Germanic alliterative poetry

Historical significance

The historical-literary significance of the Old Germanic poetry is twofold. On the one hand it forms the oldest extensive monuments in its respective languages, and indeed the earliest indigenous Germanic literature (the Gothic being wholly derivative and translational). It lays the ground for the Nibelungenlied and Chaucer, who in turn precede such famous writers as Shakespeare and Wagner. It forms the first and most important source of our knowledge about the ancient folk-life of Northern Europe.

On the other hand it is by no means an innovative or newly created genre. Already, and perhaps especially, in our oldest sources the language is rich with expressions and images, many of great antiquity: "sea-stallions" sail across the ocean; the sun is drawn across Heaven in her chariot; feasts are held in great chiefly halls. These motifs are mirrored by Homer and the Rigveda, and must go back as far as the Bronze Age.

The language likewise overflows with archaic poetic synonyms. Indo-European words otherwise extinct in all Germanic languages find their last refuge in the alliterative poetry. Such are the Old English eoh, Old Norse jór, corresponding to the Sanskrit áśva, Latin equus, all meaning ‘god’; Old Norse týr ‘god’, corresponding to Sanskrit dēvá, Latin deus, all meaning ‘god’; Old English and Old Norse fold ‘earth, land’, corresponding to Sanskrit prthivī ‘id.’ The fact that many of these relate to the cult shows that the Germanic religion was not as innovative as is commonly supposed.

The organizing poetic principle of alliteration must also have been in effect for some time. Even the earliest scalds and scops have dozens of synonyms for words like man, sword, horse, and hall. Needless to say, many of them—like jór above—are very old, and only found in poetry.

Meter(s)

All of the oldest Germanic poetry has as its primary structural elements stress and alliteration. The count of syllables is less important, and end-rhyme is only used as a sporadic flourish. The following outline is not meant to be exhaustive.

Stress

When scanning alliterative meter each syllable is generally classed as having either primary stress (p), secondary stress (s), or no stress (x). Primary stress is reserved for the root syllable in a word, which is not always the same as the first syllable. Compare the English word beginning, where the stress pattern is xPx; the primary stress falls on the syllable ginn-. Secondary stress falls on the second element in a compound word.

Not all words have the same stress; the general rule is that nouns and adjectives have stronger stress than verbs, which in turn have stronger stress than prepositions and pronouns. Where exceptions occur this coincides with semantic stress, e.g. in a statement like “It was you!”

Alliteration

Alliteration is the resonance between two stressed syllables beginning with the same sound, e.g. sand with receive, or great with begin. The following additional rules apply for all Germanic alliterative poetry:

1. Any vowel or diphthong can alliterate with any other vowel or diphthong;
2. s and the clusters sk, sp and st are counted as four distinct sounds.

Further, in West Germanic poetry,

- 3 g and j are treated as the same sound

In the present edition alliterating sounds are marked with red font.

Lines

Most alliterative poetry is written in the same common meter, which in Old Icelandic poetics gets the name fornyrðislag ‘measure of ancient words’. The smallest metrical division is the position, a concept related but not identical to the syllable. For instance, two short syllables (that is, one where a short vowel is followed by a single consonant) can resolve into a single position.

Four positions—two stressed, two unstressed—make up the normal half-line or verse. Two half-lines separated by a short break or cæsura (here represented by the interpunct “.”) form a couplet or long-line. The first half-line (or a-verse) may have either one or two alliterations on the stressed positions, with preference for the first position over the second. The second half-line (or b-verse) must always have an alliteration on its first stressed position; never on its second.

In the present edition each long-line is printed on a new line. This is already standard for the publication of West Germanic poetry, whereas many editions of Scandinavian poetry print each half-line.

Fits and stanzas

Bigger structures are fits and stanzas. The former are found in the Old Saxon and English traditions, the latter only in the Scandinavian.

A fit is a section or canto in a longer epic poem. It does not have a fixed length, but is generally around 70–85 lines long. Thus the 3182-line Beow is divided into 44 fits (for an average of 72 lines per fit); the surviving 5983 lines of Healend are divided into 71 (for an average of 84 lines per fit). It is probably not a coincidence that the length of the fit is similar to the length of shorter legendary poems like Guth I or Hild. In Healend a new fit can begin in the cæsura; this does not happen in Beow.

In Scandinavian poetry a stanza is a group of long-lines, typically (but far from always) four. The regularity of stanza-length varies from poem to poem.

Linguistic criteria Archeological evidence Comparison with known Christian texts (Sólarljóð, Hugsvinnsímál) Snorri thought they were old Saxo had access to them Many of them clearly describe non-Icelandic surroundings Especially Hávamál is clearly Norwegian

The present corpus

The scope of the present corpus is large; when complete it will contain most alliterative poetry extant in Old Germanic languages. The poetry is grouped into the following categories:

1. Norse Mythic poetry, i.e., that which directly treats the Germanic mythology. This category is exclusively Norse for the simple reason that no West Germanic or Gothic mythic narrative poetry survive.

2. Heroic poetry of the Codex Regius. Since the heroic portion of the Codex Regius forms a coherent text, it is edited in full.
3. Other Norse Heroic poetry from sources other than the Codex Regius.
4. West Germanic Heroic Poetry in Old English and Old High German.
5. Galders, i.e., alliterative spells and charms, both from runic inscriptions and latinate manuscripts.
6. Poetry on Christian subjects. This category includes explicitly Christian poems where the new religion or its stories are at the core of the work (Christian heroic poems depicting native legends, like Beow and Hild, are not included here).
7. Runic poetry, apart from that already edited under Galders above.

Exclusions

The (non-mythological) Norse alliterative poetry found in the saws of Icelanders and of ancient ages (forn-aldar-sögur) is excluded. It has already been admirably rendered in the SkP series. It would also require a somewhat different structure in terms of how it is rendered; the underlying poetry is often impossible to take out of its prose context, and in some cases it is questionable whether it ever existed on its own, or whether it was simply composed on by the prose author. I think it would be more conscientious to edit the whole saws as prosimetra; this falls outside of the scope of the present edition, but I am not adverse to such an undertaking in the future.

Manuscripts

Norse Eddic poetry

The by far most important manuscript is GKS 2365 4to, here R. It dates to the 1270s and has 45 surviving foll., containing TODO poems. The poems can be split into two groups; the first (on foll. 1–20) dealing mostly with mythology, the second (on foll. 20–45) with heroic legend. Scribal characteristics show that these two parts have been copied from separate source manuscripts.

R is not a mere anthology of poems, but shows substantial editorial input as well. Short prose sections tie a group of the mythological poems together into a loose narrative, though it is clear from their style and language that they have originally been separate works. When it comes to the heroic poems long prose segments occur both within and between them, creating a saw†-like prosimetrical form where the prose sometimes comes to dominate the poetry. A manuscript closely related to the heroic half of R has clearly served as the main source for large swathes of the younger WalsS.

A large gap famously occurs in the heroic half; between foll. 32 and 33 one quire has gone missing. Its contents are mostly unknown, but it would have included the end of Syed and the beginning of the Fragmentary Lay of Siward (TODO). Some of the stanzas probably contained in it may be restored from the WalsS, and these are edited in Fragments from the Saw of the Walsings below. For further literature on R see TODO.

Second in importance stands is AM 748 I a 4to, here A. It dates to the C14th and is but a fragment, consisting of just 6 foll. It contains only poems found in the mythological part of R, but in a different order from that ms., nor is there any trace of a frame narrative. R and A do share a fair bit of prose, a fact which suggests that both stem from a common manuscript archetype, rather than being independent witnesses of oral tradition.

On the first two foll. are contained the final stanzas of Hbl (1r–v), the complete Bldr (1v–2r), and the first stanzas of Shir (2r–v). After this there is a gap; the next four foll. contain the second half of Webth (3r–v), the complete Grim (3v–5v) and Hyme (5v–6v), and the beginning of the prose introduction to Wayl (6v). A is the only medieval attestation of Bldr, and the poems shared with R are clearly not directly copied thence. This makes it very valuable for textual criticism. For further literature on A see TODO.

We find quotations from several Eddic poems in Yilv and Scold, the first two sections of Snorre's Edda. Snorre reproduces stanzas from (TODO) Wsp, Webth, and Grim in Yilv; Grot is attested in full in Scold. Apart from these, Snorre also reproduces a few otherwise unknown stanzas in Eddic meters, which are edited below under Eddic fragments from Snorre's Edda. The four main mss. for the Prose Edda are:

1. Codex Regius of the Prose Edda S (GKS 2367 4to; 1300–1350)
2. Codex Trajectinus T (Traj 1374; a c. 1595 paper copy of a ms. closely related to S.)
3. Codex Wormianus W (AM 242 fol.; 1340–70)
4. Codex Upsaliensis U (DG 11; 1300–25)

When all four mss. agree on a reading the abbreviation G is used synonymously with STWU. For discussion on their internal stemmatics and origins I refer to Haukur Þorgeirsson (2017).

A few other Eddic-style poems from various sources are also included in the present edition. The fragmentary Rígh is found at the end of W. TODO (Svipdagsmál and Growe) are found only in post-reformation Icelandic paper mss., namely TODO. While I have not consulted such paper mss. for poems attested in medieval mss., I have had to rely on them for these poems. About these poems it must be said that their late attestation does not necessarily prove them to be late compositions. A good proof of this is Bldr, which is first attested in the fragmentary A, and then (with some interpolated stanzas) in much later paper mss. We cannot exclude that some of these poems would have existed in other lost medieval mss., perhaps even on the now-lost pages of R or A.

Old English poetry

The edited Old English poetry primarily derives from a few manuscripts. Particularly important are the Exeter Book and Lacning.

Old Saxon and High German poetry

There are no collections of alliterative poetry in these languages; instead the manuscript situation will be discussed in the Introduction to each individual text.

The present edition

The present edition is divided into two equally large parts, presented side by side. Each stanza or group of verse lines is presented first in the original Old Germanic language, and then in English translation.

The Old Germanic text

In the present edition are found texts in four Old Germanic languages: Old Norse, Old English, Old Saxon, and Old High German. All texts have been normalized according to my own standardised orthography for the respective languages. The orthographies are all designed to follow three core principles:

1. A faithfulness to the spoken language at the time when the texts were written, and the distinctions demonstrably found therein.
2. A respect for the etymological origin of words, and their distinctions.
3. A striving for a uniform orthography across the various languages, so that the same etymological sound should be written with the same character.

These choices often stand in conflict with the orthography of the original manuscripts and with most earlier philological tradition, whence there is some reason to justify them. My goal is to render the texts themselves in a manner that gives as much philological information to the reader as possible—not to present a facsimile edition for students of paleography. This follows the philological methods used for printing e.g. the RV, which is generally printed in an entirely scholarly latinized orthography, not the original devanagari. Regardless, such important traits of the original manuscript tradition as the long ſ, arbitrary punctuation, arbitrary spelling, and lack of line breaks, are seldom reproduced in modern editions of Old Germanic poetry.

General orthographic conventions

The following orthographic conventions are followed for all Old Germanic languages:

1. The voiceless dental fricative is always written with the letter þ, never th.
2. Long vowels are marked with the acute accent, never the macron or circumflex, excepting
3. those which have their origin in earlier diphthongs, which are written with the circumflex.
4. In compounds where the first element has primary stress the elements are separated with a dash,
5. but where the first element is a preposition they are separated with an interpunct.

Below follow specifications for each specific language.

Normalization of Old Norse

My Old Norse orthography is inspired by Finnur Jónsson (1932) in that it strives for a more archaic form than that of the surviving mss.; a form that instead represents the poetry as it may (in many cases, must) originally have looked. For this reason, it often has more in common with the proposed orthography of the First Grammatical Treatise than with the standard Old Icelandic orthography seen in most editions. The following list describes the differences from the standard Old Icelandic orthography:

1. I distinguish short e (from etymological short e) and short ɛ (from etymological short a + i-umlaut).
2. I distinguish long á and ǫ, as done by the First Grammatical Treatise.
3. I use ó and é rather than the traditional œ and æ, to represent the vowels descended from Proto-Norse ō and ā after i-umlaut (cf. the short ø, ɛ < o, a + i-umlaut).
4. I distinguish long nasal vowels ā, ē, ī, ō, ū from long oral á, é, í, ó, ú, as done in the First Grammatical Treatise.
5. I restore the old s—which in modern Scandinavian and even in most Old Norse manuscripts has become r, but which is found consistently in old manuscripts such as AM 237 a fol (c. 1150), and fossilized in forms like þaz (i.e. þat's) in R—in the words es ‘which, that, where, when’, and in inflections of vesa (later vera) such as es ‘is’ (3rd sg. pres. ind.) and vas (3rd sg. pret. ind.). The following forms retain the r, as it is there the result of Verner’s law, and not of this (much younger) sound change: the pl. pres. ind. (erum etc.), the pl. pret. ind. (vórum etc.), and the pl. pret. subj. (vérim etc.)
6. When metrically benefactor, I contract ek ‘I’, eru ‘are’, and es ‘which; is’ to ’k, ’ru and ’s, respectively.
7. I use Finnur Jónsson (1932)’s way of distinguishing between the relative particle es and the verb es: the first is appended to the previous word with only an apostrophe (e.g. hann’s ‘he who’), while the second is separated by a space (e.g. hann s ‘he is’).

Normalization of Old Swedish and Danish

I employ the same conventions as those described for Old Norse above, including the marking of u-mutated a > ɔ (that this was indeed found in the Eastern Nordic dialects is most clearly seen by the third-person personal pronoun, which shows u-mutation in such forms as Swedish bonom ‘him’ < hōnum, bon ‘she’ < hōn).

According to rule 3 in the general orthographic conventions above, I distinguish between ø (< ō) and ô (< au, ey); é (< ē) and ê (< ei).

Where unstressed vowels have been reduced into an schwa-like sound spelled e, this is written with ɛ.

Normalization of Old English

I spell fronted or brightened etymological a and á with æ and é, for instance in dæg ‘day’ (< **dagar*) and réd ‘advice, counsel’ (< rádar). These are contrasted with ē and ǣ, which represent i-mutated a and á, for instance in ellen ‘zeal, courage’ (< **aljanq*).

An assimilated n is marked with an overpoint, like in rule 3 of Old Norse above.

Normalization of Old Saxon

Normalization of Old High German

The English translation

There is now a very large number of translations of the most popular alliterative poetic texts, namely Beow and the Poetic Edda. These generally fall into two camps:

1. poetic translations, which distort the precise meaning of the text for the sake of meter, often quite radically; and
2. prose translations, which nowise preserve the style or feeling of the original.

Almost all translations, of both types, also tend toward the following inadequacies: obscuring or glossing over difficult technical and cultural terminology; rendering identically repeated phrases and words (formulae) differently at various places; and simplifying or rewriting kennings and other poetic expressions. Even worse this is often done with little in the way of notes or commentary, to a point where the reader is sometimes left entirely oblivious to the sense of the original text.

What sets my translation apart from previous English translations is that it aims to follow the style and register of the original text, without sacrificing the literal sense of the words. This unfortunately means that literality and consistency at times must sometimes come at the cost of fluid idiomatic English, but it has the advantage of giving the reader an image of not just what the original text actually says, but how it says it. The reader should keep in mind that he is in a very foreign land, that he is reading words ancient and long forgotten—not the New York Times.

Maybe this is a pointless effort? One could argue that a translation always is a betrayal, and that those truly interested in the exact meaning of every word in the original text should study just the original (in the original language). While I do agree that the sufficiently interested reader should study the original texts in the languages in which they were written (something made much easier by the present edition with its notes and parallel edition), it is still a “hard ask” for those readers who are not philologically inclined, but instead students and scholars of history, comparative mythology and religion, anthropology, or literature; those who, for whatever reason, are interested in exploring the oldest poetic heritage of the Germanic peoples of northern Europe.

English proper nouns

Perhaps the single most idiosyncratic part of the present translation will be its handling of proper nouns. I have opted to render all cultural and religious terms, names of places, heroes, gods, and other entities by their English cognates (thus Thunder for Old Norse Þórr) and where such do not exist, their philologically expected English (Anglish) forms (e.g. wallow for Old Norse völva).

There are two reasons for this. The first is ideological. I believe that the Old Germanic myths and poems, their gods and heroes, are a shared heritage of Northern Europe. When you translate texts from across Germany, England and Scandinavia you quickly come to notice how similar the diction is, how many names reappear. The Scandinavian Völundr is the same character as the English Wélund; likewise Norse Óðinn is the same as English Wóden. These are ultimately mere distinctions in pronunciation.

