swallow the moon. Assuming that this is only a confusion on the part of the author of Yilv, this st. and the next must be describing Skoll, but it is of course not impossible that there was confusion about the exact details of these events among the Heathen poets. In favour of that seems to speak Weibth 46–47, where the sun is said to be swallowed by Fenrer (but see note there).

³⁶Cf. Thrim 6, where the ettin Thrim is said to sit on a mound, and Shir P2, where a herdsman in Ettinham sits on a mound. The significance of this mound-sitting is uncertain, but it is clearly associated with ettins.

³⁷Edgethew “herds” the flock of monstrous wolves for the old woman in st. 39.

³⁸*gagl* ‘wild goose’, maybe here referring to carrion-eating ravens? Galewood is probably the same location as Ironwood.

4 angan] angantyr R

⁴²That the first sorrow was the death of Balder (see sts. 31–33) is unanimously understood. Line is described in Yilv 35 as a minor goddess sett til gęzlu yfir þeim męnnum, er Frigg vill forða við báska nękkurum ‘placed to watch over those men which Frie wishes to protect against any particular danger’. In spite of this, almost all translators and commentators have understood Line as here referring to Frie, or questioned whether her existence as a separate goddess is not a misunderstanding on the part of the author of Yilv. Hopkins (2017) argues excellently that this need not be the case; as a subordinate goddess of Frie, Line’s two sorrows would be her failing to protect Balder and Weden (the son and husband of her mistress, respectively) from harm.

The following stanzas are paraphrased in Yǫlv ch. 53:

*Þá męlti Gangleri: „Hvęrt lifa nękkur goðin þá, eða er þá nękkur jorð eða himinn?“
 Hęrr segir: „Upp skýtr jorðunni þá ór sęnum, ok er þá grōn ok fęgr. Vaxa þá akrar

 Mið-garðs-orm ok um Fenris-úlfr. Þá finna þeir í grasinu gull-tęflur þęr, er ęsirnir hęfðu

‘Then spoke Gangler: “Do any of the gods survive then, or is there any earth or heaven?” High says: “Then shoots the earth up from the seas, and is then green and fair. Then acres grow unsown. Wider and Wonnell live, as the sea and Surt’s flame has not wounded them, and they settle Idewolds, where Osyrd once was, and there come the sons of Thunder, Mood and Main, and have there Millner. Thereafter come Balder and Hath from Hell, then all reconcile with each other and speak with each other and think back on their runes, and speak about the tidings which had once been: about the Middenyardswyrm and about the Fenrerswolf. Then they find in the grass those golden Tavel bricks which the Eese had owned. So it is said.”’

The Dreams of Balder (Baldrs draumar)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C9th (0.110)–C10th (0.890)

Meter: Firnwörðslaw

In ancient manuscripts only preserved in A, but the poem also survives in later manuscripts with a few extra stanzas (see below). It follows the structure of a riddle contest.

The poem begins in medias res; Balder^P has been having nightmares, and so the gods meet at the Thing to figure out why (1). Woden^P rides to Hell^L, where he has an encounter with a bloody dog (2). It barks for a long time at him, but he passes it and continues to “the high house of Hell^P” (3), from which he rides west, to the grave of a certain wallow^C, whom he revives using magic (4). She asks which man has forced her out of the grave (5), and Woden introduces himself as Waytame, before asking for whom the benches of Hell are covered with gold (6). The wallow responds that barrels of mead stand brewed for Balder and that the gods are very anxious (7). Woden asks her who will slay Balder (8), and she responds that it is Hath, carrying a “high fame-beam” (9). Woden then asks her who will avenge Balder’s death by slaying Hath (10). The wallow responds that Rind^P will give birth to Woden’s son Wonnell^P, who will slay Hath when only one night old (11). Woden then asks about some mysterious maidens (12; see Note), which betrays his identity. The wallow tells him that she now knows his true identity, to which Woden responds that he does as well: she is not a wallow, but rather the “mother of three thurses” (13). The wallow tells him to ride home and “be famous”; he must still die at the Rakes of the Reins^L (14).

⁵⁰The similarity in wording to the treatment of this myth in Wsp is striking; apart from the tense, ll. 2–4 here are near-identical to 32/4–33/2 there (for discussion on the narrative see introduction to Wsp 31–34). The irregularity of the stanza length might suggest that a line has been inserted in analogy with the aforementioned poem.

[Óðinn kvað:]

12 „Þegj-at vǫlva, · þik vil’k fregna,

[Weden quoth:] "Shut thou not up, wallow; thee I wish to ask!
Until all is known I wish to know further:
Which are the maidens that weep heartily,
and onto heaven cast the front sheets?⁵¹"

⁵¹According to Yilv 49 Hell promised to give Balder back to the Eese if “all things in the world, living and dead, cry for him”. The Eese relayed this message, and “the men and the animals and the earth and the stones and trees and all metals” cried for Balder. It may be that these maidens were included among the grievors (perhaps they were the walkirries, and this is what reveals Weden’s identity?), but their identity is otherwise unknown.

[illegible]

[The wallow quoth:] "Thou art not Waytame as I thought, rather art thou Weden, the ancient Geat!"— [Weden quoth:] "Thou art no wallow^C nor wise woman, rather art thou of three Thurses^G the mother!"

[Vǫlva kvað:] 14 „Hęim ríð Óðinn · ok hróðigr ves,

[The wallow quoth:] “Ride home Weden, and be renowned!
 So may no other man come again to visit [me],
 when loose, Lock slips out of his bonds, and [at] the Rakes of the Reins^p the rippers come!”

1 ok hrðigr ves ‘and be renowned’] A sarcastic, taunting statement, the sense being: “Your fame, Weden, will not save you!”

4 rjúfendr 'the rippers'] Presumably Surt and Lock with his children, as described in Wsp 40 ff. The verb rjúfa 'CV: to break, rip up, break a hole in' is also used in the context in the formulaic pá's rjúfask rëgin 'when the Reins⁹ are ripped' (Webb 52), (und of) rjúfask rëgin 'until the Reins are ripped' (Grmn 4, Lock TODO and Sdr TODO). One may further compare the similar sounding verb rífna 'be riven', also used with reference to the destruction of the world in Runic inscription Sö 154: Jörð sal rífna · ok upp-biminn 'Earth shall be riven, and Up-heaven', and Arn Hryn (in SkP II pp. 185–6, ll. 3/7–8, see also note there): meiri verði þinn an þeira · þrifuðr allr, unds biminn rífna. 'greater than theirs may thy whole wealth be, until heaven is riven.'

The Speeches of the High One

(Hávamól)

The Speeches of the High One is the second poem of R, which is the only medieval witness manuscript. Several sts. are however cited or alluded to in other places, such as Eyv Hák (TODO: formatting) 21 and FbrS TODO.

The poem before us does not very much seem like a single composition by one poet, but instead much more like a collection of scattered traditional poetry associated with the god Woden. It seems to contain at least two poems of practical life advice, two mythological narratives, scattered gnomic poetry about runes, and a list of galders. These various strands are united by their presumed speaker, namely Woden in His function as God of Wisdom.

Following previous authors, I identify the following strands, excepting various lone sts. that are probably later inserts. In the present edition each of the following is given a separate, short introduction:

1–79	The Guest-strand; practical life advice, beginning with a guest arriving at a homestead.
81–89	Various scattered sts. of advice.
90–101	Woden’s failed seduction of Billing’s daughter.
102–109	Woden’s obtaining of the Mead of Poetry
110–136	The Speeches of Loddfathomer; Woden’s advice to Loddfathomer.
137–145	The Rune-tally; various sts. relating to runes and their magical use.
146–164	The Leed-tally; Woden’s listing of 18 galders.

Two questions shortly arise: who was the redactor (i.e., the person who set these strands together, and gave the new work the title Háva mól), and what was his motive? While a detailed and sufficient answer will probably never be found, a careful reading of the final stanza, 165, gives us some clues. By its prayer-like blessing, which brings up the Heathen dichotomy between the Gods and Ettins (the friends and enemies of Mankind, respectively) and calls the contents of the poem (which include unambiguous Heathen ritual instructions) “very useful” (all-þorfr); and by its reference to the process of oral transmission, the whole poem in something resembling the current form must (it seems) have been put together no later than the early 11th century, in a pre-scribal, pre-monastic, Heathen context. (Iceland converted around year 1000, but people surely clung to the old traditions for some time longer.)

As seen by the emphasis on the usefulness of the poetry, the reason for this redaction was not strictly antiquarian, but foremost utilitarian; the redactor gathered an amount of traditional poetry he found useful (whether for its life-advice or mythology) into a single poem, which could then be learned by heart by anyone. In this he certainly achieved his goal. The High is by far the greatest surviving collection of pre-Christian Norse advice poetry, and has functioned like a Noah's Ark—or Hoardmimer's Wood—for that genre. Thus, those scattered stanzas which were not included by the redactor—and many must have existed—are now forever lost.

The Guest-strand (sts. 1–79)

The Guest-Strand (Old Norse: Gæsta-pátttr) is one of the most interesting surviving works of Norse poetry. Sadly, its structure has been obscured by the insertion of unrelated sts. and by poor translations. My hope is to shed some light on the original coherence of the strand, while respecting the text as it appears in the manuscript. As I do not think it can do each stanza justice, and since there is not exactly a clear progression of themes, I will not here attempt a stanza-by-stanza summary of this strand. Rather, I will give some important observations and then let the reader read for himself.

The Strand is a piece of advice poetry, and takes its outset in a wanderer's arriving as a guest at a Norse farmstead. It first (roughly sts. 1–4) discusses the mutual responsibilities between guest and host, and then moves on to broader human interactions, with a particular focus on alcohol, war, friendship and human wisdom. While there is some coherence and nice transitions are frequently employed in order to shift from one theme to another (e.g. between sts. 4 and 5, or 10 and 11), the poem is not clearly divided into sections, nor is there (after the very first stanzas) a linear progression from one theme to another.

At all turns the poem advises caution and shrewdness. A man should always carry his “manwit” (ON man-vit, a word somewhat analogous with the English “common sense”) with him; he should think before he speaks

The poem moves seamlessly between various parts of life. To do so the poet often employs transitions where a st. repeats the structure of the previous one, but with a new subject. This is particularly evident in sts. 4–5 and 10–11.

1–4 ALL.] There is a good train of thought throughout the st.: the guest must first wash and dry himself, and then be welcomed to sit and eat at the table. After the host has provided these amenities the responsibility shifts onto the guest, who must now speak.

The word ǣndr-þaga ‘silence in return’ leads a nice transition to the rest of the Strand, where proper social conduct (encompassed by the first word of the next stanza below, “wit”) will be discussed more broadly. One may note that the verb þegja ‘shut up, be silent’ (of which þaga*, which only appears in the present compound, is a derivative, formed in the same way as saga ‘saw, history, story’ to segja ‘say, speak’) and its derivative þegn ‘silence’ are frequently used by Scoldic poets to mark the very beginning of their works (e.g. Arn Magnadr 1¹¹: þegi sǣim-brotar ‘may gold-breakers [GENEROUS MEN] be silent’, Egill Berdr 1^V: hyggi ... til þagnar þinn lýðr ‘may thy retinue focus on silence’, Glúmr Gráf 1¹: biðjum vér þagnar ‘we ask for silence’).

While Anglo-Saxon Latin-script mss. use several runes ideographically (e.g. ʁ o for OE ōðel ‘homeland, patrimony’), there are (to my knowledge) no Scandinavian examples with runes other than ʁ. The tradition of ideographic runes standing for their names is ancient and goes back to the time before Latin writing, as proven by the inscriptions from Stentofte (DR 357) and Ingelstad (Ög 43), which use the runes ʁ j for ár ‘year, good harvest’ and ʁ d for dagr ‘day’, respectively.

In the present poem its precise meaning seems to be something like 'the state of being liked by your surroundings to the point where people are willing to help you out'. A better burden bears man not on the road than much manwit.
Worse way-provision he drags not along on the plain than a too great drink of ale.

3 vęlli at 'on the plain'] Formulaic, the word vęllr 'plain, (uncultivated) field' is also used in sts. 38 and 49. It is easily understood that the wild heaths and plains of Iron Age Norway were particularly unsafe places where a traveller needed to keep his wits about him, lest he fall victim to robbers or murderers (so st. 38).

12 Es-a svá gótt, · sęm gótt kveða,
2 ęl alda sonum;
því-at fęra vęit, · es fleira drekk,
4 síns til gęðs gumi.

'Tis not so good, as good they say,
ale for the sons of men;
for the less he knows, as the more he drinks,
man of his own senses.

13 Ó·minnis-hegri heitir, · sá's yfir ęlðrum þrumir,
2 hann stelr gęði guma;
þess fogs fęðrum · ek fętraðr vas'k
4 í garði Gunnlaðar.

Forgetfulness-heron is called he who hovers over ale-feasts:
he robs man of his senses.
With that bird's feathers I was fettered in the yards of Guthlathe^P.

1 Ó·minnis-hegri 'Forgetfulness-heron'] Lit. "unmemory-heron"; a rather interesting personification of drunkenness as a hovering bird.

- 14 Ql̥r ek varð, · varð ofr-ql̥vi,
 2 at hins fróða Fjalars;
 því es ql̥ðr batst, · at aptr of heimtir
 4 hvęrr sitt gęð gumi.

Drunk I became—I became the drunkest by far—at the learned Fealer's [home].—
 That ale-feast is best, where every man gets back to his senses.

- 15 Þagalt ok hugalt · skyli þjóðans barn 2 ok víg-djarft vesa;
 gláðr ok ręifr · skyli gumna hvęrr,
 4 unds sinn bíðr bana.

Silent and thoughtful should the ruler's child
 —and battle-bold—be.
 Glad and cheerful should every man be,
 until he suffer his bane.

- 16 Ó·snjallr maðr · hyggsk munu ęy lifa,
 2 ef við víg varask;
 en ęlli gefr hōnum · ęngi frið,
 4 þótt hōnum gęirar gefi.

The unvalorous man thinks he will always live
 if he of war be wary;
 but old age gives him no peace,
 which yet spears would give him.⁵³

⁵³The unvalorous man might have been spared by the spears, but death will still find him through miserable old age. Since death is unavoidable it is better to live bravely, even if one risks dying in battle, than to live cowardly and die of sickness. This connects well to the ancient view of the 'straw-death' (TODO).

- 17 Kópir af-glapi, · es til kynnis kōmr, 2 þylsk hann umb eða þrumir;
 alt es sęnn, · ef sylg of getr,
 4 uppi 's þá gęð guma.

Gapes the oaf when to visit he comes;
 he mumbles about or loiters.
 All at once—if a sip he gets—are the senses of the man exposed.

- 18 Sá einn v̥eit, · es víða ratar
 2 ok hefr f̥jǫlð of farit,

 4 sá es vitandi 's vits.

He alone knows, who widely roams,
 and has journeyed much:
 his own senses does every man controls, who is knowing of his wits.

2 f̥jǫlð of farit 'journeyed much'] Formulaic, also occurring in Webb 3, 44, and so on in the fixed lines spoken by Woden: F̥jǫlð ek f̥ör, · f̥jǫlð fr̥ęistaða'k, // f̥jǫlð ek r̥ęynda r̥ęgin 'Much I journeyed, much I tried, much I tested the Reins^G.'

- 19 Haldi-t maðr á k̥eri, · drekki þó at hófi m̥jǫð, 2 m̥ęli þarft eða þ̥ęgi;
 ó·kynnis þess · váar þik ęngi maðr,
 4 at gangir snimma at sofa.

Man ought not to hold onto the cask, yet drink mead in moderation;⁵⁴
 he ought to speak the needful or shut up.
 For that uncouthness will no man blame thee, that thou go early to sleep.

2 m̥ęli þarft eða þ̥ęgi 'he ought to speak the needful or shut up'] Formulaic, line occurs identically in Webb 10/2.

⁵⁴Drinking horns at this time could not be set down, and so to "hold onto" may have been an expression for not drinking. The st. may also be referring to the toasting ritual wherein a single vessel would be passed around and drunk from by each person (indeed this is the origin of the Scandinavian toasting-word, skål 'prosit, cheers!', lit. 'bowl!'). At such celebrations "holding onto" the vessel and refusing to drink was very rude; as late as 1519 a man in Jämtland was killed in an argument resulting from his refusal to pass on to the bowl (see Sjöberg (1907)).

- 20 Gróðugr halr, · nema g̥ęðs viti, 2 etr sér aldr-trega;
 opt f̥ēr hlógis, · es með horskum k̥ømr,
 4 manni heimskum magi.

The gluttonous man—unless he know his sense—eats himself a life-sorrow.
 Oft the belly, when among the sharp he comes,
 brings the foolish man ridicule.

- 21 Hjarðir þat vitu, · nér hęim skulu, 2 ok ganga þá af grasi;
 en Ó·sviðr maðr · kann ęva-gi
 4 síns of mál maga.

Herds know when home they shall [go],
 and then part from the grass;
 but an unwise man never knows his own belly's measure.

- 22 Ve-sall maðr · ok illa skapi 2 hlęr at hví-vetna;
 hitt-ki hann vęit, · es vita þyrpti,
 4 at hann es-a vamma vanr.

The wretched man and badly turned out laughs at anything.
 This he knows not, which he might need to know:
 that he is not free of blemishes.

4 hann es-a vamma vanr 'he is not free of blemishes'] Formulaic, cf. Lock 30: es-a þér vamma vant 'thou art not free of blemishes'.

- 23 Ó·sviðr maðr · vakir umb allar nętr 2 ok hyggr at hví-vetna;
 þá es móðr, · es at morni kómr;
 4 alt es vıl sęm vas.

The unwise man is awake for all nights
 and thinks of anything.
 Then he is weary when the morning comes:
 all the trouble is as it was.

- 24 Ó·snotr maðr · hyggr sér alla vesa
 2 við-hléjęndr vini;
 hitt-ki hann fiðr, · þótt of hann fār lesi,
 4 ef með snotrum sitr.

The unclever man thinks all those who laugh with him his friends.
 This he finds not, that they yet make sport in him,
 if among the clever he sits.

- 25 Ó·snotr maðr · hyggr sér alla vesa
 2 við-hléjendr vini;
 þá þat fiðr · es at þingi kómr,
 4 at á for-méjendr fáa.

The unclever man thinks all those
 who laugh with him his friends.
 Then he finds it, when to the Thing^C he comes,
 that he has spokesmen few.

4 á for-méjendr fáa 'has spokesmen few'] Repeated in st. 62. He has few who are ready to take his side and speak up for him; the sense is that true friends are proven in conflict, not in easy things like laughing. The Thing was the old Germanic legal assembly, and so the specific reference here is to legal disputes, which, however, could easily turn into deadly feuds.

- 26 Ó·snotr maðr · þykkisk alt vita, 2 ef á sér í vǫ veru;
 hitt-ki hann vǣit, · hvat skal við kveða,
 4 ef hans frǣista firar.

The unclever man seems to know everything
 if he takes shelter in a nook.
 This he knows not, what he shall answer
 if men test him.

2 vǫ 'nook'] From earlier *vrǫ, the original consonant cluster being still preserved in Swedish vrå 'corner'. The present stanza is to my knowledge the only Norse attestation of the form vǫ, which features a rare Western sound change from vr- to v-. The more common change vr- to r- yields rǫ, which is the Norse form found elsewhere. Somewhat tangentially, this word is brought up in FGT (1950) as an example of a word with nasal ǫ, and contrasted with oral ǫ in rǫ 'sailyard'.

- 27 Ó·snotr maðr, · es með aldir kómr, 2 þat 's batst at hann þegi;
 engi þat vǣit, · at hann ekki kann,
 4 nema hann mǣli til mart.
 vǣit-a maðr, · hinn's vǣt-ki vǣit,
 6 þótt hann mǣli til mart.

The unclever man, when among people he comes,
 'tis best that he shut up.
 No one knows that he nothing knows,
 unless he speak too much.
 The man knows not, who nothing knows,
 that he speak too much.

- 28 Fróðr sá þykkisk, · es fregna kann, 2 ok segja hit sama,
 ey-vitu leyna · megu ýta synir
 4 því es gęngr of guma.

Learned seems he who can ask and answer the same [way].
 In no way may the sons of men hide that which eludes a man.

1–2 fregna ... segja ‘ask ... answer’] Perhaps specifically in the context of a riddling contest of wisdom.

- 29 Órna męlr, · sá’s ęva þęgir, 2 stað-lausu stafi;
 hrað-męlt tunga, · nema haldęndr ęgi,
 4 opt sér ó-gótt of gęlr.

He who never shuts up speaks plenty many utterings of absurdity.
 A quick-spoken tongue—unless it be held in place—
 oft sings evil [into being] for itself.

3–4 hrað-męlt ... of gęlr ‘A quick-spoken ... for itself’] Formulaic. Cf. Lock 31.

3 nema haldęndr ęgi ‘unless it be held in place’] lit. ‘unless holders own it’ or ‘unless it own holders’. The ‘holders’ are perhaps the teeth which hold the tongue in place.

- 30 At auga-bragði · skal-a maðr annan hafa, 2 þótt til kynnis komi;
 margr fróðr þykkisk, · ef freginn es-at 4 ok nái þurr-fjallr þruma.

As a laughing-stock shall man not have another when he comes to visit.
 Many a one seems learned if he is not asked,
 and manages to loiter about dry-skinned.

4 þurr-fjallr ‘dry-skinned’] i.e. ‘untested’, equivalent to the English idiom get one’s feet wet. The word fell -fjall ‘skin, pelt’ is rare in Old Norse literature and only occurs in cpds, e.g. Wagl 11: ber-fjall ‘bear-pelt’. Cf. however Swedish fjäll ‘scale (on fish and reptiles)’

 2 gęstr at gęst hęðinn;
 vęit-a gęrla · sá’s of verði glissir,

4 þótt með gr̥omum glami.

Learned seems he who takes to flight,
the guest, from a scoffing guest.
He knows not clearly, who grins over the food,
that he with fiends be prattling.

2 g̥estr 'guest'] Here probably 'stranger'; when being mocked by a stranger it is best not to engage, since the conversation can quickly turn violent. Cf. sts. 122–123 and 125.

32 Gumnar margir · erusk g̥agn-hollir,

2 en at virði vrekask;

The strife of mankind will that ever be;
guest raves against guest.

and can ask about little.

 Though two goats he own, and a cord-roofed hall,

1 vęlli á 'on the plain'] Formulaic, see note to st. 12.

2 feti ganga framarr 'take one step further'] Formulaic. Cf. Lock 1: svát ęinu-gi feti gangir framarr 'so that thou not take one step further'.

I found not a generous man, or one so good of meat^C, that a gift were not accepted;
 or one of his fee^C so not [...],
 that the repayment were loathed, if he accepted [them].⁵⁵

1 matar góðan 'good of meat'] A Viking Age expression; see Encyclopedia.

3 [...] It is doubtless that a word has been lost here; the meter and sense require it. Finnur Jónsson (1932) suggests glöggvan 'miserly, stingy', giving a litotes 'so not stingy', i.e., 'so generous'.

⁵⁵No man is so generous that he would refuse a gift presented to him, nor loathe receiving a favour as thanks for his generosity.

 Oft one saves for the loathed what was meant for the loved;
 many a thing goes worse than one expects.

With weapons and garments shall friends gladden each other;
 that is most seen on oneself.⁵⁶ Mutual givers and return-givers are friends for the longest, if it⁵⁷ is to last long.

1 Vöpnnum ok vǫðum 'weapons and garments'] i.e. with full arms (weapons and armour); friends are supposed to strengthen each other, and increase their capacity for violence. The expression is formulaic and in other occurrences exclusively refers to implements of war; the "garments" here are thus no silks. Cf. Beow 39, where Shield's funeral ship is loaded with bilde-wæpnum ęnd beaðo-wéðum 'with war-weapons and battle-garments'.

⁵⁶i.e. in one's own lived experience.

3 ó·snjallr, gløgg'r 'unvalorous, stingy'] Contrasting respectively with frókn, mildr 'brave, generous' in the first half of the stanza; very fine parallelism.

4 sýtir ... gjǫfum 'the stingy man ... gifts'] Cf. st. 39. After receiving a gift, one was culturally obliged to give something back.

My garments I gave, on the plain,
to two tree-men.
Champions they seemed when cloaks they had;
shameful is the naked hero.⁶¹

2 fimm daga ‘for five days’] i.e. “for a week”, which was originally five days long. See also st. 74 and the Encyclopedia: five days^C.

52 Mikit eitt · skal-a manni gefa;

Of small sands, of small seas:
small are the senses of man.
For all have not become evenly knowing;
half is every man.⁶²

⁶²The genitive “of small sands, of small seas” is probably a partitive, the sense being that man’s horizons are small; the universe is far greater than he and always will be. On the meaning of the second half of the st. I find that of Gudmundur Finnogason (1929) most convincing, namely that every man has both strengths and weaknesses. As nobody can excel at everything, nobody is complete; every person is “half” (and it should be added that ON halfir has a more general sense of incompleteness than its English cognate). This interpretation fits particularly closely with sts. 71 and 132.

69 Es-at maðr alls ve-sall, · þótt sé illa heill,
2 sumr es af sonum sáll,
sumr af frændum, · sumr af fé ørnu,
4 sumr af verkum vel.

Man is not all unblessed, though he of poor health be:
 someone is blessed with sons;
 someone with kinsmen, someone with ample fee^C, someone with works done well.

1 ve-sall ‘unblessed’] Or ‘woe-blessed’. I have elsewhere translated this word as ‘wretched’, but I have presently rendered it this way to show the etymological relationship. The second element in this word is sell, but lacks i-umlaut due to Proto-Norse shortening of the vowel before the umlaut occurred or became phonemic. The ancestral Proto-Norse forms would be sālir* and wajē-sālir*. Cf. here Þǫð-Mǫðr wajē-marir ‘infamous’ on the Tjurkö bracteate, where the second element is the ancestor of ON mérr ‘renowned, famous’. The expected descendant ve-marr* is not attested.

1 ve-sall ‘unblessed’] I have chosen to translate sell as ‘blessed’, but it is not a past participle and could also be rendered as ‘lucky’. It carries with it a certain sense of innateness, in a way that modern Westerners may find foreign. So a king whose reign is one of peace (fríðr) is said to be fríð-sell ‘blessed with peace’, while one who reigns during good harvests (ár) is said to be ár-sell ‘blessed with harvests’. The harvests and peace are not due to environmental or political factors outside of his control, but rather spring from the king himself (TODO: Reference PCRN chapter).

2 sonum ... frændum ‘sons ... kinsmen’] Cf. st. 72 below, which stresses the importance of sons and kinsmen.

70 Bętra ’s lifðom, • an séi ó·lifðom,

 4 en úti vas dauðr fyr durum.

’Tis better for the living than it may be for the unliving:

 A fire I saw burning high for a wealthy man,
 but outside he was dead before the doors.⁶⁹

1 an séi ó·lifðom ‘than with the unliving’] emend.; 7 ęel lifðom R. The normalized reading ok sęl-lifðom ‘and for the blessed living’ is metrically defect, since ęel- is strongly stressed and thus should carry alliteration. For the original form of the line we may instead compare Fthm 30: Hvętum ’s bętra • an sé óhvętum ‘Tis better for the brisk than it may be for the unbrisk’. The corruption probably happened in the following way: en* (younger form of an ‘than’) in the prototype was misinterpreted as en ‘and, but’ and copied as 7 (the tironian et), while séi ólifðom* (probably with the words cramped together) became ęel lifðom.

2 ęy getr kvikr kú ‘always gets the quick a cow’] i.e., “new opportunities always present themselves for the living”. A reference to the cattle-based economy (see also st. 76), the cow being used as a metonym: (cf. churchly English ‘the quick and the dead’, i.e. ‘the living and the dead’).

⁶⁹The fire is probably the man’s funeral pyre. It is notable that his wealth is mentioned; according to Ibn Fadlan (TODO) two thirds of a great chieftain’s wealth was spent on his funeral. One notes the contrastive en ‘but’, and may paraphrase it as something like “I saw a lavish funeral, but the burning man was dead anyway.” This interpretation is supported by the following st. (Hęb 70, especially the second half), which expresses the same sentiment.”

1 fę ... fręndr 'Fee ... kinsmen'] The import of this merism may be less clear to the modern reader. In the Germanic Iron Age farming society a man's wealth was reckoned by how many heads of cattle (and the Norman loan-word cattle is itself the same word as capital) he owned (cf. st. 70 above, where "a cow" is used to express "an opportunity"), and his social power by the number of able male relatives ready to side with him in conflict (cf. st. 72 above and TODO: reference?). The meaning is thus: all your power will pass away, and so too must you, but if you leave a good reputation behind it can live on. For Indo-European poetic analogues, see West (2007, pp. 99 ff.).

1 rúnum ... rēgin-kunnum ‘runes ... born of the Reins’] This expression also appears on the C4th–6th Noleby stone (in the acc. sg. rúnó ragina-kundó ‘a rune born of the Reins’), which proves that the Eddic rune-magic is (at least in part) founded in oral tradition going back to the Heathen age. See also Encyclopedia rune^C.

2–3 þeim’s ... Fimbul-þulr ‘those which ... Fimble-Thyle’] Formulaic. Cf. st. 142 where these two lines occur almost identically, but in reverse order.

⁷⁴This stanza, which deals with runic magic and shares expressions with sts. in the Rune-Tally section (beginning with st. 138 below), hardly fits in its current place. The last line with its shift in person is likely to be a later insert.

Scattered stanzas of practical advice.

These sts. are rather different, both in terms of meter and style.

The following sts. are united by their meter, Leed-meter (unlike most of the preceding sts., see introduction to them above), style and content. The strand begins with general maxims about love and relations between the sexes, before moving on to the narrative about Billing's daughter.

Cf. MhkV 20/1–2, which is probably partly based on this stanza: Ást-blindir ’ru seggir svá · sumir, at þykkja mjök fás gá; þannig verðr um man-song mēlt: · marga hefr þat hyggna tēlt. ‘Some men are so love-blind, that they seem to heed very little; so it is said about a love-song: many wise men has it entrapped.’

1 nýta 'useful'] Sarcastic. Billing's daughter had apparently summoned a lynch mob.

3 bornum viði 'carried sticks'] lit. 'carried wood'; the mob was armed with clubs.

4 víl-stígr 'sad path'] Ambiguous, referring either to the beating he would have received at the hands of the mob, or to his walk of shame away from the hall. The latter is perhaps more likely.

1 Auk n¹er morni 'And by morning'] Mirroring the beginning of st. 97 above.

2 gr³ey ⁴ett 'a lone bitch'] The insult is easily understood: Weden is being asked to make love to the dog, "this is all you get!"

3 góðu 'good'] Possibly not sarcastic, but rather referring to her chastity.

 and I had naught of that woman.