The second is aesthetic. Commonly accepted forms like Odin and Thor are debased. They do not even represent the Old Norse pronunciation as accurately as possible within the constraints of English orthography (for instance, Odin would be better anglicized as Othin). Many are also difficult for English speakers to pronounce, or lead to absurd confusions. I shudder at hearing the word ésir pronounced /aɪ'sɪːr/; even worse is when Ós-garðr becomes “ass-guard”.

Heathen Mythic Poetry

The Spae of the Wallow

(Völuspó)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C10th (0.865)–early C11th (0.121)

Meter: Ancient-words-law

The Spae of the Wallow is the most comprehensive mythological text surviving from Heathen times.

The poem is attested in full in two independent recensions. The first is R, where it is the first poem, found on folios 1r–3r. The second is H, where it is found at 20r–21r in the middle of a large collection of saws and Catholics works. Many verses are also cited in Yilv, large parts of which are directly based on the poem. Other verses are not attested directly, but are instead paraphrased. The paraphrases may still have critical value (so e.g. st. 19, where sal in the paraphrase corroborates H). For its constituent manuscripts see the General Introduction.

As seen from the title, the poem is a spae† (spó ‘prophecy’) in the form of a monologue spoken by a wallow† (vǫlva ‘seeress, sibyl, prophetess’), summoned by Woden in order to relate mythological knowledge. The motif of Woden journeying to ask beings (whether ettins or wallows) is also seen in other sources. Closest is Bldr, wherein Woden summons a wallow out of her grave in Hell† in order to understand why the god Balder† is having ominous nightmares. There is also Webth, wherein Woden challenges the wise ettin Webthrithner† to a wisdom contest and defeats him. These journeys are also alluded to in Hbl 43–46.

In its being a mythic catalogue it also resembles the latter part of Hgh, Grim, Syed and Allw, though it differs from them in a key way: it gives a (mostly?) complete chronological overview of the whole mythic timeline, from the creation to the end and rebirth of the world. That is not to say that the events are clearly described; they are related in a highly allusive fashion—certainly presupposing that the audience already be familiar with them. There may also be gaps and later inserts that make the poem more difficult.

The poem begins with a bid for silence (1), and the wallow recalling her earliest memories (2). She then recounts the ordering of the world by the gods (3–6) and the golden age of peace and plenty (7–8), which is, however, interrupted by the intrusion of three unidentified ettin-maidens (8, and see note there). After this follow two verses about the shaping of the dwarfs (9–10), and then several originally separate dwarf-tallies (11–15), which are without doubt later inserts. Returning to the main narrative thread is described the creation and endowment of the first man and woman (16–17), Ugdrassle’s Ash (18), and the three norns† living under it (19).

This is where the two full recensions of the poem diverge. Because of its older age and larger count of verses I have here followed the order of R: the wallow recalls how a woman named Goldwey was sacrificed and reborn three times (20), and how she, under the name Heath, practiced sorcery and witchcraft (21). She then recalls the first war in the world, between the Eese and Wanes (22–23), and alludes to the slaying of the smith, who according to Yilv 42 was promised Frow† and the sun and moon in exchange for building the wall of Osyard (24–25). This is followed by a cryptic verse describing Homedal’s hidden silence or hearing (26).

In H the structure is quite different. After the description of the norns (19), the Eese go to decide what action to take regarding the promising of Frow to the ettin (my 24–25), and Homedal’s hearing is described (26). Then follows the two verses about the old hag in Ironwood who raises the wolves that will swallow the sun and moon (40–41). After this come verses 20–23 in the same order as R (see above).

To illustrate the differences between mss., and which verses are attested in which, I have prepared the following table showing the order of stanzas by manuscript, compared to the present edition. As several stanzas in G are quoted on their own, with little relation to the order of the original poem, they are simply marked with plus signs. When stanzas are quoted in sequence, they are preceded by an alphabetically incrementing letter denoting which sequence they belong to. When a stanza found in a ms. differs majorly from the pres. ed. (e.g. st. 10 where G omits the first two half-lines), it is marked with a star. The stanzas beginning with Þá gingu regin öll ‘Then went the Reins all’ are represented by the half-line immediately following.

1 hēlgar | om. R

2 mēiri ok minni ‘greater and lesser’ | The noun being modified is ambiguous. It may either be (a) ‘greater and lesser holy kindreds’, in which case it may be equivalent to the phrase Eese and Elves† (both earthly and heavenly supernatural beings; see Encyclopedia for occurrences) or (b) ‘greater and lesser lads of Homedal [MEN]’. (b) is probably to be preferred for reasons of syntax, but should not most likely be seen as referring to varying social classes; it seems unlikely that there would be slaves present in the audience of a poem like this. In any case, the wallow seems to be asking all intelligent beings present for silence, with the expression being a merism of the type ‘gods and men’; see West (2007)[99-100].

3 iðiðjur | so RH. R has previously been as read iðiði, but this was disproven by an x-ray scan undertaken by Stefan Karlsson (1979).

1 þar's Ymir byggði 'where Yimer dwelled' | þat's ekki vas 'that when nothing was' G 4 hværgi 'nowhere' | ekki 'not' H

3 jörð ... né upp-himinn 'Earth ... nor Up-heaven' | A well-attested formulaic cosmological word-pair found in all four Old Germanic languages with poetic traditions (ON, OE, OS, OHG), especially in concern the creation and destruction of the world. See Earth and Upheaven†.

4 gap vas ginnunga 'there was the Gap of Ginnings' | See Index for suggested etymology.

<sup>4</sup>A more extensive creation narrative is found in Ylfr 4–5, according to which the world first consisted of two extremities: the frozen Nivelham in the north and scorching Muspellsham in the south. From Nivelham the freezing venom-rivers called the Ilewaves† ran until they froze to ice, while burning lava flowed from Muspellsham. The ice and lava met in the Gap of Ginnings, “which was as calm as windless air”, and there combined to form the first being, Yimer†, who was the ancestor of the ettins.

 they who shaped the renowned Middenyard†.
 Sun shone from the south on the stones of the hall;
 then was the ground grown with green leek.

1 Burs synir 'the Sons of Byre' | In Ylfr 6 identified as Weden, Will and Wigh, who sacrificed Yimer and shaped the cosmos out of his body. For this see also Webb 20–21 and Grim 41–42.

4 grǫnum lauki 'green leek' | A sign of the golden age, since the leek was believed to be the noblest plant and had important cultural significance. This is seen from Guth II 2, where Siward†'s superiority to the Yivickings† is compared to a stag among wild beasts, gold among silver, and a green leek in grass. The leek was valued in folk magic, as seen already on gold bracteates from the C5th and C6th, where it appears as a charm word in the form 𐌺𐌹𐌺𐌿𐌸 laukar, in one inscription paired with 𐌺𐌹𐌺 lina 'linen'. Classical Norse attestations of magic use include Syed 7, where the leek is thrown into mead against poison; and the WalsTh, where a horse penis is said to be lini gǫddr • en laukum studdr 'endowed with linen and supported by leeks' in a poetic line. The leek was particularly associated with women and domestic life, as seen by its pairing with “linen”. Kennings for women frequently have the leek as a determinant (TODO: Meissner reference?), and Anon Sveinfl 1 (SkP I TODO.) sarcastically states that a battle was not sem manni • męr lauk eða ęl bęri 'as if a maiden brought a man leek or ale'.

1 sinni Måna ‘Moon’s companion’ | At times translated as ‘its moon’. This cannot be correct, as máni ‘moon’ is masculine, while sinni, dative singular of sinn ‘its (reflexive)’ is feminine.

<sup>5</sup>The sun heaved herself up over the horizon and rose for the first time.

 Moon knew not what sort of might he owned.

4 stjörnur ... óttu | In G this line follows 5, so that the order is sun, moon, stars.

5 Måni ... átti ‘Moon ... owned’ | The moon was believed to have supernatural powers; see note to High TODO (Mána skal heiptum kveða).

1–2 Þá ... gétusk ‘Then ... of this.’ | A formulaic expression for the convening of the Thing of the Gods†, identically repeated below in sts. 9/1–2, 22/1–2, and 24/1–2. Cf. also the three lines shared between Bldr 1/1–3 and Thrim 14/1–3, which follow the structure of the present stanza(s) very closely: Senn vöru ésir · allir á þingi // ok ósynjur · allar á máli, // ok umb þat reðu · rikir tívar: ‘Soon were the Eese† all at the Thing†, // and the Ossens† all at speech, // and of this counseled the mighty Tews†:’. In all five occurrences other than the present stanza (three from Wsp, the present poem, one from Bldr, one from Thrim), the demonstrative pronoun þat ‘this’ clearly refers to the matter at hand, expressed with the verb in the subjunctive case (e.g. in Thrim 14/3–4: ok umb þat reðu · rikir tívar: // hvé þeir Hlórriða · bamar of sótti? ‘and of this counseled the mighty Tews†: How they Lorde’s (= Thunder’s) hammer would find?’). Following this pattern we would surely expect to find two lines after umb þat gétusk ‘took counsel of this’ and before nött ‘night’ in the present stanza, and it seems most likely to presume that they have been lost in transmission.

3–5 Nóttr ... tēlja ‘To night ... tally’ | Cf. Webth 23, where it is said that the sun and moon turn round in heaven ǥldum at ár-tali ‘for the year-tally of mankind’, and 25, where it is said that the Reins created the moon-phases for the same purpose.

2 þęir’s ... hę-timbruðu ‘they who ... timbered on high’ | Two formulæ. hęrg ok hof ‘harrow and hove’, a merism, i.e. ritual structures made of stone and wood. Cf. Webth 38 and HHarw TODO, as well as in Norwegian Christian laws that impose ‘the burning of hoves and the breaking of harrows’ (brenna hof ok brjóta hęrga). — hę-timbra ‘high-timber, timber on high’ is a rare compound and only occurs twice in the ON corpus: in the present stanza and Grim 16 where it describes a harrow ruled by Nearth. — It is rather interesting that the Gods themselves build ritual structures.

They played Tables† in the yards; merry were they;
 for them was nothing golden wanting—until there came three maidens of Thurses†, very uncanny, from Ettinham†.

1–4 ALL | The whole stanza is paraphrased in Yilv ch. 14:

Ok því nęst smiðuðu þęir málrn ok stein ok trę ok svá gnóg-liga þann málrn, er gull heitir, at ęll bús-gogn ok ęll reiði-gogn hęfðu þęir af gulli, ok er sú ęld kęlluð gull-aldr, áðr en spilltist af til-kvámu kvinnanna; þęr kómu ór Jętun-beimum.

‘And after this they smithed ore and stone and wood, and so abundantly [did they smith] that ore which is called gold, that all their house tools and riding tools were golden. And that age is called the golden age, before it was spoiled by the arrival of the women; they came from Ettinham.’

after which he describes the creation of the dwarfs (see next stanza)

2 vas þęim vęttu-gis · vant ór gulli ‘for them was nothing golden wanting’ | Indeed even the bricks they played with were of gold. See st. 59.

3 þrjár ... þursa meýjar ‘three maidens of Thurses’ | These three maidens are never mentioned again (unless they are taken to be the three norns in st. 19, but they would then be introduced twice). It is possible that an additional stanza giving further information about them has been lost. If it originally existed, it was already absent from the version employed by the author of Yilv, who gives no new information.

4 ám-átkar ‘uncanny’ | The word ám-áttigr has a clear association with supernatural beings; trolls and ettins. It occurs in four other places in R. In Grim 11, Shir 10 and HHarw 17 it modifies jötunn ‘ettin’ in a Leeds-meter c-line. In HHarw 14 it is used by the daughter of an ettin to refer to a human hero.

4 ór brimi ... lęggjum ‘out of the bloody ... legs’ | I think that the poem simply telling of “the bloody surf” and “the blue-black legs” fits better with its general allusive style, but the resulting composite reading may be somewhat controversial.

According to Yilv 14 the dwarfs first originated as maggots in the corpse of Yimer, whose bones are described in Grim TODO and Weibh TODO as being used to make rocks. Dwarfs dwell in the rocks and earth; cf. for instance IngT 2, where the Swedish king Swayther (Sveigðir) disappears into a rock in pursuit of a dwarf. More difficult to explain is the creation of dwarfs out of Yimer’s blood (which according to Grim TODO and Weibh TODO is the sea), since dwarfs are never said to dwell in water. — If one chooses the reading Bláinn ‘Blown’ (named in the thules† as a dwarf) instead of blǫum ‘blue-black’, then following Gurevich (Skp 2017, p. 693) one may see a kenning “the legs of Blown (dwarf) [STONE]”. Blown has otherwise been read as a poetic name for Yimer, but that is never attested elsewhere.

There was Moodsowner made the worthiest of all dwarfs, but Dorn [was] second.
They man-likenesses many did make:
dwarfs in the earth, as Dorn said.

1 Þar vas Móðsognir | so H; Þar fómótsognir vitnir ‘there Mootsowner wolf(?)’ R. The prose of Ylva 14 agrees with H that the correct form of the name is Móðsognir, not Mótsognir. 3 þeir ... ggrðu ‘They ... did make’ | so RHU; þar man-líkun · mǫrg of ggrðusk ‘There man-likenesses many were made’ STW 4 i ‘in’ | so GH; ór ‘out of’ R 4 sgm Durinn sagði ‘as Dorn said’ | so RHSW; sem fður mennf sagði ‘as door-men(?) said’ T; sem fþeim dyrrinn kendi ‘as the beasts(?) taught them’ U

1–2 Þar ... annarr ‘There ... second’ | om. G, but the author must have had the full verse, since he paraphrases these lines in the following way: Móðsognir var fðstr ok annarr Durinn. ‘Moodsowner was the highest in rank, and Dorn the second.’ before citing

3–4 þeir ... sagði ‘They ... said.’ | There are two conflicting interpretations of the creation of the dwarfs. Either they arose on their own; this is supported by the prose of Ylva (see note to previous st.) and by the form of the stanza quoted there (but it may have been changed to correspond to the author’s vision). On the other hand, both R and H have the dwarfs Moodsowner and Dorn shaping “man-likenesses” out of soil. The present edition follows the second version.

Sts. 11–15 contain two originally separate lists of dwarfs. That they are separate is seen by the repetition of names (Oakenshield, Great-grandfather), and their having their own conclusions.

Sts. 11–13, having no repeated names, seem to belong together. If they do, st. 12, which contains the formulaic conclusion to the list, should probably switch places with 13.

Sts. 14–15 form the second group, having an introduction and a conclusion which both mention the dwarf Loffer.

That will ever be remembered (þat mun é uppi, but both mss. þat mun enn uppi), evil is the doom of the norms!” The second is found in a runic inscription, U 323 (980–1015): “Ever will lie—while the age lives (meþ + altr + lifir með aldr lifir)—the hard-hammered bridge, broad, after a good man.” An especially close parallel is found in Þstf Stuttur (st. 5, Kari Ellen Gade ed. in SkP II): Ey mun uppi · Eñdils, meðan stendr // sól-borgar salr, · svgr-gððis fgr. ‘Always will be remembered—while the hall of the sun’s stronghold [SKY/HEAVEN > EARTH] stands—the journey of the fattener of Andle’s bird [RAVEN/EAGLE > WARRIOR].’

1 þrír | gramm. emend.; þrjár RH 1 ór því liði | þussa brúðir ‘brides of thurses’ H is probably corrupt due to the influence of st. 8; the adjectives in l. 2 are in the masculine. 2 qflgir ok ástkir ‘strong and lovely’ | ástkir ok qflgir (norm.) ‘lovely and strong’ H

1 Unds ‘Until’ | We seem to be missing a preceding sentence here which would have completed the semantics; it was probably contained in a now-lost stanza. What this st. would have contained is of course impossible to know, but it may have given a reason for why the gods needed to create men.

2 at húsi ‘along the settlement’ | An adverbial, lit. ‘along the house’; the gods were not walking in the wilderness.

<sup>10</sup>This verse is paraphrased in Ylfr 9: Þá er þeir gengu með sívar-ströndu Bors synir, fundu þeir tré tvau ok tóku upp trén ok sköpuðu af menn. Gaf inn fyrsti qnd ok líf, annarr vit ok bréring, þriði á-sjónu, mál ok heyrn ok sjón, gáfu þeim klæði ok ngfn. Hét karl-maðrinn Ask, en konan Embla, ok ólst þaðan af mann-kindin, sú er byggðin var gefinn undir Mið-garði. ‘When the sons of Byre (cf. st. 4) walked along the sea-shore they found two trees and they took up the trees and shaped men from them. The first one gave breath (qnd) and life, the second wit and movement, the third sight, speech, appearance and sight; they gave them clothes and names. The male was called Ash, and the woman Emble, and from them mankind was begotten, to whom were given the dwelling within Middenyard.’

The ON cognate of tree, tré, can also mean ‘pieces of wood’, and it is traditionally seen as referring to pieces of driftwood. Yet as pointed out by Hultgård (2006) the comparative evidence suggests that the two were in fact living, growing trees (they would thus be part of the foliage described in st. 4) and there is nothing in the sources that speaks against this.

While Ash is easily identified with the same-named wood species (Fraxinus excelsior), the etymology of Emble is much more difficult. The shaping of men from trees is used by poets in various kennings for men and women, especially in scoldic poetry (for a short discussion see SkP I, p. lxxv ff.). While this is rarer in the Eddic corpus it does occur, e.g. in Syed 4: brynþings apaldr ‘apple-tree of the byrnie-Thing’† [BATTLE > WARRIOR].

2 sal ‘hall’ | so H, G (paraphrase); sé ‘lake’ R 2 und ‘under’ | á ‘on’ H 6 seggja ‘of youths’ | at seggja ‘to say’ H

2 þolli ‘fir’ | Here simply meaning ‘tree’ and used only for the alliteration. Perhaps the same applies for askr ‘ash’ in the phrase askr Ygg-drasils ‘Ugdrassle’s Ash’, with its species not being as fixed to the ancients as it has now become?

<sup>12</sup>i.e. ‘they have carved on boards, they have laid laws, they have chosen lives’. It is well known that in Old Norse as in other old Germanic languages the simple past can have both perfective and imperfective sense. — This st. is paraphrased in Yilu 15: Þar stendr salr einn fagr undir askinum við brunninn, ok ór þeim sal koma þrjár meyjar, þær er svá beita: Urðr, Verðandi, Skuld. Þessar meyjar skapa mönnum aldr; þær kollum vér nornir. ‘There is a single fair hall beneath the ash-tree by the well, and out of that hall come three maidens, who are called thus: Weird, Werthing, Shild. These maidens shape the ages of men (formulaic! TODO.); we call them norns.’

2 fyrr 'earlier' | so H; fyrst 'first' R. The R reading cannot be correct as this st. is describing a different war, and thus not the first. It has probably arisen due to the similarity with st. 20/1.

<sup>17</sup>The object, a spear, is understood. This seems to reference a ritual, well-attested in the literature, wherein a war-chief would dedicate an opposing army as a human sacrifice to Weden by throwing a spear over them, typically with the incantation Óðinn á yðr alla 'Weden owns you all!'; he would then own the battle-slain in that they joined him as Oneharriers† in Walhall†. Weden is also described as "owning" dead men in Hbl 24 (namely slain nobles, contrasted with Thunder† who is insultingly said to "own the kin of thralls") and in runic inscription N B380 (edited below under Galders), a sort of greeting wherein the receiver is wished to be owned by Weden (and "received" by Thunder). For further literature see PCRN HS II:24, p. 560, II:25, p. 617, and especially III:42, p. 1166ff.

 Shild held a shield, but Shagle another,
 Guth, Hild, Gandle and Goreshagle—now are tallied the Nannies of Harn (= Weden), ready to ride the ground, walkirries.

3–6 Skuld ... val-kyrjur Shild | Judging especially by the out-of-place phrase nú eru talðar ‘now are tallied’, these four lines seem to be a later insert from a thule† counting the walkirries.

5 Nǫnnur Hǫrjans ‘Nannies of Harn (= Weden) [WALKIRRIES]’ | Nanna ‘Nanny’† (the name itself is a nursing word) was the wife of Balder†, but the word is here certainly being used to refer generically to ‘maidens, women’. A similar kenning is found in the thule listing female divinities (Þul Ásynja in SkP III), where the walkirries are called Óðins meyjar ‘Weden’s maidens’.

Told allusively in Wsp 31–33 is the myth about the Balder’s death at the hands of his blind brother Hath, and the revenge killing of Hath by his half-brother Wonnell, who was specifically begotten for that purpose. The other important sources for this myth are Bldr 8–11, the detailed description in Yilv 49, and Grammaticus (2015)[3.4.1–8].

The account and language of Bldr 8–11 is strikingly similar to the present sts. (and Bldr 11/2–4 is near-identical to Wsp 32/4–33/2), and they give only one detail not found in the present sts., namely that Wonnell, the slayer of Hath, was born from a woman named Rind “in the western halls”.

Yilv 49 contains a much longer and more detailed narrative. It may be shortly summarised as follows: After Balder has terrible nightmares about dying, his mother Frie makes all sorts of things (fire, water, venom, metals, stones, trees, diseases, beasts, etc.) swear oaths not to harm him. Since Balder is now practically unharmable, the Eese make sport out of shooting and striking him. Lock is annoyed by this game, and in disguise as a woman, he finds out from Frie that a single thing did not swear the oath: the mistletoe, since it was thought too young. Lock grabs a mistletoe and gives it to the blind god Hath, telling him where to shoot. Hath does so, and Balder dies.

Yilv 49 continues with the rest of the narrative, namely the failed attempt by the Eese at “crying Balder out of hell” (for which see Eddic Fragments in the present volume) and Balder’s funeral (which is treated poetically in Wolf Ugson’s fragmentary House-drape, ÚlfirU Húsdrip in SkP III.) For the revenge taken by the Eese on Lock, treated in Yilv 50, see st. 34 below.

Yilv 49–50 omits the latter part of the myth, namely the revenge taken upon Hath. Weden seduced the woman Rind Weden (apparently through love-magic, cf. Cormac Awmundson’s TODO: sęið Yęgr til rindar ‘Ug won Rind through sorcery’), who gave birth to a son Wonnell. Being only one night old, he slew Hath, his half-brother. This part of the myth may have been left out for moral reasons, but was certainly known to the author, as shown by Yilv 30: Áli eða Váli beitir einn, sonr Óðins ok Rindar. Hann er djarfr í orrostum ok mjök happ-sęętr ‘Onnel or Wonnell one is called, the son of Weden and Rind. He is brave in battles and a very lucky shot’ and Scold 19, where we find the following relevant kennings for Wonnell (with case changed from the acc. to the nom. for clarity): sonr Óðins ok Rindar ‘son of Weden and Rind’ and hefni-áss Baldrs, dólgr Haðar ok bani hans ‘avenging os† of Balder; the enemy of Hath and his bane’.

The revenge narrative is also dealt with by Grammaticus (2015)[3.4.1–8] in typical euhemerized form. In his retelling Hath and Balder are generals and rulers; in no way gods. It may be summarized as follows (for his latinized names see respective Encyclopedia entries): Weden takes counsel from warlocks and wallows; one of them, Horsethief the Finn, foretells that Rind, daughter of the Russian king, will bear him another son to avenge Balder. Weden soon enlists in the king’s army and leads it to great victories, but is continually spurned by the king’s daughter. He tries various other disguises but is still refused. At last he disguises himself as an old woman and becomes her handmaid and physician. When she turns sick, he binds her in order to give her a certain potion; while bound he rapes her, apparently with her father’s consent. Their son, Bo, grows up to become a fierce raider. One day Weden summons him and reminds him of his duty to avenge his brother, Balder. Bo slays Hath in a duel, but soon perishes from his wounds.

I saw Balder’s—the bloody victim’s,
grown did stand, higher than the plains,
a slender and very fair mistletoe.

1 tífur ‘victim’s’ | This word is rather difficult (and possibly corrupt). It may be connected with týr ‘tew, god’, but I see two problems with this. First, the dat. sg. of týr is tívi and the intrusive r is hard to explain. Second, although it must have been at some point used in the singular in the generic sense ‘god’, and this survives in compounds like Sig-týr ‘Victory-tew (= Weden)’ and in the plural tívar ‘tews; gods’, in the ON corpus the simplex form týr exclusively refers to the god Tew†. I follow CV, who connect it with OE tiber, tifer ‘victim, hostage’, but this also has problems: blóðgum ‘bloody’ is the masc. dat. sg., but tiber is neuter. Assuming a nom. sg. **tífurr* with the same declension as jǫfurr, we would expect **tífri* in the dat. sg., not tífur (which would however be the expected acc. sg.).

<sup>28</sup>Or ‘hidden’. The verb fela ‘hide, conceal’ is used in poetry to describe burial in mounds, as in IngT 24 (“[...] And afterwards the victory-havers hid (fǫlu) the ruler on Borrey.”) or the C10th Karlevi stone (“Hidden (fulkin fǫlginn) in this mound lies he whom the greatest deeds followed; [...]”)

‘Then spoke Gangler: “What will then be afterwards, when heaven and earth and all the world is burned, and dead are the gods and all Oneharriers and all man-kind—and ye have said earlier, that each man will live in some world for all ages?”

Then answers Third: “Many good dwellings are there then, and many bad: it is then best to be on Gimlee in heaven, and it is all-good with good drink, for those who find that pleasurable, in the hall which is called Brimmer; it also stands on heaven. That one is also a good hall which stands on the Nithfells, made of red gold; it is called Sinder. In these halls good and well-mannered men will dwell.

On Neestrund is a great and bad hall, and the doors face north. It is all woven with the spines of serpents like a wicker-house, but the heads of the serpents all face into the house and blow venom, so that along the hall run venom-rivers, and in those rivers wade oath-breakers and murder-wargs, as is said here:”

after which are quoted sts. 37 and 38/1–2, followed by the prose: En í Hver-gelmi er verst ‘But in Wharyelmer is is worst’ and 38/4.

<sup>31</sup>In this st. is clearly described watery punishment in the Heathen afterlife, also seen in Rein 3–4 and possibly in Grim 21. The crimes are what one might expect from the Germanic worldview: perjury, shameful murder, and adultery with a married woman. In Anglo-Saxon and Nordic laws the committer of such crimes gained the title of nothing†, that is, one afflicted with nithe† (severe shame). It is not surprising then that such nithings would be tortured by a creature named Nithehewer ‘Nithe-striker’. The practice of burying in bogs and flood-marks (or generally outside of settlements) is well attested in sources about Germanic culture from Taciti Germania onwards—I consider it likely that the heavy streams in this stanza and others represent such graves. This is further elaborated on in GermanicGems2<empty citation>.

and nourishes there the kindreds of Fenrer† [WOLVES];

As the young agentive suffix -ari is found nowhere else in the poem it is possible that this word is corrupt. If it is, it must have occurred early in the transmission, as reflexes of **tjúgari* are found in all surviving mss.

<sup>33</sup>The old hag raises the cubs of the wolf Fenrer, of which a particularly fierce one will swallow the moon. According to Grim 40 the sun is chased by a wolf called Skoll, while another wolf, Hate Rothswitner’s son, runs in front of her. This is elaborated upon in Yilv 12, where it is said that Skoll swallows the moon, while Hate swallows the sun. High then explains that “A lone troll-woman (gygr) lives to the east of Middenyard in that forest called Ironwood”, and “feeds the sons of many ettins, all in the likenesses of wolves, and thereof these wolves (i.e. Skoll and Hate) come. And it is also said that from that lineage a single one becomes the mightiest, and he is called Moongarm†. He fills himself with the life of all those men who die and he swallows the moon and stains heaven and all the air with blood. Thereof the sun loses its rays and the winds are violent and moan hither and thither, and thus it says in the Spae of the Wallow: [...]” after which this and the following st. are quoted. This seems very much like a composite from several sources—probably Wsp 40–41 and Grim 40—but becomes contradictory when it states that two wolves swallow the moon. Assuming that this is only a confusion on the part of the author of Yilv, this st. and the next must be describing Skoll, but it is of course not impossible that there was confusion about the exact details of these events among the Heathen poets. In favour of that seems to speak Weibth 46–47, where the sun is said to be swallowed by Fenrer (but see note there).

<sup>38</sup>i.e. 'commit incest'. That this is the sense is clear from legal compounds containing the same root as spilla 'to spoil, defile' like fręndsemis-spell 'kinship-defilement' and especially sifja-spell 'relation-defilement' both referring to illicit sexual relationships.

Very notably this conception has a strong parallel in RV 10.10.10a–b (norm. and tr., Nikhil S. Dwibhashyam. (2023, oct. 28). Vēda quote 6. <https://nikhilsd.com/dvq/6/>): Ā gbā tā gachān · úttarā yugāni, // yātra jāmayāḥ · kṛṇāvann ājāmi 'There shall come indeed those later ages when relatives shall do (acts) not (fit for) relatives.'

<sup>40</sup>That the first sorrow was the death of Balder (see sts. 31–33) is unanimously understood. Line is described in Yilv 35 as a minor goddess sett til gēzlu yfir þeim mǫnnum, er Frigg vill forða við báskan nokkurum ‘placed to watch over those men which Frie wishes to protect against any particular danger’. In spite of this, almost all translators and commentators have understood Line as here referring to Frie, or questioned whether her existence as a separate goddess is not a misunderstanding on the part of the author of Yilv. Hopkins (2017) argues excellently that this need not be the case; as a subordinate goddess of Frie, Line’s two sorrows would be her failing to protect Balder and Weden (the son and husband of her mistress, respectively) from harm.

3 eitri 'venom' | emend.; ormi 'worm' H. It seems likely that the author of Yilu had access to this verse. <sup>41</sup>It seems likely that the order found in Yilv is original. After Thunder (appropriately kenned ‘Middenyard’s wigh-ward’) is slain, the Ettins take over the lands and make farming impossible. Cf. Thrim 18: “Shortly the Ettins will settle Osyard, unless thou thy hammer for thyself dost fetch!”

The following stanzas are paraphrased in Yilv ch. 53:

 Hárr segir: „Upp skýtr jörðunni þá ór senum, ok er þá grón ok fęgr. Vaxa þá akrar ó-sánir. Viðarr ok Váli lifa, svá at eigi hefir sęrinn ok Surta-logi grandat þeim, ok byggja þeir á Iða-velli, þar sem fyrr var Ás-garðr, ok þar koma þá synir Þórs, Móði ok Magni, ok hafa þar Mjöllni. Því nęst koma þar Baldr ok Höðr frá Heljar, setjast þá allir samt, ok talast við, ok minnast á rúnar sínar, ok róða of tíðendi þau, er fyrrum höfðu verit, of Mið-garðs-orm ok um Fenris-úlf. Þá finna þeir í grasinu gull-töflur þęr, er ęirnir höfðu átt. Svá er sagt:“*

‘Then spoke Gangler: “Do any of the gods survive then, or is there any earth or heaven?” High says: “Then shoots the earth up from the seas, and is then green and fair. Then acres grow unsown. Wider and Wonnell live, as the sea and Surt’s flame has not wounded them, and they settle Idewolds, where Osyrd once was, and there come the sons of Thunder, Mood and Main, and have there Millner. Thereafter come Balder and Hath from Hell, then all reconcile with each other and speak with each other and think back on their runes, and speak about the tidings which had once been: about the Middenyardswyrm and about the Fenrerswolf. Then they find in the grass those golden game-bricks which the Eese had owned. So it is said:”

The Dreams of Balder

(Baldrs draumar)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C10th (0.890)

Meter: Ancient-words-law

In ancient manuscripts only preserved in A, but the poem also survives in later manuscripts with a few extra stanzas (see below). It follows the structure of a riddle contest.

The poem begins in medias res; Balder† has been having nightmares, and so the gods meet at the Thing to figure out why (1). Woden† rides to Hell†, where he has an encounter with a bloody dog (2). It barks for a long time at him, but he passes it and continues to “the high house of Hell†” (3), from which he rides west, to the grave of a certain wallow†, whom he revives using magic (4). She asks which man has forced her out of the grave (5), and Woden introduces himself as Waytame, before asking for whom the benches of Hell are covered with gold (6). The wallow responds that barrels of mead stand brewed for Balder and that the gods are very anxious (7). Woden asks her who will slay Balder (8), and she responds that it is Hath, carrying a “high fame-beam” (9). Woden then asks her who will avenge Balder’s death by slaying Hath (10). The wallow responds that Rind† will give birth to Woden’s son Wonnel†, who will slay Hath when only one night old (11). Woden then asks about some mysterious maidens (12; see Note), which betrays his identity. The wallow tells him that she now knows his true identity, to which Woden responds that he does as well: she is not a wallow, but rather the “mother of three thurses” (13). She tells him to ride home and “be famous”, before reminding him of his death at the Rakes of the Reins† (14).

[A 2r/1]

“Hath† bears the high fame-beam [MISTLETOE] thither;
 he will become Balder’s bane, and rob Woden’s son [= Balder] of age—forced I spoke, now I will shut up!”

[The wallow quoth:]

[Óðinn kvað:]

10 „Þegj-at vǫlva, · þik vil’k fregna,
 2 unds es al-kunna, · vil’k ǣnn vita,
 hvęrr mun hęipt Hęði · hęft of vinna,
 4 eða Baldrs bana · á bál vega?“

[A 2r/3]

“Shut not up, O wallow; thee I wish to ask!
 Until all is known I wish to know further:
 Who will avenge that evil doing on Hath, or drag onto the pyre Balder’s bane [= Hath]?”