Weden's obtaining of the Mead of Poetry

The intricate myth of how Weden came to own the Mead of Poetry is told more fully in Scold 5–6. That narrative goes as follows, with minor details left out: After the war between the Eese and Wanes, the two tribes of gods reconcile through spitting into a vat. Not wanting to discard this token of their truce, they instead create a man out of the spit, calling him Quasher^P; he is so wise that he can answer any question posed to him, and so travels around the world in order to share his wisdom with humans. Quasher eventually comes to the dwelling of two dwarfs, Fealer and Galer. They kill him and drain his blood into three vessels: two vats named Soon and Bothem, and a kettle named Woderearer^P. Through mixing the blood with honey they make a mead, with the power to turn anyone who drinks from it “a scold or man of learning (skald eða fróða-maðr)”. The dwarfs then lie to the Eese about the murder, telling them that Quasher drowned in his own wisdom. Some time later, the dwarfs murder an ettin named Gilling^P and his wife. Gilling's son, Sutting^P, learns of this and prepares to drown the dwarfs. In exchange for their lives and as recompense for his father's slaying, the dwarfs offer Sutting the “dear mead” (mjóðinn dýra; cf. here sts. 104 and 138). Sutting accepts the ransom and takes the mead home with him. He makes his daughter Guthlathe^P guard it. Some time later, Weden is out journeying, and finds nine thralls mowing hay. He sharpens their scythes with a special whetstone, and the mowing improves greatly. He then throws it in the air and the thralls shortly kill each other over it. By evening Weden comes to the owner of the thralls, Bigh, Sutting's brother. Bigh laments the death of his workmen, and so Weden, who calls himself Baleworker^P, offers to do the work of the thralls over the summer, in exchange for one drink of Sutting's mead. Bigh tells him that Sutting alone owns the mead, but that he will accompany Baleworker to Sutting to ask for the drink. The two arrive at Sutting, who as expected refuses to give any part of the mead away. Baleworker then tells Bigh that he will get to it anyway; he takes out the drill Rate^P, and tells Bigh to drill through the mountain, into the room where the mead is stored. Bigh first attempts to trick him by only drilling halfway, but eventually creates a narrow passage. Baleworker turns himself into a snake and crawls through it; as he does, Bigh tries to strike him the drill, but misses. After coming through, Baleworker sees Guthlathe watching over the mead. He goes on to sleep with her for three nights, after which she promises him three sips of the mead. With each sip he swallows the contents of one of the three vessels, so that all of the mead ends up in his belly. Having taken the mead, he dons his eagle-hame and flies away from the mountain. Sutting sees him, takes his own eagle-hame, and gives chase. The Eese see Weden in flight, and set out several large vat on the ground, into which Weden, still flying, spits out the mead. At this point Sutting has almost caught up with him, and so Weden “sends back” (senda aptr, usually interpreted being sent out from the anus) some of the mead, presumably into his face. This portion becomes the lot of foolish poets (skald-fífla blutr), while the rest of the mead is given to the Eese and to skilled poets (þeim mǫnnum, er yrkja kunnu ‘those men who can compose [poetry]’).

The core of this many-twisted myth is old. A close parallel is found in RV hymns 4.26–27. In these two hymns the soma plant (who in the Vedic mythology is not just the plant and its resulting drink, but also a god, perhaps somewhat like Quasher) is first held within “a hundred iron forts” (4.27.1c: śatām púrah āyasiḥ) by the archer Kṛṣānu, before being stolen by a sweeping falcon. The falcon brings Soma to Manu, the ancestor of the Aryans and first sacrificer.

The resemblance to the last part of the Scold account should be obvious, but, notably, the detail of the falcon is not found in any of the sts. below. This shows that the narrative of Scold cannot be exclusively based on the sts. here below, but instead also relies on other, now-lost sources. This is also supported by the present sts. leaving out the narratives about Quasher, the two dwarfs, and Baye, along with some subtler narrative differences.

The order of the present sts. follows that of R, their main witness manuscript. The strand begins with some social advice (102), after which the narrative follows (103–109). It is narrated in the first person by Weden himself. The sts. do not tell the myth in chronological order and leave much up to the listener; they are surely composed for an audience that already knows the story. The following narrative details are given:

104. Weden visits Sutting's home, but does not receive a good reception.
105. Guthlathe falls in love with Weden, and gives him a drink of the Mead.
106. Weden has to bore through the mountains with the drill Rate.
107. Weden has "bought [the Mead] well"; possibly a euphemistic reference to sleeping with Guthlathe for it.
108. Guthlathe indeed does sleep with Weden, though not expressly in exchange for the Mead.
109. The following day (hins hindra dags, see note to this word in the edited text below), a group of Rime-Thurses come to Weden's hall, to ask him whether a Baleworker is among the Gods, or if he has been slain by Sutting.
110. Switching to the third person (which may indicate that this is his answer to the Rime-Thurses), Weden says that he "thinks" that Weden has sworn an oath, but that his words cannot be trusted. After the "simble" (i.e. drinking feast, banquet; probably referring to the drink of the Mead), Weden betrayed Sutting and made Guthlathe weep.

The underlying narrative seems to generally agree with that of Scold, but unlike its more transactional affair, we here find a stronger emphasis on Weden's cruel betrayal of Guthlathe. A notable detail not found in Scold is Weden's oath in st. 109. The content of the oath was most likely that Weden would marry Guthlathe, something supported by the language used (see note to st. 108: hins hindra dags). The recipient of the oath, which Weden clearly broke, was either Sutting or Guthlathe. That Weden swore it to Sutting, and thus asked him for Guthlathe's hand in marriage, may be suggested by the description of Sutting as svikvinn 'betrayed' in st. 109. This view, however, has an internal narrative problem: in st. 103 Weden describes his interaction with Sutting as poor, and in st. 105 Weden is said to have had to bore through the mountains, but this may just have been to reach Sutting, rather than Guthlathe as in Scold. The recipient of the oath being Guthlathe would agree better with the Scold narrative, and Sutting's betrayer would instead be her.

1–4 Vəl ... jaðar] Taken on its own this st. would be somewhat difficult, but in context the import is clear: Woden says that He has made good use of the Mead of Poetry by bringing it to earth, making poetry (and surely likewise other intellectual disciplines) available to men.

3 Óð-rórir ‘Woderearer’] One of the vessels in with the Mead of Poetry was held (see introduction to the present section above), here standing in for all the Mead.

The following day went the Rime-Thurses to ask for the High One's counsel, in the High One's hall.
About Baleworker (= Woden) they asked, if he were come among the bonds [GODS], or if Sutting had slain him.

1 Hins hindra dags ‘The following day’] This is the only occurrence of the comparative hindra ‘following, next’ in the Norse (i.e. ‘belonging to Norway and its colonies’) literature. The superlative bindstr ‘last, final’ does occur more often (e.g. indsta sinni ‘the last time’, with loss of the b-; see CV: bindri), and the possible derivative bindar-dags ‘day after tomorrow, two days after’ is found twice, both times in the GolL, chh. 37 and 266. If we, however, search in the broader Scandinavian sphere, we find in the Swedish provincial laws an exact equivalent of the present phrase, namely OSwe. bindra-dagber, a law-word referring specifically to the ‘day after the wedding’, used both on its own and in the expression bindra-dags gief ‘morning gift’. If this is indeed the sense in the present stanza, two interpretations are possible: it either (i) refers sarcastically to Weden’s sleeping with Guthlathe (as would be done on the wedding night), or (ii) means that Weden actually married, or promised to marry, Guthlathe. The latter interpretation may find support in st. 109, see notes there.

A high-oath^C I ween that Weden has sworn—how shall one trust his truces?
 Away from the simble^C he left Sutting, betrayed,
 and Guthlathe, brought to tears.

1–4 Baug-ęið ... Gunn-löðu ‘A high-oath ... brought to tearsTM’] The exact narrative referred to in the stanza is hard to pin down, but I find the following most likely: Weden swore an oath on a high, its contents being that he would marry Guthlathe. Sutting then hosted a simble (banquet, drinking feast) for the new couple (cf. hins hindra dags in st. 108), and Weden slept with her, but after. svikvinn ‘betrayed’ and gróttu ‘brought to tears’ are (respectively masc. and fem.) acc. sg. past participles of the transitive verbs svíkva ‘to betray’ and gróta ‘to make weep, bring to tears’. I read lét as meaning ‘left, abandoned, forsook’.

The Speeches of Loddfathomer

Loddfáfnismól. Advice given to Loddfathomer. In R stanza 110 begins with a large initial M in the margin, smaller than those of individual named poems, but larger than the typical initials for sts.

 in the High One's hall,
 I heard [them] say thus:⁷⁶

⁷⁶The speaker, describing himself as a thyle (pulr 'sage, chanter of memorized poetry'), says that he will relate what he has heard said in Walhall. Considering the location, it seems almost certain that the giver of this advice was its owner, Weden^P. The receiver of the advice, Loddfathomer^P (see Encyclopedia for etymologies), is otherwise unknown.

5 leitir þér innan út staðar 'thou must look for thy place, [going] out from within'] A difficult line to translate faithfully, owing to innan út '[going] out from within' and the euphemistic expression leita sér staðar 'look for one's place' for 'shit', something which at the time was done outside. The meaning of the line is thus 'or if you are leaving your house to relieve yourself'.

4 líkn-fastan ‘steadfast in liking’] The first element líkn ‘liking’ is somewhat difficult; see sts. 8 (with note) and 120. For the present cpd La Farge and Tucker (1992) give a tentative ‘assured of favour’, while CV gives ‘fast in goodwill, beloved’.

4 þrimr orðum ‘With three words’] i.e. ‘not even with three words’. ⁸⁰i.e. “if somebody puts a curse on you, do not ignore it, but respond decisively”. This st. has often been interpreted as a command to call out evil, even when committed towards somebody else, and while there is nothing in it that speaks clearly against that interpretation, it does not agree with the general spirit of the High, which is one of caution and shrewdness.

 Up shalt thou not look in battle
 —alike to a madman become the sons of men—
 lest men bewitch thy [sense/life/face].⁸¹

⁸¹A very difficult st. CV explains gjalti as an old dative of goltr ‘boar, hog’, and thus sees the closely related phrase verða at gjalti as “to be turned into a hog”, i.e. ‘to turn mad with terror’, esp. in a fight”. The vowel breaking is however unexpected here, since goltr (< Proto-Norse galtur*) is an u-stem, which makes the stem-vowel in the dat. sg. galti (< galtiu*, cf. kunimudiu, dat. sg. of Kunimundur*, on the Tjurkö 1 bracteate) the result of i-umlaut rather than an original short e*.

La Farge and Tucker (1992) instead explain the word as a borrowing from Old Irish geilt ‘insane, mad’. Pettit (1986) follows this, and argues that the whole theme of the st. probably be of Celtic origin, giving several examples from Celtic literature of warriors going mad upon looking up into the sky during battle. In this case the men (balir, which word seems to have an association with warriors; cf. 36–37, 49) would be to quote Pettit some sort of “supernatural sky warriors”, in my opinion most likely the Oneharriers^G.

The Rune-Tally

These scattered sts. are introduced by a larger initial in R, marking the beginning of a new section. They have the header Rúna-tals þáttur ‘Strand of the Rune-Tally’ in younger paper mss. and generally give an archaic, mystic impression; it is as if they were drawn from the lips of an Odinic priest.

Apart from these stanzas, there are a few other instances of Runic magic. Closest at hand is st. 80 above, which would fit seamlessly into the present section. Outside of High there is Sdr 4–16, also preserved in R.

of Balethorn^P, Bestle^P's father—and a drink I got, of that dear mead poured [from] Woderearer^P.⁸⁷

⁸⁷This st. fits poorly here and seems like an insert. It mentions ljóð 'leeds; (magical) songs, incantations' rather than runes, and has nothing to do with Weden's hanging on the tree. Bestle was Weden's mother and Balethorn his maternal grandfather. The famous son of Balethorn would then be his maternal uncle. The custom of sending sons away to be fostered by their maternal uncles or grandfathers (which seems to be what is going on here) was quite common in Germanic society, cf. TODO.

1 nam'k frévask 'I took to thrive'] A notorious mistranslation (TODO: source) has rendered these words as 'I took semen', seeing in them a reference to Weden taking the seed from hanged men in order to replenish his own powers, something never attested elsewhere. This notion, surely based on the word fré 'seed', has no philological grounding. frévask is wo. doubt a reflexive verb, and regardless fré is used of plant seeds, not ejaculate.

⁸⁸Each good speech and deed quickly led to another.

 Knowest thou how one shall bid? Knowest thou how one shall blot^C?

⁹⁰A neat semantic structure would be found if the former four verbs referred to runes^C: carving, interpreting, painting (with blood?), and divining; and the latter four referred to sacrifice: asking for boons, worshipping, sending (the sacrifice or the prayer; making sure the gods receive it), and slaying the victim. This may be supported by the following stanza, which repeats the last four verbs here in what looks like a sacrificial context. See further relevant Encyclopedia entries.

⁹¹The meter of this st. is unusual, but bears some resemblance to Vg 216 (the Högstena galder). TODO: Elaborate.

4 [...] It is very likely that a line has been lost here.

⁹²An identical progression of four verbs suggests a close relation with the previous st. — The sense seems to be that it is better not to sacrifice at all than to sacrifice in excess, since even a small gift (to the gods) will be rewarded. A ritual cycle of gifts and rewards between men and the gods is also seen in other Indo-European pagan literatures. Compare the Sanskrit Dehí me, dádamí te ‘Give to me, I give to thee’ and Latin dō ut dēs ‘I give that thou might give’.

The Leed-Tally

This section of Hígh, the so-called the Leed-Tally (Ljóðatal), is not separated from the preceding section (which is marked out with a large initial), but is usually taken as separate since it is a unified whole not much concerned with runes. The speaker (certainly Weden) recounts eighteen spells, aristocratic and Odinic in character; they deal with such things as healing (spell 2, 12), battle (3, 4, 5, 8, 11, 13), countering sorcery (6, 10), stilling the elements (7, 9), and seduction (16, 17).

In particular the fourth spell bears a strong likeness to the first Merseburg charm.

¹⁰⁰The riður ‘(female) riders’ were witches who would leave their original human shapes or skins (bamir) in order to fly around in the air tormenting and poisoning villagers. Their original bodies would then be lying in a coma-like state, in something resembling that which is today called astral projection. Yet, it was not the case that their whole mental faculties would disconnect from their bodies, but rather they would leave behind something of their humanity, which was thought to be inextricably linked to their human bodies. Weden was through his second sight able to see these riders, and could then use his superior magical skill to confuse them so that they would not be able to return to their human “home”-shapes or minds, but were instead forced to stray as tormented disentangled ghosts; a cruel fate. — Weden likewise brags about tricking riders in Hbl 20.

The Speeches of Webthrithner

(Vafþrúðnismól)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C9th (0.105)–C10th (0.894)

Meter: Leed-meter

A wisdom contest poem, known by the author of Ylva.

Far from being a loose collection of pieces of mythic information, the poem is tightly structured.

Weden first asks his wife, Frie, for counsel, as he is curious about the ancient wisdom which the ettin Webthrithner might possess (1). Frie expresses worry, as she considers Webthrithner wiser than all other ettins (2), but Weden says that he has travelled far and wide, and wishes to know what Webthrithner's hall is like (3). Frie wishes Weden good luck against the ettin (4) and he departs, to challenge Webthrithner's orð-spēki 'word-wisdom' (5). He arrives at hall of Webthrithner (6), who promptly declares that Weden will not come out of the hall unless he be wiser than him (7). Weden introduces himself as Gainred, saying that he has travelled far in need of Webthrithner's hospitality (8). Webthrithner invites Weden to sit down (9), but he instead utters a gnomic stanza (10) not unlike those of the first section of Highb.

Webthrithner then begins to ask questions relating to the mythology, each answered by Weden in turn. The questions concern which horses pull the day (11–12) and night (13–14), the river which divides the gods and ettins (15–16) and the plain where Surt and the gods will fight (17–18).

Webthrithner calls the god learned, invites him to sit on the bench, and declares that the loser of the contest must give his head (19). The roles are now reversed, and Weden asks the ettin about the origins of earth and heaven (20–21), of sun and moon (22–23), of day, night, and the phases of the moon (24–25), and of winter and summer (26–27); then about the earliest being, namely the ettin Earyelmer^P (28–29), his origins (30–31) and how he reproduced asexually (32–33). Weden continues by asking what Webthrithner himself first remembers (34–35), about the origin of the wind (36–37), the god Nearth^P (38–39), Walhall and the Oneharriers (40–41), and where Webthrithner learned these esoteric pieces of wisdom (42–43).

After this the structure and tone of the questions change; each one begins with the same first half as that of st. 3, and they concern the end-times. Weden asks which humans will survive after the Fimble-winter (44–45), how the sun will rise after Fenrer has destroyed it (46–47), about some obscure maidens (48–49; see discussion there), which Eese will survive after the flame of Surt goes out (50–51) and how Weden will die (52–53). Finally, he asks what Weden spoke in the ear of Balder before he was burned on the pyre (54). Webthrithner at last understands the identity of his challenger, since only Weden himself could know the answer to that question. He laconically accepts his imminent death and the futility of his word-wisdom (55); the poem ends with his admission that Weden will always be the wisest (56).

Óðinn 20 „Sæg þat hit ęina, · ef þitt øði dugir [R 8r/9, A 3r/1]

Weden:

“Say the one, if thy wisdom suffices,

and thou, Webthritner, mightst know:

Whence Earth did come, or Up-heaven^L,

1 øði] The first word on fol. 3r. of A; from this point we have the poem in both manuscripts.

Vafþrúðnir 21 „Ór Ymis holdi · vas jørð of sköpuð, [R 8r/10, A 3r/2] 2 en ór bæinum björg,
 himinn ór hausi · hins hrím-kalda jötuns,
 4 en ór sveita sęr.“

Webthriðner:

“Out of Yimer^P’s flesh was the earth shaped,
but out of his bones the mountains;
heaven out of the skull of the rime-cold ettin, but out of his blood the sea.¹⁰⁶”

4 svēita ‘blood’] In poetry svēiti, although cognate with ModEngl. ‘sweat’, almost always means ‘blood’. This is also the case with the OE swāt, as seen e.g. in Beow 1286a: sweord swâte fāh ‘sword stained with sweat’, 2689b–2690: hē ge-blóðegod wearð // sâwul-driore; · swât jðum wéoll. ‘he was bloodied in soul-gore; the sweat gushed in waves’.

¹⁰⁶The present st. very closely resembles Grmn 41; lines 1 and 4 here are identical to lines 1–2 there, and lines 2 and 3a here are very similar to line 3a and 4 there. Although the stanzas are clearly related, they are still distinct enough that the one cannot be a direct scribal copy of the other. I think that the relation is most likely to be oral, and that the two stanzas were both composed in the same, most likely West Norwegian, community of poets, or perhaps even by the same individual.

Webthrithner:

“From the Ilewaves^L splashed venom-drops;

so it grew until it formed an ettin.
Our lineages came there all together, thus it is ever all too fierce.”

1–4 ALL.] Over æons the splashing venom-drops combined until they formed a sentient being: this was Earyelmer, who is probably to be identified with Yimer^P. This stanza is cited in support of the lengthy and embellished creation narrative found in Yilv, but there is reason to believe that our poet was thinking of something simpler.

The llewaves are surely a reflex of the chaotic primeval Waters found in many West Eurasian mythologies, including Genesis 1:1–3 and RV 10.129. Of these two foundational religious sources the latter is closer to the present stanza, and probably holds the more archaic conception. Where we find in the Jewish narrative a proper creation; at the very beginning of time God's spirit is on the Waters and He makes the light shine over them, we find in these two Indo-European texts a spontaneous emergence of a single primeval entity long before the Gods are born—here from the violent splashing of venom, in RV 10.129.3 from “the power of heat” (tāpasah mabinā). This entity in turn asexually begets sexual beings—here through rubbing his limbs together, in RV 10.129.4 simply giving rise to “desire” (kāma) which serves as the “primal seed of thought” (mānasaḥ rétaḥ prathamām)—and it is from these that the world is populated.

4 hofum ok hǫrgum ‘hoves and harrows’] A formulaic merism, see note to Wsp 7 for other occurrences. This stanza seems to be referring to the large count of cultic places named after Nearth in Norway (TODO: source this); cf. here Grmn 16, where it is said that Nearth rēðr hó-timbruðum hǫrgi ‘rules a high-timbered harrow’. Also of interest is Lock 51, where a goddess speaks about her véum ok vǫngum ‘wighs and wongs’, other cultic names. All of these examples suggest something about the Heathen view of shrines.

¹¹⁰i.e. the Rakes of the Reins^P.

The two following stanzas are damaged in both R and A; R has only 40, but splits it in two, while A has 40/1 (abbreviated in the ms.: S. þ. e. XI) and then jumps to the answer. The present two stanzas are reconstructed. TODO: explain better.

himself into the son’s [= Balder’s] ear?”

¹¹⁸I agree with Finnur Jónsson (1932) that the subject is “son” from the next line. The phrase stíga á ‘step onto, mount’ is also used to refer to one stepping aboard a ship or mounting a horse (see CV: stíga for citations), and so its use for a person being borne onto the pyre seems formulaic. This has been compared with Beow 1118b: gúðrinc ástáb ‘the warrior mounted [his pyre]’, but the interpretation of that line is not controversial; Fulk et al. (2008)[186] follow Grundtvig in emending gúðrinc to gúðréc ‘war-smoke’, relating it to Beow 3144b (wuduréc ástáb ‘wood-smoke rose up’, also in a description of a cremation). They state that Grmn 54 ‘almost certainly refers not to Baldr but to Óðinn, probably imagined to mount the pyre in order to set fire to it.’

The Speeches of Grimner are preserved whole in both R and A.

The poem itself is surrounded by two long introductory prose narratives containing some very old motifs, which are here brought up in the notes. It's hard to say for how long these texts have accompanied the poem (TODO: I may write about this in the Introduction, since this question is important for several other poems), but since they are found in both R and A and contain these motifs it would seem that they are fairly old. Together with sts. 1–3 they form a frame narrative that gives additional meaning to the gnomic sts. enclosed within.

The gnomic sts. themselves, the meat of the poem, are mythological and often quite obscure. In this they align closely with other Eddic gnomic poems such as High, Webth, Sdr, and Alw.

Weden begins by listing the halls of the gods (4–17). This section has been discussed in detail by de Vries (1952) TODO! who considers it corrupt. Specifically, he sees the second half of v. 4 as a later insert, since it does not elaborate on the “holy land” mentioned in the first half. Jackson (1995) has argued convincingly against this, showing how the first half serves as a generalized introduction to the list; the holy land is the dwelling-places of the gods.

After this list come several sts relating to Weden and his hall, Walhall (18–23). Mentioned are the preparation of food in Walhall (18), Weden's wolves (19) and ravens (20), the river through which the dead have to wade (21) and the gate through which they have to pass (22), the count of doors in Walhall (23), the count of doors in Thunder's hall Bilshirner (24), and two animals which stand on the hall and gnaw on the branches of the tree Leered (25–26). From the latter animal's—the stag Oakthirner's—horns droplets fall into Wharyelmer, which is the origin of all rivers (26).

This introduces a list of mythic rivers (27–28), ending with the waters through which Thunder must wade on his way to Ugdrassle (29). This leads to a list of the horses ridden by the other gods on their way to Ugdrassle (31) which is followed by a description of the roots of Ugdrassle (31), then its animals (32–36) the Walkirries (37), and beings associated with the sun and moon (38–40), the things created from Yimer's body (41–42) with a digression on the significance of the blood^P for men in the present (43, see note there!), the creation of the ship Shidebladner (44) and finally a list of the noblest of several categories of things and groups (45).

After these lists Weden utters an unclear st. invoking the gods (46), before listing many of his names and the circumstances in which they were used (47–50). He then turns to Garfrith, disappointed by the inhospitality and poor conduct of his former protégé, and predicts his imminent death (51–53). He finally reveals himself by his true name, daring Garfrith to face him (53). After this he repeats several of his names (54), and the poem ends.

In the final prose section we are told that Garfrith, after learning that he was torturing Weden, hurried up to take the god away from the fires, but tripped and fell on his sword and died. After this his son Ayner ruled for a long time.

From the sons of king Reeding (Frá sonum Hrauðungs konungs)

- P1a Hrauðungr konungr átti tvá sonu. Hét annarr Agnarr, enn annarr Geirrøðr. [R 8v/31, A 3v/23]
 2 Agnarr var tíu vetra enn Geirrøðr átta vetra. Þeir reru tveir á báti með dorgar sínar at smá-fiski. Vindr rak þá í haf út. Í nátt-myrkri brutu þeir 4 við land ok gingu upp; fundu kot-bónda einn. Þar vóru þeir um vetrinn.
 Kerling fostraði Agnar, enn karl Geirrøð. At vári fekk karl þeim skip. Enn 6 er þau kerling leiddu þá til strandar, þá mælti karl ein-méli við Geirrøð.
 Þeir fengu byr ok kvómu til stöðva fýður síns. Geirrøðr var fram í skipi.
 8 Hann hljóp upp á land enn hratt út skipinu, ok mælti: „Far þú þar er smyl

 10 fagnat; þá var faðir hans andaðr. Var þá Geirrøðr til konungs tekinn, ok varð maðr ágétr.

King Reeding had two sons. One was called Ayner, and the other Garfrith. Ayner was ten winters old, but Garfrith eight winters. The two were rowing in a boat with their trolling-lines for small fishing. The wind drove them out into the sea. In the dark of night they crashed onto land and walked ashore; they found a lone cottage farmer. There they stayed over the winter. The wife fostered Ayner, but the husband Garfrith.¹²⁰ In the spring the husband gave them ships, but when he and his wife led them to the shore, the husband spoke privately with Garfrith.¹²¹ They caught good wind, and came to their father's harbour. Garfrith was in the front of the ship. He leapt onto land and pushed out the ship, and spoke: "Go thou whither the fiends may have thee!" The ship drove out. But Garfrith walked towards the farm; he was welcomed well; by then was his father ended. Garfrith was then taken as king, and became an excellent man.

¹²⁰The wife was Frie, and the husband Weden; this is clarified by the following prose. The motif of Weden preferring the youngest brother is also found in Rígh.

¹²¹Surely instructing him to push his brother out to sea.

- P1b Óðinn ok Frigg sátu í Hliðskjölfu ok sá um heima alla. Óðinn mælti: „Sér [R 9r/10, A 4r/3]

Weden and Frie sat in Lithshelf^L and looked over all the Homes.¹²² Weden spoke: “Seest thou Ayner, thy foster son, as he begets children with a troll-woman in her cave?¹²³ But Garfrith, my foster son, is a king and now sits at land.” Frie says: “He is such a meat-nithing that he tortures his guests if he judges too many are coming.” Weden says that this is the greatest lie; they make a wager about this matter. Frie sent her handmaid Full to Garfrith’s hall. She bade the king be wary, lest he be destroyed by that many-cunning^C man who was come to the land, and said that his sign was that no hound was so fierce that he would leap at him. But it was the greatest vainglorious lie that Garfrith should not be good of meat^C, and yet he has that man bound, whom the hounds would not touch. He was in a blue cloak and called himself Grimner, and did not tell any more about himself, although he was asked. The king had him tortured, that he would speak, and set him between two fires, and he sat there for eight nights. King Garfrith had a son, ten winters old, and he was named Ayner after his brother. Ayner walked up to Grimner, and gave him a full horn to drink; he said that the king did badly, as he had him tortured without cause. Grimner drank from it. Then the fire was so grown, that the cloak burned on Grimner. He quoth:

¹²²Very similar to the Longbeard Origin Myth (TODO: reference and elaborate).

¹²³This may relate to Frie’s role as love-goddess. Ayner is in any case a degenerate^C man, what one would call a ‘coomer’.

3 vǫrðr goða ‘Watchman of the Gods’] Formulaic epithet of Homedall, also occurring in Lock 49 and possibly in Shir 28: vǫrðr með goðum ‘the Watchman among the Gods’. Yilv 27, where the present stanza is quoted, gives some details: Hann er vǫrðr goða ok sitr þar við himins enda at gęta brúarinnar fyrir berg-risum. Hann þarf minna svefn en fugl. Hann sér jafnt nótt sem dag bundrað rasta frá sér; hann heyrir ok þat, er gras vex á jörðu eða ull á sauðum, ok allt þat er hęra léttr. ‘He [= Homedall] is the Watchman of the Gods and sits there at Heaven’s end to guard the bridge against barrow-risers. He needs less sleep than a bird. He sees both night and day a hundred rests from himself; he also hears grass growing on the ground or wool on sheep, and every thing which is louder.’

 4 en halfan Óðinn á.

Folkwong is the ninth, and there Frow decides the choice of seats in the hall;
 half the slain she chooses each day,
 but half does Woden own.¹³⁰

¹³⁰This st. is cited and closely paraphrased in Yilv 24. — The roots of kjósa val ‘choose the slain’ are the same as those in walkirrie^C (val-kyrja ‘chooser of the slain’), and as Frow is a prominent goddess this would surely make her the chief walkirrie. This is paralleled by Sarle, where Frow assumes the name Gandle^C (Göndul, a name attested in several lists of walkirries; see Wsp 30 and Notes) and incites the legendary never-ending Conflict of the Headnings (Hjaðningavíg). In spite of this parallel, there are good reasons to believe that the chief walkirrie was Frie^C, Weden’s wife. First, one of the functions of the walkirries is to bear ale to the Oneharriers (Grmn 37). This mirrors royal Germanic banquets attested in heroic poetry, where the host’s wife or daughter would pour ale to his retainers and guests (the so-called ‘lady with a mead cup’ ritual; see Enright (1996) and Riseley (2014)). As Weden’s wife, we would expect Frie to have this role. Second, at Balder’s funeral as attested in Yilv (TODO. chapter number), Weden rides with Frie and the Walkirries, while Frow rides alone with her cats. If she were chief walkirrie, it is rather strange that she should not ride with them. Third, there are two separate myths where Frie and Weden contend over the fates of armies and men. These are the prose introduction to the present poem and the Longbeard origin myth (for which see Introduction to the present poem).

This compound also occurs in a kenning in the st. on the late C10th Karlevi stone (Öl 1) referring to the unbounded sea as Endils jǫrmungrund ‘Ardle’s ermin-ground’ (Ardle being a known “sea-king”), and in Beow 859 as eormen-grund carrying the same sense.

the river-stream seems far too great for the noisy slain host to wade.¹³⁴

1–2 Þjóðvitnis fiskr ‘Thedwitner’s fish’] Þjóðvitnir is easily analyzed as þjóð- ‘great, main’ + vitnir ‘wolf’. The great wolf is naturally the Fenrerswolf^P, and its “fish” should then be the Middenyardswyrm. That it could indeed be called a fish is proven by Hym 24, where the word does not even carry alliteration.