[Weden quoth:]

[Vǫlva kvað:]

11 „Rindr berr Vála · í vestr-sqlum, 2 sá mun Óðins sonr · ǣin-néttr vega;
 hond of þvęr-at · né hǫfuð ķęmbir, 4 áðr á bál of berr · Baldrs and-skota;
 nauðug sagða’k, · nú mun’k þęgja.“

[A 2r/4]

“Rind bears Wonne!† in the western halls:
 he will—Weden’s son, one night old—fight.
 He washes not his hand nor combs his head, before onto the pyre he bears Balder’s opponent [= Hath]— forced I spoke, now I will shut up.<sup>48</sup>”

[The wallow quoth:]

<sup>48</sup>The similarity in wording to the treatment of this myth in Wsp is striking; apart from the tense, ll. 2–4 here are near-identical to 32/4–33/2 there (for discussion on the narrative see introduction to Wsp 31–34). The irregularity of the stanza length might suggest that a line has been inserted in analogy with the aforementioned poem.

[Óðinn kvað:]

12 „Þegj-at vǫlva, · þik vil’k fregna,
 2 unds es al-kunna, · vil’k ǣnn vita,
 hvęrjar ’ru męyjar, · es at muni gráta
 4 ok á himin verpa · halsa-skautum?“

[A 2r/6]

“Shut not up, O wallow; thee I wish to ask!
 Until all is known I wish to know further:
 Which are the maidens that weep heartily, and onto heaven cast the front sheets?<sup>49</sup>”

<sup>49</sup>According to Yilv 49 Hell promised to give Balder back to the Eese if “all things in the world, living and dead, cry for him”. The Eese relayed this message, and “the men and the animals and the earth and the stones and trees and all metals” cried for Balder. It may be that these maidens were included among the grievors (perhaps they were the walkirries, and this is what reveals Weden’s identity?), but their identity is otherwise unknown.

[Vǫlva kvað:]      13      „Ert-at Veg-tamr, · sem ek hugða,
2                      hēldr est Óðinn, · aldinn gautr.“      [A 2r/8] [Óðinn kvað:]      „est-at vǫlva · né vís kona,
4                      hēldr est þriggja · þursa móðir.“
[The wallow quoth:]      “Thou art not Waytame as I thought, rather art thou Weden, the ancient Geat!”— [Weden quoth:]      “Thou art no wallow† nor wise woman, rather art thou the mother of three Thurses†!”

[Vǫlva kvað:]      14      „Hēim rið Óðinn · ok hróðigr ves, 2                      svá komi-t manna · mēirr aptr á vit, es lauss Loki · líðr ór bǫndum
4                      ok ragna rǫk · rjúfēndr koma.“      [A 2r/9]
[The wallow quoth:]      “Ride home, O Weden, and be renowned!
                                So may no other man come again to visit [me],
                                when loose Lock slips out of his bonds, and [at] the Rakes of the Reins† the rippers come!”

1 ok hróðigr ves ‘and be renowned’ | A sarcastic, taunting statement, the sense being: “Your fame, Weden, will not save you!”

4 rjúfēndr ‘rippers’ | Presumably Surt and Lock with his children, as described in Wsp 40 ff. The verb rjúfa ‘CV: to break, rip up, break a hole in’ is used in the same context in the formulaic þá’s rjúfask regin ‘when the Reins† are ripped’ (Webb 52), unds (of) rjúfask regin ‘until the Reins are ripped’ (Grim 4, Lock TODO and Syed TODO). One might also compare the similar sounding (but not or only very distantly related) verb rifna ‘be riven, rent apart’ used in reference to the destruction of the world in Runic inscription Sö 154: Jprð sal rifna · ok upp-biminn ‘Earth shall be riven, and Up-heaven’, and Arn Hryn (in SkP II pp. 185–6, ll. 3/7–8, see also note there): meiri verði þinn an þeira · þrifnuðr allr, unds biminn rifnar. ‘greater than theirs may thy whole wealth be, until heaven is riven.’

The Speeches of the High One

(Hávamól)

Dating: See individual sections.

Meter: Leeds-meter, Galders-law, Ancient-words-law

The Speeches of the High One is the second poem of R, which is the only medieval witness manuscript. Several sts. are however cited or alluded to in other places, such as Eyv Hák (TODO: formatting) 21 and FbrS TODO.

The poem before us does not very much seem like a single composition by one poet, but instead much more like a collection of scattered traditional poetry associated with the god Woden. It seems to contain at least two poems of practical life advice, two mythological narratives, scattered gnomic poetry about runes, and a list of galders. These various strands are united by their presumed speaker, namely Woden in His function as God of Wisdom.

Following previous authors, I identify the following strands, excepting various lone sts. that are probably later inserts. In the present edition each of the following is given a separate, short introduction:

1. 1–79 The Guest-strand; practical life advice, beginning with a guest arriving at a homestead
2. 81–90 Various scattered sts. of advice
3. 91–102 Woden’s failed seduction of Billing’s daughter
4. 103–110 Woden’s obtaining of the Mead of Poetry
5. 111–137 The Speeches of Loddfathomer; Woden’s advice to Loddfathomer
6. 138–146 The Rune-tally; various sts. relating to runes and their magical use
7. 146–165 The Leed-tally; Woden’s listing of 18 galders

Two questions shortly arise: who was the redactor (i.e., the person who set these strands together, and gave the new work the title Háva mól), and what was his motive? While a detailed and sufficient answer will probably never be found, a careful reading of the final stanza, 165, gives us some clues. By its prayer-like blessing, which brings up the Heathen dichotomy between the Gods and Ettins (the friends and enemies of Mankind, respectively) and calls the contents of the poem (which include unambiguous Heathen ritual instructions) “very useful” (allþorrf); and by its reference to the process of oral transmission, the whole poem in something resembling the current form must (it seems) have been put together no later than the early 11th century, in a pre-scribal, pre-monastic, Heathen context. (Iceland converted around year 1000, but people surely clung to the old traditions for some time longer.)

As seen by the emphasis on the usefulness of the poetry, the reason for this redaction was not strictly antiquarian, but foremost utilitarian; the redactor gathered an amount of traditional poetry

he found useful (whether for its life-advice or mythology) into a single poem, which could then be learned by heart by anyone. In this he certainly achieved his goal. The High is by far the greatest surviving collection of pre-Christian Norse advice poetry, and has functioned like a Noah's Ark—or Hoardmimer's Wood—for that genre. Thus, those scattered stanzas which were not included by the redactor—and many must have existed—are now forever lost.

The Guest-strand (sts. 1–79)

The Guest-Strand (Old Norse: Gæsta-páttir) is one of the most interesting surviving works of Norse poetry. Sadly, its structure has been obscured by the insertion of unrelated sts. and by poor translations. My hope is to shed some light on the original coherence of the strand, while respecting the text as it appears in the manuscript. As I do not think it can do each stanza justice, and since there is not exactly a clear progression of themes, I will not here attempt a stanza-by-stanza summary of this strand. Rather, I will give some important observations and then let the reader read for himself.

The Strand is a piece of advice poetry, and takes its outset in a wanderer's arriving as a guest at a Norse farmstead. It first (roughly sts. 1–4) discusses the mutual responsibilities between guest and host, and then moves on to broader human interactions, with a particular focus on alcohol, war, friendship and human wisdom. While there is some coherence and nice transitions are frequently employed in order to shift from one theme to another (e.g. between sts. 4 and 5, or 10 and 11), the poem is not clearly divided into sections, nor is there (after the very first stanzas) a linear progression from one theme to another.

At all turns the poem advises caution and shrewdness. A man should always carry his “manwit” (ON man-vit, a word somewhat analogous with the English “common sense”) with him; he should think before he speaks

The poem moves seamlessly between various parts of life. To do so the poet often employs transitions where a st. repeats the structure of the previous one, but with a new subject. This is particularly evident in sts. 4–5 and 10–11.

O givers, hail! A guest has come in;
 where shall this one sit?
 Very anxious is he who on the fires shall tempt his furtherance.

3 á bröndum 'on the fires' | Possibly referring a Norwegian folk custom, wherein a guest would sit down on the wood-pile outside of the door, waiting until being let in; see further TODO SOME ARTICLE on this custom. The speaker is announcing to the hosts (or "givers") that a guest, frozen, wet and tired, is currently sitting on the wood-pile, and ought to be let in.

4 síns of fręista frama 'tempt his furtherance' | i.e. try his luck; see how far he gets. The line is formulaic; cf. Weibth 11, 13, 15, 17.

3      Elds es þörf • þęim's inn es kominn of food and of clothing there is need for the man who over the fell has fared.

4      Vats es þörf • þęim's til verðar kómr,

 4            orðs ok ęndr-þögu.

Of water there is need for the one who comes for a meal;
 of a towel and a hearty welcome;
 of a good reception—if he might get one—of speech, and silence in return.

1–4 ALL | There is a good train of thought throughout the st.: the guest must first wash and dry himself, and then be welcomed to sit and eat at the table. After the host has provided these amenities the responsibility shifts onto the guest, who must now speak.

The word ęndr-þaga 'silence in return' leads a nice transition to the rest of the Strand, where proper social conduct (encompassed by the first word of the next stanza below, "wit") will be discussed more broadly. One may note that the verb þęgia 'shut up, be silent' (of which **þaga*, which only appears in the present compound, is a derivative, formed in the same way as saga 'saw, history, story' to ęggia 'say, speak') and its derivative þęgn 'silence' are frequently used by Scoldic poets to mark the very beginning of their works (e.g. Arn Magnr 1<sup>11</sup>: þęgi ęim-brotar 'may gold-breakers [GENEROUS MEN] be silent', Egill Berdr 1<sup>V</sup>: hyggi ... til þagnar þinn lýðr 'may thy retinue focus on silence', Glúmr Gráf 1<sup>1</sup>: biðjum vér þagnar 'we ask for silence').

Of wit there is need for the one who widely roams;
 everything is easy at home.
 Into a laughing-stock turns he who nothing knows,
 and among the clever sits.

3 at auga-bragði 'Into a laughing-stock' | Idomatic. auga-bragð literally means 'twinkling of an eye, moment'; the sense here is thus something like 'a quick glance of derision'.

 but rather guarding of his senses when sharp and silent he comes to a homestead;

5 maðr 'man' | In R abbreviated with the rune ʝ m "man", the first of 45 such instances in the present poem. While Anglo-Saxon Latin-script mss. use several runes ideographically (e.g. ʰ o for OE ōðel 'homeland, patrimony'), there are (to my knowledge) no Scandinavian examples with runes other than ʝ. The tradition of ideographic runes standing for their names is ancient and goes back to the time before Latin writing, as proven by the inscriptions from Stentofen (DR 357) and Ingelstad (Ög 43), which use the runes ʝ j for ár 'year, good harvest' and ʝ d for dagr 'day', respectively. For rune names see below: Anonymous Runerow Poems.

The wary guest—when for a meal he comes—shuts up and listens closely.
 With ears he listens and with eyes he watches;
 so looks each learned man ahead.

2 þunnu hljóði þęgir 'shuts up and listens closely' | lit. 'shuts up with thin (i.e. attentive) listening'.

4 nýsisk fyrir 'looks ahead' | This verb underlies the noun for-njósn as found in Syed 24.

This one is blessed, who for himself does get praise and staves of liking.
 It's uneasy regarding that which one shall own in another man's chest.

2 lof ok líkn-stafi 'praise and staves of liking' | líkn 'liking' is a very interesting word. It is defined by ONP as: 'mercy, compassion, relief, comfort, help'. In the present poem its precise meaning seems to be something like 'the state of being liked by your surroundings to the point where people are willing to help you out'. Cf. its two other occurrences in the present poem: sts. 120 and especially 123 (where it is likewise paired with lof 'praise').

 4 an sé of-drykkja ǿls.

A better burden bears man not on the road than much manwit.

Worse way-provision he drags not along on the plain than a too great drink of ale.

3 velli at ‘on the plain’ | Formulaic, the word völlr ‘plain, (uncultivated) field’ is also used in sts. 38 and 49. It is easily understood that the wild heaths and plains of Iron Age Norway were particularly unsafe places where a traveller needed to keep his wits about him, lest he fall victim to robbers or murderers (so st. 38).

12      Es-a svá gótt, · sęm gótt kveða,

Forgetfulness-heron is he called, who hovers over ale-feasts;
he robs man of his senses.
By that bird's feathers I was fettered

1 Ó·minnis-hegri ‘Forgetfulness-heron’ | Lit. “unmemory-heron”; a rather interesting personification of drunkenness as a hovering bird.

14      ęl ek varð, · varð ofr-ęlvi,

Glad and cheerful should every man be,

The unvalorous man thinks he will always live
if he of war be wary;
but old age gives him no peace,
which yet spears would give him.<sup>50</sup>

<sup>50</sup>The unvalorous man might have been spared by the spears, but death will still find him through miserable old age. Since death is unavoidable it is better to live bravely, even if one risks dying in battle, than to live cowardly and die of sickness. This connects well to the ancient view of the 'straw-death' (TODO).

17 Kópir af-glapi, · es til kynnis kómr,

All at once—if a sip he gets—exposed is the mind of the man.

18 Sá einn vëit, · es víða ratar

4 sá es vitandi 's vits.

He alone knows, who widely roams,
and has journeyed much,
which sort of mind every man wields,
who is knowing of his wits.

2 hëfr fjölð of farit 'has journeyed much' | Cf. Webb 3, 44, et.c., where Woden repeats: Fjölð ek fór, · fjölð freistaða'k, // fjölð ek reynda rëgin 'Much I journeyed, much I tried, much I tested the Reins'.

The wretched man and badly turned out laughs at anything.
 This he knows not, which he might need to know:
 that he is not free of blemishes.

4 hann es-a vamma vanr ‘he is not free of blemishes’ | Formulaic, cf. Lock 30: es-a þér vamma vant ‘thou art not free of blemishes’.

23      Ó·sviðr maðr · vakir umb allar nētr
 2              ok hyggr at hví-vetna;

The unwise man is awake for all nights and thinks of anything.
 Then he is weary when the morning comes:
 all the trouble is as it was.

24      Ó·snotr maðr · hyggr sér alla vesa
 2              við-hléjendr vini;
          hitt-ki hann fíðr, · þótt of hann fār lesi,
 4              ef með snotrum sitr.

The unclever man thinks all those who laugh with him his friends.
 This he finds not, that they yet make sport in him,
 if among the clever he sits.

25      Ó·snotr maðr · hyggr sér alla vesa
 2              við-hléjendr vini;

The unclever man thinks all those
 who laugh with him his friends.
 Then he finds, when to the Thing† he comes,
 that he has spokesmen few.

4 á for-méjendr fāa ‘has spokesmen few’ | Repeated in st. 62. He has few who are ready to take his side and speak up for him (in legal proceedings); true friends are proven in hard times, not in drunken chatter. The Thing was the old Germanic legal assembly, where smaller disputes might easily turn into deadly feuds.

26      Ó·snotr maðr · þykkisk allt vita, hitt-ki hann vǣit, · hvat skal við kveða,

4                   ef hans fręista firar.

The unclever man seems to know everything
if he takes shelter in a nook.
This he knows not, what he shall answer
if men test him.

2 vǫ ‘nook’ | From earlier *vrǫ; cf. Swedish vrå ‘corner, nook’, rare English wroo ‘id.’ The present stanza is to my knowledge the only Norse attestation of the form vǫ, which features a rare Western sound change from vr- to v-. The more common change vr- to r- yields rǫ, which is the normal Norse form. — Tangentially this word is brought up in FGT (1950) as an example of a word with nasal ǫ, and contrasted with oral ǫ in rǫ ‘sailyard’.

- 27           Ö·snotr maðr, · es með aldir kǫmr, vǣit-a maðr, · hinn’s vǣt-ki vǣit,

6               þótt hann męli til mart.

The unclever man when among people he comes—it’s best that he shut up.
No one knows that he nothing knows,
unless he speak too much.
The man knows not, who nothing knows,
that he speak too much.

4               því es gęngr of guma.

Learned seems he who can ask and answer the same [way].
In no way may the sons of men hide that which eludes a man.

1–2 fregna ... sęja ‘ask ... answer’ | Perhaps specifically in the context of a riddling contest of wisdom.

- 29           Örna męlir, · sá’s ęva þęgir, 2               stað-lausu stafi;
              hrað-męlt tunga, · nema haldęndr ęigi,

 He who never shuts up speaks plenty many utterings of absurdity.
 A quick-spoken tongue—unless it be held in place—oft sings evil [into being] for itself.

3–4 hrað-mélt ... of gēlr ‘A quick-spoken ... for itself’ | Formulaic. Cf. Lock 31.

3 nema haldendr eigi ‘unless it be held in place’ | lit. ‘unless holders own it’ or ‘unless it own holders’. The ‘holders’ are perhaps the teeth which hold the tongue in place.

30 At auga-bragði · skal-a maðr annan hafa,

 4 ok nái þurr-fjallr þruma.

For a laughing-stock shall man not have another when he comes to visit.
 Many a one seems learned if he is not asked,
 and gets to loiter about dry-skinned.

4 þurr-fjallr ‘dry-skinned’ | i.e. ‘untested’, equivalent to the English idiom get one’s feet wet. The word fell - fjall ‘skin, pelt’ is rare in Old Norse literature and only occurs in cpds, e.g. Wyl 11: ber-fjall ‘bear-pelt’. It survives in modern Swedish fjäll ‘scale (on fish and reptiles)’

 2 gęstr at gęst hęðinn;
 vęit-a gęrla · sá’s of verði glissir,
 4 þótt með gròmum glami.

Learned seems he who takes to flight,
 the guest, from a scoffing guest.
 He knows not clearly, who grins over the food, that he be flirting with fiends.

2 gęstr ‘guest’ | The situation hinted at in this and the following stanza is that two guests—unknown to each other—have come to the same homestead. The sense is that when mocked by a stranger it is best not to engage, since the dealing may quickly turn violent. Cf. sts. 122, 123, and 125.

32 Gumnar margir · erusk gagn-hollir,

 4 órir gęstr við gęst.

Many men are well true to each other,
 but over food drive each other away.

The strife of mankind will that ever be;
guest raves against guest.

1 skal | emend.; om. R

---

<sup>51</sup>The customary length of stay in old times was three nights. So Eyel's saw, ch. 78: þat var engi siðr, at sitja lengr en þrjár nætr at kynni. 'it was not customary to stay longer than three nights when visiting.' Compare a much Jutish saying: en tredje dags gjæst stinker 'a third day's guest stinks', which closely resembles a maxim attributed to Benjamin Franklin: "Guests, like fish, begin to smell after three days." It is probably with respect to such proverbs that Auden and Taylor translate the latter half of the present stanza "He starts to stink who outstays his welcome, / in a hall that is not his own."

 Though two goats he own and a cord-roofed hall, it is yet better than begging.

1 Bú es bętra, · þótt lítit sé 'A dwelling is better though small it be' | The b-line is missing the necessary alliteration, but no good emendation suggests itself.

1 vęlli á 'on the plain' | Formulaic, see note to st. 12.

2 feti ganga framarr 'take one step further' | Formulaic. Cf. Lock 1: svá't ęinu-ęi feti gangir framarr 'so that thou not take one step further'.

1 matar góðan ‘good of meat’ | A Viking Age expression; see Encyclopedia.

3 [...] | It is doubtless that a word has been lost here; the meter and sense require it. Finnur Jónsson (1932) suggests glöggvan ‘miserly, stingy’, giving a litotes ‘so unstingy’, i.e., ‘so generous’.

<sup>52</sup>No man is so generous that he would refuse a gift presented to him, nor loathe receiving a favour as thanks for his generosity.

With weapons and garments shall friends gladden each other;
 that is best seen on oneself.
 Givers-back and givers-again are friends for the longest if it comes to last long.

1 Vöpnum ok vöðum ‘With weapons and garments’ | i.e. weapons and armour (the “garments” are probably no silks); friends are supposed to help each other and strengthen their “violence capital”. This alliterative word-pair is formulaic and in other occurrences exclusively refers to implements of war; cf. e.g. Beow 39, where Shield†'s pyre-ship is loaded with bilde-wépnum and beaðo-wédum ‘war-weapons and battle-garments’.

2 þat 's á sjölfum sýnst ‘that is best seen on oneself’ | i.e. in one's own experience.

45     Ef þú átt annan, · þann's illa trúir, and pay duplicity against lie.

3 fagrt ... mæla ... flátt hyggja 'fairly ... speak ... falsely think' | Formulaic, cf. sts. 90, 91.

46     Þat's enn umb þann, · es þú illa trúir

 4 maðr es manns gaman.

Young was I once; I travelled alone;

 Wealthy I thought myself when another one I found;

 4 sýtir é gløggir við gjöfum.

Generous, brave men live best—seldom they nourish sorrow, but the unvalorous man is frightened by anything,
 the stingy always grieves over gifts.

3 ó-snjallr, gløggir ‘unvalorous, stingy’ | Contrasting respectively with frókn, mildr ‘brave, generous’ in the first half of the stanza; very fine parallelism.

4 sýtir ... gjöfum ‘the stingy man ... gifts’ | Cf. st. 39. After receiving a gift, one was culturally obliged to give something back.

49 Váðir mínar · gaf’k velli at 2 tveim tré-mönnum;

 4 nēiss es nōkkviðr halr.

My garments I gave, on the plain,
 to two tree-men.
 Champions they seemed when cloaks they had;
 shameful is the naked hero.<sup>55</sup>

<sup>55</sup>One of the harder sts. in the poem. The probable sense is that “the clothes make the man” (or warrior): under expensive gear a thin tree-man might be lurking, and likewise even a mighty man (the choice of the word halr ‘hero, warrior’ (cf. sts. 36, 37) rather than the more neutral maðr ‘man, person’ is surely intentional) can never defend himself against a heavily armoured opponent. Without his arms, he becomes as vulnerable as the “tree-man” on the plain.

51 Eldi heitari • brinnr með illum vinum

Hotter than fire burns love among bad friends, for five days†;
but then goes out when the sixth one comes,
and all the friendship worsens.

2 fimm daga 'for five days' | i.e. "for a week", which was originally five days long. See also st. 74 and the Encyclopedia: five days†.

52 Mikit ęitt • skal-a manni gefa;
2 opt kaupir sér í lítlu lof,

4 fekk ek mér fé-laga.

Much at once shall one not give a man;
oft one buys oneself praise for little.
With half a loaf and an awry cask
I got myself a partner.

53 Lítilla sanda, • lítilla séva, 2 lítil eru gęð guma;
því-at allir męnn • urðu-t jafn-spakir;
4 hǫlf es ęld hvar.

Of small sands, of small seas:
small are the senses of man.
For all have not become evenly knowing;
half is every man.

1 Lítilla sanda, • lítilla séva 'Of small sands, of small seas' | Probably a partitive genitive, the sense being that man's "horizons" are small; the universe will always be far greater than him.

3–4 því-at ... ǫld hvar. ‘For ... every man.’ | On the meaning of the second half of this stanza I find the view of Guðmundur Finnbogason (1929) most convincing; namely that every man has both strengths and weaknesses in terms of wisdom. As nobody can excel at everything, nobody is complete; every person is “half” (and it should be added that ON halfir has a more general sense of incompleteness than its English cognate). This interpretation fits particularly closely with sts. 71 and 132. — This stanza introduces several stanzas dealing with wisdom and foolishness.

54      Meðal-snotr · skyli manna hværr,
2              éva til snotr séi;

Middle-clever should each man be;
never too clever.
For those men it’s fairest to live,
who know well enough.

55      Meðal-snotr · skyli manna hværr,
2              éva til snotr séi;
            snotrs manns hjarta · verðr sjaldan glatt,
4              ef sá ’s al-snotr es á.

Middle-clever should each man be;
never too clever.
The clever man’s heart is seldom glad,
if its owner is all-clever.

56      Meðal-snotr · skyli manna hværr,
2              éva til snotr séi;
            or·lög sín · viti ęngi maðr fyrir;
4              þeim es sorga-lausastr sefi.

Middle-clever should each man be;
never too clever.
His own orlay† ought no man to know ahead;
his is the most sorrowless mind.

---

4 þeim es sorga-lausastr sefi. ‘his is the most sorrowless mind.’ | i.e. he who is ignorant of his fate. It is surely fitting that Woden should say this, having knowledge of the inevitable destruction of the world and himself (see Rakes of the Reins†).

57      Brandr af brandi · brinnr unds brunninn es,
2              funi kvęykisk af funa;

maðr af manni · verðr at máli kuðr;
 4 en til dólscr af dul.

Fire by fire burns until it is burned [out];
 flame is quickened by flame.
 Man by man becomes known through speech, but the too hickish from his folly.

4 dólscr ‘hickish’ | Derived from an ablaut variant of dalr ‘valley, dale’ + -iskr ‘-ish’, the sense being ‘provincial, not having left his (home) valley’. Cf. the Icelandic tribal names like vatns-dólr and lang-dólr ‘inhabitants of Vatns-dalr (Waterdale), Lang-dalr (Longdale)’.

58 Ár skal rísa, · sá’s annars vill

 Seldom gets the lying wolf the thigh, nor the sleeping man victory.

59 Ár skal rísa, · sá’s á yrkjendr fáa,

 4 halfr es auðr und hvötum.

Early shall he rise who has workmen few,
 and go his work to meet.
 Much is kept back from him who in the morning sleeps;
 the brisk has half the wealth.

4 halfr es auðr und hvötum ‘the brisk has half the wealth’ | i.e. the brisk man has already claimed half of a fortune by simply choosing to wake up early.

60 Þurra skíða · ok þakinna néfra,

 4 mál ok misseri.

Of dry planks and thatching birch bark:
 of this man knows the measure—and of that firewood which he may use for a season and half-year.

4 mál ok misseri ‘for a season and half-year’ | i.e. over nine months, presumably the ones outside of summer (June–August).

- 61 Þvegginn ok mętttr · ríði maðr þingi at, 2 þótt sé-t vęddr til vęl;
 skúa ok bróka · skammisk ęngi maðr
 4 né hęsts in hęldr. · þótt hann hafi-t góðan.

Washed and full ought man to ride to the Thing†,
 although he be not clothed too well;
 of his shoes and breeches ought no man to be ashamed,
 nor the more of his horse,
 although he has not a good one.

1 Þvegginn ok mętttr ‘washed and full’ | A formulaic collocation. Cf. Rein TODO: kęmbðr ‘combed’ — þvegginn ‘washed’ — mętttr ‘full’; Wsp 33: þó ‘washed’ — kęmbði ‘combed’. These examples attest to the importance of personal hygiene in the culture, something further seen by the ubiquity of combs in pre-Christian graves. One is reminded of a passage from Germania (ch. 22): Statim ē somnō, quem plērūmq̃ue in diem extrahunt, lavantur, saepius calidā, ut apud quōs plūrimum hiems occupat. Lauti cibum capiunt: sęparātae singulis sędēs et sua cuique męnsa. Tum ad negōtia nec minus saepe ad convīvia prōcēdunt armāti. ‘On waking from sleep, which they generally prolong to a late hour of the day, they take a bath, oftenest of warm water, which suits a country where winter is the longest of the seasons. After their bath they take their meal, each having a separate seat and table of his own. Then they go armed to business, or no less often to their festal meetings (convivia, i.e., their Things).’

4 þótt hann hafi-t góðan ‘although he has not a good one.’ | Finnur Jónsson (1932) considers this a late insert, and I agree. It seems that the inserter was not aware of the rules of the Leeds-meter meter and interpreted the preceding c-verse (né hęsts in hęldr) as an a-verse of Ancient-words-law.

The two following sts. are written in opposite order in R, but a symbol at the start of each indicates that they should switch places.

 who wishes to be called sharp.
One shall know, another shall not;
 thirty know if there are three.

4 þjóð 'thirty' | Or "people, nation"; the sense is in any case "many, everybody". For the translation "thirty"
 cf. Scold 82, a list of poetic expressions for various numerals: þjóð eru þrír tígir 'a nation is thirty' etc.

3–4 þá ... einna hvatastr 'then ...briskest of all' | Almost identical to Rein TODO/3–4, which however has flęirum 'more men' instead of fróknum 'the bold'.

- 65 Orða þeira, · es maðr qðrum segir,

<sup>58</sup>Not everyone is hospitable, especially with regards to food, which was scarce and closely watched among the Norse subsistence farmers. The poet notes that even a “trusty friend” (possibly sarcastic) would invite him over more often if he brought more food than he ate.

Man is not all unblessed, though he of poor health be:
 someone is blessed with sons;
 someone with kinsmen, someone with ample fee†, someone with works done well.

1 ve-sall ‘unblessed’ | Or ‘woe-blessed’. I have elsewhere translated this word as ‘wretched’, but have presently rendered it this way to show the etymological relationship. The second element in this compound is sēll, which lacks i-umlaut due to a shortening of the vowel before the umlaut became phonemic. The ancestral Proto-Norse forms would be **sālir* and **wajē-sālir*. Cf. ᚱᚰᚱᚱᚱᚱ wajē-mariṛ ‘infamous’ on the Tjurkō bracteate, where the second element is the ancestor of ON mérir ‘renowned, famous’; the expected descendant **ve-marr* is not attested. I have chosen to translate sēll as ‘blessed’, but it is not a past participle and could also be rendered as ‘lucky’ or ‘blissful’. It carries a certain sense of innateness that is foreign to modern Western culture. Thus a king whose land experiences bountiful harvests (ár) is said to be ár-sēll ‘blessed with harvests’, while one whose kingdom is at peace (fríðr) is said to be fríð-sēll ‘blessed with peace’. In this worldview the state of the realm is not due to uncontrollable environmental or political factors, but rather arises from the very person of the king (TODO: Reference PCRN chapter).

2 sonum ... frēndum ‘sons ... kinsmen’ | Cf. st. 72 below, which stresses the importance of sons and kinsmen.

70      Bętra ’s lifðom, • an séi ò-lifðom,

1 an séi ò-lifðom ‘than with the unliving’ | emend.; ȝ ęl lifðom R.

1 an séi ò-lifðom ‘than with the unliving’ | The reading of R, which would be normalized as ok sęl-lifðom ‘and for the blessed living’, is metrically defect since sęl- is strongly stressed and should carry alliteration. For the original form of the line we may instead cf. Faþ 30: Hvętum ’s bętra • an sé ó-hvętum ‘It’s better for the brisk than it may be for the unbrisk’. The corruption has probably happened in the following way: **en* (younger form of an ‘than’) in the prototype was misinterpreted as en ‘and, but’ and copied as ȝ (the tironian et), while **séi ólifðom* (probably with the words cramped together) became sęl lifðom.

2 ęy getr kvikr kú ‘always gets the quick a cow’ | i.e., “new opportunities always present themselves for the living”. A reference to the cattle-based economy (see also st. 76), the cow being used as a metonym: (cf. churchly English ‘the quick and the dead’, i.e. ‘the living and the dead’).

<sup>59</sup>The fire is presumably the man’s funeral pyre, on which a considerable amount of his wealth has been spent; according to ibn Fadlan (TODO) two thirds of a dead chieftain’s estate was spent on his funeral. One notes the contrastive en ‘but’ and may understand it as follows: “I saw a lavish funeral held for a man, but he was still dead.” This interpretation is supported by the Hęb 71 below, which expresses the same sentiment.

71      Haltr riðr hrossi, • hȝrð rekr handar vanr,
2            daufr vegr ok dugir;
            blindr es bętri, • an bręnnr séi;
4            nýtr mann-gi nás.

A halt man rides a horse; a handless drives a herd;
a deaf fights and avails.

Blind is better than be burned;
no man has use for a corpse.

- 72      Sonr es bętri, • þótt sé síð of alinn 2            ęptir ginginn guma;
             sjaldan bautar-stęinar • standa brautu nęr,
 4            nema ręsi niðr at nið.

A son is better, though he late be born after a passed-on man.
 Seldom beat-stones stand near the road,
 save by kinsman for kinsman raised.

1 Sonr es bętri ‘A son is better’ | i.e. it is better for a man to have a son and heir than not, even if the father should die some time before he is born. The son can further his father’s lineage and memory (as exemplified by the raising of a “beat-stone”), and as the poet says, it is rare for a non-relative to do so.

3 bautar-stęinar ‘beat-stones’ | Large standing stones raised in memory of someone. Numerous such stones with runic inscriptions are known from migration period Norway, often near grave fields. Some hold only single personal names or short phrases, like the stone from Sunde in Sunnfjord, western Norway (signum KJ 90): ÞIMNXXFTIY widugastir ‘Woodguest’, or the one from Bø in Rogaland, southwestern Norway (signum KJ 78): HTTBWF HTTF hnabdas hlaiwa ‘Naved’s grave’. Others hold longer inscriptions, like the one from Kjølevik in Rogaland (signum KJ 75): HTMTTKFY MKNXTTFY HTTFIDXTMFMHTX hadulaikaz ekhagustadaz hlaaiwidomaguminino ‘Hathlac [lies here]. I, Haystald, buried my lad.’