¹³⁴Thound may be the river surrounding Walhall, which the dead have to pass over to reach the hall. This stanza may also be referring to the punishment of men in waters; see note to Wsp TODO for discussion on that.

¹⁴⁷According to Yilv 11 the gods took two horses to pull the sun's chariot—Yorewaker and Allswith—and “under the shoulders of the horses the gods placed two wind-bellows to cool them, but in some sources (í sumum fręðum, presumably this st.) they are called iron-cooling (ísarn-kol).”

Swollen is [one] called, he stands before the sun,

¹⁴⁸The sun-disc was apparently thought to be a translucent shield, which protected the earth from the full power of the Sun behind it. Without it the whole world ("crag and surf", LAND and SEA; the totality of the earth) would burn up. In Sdr 14a/1 there is mention of the "shield that stands before the shining god [SUN]", which may or may not derive from the present stanza.

4 ór hausi himinn 'out of his skull the heaven'] This suggests that the heavens were understood as a dome, something common among many ancients. This also fits well with the floating clouds being Yimer's brains, as said in the following st.

42 En ór hans bróum · gøðou blíð rēgin

The holdness^C of Woulder^P and of All Gods^C has each who first touches the fire, for the Homes^C become open for the sons of the Eese,
 when men lift off the cauldrons.¹⁵¹

1 Ullar 'Woulder'] The exact reason for why Woulder is invoked here is unclear, but it suggests that he has a role in the setting of the ritual fire, something possibly attested by the archeological finds at Lilla Ullevi, Sweden. See Encyclopedia: Woulder^C and af Edholm (2009) for more.

1 hylli 'holdness'] i.e. 'favour, loyalty, grace'. This word and the corresponding adjective hollr 'hold; favourable, loyal, gracious' and verb hylla 'to make hold' are often used when speaking about divine grace, not just in Christian texts, but also (as here) w.r.t. to the Heathen gods. See Encyclopedia: holdness^C for other examples.

1 allra goða 'All Gods'] Cf. Sdr 2–3, Lock 11, which both hail the Gods as a collective (the former as part of a genuine prayer, the latter subversively). For the unity of the Gods, see Encyclopedia: All Gods^C.

¹⁵¹This st. is one of the most difficult in the poem, and many interpretations have been made (for a summary see Nordberg (2005)). Many commenters (e.g. Finnur Jónsson (1932) and Sijmons and Gering (p. 208, TODO)) interpret this st. as relating to the poem's frame narrative. In this view Weden, still bound between the two fires, cryptically asks for a cauldron to be lifted off so that the Gods can see him through the smoke vent and rescue him. This, however, scarcely makes sense given the current stanza's placement in the gnomic wisdom section of the poem, unless this whole section is taken to be a later insert (as suggested by Finnur), something for which there is no real support. The invocation of Woulder is also left unexplained, and there is no mention of a cauldron elsewhere in the poem. I agree with Nordberg's superior solution, namely that the present st. refers to the cooking and eating of a "sacred stew" cooked in large cauldrons during the blood^C, as described in the kings' saws. More specifically, Weden is speaking of the divine grace (hylli 'holdness', see Note to l. 1) gained by the ritualist who sets the fire on which the cauldron is placed, since this act enables the Gods to become present among those partaking in the ritual when the cauldron is lifted off and the communal meal can begin. This interpretation is especially interesting when one considers the preceding sts. 41 and 42, which deal with the ordering of the world through the dismembering of Yimer, the primordial sacrificial victim. It is well attested comparatively that the ritual sacrifice in the present was seen as a reenactment and continuation of the primordial ritual sacrifice by the Gods in the mythic past, which was necessary for the creation and ordering of the world.; see Lincoln (1986)—especially the first two chapters—for its Indo-European analogues. Grmn 41–43 would then seem to attest this view in the Germanic tradition.

¹⁵⁴Linguistically, Garfrith is not bereft of the support of the Oneharriers but rather of the Oneharriers themselves, but presumably the sense is the same. By breaking the code of conduct to which he owes his success he lost Weden's favour, and thus been excluded from the community of oath-bound Odinic warriors (the Oneharriers). Cf. here

The Leed of Hoarbeard (Hárbarðsljóð)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): early C11th (0.578)–late C11th (0.377)

Meter: Unclear (TODO)

In my opinion the poem can be seen as an allegory on class relations, namely between the self-owning Norwegian and later Icelandic farmers, and the warlike Norwegian earls.

Of all Eddic poems this one is probably the strangest in terms of form. Verse length varies greatly, and many of the lines (see especially the final verse) are of an obscene length reminiscent of late continental Germanic poems like the Heliand; some simply have no metrical qualities at all. The young clitic definite is (uniquely) employed frequently throughout the poem. These criteria would seem to point towards a late origin for the poem (though not later than the late C13th, when R was written).

Against this late origin speaks the presence of rare words (e.g. ggurr v. 13) and a thorough understanding of the personalities of the two gods which would seem unlikely to stem from several centuries after the conversion of Iceland. The model devised by Sapp gives the poem a 57.8% likelihood of being from the early C11th, and a 37.7% likelihood of being from the late 11th. These scores are most similar to those obtained by Grip, a poem that on the surface seems much more archaic.

What could we then be dealing with? It may of course be that the poem is heavily corrupt, but there is no good evidence for this (apart from the above-mentioned irregularities). Most lines are readily understandable and fit well both within their respective context and the poem as a whole. I think a better solution to this problem is to assume that the poem has been acted out as a sort of carnivalesque theatre, with two masked actors, each playing one of the gods. This would explain the variations in meter and line length, and the prose; some lines were simply shouted out, and the lack of alliteration in them would then have a powerful, discordant effect.

This is shown also by uses of the word ‘here’ in sts. 9 and 14. TODO: mention concept of “double scene” by Lars Lönnroth?

A basket have I on my back; the food does not get better.¹⁵⁶

I ate for a while before I journeyed from home, herring and oatmeal/he-goats; I am still full from that.”

4 hafra ‘oatmeal/he-goats’] The easiest reading here is the acc. pl. of hafr ‘he-goat’. Thunder also eats his goats in Yilv 44, where he butchers and cooks them in the evening and brings them back to life by blessing them with his hammer at dawn. Finnur Jónsson (1932) and Pettit (1986) prefer this reading; see also note to next stanza.—Many other scholars have here read an accusative plural of hafri ‘oat’, i.e. ‘porridge, oatmeal’. Stiles (forthcoming TODO) connects this with Indrá’s (who is the Vedic equivalent of Thunder) “partner and yokemate” (RV 6.56.2) Pūṣan’s eating porridge (e.g. 6.56.1, 57.2). Another similarity Stiles notes between Thunder and Pūṣan is that both have chariots driven by goats (e.g. 6.57.3: “Goats are the draft-animals for the one”, 58.2: “Having goats as his horses”). Whether the Vedic tradition has split an original god into two or whether Thunder has absorbed elements of another god is hard to say.

“Of early works boastest thou; of eating!¹⁵⁷ Thou knowest not clearly [what lies] before [thee]:

dismal is the state of thy home—I think that thy mother is dead!”

¹⁵⁷TODO. This is pretty difficult. From the previous stanza verðinum seems to be referring to eating.

- 5 „Þat seðgir þú nú · es hverjum þíkkir [R 12v/6]
 2 mest at vita— · at mín móðir dauð sé.“

“Thou now sayest that which to every man seems most important to know—that my mother is dead!”

- 6 „Þeygi ’s sem þú · þrjú bú eigir góð; [R 12v/8]
 2 þer-þeinn þú stendr · ok hefir brautinga gørvi, · þat-ki at þú hafir brékr þínar.“

“But it is hardly as if thou own three good homesteads; bare-legged thou standest, and hast the gear of a tramp; it is not even as if thou own thy breeches!”

- 7 „Stýr-ðu hingat ęikjunni, · ek mun þér stöðna ķenna [R 12v/9]
 2 eða hęerr á skipit · es þú heldr við landit?“

“Steer hither the boat! I will show thee to the harbour—or who owns the ship which thou holdest by the shore?”

- 8 „Hildólfr sá hęitir · es mik halda bað, [R 12v/11]
 2 rekr inn ráð-svinni · es býr í Ráðs-ęjar-sundi;

 4 góða ęina · ok þá’s ek gørva kunna;
 seğ-ðu til nafns þíns · ef þú vill of sundit fara.“

“Hildolf he is called, who asked me to hold it,
 the counsel-wise man who lives in Redesey-sound.
 He bade me not take highwaymen nor horse-thieves;
 good men only, and those whom I know well—say thy name if thou wilt go over the sound!”

- 9 „Sęja mun’k til nafns míns · þótt ek sekr sjá’k [R 12v/15]
 2 ok til alls øðlis: · Ek em Óðins sonr, Męila bróðir · ęn Magna faðir,
 4 þrúð-valdr goða · við Þór knátt-u hér dóma!
 Hins vil’k nú spyrja, · hvat þú hęitir?“

“I will say my name—although I should be charged—and all my origin: I am Weden’s son, Male’s brother and Main’s father,

the strength-wielder of the Gods; with Thunder dost thou here speak!
Now I will ask something else: What art thou called?"

10 „Hár-barðr ek hēiti, • hyl'k of nafn sjaldan.“

[R 12v/18]

“Hoarbeard I am called, seldom I conceal my name.”

11 „Hvat skalt-u of nafn hylja • nema þú sakar ęgir?“

[R 12v/18]

“Why shalt thou conceal thy name, unless thou have charges?”

12 „En þótt ek sakar ęiga, • fyr slíkum sem þú est
2 þá mun'k forða fjorvi mínu • nema ek feigr sé.“

[R 12v/19]

“But though I had charges—for such a one as thou art then I will protect my life, unless I be fey^C.”

13 „Harm ljótan mér þikkir í því
2 at vaða of váginn til þín • ok vęta ęgur minn;
skylda'k launa kęgur-sveini • þínum kängin-yrði • ef ek komumk yfir sundit.“

[R 12v/21]

“An ugly harm it seems to me to wade o'er the wave to thee, and wet my burden.
I would repay thee, swaddle-swain, for thy mocking words, if I could bring myself over the sound.”

2 ęgur ‘burden’] The sense of this word is not clear, though it is probably the same as the first element of the compound ęgur-stund ‘burdensome hour’, found in Wagl 42. Some authors have read it as a crude euphemism for ‘penis’, which would not be out of character for this poem. I however consider the best interpretation to be that of an author whose name I’ve forgotten (TODO!), namely that Thunder is referring to the food he carries on his back (cf. v. 3).

14 „Hér mun'k standa • ok þín heðan bíða;
2 fannt-a-tu mann inn harðara • at Hrungni dauðan.“

[R 12v/23]

“Here will I stand, and from here await thee; thou hast not found a harder man since Rungner^P died!¹⁵⁸”

¹⁵⁸Rungner was an ettin famously slain by Thunder, TODO. Hoarbeard’s mention of that battle sets off a long argument over the deeds of the two.

- 15 „Hins vilt-u nú geta · es vit Hrungnir deildum, [R 12v/25] 2 sá inn stór-úðgi jötunn, · es ór stęini vas höfuðit á, þó lét’k hann falla · ok fyrir hníga;
 4 hvat vannt-u þá meðan, Hárbarðr?“

“This wilt thou now mention, when I and Rungner dealt with each other, that great-minded ettin on whom the head was of stone.
 Yet I made him fall, and kneel down before [me]—
 what didst thou then meanwhile, Hoarbeard?”

- 16 „Vas’k með Fjöl-vari · fimm vetr alla [R 12v/27]
 2 í ey þęiri · es Al-grón heitir;
 vega vér þar knöttum · ok val fella,
 4 margs at fręista, · mans at kosta.“

“I was with Felwar for all of five winters in that island which Allgreen is called.
 There we did fight and fell corpses;
 many a girl to tempt and win.¹⁵⁹”

¹⁵⁹I read margs ‘many a’ as modifying mans ‘girl’, i.e. margs mans at fręista, at kosta ‘to tempt and to win many a girl’.

- 17 „Hversu snúnuðu yör konur yörar?“ [R 12v/30]
 “How did your women pleasure (TODO!!!) you?..¹⁶⁰”

¹⁶⁰Seemingly a prose line; see Introduction.

- 18 „Sparkar óttum vér konur · ef oss at spökum yrði; [R 12v/30] 2 horskar óttum vér konur · ef oss hollar véri, þęr ór sandi · síma undu
 4 ok ór dali djúpum
 grund of grófu;
 6 varð’k þeim ęinn ǫllum · øfri at rǫðum;
 hvílda’k hjá systurum sjau 8 ok hafða’k gęð þęira allt ok gaman;
 hvat vannt-u þá meðan, Þórr?“

“We [I] owned frisky women, if they became pleasing toward us [me];
 we [I] owned clever women, if they were hold^C toward us [me];
 they wound a rope out of the sand, and out of a deep dale dug up the ground.

 I alone became superior to them all in counsels,
 I rested next to those seven sisters, and had their senses all, and pleasure—
 what didst thou then meanwhile, Thunder?”

19 „Ek drap Þjatsa, • hinn Þrúð-móðga jötun,
 2 upp ek varp augum • All-valda sonar á þann hinn hęiða himin;
 4 þau ’ru męrki męst • minna verka, þau’s allir męnn síðan of sęa;
 6 hvat vannt-u þá meðan, Hárbarðr?“

[R 13r/2, A 1r/1 (l. 4b ff.)]

“I slew Thedse^C, the strength-minded ettin;
 Up I threw the eyes of Allwald’s son [= Thedse] onto the clear heaven!
 Those are the greatest marks of my works,
 those which all men since may see¹⁶¹—
 what didst thou then meanwhile, Hoarbeard?”

 TODO.

20 „Miklar man-vélar • hafða’k við myrk-riður
 2 þá’s ek vélta þęr frá verum.
 Harðan jötun • hugða’k Hlébarð vesa;
 4 gaf hann mér gamban-tęin en ek vélta hann ór viti.“

[R 13r/5, A 1r/1]

“Great girl-tricks did I have against mirk-riders^C, when I lured them away from men.¹⁶²
 A hard ettin I judged Leebeard to be;
 he gave me a gombentoe^C,
 but I tricked him out of his wits.”

¹⁶²Alternatiely ‘away from [their] husbands’. The riður ‘(female) riders’ were witches thought to torment people and cause disease and suffering. See High 156 for discussion.

21 „Illum huga launaðir þú þá góðar gjafar.“

[R 13r/7, A 1r/3]

“With an evil mind didst thou repay the good gift.”

- 22 „Þat hefir çik · es af annarri skęfr;
 2 umb sik es hvęrr í slíku—

[R 13r/8, A 1r/4]

“An oak has that which it chafes from another; each man is for himself in such—
 what didst thou then meanwhile, Thunder?”

- 23 „Ek vas austr · ok jętna barða’k

 mikil myndi ętt jętna · ef allir lifði, 4 vętr myndi manna · undir Mið-garði—
 hvat vannt-u þá meðan, Hárbarðr?”

[R 13r/9, A 1r/4]

“I was in the East, and bashed ettins:
 bale-wise brides who walked to the mountain.
 Great would the lineage of ettins be if all lived, naught would remain of men within Middenyard¹⁶³—
 what didst thou then meanwhile, Hoarbeard?”

¹⁶³A remarkable clear statement, the underlying worldview of which is far from unique to this stanza; in Hym 11, for instance, Thunder is described as “the opponent of Rooder”, “the friend of manly retinues” and “Wighward”, referring to His role in slaying ettins and guarding men and their shrines (wighs^C). For Thunder’s killing of women cf. sts. 37–39 below and Lindow 1988.

- 24 „Vas’k á Vallandi · ok vígum fylgða’k,
 2 atta ek jęfrum · en aldri-gi sętta’k;
Óðinn á jarla · þá’s í val falla
 4 en Þórr á þręla kyn.“

[R 13r/11, A 1r/6]

“I was in Walland^L and followed battles;
 I incited princes and never reconciled them.
 Weden owns the earls which fall among the slain,
 but Thunder owns the kin of thralls.¹⁶⁴”

¹⁶⁴We see here a sort of aristocratic, Odinic disregard for lower life and life as a good in itself; where Thunder boasts of saving men, Weden sarcastically responds that he caused the deaths of men so that he could have them for himself.

- 25 „Ó·jafnt skipta · es þú myndir með ósum liði

“Thunder owns ample strength, but no heart; out of fear and mind-softness didst thou tread into a glove, and then seemedest thou not to be Thunder. Thou daredest neither—for thy fear—to sneeze nor to fart so that Feller might hear [it].¹⁶⁵”

¹⁶⁵This story is also referenced in Lock TODO. It is elaborated heavily on in Yilv 45: Thunder, Lock, and the siblings Thelve and Wrash had travelled east for a long time when they discovered a large hall, with an opening on one end, as wide as the building. They took rest inside, but in the middle of the night there was a great earthquake and the ground beneath them trembled. Thunder rose and led the party to a side-room to the right in the middle of the hall. He sat closest to the opening with his hammer ready, while the others sat terrified further inside. At daybreak they left the hall and found a huge ettin named Skrymir (Shrimer^P) sleeping next to them. His snoring had caused the earth-quakes, and the hall was his mitten; the side-room was the thumb-part.

- 27 „Hár-barðr hinn ragi, · munda'k þik í Hęl drepa [R 13r/17, A 1r/11]
 2 ef mętta'k sęilask of sund.“

“I was in the east and guarded the river
 when I was attacked by Sweering's sons.
 With rocks they bashed me—still they rejoiced little in victory, still they had to beg me first for peace—
 what didst thou then meanwhile, Hoarbeard?”

- 30 „Ek vas austr · ok við ein-hverja dómða’k, [R 13r/22, A 1r/15]

“I was in the east, and spoke with a certain woman;
 I played with the linen-white, and held long-lasting trysts:¹⁶⁶
 I gladdened the gold-bright—the maiden enjoyed pleasure.”

¹⁶⁶þing (see Thing^C) usually means ‘legal assembly’, but clearly not here.

- 31 „Góð óttu þeir man-kynni þar þá.“ [R 13r/24, A 1r/17]

 “I am not such a heel-biter as an old hide-shoe in spring.¹⁶⁷”

¹⁶⁷Proverbial (a heel-biter being someone who betrays his companions); the leather of a shoe would become very stiff and chafing over the winter.

48 „Sif á hó hēima, · hans munt fund vilja, [R 13v/9, A 1v/4]
 2 þann munt þræk drýgja, · þat ’s þér skyldara.“
 “Sib has a lover at home; him wilt thou wish to meet!
 Against that one shalt thou use thy strength—that is for thee more urgent!”

1 hó ‘lover’] Most translators take this acc. sg. word as an alternative form of bórr m. ‘adulterer’ (gen. bórs), containing the same root as bóra f. ‘whore, prostitute’, bór n. ‘adultery, fornication’, ModEngl. whore. The -r has presumably been interpreted as the masc. nom. sg. ending, giving nom. bór*, gen. bós*. Further, this accusation is also found in Lock TODO, where Lock says that he has been Sib’s lover (bórr). Notably, CV interprets this word as the unrelated bór m. ‘pot-hook’, “insinuating that Thor busied himself with cooking and dairy-work.” This seems very unlikely when considering Thunder’s response in the next verse: “I think that thou liest!” and the parallel in Lock.

49 „Mélir þú at munns ráði · svát mér skyldi vęrst þikkja, [R 13v/10, A 1v/5]

[Frow quoth:] “I would yet give it to thee though it were golden,

¹⁷⁰*selja*, cognate of English sell here has its older sense of ‘hand over’, cf. Gotish saljan Streitberg (1910, p. 116): ‘opfern; θύειν’.

¹⁷¹Regaining the hammer is of such importance to the gods (cf. st. 17; without it the Eese stand powerless against the Ettins^G), that Frow would lend the feather-hame to the greedy and untrusty Lock, even if it were made out of gold or silver.

Flew then Lock¹⁷²—the feather-hame rustled—

¹⁷²Though Thunder is the one asking for the hame (“if I my hammer might find”), Lock is the one that takes off flying.

Thrim sat on the mound,¹⁷³ the lord of Thurses^G:
on his greyhounds the golden leashes he twirled,
and on his mares the manes he cut even.¹⁷⁴

1 þursa dróttinn ‘lord of Thurses’] This formulaic expression also occurs in several Runic charms against such thursen lords; an example of the close connection between narrative and ritual poetic language.

¹⁷³Apparently a typical seat for ettins. See Wsp 42 for other attestations.

¹⁷⁴The image suggested here reminds one of the ancient “master of animals” motif, especially as attested on panel A of the Gundestrup cauldron.

[Thunder quoth:] “Hast thou an errand of trouble?¹⁷⁵
 Say thou aloft, the long tidings!
 Often the sitter’s tales fail each other and the liar blows up his lie.”¹⁷⁶

¹⁷⁵Thunder asks Lock if he has bad news. The collocation ęrendi ‘errand’ ... ęrfiði ‘trouble, hardship’ is formulaic and occurs in X other (TODO!!) places, including in st. 5 of HHarw.

¹⁷⁶Proverbial. If one sits or lies (liggjandi means to ‘lie down’; it is rather unfortunate that the two sound the same in English) down and thinks too much over bad news, details will be left out, excuses thought up. Thus it is best that Lock immediately tell Thunder what he has learned.

Go they the fair Frow to find,
 and he¹⁷⁷ this word first of all did say:
 “Bind thyself, Frow, with bride’s linen!¹⁷⁸
 We two shall drive into the Ettin-homes.”

¹⁷⁷Unclear. Possibly Lock, since he was the speaker of the last verse.

Wroth became then Frow, and snorted;
 the whole hall of the Eese trembled below;
 down crashed the great necklace of the Brisings—“Thou knowest that I will become the most man-eager,¹⁷⁹
 if I drive with thee into the Ettin-homes.”

¹⁷⁹Either Frow is speaking out of self-awareness of her own lustful inclinations, or the sense is that she will be accused of being lustful by the other gods, but there is no verb here corresponding to ‘accuse’. For Frow’s promiscuity see Lock 30 and Note.

 and on the breast broad stones, and skillfully let us tip his head!¹⁸¹”

¹⁸¹This verse contains an interesting description of Viking age bridal dress: As the everyday manager of the household, keys were the mark of a respectable married woman. The “broad stones” on the breast are probably tortoise brooches, while the tipping of the head refers to some sort of bridal hat (TODO: Literature). Breast-brooches are also mentioned in Wzyl 25, 36.

¹⁸²The form used, tvau, is the neuter plural, i.e. one of the pair is female and the other male. This is either an error due to mindless copying of v. 11, or a backhanded insult against Thunder.

Soon he-goats^{C183} were driven home, hastened onto the cart-poles; they were to run well.
 Crag burst, burned the earth with flame;
 drove Weden’s son [= Thunder] into the Ettin-homes.¹⁸⁴

¹⁸³Thunder’s cart was driven by he-goats, for which he is called (for instance) “the lord of he-goats” in Hym 20, 31. See Encyclopedia.

¹⁸⁴Thunder’s driving of his chariot is often connected with cosmic disturbance. So, his arrival in Lock (st. 55) is signalled by the mountains quaking. The most similar description to the present stanza is found in Thedwolf’s Hvl 14–16, where crags (there likewise bjǫrg) burst asunder and fires rage before him. A possibly Indo-European parallel to this is the Vedic myth of Indra breaking the mountains and releasing the mountains (as described most famously in RV hymn 1.32). See also Bdr 3 for a related description of the god Weden’s riding.

Here march to the estate golden-horned cows,
 all-black oxen, for the ettin's [= my] pleasure.
 A multitude I own of treasures, a multitude I own of necklaces;

2 oxn al-svartir 'all-black oxen'] Formulaic, also occurring in Hym 18. That all-black (i.e. spotlessly black) oxen were most valued is seen by the pairing with "golden-horned". One may also compare Saxo (I.8.12), where the hero Hadding has to atone for his slaying of a heavenly being by the blooting of dark-coloured victims (furvae hostiae): Siquidem propiciandorum numinum gratia Frø deo rem diuinam furuis hostiis fecit. Quem litationis morem annuo feriarum circuitu repetitum posteris imitandum reliquit. Frøblod Sueones uocant. 'In order to mollify the divinities he [= Hadding] did indeed make a holy sacrifice of dark-coloured victims to the god Frø. He repeated this mode of propitiation at an annual festival and left it to be imitated by his descendants. The Swedes call it Frøblot.' This ancient ritual taboo is further paralleled e.g. by the Tanakh, where animals dedicated to Yhwh were to be without blemish (עֲדָנִי; Leviticus 1:3)

¹⁸⁵Cf. Hym 15, where Thunder eats two of Hymer's oxen. It is rather interesting that the same kenning is used in both stanzas when both concern the god's great eating; perhaps one poet was playing on the other's expression, or they were both referencing another, now-lost work.

In came the wretched sister of the ettins,
the one who for the bride-fee [= Millner] had dared ask:
“Slide off from thy hands the red rings,
if thou wilt win my love,
my love, [and] all [my] holdness^C.”¹⁸⁷

5 ástir mínar, alla hylli ‘my love, [and] all [my] holdness’] Probably formulaic. There are no preserved parallels in poetry, but there seems to be one in Ylfr 49 (excerpt):

En er goðin vitkuðust, þá mælti Frigg ok spurði, hverr sá véri með ásum, er eignast vildi „allar ástir mínar“ (so TW; ástir hennar ‘her loves’ SU) ok hylly, ok vili hann ríða á bel-veg ok freista, ef hann fái fundit Baldr, ok bjóða Helju út-laun, ef hon vill láta fara Baldr heim í Ás-garð.“
 ‘But when the gods came to their wits [after Balder’s death], then Frigg spoke and asked which one among the Eese would own “all my loves and holdness, and will ride onto the Hellway and see if he can find Balder, and offer Hell a ransom if she will let Balder come home to Osyard.”’

We can tell from the citation of a Leed-meter stanza at the end of ch. 49 that Snorre knew one or more now-lost Eddic poems about Balder’s death (cf. Yilv 37, where Sbir is retold in prose, and then the final st. is cited), and it seems that one of these contained the same two long-lines as the present stanza. For such a sharing of lines cf. e.g. st. 14 above, the first three long-lines of which are identically shared with Bdr 1.

¹⁸⁷The sister, who was apparently the one who asked for the Hammer, now has the audacity to ask Thunder (disguised as Frow) to give her the very rings on his hands.

and a strike of the hammer for a multitude of rings.
So got Woden's son [= Thunder] back his hammer.

The Lay of Hymer (Hymiskviða)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C10th (0.694)–early C11th (0.268)

Meter: Firnwordslaw

Attested in two manuscripts, R and A. The two are surprisingly consistent; all stanzas are shared, and come in the same order. The title Hymis-kviða ‘the Lay of Hymer’ comes from A. R instead has the title Þórr dró Mið-garðs-orm ‘Thunder pulled the Middenyardsworm’ in typical red ink.

The poem is a comedy about Thunder’s adventures among the Ettins. This was likely a popular genre, and is also represented by Thrim. In spite of these similarities of contents the two poems are far apart stylistically. Whereas Thrim is written in a simple and sparse style with free Firnwordslaw meter and few kennings, the form of Firnwordslaw used in Hym is unusually strict, almost syllable-counting, and the stanzas are filled with rare kennings and difficult grammatical constructions, often in forced word order. In this way Hym is more akin to Scoldic poetry in intricate measures like Drígtquethed than to typical Eddic poetry in Firnwordslaw. Because of this it seems likely that the anonymous poet was highly trained in the Scoldic arts, and familiar with composition in more advanced meters. (See TODO: Difference between Scoldic and Eddic).

Apart from meter and style, the Scoldic composition context of Hym is also supported by both its dating and subject. Thunder’s fishing expedition was a very popular myth in the Viking age, and there are five extant Scoldic poetic fragments (TODO: list them) that deal with it. The story is also retold in Yilv, and attested pictorally on the Swedish Altuna runestone and others (TODO).

The Scoldic fragments are very incomplete, and (in their presently reduced form) mostly focus on the subject of Thunder facing off against the hooked Wyrms pressed to the gunwale. In some of the fragments the encounter ends with the cowardly Hymer cutting off the fishing line and the Wyrms sinking back into the sea (the version preferred by Snorre)—in others Thunder strikes the head off the Wyrms. There are some interesting verbal correspondences between these fragments and Hym—most strikingly the kenning for the Middenyardsworm in st. 22/4 below—that may also support a common composition context.

Thunder goes out into Middenyard in the shape of a young man (ungr drengr), without his chariot, his goats, or his typical travelling gear. In the evening he comes to the ettin Hymer and begs for lodgings. At dawn Hymer plans to go fishing, and so Thunder asks to join in. Hymer insults Thunder’s small stature and youth, and questions his ability to go on such a long and arduous trip as he usually takes. Thunder, angered, says that he will row very far, and then asks Hymer what bait they will use. Hymer tells him to get his own bait, and so he turns to Hymer's flock of oxen and tears off the head from his greatest ox, one named Heavenrid. The two go out to sea, and Thunder rows far past Hymer's usual fishing spot. Hymer, unhappy, warns him that if they row any further out they'll be in danger of the Middenyardswyrm, but Thunder goes on. Eventually Thunder puts away the oars, readies a fishing line, hooks the ox-head and lowers it. The Wyrms soon bites, and struggles so hard that Thunder is pressed against the gunwale. This angers the god, and he brings himself into his Os-might. Strengthened, he pulls back with such force that his feet go through the bottom of the ship and press into the sea-floor; the Wyrms head goes up against the gunwale. The two archenemies furiously stare at each other, Thunder "sharpening his eyes" and the Wyrms spitting venom. Hymer is frightened, reaches for his bait-cutting knife, and cuts off the line—the Wyrms then sinks back into the sea. Thunder throws the hammer after it, "and men say that he struck off the monster's head, but I think it true to tell thee, that the Middenyardswyrm still lives and lies in the outer sea." Thunder then punches Hymer's ear with his fist so that he is thrown overboard head-first; the god then wades back to land.

This account is clearly based on several sources, possibly including the present poem. The most notable correspondence is when it is said that Miðgarðs-ormr gein yfir uxabofuðit, en ǫngullinn vá í góminn orminum 'The Middenyardswyrm yawned over the ox-head, and the hook went into the roof of the wyrm's mouth', which is decently close to st. 22 below. The name Heavenrid (Himinbrjóðr) is otherwise only found in thules listing names of oxen, and the interesting detail of Thunder's feet going through the boat is only paralleled by the Swedish Altuna stone (though see note to st. 34/2 below).

While Yilv 48, the Scoldic fragments, and Hym all share the central narrative of the fishing expedition, Hym has several additional narratives woven into it. (I mean not to say that Hym consists of multiple originally separate poems—unlike, say, High, which has noticable differences of style and language between its constituent strands, Hym comes off as a strong stylistic and narrative whole, composed by a single poet and thereafter transmitted faithfully.)

One may roughly identify the following narrative divisions in Hym, of which only numbers 2–4 are found in the other sources for the myth of Thunder's fishing:

1. 1–6 Thunder attempts to force the ettin Eagre to host a banquet for the Gods; Eagre in turn asks for a cauldron big enough to brew enough ale for them all.
2. 7–16 Thunder and Tew go to visit the stingy ettin Hymer, who owns such a cauldron; horrified at Thunder's great appetite during the evening, Hymer tells them that they must eat fish the next.
3. 17–19 Thunder says that he will go fishing if he is given bait; Hymer challenges him with killing one of his oxen for bait, after which Thunder tears off the head of one.
4. 20–25 Hymer, Thunder and Tew go fishing; Hymer pulls up some whales; with the ox-head as bait Thunder manages to hook the Middenyardswyrm itself; he loses it.
5. 26–27 Hymer challenges Thunder to carry the boat and whales back to his farm; he does.

6. 28–32 Hymer challenges Thunder to break a supposedly indestructible chalice; he succeeds by smashing it against the ettin's forehead.
7. 33–36 Thunder and Tew depart with the cauldron; they find themselves followed by a troop led by Hymer; Thunder kills them all.
8. 37–38 Lock makes the leg of one of Thunder's goats halt.
9. 39 Thunder returns to the Gods with Hymer's cauldron; they host a banquet.

The fishing expedition, found at the very center of the poem, is thus framed by the unique narrative of Thunder and Tew obtaining a huge cauldron from Hymer for the sake of brewing ale, and several other superfluous narratives scattered throughout. The poet has not been entirely successful in his endeavour, and there are several loose strands; most notably Tew, who has nothing to do with the fishing expedition, probably because he was not originally in it, and who has no reaction at all to the murder of his father. The function of Lock making one of Thunder's goats halt is also unclear, and he does not appear anywhere else in the poem.

The poem has some interesting reoccurring themes. The “otherness” of the Ettins, specifically Hymer, is constantly emphasized in several ways:

- they live far to the East (st. 5) in an inhospitable, frozen climate (st. 10), associated with mountains (sts. 2, 17) and lava-fields (st. 36)
- they are physically deviant, being misshapen (st. 10), grey-haired (st. 16), many-headed (sts. 8, 35), and very hard-boned (sts. 30–31); they are even likened to apes (st. 20), whales (st. 36) and Danes (st. 17; see note!),
- they are stingy and inhospitable (sts. 9, 16),
- and sarcastic and cowardly (st. 19–20, 25–26, 28–32).

In these ways the Ettins oppose the Old Germanic social norms as represented by the Gods, who live in a lush green climate and are young, beautiful and generous. The one exception is of course Tew's mother in st. 8, who is light-haired (in contrast to the swarthy grandmother, presumably) and generous. Perhaps the poet is implying that it is from her that Tew has inherited his good traits?

The last point, viz. sarcasm and cowardice, is seen throughout the poem in the way Thunder comically humiliates the Ettins, especially by completing challenges issued to him. These follow a similar format: Thunder is given a near-impossible test of strength, which he shortly completes through a mix of physical strength and cleverness, humiliating the challenger. These tests are finding a huge kettle (st. 3, explicitly called Eagre's “revenge” (hefnad), taking one of Hymer's oxen for bait (st. 17–18), carrying home Hymer's whales and boat (st. 26), breaking Hymer's finest chalice (st. 28), and perhaps also taking away the kettle (st. 33)—though that may just be Hymer's wishing to finally be rid of the pestering gods.

Much like in Thrim the conflict is finally resolved with righteous hammer-slaughter. After the Gods leave, Hymer tries to get his revenge by ambushing them, but Thunder takes his trusty hammer and kills them all. The poem is clearly humorous and meant to be performed before an audience (see st. 38 where the poet directly addresses the listeners). The original performance context may perhaps be gleaned from the difficult final stanza. TODO: It hints at a performance at a harvest blott.

Of yore the slain-Tews [GODS] had caught game,

 they found at Eagre's a great choice of cauldrons.¹⁸⁸

2 áðr saðir yrði, 'before they might eat'] Lit. 'might become sated'

¹⁸⁸The gods sprinkled the leat (blaut 'sacrificial blood') of the beasts and interpreted the pattern; they found it most auspicious to feast at Eagre's. TODO: reference to leat-twigs.

¹⁹¹According to Webb 31 the Ilewaves were the poisonous wild rushes out of which the ettins emerged, and so it only makes sense that they would be found in the east, where the ettins dwell. Hymer's dwelling even further east than them illustrates his fierce nature.

3–4 munum ... lifa ‘the next ... live’] The poet is pushing at the limits of Old Norse syntax with this word order. In prose word order it should be construed as: at ǫðrum aptni munum vér þrír verða lifa við vǫði-mat, where verða ‘have to, must’ is used like its modern German cognate werden.

Hymer's stinginess—he refuses to share more of his own food but instead forces his guests to go hunt—breaks all Indo-European rules of hospitality and illustrates the otherness of the Ettins. See Introduction to the poem.

4 berg-Dana ‘boulder-Danes [ETTINS]’] Kennings of this type emphasize the otherness of the Ettins (see Introduction to the poem above) by equating them with ethnic foreigners, and are well known from Anlif Gothrunson's Drape for Thunder (Þórsdrápa), where Ettins are called Scots, Swedes, Danes, Ruges and Hareds; all ethnic enemies of the Norwegian Earl Hathkin, at whose court that poem may have been composed.

 The swain [= Thunder] swiftly turned to the wood, where an ox stood, all-black, before [him].

1 vǫntir mik] so A; vǫnti ek R 1 myni-t ‘will not’] so A; myni ‘will’ R. The A reading is preferable since it makes this the first of Hymer's several challenges of strength to Thunder, which the god, to the ettin's humiliation, easily accomplishes.

3 Sveinn ‘The swain’] Thunder was apparently in the shape of a youth. This detail is also found in Yilv 48, where Snorre writes: Gekk hann út of Miðgarð svá sem ungr drengir ... ‘He went out about Middenyard in the shape of a young warrior’.

4 oxir ... alsvartir ‘all-black ... oxen’] Formulaic, also occurring in Thrim 23; see note there for further parallels to the custom of sacrificing animals of certain colours. It seems that all-black oxen were thought the noblest, and so Thunder’s slaying one instead of an inferior beast is probably intended to humiliate the stingy Hymer. In Yilv 48 we read that: Hann tók inn mesta uxann, er Himin-brjóðir hét, ok sleit af höfuðit ok fór með til sjávar. ‘He took the greatest ox, which was called Heavenrid, and tore off its head and went with it to the sea’.

[R 14r/28, A 6r/24]

Off the bull broke the counsel-slayer of the thurse [= Thunder]
the high meadow of the two horns [HEAD] from above.—

“Worse by far thy works do seem to the wielder of ships [= Hymer = me] than if thou mightst sit calm.”¹⁹⁶

¹⁹⁶I had originally taken this as Hymer snidely belittling Thunder’s feat of pulling the head off the ox (presumably by the horns); he would have earned greater glory had he simply sat and done nothing. However, it may also be read as a factual statement; Thunder just killed one of his finest oxen, and Hymer would certainly have preferred that he had not.

The scene now shifts, and the party is out at sea. It is possible that a stanza has here been lost, or that it would be indicated in some other way in the original performance.

1 Hraun-gǫlkn 'The lavafield-monsters' Both mss. have brēin-, which may mean either 'clean' or 'reindeer', neither of which fit. On the other hand braun ONP: 'stone/barren area, wasteland; lavafield' is well attested in scoldic kennings for ettins. The precise meaning of galkn 'monster' (plural gǫlkn) is unclear; but it is attested in three scoldic verses, always in kennings of the type "troll-woman of the shield [AXE]". While the mss. spelling 'galkn' (norm. gálkn) could reflect either singular and plural, the form of the verb is plural. This means that the word cannot be referring to the Middenyardswyrm, refuting the interpretation of Larrington (2014): "the sea-wolf shrieked".

3 [...] It is very likely that a line is missing here, since the stanzas in the poem otherwise consistently have four lines. In other tellings of the myth it is at this point that Hymer cuts Thunder's fishing line, so that is probably what has been lost.

It is of course impossible to know what exact form it had, but for the reader's enjoyment, based on other poets and the account in Yilv (see introduction to the present poem) I've composed the following variant lines: unds vinr Hrungrnis · vað Þórs of skar 'until the friend of Rungner [= Hymer] Thunder's fishing-line did cut'; unds fǫlr Hymir · fekk á saxi 'until pale Hymer grasped the knife'.

3 ár 'in the early morning' Finnur Jónsson (1932) suggests svá't at ór 'so that by the oar', but this burdens the meter. Assuming my interpretation is correct, the three would have been out fishing throughout the night.

[R 14v/22, A 6v/15]

It would be best if ye might bring the ale-ship [CAULDRON] out of our hall.”
Tew attempted, twice, to move it—each time stood the cauldron still before [him].

2 ql-kjól ‘ale-ship [CAULDRON]’] ql-kjól is the accusative form, but in this context (CV: koma, B) we would expect the dative ql-kjóli. The meter does not allow for this, however.

2 hofi ‘hall’] This is the only Old Norse occurrence of the word hof in the sense ‘hall, house’; it otherwise only means ‘temple’ (hove^C). The West Germanic cognates consistently mean ‘hall’, and that is probably the original sense, so it is unclear if this is an instance of foreign influence (if so, most likely Anglo-Saxon) or just a poetic archaism.

[R 14v/24, A 6v/16]

The father of Moody [= Thunder] grasped the brim, and stepped down through the floor in the hall;¹⁹⁹
Sib’s husband [= Thunder] heaved the cauldron up onto his head, and at his heels the rings clattered.

4 hringar skullu ‘the rings clattered’] i.e. the chain-links. This detail is mentioned in an example sentence contrasting long and short phonemes in FGT (1950): heyrði til þǫddu, þá er þórr bar huerinn ‘the sound of the pot-links (hadda) was heard when Thunder bore the cauldron’. According to Finnur Jónsson (1932) the chain (or hadda) on a Wiking-age cauldron would have reached across, in which case this would be a reference to the cauldron’s enormous size, with its diameter—mentioned in st. 5 as one rest^C—being roughly the same as Thunder’s height.

¹⁹⁹In the account of Ylvi Thunder is said to have stepped through the boat when trying to pull up the Mid-denyardswyrm. This detail is also seen on the carving of the Altuna stone from Uppland, Sweden; it may have been transposed to this place in the narrative. TODO.

They journeyed not for long before Weden's son [= Thunder] took to look back a single time—he saw out of stone-heaps, with Hymer from the east, a war-troop coming, many-headed.

4 folk-drótt ... fĵl-hęfðaða 'war-troop ... many-headed'] A deviant number of body parts, especially heads, is typical of ettins. See Introduction and note to st. 8 above.

 and that the guile-wise Lock did cause.

3 skęr] emend. from meaningless řskirrř RA

1–4 Fóru-t ... olli. 'They journeyed ... did cause.'] Lock, who is not mentioned earlier in the poem, was apparently placing curses on the returning party. Snorre mentions this, TODO.

But ye have heard—about that can any god-speaking man more clearly discern—which recompense he [= Thunder] from the lavafield-dweller [ETTIN] got,

as he yielded up both his own children for it.

1 ér 'ye'] The audience. As pointed out by Finnur Jónsson (1932) an address to the audience of this type is otherwise unparalleled in Eddic mythological poetry. Such are however fairly common in Scaldic poetry, with which this poem shares several traits (see Introduction above).

2 goð-móluþra 'god-speaking'] This word is a hapax, but easily understood. One who is goð-móluþra is 'able to speak about the god-lore', i.e. 'versed in the mythology'.

[R 15r/1, A 6v/24]

The valour-mighty one [= Thunder] came onto the Thing^C of the gods, and had that cauldron which Hymer [had] owned;
but well the Wighers^G (= gods) shall drink one ale-feast at Eagre's, every flax-cutting [FALL?].

4 ǣtt hǫr-męitið 'one ... flax-cutting'] A very obscure kenning. La Farge and Tucker (1992) give several interpretations, viz. ǣitr-hǫr-męitir 'poison-rope-cutter [SNAKE > WINTER]', ǣitr-orm-męiðir 'poison-worm-injurer' [WINTER]. The solution with the minimal amount of emendation is to read ǣitt 'one' as modifying ǫlðr 'ale-feast', and hverjan 'every' as modifying hǫr-męitið 'flax-cutting', a compound made up of hǫrr 'flax, cord' and męita 'to cut', seemingly referring to an obscure harvest festival. This interpretation is by no means certain.

The Flying of Lock (Lokasenna)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C10th (0.965)

Meter: Leed-meter

Preserved in R, directly following Hym, though the poems without doubt were originally separate; the stylistic differences are drastical.

The poem has been interpreted as blasphemous (TODO: elaborate), but shows no linguistic signs of being particularly late.

a Eagre^P, who by another name is called Gymer^P, had prepared an ale-feast for the Eese when he had got the great kettle as is now told.²⁰⁰ To that gathering came Weden^P and Frie^P, his woman. Thunder^P came not, for he was on the Eastern Way^L. Sib was there, Thunder's woman; Bray^P and Idun^P, his woman. Tew^P was there, he was one-handed. The Fenrerswolf^P tore his hand off when it was bound.²⁰¹ There was Nearth^P, and his woman Shede^P; Free^P and Frow^L; Wider^P, the son of Weden^P. Lock^P was there, and the servants of Free: Bew^P and Beal^P. There was a great many of the Eese^G and Elves^{G202}.

b Eagre had two servants: Femfinger^P and Elder^P. There glowing gold was used instead of fire; the ale there poured itself. That place was a great grith-stead^C.²⁰³ Men greatly praised how good the servants of Eagre were. Lock could not stand to hear that, and he slew Femfinger. Then the Eese shook their shields and screamed at Lock,²⁰⁴ and chased him away to the forest—but they went to drink. Lock turned back around and met Elder outside. Lock greeted him:

²⁰⁰See the immediately preceding Hym.

²⁰¹This detail is probably brought up to chronologically date the events of the poem as happening after the binding of Fenrer in the mythology.

²⁰²A formulaic expression, see Eese and Elves^F.

“Say thou it, O Elder, so that thou not take one step further:
what here within for their ale-speeches have the sons of the victory-Tews [GODS]?²⁰⁵”

1–2 svá't ... framarr ‘so that ... further’] Cf. High 38: řeti ganga framarr ‘take one step further’.

²⁰⁵i.e. ‘what do they speak about over the ale?’

Eldir:
2 „Of vópn sín dóma · ok of víg-řisni sína
2 řig-tíva řynir;
ása ok alfa, · es hér inni eru,
4 mann-gi 's þér í orði vinr.“

Elder quoth: “Of their weapons they speak, and of their fight-valiance, the sons of the victory-Tews [GODS];
of the Eese and Elves which are here within none is thee a friend in words.”

4 mann-gi ... vinr ‘none ... words.’] i.e. “none of them say anything good about you.” — The (lack of) alliteration here is very notable, and also occurs in st. 10 (between Viðarr and ulfr, see note there). It could simply be explained by the line being corrupt, but as there are no signs of that we ought to look for other explanations. I see two, namely that (a) the semi-vowel v (/w/) is participating in vowel-alliteration with o. Such an alliteration between v and true vowels is never encountered in Scoldic poetry, but it might have been existed in the simpler Eddic styles; or that (2) the poem (or at least the relevant lines) is of such old age that it was composed before the North Germanic loss of v before rounded vowels. This is supported by the fact that in both the present st. and st. 10 the words beginning with vowels (orð ‘word’, ulfr ‘wolf’) have cognates in other Germanic languages that begin with w, and in the case of the word ulfr this consonant is also attested in several old Scandinavian runic inscriptions. For metrical reasons the lines must postdate syncope, but on the basis of three clearly related C7th runestones from Blekinge (from Stentofen, Gummarp, and Istaby; DR 357–359) the loss of w before rounded vowels is shown also to have occurred after some syncope (so DR 359 haþuwulafir Haþuwulʰfir). Of course, even if the alliteration indeed is on v, this does not require dating the whole poem to the late Proto-Norse period (indeed, according to the analysis done by Sapp (2022), it is not even the linguistically oldest poem preserved); the older forms could simply be an archaism. A C7th Proto-Norse form of the c-line might be: mannagi ʰ þér in wordé winir*.

Lock quoth: “In shall I go into Eagre’s halls, scorn and hatred I bring to the sons of the Eese, and I mix for them so the mead with harm.”

3 jöll ok ófu ‘scorn and hatred’] ioll oc áfo R. These two interesting words have been interpreted in a variety of ways: CV sees the first word as jöll ‘wild angelica’, whereas the second is taken to be an error for áfr ‘a beverage [...] translated by Magnaeus by sorbitio avenacea, a sort of common ale brewed of oats’. [Weden quoth:] “Rise thou, Wider, and let the Wolf’s father [= Lock] in Eage’s hall.”

1 Rís ... fǫður ‘Rise ... father’] For the (lack of) alliteration see note to st. 2. A C7th Proto-Norse form of the c-line might be: Rís þú Wíðarr · auk lát wulfs fǫður*.

P3 Þá stóð Víðarr upp ok skenkti Loka, en áðr hann drykki, kvaddi hann

Then Wider stood up and poured to Lock, but before he [= Lock] drunk, he greeted the Eese:

 2 ok qll ginn-heilög goð, nema sá einn óss · es innar sitr

“Hail the Eese^G! Hail the Ossens^G, and all yin-holy^C Gods!²⁰⁸
 Save for that one os^G who sits further within:
 Bray, on the benches.”

²⁰⁸The first two half-lines prayer formula are identical to Sdr 2–3; it may be of authentic Heathen origin, used in cup-offerings, with the second half of the stanza being used to ask for a boon. Lock subverts it by instead insulting one of the gods present, something that may have been highly offensive to the original audience.

[Bragi] kvað:

12 „Mar ok méki · gef’k þér míns féar

[Bray] quoth: “Steed and sword I give thee of my own wealth, and so restores thee Bray with a high^C, lest thou shouldst yield envy to the Eese—anger not the Gods against thee!”

1 Mar ok méki ‘Steed and sword’] Formulaic, also occurring in Shir TODO.

[Lock] quoth: “Of both steed and arm-highs wilt thou ever
 O Bray, be lacking!
 Of the Eese and Elves which are here within,
 thou art with war wariest and shiest with shot.”

[Bragi] kvað:

14 „Veit’k, ef fyr útan véra’k, · svá sem fyr innan em’k,

2 Égis holl of kominn,

 4 lít’k þér þat fyr lygi.“

[Bray] quoth: “I know if outside I were, as inside I am come into Eagre’s hall:²⁰⁹ thy head I would bear in my hands;
 this I see for thy lie.”

4 lít’k þér þat fyr lygi] ‘litt ec þer þat fyr lygi’ R. A variety of emendations have been proposed for this line. Simplest would be litt es þér þat fyr lygi ‘that is little [punishment] for thee for lying’. Based on the similarity of ē (= tt) and c Finnur Jónsson (1932) gives lykak þér þat fyr lygi ‘so I would bring to thee for thy lie’.

²⁰⁹As explicitly said in P1, the rule of grith^C (a truce of non-violence, even between enemies; see Encyclopedia) applied inside the hall. Being bound to it, Bray (or the other gods) cannot injure Lock.

[Loki] kvað:

15 „Snjallr est í sessi, · skal-at-tu svá gæra,

[Lock] quoth: “Valiant art thou in the seat; [but] thou shalt not do thus,
 O Bray the bench-ornamenter!
 Go thou to fight if thou art wroth;
 the bold thinks not in advance.²¹⁰”

²¹⁰Lock attacks Bray’s invoking of the rule of grith; a truly brave man would not care about such a thing.

[Iðunn] kvað:

16 „Bið ek, Bragi, · barna sífjar duga

[Iðunn] kvað:

[Lock] quoth: “Shut up thou, Giben! Him will I now mention, who seduced thy senses:
 the white swain who gave thee a necklace, and thou cast o’er [him] thy leg!”

[Óðinn kvað] þat:

- 21 „Örr est, Loki, · ok ør-viti
 2 es þú fēr þér Gefjun at grēmi

[Weden quoth] this:

“Mad art thou, Lock, and out of wits,
 as thou earnest Giben’s anger against thee,
 for all orlays of people I ween that she should know, just as clearly as I.”

1 Örr ... ok ør-viti ‘Mad ... and out of wits’] Formulaic, occurs at two other places (TODO), and is probably alluded to in st. TODO of the present poem.

[Loki] kvað:

- 22 „Þęgi þú, Óðinn, · þú kunnir aldri-gi
 2 dęila víg með verum;
 opt þú gaft · þęim’s gefa skyldir-a,
 4 inum slévrurum, sigr.“

[Lock] quoth: “Shut up thou, Weden! Thou couldst never oft thou gavest to them thou shouldst not have given,

 to the slower men victory.”

[Óðinn] kvað:

- 23 „Vęitst ef ek gaf · þęim’s gefa né skylda,

 átta vetr · vast fyr jǫrð neðan
 4 kýr mólkandi ok kona

 6 ok hugða’k þat args aðal.“

[Weden] quoth: “Know that if I gave to them I should not have given,
 to the slower men victory:
 for eight winters wast thou beneath the earth [as] a milch cow and a woman, and thou hast there borne children,
 and I’ve judged that a degenerate’s nature.”

⁴ kýr mólkandi ‘a milch cow’] May also be read as “milking cows”, the nom. sg. kýr being identical to the nom./acc. pl. kýr, and mólka meaning both ‘to milk’ and ‘to give milk’. “Milch cow” is preferable for two reasons, viz. (i) that the phrase is followed by ok kona ‘and a woman’ rather than sem kona ‘as a woman’ or similar, and (ii) that it agrees with another instance where Lock is gives birth in the form of a female animal (cows, of course, only giving milk after calving), namely the episode of the building of the wall around Osyrd as told in Yilv 42.

[Loki] kvað:

24 „En þik síga kóðu · Sámseyju í

[Lock] quoth: “But thou, they said, didst sink down into Samsy,

 In the likeness of a sorcerer thou journeyedst among the nations of men,

[Fręyja kvað:]

- 29 „Örr est, Loki, · es þú yðra tęlr 2 ljóta lęið-stafi;
ör-lög Frigg · hyggt at ęll viti
 4 þótt hún sįlf-gi sęgi.“

[Frow quoth:] “Mad art thou, Lock, as thou dost count your ugly loathsome deeds:
 all orlays I ween that Frie might know, though she say them not herself.”

[Loki kvað:]

- 30 „Þęgi þú, Fręyja, · þik kann’k full-gørva;
 2 es-a þér vamma vant:
ása ok alfa, · es hér inni eru,
 4 hvęrr hęfir þinn hór vesit.“

[Lock quoth:] “Shut up thou, Frow! I know thee full well—thou art not free of blemishes:
 of the Eese and Elves which are here within each one has been thy lover!”

2 vamma vant 'free of blemishes'] Formulaic, cf. Higb 22: hann es-a vamma vanr 'he is not free of blemishes'.

[Fręyja kvað:]

- 31 „Flǫ 's þér tunga, · hygg at þér fręmr myni 2 ó·gótt of gala;
vręiðir 'ru þér ęsir · ok ǫsynjur,
4 hryggr munt hęim fara.“

[Frow quoth:] “False is thy tongue, I ween that it henceforth will sing evil [into being] for thee.
Wroth against thee are the Eese and Ossens:
grieved wilt thou journey home.”

1–2 Flǫ ... gala; 'False ... thee'] The language is again strikingly similar to Higb, particularly 29/3–4: “A quick-spoken tongue—unless it be held in place—oft sings evil [into being] for itself (opt sér ó·gótt of gęlr).” and 116/3–4: “a false-counseling tongue (flá-rǫð tunga) brought his life to its end, and in no way over a truthful charge.”

4 hryggr munt hęim fara 'grieved wilt thou journey home'] Frow here predicts the future; Lock will come to regret his insults.

Loki:

- 32 „Þęgi þú, Fręyja, · þú est for-dęða 2 ok męini blandin mjøk, síðst-u at bróðr þínun · siðu blíð ręgin
4 ok myndir þá, Fręyja, frata.“

Lock [quoth]: “Shut up thou, Frow! Thou art an evil-working woman, and much mixed with harm,
since against thy brother the blithe Reins enchanted thee, and thou wouldst then, O Frow, fart.”

Njǫrðr:

- 33 „Þat 's vá-lítit · þótt sér varðir vers fái, 2 hós eða hvárs;
hitt's undr, es áss ragr · es hér inn of kominn
4 ok hęfir sá bǫrn of borit.“

Nearth [quoth]: “It is little woe that women should get themselves a man, a lover or whomever else;
this is a wonder, that a degenerate os is come here within,
and he has born children!”

Loki:

34 „Þegi þú, Njörðr, • þú vast austr heðan
2 gísl of sęndr at goðum;
Hymis meyjar • hofðu þik at hland-trogi
4 ok þér í munn migu.“

Lock [quoth]: “Shut up thou, Nearth! Thou wast east hence sent [as] a hostage for the Gods.
Hymer’s maidens had thee for a urinal,
and pissed thee in the mouth!”

Njörðr:

35 „Sú esumk líkn • es vas’k langt heðan
2 gísl of sęndr at goðum:
þá ek mōg gat • þann’s mann-gi fíar,
4 ok þikkir sá ása jaðarr.“

Nearth [quoth]: “That is my relief, as I was far-away hence sent [as] a hostage for the Gods: [that] I then begot that lad whom no man hates [= Free], and he seems the peak of the Eese.”

Loki:

36 „Hétt-u nú, Njörðr, • haf á hófi þik;
2 mun’k-a því leyna lengr:
við systur þinni • gatst slíkan mōg,
4 ok es-a þó ónu verr.“

Lock [quoth]: “Stop thou now, Nearth, restrain thyself;
I will no longer hide it:
by thy sister begotst thou such a lad, and there can be expected nothing worse.”

Týr:

37 „Fręyr ’s bętstr • allra ball-riða
2 ása gęrðum í;
mey né grótir • né manns konu,
4 ok leysir ór hęptum hvęrn.“

Tew [quoth]: “Free is the best of all bold riders
in the yards of the Eese;
he makes no maiden cry, nor [any] man’s woman, and loosens each from his bonds!”

Loki:

38 „Þegi þú, Týr, · þú kunnir aldri-gi
2 bera tilt með tvëim;
handar ennar hógri · mun’k hinnar geta
4 es þér sleit Fēnrir frá.“

Lock [quoth]: “Shut up thou, Tew! Thou couldst never settle strife among two; the right hand I will next mention, which from thee Fenrer tore.”

2 bera tilt með tvëim ‘settle strife among two’] Uncertain. See TODO.

Týr:

39 „Handar em’k vanr · en þú Hróðrs-vitnis;
2 bōl es þeggja þráa;
ulf-gi hēfir ok vel · es í bōndum skal
4 bíða ragna røkrs.“

Tew [quoth]: “A hand am I lacking, but thou Rothwitner; both yearnings are a bale! Nor does the Wolf have it well, who in bonds shall await the Twilight of the Reins.”

Loki:

40 „Þegi þú, Týr, · þat varð þinni konu
2 at hon átti mōg við mér!
Qln né þenning · hafðir þess aldri-gi
4 van-réttis, vę-sall.“

Lock [quoth]: “Shut up thou, Tew! This happened to thy woman, that she had a lad by me! A mackerel nor a penny hadst thou never for that injustice, O wretch!”

3 Qln ‘mackerel’] Very uncertain. See TODO.

Fręyr:

41 „Ulf sé’k liggja · áar-ósi fyr
2 unds rjúfask ręgin;
því munt nęst, · nema nú þęgir,
4 bundinn, bōlva smiðr!“

Free [quoth]: “The Wolf I see lying before the river-mouth, until the Reins are ripped;
therefore wilt thou next—unless thou now shut up—
be bound, O smith of bales!”

Loki:

42 „Gulli keypta · létst Gymis dóttur
2 ok seldir þitt svá sverð, en es Múspells synir · ríða Myrk-við yfir
4 vætist-a þá, vę-sall, hvé vęgr!“

Lock [quoth]: “Bought with gold hadst thou Gymer’s daughter [= Gird], and didst so sell thy sword— but when Muspell’s sons ride over Mirkwood knowest thou, not, O wretch, how to fight!”

Byggvir:

43 „Vætist ef øðli ętta’k · sem Ingunar-Freyr, 2 ok svá sęl-ligt setr:
męrgi smęra · mølða’k þá męin-króku
4 ok lęmða alla í liðu.“

Bewe [quoth]: “Know, if I owned a pedigree like Ingwin-Free, and such blessed pasture— smaller than marrow would I mill this harm-crow [= Lock],
and beat all its limbs lame!”

Loki:

44 „Hvat ’s þat it litla · es þat lęggra sé’k
2 ok snap-víst snapir?
At ęrum Freys · munt ęt vesa
4 ok und kvęrnum klaka.“

Lock [quoth]: “What is this little thing which I see crawling, and snap-wisely snapping?
At Free’s ears wilt thou always be,
and chirping under mills.”

[Byggvir kvað:]

45 „Byggvir ek hęiti, · en mik bráðan kveða
2 goð ęll ok gumar;

því em'k hér hróðugr · at drekka Hropts megir
 4 allir ǫl saman.“

[Bewe quoth:] “Bewe I am called, but hurried do call me
 all Gods, and men;
 therefore am I here glorious, as Roft's lads [EASE] drink ale all together.”

[Loki kvað:]

46 „Þegi þú, Byggvir, · þú kunnir aldri-gi
 2 deila með mǫnnum mat;
 ok þik í flęts strá · finna né mǫttu
 4 þá's vǫgu verar.“

[Lock quoth:] “Shut up thou, Bewe! Thou couldst never divide food among men,
 and in the bench-straw could they not find thee,
 when warriors fought.”

[Hēimdallr kvað:]

47 „Ǫlr est, Loki · svá't es ǫr-viti, 2 hví né lętsk-a þú, Loki?
 því-at of-drykkja · vęldr alda hveim
 4 es sína męłgi né man-at.“

[Homedall quoth:] “Drunk art thou, Lock, so that thou art out of wits;
 why dost thou not hold back, O Lock?
 For over-drinking causes for every man that he no longer recalls his speech.”

[Loki kvað:]

48 „Þegi þú, Hēimdallr, · þér vas í ár-daga 2 it lјóta líf of lagit;
 ǫrgu baki · munt ę vesa
 4 ok vaka vǫrðr goða.“

[Lock quoth:] “Shut up thou, Homedall! For thee was in days of yore thy ugly life laid [in place]; with a stiff back wilt thou ever be and waking, O Watchman of the Gods.”

2 líf of lagit ‘life laid [in place]’] Formulaic. See TODO.

⁴ vǫrðr goða ‘Watchman of the Gods’] Formulaic epithet of Homedall, who had to guard the rainbow bridge of the Gods against Their enemies. See note to Grmn 13.