- 73      Tvęir ’ru ęins hęrjar, • tunga es hęfuðs bani;
 2            męr ’s í heðin hvęrn • handar vęni.

Two are of one host: the tongue is the head’s bane;
 in every cloak I expect a hand.

1–2 ALL | The whole st. fits poorly in context, and the metre and style are very out of place; it is probably a later insert.

1 Tvęir ’ru ęins hęrjar ‘Two are of one host’ | i.e. “the tongue and head belong to the same body (but the former often leads to the latter’s demise).” — hęrjar is an inflected form of hęrr ‘host, army’, but its function is ambiguous; it can either be (1) the gen. sg., as adopted here, or (2) the nom. pl. ‘harriers, raiders’ (cf. ęin-hęrjar ‘Oneharriers’) which would translate as “two are the destroyers of one”, i.e. “the tongue and head often lead to the demise of the body”.

1 tunga es hęfuðs bani ‘the tongue is the head’s bane’ | Formulaic or proverbial. Cf. the Old Swedish “Heathen Law”, which describes how a duel should be conducted following an insult to a man’s honour (my norm. and trans. following Löffler (1879)): Fallr þann orð havr givit—glópr orða vęrstr, tunga hovuð-bani—liggi i ú-gildum akri ‘If he falls who has given the [insulting] word—an insult is the worst of words, the tongue the head-bane—may he lie in an unhallowed field.’

2 handar ‘a hand’ | i.e. a hand holding a dagger.

- 74      Nótt verðr fęginn, • sá’s nesti trúir,
 2            skammar ’ru skips ráar,

2 skammar 'ru skips ráar 'short are a ship's sailyards' | TODO: Write about the varying interpretations (Finnur, Cleasby, Skp) of this line.

4 fimm dögum 'five days' | i.e. "in a week" (which was originally five days long), paralleling "month" in the next line. See note to st. 51 and Encyclopedia.

A man is wealthy, another not wealthy;
one oughtn't to curse him for his woe.

2 af aurum 'from wealth' | emend. from meaningless †aflaðrom† R

---

2 margr verðr af aurum api 'many a man turns an ape from wealth' | Cf. Sun 34/4: margan hefr auðr apat 'wealth has aped many a man', which also lends support to the emendation.

but a word-glory never dies, for whomever gets himself a good one.

1 fé ... frændr 'Fee ... kinsmen' | The import of this merism may be less clear to the modern reader. In the Germanic Iron Age farming society a man's wealth was reckoned by how many heads of cattle (and the Norman loan-word cattle is itself the same word as capital) he owned (cf. st. 70 above, where "a cow" is used to express "an opportunity"), and his social power by the number of able male relatives ready to side with him in conflict (cf. st. 72 above and TODO: reference?). The meaning is thus: all your power will pass away, and so too must you, but if you leave a good reputation behind it can live on. For Indo-European poetic analogues, see West (2007, pp. 99 ff.).

77      Deyr fé, · deyja frændr,

I know one that never dies:
the Doom† o'er each man dead.

It is likely that the original Guest-Strand ended here. The three following stanzas, especially the third, are poorly placed and seem like later inserts.

78 Fullar grindr · sá'k fyr Fitjungs sonum,

Full pens I saw for the sons of Fitting;
now they carry the staff of hope.
So is wealth like the twinkling of an eye:

2 v́anar vól ‘the staff of hope’ | A beggar’s staff.

80 Þat 's þa reynt, es þú at rúnnum spyr, · hinum rēgin-kunnum,

That is then proven, which thou learnest from the runes, those born of the Reins, those which the yin-Reins† made,
and the Fimble-Thyle (= Weden) painted.—
Then he has it best, if he shuts up.<sup>60</sup>

1 rúnum ... rēgin-kunnum ‘runes ... born of the Reins’ | This expression also appears on the C4th–6th Noleby stone (in the acc. sg. rúnó ragina-kundó ‘a rune born of the Reins’), which proves that the Eddic rune-magic is (at least in part) founded in oral tradition going back to the Heathen age. See also Encyclopedia rune†.

2–3 þeim’s ... Fimbul-þulr ‘those which ... Fimble-Thyle’ | Formulaic. Cf. st. 142 where these two lines occur almost identically, but in reverse order.

Scattered stanzas of practical advice

The following stanzas are distinguished by the prevalence of Speeches-meter and the common subject matter.

- 81     At kveldi skal dag leyfa, · konu es brēnnd es, 2         mēki es rēyndr es, · mēy es gefin es, ís es yfir kōmr, · ǫl es drukkit es.

At evening shall one praise day, a woman when she is burned, a sword when it is tried, a maiden when she is given,<sup>61</sup> ice when one crosses over, ale when it is drunk.

- 82     Í vindi skal við höggva, · veðri á sé róa, 2         myrkri við man spjalla— · mǫrg eru dags augu—á skip skal skriðar orka, · en á skjöld til hlífar, 4         mēki til höggs, · en mēy til kossa.

In wind shall one cut wood, in weather row at sea, in darkness speak with a maiden—many are the eyes of day.
A ship shall one have for speed, and a shield for protection;
a sword for striking, and a maiden for kisses.

1 veðri ‘weather’ | i.e. ‘in good weather’; elsewhere the word veðr typically means ‘storm’, but that can hardly be the sense here.

- 83     Við ǫld skal ǫl drekka, · en á ísi skriða,

- 2            magran mar kaupa, · en méki saurgan,
               heima hest fęita, · en hund á búi.

One shall drink ale by fire and skate on ice;
 buy a starved stallion and a rusty sword;
 fatten the horse at home and the hound in its dwelling.

- 84        Męyjar orðum · skyli mann-gi trúa, 2            né því's kveðr kona;
               því-at á hverfanda hvéli · vöru þeim hjęrtu sköpuð,
 4            brigð í brjóst of lagit.

A maiden's words should no man trust,
 nor that which a woman speaks.
 For on a whirling wheel their hearts were shaped;
 fickleness laid in their breasts.

3 því-at | om. FbrS 3 vöru | er FbrS 3 hjärtu sköpuð 'hearts shaped' | hјarta skapat 'heart shaped' FbrS
 4 brigð | ok brigð FbrS 4 lagit | laginn FbrS

3-4 þvít ... lagið | Quoted in slightly divergent form in FbrS (Thott 1768 4<sup>ox</sup>, fol. 210r) introduced with the words: Kom bonum þá í hug kviðlingr sá, er kveðinn hafði verit um lausungar-konur: 'And then he remembered the ditty which had been composed about loose women:'

- 85        Brestanda boga, · brinnanda loga, 2            gínanda ulfi, · galandi kröku,
               rýtanda svíni, · rót-laustum viði,
 4            vaxanda vági, · vellanda katli,

In bursting bow, in burning flame,
 in yawning wolf, in crowing crow,
 in roaring swine, in rootless tree,
 in waxing wave, in boiling kettle,

- 86        fljúganda flęini, · fallandi böru,
 2            ísi ęin-nęttum, · ormi hring-lęgnum,
               brúðar bęð-möllum · eða brotnu sverði, 4            bjarnar lęiki · eða barni konungs, in flying spear, in falling billow,

 in one-night old ice, in coiled-up serpent,
 in bride's bed-speech, or in broken sword,
 in bear's play, or in king's child,

- 87 sjúkum kalfi, · sjalf-ráða þrēli,
 2 völu vil-mēli, · val ný-fēldum.
 in sick calf, in self-willing thrall,
 in wallow's pleasing speech, in newly felled corpses,

2 völu vil-mēli 'in wallow's pleasing speech' | i.e. in a favourable prophecy (spae†).

In R the following two sts. come in the opposite order, but it seems probable from its Speeches-meter meter and the dative case of the words that 89 should follow 87. On the other hand st. 88, with its Leeds-meter meter and self-enclosed form seems a separate composition, and was probably inserted after 87 due to its first line (akri ár-sǫnum), which is also in the dative.

- 89 bróður-bana sínum · þótt á brautu móti, 2 húsi half-brunnu, · hęsti al-skjótum,
 þá 's jór ó-nýtr, · ef ęinn fótr brotnar;
 4 verður-it maður svá trygggr · at þessu trúi ǫllu!

in one's brother's bane—though on the road ye meet—in half-burned house, in all-fleet horse—
 the steed is useless if one foot breaks.
 No man be so trusting that he trust in all this!

- 88 Akri ár-sǫnum · trúi ęngi maður, 2 né til snimma syni;
 veður ręður akri, · en vit syni;
 4 hętt es þęira hvárt.

In an early sown field ought no man to trust,
 nor too soon in a son.
 The weather rules the field and the wits the son:
 there is risk to them both.

- 90 Svá 's friður kvinna · þęira's flátt hyggja,
 2 sęm aki jó ó-bryddum · á ísi hólum

 4 eða í byr óðum · þęiti stjórnlauðu, eða skyli haltr hęnda · hręin í þá-fjalli.

So is those women's love who falsely think like one rode an unshod horse on slippery ice—

a merry one, two winters old, and badly tamed—or in mad wind tacked a rudderless [ship], or a halt man should catch a reindeer on a thawing fell.

5 í þá-fjalli ‘on a thawing fell’ | i.e. in springtime, when the melting ice on the ground is most slippery.

Weden’s failed seduction of Billing’s daughter

The following sts. are united by their meter, Leeds-meter (unlike most of the preceding sts., see introduction to them above), style and content. The strand begins with general maxims about love and relations between the sexes, before moving on to the narrative about Billing’s daughter.

91      B̥ert nú mēli’k, · því-at b̥ēði v̥eit’k,
2                brigðr es karla hugr konum, þá f̥ęgrst m̥elum, · es flást hyggjum;
4                þat t̥elir horska hugi.

Plainly I now speak, for I know both:
fickle is men’s thought towards women.
We then speak fairest when we think falsest;
that entraps sharp minds.

1 b̥ēði ‘both’ | i.e. both sides, both sexes. The (male) poet declares that he will not attack the fair sex unfairly; he is also aware of men’s faults.

3 f̥ęgrst m̥elum ... flást hyggjum ‘speak fairest ... think falsest’ | Formulaic. Cf. st. 45.

4 þat t̥elir horska hugi ‘that entraps sharp minds’ | i.e., love (or sexual infatuation—the poet does not distinguish between them) turns even wise men into liars or otherwise dishonest persons. Cf. Mbkv 20/1–2, which is probably partly based on this stanza: Ást-blindir ’ru seggir svá · sumir, at þykkja mjök fás gá; þannig verðr um man-söng m̥elt: · marga befr þat hyggna t̥elt. ‘Some men are so love-blind, that they seem to heed very little; // for that sake it is said about love-song: many thinking men has it entrapped.’

92      Fagrt skal m̥ēla · ok f̥é bjóða, 2                sá’s vill fljóðs óst f̥aa, líki leyfa · hins ljósa mans,
4                sá f̥er, es fríar.

Fairly shall speak, and offer fee†,
he who will get a woman’s love;
praise the body of the bright girl;
he gets, who woos.

1 Fagrt skal méla 'Fairly shall speak' | Formulaic. Cf. st. 45.

4 sá fêr, es friar 'he gets, who woos' | i.e., "he who courts her gets her".

93     Ástar firna · skyli ęngi maðr
2             annan aldri-gi;
           opt fãa à horskan, · es à hęimskan né fãa,
4             lost-fagrir litir.

For [matters of] love should no man ever blame another;
oft they seize the sharp when they seize not the foolish, the lust-fair hues.

4 lost-fagrir litir 'lust-fair hues' | i.e. a (woman with a) countenance so beautiful that men cannot help but lust after her.

94     Eý-vitar firna, · es maðr annan skal,
2             þess es of margan ęęngr guma;
           hęimska ór horskum · ęęrir hǫlða sonu
4             sá hinn mátki munr.

In no way shall man blame another for that which happens to many a man; from sharp to fools are the sons of men made by that mighty thing, love.

95     Hugn ęinn þat veit, · es býr hjarta nér,
2             ęinn es hann sér of sefa;
           ęng es sóttr verri · hvęim snotrum manni
4             an sér ęngu at una.

The mind alone knows what dwells close to the heart;
it is alone with its thoughts.
No sickness is worse for any clever man than with nothing to be content.

96     Þat þa ręynda'k, · es í ręyri sat'k,
2             ok vętta'k míns munar, hold ok hjarta · vas mér hin horska mér,
4             þęygi hana at hęldr hęf'k.

I experienced it then, as I sat in the reed,
and awaited my love.

My flesh and heart was that sharp maiden—
I have her none the more.

97 Billings mey · ek fann bęđjum á 2 sól-hvíta sofa;
jarls ynđi · þótti mér ękki vesa
4 nema við þat lík at lífa.

Billing's maiden I found on the beds,
sun-white, asleep.
An earl's pleasure seemed me naught to be,
save living alongside that body.

1 mey 'maiden' | i.e. unmarried (virgin) daughter.

[Billings męr:]

98 „Auk nęr aptni · skalt Óđinn koma, 2 ef vilt þér męla man,
allt eru ó-sköp, · nema ęin vitim
4 slikan lęst saman.“

“And by evening shalt thou, Weden, come,
if thou wilt get for thee the girl [me];
everything's misshapen unless we alone should know,
such a vice together.”

[Billing's maiden:]

99 Aptr ek hvarf · ok unna þóttumk
2 vísum vilja frá;
hitt ek hugđa, · at hafa mynda'k
4 gęđ hęnnar allt ok gaman.

Back I turned—and thought myself in love—away from my wise will;
this I thought: that I would have her senses all, and pleasure.

2 vísum vilja frá 'away from my wise will' | i.e., “against my better judgment”; the wise choice would have been to walk away.

100 Svá kom'k nęst, · at hin nýta vas
2 víg-drótt ęll of vakin, međ brinnęndum ljósum · ok bornum viði,
4 svá vas mér víl-stigr of vitađr.

So I came next, as the useful war-troop was all awake;
with burning lights and with carried sticks;
so a sad path was marked out for me.

1 nýta ‘useful’ | Sarcastic. Billing’s daughter had apparently summoned a lynch mob.

3 bornum viði ‘carried sticks’ | lit. ‘carried wood’; the mob was armed with clubs.

4 víl-stígr ‘sad path’ | Ambiguous, referring either to the beating he would have received at the hands of the mob, or to his walk of shame away from the hall. The latter is perhaps more likely.

101     Auk nę́r morni, · es vas’k ęnn of kominn,
2                þa vas sal-drótt of sofin;
              greę ęitt þa fann’k · hinnar góðu konu
4                bundit bęðjum á.

And by morning when I had come again,
then was the hall-troop asleep.
A lone bitch I then found, by the good woman bound on the beds.

1 Auk nę́r morni ‘And by morning’ | Mirroring the beginning of st. 97 above.

3 greę ęitt ‘A lone bitch’ | The insult is clearly understood; Weden is compared to a horny dog, and mockingly asked to make love to one—“this is all you get, you dog!”

3 góðu ‘good’ | Possibly not sarcastic, but rather referring to her chastity.

102     Męrg es góð mę́r, · ef gęrva kannar,
2                hug-brigð við hali;
              þa þat ręynda’k, · es hit ráð-spaka 4                tęygða’k á flęðir fljóð;
              hęðungar hęrrar · lęitaði mę́r hit horska man
6                ok hafða’k þess vęt-ki vífs.

Many a good maiden—if one comes to know her well—is heart-fickle towards men.
I found that out when the counsel-clever lady into sins I lured:
all kinds of disgraces that sharp girl sought out for me, and I had naught of the woman.

1 góð mę́r ‘good maiden’ | A formulaic expression; the “goodness” here refers to faithfulness and chastity. Cf. Shir 12, TODO.