[X kvað:]

49 „Létt ’s þér, Loki; • mun-at-tu lengi svá
 2 leika lausum hala, því at þik á hjörvi skulu • ins hrím-kalda magar
 4 gǫrnum binda goð.“

“Tis light for thee, Lock—thou wilt not so for long play with loose tail:
 for on a sword shall, with the rime-cold lad’s guts, the Gods bind thee.”

[Loki kvað:]

50 „Veitst ef mik á hjörvi skulu • ins hrím-kalda magar
 2 gǫrnum binda goð,
 fyrstr ok øfstr • vas’k at fjör-lagi
 4 þar’s vér á Þjatsa þrifum.“

[Lock quoth:] “Know, if on a sword shall, with the rime-cold lad’s guts, the Gods bind me:
 first and highest was I in life-taking,
 where we laid hands on Thedse.”

[X kvað:]

51 „Veitst ef fyrstr ok øfstr • vast at fjör-lagi
 2 þá’s ér á Þjatsa þrifuð, frá mínum véum • ok vǫngum skulu
 4 þér ẽ kǫld rjóð koma.“

“Know, if first and highest thou wast in life-taking, when ye laid hands on Thedse:
 from my wighs and wongs shall for thee always cold counsels come.”

[Loki kvað:]

52 „Léttari í mólum • vast við Laufeyjar son
 2 þá’s létsk mér á bæð þinn boðit;
 getit verðr oss slíks • ef vér gǫrva skulum

4 tēlja vōmmin vōr.“

[Lock quoth:] “Lighter of speech wast thou with Leafie’s son [= Lock = me] when thou hadst me invited to thy bed;
such is told of us, if we shall clearly tell our blemishes.

P4 Þá gekk Sif fram ok byrlaði Loka í hrím-kálki mjöð ok mēlti:

Then Sib walked forth and poured for Lock mead into a rime-chalice, and spoke:

53 „Hęill ves þú nú, Loki, · ok tak við hrím-kálki
2 fullum forns mjaðar, hęldr þú hana ęina · látir með ása sonum
4 vamma-lausa vesa.“

“Hale be thou now, O Lock, and receive the rime-chalice, full of ancient mead,
that thou rather let her [me] alone, among the sons of the Eese, remain blemish-less.²¹¹”

²¹¹Sib attempts to bribe Lock with drink, so that she alone will remain unaccused among the gods.

P5 Hann tók við horni ok drakk af:

He received the horn and drank from it:

54 „Ęin þú vęrir · ef þú svá vęrir,
2 vōr ok grōm at veri;
 ęinn ek vęit, · svá’t ek vita þikkjumk, 4 hór ok af Hlórriða, ok vas þat sá inn lę-vísi Loki.“

“Alone were thou, if thou so were wary and wroth against man.
I know one—which I think myself to know—adulterer behind even Loride’s back, and that was the guile-wise Lock!”

5 lę-vísi Loki ‘guile-wise Lock’] Formulaic, also occurring in Hym 37. Cf. also Wsp 35 where Lock is called lę-gjarn ‘guile-eager’ and note to Wsp 17 where Lothar (possibly to be identified with Lock) gives men lę, which may be an accusative form of lę.

[Beyla kvað:]

55 „Fjöll öll skjalfa, • hygg á fǫr vesa
2 hēiman Hlórriða;
hann rēðr ró • þeim's rógir hér
4 goð öll ok guma!“

[Beal quoth:] “The fells all quake—I think on the journey from home Lorde to be;
he brings calm to the one who here maligns
all Gods and men!”

1–2 Fjöll ... Hlórriða ‘The fells ... to be’] Thunder’s movement is often signalled by such disturbance in poetry.
See note to Thrim 21.

[Loki kvað:]

56 „Þegi þú, Beyla, • þú est Byggvis kvén
2 ok mēini blandin mjök;
ó-kynjan mēira • kom-a með ása sonum;
4 öll est, dēigja, dritin.“

[Lock quoth:] “Shut up thou, Beal! Thou art Bewe’s wife,
and much mixed with harm;
a greater disgrace came not among the sons of the Eese;
thou art all, O kneadess, shitty!”

P6 Þá kom Þórr at ok kvað:

Then Thunder arrived and quoth:

57 „Þegi þú, rög vǣttr, • þér skal minn þrúð-hamarr,
2 Mjöllnir, mál fyr-nema!
Hērða klett • drep’k þér halsi af,
4 ok verðr þá þínu fǫrvi of farit.“

“Shut up thou, degenerate wight! Thee shall my thrith-hammer Millner, deprive of speech!
The shoulder-rock [HEAD] I strike off thy neck, and then is thy life destroyed!”

[Loki kvað:]

58 „Jarðar burr • es hér nú inn kominn;

- 2 hví þrasir þú svá, Þórr?
En þá þorir ekki · es skalt við ulfinn vega
4 ok svelgr hann allan Sig-föður.“

[Lock quoth:] “The son of Earth is now here come inside, why thrashest thou so, O Thunder?
But then darest thou not, as thou shalt fight against the wolf, and he swallows Syefather (= Weden) whole.”

[Þórr kvað:]

- 59 „Þegi þú, röð vetttr, · þér skal minn þrúð-hamarr,
2 Mjöllnir, mál fyr-nema!
Upp ek þér verp · ok á austr-vega
4 síðan þik mann-gi sér.“

[Thunder quoth:] “Shut up thou, degenerate wight! Thee shall my thrith-hammer Millner, deprive of speech!
Up I throw thee, and onto the eastern ways thereafter no man sees thee!”

[Loki kvað:]

- 60 „Austr-förum þínum · skalt aldri-gi
2 segja seggjum frá
síðst í hanska þumlungi · hnúkðir þú, ein-hęri,
4 ok þóttisk-a þá Þórr vesa!“

[Lock quoth:] “Of thy eastern journeys shalt thou never speak to youths,
since in the thumb of a glove thou didst crawl, O Oneharrier, and didst not seem to be Thunder then!”

4 ok þóttisk-a þá Þórr vesa ‘didst not seem to be Thunder then’] Cf. Hbl TODO.

[Þórr kvað:]

- 61 „Þegi þú, röð vetttr, · þér skal minn þrúð-hamarr,
2 Mjöllnir, mál fyr-nema!
hęndi inni hógri · drep’k þik Hrungrnis bana,
4 svát þér brotnar beina hvat.“

[Thunder quoth:] “Shut up thou, degenerate wight! Thee shall my thrith-hammer Millner, deprive of speech!
With the right hand I strike thee with Rungner’s bane, so that every bone in thee breaks.”

[Loki kvað:]

- 62 „Lifa étla’k mér · langan aldr
 2 þótt hótir hamri mér;
 skarpar álar · þóttu þér Skrymis vesa 4 ok máttir-a þá neṣti náa ok svaltsk þá hungri heill.“

[Lock quoth:] “For myself I intend to live a long life, even though thou threatenest me with the hammer;

[Þórr kvað:]

- 63 „Þegi þú, roḡ véttr, · þér skal minn þrúð-hamarr,
 2 Mjöllnir, mál fyr-nema!
 Hrunnis bani · mun þér í heil koma
 4 fyr Ná-grindr neðan.“

[Thunder quoth:] “Shut up thou, degenerate wight! Thee shall my thrith-hammer Millner, deprive of speech!
 Rungner’s bane will take thee to hell,
 down beneath Neegrind!”

[Loki kvað:]

- 64 „Kvað’k fyr ósum, · kvað’k fyr ása sonum, 2 þat’s mik hvatti hugr,
 en fyr þér einum · mun’k út ganga
 4 því-at ek veit at þú vegr.

[Lock quoth:] “I spoke before the Eese, I spoke before the sons of the Eese whatever my mind did goad me.
 but for thee alone will I go out,
 for I know that thou strikest.

- 65 Ql gørðir þú, Égir, · en þú aldri munt 2 síðan sumbl of gøra;
 eiga þín ɔll, · es hér inni es, 4 leiki yfir logi
 ok brenni þér á baki.“

Ale madest thou, Eagre, but thou wilt never since make a simble;

all thy ownings which are here within,
 over [them] may flame play,
 and burn thee on the back!"

From Lock (Frá Loka)

The myth told here is known from two other places. Closest at hand is Wsp

Yilv 50 has a longer but somewhat different account: the Eese captured Lock's two sons, Wonnell and "Nare or Narve". They turned Wonnell into a wolf (vargr, which also means 'outlaw') and had him tear his brother Narve apart. Narve's intestines were then taken and used to bind Lock on top of three pointed stones, with one digging into his shoulder-blades, the other digging into his loins, and the third digging into his houghs. The intestines then turned into iron.

Since the author of Yilv knew Wsp, it is possible that he combined a text similar to From Lock with this st., interpreting Vála víg-bönd as 'Wonnell's war-bonds' and vargr as 'wolf' rather than the more probable 'outlaw'. Wonnell is otherwise only known as the son of Weden, and there is no reason as to why he could not have bound Lock. For further differences between Yilv and From Lock see introduction to From Lock below.

- P7 En eptir þetta falst Loki í Fránangrs-forsi í lax líki. Þar tóku ésir hann.
 2 Hann var bundinn með þormum sonar Nara; en Narfi, sonr hans, varð at vargi. Skaði tók eittr-orm ok festi upp yfir and-lit Loka; draup þar ór 4 eittr. Sigyn, kona Loka, sat þar ok helt munn-laug undir eitrit. En er munn-laugin var full bar hon út eitrit, en meðan draup eitrit á Loka. Þá 6 kipptist hann svá hart við, at þaðan af skalf jörð ǫll; þat eru nú kallaðir land-skjálftar.

But after this Lock hid himself in the Freenangersforce in the form of a salmon. There the Eese took him. He was bound with the intestines of his son Nare, but his son Narve became an outlaw. Shede took a venomous serpent and fastened it over Lock's face; out of it dripped venom. Syein, Lock's wife, sat there and held a basin [for hand-washing] under the venom. But when the basin was full she bore out the venom, and meanwhile the venom dripped on Lock. Then he revolted so hard that thence all the earth quaked; that is now called earth-quakes.

The Speeches of Shirner (Skírnismól)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C10th (0.897)
Meter: Leed-meter, Galderlaw (TODO)

The whole poem is attested in both R and A. The name Skírnismól ‘Speeches of Shirner’ comes from A; R has in the typical titular red ink För Skírnis ‘Shirner’s journey’.

The same myth is told in prose in Yilv 37. A single stanza of the present poem is quoted there, namely the last one, with some minor differences in wording that would seem to stem from oral tradition (see Note to st. 42 below). It is unlikely that the author of Yilv knew of the narrative through an oral tradition which included only the last verse, chiefly since his paraphrase does not add a single detail not found in the present poem, but on the other hand condenses and abbreviates. So, Shirner’s journey and curse (roughly sts. 10–38 here) is simply summarized in the following manner: “Then Shirner journeyed and requested the woman [i.e. Gird] for him [i.e. Free], and received her promise, that nine nights later she would come to the place which is called Barrey, and have a wedding with Free.” The summarising of a narrative mythic poem with a single verse quotation in the form of a dialogue-stanza is something done several times in Yilv; see Eddic fragments from Snorre’s Edda below.

On the other hand, the paragraph in Yilv 37 corresponding to what is here P1 is much more detailed and reads: “Gymer was a man called, and his woman Earbode; she was of the lineage of mountain-risers. Their daughter is Gird, who is fairest of all women. It was one day when Free had gone to Lithshelf and looked about all the Homes, but when he looked to the north he saw on a farm a great and fine house, and to that house walked a woman, and when she lifted her hands and closed the doors before her, then it did shine from her hands both into the air and onto the waters, and all the homes were brightened by her. And that beauty, which he had seen in that holy seat, harmed him so that he walked away filled with pain, and when he came home he spoke nothing; he neither slept nor drank; nobody dared to get words out of him. Then Nearth had Shirner, Free’s shoe-swain, called unto himself, and asked him to go to Free and ask him to speak, [...]”

- P1 Freyr, sonr Njarðar, hafði einn dag setsk í Hlið-skjálfr ok sá um heima alla; [R 11r/10, A 2r/11]
 2 hann sá í Jötun-heima ok sá þar mey fagra, þá er hon gekk frá skála fýður síns til skemmu; þar af fekk hann hug-sóttir miklar. Skírnir hét skó-sveinn 4 Freys. Njorðr bað hann kveðja Frey máls. Þá mælti Skaði:

Free^P, son of Nearth^P, had one day set himself in Lithshelf^L and looked about all the Homes^C. He looked into the Ettinhomes^L and saw there a fair maiden as she walked from her father's hall to her bower; thereof he got great heart-aches. Shirner^P was called the shoe-swain of Free. Nearth asked him to speak with Free. Then Shede^P spoke:

- 1 „Rís-tu nú Skírnir · ok gakk at beiða [R 11r/14, A 2r/15] 2 okkarn mála mōg,
 ok þess at fregna · hvēim hinn fróði sei
 4 of-reiði afi.“

“Rise thou now, Shirner, and go to ask our lad [= Free] for speech;
 and to learn at whom the wise
 man [= Free] might be cross.”

1 rís ... beiða ‘Rise ... ask’] Alliteration is missing here. A simple solution would be to replace gakk ‘go’ with a synonym like rinn ‘run’ or ráð ‘resolve’, but this lessens the semantic mirroring with l. 2/2 below (though, the insertion of the verb ganga in the present stanza may in fact be due to influence from 2/2).

4 afi ‘man’] While this word usually means ‘father’ or ‘grandfather’, it must here certainly mean ‘man’ without a connotation of old age. See further CV.

Skírnir kvað:

- 2 „Illra orða · es mér ón at ykkrum syni, [R 11r/15, A 2r/17] 2 ef ek geng at mēla við mōg,
 ok þess at fregna, · hvēim hinn fróði sei
 4 of-reiði afi.“

Shirner quoth: “Bad words I expect from your son [= Free], if I go with the lad to speak;
 and to learn at whom the wise
 man might be cross.”

Skírnir:

- 3 „Sæg þat Freyr, · folk-valdi goða, [R 11r/17, A 2r/18] 2 ok ek vilja vita,

hví þú ęinn sitr · ęnd-langa sali,
 4 minn dróttinn, of daga?“

Shirner [quoth]: “Tell it, O Free, troop-wielder of the gods;
 I too would wish to know:
 why thou sittest alone in the endlong halls,
 my lord, during the days?”

Freyr:

4 „Hví of sęgja’k þér, · sęggr hinn ungi,
 2 mikinn m’óð-trega?
 því-at alf-røðull · lýsir of alla daga
 4 ok þęygi at mínum munum.“

[R 11r/19, A 2r/20]

Free [quoth]: “Why should I tell thee, O young youth,
 [of my] great mood-grief?
 For the elf-wheel [SUN] shines during all days,
 and naught to my liking.”

Skirnir:

5 „Muni þína · hykk-a svá mikla vesa,
 2 at þú mér sęggr né sęgir;
ungir saman · vörum í ár-daga,
 4 vęl męttim tveir trúask.“

[R 11r/20, A 2r/21]

Shirner [quoth]: “Thy liking I do not think so great, that thou, O youth, should not tell me [of it].
 Young together were we in days of yore;
 we two might well trust each other.”

2 sęggr ‘youth’] This word usually means simply ‘man’, but it seems to have a specific connotation with youth. Its original meaning is ‘messenger’, and the semantic shift is thus: ‘messenger’ > ‘young man’ > ‘warrior/man’. The sense of ‘young man’ is also seen in Wayl 23, where it is used in reference to king Nithad’s two young sons. In the present stanza it answers Free’s addressing Shirner as sęggr hinn ungi ‘the young youth’; Shirner points out that the two are of equal age, and so Free is as much of a young man as he.

Freyr:

6 „Í Gymis gøðum · ek ganga sá
 2 mér tíða męy;
armar lýstu, · en af þaðan
 4 allt lopt ok lęgr.

[R 11r/22, A 2r/23]

Free [quoth]: “In Gymer’s yards I saw walking a maiden, dear to me.

The arms shone, but thereof
all the air and sea.

Free [quoth]: "That steed I give thee which bears thee over the dark, wise wavering-flame;
and that sword which by itself will strike,
if he is sharp who owns it."

1–4 berr 'bears'; mun vegask, ef sá 's horskr es hefr 'will strike, if he is wise who owns it'] In his response Free replaces the subjunctive verb forms (beri 'might bear', vegisk 'might strike') with indicative and future forms, giving a sense of certainty and authority. The steed and sword are faultless, and if Shirner fails on the mission, it would be only due to his own fault ("if he is sharp who owns it.").

P2 Skírnir mælti við hestinn:

Shirner spoke with the horse:

10 „Myrkt es úti, • mál kveð’k okkr fara
 2 úrig fjöll yfir
 þursa þjóð yfir;

3 þursa ‘of the Thurses’] so A; þyria R

5 ám-átki jötunn ‘unnatural ettin’] Formulaic. See note to Wsp 8.

²¹³Shirner declares his intention not to abandon the horse given to him by his lord; they will either both make it, or both perish.

P3 Skírnir reið i Jötun-heima til Gymis garða; þar váru hundar ólmir ok bundfê-hirðir sat á haugi, ok kvaddi hann:

[R 11r/31, A 2v/1]

Shirner rode into the Ettinhomes, to Gymer’s yards. There were fierce hounds bound in front of the slope of the wooden fence which surrounded Gird’s²¹⁴ hall. He rode to where a shepherd sat on a mound, and greeted him:

11 „Seg þat hirðir, • es á haugi sitr
 2 ok varðar alla vega:
 hvé ek at and-spilli • komumk hins unga mans
 4 fyr greyjum Gymis.“

[R 11v/2, A 2v/4]

“Say it, O herdsman, who sittest on the mound, and watchest all the ways:
 How I to discourse might come with the young girl [= Gird], past Gymer’s greyhounds?”

²¹⁴It is first now that we are informed of the maiden’s name.

[Hirðir] kvað:

- 12 „Hvart est fęigr, • eða est framm ginginn 2 [...];
 and-spillis vanr • þú skalt ę vesa
 4 góðrar meýjar Gymis.“

[R 11v/4, A 2v/5]

[The herdsman] quoth:

“Either art thou fey, or gone forth [DEAD];

[...].

Lacking discourse shalt thou ever be,

with Gymer’s good maiden [= Gird].”

4 góðrar meýjar ‘good maiden’] Formulaic, carrying with it a sense of chastity. See note to Higb TODO for further occurrences.

[Skírnir] kvað:

[R 11v/6, A 2v/7]

[Shirner] quoth:

“Choices are better than sobbing

for whomever is eager to journey.

On a single day was my age shaped,

and all my life laid [in place].²¹⁵”

1 an ‘than’] so A; hęldr an at ‘rather than to [be]’ R

1 Kostir ‘Choices’] i.e. ‘alternatives, other ways’.

²¹⁵The Germanic fatalistic worldview, wherein one’s course of life was predetermined at birth, is here clearly seen. Presumably after uttering these words Shirner rides through the fire surrounding the fortress. — The causative leggja ‘to lay (down, in place)’ is closely connected to fate; the expression is formulaic. Cf. Lock 48: í árdaga vas þér bit ljóta líf of lagit ‘in days of yore was thy ugly life laid [in place]’ and Wsp 19: þér log logðu ‘they [= the Norns] laid laws [in place]’.

The earth quakes, but before [me] tremble

[R 11v/9, A 2v/10]

A servant-woman quoth:

“A man is here outside, stepped down off horseback;
he lets take his steed to the ground.²¹⁶”

²¹⁶According to Finnur Jónsson (1932) a still known (in his time) Icelandic expression; Shirner lets his horse graze.

[Gęðr] kvað:

16 „Inn bið þú hann ganga • í okkarn sal

Elven apples have I here, all-golden;
 those I will to thee, O Gird, give to purchase [thy] love, that thou callest Free for thee
 most unloathsome [MOST LOVELY] in life.²¹⁷

[Gɛrðr kvað:]

[Shirner quoth:]

“The bigh^C I then give thee, that one which was burned with Weden's young son [= Balder].

Eight are even-heavy, which from it drip,
every ninth night.²¹⁹”

3–4 átta ... nótt 'Eight ... night.' In A these lines and 22:1–2 are missing. Instead 1–2 here and 22:3–4 are combined into one.

²¹⁹The bigh, while not named, is clearly Dreepner as known from Yilv 49, describing Balder's funeral: “Weden laid on the pyre that gold ring which is called Dreepner. Its nature was such that every ninth night, eight even-heavy golden rings dripped from it.” When Harmod^P later comes to Hell^L to try to bring Balder back, Balder tells him to bring the ring back to Weden, as a token of memory.

I have no want of gold in Gymer's yards,
in sharing the fee^C of my father.”

Thurse^G I carve for thee, and three staves:
degeneracy^C and madness and restlessness.—
So I carve it off as I carved it on,
if need arise for that.²²⁴”

1 Þurs ‘thurse’] Thurse is the name of the þ-rune (þ); it is carved as part of the curse.

1 þrí stafi ‘three staves’] Three runic letters (or phrases) representing the three following words (ergi ‘degeneracy’ etc.). The ritual practice of carving “three staves” is first found on the C7th Gummarp stone: hapuwolafrsate staba þria fff ‘Hathwolf placed three staves: fff’, where the f-rune (f) stands for its name fee^C (i.e. ‘wealth, cattle’) and is thus meant to bring wealth.

2 ergi ok óði ok ó·þola ‘degeneracy and madness and restlessness’] Both ergi ‘degeneracy’ and ó·þoli ‘restlessness’ (here probably with a sexual connotation), are found in the love magic charm on the rune stick B257 from Bryggen (edited below under Galders). ergi is also found in the curse-formula on the C7th Proto-Norse runestones from Stentofte and Björketorp. See further introduction to B257.

²²⁴Shirner has carved the curse (which will bring true all the threats from 26–35), but tells Gird that he will scrape it off if she will accept his demands. She then responds:

[Gęðr kvað:]

[Gird quoth:]

“Hale be thou rather, O swain, and receive the rime-chalice,
full of ancient mead—
though I had intended that I never would love the Waning [= Free] well.”

1–2 Hęill ... mjaðar ‘Hale ... mead’] Occurs identically in Lock 53.

4 vaningja ‘the Waning [= Free]’] lit. ‘descendant of the Wanes^G’; a rare word. It only occurs at one other place in the Norse corpus, namely in the thule^C of boar-names. Boars were sacred to Free, TODO.

The language of Rígh is highly formulaic, but also often unique to it. Of particular note are the alliteration between the adverb męirr ‘further’ and míðra, e.g. in st. 2/1: gekk męirr at þat

 6 reęis hann upp þaðan, · réðsk at sofna;

Then took Great-Grandmother a lumpy loaf, heavy and thick, stuffed with chaff,
 she carried it further after that on the middle of a trencher, broth was in a bowl, she set it on a plate—
 a cooked calf was the best dainty;
 he [= Righ] rose up thence, resolved to sleep.

- 5 Rigr kunni þeim · rǫð at sęja; [W 78r/TODO]
 2 meirr lagðisk hann · miðrar rękku,

- 6 Þar vas hann at þat · þrjár nētr saman;
 2 gekk hann meirr at þat · miðrar brautar;

[W 78r/TODO]

Great-Grandmother begot a child, they sprinkled it with water²²⁶—swarthy of skin—they called it Thrall.

2 hqrund-svartan ‘swarthy of skin’] emend.; hqrfi svartan ‘swarthy with flax(?)’ W

²²⁶A reference to the Heathen naming ceremony, somewhat resembling the Christian baptism, wherein water would be poured on a newborn. Cf. Hgb 156.

- 8 Hann nam at vaxa · ok vęl dafna;
 2 vas þar á hqndum · hrokkít skinn, kropnir knúar, · [...]

 a stooping back, long heels.

- 9 Nam meirr at þat · magns of kosta,
 2 bast at binda, · byrðar gørva;
 bar hęim at þat · hrís gęrstan dag.

[W 78r/TODO]

He took further after that to try his power:
 bast to bind, burdens to make,
 he carried home after that brushwood on a gloomy day.²²⁷

²²⁷The thrall had to work in even the most hostile weather.

- 10 Þar kom at garði · gęngil-bęina,

[W 78r/TODO]

- 2 aurr vas á iljum, · armr sól-brunninn, niðr-bjúgt es nef, · nefndisk þír.

There came to the farm a gangle-boned woman:
mud was on her footsoles, her arm sunburnt, downturned her face—she called herself Thew.

1 gęgil-bęina ‘gangle-boned woman’] Derogatory, somebody who (due to poverty) only travels by foot.
3 Þír ‘Thew’] The name probably means ‘maid-servant’ or ‘female slave’. Unlike Thrall, it is not attested in any prose texts, but probably corresponds to OS thiwi ‘maid(-servant)’, being further root-related to þéa -þjá ‘to enthrall’, Proto-Norse þewar ‘servant’, OE þéow ‘slave, servant’.

- 11 Męirr sęttisk hön · miðra flętja, 2 sat hjá hęnni · sonr húss, róddu ok rýndu, · rękkju gørðu
4 Þręll ok þír · þrungin dógr.

[W 78r/TODO]

Further she set herself down on the middle of the floor-bench;
by her sat the son of the house [= Thrall].
They spoke and whispered, made a bed—
Thrall and Thew—in hard-pressed nights.

1 Męirr ... flętja] emend. based on other sts.; miðra flętja · męirr sęttisk hön W

[W 78r/TODO]

Children they begot—they settled and were content—
I think that they were called Rame and Feesner, Clour and Cledge, Chafser, Foulner, Drumber, Digrald, Drant and Hazer, Lout and Ledgald.—They laid yard-fences, dunged the fields, fed the swine,
kept the goats, dug the turf.

- 13 Dótr vqru þęr · Drumba ok Kumba,
2 Økkvin-kalfa · ok Arin-nęfja,
Ysja ok Ambótt, · Eękin-tjasna,

Then took Mother a patterned cloth,
white of flax—she covered a platter.
She took after that thin loaves,
white of wheat—and covered the cloth.²²⁸

²²⁸Note the strong parallelism. The household can afford an excess of expensive fabric and bread; Mother can cover the platter with a patterned (merktr) flaxen cloth, and then cover the cloth with wheat-bread.

 4 ętul vęro augu · sem yrmlingi.

[W 78v/TODO]

Mother begot a swain, swaddled him in silk;
 they sprinkled him with water—let him be called Earl.
 Pale was his hair, bright his cheeks, fierce were his eyes, like the young serpent.

4 ętul ... yrmlingi ‘fierce ... the young serpent’] A person of noble stock being recognised as such through their appearance is a motif in Norse literature. Cf. esp. the incident at the beginning of HHund II, where Hallow, disguised as a thrall-woman, is almost caught due to his unslavelike eyes, which are, as in the present stanza, likewise said to be ętul ‘fierce, terrible’.

- 33 Upp óx þar · Jarl á flętjum;

[W 78v/TODO]

Up grew Earl there on the floor-benches;
 he took to shake shields, fasten bow-strings, bend elmwood, shaft arrows,
 throw javelins, hoist frankish spears, ride horses, throw hounds (TODO)
 , brandish swords, practice swimming.

[W 78v/TODO]

There came out of a brush Righ, walking:
 Righ, walking, taught runes;
 he gave his own name; said that he had a son;
 he bade him take the ethel-plains:
 the ethel-plains, the ancient villages.

1–5 Kom ... bygðir.] Righ approaches his son, Earl. He reveals himself as his father and initiates him into the warrior aristocracy through teaching him the runes and giving him the noble title Righ (henceforth he will be known as Righ Earl). Finally he instructs him to set out and win land for himself, which Righ Earl soon does.

- 35 Rēið hann meirr þaðan · myrkan við [W 78v/TODO]
 2 hélug fjöll · unds at hǫllu kom;

 víg nam at vękja, · vǫll nam at rjóða,
 6 val nam at fęlla, · vá til landa.

He [= RIGH-EARL] rode further thence through the mirky wood, through the frosty fells, until to a hall he came—the shaft he took to hoist, shook the linden shield, leapt with the horse, and brandished the sword;
 war he took to rouse, the plain he took to redden, men he took to fell—he won the land.

He alone ruled, after that, eighteen homesteads.
 Wealth he took to hand out; to give all men gifts and treasures, [and] slender-ribbed steeds; rings he scattered; he cut apart a bigh.

4 hringum hręytti 'rings he scattered'] Cf. StarkSt Frag 1/2a bring-bręytanda 'ring-scatterer' [GENEROUS MAN] which contains the same words.

They settled together and were content with themselves,

4 En Konr ungr · kunni rúnar:
ęvin-rúnar · ok aldr-rúnar.

There grew up the sons of Earl:
horses they tamed, shield-rims they bent, smoothened shafts, shook ash-spears.—
But Kin the Young knew runes:
ever-runes and life-runes.

4 Konr ungr ‘Kin the Young’] The name is clearly a folk etymological pun on ON konungr ‘king’, who held the highest social rank, above even the earls.

41 Męirr kunni hann · mønnum bjarga,

He learned the chirps of birds, to calm fires,
to soothe and lull to sleep, to lower sorrows,
the strength and zeal of eight men.

4 Rígr at heita, · rúnar kunna.

With Rígh-Earl he shared runes;
TODO.
then he earned for himself, and got to own,
Rígh to be called, runes to know.

- 43 Reðið Konr ungr · kjǫrr ok skóga;
2 kolfi fleygði · kyrði fugla;
 þá kvað þat kráka · —sat kvisti ęin—
4 „Hvat skalt, Konr ungr, · kyrra fugla?
 Hęldr mętti þér · hęstum ríða
6 [...] · ok hęr fęlla.

[W 78v/TODO]

Kin the Young rode through brushes and woods;
he flung bolts, he calmed birds.
Then quoth a crow—it sat lone on a twig—:
“For what shalt thou, Kin the Young, calm birds?
Better it fit thee horses to ride,
[...], and armies to fell.”

- 44 Á Danr ok Danpr · dýrar hallir; 2 ǫðra ǫðal · an ér hafið;
 þęir kunnu vel · kjól at riða,
4 ęgg at kęnna, · undir rjúfa.

[W 78v/TODO]

Dan and Danp own costly halls:
nobler ethel than ye do—
they know well the ship to ride, the blade to teach, wounds to tear.

2 ér ‘ye’] metr. emend.; þér ‘id.’ W, which is simply a younger form of ér, and shows that the poem has been linguistically modernised.

2 ǫðal ‘ethel’] Ancestral farmland, in this case the eighteen homesteads owned by Earl.

3 kjól at riða ‘ship to ride’] i.e. ‘to sail’

4 egg at kenna ‘the blade to teach’] i.e. ‘to fight, wage war’. Apparently a euphemism; to “teach him the blade” is to fight him.

At this point leaf 78 ends. The rest of the poem is lost.

The Lay of Wayland (Völundarkviða)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C10th (0.428)–early C11th (0.475)

Meter: Firnwörðslaw

The Lay of Wayland (Wayl) is a story of immense psychological complexity, one of the masterpieces of Norse narrative poetry.