Weden's theft of the Mead of Poetry (104–110)

The intricate myth of how Weden came to own the Mead of Poetry is told more fully in Scold 5–6. That narrative goes as follows, with minor details left out: After the war between the Eese and Wanes, the two tribes of gods reconcile through spitting into a vat. Not wanting to discard this token of their truce, they instead create a man out of the spit, calling him Quasher†; he is so wise that he can answer any question posed to him, and so travels around the world in order to share his wisdom with humans. Quasher eventually comes to the dwelling of two dwarfs, Fealer and Galer. They kill him and drain his blood into three vessels: two vats named Soon and Bothem, and a kettle named Woderearer†. Through mixing the blood with honey they make a mead, with the power to turn anyone who drinks from it “a scold or man of learning (skald eða fróða-maðr)”. The dwarfs then lie to the Eese about the murder, telling them that Quasher drowned in his own wisdom. Some time later, the dwarfs murder an ettin named Gilling† and his wife. Gilling's son, Sutting†, learns of this and prepares to drown the dwarfs. In exchange for their lives and as recompense for his father's slaying, the dwarfs offer Sutting the “dear mead” (mjóðinn dýra; cf. here sts. 105 and 140). Sutting accepts the ransom and takes the mead home with him. He makes his daughter Guthlathe† guard it. Some time later, Weden is out journeying, and finds nine thralls mowing hay. He sharpens their scythes with a special whetstone, and the mowing improves greatly. He then throws it in the air and the thralls shortly kill each other over it. By evening Weden comes to the owner of the thralls, Bigh, Sutting's brother. Bigh laments the death of his workmen, and so Weden, who calls himself Baleworker†, offers to do the work of the thralls over the summer, in exchange for one drink of Sutting's mead. Bigh tells him that Sutting alone owns the mead, but that he will accompany Baleworker to Sutting to ask for the drink. The two arrive at Sutting, who as expected refuses to give any part of the mead away. Baleworker then tells Bigh that he will get to it anyway; he takes out the drill Rate†, and tells Bigh to drill through the mountain, into the room where the mead is stored. Bigh first attempts to trick him by only drilling halfway, but eventually creates a narrow passage. Baleworker turns himself into a snake and crawls through it; as he does, Bigh tries to strike him the drill, but misses. After coming through, Baleworker sees Guthlathe watching over the mead. He goes on to sleep with her for three nights, after which she promises him three sips of the mead. With each sip he swallows the contents of one of the three vessels, so that all of the mead ends up in his belly. Having taken the mead, he dons his eagle-hame and flies away from the mountain. Sutting sees him, takes his own eagle-hame, and gives chase. The Eese see Weden in flight, and set out several large vat on the ground, into which Weden, still flying, spits out the mead. At this point Sutting has almost caught up with him, and so Weden “sends back” (senda aþtr, usually interpreted being sent out from the anus) some of the mead, presumably into his face. This portion becomes the lot of foolish poets (skald-fífla blutr), while the rest of the mead is given to the Eese and to skilled poets (þeim mǫnnum, er yrkja kunnu ‘those men who can compose [poetry]’).

The core of this many-twisted myth is old. A close parallel is found in RV hymns 4.26–27. In these two hymns the soma plant (who in the Vedic mythology is not just the plant and its resulting drink, but also a god, perhaps somewhat like Quasher) is first held within “a hundred iron forts” (4.27.1c: śatām púraḥ āyasīḥ) by the archer Kṛṣṇānu, before being stolen by a sweeping falcon. The falcon brings Soma to Manu, the ancestor of the Aryans and first sacrificer.

The resemblance to the last part of the Scold account should be obvious, but, notably, the detail of the falcon is not found in any of the sts. below. This shows that the narrative of Scold cannot be exclusively based on the sts. here below, but instead also relies on other, now-lost sources. This is also supported by the present sts. leaving out the narratives about Quasher, the two dwarfs, and Baye, along with some subtler narrative differences.

The order of the present sts. follows that of R, their main witness manuscript. The strand begins with some social advice (103), after which the narrative follows (104–110). It is narrated in the first person by Weden himself. The sts. do not tell the myth in chronological order and leave much up to the listener; they are surely composed for an audience that already knows the story. The following narrative details are given:

104. Weden visits Sutting's home, but does not receive a good reception.
105. Guthlathe falls in love with Weden, and gives him a drink of the Mead.
106. Weden has to bore through the mountains with the drill Rate.
107. Weden has "bought [the Mead] well"; possibly a euphemistic reference to sleeping with Guthlathe for it.
108. Guthlathe indeed does sleep with Weden, though not expressly in exchange for the Mead.
109. The following day (bins bindra dags, see note to this word in the edited text below), a group of Rime-Thurses come to Weden's hall, to ask him whether a Baleworker is among the Gods, or if he has been slain by Sutting.
110. Switching to the third person (which may indicate that this is his answer to the Rime-Thurses), Weden says that he "thinks" that Weden has sworn an oath, but that his words cannot be trusted. After the "simble" (i.e. drinking feast, banquet; probably referring to the drink of the Mead), Weden betrayed Sutting and made Guthlathe weep.

The underlying narrative seems to generally agree with that of Scold, but unlike its more transactional affair, we here find a stronger emphasis on Weden's cruel betrayal of Guthlathe. A notable detail not found in Scold is Weden's oath in st. 109. The content of the oath was most likely that Weden would marry Guthlathe, something supported by the language used (see note to st. 108: bins bindra dags). The recipient of the oath, which Weden clearly broke, was either Sutting or Guthlathe. That Weden swore it to Sutting, and thus asked him for Guthlathe's hand in marriage, may be suggested by the description of Sutting as svikvinn 'betrayed' in st. 109. This view, however, has an internal narrative problem: in st. 103 Weden describes his interaction with Sutting as poor, and in st. 105 Weden is said to have had to bore through the mountains, but this may just have been to reach Sutting, rather than Guthlathe as in Scold. The recipient of the oath being Guthlathe would agree better with the Scold narrative, and Sutting's betrayer would instead be her.

1–4 Vei ... jaðar | Taken on its own this st. would be somewhat difficult, but in context the import is clear: Woden says that He has made good use of the Mead of Poetry by bringing it to earth, making poetry (and surely likewise other intellectual disciplines) available to men.

3 Óð-rórir ‘Woderearer’ | One of the vessels in with the Mead of Poetry was held (see introduction to the present section above), here standing in for all the Mead.

1 Hins hindra dags ‘The following day’ | This is the only occurrence of the comparative bindra ‘following, next’ in the Norse (i.e. ‘belonging to Norway and its colonies’) literature. The superlative bindstr ‘last, final’ does occur more often (e.g. indsta sinni ‘the last time’, with loss of the b-; see CV: bindri), and the possible derivative bindar-dags ‘day after tomorrow, two days after’ is found twice, both times in the Gole, chh. 37 and 266. If we, however, search in the broader Scandinavian sphere, we find in the Swedish provincial laws an exact equivalent of the present phrase, namely OSwe. bindra-dagber, a law-word referring specifically to the ‘day after the wedding’, used both on its own and in the expression bindra-dags gief ‘morning gift’. If this is indeed the sense in the present stanza, two interpretations are possible: it either (i) refers sarcastically to Woden’s sleeping with Guthlathe (as would be done on the wedding night), or (ii) means that Woden actually married, or promised to marry, Guthlathe. The latter interpretation may find support in st. 109, see notes there.

- 110 Baug-ęið Óðinn • hygg at unnit hafi,

A high-oath† I ween that Woden has sworn—how shall one trust his truces?

and Guthlathe, made to weep.

1–4 Baug-ęið ... Gunn-lęðu ‘A high-oath ... brought to tears’<sup>TM</sup> | The exact narrative referred to in the stanza is hard to pin down, but I find the following most likely: Weden swore an oath on a high, its contents being that he would marry Guthlathe. Sutting then hosted a simble (banquet, drinking feast) for the new couple (cf. bins bindra dags in st. 108), and Weden slept with her, but after. svikvinn ‘betrayed’ and gróttu ‘brought to tears’ are (respectively masc. and fem.) acc. sg. past participles of the transitive verbs svikva ‘to betray’ and gróta ‘to make weep, bring to tears’. I read lét as meaning ‘left, abandoned, forsook’.

The Speeches of Loddfathomer

ON Loddfáfnis mól.

A series of advice stanzas addressed to Loddfathomer†, an otherwise unknown figure who is clearly mythological. The name is a compound: the first element, lodd-, is related to ON loddari ‘juggler, tramp’, OE loddere ‘pauper, beggar’; the second, Fáfnir (Fathomer†), is the name of a famous Wýrm and literally means ‘embracer’. This name gives a picture of an archetypal “bumbling fool”; he is taught by Weden, his opposite.

The section division is found in R. Stanza 111 has a large initial M, albeit smaller than those which introduce new chapters and poems, and the beginning of the following section, the Rune-Tally, is also clearly marked by an initial.

I heeded the matters of men.

Of runes I heard them speak, nor did they shut up about counsels,

I heard them say so:<sup>62</sup>

<sup>62</sup>The speaker, describing himself as a thyle (þulr ‘sage, chanter of memorized poetry’), says that he will relate what he has heard said in Walhall. Considering the location, it seems almost certain that the giver of this advice was its owner, Woden†. The receiver of the advice, Loddfathomer† (see Encyclopedia for etymologies), is otherwise unknown.

5 leitir þér innan út staðar ‘or thou look for thy place outside’ | Lit. word-for-word “or thou look for thee from within out a place”, which becomes nonsensical. leita sér staðar ‘look for one’s place’ is a euphemism, i.e. “to relieve oneself”, which was done outside.

1 Ofar-la 'Sorely' | Contraction of ofar-liga 'CV: high up, in the upper part', presumably meaning that the words were particularly grievous or insulting, i.e., they "got to him". Whether he was murdered or committed suicide is not clear.

4 líkn-fastan ‘steadfast in liking’ | The first element líkn ‘liking’ is somewhat difficult; see sts. 8 (with note) and 120. For the present cpd La Farge and Tucker (1992) give a tentative ‘assured of favour’, while CV gives ‘fast in goodwill, beloved’.

 Up shalt thou not look in battle —alike to a madman become the sons of men—
 lest men bewitch thy [sense/life/face].<sup>66</sup>

<sup>66</sup>A very difficult st. CV explains gjalti as an old dative of goltr ‘boar, hog’, and thus sees the closely related phrase verða at gjalti as “to be turned into a hog”, i.e. ‘to turn mad with terror’, esp. in a fight”. The vowel breaking is however unexpected here, since goltr (< Proto-Norse **galtur*) is an u-stem, which makes the stem-vowel in the dat. sg. galti (< **galtiu*, cf. kunimudiu, dat. sg. of **Kunimundur*, on the Tjurkö 1 bracteate) the result of i-umlaut rather than an original short **e*.

La Farge and Tucker (1992) instead explain the word as a borrowing from Old Irish geilt ‘insane, mad’. Pettit (1986) follows this, and argues that the whole theme of the st. probably be of Celtic origin, giving several examples from Celtic literature of warriors going mad upon looking up into the sky during battle. In this case the men (halir, which word seems to have an association with warriors; cf. 36–37, 49) would be to quote Pettit some sort of “supernatural sky warriors”, in my opinion most likely the Oneharriers†.

The Rune-Tally

This group of stanzas is introduced by a large initial in R, marking the beginning of a new section. In younger paper manuscripts they have the header Rúna-tals þátrr 'Strand of the Rune-Tally', and generally give an archaic, mystic impression; at times one gets a feeling that they were drawn from the lips of an Odinic priest.

Apart from these stanzas there are a few other instances of similar Runic magic. Closest at hand is st. 80 above, which would fit seamlessly into the present section. Outside of Higb there is Syed 4–16, also preserved in R.

I know that I hung on the windy beam, for nine nights all;

wounded by spear and given to Weden—myself to myself—
on that beam, which no man knows, of whose roots it runs.

- 139 Við hlēifi mik sóldu-t · né við horni-gi;
2 nýsta ek niðr, · nam’k upp rúnar, óþandi nam, · fell’k aptr þaðan.

With loaf they relieved me not, nor with any horn.
I peered down; I took up the runes;
screaming I took; I fell back thence.

1 hlēifi ... horni-gi ‘loaf ... horn’ | i.e. “I got neither bread nor drink.”

- 140 Fimbul-ljóð níu · nam’k af hinum frégja syni

1 Fimbul-ljóð níu ‘Nine fimble-leeds’ | Nine very great chants or spells (galders†), compare the eighteen leads below (st. 147 onward). It is unclear what this has to do with Weden’s Hanging; this stanza may be an insert.

1–2 hinum frégja syni Bólþorns, Bęstlu fōður ‘the famous son of Balethorn, Bestle’s father’ | According to Yilv 6, Byre got Bestle for a wife, the daughter of the ettin Balethorn. By her he fathered three sons: Weden, Will and Wigh. The “famous son of Balethorn” would then be Weden’s maternal uncle. This reflects the old Indo-European custom of sending sons away to be fostered by the male relations of the mother. Cf. TODO: some reference.

Then I began to flourish, and be learned, and grow and have it well.
My word from a word a word sought out;
my work from a work a work sought out.

1 nam'k frévkask 'I began to flourish' | A notorious mistranslation popularized by David F. Greenberg (1988) has rendered these words as "I took semen". They would supposedly reference Weden stealing the ejaculate from hanged men in order to replenish his own powers—something not otherwise attested. This preposterous notion makes no sense in the context of the text and has no philological grounding. While Old Norse fré does mean "seed", it only refers to the seeds of plants, not the seed animals or men. Regardless, frévkask is without doubt a reflexive verb literally meaning something like 'cultivate oneself'.

3–4 orð ... lęitaði. 'My word ...sought out.' | i.e. "Every good speech led to another; every good deed likewise."

142 Rúnar munt finna · ok ráðna stafi, and the yin-Reins† made,

 and Roft (= Weden) of the Reins carved.

6 ragna 'of the Reins' | 'ręgna' R

1 Rúnar ... ok ráðna stafi 'Runes ... and interpreted staves' | Formulaic. Cf. the long-line on the medieval runestone N 13 (excerpt): rúnar ek ríst · ok ráðna stafi 'runes I carve, and interpreted staves.'

143 Óðinn með ęsum, · en fyr ęlfum Dáinn,

 Oswith† for the Ettins;
 I myself carved some.

4 ek 'I' | The identity of the speaker is unclear; one would expect it to be Weden, but He is already named in line 1.

144 Vęitst, hvé rísta skal? · Vęitst, hvé ráða skal?
 2 Vęitst, hvé fáa skal? · Vęitst, hvé fręista skal?
 Vęitst, hvé biðja skal? · Vęitst, hvé blóta skal?
 4 Vęitst, hvé sęnda skal? · Vęitst, hvé sóa skal?

Knowest thou how one shall carve? Knowest thou how one shall read?
 Knowest thou how one shall paint? Knowest thou how one shall try?
 Knowest thou how one shall bid? Knowest thou how one shall blood†?
 Knowest thou one shall send? Knowest thou how one shall soo†?<sup>70,71</sup>

<sup>70</sup>A neat semantic structure would be found if the former four verbs referred to runes†: carving, interpreting, painting (with blood?), and divining; and the latter four referred to sacrifice: asking for boons, worshipping, sending (the sacrifice or the prayer; making sure the gods receive it), and slaying the victim. This may be supported by the following stanza, which repeats the last four verbs here in what looks like a sacrificial context. See further relevant Encyclopedia entries.

145      Bętra 's ọ-beđit · an sé of·blótit,
 2              ęy sér til gildis gjof;
             bętra 's ọ-sęnt · an sé of·sóit;
 4              [...]

It's better unbid than overblooded†;
 a gift always sees repayment.
 It's better unsent than oversooed†;

4 [...] | For metrical reasons it is very likely that a line has been lost here.

<sup>72</sup>An identical progression of four verbs suggests a close relation with the previous st. — The sense seems to be that it is better not to sacrifice at all than to sacrifice in excess, since even a small gift (to the gods) will be rewarded. A ritual cycle of gifts and rewards between men and the gods is also seen in other Indo-European pagan literatures. Compare the Sanskrit Debī me, dáđāmi te 'Give to me, I give to thee' and Latin dō ut dēs 'I give that thou might give'.

146      Svá Þundr of reist · fyr þjóđa røk,
 2              þar's upp of reis, · es aþtr of kom.

So Thound† (= Weden) did carve for the rakes of nations, where up he rose as back he came.<sup>73</sup>

The Leed-Tally (147–165)

This section of High, the so-called the Leed-Tally (Ljóđatal), is not separated from the preceding section (which is marked out with a large initial), but is usually taken as separate since it is a self-contained list not much concerned with runes. The speaker (certainly Weden) recounts eighteen spells, apparently to Loddfathomer. The spells themselves are not listed; only their use and effects. They are aristocratic and Odinic in character, and deal with such things as battle (3, 4, 5, 8, 11, 13), healing (spell 2, 12), countering sorcery (6, 10), controlling the elements (7, 9), and seduction (16, 17). The eighteenth and last spell must remain mysterious; not even its purpose is told, and it is known only to Weden and his lover.

The eighteen have some similarities with other known spells and lists of spells. The fourth bears a strong likeness to Growe 10, and its effect (removing fetters) is shared with the High German Mers I, where such a spell is actually found.

I know the third, if I come in great need of hindrance against my feud-lads [ENEMIES];
 I dull the edges of my opponents;

4 vęlir 'staffs' | plural of vplr, a magic staff used by witches and warlocks. The word vplva 'wallow†' (seeress, prophetess) derives from this word. The reading vęlir 'wiles, tricks, deceits' must be excluded for metrical reasons since a Leeds-meter c-verse cannot end in a trochée.