The poem begins with a prose introduction, which survives in both R and A.

Wayland gets his revenge on the whole royal household. He murders Nithad's two young sons (affectionately, his "bear-cubs") and thus ends his male lineage. Likewise he defangs Nithad's "cunning wife" (she is never called anything else) by reducing her once powerful counsels to cold words; and finally he rapes Beadhild, depriving her of her maidenhood and value in marriage. They are thus reduced to the same state of complete powerlessness as he himself experienced, something clearly seen in the repetition of the adjective viljalauss 'powerless'; in v. 12 it describes Wayland after he wakes in shackles, but in v. 31 Nithad uses it to refer to his own mental state after the deaths of his sons. This sense of hopelessness is also seen in Beadhild's haunting concluding speech. "I knew by naught struggle against him; I could by naught struggle against him."

From the other versions of the story it is known that Beadhild gave birth to a son, Woody (OE Wudga, Thdr Viðga, in Danish ballads Vidrik Verlandson). He went on to become a great hero, and in the later heroic ballads by far eclipses his father. His birth seems heavily foreshadowed by Wayland forcing Nithad to swear an oath in v. 33, but he is nowhere directly mentioned in the poem, probably for artistic reasons.

Apart from this lay there is one other telling of the full story, namely the Strand of Wayland the Smith in Thdr. While written in Old Norse, it is clear from the proper names and content that it is based on German sources (probably heroic ballads). Thus the native form Völundr is replaced with Velent [sic], Niðuðr with Niðungr. Interestingly there is a note within it showing that the native form was still known, namely about "Velent, the excellent smith, whom Warrings (Væringjar) call Wayland (Völundr)". Apparently Wayland was so famous that "all men seem to praise his workmanship so, that the maker of any smith's work which is made better than other works, is called a Wayland (Völundr) with regards to workmanship."

Far more stark than minor differences of language is that of tone. The psychological complexity and tension of the older redaction is almost entirely gone: Wayland is no longer a mysterious wild man, but a chivalrous knight who can escape from any peril through his ingenuity and craftsmanship. He is not kidnapped out of Nithad's greed, nor hamstrung out of the suspicion of his cruel wife, but rather a loyal servant of Nithad's, banished from the kingdom after defending himself against the king's corrupt steward, and hamstrung after being caught attempting to poison the king's food in revenge.

Most frustratingly the personality of Beadhild is entirely expulged. She is the anonymous "king's daughter", an unnamed maiden (jungfrú, a borrowing from Low German) who is peacefully seduced by Wayland and quickly falls in love with him. Likewise the person of Nithad's cunning wife is completely gone, and the murder of his sons no longer ends his lineage, since he has another, older son who survives him and takes over the kingdom. Wayland still flies away laughing after telling Nithad what he has done, but only four years (his son with Beadhild is three years old) later reconciliates with Nithad's son, retrieves Beadhild and their son and lives a long life as a famous craftsman.

With this it is clearly seen that the story by the time of the Thdr had been heavily distorted, a tragic victim of medieval romantic sensibilities. It does not have any high literary value, but is of interest since it shows the wide reception and variation of the narrative.

Finally there are also traces of the story in the Anglo-Saxon tradition, where it is alluded to in both Walder and Dear, the latter of which particularly emphasising the powerlessness felt by Wayland and Beadhild (thus being much closer in spirit to the present poem than to Thdr). Parts of the narrative are depicted on the early C8th Frank's casket, where it is as prominent as the depiction of the Adoration of the Magi—a true testament to the weight with which it was regarded within that culture.

To illustrate the narrative correspondences and differences of the various redactions, I present the following table:

Nithad was a king in Sweden called. He had two sons and one daughter; she was called Beadchild. Three brothers were there, the sons of a king of the Finns. One was called Slayfinn, another Agle, the third Wayland. They travelled on skis and hunted wild animals; they came into the Wolfdales and made for themselves houses there. A body of water lies there, which is called Wolfsea. Early in the morning they found on its shore three women who were spinning linen. Near the women were their swan-hames^C; they were Walkirries. Two of them were the daughters of king Ladwigh: Ladguth Swanwhite and Harware Allwit. The third was Alerune, daughter of Kear^P of Walland^{G231}. The men took the women to their halls with them. Agle got Alerune, and Slayfinn Swanwhite, and Wayland Allwit. The couples lived there for seven winters; then the women left to attend battles, and did not return. Then Agle left on skis to look for Alerune, and Slayfinn looked for Swanwhite, and Wayland stayed in the Wolfdales. He was the most skilled craftsman whom men know of in the ancient saws. King Nithad had him captured, as it is here sung of:

1 hon hét 'she was called'] so R; ok hét hon 'and she was called' A 2 vōru 'were'] so A; om. R 4–13 sér þar hús ... um kveðit 'for themselves houses ... sung of'] so R; om. (due to loss of the following foll. in the ms.) A

Maidens flew from the south through Mirkwood²³²
 —young allwits²³³— to fulfill orlay^C.
 They on the lake-shore set down to rest;
 the southern ladies span expensive linen.

2 or-lög drýgja; ‘fulfill orlay’] That is, to fulfill their destinies, and act according to their innate nature, as described in P1 and st. 3. I disagree with Clunies Ross (2005)[103], who translates this phrase as ‘engage in war’, through seeing the latter word as a borrowing from OE (cf. Dutch oorlog ‘war’). In fact, the expression drýgja orlög is also attested in OE, namely in l. 29 of a poem on the Christian Doomsday (TODO?), about a man going to Hell for his sins: ond þonne á tó caldre · or-leg dreógeð ‘and then for ever and ever [he] suffers his orlay’

²³²Mirkwood is surely referenced for its association with the war-ravaged lands of the Gots and Huns; a natural environment for Walkirries.

²³³Maybe look at what this means. TODO.

One of them began—the fair maiden of men—to embrace Agle in her light bosom.
 Another was Swanwhite, her swan-feathers she rustled.
 But the third of those sisters
 warded the white throat of Wayland.

They stayed then for seven winters after that,
 and all the eighth they yearned,
 and the ninth did need divorce them.—
 The maidens longed for the mirky wood:
 the young allwits, to fulfill orlay.²³⁴

²³⁴As Walkirries the orlay^C (already laid-down destiny) of the sisters was to preside over battles for Weden. Remembering this duty they become increasingly restless, until they one day decide to leave when their husbands are out hunting. For the significance of Mirkwood (here “the mirky wood”), see note to st. 1.

English "livelong") occurs in three other places: sts. 16 and 30 of the present poem, and st. 3 of Ord. ęnd-langr salr 'endlong hall' occurs in two additional places: st. 27 of Thrim and st. 3 of Shir.

And they took [them] off, and they slid [them] on;

 Came there from the hunt the weather-eyed shooter:
 Wayland passing over a long way.

²³⁷Nithad's men take off all the seven hundred rings (presumably to count them) and then put them back on, but they keep just one. This bigh is probably the one mentioned in sts. 17 and 26, since Beadhild has it already when Wayland is brought back after being captured. Finnur Jónsson (1932) writes (My translation from the Danish): "The ring which Nithad kept must have had special properties, and distinguished itself before others. There is no doubt that the ring is a flight ring; whether this was clear to the poet is however questionable. This much is certain, that Wayland seems to be able to fly away only after he has got back the ring; that is, the one which Beadhild brings him." —The reader may for himself judge the plausibility of this, but it seems that Wayland, being an exceptionally handy craftsman, may just as well have crafted wings for himself without need for magical rings. This agrees with the Low German verison and the Daedalus myth, for both of which see the introduction to the present poem.

Now called Nithad, lord of the Nears:
 “Where gottest thou, Wayland, leader of elves,
 our ounces, in the Woldfdales?
 Gold was there not on Grane^P's path;
 far I've thought our land from the fells of the Rhine.²³⁸”

²³⁸Grane was the horse of the legendary hero Siward^P, slayer of the dragon Fathomer^P. These events were thought to have taken place in Germany. Nithad's speech is thus sarcastic: “Where did you get that gold? I have never heard of a dragon's hoard in the Woldfdales!”, the implication being that Wayland has stolen the gold (from king Nithad).

- 15 „Man’k at mēiri · mēti ǫttum,

[Wayland quoth:]

“I recall, that we owned greater wealth,
 when we a whole household were at home:
 Ladguth and Harware were born to Ladwigh;
 known was Alerune, Kear’s daughter.”²³⁹

²³⁹Wayland responds rather cryptically. It seems that by asserting the noble lineages of the three swan-wives he gives a legitimate reason for his wealth, although he is, judging by the tone, likely aware that the greedy Nithad neither cares nor believes him.

weeping, Beadhild went from the island, grieved the lover's flight, and the father's fury.

 or a babe might own within the hall.²⁴⁷

²⁴⁷Wayland has Nithad swear oaths that he will not harm “his bride” (i.e. Beadhild), nor her and Wayland’s newly conceived child. The oaths are formulaic, and relate to the warrior’s honour. Similar lists are found in TODO.

2–3 meý hina brá-hvítu ... fagr-varið ‘the brow-white maiden ... fair-clothed’] With these expressions Nithad strongly stresses the purity of his daughter (mér ‘maiden’ here simply meaning ‘virgin’). Perhaps he thinks that her innocence can be restored if she dresses in fair clothes, but it will not be so.

[Beadhild quoth:]

“Tis true, Nithad, as he said²⁴⁸ to thee:

I and Wayland stayed together on the islet, for one heavy hour—it should never [have been]!

I knew by naught struggle against him;

I could by naught struggle against him.²⁴⁹”

4 vinna] metr. and sens. emend.; om. R

²⁴⁸Beadhild, knowing that the only one who is aware of what happened is Wayland, makes the subtle change in the conjugation, from her father's general plural (“what they said”), to the specific singular (“what he said”).

²⁴⁹Beadhild was both mentally (kunna ‘to know, understand’) and physically (mega ‘to have strength to do, avail’) incapable of struggling against him. — As Finnur Jónsson (1932) comments, an unsurpassed final verse.

Eddic fragments from Snorre's Edda

Numerous Eddic stanzas are quoted in Snorre's Edda, whether isolated or in sequence. The majority of them are taken from longer Eddic poems preserved in full in other manuscripts (primarily R and A), but a few are found nowhere else; it is these fragments that are edited in the present section.

The fragments have some things in common: they are generally pieces of spoken dialogue quoted in the context of longer narrative prose sections, and are, with one exception (Homedall's galder, see below), not introduced by reference to their source, but rather with phrases like þá kvað hann 'then he quoth'.

This half-stanza is quoted in Yilv 2, being the second Eddic verse in the text, following High 1 in the same chapter, which is uttered by Yilfer himself when he enters the hall of the Eese. The whole section is clearly referencing other Eddic mythic wisdom contests and particularly reminiscent of Webth.

- P1 Hann sá þrjú háséti ok hvert upp frá ǫðru, ok sátu þrír menn sinn í hverju.
2 Þá spurði hann, hvert nafn höfðingja þeira véri. Sá svarar, er hann leiddi

4 sá, er heitir Jafnhárr, en sá ofast, er Þriði heitir. Þá spyrr Hárr komandann, hvárt fleira er erendi hans, en heimill er matr ok drykkir honum sem ǫllum 6 þar í Háva hǫll. Hann segir, at fyrst vill hann spyrja, ef nokkurr er fróðr maðr inni. Hárr segir, at hann komi eigi heill út, nema hann sé fróðari,

He [= Yilfer] saw three high-seats, and each was higher than the other. And there sat three men, each in his seat. Then he asked what the names of those chieftains were. He who led him in answers, that the one who sat in the lowest high-seat was a king, and is called High, and there next that one who is called Evenhigh, and uppermost the one who is called Third. Then High asks the guest whether he has any other errands, and says that food and drink will be freely offered to him, like it is to all men there in the High One's hall. He [= Yilfer], asks if anyone inside is a learned man. High says, that he will not come out whole, unless he be more learned [than he],

- 1 „ok statt-u framm · meðan þú fregn

“and stand forth while thou askest;
he shall sit who speaks!”

The following passage is almost the whole of Yilv 23, excepting at the very end svá er sagt ‘so it is said’, after which is quoted Grmn 11. The myth described is found in typically corrupted form in Saxo (TODO), who also paraphrases the same two stanzas. See Hopkins (2021).

12 þetta:

The third Os is that one who is called Nearth. He lives in the heaven in the place called Nowetowns. He rules the course of the wind, and stills sea and fire. On him shall one call for sea-faring and for hunting. He is so wealthy and blessed with money that he may give them a wealth of lands or loose property; on him shall one call for that sake. Nearth is not of the lineage of the Eese. He was brought up in Wanehome, but the Wanese gave him as a hostage to the gods, and in return got as hostage that one who is called Heener. He was used to reconcile the gods and the Wanese. Nearth has that woman who is called Shede, the daughter of the ettin Thedse. Shede wishes to have the dwelling which her father had owned, which lies on some fells in the place called Thrimham—but Nearth wishes to live by the sea. They agreed with each other that they would live for nine nights in Thrimham, but the other nine at Nowetowns. But when Nearth came back to the Nowetowns from the fell, he quoth this:

- 2 „Leð erumk fjöll, · vas’k-a lengi á,
2 nétr einar níu;
ulfa þytr · mér þótti illr vesa

4 hjá sǫngvi svana.“

“The fells are loathsome to me; I was not long thereon—only for nine nights.
The howling of the wolves thought me evil, compared to the song of swans.”

P3 Þá kvað Skaði þetta:

Then Shede quoth this:

3 „Sofa né mát’k-a’k · sévar bæðjum á
2 fugls jarmi fyrir;
sá mik vękr · es af víði kómr
4 morgun hverjan már.“

“I could not sleep on the beds of the sea
for the bleating of the bird.
He awakes me, when from the wide sea he comes,
every morning, the mew.”

P4 Þá fór Skaði upp á fjall ok byggði í Þrym-heimi, ok ferr hon mjök á skíðum
2 ok með boga ok skýtr dýr. Hon heitir ǫndur-goð eða ǫndur-dís.

Then Shede went up to the fells and dwelled in Thrimham, and she often goes on skis with her bow and shoots beasts. She is called ski-god or ski-dise.

Homedall's Galder (Heimdallargaldr)

This mysterious fragment is quoted in Yilv 27, the chapter describing Homedall, and introduced by the sentence: Ok enn segir hann sjalfir í Heimdallar-galdri: ‘And further he himself says in Homedall’s Galder:’. It is fittingly composed in the meter Galderlaw, consisting of two c-lines. The now-lost poem from whence it stems is also mentioned, but not quoted, in Scold 15: Heimdallar hǫfuð beitir sverð. Svá er sagt, at hann var lostinn manns hǫfði í gegnum. Um þat er kveðit í Heimdallar-galdri, ok er síðan kallat hǫfuð mjǫtuðr Heimdallar ‘A sword is called Homedall’s head. So is said, that he was pierced by a man’s head. About that it is sung in Homedall’s galder, and thereafter the head is called Homedall’s bane.’

4 „Níu em’k móðra mögr,

2 níu em'k systra sonr.“

“I am nine mothers' lad;
I am nine sisters' son.”

The following passage is from Yilv 35, which lists the Ossens^G.

P5 Fjórtánda Gná, hana sendir Frigg í ymsa heima at ørindum sínum. Hon á 2 þann hest, er renn lopt ok lög, er heitir Hóf-varpnir. Þat var eitt sinn, er hon reið, at vanir nokkvörir sá reið hennar í loptinu. Þa mælti einn:

The fourteenth is Gna; Frie sends her into every home to do her errands. She owns the horse who runs through air and sea, and is called Hoofwarpner. It was one time when she rode that some Waness saw her riding in the air. Then one spoke:

5 „Hvat þar flýgr, · hvat þar ferr,
2 eða at lopti liðr?“

“What flies there, what fares there, or passes through the air?”

P6 Hon svarar:

She answers:

6 „Né ek flýg, · þó ek fer
2 ok at lopti lið'k á Hóf-varpni, · þeim's Ham-skærp
4 gat við Garð-rofu.“

“I fly not, thou I fare,
and pass through the air,
on Hoofwarpner, whom Hamsherper
begot with Yardrove.”

P7 Af Gnár nafni er svá kallat, at þat gnéfar, er hátt ferr:

From Gna's name it is so called that that which fares high up protrudes.

Yilv 49 contains the narrative of Balder's death, beginning with his ominous dreams, and ending with the Eese failing to "weep him out of Hell" (for a summary and discussion of the myth and its attestations, see the introduction to Wsp 31–33). At the end of the chapter, a single Leed-meter speech-stanza is quoted.

- P8 Því nęst sendu ęsir um allan heim ęrind-reka at biđja, at Baldr vęri grátinn
 2 őr Helju, en allir gerđu þat, menninir ok kykvendin ok jörđin ok steinarnir ok tré ok allr málmr, svá sem þú munt sét hafa, at þessir lutir gráta, þá er 4 þeir koma őr frosti ok í hita. Þá er sendi-menn fóru heim ok hófđu vel rekit sín ęrindi, finna þeir í helli nokkvęrum, hvar gýgr sat; hon nefndist 6 Þękk. Þeir biđja hana gráta Baldr őr helju, hon segir:

Next after that the Eese sent an errand-runner through all the Home^C, to ask that Balder be wept out of hell. And all did that, the men and the beasts and the earth and the stones and trees and all bedrock, as thou must have seen, that these things weep when they come out of cold and into heat. When the messengers journeyed home, and had ran their errand well, they find in a certain cave that a gow^C sat there; she called herself Thanks. They ask her to weep Balder out of hell. She says:

- 7 „Þękk mun gráta • þurru tęrum
 2 Baldrs bál-farar;
 kyks né dauđs • naut'k-a Karls sonar
 4 hafi Hęl því's hęfir.“

“Thanks will weep– with dry tears for Balder's pyre-journey [DEATH].
 Neither living nor dead did I have use for Churl's son [= Balder];
 let Hell have what she has!”

- P9 En þess geta menn, at þar hafi verit Loki Laufeyjarson, er flest hefir illt 2 gęrt með ásum.

But men guess that this was Lock, Leafy's son, who has done the most evil among the Eese.

Scold 26, here edited in part, is the only surviving retelling of Thunder's journey to the ettin Garfrith, and his following fight with, and slaying of, him and his two daughters, Yelp and Grope. This was apparently a well-known story, and is also mentioned in Vetr Lv 1/1b (quoted in Scold 11, which lists kennings for Thunder): stętt of Gjęlp dauđa 'thou didst step over the dead Yelp'. The prose of Scold 26 seems to be based on an earlier, now-lost poem in Leed-meter, from which it quotes two stanzas. The first is found in all four main manuscripts, while the second is found only in U. Both are spoken by Thunder and closely resemble each other stylistically, which is why they most likely come from the same poem.

- P10 Þá fór Þórr til ár þeirar, er Vimur heitir, allra á mest. Þá spennti hann
 2 sik megin-gjörðum ok studdi for-streymis Gríðar-völ, en Loki helt undir megin-gjarðar. Ok þá er Þórr kom á miðja ána, þá óx svá mjök áin, at uppi 4 braut á oxl honum. Þá kvað Þórr þetta:

Then Thunder journeyed to that river which is called Wimbre, greatest of all rivers. Then he wrapped his might-girdle around himself and leaned upon Grith's stave against the stream, and Lock held up the might-girdle. And when Thunder came to the middle of the river, it waxed so great that it reached up unto his shoulders. Then Thunder quoth this:

- 8 „Vax-at-tu nú, Vimur, · alls mik þik vaða tíðir 2 jǫtna garða í;
 vætist, ef þú vęx · at þá vęx mér ós-męgin
 4 jafn-hátt upp sem himinn.“

“Grow not now, O Wimbre, as I wish to wade through thee into the yards of the ettins;
 know that if thou growest, that my os-might then grows up as high as the heaven.”

- P11 Þá sér Þórr uppi í gljúfrum nokkurum, at Gjálp, dóttir Geirrøðar stóð þar
 2 tveim megin árinna, ok gerði hon ár-vøxtinn. Þá tók Þórr upp ór ánni stein mikinn ok kastaði at henni ok mēlti svá: „At ósi skal á stemma.“ Eigi 4 missti hann, þar er hann kastaði til, ok í því bili bar hann at landi ok fekk tekit reyni-runn nokkurn ok steig svá ór ánni. Því er þat orð-tak haft, at 6 reynir er björg Þórs.

Then Thunder sees that, up in some gorges, Yelp, daughter of Garfrith stood there on both sides of the river, and she caused the river's growth. Then Thunder took up from the river a great stone, and threw it at her and spoke thus: “At the source shall river be dammed!” He did not miss his target, and in that moment he turned towards land and caught hold of some rowan shrub, and thus stepped out of the river. Therefore the saying goes that the rowan is Thunder's deliverance.

- P12 En er Þórr kom til Geirrøðar, þá var þeim fē-lögum vísat fyrst í geita-hús

- 2 til her-bergis, ok var þar einn stóll til sētis, ok sat Þórr þar. Þá varð hann þess varr, at stóllinn fór undir honum upp at réfri. Hann stakk Gríðar-veli 4 upp í raftana ok lét sígast fast á stólinn. Varð þá brestr mikill, ok fylgði skrēkr. Þar hófðu verit undir stólinum dótr Geirrøðar, Gjálp ok Greip, ok 6 hafði hann brotit hrygginn í báðum. Þa kvað Þórr:

But when Thunder came to Garfrith's home, then the companions were first shown to a goathouse as lodgings, and the seating there was one chair, and Thunder sat thereon.
Then he noticed that the chair beneath him was going up toward the roof. He stuck

- 9 „Einu sinni · neytta'k alls meginis 2 jǫtna gǫrðum í þá's Gjǫlp ok Greip, · dótr Geir-raðar,
4 vildu hefja mik til himins.“

“But one time I used all [my] might in the yards of the ettins:
When Yelp and Grope, daughters of Garfrith, would lift me to the heaven.”

Heroic Poetry of the Codex Regius

First Lay of Hallow Hundingsbane (Helgakviða Hundingsbana fyrsta)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): early C11th (0.103), late C12th (0.805)

Meter: Firnworslaw

This rather late poem is very well written. Particularly beautiful are the introductory stanzas, which tell of Norns arriving in the night to predetermine Hallow's life.

P1 Hér hefr upp kvæði frá Helga Hundings bana, þeira ok Høðbrodds. Völ-

Here begins a lay regarding Hallow, bane of Hunding and his men, and of Hathbrod. A lay of the Walsings.

It was the dawn of elds^C, as eagles shrieked, holy waters poured down from the Heavenfells;
then had Burhild in Browlund given birth to Hallow the great of heart.

1 Á¹ vas alda 'It was the dawn of elds'] This introductory half-line immediately situates the events of the poem in the distant past, indeed, if one compares Wsp 2, at the very dawn of history.

- 2 Nótt varð í bó, · nornir kvómu, [R 20r/23]

It turned night in the settlement; norns came,
 those who shaped the age of the nobleman [= Hallow].
 They bade that battle-arrayer become the noblest,
 and among princes seem the best.

They turned mightily orlay-strands when castles were broken in Browlund.
 They wrapped a golden band, and beneath the moon-hall [SKY/HEAVEN] fastened it in the middle.

They in the east and west hid its ends;
 there the praised one owned land in between.
 The kinswoman of Nare (unknown person) [NORN] tugged onto the northern ways a single cord—she bade it hold forever.

TODO: Introduction.

- P1 Helgi fekk Sigrúnar ok áttu þau sonu; var Helgi eigi gamall. Dagr Hǫgna
2 sonr blótaði Óðin til fǫður-hefnda. Óðinn léði Dag geirs síns. Dagr fann Helga, mág sinn, þar sem heitir at Fjǫturlundi. Hann lagði í gognum 4 Helga með geirnum. Þar fell Helgi, en Dagr reið til fjalla ok sagði Sigrúnu tíðindi:

Hallow got Syerun and they owned sons; Hallow was not old. Day, son of Hain, blooted^C to Weden to avenge his father; Weden lent Day his spear. Day found Hallow, his brother-in-law, at the place which is called Fetterlund; he laid the spear through Hallow. There fell Hallow, but Day rode to the fells and told Syerun the news:

- 1 „Trauðr em ek, systir, • trega þér at segja
2 því-at ek hefði nauðigr • nipti gróttu:
Fell í morgun • und Fjǫturlundi 4 buðlungr sá's vas • bætstr í heimi ok hildingum • á halsi stóð.“

“Regretful am I, sister, to grieve thee by saying—for, forced must I cause my kinswoman to cry: This morning fell, 'neath Fetterlund, that prince who was in the world the best, and on the throats of rulers stood.”

P2 Ambótt Sigrúnar gekk um aptan hjá haugi Helga ok sá at Helgi reið til 2 haugsins með marga menn. Ambótt kvað:

Syerun's maid-servant walked in the evening near Hallow's mound, and saw that Hallow rode to the mound along with many men. The maid-servant quoth:

2 „Hvart eru þat svik ein · es séa þikkjumk
 2 eða ragna røk · riða menñ dauðir, es jóa ýðra · oddum keyrið,
 4 eða es hildingum · heim-för gefin.“

“Either these are deceits only, as I seem to see —or the Rakes of the Reins?—dead men riding, as ye drive forth your steeds by spear-point—
 or are the princes granted leave to go home?”

3 „Es-a þat svik ein · es séa þikkisk
 2 né aldar rof · þótt-u oss lítir, þótt vér jóa óra · oddum keyrim,
 4 né es hildingum · heim-för gefin.“

“Tis not deceits only, as thou seemest to see—nor the ripping of the age, although thou behold us;
 although we drive forth our steeds by spear-point,
 the princes are not granted leave to go home.”

2 aldar rof ‘ripping of the age’] Formulaic. Cf. TODO rjúfask rēgin. This is the same root, only zero-grade.

P3 Heim gekk ambótt ok sagði Sigrúnu:

The maid-servant walked home and said to Syerun:

4 „Út gakk Sigrún, · frá Sefafjöllum
 2 ef þik folks jaðarr · finna lystir;
 upp ’s haugr lokinn, · kominn es Hēlgi!
 4 Dólg-spor dreýra · döglingr bað þik

P4 Sigrún gekk í hauginn til Helga ok kvað:

es val vitu, · varmar bráðir,
4 eða dōgg-litir · dags-brún séa.“

“Now do I so rejoice at our meeting,

Sooner will I kiss the unliving king,
than thou the bloody byrnie mightst cast away!
Thy hair is, O Hallow, with hoarfrost swollen;
the prince is all with corpse-dew [BLOOD] whipped;²⁵²
the hands wet-cold on the kinsman of Hain [= Hallow].—
How shall I for thee, O nobleman, remedy that?”

P5 Sigrún bjó sęing í haug'inum.

Syerun made the bed in the mound:

I shall go west of the wind-helm's [SKY/HEAVEN'S] bridges, before Salgovner awaken the victorious people."

1 roðnar 'reddening'] i.e. from the dawn.

P6 Þeir Helgi riðu leið sína, en þær fóru heim til bójar. Annan aptan lét 2 Sigrún ambótt halda vörð á hauginum. En at dag-setri, er Sigrún kom til haugsins, hon kvað:

Hallow and his men rode on their way, but the women journeyed home to the farmstead.
The next evening Syerun made the maid-servant keep watch on the mound. But at sunset, when Syerun came to the mound, she [= the maid-servant] quoth:

12 „Kominn véri nú, • ef koma hygði,
2 Sigmundar burr • frá solum Óðins;
kveð'k grams þinig • grénask vánir
4 es á ask-limum • ęrnir sitja

“Be not so mad that thou journey alone,
O lady of the Shieldings, to the ghost-houses [GRAVES]!
Mightier at night do all become dead fiends, O maiden, than during the bright days!”

P7 Sigrún varð skamm-líf af harmi ok trega. Þat var trúa í forneskju, at menn

Syerun became short-lived for harm and pain. It was a belief in ancient times that men were reborn, but that is now called an old wives' tale. Of Hallow and Syerun it is said that they were reborn. He was then called Hallow Hardingskate, and she Cheer Half-danesdaughter, as is sung in the Leeds of Cheer; and she was a walkirrie.

- P1 Sigurđr gekk til stóðs Hjálp-reks ok kaus sér af hest einn er Grani var
2 kallađr síđan. Þá var kominn Reginn til Hjálp-reks, sonr Hreiđ-mars.
Hann var hverjum manni hagari ok dvergr of vøxt. Hann var vitr, grimmr 4 ok fjöl-kunnigr. Reginn veitti Sigurði fóstr ok kennslu ok elskaði hann mjøk. Hann sagði Sigurði frá for-ellri sínu ok þeim at-burðum at Óđinn 6 ok Hónir ok Loki hfðu komit til And-vara-fors; í þeim forsi var fjöldi fiska. Einn dvergr hét And-vari; hann var lōngum í forsinum í geddu líki 8 ok fekk sér þar matar. „Otr hét bróðir várr,“ kvađ Reginn, „er oft fór í forsinn í otrs líki. Hann hafði tekit einn lax ok sat á ár-bakkanum ok át 10 blundandi. Loki laust hann með steini til bana. Þóttust ęsir mjøk heppnir fjor-lausn at fylla otr-belginn með gulli ok hylja útan ok með rauđu gulli.

14 Þá sendu þeir Loka at afla gullsins. Hann kom til Ránar ok fekk net hen-nar ok fór þá til And-vara-fors ok kastaði netinu fyr gedduna en hon hljóp 16 í netit. Þá mēlti Loki:

Siward went to Helpric's stable and thereof chose for himself one horse, which was henceforth called Grane. Then Rein, son of Rethmar, was come to Helpric. He was more crafty than any man and a dwarf in stature; he was clever, cruel and many-cunning^C. Rein fostered and taught Siward and love him very much. He told Siward about his own parents, and about the events that Weden, Heener and Lock had come to Andwareforce; in that force was a multitude of fish. A dwarf was named Andware; he was for a long time in the force in the likeness of a pike and got his food there. "Otter was our brother called," said Rein, “who often journeyed in the force in the likeness of an otter. He had caught a salmon and sat on the riverbank and ate it with closed eyes Lock struck him with a stone unto his death. The Eese thought themselves to have been very lucky, and flayed the skin off the otter. The same evening they sought to pass the night at Rethmar’s house, and showed their catch. Then we bound them and proposed to them as a life-ransom that they would fill the otter-skin with gold, and also cover the outside with red gold. Then they sent Lock to procure the gold. He came to Ran and got her net, and then journeyed to Andwareforce and threw the net in front of the pike, and it jumped into the net. Then spoke Lock:

1 „Hvat ’s þat fiska · es rinn flóði í,
2 kann-at sér við víti varask.
Höfuð þitt · læys-tu hęlju ór;
4 finn mér lindar loga!“

“What kind of fish is it who runs in the flood?
It cannot protect itself from harm.
Ransom thy head out of Hell;
find me the flame of the linden [GOLD]!”

2 „And-vari ek hęiti, · Óinn hét minn faðir,
2 margan hęfi’k fors of farit.
Aumlig norn · skóp oss í ár-daga
4 at skylda í vatni vaða.“

“Andware I am called; Owen was called my father;
through many a force have I fared.
A wretched norn shaped for us in days of yore,
that I should in the water wade.”

3 „Sęg-ðu þat, And-vari, (kvað Loki) ef þú ęiga vill
2 líf í lýða solum:
Hver gjöld · fāa gumna synir
4 ef höggvask orðum á?“

“Say that, Andware—quoeth Lock—if thou wilt own life in the halls of men:
Which recompense do the sons of men get,
if they hew at each other with words?”

4 „Ofr-gjöld · fāa gumna synir
 2 þeir's Vaðgǫlmi vaða;
 ó·saðra orða · hverr's á annan lýgr,
 4 of lengi leiða limar.“

“Great recompense do the sons of men get,
 those who in Wadyelmer^L wade.
 By the ramifications of untrue words is each who lies to another long followed.²⁵³”

²⁵³ Watery torment in the afterlife for oath-breakers and liars is well attested in the Germanic sources. See note to Wsp 39 for discussion.

P2 Loki sá allt gull þat er And-vari átti. En er hann hafði fram reitt gullit, þá
 2 hafði hann eftir einn hring ok tók Loki þann af hánun. Dvergrinn gekk inn í steininn ok mælti:

Lock saw all the gold which Andware owned. But when he had brought forth all the gold, then he had one ring left, and Lock took it off him. The dwarf went into the stone and spoke:

5 „Þat skal gull · es Gustr átti
 2 bróðrum tveim · at bana verða ok ǫðlingum · áttá at rógi;
 4 mun míns féar · mann-gi njóta.“

“That gold which Gust owned shall for two brothers become the bane, and for eight nobles the [cause of] strife;
 of my wealth will no man benefit.”

P3 Ésir reiddu Hreið-mari féit ok tráðu upp otr-belginn ok reistu á fótr; þá
 2 skyldu ésirnir hlaða upp gullinu ok hylja. En er þat var gørt gekk Hreið-marr framm ok sá eitt grana-hár ok bað hylja. Þá dró Óðinn framm 4 hringinn And-vara-naut ok hulði hárit.

The Eese prepared the wealth for Rethmar and stuffed the otter-skin and raised it on its feet. Then the Eese should fill it up with gold and cover it. But when that was done Rethmar stepped forth, and saw a single whisker-strand and bade it be covered. Then Weden drew forth the ring Andwaresgift and covered the strand.

6 „Gull ’s þér nú reitt (kvað Loki) en þú gjöld hefir

P4 Fáfñir ok Reginn kröfðu Hreið-mar nið-gjalda eptir Otr, bróður sinn.
 2 Hann kvað nei við. En Fáfñir lagði sverði Hreið-mar, föður sinn, sofanda.
 Hreið-marr kallaði á dótr sínar:

Fathomer and Rein demanded from Rethmar the kinsman-payment after Otter, their brother. He said no to it. But Fathomer laid the sword through Rethmar, his father, sleeping. Rethmar called upon his daughters:

Lyngheiðr svaraði:

- 11 „Fá mun systir, • þótt föður missi,

Lingheath answered:
“Not many a sister, although she misses her father,
will avenge her brother's harm!”

- 12 „Al þú þó dóttur, (kvað Hreiðmarr) dís úlf-huguð,

- P5 Þá dó Hreið-marr en Fáfniir tók gullit allt. Þá beiddisk Reginn at hafa 2 föður-arf sinn, en Fáfniir galt þar nei við. Þá leitaði Reginn ráða við Lyngheiði, systur sína, hvernig hann skyldi heimta föður-arf sinn. Hon kvað:

Then Rethmar died, and Fathomer took all the gold. Then Rein asked to have his father's inheritance, but Fathomer gave back a no. Then Rein looked for counsel from Lingheath, his sister, over how he should get his father's inheritance. She quoth:

- 13 „Brúðar kvæðja • skalt blíð-liga 2 arfs ok óðra hugar;
es-a þat hóft • at þú hjörvi skyllir

- P6 Þessa hluti sagði Reginn Sigurði. Einn dag, er hann kom til húsa Regins, 2 var hánun vel fagnat. Reginn kvað:

These things Rein said to Siward. One day when he came to Rein's house he was greeted well. Rein quoth:

- 14 „Kominn 's hingat · konr Sig-mundar, 2 seǵgr inn snar-ráði, · til sala várra;
 móð hefir meira · en maðr gamall,
 4 ok es mér fangs vön · at frekum ulfi.

“Hither is come the son of Syemund [= Siward],
 the quick-counselling youth, to our halls;
 he has greater courage than an old man,
 and I expect a catch from the hungry wolf!

- 15 Ek mun fœða · folk-djarfan gram;
 2 nú 's yngva konr · með oss kominn;
 sjá mun rēsir · ríkstr und sólu,

I will raise the troop-bold prince,
 now the son of a king is come among us!
 This ruler will become mightiest under the sun,
 he fastens through all lands his orlay-strands!”

4 þrymr ... ør·løg-símu ‘he fastens ... orlay-strands’] i.e. “his fate is being fixed throughout all lands”. Cf. the first four sts. of HHund I.

- P7 Sigurðr var þá jafnan með Regin ok sagði hann Sigurði at Fáfñir lá á Gnit-2 heiði ok var í orms líki. Hann átti ógis-hjalm er ǫll kvikvendi hréddusk við. Reginn gerði Sigurði sverð er Gramr hét. Þat var svá hvasst at hann 4 brá því ofan í Rín ok lét reka ullar-lagð fyr straumi ok tók í sundr lagðinn sem vatnit. Því sverði klauf Sigurðr í sundr steðja Regins. Eptir þat eggjaði 6 Reginn Sigurð at vega Fáfni. Hann sagði:

Then Siward was always with Rein, and he told Siward that Fathomer lay on the Gnit-heath in a Wyrms likeness; he owned the helm of awe by which all living things were frightened. Rein made for Siward the sword which is called Gram; it was so sharp that he plunged it down into the Rhine, and floated a lock of wool down the stream, and it split the lock like it did the water. With that sword Siward split asunder Rein's anvil; after that Rein urged Siward to slay Fathomer. He said:

- 16 „Hátt munu hléja · Hundings synir

 ok kvað:

Helpric got Siward a ship-retinue in order to avenge his father. They caught a great storm, and tacked the ships through some rocky cliffs. A lone man stood on the cliff and quoth:

As thou on Fathomer hast reddened thy gleaming blade,
the sword stands unto my heart!”

P1 Sigurðr dulði nafns síns fyr því at þat var trúa þeira í forneskju at orð feigs
2 manns mētti mikit ef hann bōlvaði óvin sínum með nafni. Hann kvað:

Siward concealed his name, because it was their belief in ancient times that the word of a fey^C man could do much if he baled his enemy by his name. He [= Siward] quoth:

2 „Göfugt dýr ek heiti • en ek gengit hef”k
2 hinn móður-lausi mögr, föður ek á’kk-a • sem fira synir,
4 geng ek einn saman.“

“Noble beast I am called, but gone have I,
the motherless lad.

A father I have not, like do the sons of men;
I go all alone.”

- 3 „Veitst, ef fǫður né átt-at · sem fira synir,
2 af hverju vastu undri alinn? [...]“

[Fathomer quoth:]

“Knowest thou, if thou hast not a father, like do the sons of men, by which wonder thou wast begotten?”

- 4 „Étterni mitt · kveð’k þér ó·kunnigt vesa
2 ok mik sjalfan hit sama:
Sigurðr ek heiti · Sigmundr hét minn faðir
4 es hef’k þik vápnum vegit.“

[Siward quoth:]

“My lineage I declare is unknown to thee, and my self the same.²⁵⁵

Siward am I called—Syemund was called my father—who with weapons have struck thee.”

²⁵⁵The meaning is that Fathomer would not recognize Siward’s lineage (i.e. his father) or name, since he is an orphan who up until this point has not won any glory. He is not saying that he is lineage is unknown even to himself, since sjalfan mik ‘my self’ is accusative, not dative.

- 5 „Hverr þik hvatti, · hví hvetjask lést,
2 mínu fjörvi at fara?
Hinn frán-eygi sveinn, · þú áttir fǫður bitran,
4 á-bornu skjór á skēið.“

[Fathomer quoth:]

“Who goaded thee—why didst thou let thyself be goaded—
my life for to destroy?
O gleaming-eyed swain, thou haddest a sharp father;
inborn traits show quickly.²⁵⁶”

²⁵⁶The original is unclear. á skēið means roughly ‘rapidly, quickly’, whence the expression ríða á skēið ‘CV: to ride at full speed’, but the other words are uncertain. La Farge and Tucker (1992) read ‘your innate qualities show quickly’, suggesting two unattested words: an adjective áborinn* ‘innate, inborn’ and a verb skjóa* ‘to show’. Yet the lack of i-umlaut in the supposed 3rd sg. pres. ind. skjór is difficult. We would expect skýr*, as in skjóta ‘to shoot,’ with 2nd/3rd sg. pres. ind. skýtr. A solution here would be reading a 2nd sg. pres. subj. skjóir, with a vowel TODO

- 6 „Hugr mik hvatti, · hendr mér full-týðu
2 ok minn inn hvassi hjorr;
fár es hvatr · es hrøðask tēkr 4 ef í barnósku ’s blauðr.“

[Siward quoth:]

“My heart goaded me, my hands assisted me,
and this my sharp sword.
Few a man is brave when he takes to grow,
if in his youth he be soft.”

7 „Veit’k, ef þú vaxa næðir · fyr þinna vina brjósti,

2 en ek þér satt ęitt sęgi’k:
It gjalla gull · ok it glóð-rauða fę,
4 þér verða þęir baugar at bana!“

[Fathomer quoth:]

“With hateful words alone answerest thou anything, but I tell thee truth alone:
The resounding gold and the glowing red wealth,
those bighs will become thy bane!”

10 „Fęi ráða · skal fyrða hvęrr
2 ę til ins ęina dags

[Siward quoth:]

“Rule [his] fee shall every man, always, until the one day;

for at one time must every man journey hence to Hell.²⁵⁷

²⁵⁷Siward dismisses the idea of the curse. He must die regardless of whether he takes the gold or not, and he would rather die wealthy and famous than poor and unknown.

11 „Norna dóm · munt fyr nęsjum hafa
2 ok ó·svinnns apa;
í vatni þú drukknar · ef í vindi rەر;
4 allt es feįgs forað.“

[Fathomer quoth:]

“The doom of the Norns shalt thou have before the headlands, and that of an unwise ape.
In water [wilt] thou drown if thou row in wind;
everything is the pit of the fey^{C 258}”

1 fyr nęsjum ‘before the headlands’] Formulaic, the sense is that the doom of the norns is close at hand (TODO: How do other scholars explain this?). Cf. the last st. of Sonatorrek (TODO).

²⁵⁸That is, the cursed, death-doomed (fey) man will find sudden death no matter where he turns.

12 „Sęę mér, Fáfnir, · alls þik fróðan kveða
2 ok vęl mart vita:
Hverjar ’ru þęr nornir · es nauð-gönglar ’ru
4 ok kjósa móðr frá mögum?“

[Siward quoth:]

“Say to me, Fathomer, as they call thee wise,
and knowing well enough:
Which are those Norns who are need-going,
and choose mothers from their lads?”

13 „Sundr-bornar mjök · hygg at nornir sé,
2 ęigu-t þęr ęt samann;
sumar ’ru ás-kunngar, · sumar alf-kunngar,
4 sumar dótr Dvalins.“

[Fathomer quoth:]

“Of much sunry birth I judge the norns to be;
they come not from a common lineage:

Some are begotten of the Eese, some begotten of the Elves, some are the daughters of Dwollen [DWARFS].”

14 „Seg mér þat, Fáfnir, · alls þik fróðan kveða
2 ok vël margt vita, hvé sá holmr heitir · es blanda hjör-lęgi
4 Surtr ok ęsir saman.“

[Siward quoth:]

“Say to me, Fathomer, as they call thee wise,
and knowing well enough:
What is the islet called, where Surt and the Eese blend sword-water [BLOOD] together?”

15 „Ó·skópnir heitir · en þar ęll skulu
2 geirum lęika goð;
Bil-ręst brotnar · es á brott fara
4 ok svima í móðu marir.

[Fathomer quoth:]

“Unshopner it is called, and there shall all the Gods play with spears; Bilrest shatters when they fare away,
and the horses swim in the sea.

Fathomer continues speaking, but there is probably something missing here, since the transition is abrupt. Between its paraphrases of st. 15 and of st. 16, N has Ok enn męlti Fáfnir: „Reginn bróðir minn veldr mínum dauða, ok þat hlęgir mik, er hann veldr ok þínum dauða, ok ferr þá, sem hann vildi.“ “And further spoke Fathomer: “My brother Rein causes my death, and it gladdens me that he also causes thy death, and then it will go like he has willed.”, which may either be a paraphrase of a lost st., or an addition by the redactor.

[Fathomer quoth:]

"I counsel thee now, O Siward—and thou oughtst to take the counsel,

21 „Ráð ’s þér ráðit • en ek ríða mun

P2 Ręinn var á brott horfinn meðan Sigurðr vđ Fáfnir ok kom þá aptr er
2 Sigurðr strauk blóð af sverðinu. Ręinn kvað:

Rein had gone away while Siward smote Fathomer, and then came back as Siward wiped the blood off the sword. Rein quoth:

2 ok Fáfnir of farit;

and Fathomer destroyed!

The Speeches of Syedrive (Sigrdrífumól)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C10th (0.961)

Meter: Leed-meter

The poem and prose under this header follows the order of R. A large count of verses are also cited in N (WalsS ch. 21).

In WalsS the present text up to P2 is first paraphrased:

Brynhildr segir, at tveir konungar þorðust. Hét annarr Hjalmgunnarr; hann var gamall ok hinn mesti hermaðr, ok hafði Óðinn honum sigr heitit, en annarr Agnarr eða Auða bróðir. „Ek fellda Hjalmgunnarr í orrostu, en Óðinn stakk mik svefn-þorni í hefnd þess ok kvað mik aldri síðan skyldu sigr hafa ok kvað mik giptast skulu. En ek strengða þess heit þar í mót at giptast engum þeim, er bræðast kynni.“ Sigurðr mælti: „Kenn oss ráð til stórra bluta.“ Hun svarar: „Þér munuð betr kunna, en með þökkum vil ek kenna yðr, ef þat er nokkut, er vér kunnum, þat er yðr mætti líka, í rúnum eða öðrum blutum, er liggja til hvers blutar, ok drekkum bæði saman, ok gefi goðin okkr góðan dag, at þér verði nýt ok fregð at mínum vitrleik, ok þú munir eptir þat, er vit réðum.“ Brynhildr fyllði eitt ker ok fétði Sigurði ok mælti:

‘Byrnhild says that two kings fought. One was called Helmguther; he was old and the greatest warrior, and Weden had promised him victory, but the other was called Eyner or Eade’s brother. “I felled Helmguther in battle, but Weden stung me with a sleeping-thorn as revenge for that, and declared that I should never thenceforth have victory, and said that I must marry, but I made a vow in response, to marry no man who could be frightened.” Siward spoke: “Teach us counsels regarding great things.” She answers: “Ye will know better, but with thanks I will teach you, if there is anything which we know that may please you, of runes or other things of importance; and let us both drink together, and may the gods give us two a good day, that thou have use and joy from my wisdom and that thou afterwards recall that which we two speak of.” Byrnhild filled a vessel and brought it to Siward and spoke:’

After this the present sts. 4–12 and 14–19 are cited uninterrupted, and a paraphrase is given of sts. 20 ff. (TODO: edit these!). While the order of 12–19 (excepting the omission of 13) in N is identical to that of R, and sts. 4–5 likewise come first, the order of the middle sts. 6–11 is very different. The following table shows the relationship between the two ms. for the relevant stanzas:

Siward set himself down, asking for her name. Then she took a horn full of mead, and gave him a draught of memory:

 Hail Night and [her] kinswoman [= Earth]!
 With un-wroth [FRIENDLY] eyes look ye toward us two,
 and give the sitters [= us] victory.

2 nipt ‘[her] kinswoman [= Earth]’] According to Yilv 10 Earth is the daughter of Night and Aner^P.

3 Ó-ręiðum augum · litið okkr þinig ‘With unwrathful [FRIENDLY] eyes look ye toward us two’] An archaic conception; the Gods turning Their friendly gaze toward the worshipper symbolises Their bestowing their favour, and the specific use of ó-ręiðr ‘un-wroth’ shows that the wrath of the Gods was feared. Compare Hdl 6. Similar language is found in other ancient literatures, e.g. in the Hebrew Bible, most famously in the “Priestly Blessing” of Numbers 6:24–26 where Yahweh’s favour is expressed by “making His face shine” and “lifting His face” toward the receiver of the blessing, and also in Psalms 4:6 and the chorus of Psalms 80, contrasting with 80:17 where the Israelites are depicted as perishing before the rebuke of Yahweh’s face.

1 Hęilir ęsir, · hęilar ęsynjur ‘Hail the Eese! Hail the Ossens!’] Probably formulaic, subverted by Lock in Lock 11 (see note there for possible ritual use).

P2 Hon nefndisk Sigrdrífa ok var valkyrja. Hon sagði, at tveir konvngar

She called herself Syedrive and was a walkirrie. She said, that two kings fought. One was called Helmguther; he was then old and the greatest warrior, and Weden had promised him victory. But the other was called Eyner, Eade's brother, who in no way wished to surrender. Syedrive felled Helmguther in the battle, but Weden stung her with a sleeping-thorn as revenge for that, and declared that she should never thenceforth cause victory in battle, and said that she must marry, "but I said to him that I made a vow in response, to marry no man who could be frightened." He [= Siward] speaks and asks her to teach him wisdom, if she knew any tidings out of all the Homes^C. Syedrive quoth:

This emendation is favourable for two reasons: (i) it makes more sense, since the semantic pair bót ‘cure’ : bjarg ‘rescue’ is surely stronger than bók ‘book, beech’ : bjarg ‘rescue’, and since the present stanza is specifically referring to the practical use of the runes; (ii) the pair bót-rúnar : bjarg-rúnar is already found in a runic charm (B 257, edited under Galders from Bryggen).

The Third Lay of Guthrun

(Guðrúnarkviða þriðja)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C10th (0.731), early C11th (0.178)

Meter: Firnwordslaw

A very short narrative poem, depicting a single minor legendary event. It is especially notable for its depiction of a trial by ordeal and the mention of a woman being drowned in a bog.

Herch, one of Attle's concubines tells Attle that she has seen his wife Guthrun sleeping with Thedric. Attle becomes distressed upon hearing this (P1). Guthrun asks him what is wrong (1), and he responds that Herch has accused her of sleeping with Thedric (2). Guthrun promises to prove her innocence through a trial by ordeal involving picking up a white stone from boiling water (3). She further says that while she and Thedric did sit down together, they did so in mutual grief over the deaths of her brothers (4–5). She tells Attle to summon a German lord named Saxe, who knows how to carry out the trial. Seven hundred men arrive to witness the event (6). Before picking up the stone, Guthrun laments over her brothers' deaths, saying that they would have disputed the accusation through violence, but that she must now prove her innocence by herself (7). She then puts her hand in the boiling water, and unscathed takes out the stones. She holds it up and shows it to the witnesses (8). Attle laughs, knowing that his wife has been faithful, and orders Herch to pick up the stone (9). She does so, but her hands are horribly scorched, and men lead her to a "foul bog", presumably to be drowned (see above). The poet ends by laconically stating that Guthrun in such a way was "reconstituted for her affronts".

2 hefði sét Þjóðrek ok Guðrúnu bæði saman. Atli var þá allókátr. Þá kvað Guðrún:

Herch was named the female thrall of Attle; she had been his concubine. She told Attle that she had seen Thedric and Guthrun both together. Attle was then wholly displeased. Then Guthrun quoth:

- 1 „Hvat ’s þér, Atli? · é, Buðla sonr,
 2 es þér hryggt í hug; · hví hlér þú éva?
 Hitt myndi óðra · jǫrlum þykkja
 4 at við męnn męltir · ok mik sęir.“

“What is with thee, Attle? Always, O son of Bodle,

 2 mér í hǫllu · Hęrkja sagði

“This troubles me, Guthrun, Yivick’s daughter:
 in the hall has Herch told me that thou and Thedric beneath thatched roof slept, and ye lightly warded the linen.²⁷¹”

²⁷¹i.e., they threw off their clothes and slept together.

- 3 „Þér mun’k alls þęss · ęiða vinna

²⁷²Historically, Thedmar was the father of Thedric, who took over the kingdom after his father’s death (see Encyclopedia). Thedmar may here be a scribal error for Thedric, a scribal error for “Thedmar’s son”, or a nickname due to conflation of the father and son.

²⁷³Guthrun says that she will prove her innocence through a trial by ordeal (that is, by lifting “the white holy stone” out of boiling water; see st. 8). She further strengthens her position by pointing out that no reliable person has sworn an oath attesting to her guilt.

From Burgny and Ordrun (Frá Borgnýju ok Oddrúnu)

P1 Heiðrekr hét konungr; dóttir hans hét Borgný. Vilmundr hét sá er var
2 friðill hennar. Hon mátti eigi fœða börn áðr til kom Oddrún, Atla systir;
 hon hafði verit unnusta Gunnars, Gjúka sonar. Um þessa sögu er hér 4 kveðit:

Heathric was a king called, his daughter was called Burgny. Wilmund was he called who was her lover. She could not bear children before Ordrun, Atle's sister, came to her. She had been the lover of Guthar, Yivick's son. Of this saw is here sung:

1 Heyrðað'k segja · í sǫgum fornum
2 hvé mér of kom · til Morna-lands;
 engi mátti · fyr jörð ofan
4 Heiðreks dóttur · hjalpir vinna.

I heard [it] said in ancient saws,²⁷⁴
how a maiden came to Mornland;
noone could—above the earth—
find help for Heathric's daughter [= Burgny].

²⁷⁴Probably formulaic; cf. Hild 1: ik gi-bórta dat seggen 'I heard it said' which likewise uses the 1sg pret. of 'hear' and the infinitive of 'say'. Both would go back to a Proto-Northwest Germanic phrase ek (ga-)hauridō* (þat) sagjaną.

The Lay of Attle (Atlakviða)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C10th (0.719)–early C11th (0.212)

Meter: Speech-meter, Firnwordslaw

A famously archaic poem.

Attle sends his messenger Kneefrith to Guthur (1). He arrives at Guthur's hall, where the mood is one of unease, and addresses Guthur (2). Kneefrith invites him and his brother Hain to Attle's court (3), offering them treasures, weapons and land (4–5). Guthur asks his brother Hain for advice, since he has not heard of Attle having gold to give away (6).

The Death of Attle (Dauði Atla)

P1 Guðrún Gjúkadóttir hefndi bróðra sinna, svá sem frégt er orðit. Hon drap 2 fyrst sonu Atla, en eptir drap hon Atla ok brendi hollina ok hirðina alla;
um þetta er sjá kviða ort.

Guthrun Yivicksdaughter avenged her brothers, as has become famous. She first killed the sons of Attle, and after that she killed Attle, and burned the hall and the whole hird. Regarding that this lay is wrought.

Attle sent—of yore—to Guthur a well-known messenger to ride; Kneefrith he was called.

To the yards of Yivick he came, and to the hall of Guthur;
to the hearth-surrounding benches, and to the lovely beer.

- 2 Drukku þar drótt-męgir · —ęn dyljęndr þęgðu—

There the dright-lads [WARRIORS] drank—but the concealed ones shut up—wine in the walhall; they feared the wrath of the Huns.
Then called Kneefrith with cold voice,
the southern messenger, he sat on a high bench:

1 dyljęndr ‘concealed ones’] Finnur Jónsson (1932) reasonably interprets this as referring to Atle’s spies at Guthur’s court.

2 val-hęllu ‘the walhall’] The interpretation of this compound is difficult in the current context. The first element val- could be (1) valr ‘falcon’, referring to the aristocratic hunting practice; (2) valr ‘Wale^G’, cognate with ‘Welsh’ but in ON referring to the French or Romans, stressing the southern location or appearance of the hall; or (3) valr ‘(collective) the battle-slain’, foreshadowing the inevitable death (feyness^C) of the Yivickings^G. If (3) is correct the word is linguistically identical to Walhall^L, Weden’s hall, whither the battle-slain go.

He also declared himself willing to give you two the field of wide Gnit-heath, the renowned brush which men call Mirkwood.

[Hain quoth:]

“What dost thou think the bride meant, when she sent us two an armlet wrapped with a heath-dweller’s garment [WOLF > WOLF’S HAIR]? I think that she gave us a warning!

I found the heath-dweller’s [WOLF’S] hair tied through the red ring:
wölvén is our road, if we ride that errand!²⁷⁵”

²⁷⁵That it is the more cautious Hain who speaks here is clear from Guthur’s response in the following stanzas. Whereas Hain judges the wolf-hair to be a warning of Hunnish treachery, Guthur thinks that it is a warning that wolves will steal his treasure if he does not show up.

Hain warded the hands of Guthur.
They asked the bold man [= Guthur] if his life he wished—
the ruler of the Gots—to buy with gold.²⁷⁸

1 Svá ... verjask | Line moved from the last st. to this one since it seems to connect semantically with the immediately following line, and also creates a regular line distribution of 4-4 instead of 5-3.

²⁷⁸The Huns ask Guthur (it is clear that “ruler of the Gots” refers to him, cf. sts. 1, 3, 10) if he wishes to ransom Hain. He instead responds with the following:

- 23 „Hjarta skal mér Hogni · í hęndi liggja 2 blóðugt, ór brjósti · skorit bald-riða, saxi slíðr-bęitu, · syni þjóðans.“

[Guthur quoth:] “The heart of Hain shall lie in my hands:
bloody from the breast, cut from the bold rider [= Hain], with a slide-biting sax,²⁷⁹ from the son of the sovereign [= Hain].”

²⁷⁹i.e. a short-sword with a blade so sharp that it draws blood when one slides the finger across it.

- 24 Skóru þęir hjarta · Hjalla ór brjósti, 2 blóðugt, ok á bjóð lögðu · ok bóru þat fyr Gunnar.

- 25 Þá kvað þat Gunnarr, · gumna dróttinn:

ó-líkt hjarta · Hogni ins frókna, 4 es mjok bifask · es á bjóði liggr;
bifðisk hqlfu męirr · es í brjósti lá!“

Then quoth that Guthur, the lord of men:
“Here have I the heart of Helle the soft—unlike the heart of Hain the bold!—

which much trembles when on the platter it lies;
it trembled twice as much when in the breast it lay.”

- 26 Hló þá Hogni · es til hjarta skóru
2 kvikvan kumbla-smið; · klökkva síðst hugði;

Hain laughed then, when unto the heart they cut the living wound-smith [WARRIOR = Hain]; he thought least of sobbing.
Bloody on a platter they laid it, and carried it before Guthur.

- 27 Mérr kvað þat Gunnarr, · Gęir-Niflungr:

Renowned, quoth Guthur, the Spear-Nivling:

it trembled not so much when in the breast it lay.

The Lay of Hildbrand

For the text of original poem I present the manuscript text with as few textual emendations as possible. As for the orthography, I have found it impossible to produce a normalised without too heavily distorting the received text, being as it is, a blend of several dialects (one need only observe the treatment of the name Thedric, which appears thrice, and each time in a markedly different form). Apart from my typical practice of capitalising proper names, marking prefixes with ⟨·⟩ and compounds with ⟨-⟩, and using acute accents to signify long vowels, circumflex accents to signify now-monophthongised original diphthongs, and overdots to mark nasal vowels, I have done the following changes in order to clarify etymological relationships and make the text somewhat more wieldy. Of these, 8–10 have also been noted in the apparatus where they occur:

1. Consistently replaced both p (wynn) and uu with w.
2. Consistently replaced c with k.
3. Consistently replaced qu with kw.
4. Consistently replaced t with t̃ in positions affected by the Second Sound Shift.
5. Replaced th with þ.
6. Replaced e with ē when reflecting an original a-vowel affected by i-mutation.
7. Replaced ó with ō where originally an a.
8. Removed unetymological double nn.
9. Restored initial b- where etymological and/or metrically required.
10. Removed initial b- unetymological and/or metrically deficient.

The punctuation of the original, entirely consisting of interpuncts, at times representing metrical breaks, at others sporadically placed, has not been retained.

Where they appear in cæsuræ, the words kwad Hilti-brant ‘Hildbrand quoth’ (found in ll. 30, 49, and 58) replace the usual interpunct. Due to their hypermetrical nature, I had originally planned to remove these, and instead indicate the speaker in the margins—but after comparison with various Norse stanzas (e.g. Rein 3, wherein the words kvað Loki ‘Lock quoth’ appear in the stanza’s first cæsura), I have come to believe that these represent an ancient oral interjection, seemingly going back as far as the Migration Period (as it seems incredulous to think that the scribe of ms. should have influenced the four centuries younger scribe of R in such a minor point.)

The poet gives a very short formulaic introduction, from which we can tell that the beginning of the poem is preserved (1–2). Hildbrand and Hathbrand, father and son, arm and dress themselves before riding into battle, each the head of an opposing host (3–6). Hildbrand asks Hathbrand about his name and lineage, saying that he knows all noble genealogies (7–13). Hathbrand gives his name, and says that the old men of his tribe have told him that his father was Hildbrand, a brave warrior. He abandoned the newborn Hathbrand in order to serve Thedric in his fight against Edwaker, but this was a long time ago, and Hathbrand doubts that he is still alive (14–29). Realising that he is facing his son, Hildbrand invokes God as witness, and as a token of loyalty offers Hathbrand a golden bigh which the Hunnish king had given him (30–35). Hathbrand exclaims that treasures must be won by struggle alone and harshly insults his father’s manhood: he calls him an old Hun, and accuses him of having survived to old age through treachery (36–41). Hathbrand then reveals that he has learned from sailors on the Mediterranean that Hildbrand is dead (42–44).

After this follow three short speeches by Hildbrand. The second one is certainly spoken by him, but the other two may be misplaced or misattributed. Hildbrand reflects on his son’s prosperity, saying that he can tell from his clothes that he has a good lord, and that he, unlike himself, has not suffered an exile’s fate (first speech: 45–48). He then calls on God, and laments that after thirty years of war he is now forced to fight against his own son; still, he tells Hathbrand that he should easily be able to kill such an old man as himself, if he has the strength to it (second speech: 49–57). Lastly, he (or Hathbrand, if we choose to emend) says that only the most degenerate easterner would refuse the fight when his opponent so greatly desires it. He accepts his fate and declares that when the duel is over, one of the two must win and rob the corpse of the other (third speech: 58–62).

The two men then throw their javelins, each of which gets stuck in the opposing shield, before rushing into each other, hacking away at their shields until they become worthless (63–68). The rest of the poem was continued on the now-lost, following page(s).

Hathbrand spoke, Hildbrand's son:

“This our people told me—

the old and learned, those who lived earlier—that Hildbrand was called my father—I am called Hathbrand.

Long ago he turned east, he fled Edwaker's hate,

hence with Thedrich and his multitude of thanes.

He left in the land a little one to stay:

a bride in the bower, a bairn ungrown, inheritance-less—he rode east hence,

at which time Thedrich was in great need of my father—that was so friendless a man!

He was immeasurably hostile to Edwaker,

the dearest of thanes under Thedrich.

He was always at the front of the troop; him did always the fight gladden;

known was he among keen men;

I ween not that he still have life.”

41 bist] pist ms.

37 mit gêru skal man · geba in·fâhan ‘With spear shall one win gifts’] This ancient mindset was codified by the Indians as part of the kṣatra-dharma, the code of the Warrior (kṣatriya) caste, which explicitly forbade them from taking gifts. So in a part of the Mahabharata (12.192.73), a Warrior King refuses a gift from a priest since “it is the duty prescribed for a Kṣatriya that he must fight and protect (people). Kṣatriya are said to be the givers, then, how can I take (this) from you?” (Hara (1974) transl.)

Widesith spoke, unlocking his word-hoard,
he who through the most tribes over earth,
and folks had journeyed; often he received on a bench pleasing treasures. From the Mirgings his ancestry stemmed. Together with Elhild, the good peace-weaveress, for the first time he sought out the home of the Reth-King, to the east of the Angles, [the home of] Erminric^P, the angry oath-breaker. — He then began to speak before the many:

6 freoþu-ƿeþban ‘peace-weaveress’] A woman used in a political marriage to bring peace between two tribes or families, in this case apparently between King Edwin (see ll. 97–98) and the Gots.

7 Hreð-cyninges ‘Reth-King’] i.e. the king of the Reth-Gots, which is apparently just a poetic name for the (Eastern) Gots; cf. ll. 18, 57, 88–89.

Heliand

Very much a work in progress.

The following is a complete list of relevant manuscript, in chronological order.

- L. 840–850 (Thomas 4073 (Ms)), which appears to originally have belonged to the same codex as
- P. 840–850 (R 56/2537 (PA))
- V. 800–850 (Palatini Latini 1447)
- S. 850 (cgm. 8840)
- M. 850–875 (cgm. 25)
- C. 950–1000 (Cotton Caligula A. VII sign. 3-11)

Fragments L and P appear to originally belong to the same codex?

Notes on the normalization:

- Long vowels are marked by the acute rather than by the circumflex accent or macron. This is both faithful to the original manuscripts and concordant with my practice in normalising other Germanic languages.
- Long vowels ô and ê resulting from monophthongisation of diphthongs au and ai are, however, written with the circumflex accent.
- ó when coming from etymological a or á is written as ǫ
- When attested in all mss., epenthetic (svarabhakti) vowels are marked with an underdot. Otherwise they are deleted.
- Long vowels resulting from nasal assimilation are marked with an overdot. i is written as ĩ.
- ms. e and i, when occurring between vowels are written as j.
- ms. i, when word-initial or following g and corresponding to etymological j is written as j
- ms. e as resulting from i-mutation is written as ē.

- ms. b or ḅ, when representing the voiced bilabial fricative, is written as v.
- ms. th is written as þ.
- ms. uu is written as w.

Galders: Charms, Spells, and Curses

Under this section I have gathered sundry galders (metrical magic charms) attested in Old Germanic languages. I have generally only included those with clear Heathen or otherwise traditional elements, especially certain poetic formulae known from older texts.

Continental Germanic galders

The Two Merseburg Galders

Dating: TODO.

Meter: Firnwordslaw, Galderlaw

These two galders, preserved in a manuscript (TODO) are some of the only surviving examples of genuine Heathen galders from the continent. Both share a common two-part structure, each beginning with an historiola (a “historical” account describing the successful effects of the galder in the mythic past), followed by an imperative, commanding that the willed magic effect take place in the present.

The first galder begins with the historiola describing a group of supernatural women in the midst of a battle, affecting its outcome by fastening or loosening fetters. The imperative then commands that some fetters in the present be destroyed, so that captive(s) may escape.

The second galder begins with the historiola describing a group of Gods riding through the woods. Among them is Balder^P, whose young horse sprains its foot. Three Gods then sing (see Note to bi-guol below) a healing-galder each over the horse; first the otherwise unknown goddess Sithguth^P, then the goddess Sun^P, and finally the god Weden^P. The imperative (apparently the same one sung by Weden) then commands that a present sprain be healed.

Of yore sat dises, sat here, then there:
some fastened fetters, some hindered armies,
some cleaved shackles (TODO!).—
Destroy the fetter-bonds, lead the way from the fiends!
.H.

5 .H.] The meaning of this letter, which is very clear and written in the same hand as the galders, is uncertain. To me, the most convincing suggestion is that it be read as .N., short for Latin nomen 'name', presumably the name for the person whom the singer wishes to free from the fetters.

Phol and Weden journeyed in the woods;
 then was the foot of Balder's foal sprained.
 Then begaled^C him Sithguth^P, Sun^P her sister;
 then begaled him Frie^P, Full^P her sister;
 then begaled him Weden, as he knew well:
 Like bone-sprain, like blood-sprain, like joint-sprain!
 Bone to bone,

3 bi·guol 'begale'] third past singular of bi·galan 'begale', transitive of galan 'gale, sing a galder'. This verb is the origin of the noun "galder", literally 'something galed'. Cf. Ord TODO, wherein a woman "gales" "bitter galders" over another in order to help her in childbirth.

Against worms (Contra vermes)

Dating: ?

Meter: Firnwordslaw

A manuscript charm, as its header suggests, aimed against worms. The worms (possibly maggots in an infected wound) are to leave the body (from marrow, to bone, to flesh, to skin) and instead go into some arrows (strála), possibly a ritual implement.

- 1 Gang út, Nesso, · mid nigun nessi-klínon,

4 Drohtin, werþe só.

Go out, Nesse, with nine small Nesses!

Out from the marrow into the bone, from the bone into the flesh, out from the flesh into the skin, out from the skin into these arrows.
Lord, may it be so.

How, earth works against everywhich wight and against mischief and against neglect and against that mighty tongue of man.

4 þá micelan · mannes tungan ‘that mighty tongue of man’] The tongue is surely here standing in for “speech”, specifically galder; i.e., if the swarming of the bees were caused by an enemy’s cursing, the earth will disarm it.

P2 And wiððon for·weorp ofer greót, þonne hí swirman, and cweð:
And with that throw the grit over, when they swarm, and say:

¹⁰ Amen fiað.

Here came walking in an inspiden wight, had his harness in his hands; said that thou wert his horse, laid his reins on thy neck; then they together began to ride from the land.
As soon as they came away from the land, then they together began to cool limbs.
Then came walking in the beast's sister;
then she ended [it], and swore oaths,
that this never should harm the ailing man, nor him who this galder might get,
nor whomever this galder could gale.
Amen, let it be.

Old Norse galders

The Ribe Galder Stick

Dating: Medieval.
Meter: Firnworslaw

A wooden stick from the Danish city of Ribe. The galder is syncretic, and as such contains numerous pre-Christian elements, albeit in a Christian(ised) context.

The inscription may be conveniently divided into four parts. Part one (ll. 1–4) contains an introductory prayer where the healer asks for the support of natural forces (Earth, Up-heaven and the Sun) and Christian divinities (God and Saint Mary), that the healing may be successful. Part two (ll. 5–8) ritually exorcises any sickness which may have entered any part of the body. Part three (ll. 9–14) apparently warns the addressee that they will be haunted by “nine needs” (an old Heathen formula; see Note) until they pray. Part four (ll. 15, which is probably prose) gives the personal name “Bonde”, perhaps the addressee, and concludes with an “Amen”.

that he lend me a healing-hand and medicine-tongue,
as medicine for the trembler who needs a cure.

This Old Norse galder is found in the Anglo-Saxon manuscript Cotton Caligula A XV. It runs across the bottom margin of the two facing pages 123v and 124r and is written in very clear runes of the Wiking age long-stave type. One rune, viz. g in vigi vegi 'smite' is stung. The inscription has no word separators.

The galder is of the same type as the two from Sigtuna (U Fv1933;134, U NOR1998;25) and clearly intended for healing; it ends with viðr áðra-vari 'against pus of veins', and this is probably a declaration of purpose.

Gyrils sár-þvara!

2 Far-ðu nú, • fundinn es-tu!

Þórr vegi þik • þursa dróttinn!

4 Jórils sár-þvara.

Viðr áðra-vari.

O Gyrel's wound-TODO!

Go thou now, thou art found!

May Thunder smite thee, O lord of Thurses!

O Erel's wound-causer.

2 Batt han riðu · barði hann riðu, auk síða sarð · sára rann.
4 Vara hafir fullt fengit; · flý braut, riða!

O Erel's trembling, grow out of Crook!
He bound the fever, he beat the fever,
and thereafter sodomised(?) the house of wounds.
He has fully caught the pus—fly away, fever!

Galders from Bryggen

Several galders or magical inscriptions are part of the cache of medieval rune-inscribed objects found at Bryggen in the city of Bergen, Norway. For simplicity's sake, they are here listed in ascending order of their runological numbers.

A stick inscribed on four planed sides. Part of the stick is broken off, which renders the text incomplete. The inscription is clearly a “love-charm” (that is, a piece of sexually coercive magic), addressed—as shown by the feminine dative sjalfri þér ‘thy self’ on side D—to a woman. The language closely resembles that of Shir 36, in which Shirner, Free’s servant, threatens to carve a runic inscription which will curse the ettin-woman Gird with ergi ‘degeneracy’, ðði ‘madness’, and óþoli ‘restlessness, impatience’ unless she sleep with his master. It seems that we are here dealing with just such a surviving runic curse, and that Shir 36 is reflecting an authentic form of Norse “love magic” (for it is unlikely that the present inscription should derive directly from that poem) by which a woman is cursed with sexual restlessness until she succumb to the will of the male curser.

A more distant parallel may be seen in the curse-formula found on the two C7th runic inscriptions from Stentoften and Björketorp (see TODO), wherein the destroyer of the respective monuments is cursed to become herma-lausar argjú ‘restless (a different root from óþoli above!) with degeneracy’, i.e. ‘incessantly randy’.

Another thing of note is that side D ends with a string of fake-Latin gibberish, indicating post-conversion influence on the Old Norse-Germanic magic tradition.

A Ríst ek bót-rúnar · ríst ek bjarg-rúnar
2 ein-falt við ǫlfum
 tví-falt við trollum
4 þrí-falt við þursum

I carve cure-runes, I carve rescue-runes:
 onefold against elves,
 twofold against trolls,
 threefold against thurses.

B Við inni skóðu · skag-val-kyrju
 2 svá't ei megi · þó-at ǣ vili lǣ-vís kona · lífi þínu granda.

Against the scatheful shag-walkirrie, so that she may not—though she always wants to—
 that guile-wise woman—harm thy life.

C Ek sendir þér · ek sé á þér 2 ylgjar ergi · ok ó·þola;
 á þér hríni ó·þoli · ok *jǫ*tuns móðr;
 4 sit-tu aldri, · sop-tu aldri.

I send to thee, I see on thee
 a she-wolf's degeneracy and restlessness;
 may restlessness stick on thee, and an ettin's wrath!
 Never sit, never sleep!

D Ant mér sem sjalfri þér.
 2 †Beirist rubus rabus et arantabus laus abus rosa gava†

Love me like thy self.
 [Latin-like gibberish].

A short little charm explicitly invoking the two most important Heathen Gods, Thunder and Weden. The inscription postdates the conversion of Norway by over a century, and it is therefore an open question whether the two mentioned gods should still have been seen in a positive light (in which case the inscription is only well-wishing, assuming that the receiver was of like mind to the sender), or whether they had already assimilated into the Christian complex of demons and devils (in which case the inscriber may have had more sinister intent than the first line lets on). Judging from the first line, and from the half-Heathen contents of many other inscriptions found at Bryggen (some from as late as the C14th), I prefer the first option.

Hęill sé þú · ok í hugum góðum;
 2 Þórr þik þiggi,
 Óðinn þik ęigi.

May thou be hale and in good spirits;²⁸⁴
 may Thunder receive thee, may Weden own thee.

3 Óðinn þik ęigi ‘may Weden own thee’] See note to Wsp 23.

²⁸⁴Formulaic, the same line is attested in Hym 41; see note there for parallels.

Christian poetry

Old Saxon Baptismal Vow

Dating: ?
Meter: Prose.

While not an alliterative poem in the slightest, this short text is important for its mention of Saxon Heathen Gods, and as I have no section for Miscellanea, I have here set it first among the Christian poetry, in order to give relevant cultural context. The format of the text is straight-forward and resembles the modern Catholic questions asked to participants during the Sacrament of Confirmation (TODO: reference). The person to be baptised is to respond positively to three denying and three affirming questions; first to forsake the Devil (P1), all “Devil-yields” (i.e. non-Christian rituals, see note to that word) (P2), and all the Devil’s “works and words” and his followers, among which are listed the three Germanic-Saxon gods Thunder, Woden, and Saxneet (P3); and then to profess belief in each member of the Trinity: God the almighty father (P4), Christ God’s son (P5), and the Holy Ghost (P6).

P1 „For·sachistu diobole?“ et respondeat: „ec for·sacho diabole“
“Forsakest thou the Devil?” and he should respond: “I forsake the Devil.”

P2 „end allum diabol-gelde?“ respondeat: „end ec for·sacho allum diabol-
2 gelde.“
“And all devil-yields?” he should respond: “I forsake all devil-yields.”

1 diabol-gelde ‘devil-yields’] An obvious calque of OE TODO, which means TODO.

P3 „End allum dioboles wercum?“ respondeat „end ec for·sacho allum dioboles
2 wercum and wordum, Thuner ende Wóden ende Sax-nôte ende allem them un·holdum the hira ge·nôtas sint.“

“And all the Devil’s works” he should respond: “and I forsake all the works and words of the Devil; Thunder and Weden and Saxneet and all those unhold ones who are their fellows.”

P4 „Ge·lôbistu in Got ala-męhtigun fader?“ „Ec ge·lôbo in Got ala-męhtigun
2 fader.“

“Believest thou in God, the almighty father?” “I believe in God, the almighty father.”

P5 „Ge·lôbistu in Crist Godes suno?“ „Ec ge·lôbo in Crist Gotes suno.“

“Believest thou in Christ, God’s son?” “I believe in Christ, God’s son.”

P6 „Ge·lôbistu in hâlogan gâst?“ „Ec ge·lôbo in hâlogan gâst.“

The Wessobrunner Hymn

Dating: late C8th
Meter: Firnwordslaw

This text can be split into two parts, the “poem” and the “prayer”. Following my principle of including sources rather than excluding (TODO: see Introduction), I here present both.

The first part is a short alliterative poem describing the earliest beginning of the world. The poet describes “the greatest of wonders”, namely that the universe began as a void, where neither earth nor heaven existed. In this void was, however, the almighty God, along with his many spirits (presumably the Heavenly Host or the Angels). While the cosmogony expressed is clearly Jewish-Christian rather than Germanic, the poem does contain two word-pairs also found in Norse Heathen stanzas about the creation of the world (see Notes to ll. 2, 3.), which may point toward a repurposing of older Heathen motifs and expressions in the new, Christian context.

The second part is a thoroughly Christian prayer. The author first thanks God for creating the earth and heaven, this is presumably why the poem was included, and for giving good things to mankind. He then asks for faith, strength and wisdom to “withstand devils”, “reproach degeneracy” and “work [God’s] will”.

I learned among men that greatest of wonders, that earth was not, nor up-heaven,

nor a forest, nor a mountain was not,
 nor any [...]; nor did the sun shine,
 nor the moon give off light, nor the glittering sea.
 Then nothing was there, neither of limit nor infinity (TODO: Translation),— and then was the One Almighty God:
 the mildest of men [= Christ], and there were also many with Him:
 good ghosts, and Holy God.

2 erdo] ero ms.

2 erdo ... úf-himil ‘earth ... up-heaven’] A formulaic merism attested across the Germanic world, expressing the totality of the universe. Cf. especially Webth 21, where the god Woden asks the ettin Webthriðner about the origin of “earth and up-heaven”, and Wsp 3/3, where it is said, about the time before the World existed, that “earth and up-heaven” never existed.

3 paum ... perek ‘forest ... mountain’] The same word-pair is found in Grmn 40, describing the creation of the world from Ymer’s body by the Gods.

O God almighty, thou didst work heaven and earth, and thou didst give men so many good things. Give me in thy mercy the right belief and good will, wisdom and prophecy, and power to withstand devils and to reproach degeneracy and to work thy will.

Encyclopedia (INCOMPLETE!)

NOTE: This encyclopedia is both incomplete and inconsistently formatted. New entries will be added, and old ones be corrected and expanded in the future.

Cultural and religious terms and expressions (C) ape (ON api, OE apa, OS apo, OHG affo, PNWGmc. apô*) In the Old Norse the word seems to mean ‘fool, buffoon’, in the other old languages apparently ‘monkey’, though this sense should be a later development of the former; why would the early Germanic tribes have a word for an animal that they had never encountered?

aught (ON étt, OE æht ‘possession, property’) The Nordic (paternal) clan or family line.

begale (OHG bi-galan) To enchant, bewitch something or someone by singing a galder^C. Transitive of gale^C.

bigh (ON baugr, OE béag, OHG boug) Armlets used as currency during the Migration Period. — The giving of rings and armlets in exchange for loyalty (holdness^C being the word used for a warrior’s loyalty towards his lord, and of a lord’s grace towards his servants) was common across all of Germanic Europe, as seen in the many poetic ruler-kennings of the type “breaker of rings” (e.g. béaga brytta ‘the breaker of bighs’ in Beow ll. 35, 352, 1487). An illustrative example of this is Hild 33–35. This is also connected with the oath-ring, and the famous ring-swords. TODO? reference some literature on this.

blood (ON blót, OE blót, OHG bluoz) A sacrifice or a sacrificial feast, one of the best attested Germanic pagan practices. The animals would be sacrificed by the host, cooked in large kettles and eaten communally. See also blood-house^C.

blood-house (ON blót-hús, OHG bluoz-hús) A heathen temple. Glosses Latin fānum in OHG. See also harrow^C, hove^C, wigh^C.

Doom (ON dómr, OE dóm) Commonly ‘judgement, verdict’ (whence Doomsday, ‘Judgement Day’), in the Norse and Anglo-Saxon poetry often specifically referring to one’s fame or good reputation (that is, how others will judge one’s character and deeds), especially after death. It is clear that this verdict was of utmost importance to the ancient Germanic people. The clearest examples are High 77 (see there): I know one that never dies: the Doom o’er each man dead. and Beow 1384–1389, where Beowulf consols king Rothgar after Grendle’s mother has slain his trusted advisor Asher (Æschere):

*Ne sorga, snotor guma! • Sélre bið éghwém, // þæt hé his fréond wrece, •
þonne hé fela murne. // Ūre éghwylc sceal • ende gebídan // worolde lifes; • wyrce sé þe móte // dómes ér déaþe; • þæt bið drihtguman // unlifgendum • æfter sélest.*

‘Sorrow not, wise man! ’Tis better for each one that he avenge his friend, than that he mourn much. Each one of us shall suffer the end of worldly life—win he who might Doom before death: that is for the warrior, unliving, afterwards the best.’

Other illustrative examples in Beow include 884b–887a: [...] Sigemunde gesprong // æfter déaðdæge · dóm unlytel // syððan wiges heard · wýrm ácwealde // bordes byrde [...] ‘For Syemund^P sprang up after his day of death an unlittle [= great] Doom, since hard in conflict he defeated the Wýrm^C, the herder of the hoard.’ and 953b–955a: [...] þú þé self hafast // dēdum gefremed · þæt þín dóm lyfað // áwa tó aldre [...] ‘Thou hast for thyself by deeds accomplished that thy Doom lives for ever and ever.’

feather-hame (ON fjaðr-hamr, OE fēðer-hama, OS fēðar-, fēðer-hamo) A plumage, which when donned by the wearer lets him fly like, or perhaps become, a bird. One is owned by Frow and used by Lock to fly between the homes. In the Healend feather-hames are donned by angels who fly from heaven to earth. See also hame^C.

fee (ON fé, OE fēoh) Originally ‘cattle’, however also used in a broader sense to refer to one’s mobile wealth. For this cf. particularly High TODO.

fey (ON fēigr, OE fēge, OHG feigi ‘cowardly’) Being doomed or fated to die, with a sense of predestination and inevitability. Its earliest use is on the Rök stone: aft uamuþ stanta runar þar + n uarin fapi fapir aft faikiā sunu Apt Vamóð standa rúnar þár, en Varinn fáði, faðir aft feigjan sonu ‘After Woemood (Vamóðr) stand these runes^C, but Warren (Varinn) painted, the father after the fey son.’ It was believed that one’s TODO. See PCRN HS II:35, p. 928 ff. (TODO) feyness (ON fēigð) The state of being fey^C.

five days (ON fimm dagar) That the old Scandinavian week was five days long is well attested. According to the GolL there were six weeks in a month, and the expression five days is used as the equivalent of week in High 51 and 74, in the second of which it is contrasted with month. Related to this is the legal term fifth (ON fimmt, OSw. femt), a meeting or gathering set to be held at a five-day notice. See fimt in CV, Love et al. (2020) for further discussion.

galder (ON galdr, OE gealdor, OHG galdar) A magical spell or song. See the Merseburg charms (TODO?) for examples. See also gale^C.

gale (ON gala, OE galan, OHG galan) To sing galders^C.

gand (ON gandr, Latin gandus) A witch’s familiar, a spirit sent out to do her bidding. See PCRN HS I:17, p. 361 and II:26, p. 656. TODO gid (ON goði, OE Gydda masc. given name) A heathen priest or master of ceremonies.

gidden (ON gyðja, OE gyden ‘goddess’) The womanly equivalent of gid^C.

good of meat (ON matar góðr) An old expression, appearing both in High 39 and several Viking Age Runic inscriptions, viz. Sm 39: mildan orða · ok matar góðan ‘mild of words and good of meat’, U 805: bónða góðan matar ‘a farmer good of meat’, U 703: mandr matar góðr · auk máls risinn ‘a man good of meat and proud in speechTM’; cf. also U 739: hann var mildr matar · auk máls risinn ‘he was mild of meat and proud in speech’. — Antonyms are matar illr ‘evil of meat’ and meat-nothing^C.

guest (ON gestr, OE giest, OS gast, OHG gast, Got. gasts, PGmc. gastiz) The Old Germanic peoples placed great value on hospitality.

hame (ON hamr) A skin, shape. Individuals can through magic “shift hames” (ON skipta hpmum), and leave their human hames behind, instead entering into the shapes of wolves, bears, birds. During this process the original hame would be sleeping in a vulnerable state, as described in Wals ch. TODO-NUMBER: TODO-QUOTATION. See also feather-hame^C, town-riders^C, evening-riders^C.

harrow (ON høgrgr, OE bearg, PNWGmc. harugar*) A cairn constructed for ritual purposes. Hdl 10 describes one: “A harrow^C he made for me, loaded with stones; now that stone-pile is become into glass. He reddened [it] in fresh blood of oxen; Oughter^P ever trusted on the Ossens^G.” See also wigh^C.

hold (ON hollr, OE hold, OS hold, OHG hold) ‘Favourable, loyal, gracious’, often of a ruler towards his subject (in the sense of ‘gracious, benevolent’) or vice-versa (in the sense of ‘loyal, devoted’). Mirroring these earthly relationships, it is often used to refer to divine grace, both of the Christian God—thus in the Ecclesiastical Laws of King Cnut ALIE I (p. 372): þam byþ witod-líce God hold, þe bið his bláforde rihtlíce hold ‘Indeed God is hold towards him who is rightly hold to his lord’—but in the oldest Scandinavian material likewise of the Heathen gods. Thus Lock 4 (e.): holl regin ‘hold Reins^G, and Ord 10 (e.):

Svá hjalpi þér · hollar véttir,

‘So help thee hold wights^C; Frie^P and Frow^P, and more gods [...]’.

This word is common in old Scandinavian oath formulæ, e.g. in the elder redaction of the West-Geatish Law: Svá sé mér goð holl ‘So may the Gods(!) be hold towards me,’ in medieval Norwegian laws (NgL II[197,397]) and Grey-Goose (TODO: cite): Guð sé mér hollr ef ek satt segi, gramr ef ek lýg ‘God be hold towards me if I speak truly, wroth if I lie,’ in Grey-Goose (TODO) also: Sé guð hollr þeim er heldr griðum, en gramr þeim er grið rýfr ‘God be hold towards him who keeps the truce, but wroth against him who breaks the truce’. I refer to Löffler (1895) for further discussion on these formulæ.

holdness (ON hylli, OE hyldu, OHG huldí) Abstract noun formed to hold^C, meaning ‘favour, loyalty, grace,’ with the same semantics as the adjective.

Notably, this word appears three times in connection with the grace of gods in the poetry, namely in Grmn 43, where (according to my interpretation) the preparer of food at the blout is said to earn the “holdness of Woulder^P and of all the gods;” and Grmn 53 where the disgraced king Garfrith is said to have been bereft of the support gengi of Weden and all the Oneharriers, and of “Weden’s holdness” (Óðins hylli). “Weden’s holdness” is also mentioned in a stanza by Hallfred (edited as Hfr Lv 7 by Diana Whaley in SkP V), who laments that: “The whole race of man has wrought songs to win the holdness of Weden; I recall the fully rewarded works of our kinsmen/ancestors.”

From the semantics of this word the Germanic view on heavenly grace is clear: the Gods are hold towards those who do good works, which include swearing true oaths, faithfully observing truces, partaking in the blood, following rules of hospitality, and composing poetry—and gram^C ‘wroth’ towards those who do the opposite.

Home (ON heimr, OE hām, PNWGmc. haimar*) In the Norse often referring to a realm in the cosmology (Wsp 2: “I remember nine Homes”, Webth TODO: “From the runes of the Ettins^G and of all the gods I can speak truly, for I have come into each Home”). Thus Ettinham^L is the ‘Home/realm of the ettins’. When used alone the term simply means ‘the world (that we inhabit)’. See also nine Homes^L, Thrithham^L.

leat (ON blaut) Sacrificial blood (that is, taken from the animal), originally certainly referring to its use in auguries, as seen by the root.

leed (ON ljóð, OE léod) A magical chant or incantation, as seen by Higb 153 synonymous with galder^C. See also gale^C, begale^C.

manwit (ON man-vit) Practical/common sense and wisdom, situational awareness.

many-cunning (ON ffǫl-kunnigr) i.e. ‘skilled with sorcery’.

meat-nothing (ON mat-niðingr) One who is a nothing^C with food, i.e. one who does not properly furnish his guest^C. See good of meat^C.

nithe (ON níð, OE nīþ, OHG níd) Originally ‘hatred, enmity’. In the Norse the sense is something like ‘shame’, which was thought to be not just social, but rather almost physical. Thus a curser could “turn nithe” (snýja níð against his enemy and cause him great misfortune; a poet would “compose nithe” (yrkja níð) through singing slanderous verses, which likewise had a supernatural adverse effect on their subject. See also nothing^C.

nothing (ON niðingr, OE nīþing) One afflicted with nithe^C; a villain. In the Norse a sort of legal term; a nothing could not swear oaths or bear witness.

orlay (ON ørlog, OE orlæg) One’s predetermined fate, destiny, purpose as decreed by the Norns^G.

rest (ON rqst) The distance between two rest-stops, a geographical mile (about 1850 metres). See CV: rqst.

- [illegible]

Guther could not be apprehended or punished for his crime while in it. — In OE the word means ‘pagan idol’. It is not immediately clear which meaning is the original one, but in the present edition the Norse sense has been adopted, since the Anglo-Saxon sources are all of a Christian nature. The Beow name Wighstone (Wib- or Wēohstān) in any case suggests it is the Norse meaning, since ‘idol-stone’ makes little sense.

wode (ON óðr, OE wód, PNWGmc. wódur*) Heener^P’s gift to men, though the name may suggest it be from Weden^P. The word has several related meanings: ‘mind, (poetic) inspiration, rage’. See also Woderearer^P.

yin- (ON ginn-) A rare augmentative prefix. TODO.

yin-holy (ON ginn-heilagr) High holy, sacrosanct. Used of the Gods in the formula ginn-heilög goð ‘yin-holy Gods’.

- Heener (ON Hónir, PNWGmc. Hónijar ‘the little swan(?)’) An obscure god. Rydberg (1886)[552] has convincingly argued that he is connected with the stork, connecting his name with the Greek κύκνος ‘swan’ and Sanskrit śakuna ‘bird of omen’, and noting that his epithets langi fótr ‘long foot’ and aurkonungr ‘mud-king’ (both found in Scol 22) accurately describe the stork. He gives wode^C TODO.

As foreshadowed in Beow 1017–9, 1180–90, he betrays the sons of Rothgar^P, his cousins Rethrich and Rothmund^P, in order to take the throne for himself. In the later Icelandic tradition this has been forgotten, and he is consistently portrayed as a heroic king.
- Rothgar (ON Hróarr, OE Hrǫpgár, PNWGmc. Hrópi-gairar*) A king of the Shieldings^G (see family tree), one of the main characters in Beow.
- Shede (ON Skadī, OE Scede(?), PGmc. Skadī*) A female figure, possibly the namesake of Shedeny^L and the Shedelands^L, in which case she was in an early period closely associated with, and perhaps thought to guard, the Scandinavian (or properly Scandinavian, see Shedeny) peninsula. - Woulder (ON Ullr, Wuldor*, PNWGMc. Wulþuz*) A rather obscure god. He is mentioned in connection with oath-rings (TODO) and the setting of ritual fires (Grmn TODO). These obscure references are likely related to the interesting finds at Lilla Ullevi (‘the small wigh^C of Woulder’) in Upland, Sweden, consisting of several dozen fire striker-shaped iron amulet rings dating to 660–780 (for a detailed description see (af Edholm, 2009)).

- Danes (ON danir, OE dene, PNWGMc. danír*) A tribe in eastern modern-day Denmark and southern Sweden. - Nears (ON níarar -njárar) A Swedish tribe, only mentioned in Wayl, where it is ruled by king Nithad^P. The name and location may allow us to connect them with the Swedish province of Närke, cf. Old Swedish: Nerikiar ‘inhabitants of Närke’, Nerisker ‘belonging to Närke; Nearish’, in which case the Old Swedish stem nær- (with unclear vowel length, though it is probably long) would be a reduced form of níar-, njár-.