150 Þat kann’k fjórða, · ef mér fyrðar bera

I know the fourth, if men bear bonds onto my shoulder-limbs:
 so I gale that I may walk;

 and off my hands the bond.<sup>75</sup>

<sup>75</sup>Cf. Grove 10, which is very similar to the present stanza, and Mers I (edited below under Galders), a galder that seems to have actually been used for the purpose of removing fetters.

151 Þat kann’k fimta, · ef sé’k af fāri skotinn

 if I see it with my sights.

152 Þat kann’k sétta, · ef mik sérir þegn
 2 á rótum rás viðar, þann hal, · es mik heipta kveðr,
 4 þann eta mein heldr an mik.

I know the sixth, if athane wounds me on the roots of a raw/sappy tree:
that man who sings hatred against me,
him the harms eat, rather than me.

1–2 ef mik sérir þegn á rótum rás viðar ‘if athane wounds me on the roots of a raw/sappy tree’ | i.e., “if someone carves a runic curse directed against me”. The sappy wood was apparently thought to be important for the curse to work. Cf. Gretter 79, where a hag curses Gretter in the following way: after finding a small tree and planing a small smooth surface onto a burnt side of it, she carves runes in its roots and reddens them with her own blood. She then chants galders† while walking counter-clockwise around it. She last pushes it out to sea, praying for it to drift to Gretter’s homestead, cursing him. Cf. also Shir 32 where a brár viðr ‘raw/sappy tree’ occurs in the context of a curse.

2 rás ‘raw/sappy’ | The normal form of this word is **brár* (cf. Shir 32), but the required alliteration with rótum makes it impossible here.

153 Þat kann’k sjaunda, · ef sé’k hōvan loga

2                   sal of sess-mögum,

I know the seventh, if I see a high hall blazing over seat-lads [WARRIORS]:
 it burns not so broadly that I may not save it<sup>76</sup>— that galder I can gale.

I know the tenth, if I see town-rideresses† playing aloft:
 I accomplish it so that they go astray from their home-hames†;
 from their home-minds.<sup>77</sup>

3 þeir villar fara ‘they (fem.) go astray’ | emend.; þeir villir fara ‘they (masc.) go astray’ R

<sup>77</sup>The riður ‘(female) riders’ were witches who would leave their original human shapes or skins (hamir) in order to fly around in the air tormenting and poisoning villagers. Their original bodies would then be lying in a coma-like state, in something resembling that which is today called astral projection. Yet, it was not the case that their whole mental faculties would disconnect from their bodies, but rather they would leave behind something of their humanity, which was thought to be inextricably linked to their human bodies. Woden was through his second sight able to see these riders, and could then use his superior magical skill to confuse them so that they would not be able to return to their human “home”-shapes or minds, but were instead forced to stray as tormented disentangled ghosts; a cruel fate. — Woden likewise brags about tricking riders in Hbl 20.

1–2 ef skal'k þegn ungan verpa vatni á 'if on a young thane I shall throw water' | A reference to the Heathen name-giving ceremony in which the infant would be sprinkled with water; cf. the attestations in Rígh 7, 21, 34.

These leeds wilt thou, Loddfathomer, long be lacking!
Though they would be good for thee if thou get,
useful if thou learn,
needful if thou receive.

I know the eighteenth, which I never teach a maiden nor man’s woman—everything is better when one alone can do it;
that follows the end of the leeds—save for her alone who with her arm guards me, or who is my sister.

5 mik armi vęrr ‘with her arm guards me’ | A similar expression is also used Wǫl 2. — The one who wraps Węden in her arm may be His wife, Fric. He has no known sister.

Now are the High One’s speeches sung in the High One’s hall;
of great use for the sons of men;

of harm for the sons of ettins.
Hail he who sang; hail he who knows;

The Speeches of Webthrithner

(Vafþrúðnismól)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C10th (0.894)

Meter: Leeds-meter

A wisdom contest poem, known by the author of Yilv.

Far from being a loose collection of pieces of mythic information, the poem is tightly structured.

Weden first asks his wife, Frie, for counsel, as he is curious about the ancient wisdom which the ettin Webthrithner might possess (1). Frie expresses worry, as she considers Webthrithner wiser than all other ettins (2), but Weden says that he has travelled far and wide, and wishes to know what Webthrithner's hall is like (3). Frie wishes Weden good luck against the ettin (4) and he departs, to challenge Webthrithner's orð-spēki 'word-wisdom' (5). He arrives at hall of Webthrithner (6), who promptly declares that Weden will not come out of the hall unless he be wiser than him (7). Weden introduces himself as Gainred, saying that he has travelled far in need of Webthrithner's hospitality (8). Webthrithner invites Weden to sit down (9), but he instead utters a gnomic stanza (10) not unlike those of the first section of Highb.

Webthrithner then begins to ask questions relating to the mythology, each answered by Weden in turn. The questions concern which horses pull the day (11–12) and night (13–14), the river which divides the gods and ettins (15–16) and the plain where Surt and the gods will fight (17–18).

Webthrithner calls the god learned, invites him to sit on the bench, and declares that the loser of the contest must give his head (19). The roles are now reversed, and Weden asks the ettin about the origins of earth and heaven (20–21), of sun and moon (22–23), of day, night, and the phases of the moon (24–25), and of winter and summer (26–27); then about the earliest being, namely the ettin Earyelmer† (28–29), his origins (30–31) and how he reproduced asexually (32–33). Weden continues by asking what Webthrithner himself first remembers (34–35), about the origin of the wind (36–37), the god Nearth† (38–39), Walhall and the Oncharriers (40–41), and where Webthrithner learned these esoteric pieces of wisdom (42–43).

After this the structure and tone of the questions change; each one begins with the same first half as that of st. 3, and they concern the end-times. Weden asks which humans will survive after the Fimble-winter (44–45), how the sun will rise after Fenrer has destroyed it (46–47), about some obscure maidens (48–49; see discussion there), which Eese will survive after the flame of Surt goes out (50–51) and how Weden will die (52–53). Finally, he asks what Weden spoke in the ear of Balder before he was burned on the pyre (54). Webthrithner at last understands the identity of his challenger, since only Weden himself could know the answer to that question. He laconically accepts his imminent death and the futility of his word-wisdom (55); the poem ends with his admission that Weden will always be the wisest (56).

[Frie quoth:]

- 5      Fór þá Óðinn · at freista orð-spēki [R 7v/17]
 2            þess hins al-svinna jǫtuns;
             at hǫllu kom, · es átti Hymis faðir;
 4            inn gekk Yggr þegar.

Then journeyed Woden to test the word-wisdom of that all-wise ettin.

To the hall he came, which the father of Hymer† [= Webthrithner] owned;
 shortly walked Ug† (= Weden) inside.

                                          Whence Earth did come, or Up-heaven†,
                                          first, O learned ettin?”
                                          Weden:

1 óði | The first word on fol. 3r. of A; from this point we have the poem in both manuscripts.

Vafþrúðnir: 21 „Ór Ymis holdi · vas jorð of sköpuð, 2 en ór bœinum björg,
himinn ór hausi · hins hrím-kalda jötuns,
4 en ór sveita sér.“ [R 8r/10, A 3r/2]

Webthrithner: “From Yimer†’s flesh was the earth shaped, and from his bones the mountains;
heaven from the skull of the rime-cold ettin,
and from his blood the sea.”<sup>80</sup>

4 sveita ‘blood’ | Cf. Sont 3/3 jötuns hals · undir þjóta ‘the neck-wounds of the ettin [SEAS] roar’. In poetry svēiti ‘sweat’ almost always means ‘blood’. This is shared with OE swāt, as seen e.g. in Beow 1286a: sweord swāte fāb ‘sword stained with “sweat”’, 2689b–2690: bé ge-blódegod wearð // sâwul-dríore; · swât jðum wéoll. ‘he was bloodied in soul-gore; the “sweat” gushed in waves’.

<sup>80</sup>The present st. very closely resembles Grim 41; lines 1 and 4 here are identical to lines 1–2 there, and lines 2 and 3a here are very similar to line 3a and 4 there. Although the stanzas are clearly related, they are still distinct enough that the one cannot be a direct scribal copy of the other. I think that the relation is most likely to be oral, and that the two stanzas were both composed in the same, most likely West Norwegian, community of poets, or perhaps even by the same individual.

Óðinn: 22 „Sæg þat annat, · ef þitt óði dugir
2 ok þú Vafþrúðnir vitir, hvaðan Máni of kom, · svá’t færr menn yfir,
4 eða Sól hit sama.“ [R 8r/12, A 3r/3]

Weden: “Say the other, if thy wisdom avails,
and thou, Webthrithner, mightst know:
Whence Moon did come, he that journeys over men, or Sun likewise?”

Vafþrúðnir: 23 „Mundil-fari heitir, · hann’s Mána faðir 2 ok svá Sólur hit sama;
himin hverfa · þau skulu hverjan dag
4 ǫldum at ár-tali.“ [R 8r/13, A 3r/4]

Webthrithner: “Mundlefare† is he called; he is Moon’s father, and so of Sun likewise.
Turn round in heaven shall they, every day,
for the year-tally of mankind.”

4 ǫldum at ár-tali ‘for the year-tally of mankind’ | Cf. Wsp 6, where the Reins gave names to night, the moon-phases, morning, midday, afternoon, and evening ǫrum at tēlja ‘the years for to tally’.

Óðinn: 24 „Sæg þat þriðja, · alls þik svinnan kveða [R 8r/15, A 3r/6]

2 ok þú Vaf-þrúðnir vitir,
hvaðan Dagr of kom, · sá's fęrr drótt yfir,
4 eða Nótta með niðum.“

“Say the third, as they call thee wise,
and thou, Webthritner, mightst know:
Whence Day came, he that journeys over the retinue, or Night with the moon-phases?”

Weden:

Vafþrúðnir: 25 „Dellingr heitir, · hann's Dags faðir, 2 en Nótta vas Nęrvi borin;
ný ok nið · skópu nýt řęgin
4 ęldum at ár-tali.“

[R 8r/17, A 3r/8]

“Delling† is he called; he is Day†'s father, but Night† was born to Narrow†.
The waxing and waning did the useful Reins create
for the year-tally of mankind.”

Webthritner:

3 ný ok nið ‘The waxing and waning’ | i.e. “the moon-phases”. Cf. Węp 6.

Óðinn kvað: 26 „Sęg þat fjórða, · alls þik fróðan kveða,
2 ok þú Vaf-þrúðnir vitir,
hvaðan vetr of kom · eða varmt sumar
4 fyrst með fróð řęgin.“

[R 8r/18, A 3r/9]

“Say the fourth, as they call thee learned,
and thou, Webthritner, mightst know:
Whence winter did come, or warm summer,
first, among the learned Reins?”

Weden quoth:

Vafþrúðnir: 27 „Vind-svalr heitir, · hann's Vettrar faðir,
2 en Svósuðr Sumars.“

[R 8r/20, A 3r/10]

“Windswoll† is he called; he is Winter†'s father;
but Sosuth† [is] Summer†'s.”

Webthritner:

---

1–2 Vind-svalr ... Sumars | The second half of the st. seems to be missing.

Óðinn kvað: 28 „Sęg þat fimta, · alls þik fróðan kveða,
2 ok þú Vaf-þrúðnir vitir,
hvęrr ása ęldstr · eða Ymis niðja

[R 8r/21, A 3r/11]

4 yrði í ár-daga.“

Weden quoth: “Say the fifth, as they call thee learned,
and thou, Webthrithner, mightst know:
Who of the Eese†, or of Yimer’s kinsmen [ETTINS], in days of yore might have become eldest?<sup>81</sup>”

---

<sup>81</sup>i.e. ‘which being arose first of all?’ Cf. the question on the C9th Malt Stone (DR NOR1988;5): hvarisi : alistiqsa, perhaps Hvar es inn elisti ása? ‘Who is the eldest of the Eese?’

Vafþrúðnir: 29 „Ør-ófi vetra · áðr véri jorð of sköpuð, [R 8r/22, A 3r/12] 2 þá vas Ber-gælmir borinn, þrúð-gælmir · vas þess faðir,
4 en Aur-gælmir afi.“

Webthrithner: “Uncountable winters before the Earth was created, then was Bareyelm† born.
Thrithyelm† was that one’s father,
and Earyelm† the grandfather.”

Óðinn kvað: 30 „Sæg þat sétta, · alls þik svinnan kveða, [R 8r/23, A 3r/14]
2 ok þú Vaf-þrúðnir vitir,
hvaðan Aur-gælmir kom · með jötna sonum
4 fyrst, hinn fróði jötunn.“

Weden quoth: “Say the sixth, as they call thee wise,
and thou, Webthrithner, mightst know:
Whence Earyelm came among the sons of ettins,
first, O learned ettin?”

Vafþrúðnir: 31 „Ør Éli-vógum · stukku eittr-dropar, [R 8r/25, A 3r/15, G] 2 svá óx unds ór varð jötunn;
þar órar éttir · kómu allar saman;
4 því’s þat é alt til atalt.“

Webthrithner: “From the Illewaves† splashed venom-drops;
so it grew until it formed an ettin.
Our lineages came there all together, thus it is ever all too fierce.”

1–4 ALL | Over æons the splashing venom-drops combined until they formed a sentient being: this was Earyelm, whom Yilv identifies with Yimer†. This stanza is cited in support of the lengthy and embellished creation narrative found in Yilv, but it is not certain that this is what our poet had in mind.

The Illeaves are probably a reflex of the chaotic primeval Waters found in many West Eurasian mythologies, including Genesis 1:1–3 and RV 10.129. Of these two foundational religious sources the latter is closer to the present stanza, and probably holds the more archaic conception. Where we find in the Jewish narrative a proper creation; at the very beginning of time God's spirit is on the Waters and He makes the light shine over them, we find in these two Indo-European texts a spontaneous emergence of a single primeval entity long before the Gods are born—here from the violent splashing of venom, in RV 10.129.3 from “the power of heat” (tāpasah mabinā). This entity in turn asexually begets sexual beings—here through rubbing his limbs together, in RV 10.129.4 simply giving rise to “desire” (kāma) which serves as the “primal seed of thought” (mānasah rétaḥ prathamām)—and it is from these that the world is populated.

3–4 órar ... atalt 'Our ... fierce' | so G; om. RA.

4 þat 'it' | i.e. the ettin race.

- Óðinn kvað: 32 „Sæg þat sjaunda, · alls þik svinnan kveða,
2 ok þú Vaf-þrúðnir vitir,
hvé sá bōrn gat · hinn baldni jōtunn,
4 es hann hafði-t gýgjar gaman.“
- “Say the seventh, as they call thee wise,
and thou, Webthrithner, mightst know:
How that one begot bairns, the stubborn ettin,
when he knew not a troll-woman's pleasure?”
- 3 baldni 'stubborn' | so A; aldni 'the aged, old' R breaks alliteration
- [R 8r/26, A 3r/16]
- Weden quoth:

- Vafþrúðnir kvað: 33 „Und hēndi vaxa · kvǫðu hrím-þursi 2 meḡ ok mōg saman;
fótr við fōti · gat hins fróða jōtuns
4 sex-hǫfðaðan son.“
- “Within the hand of the rime-thurse†, they said, did grow a maiden and lad together.
Foot by a foot begat for the learned ettin
a six-headed son.”
- 1–3 Und hēndi ... fótr við fōti 'Within the hand ... Foot against foot' | The image is masturbatory. The stanza is paraphrased in Ylfr 5: En svá er sagt, at þá er hann svaf, fekk bann sveita. Þá óx undir vinstri hendi honum maðr ok kona, ok annarr fótr hans gat son við þðrum, en þaðan af kómu éttir. 'But so is said, that when he slept he began to sweat. Then grew within his left hand a man and a woman, and one foot of his begat a son by the other, and thereof come the lineages [of Ettins].'
- [R 8r/27, A 3r/17]
- Webthrithner quoth:

- Óðinn kvað: 34 „Sæg þat óttunda, · alls þik fróðan kveða,
2 ok þú Vaf-þrúðnir vitir,
hvat fyrst of mant · eða fremst of vëitst,
4 þú est al-sviðr jōtunn.“
- “Say the eighth, as they call thee learned,
and thou, Webthrithner, mightst know:
- [R 8r/29, A 3r/18]
- Weden quoth:

What recallest thou first, or knowest foremost?
Thou art all-wise, ettin!”

Vafþrúðnir kvað:      35      „Ør-ófi vetra · áðr véri jǫrð of sköpuð, 2                              þá vas Ber-gelmir borinn;
                              þat fyrst of man’k, · es hinn fróði jötunn
4                              á vas lúðr of lagiðr.“      [R 8r/30, A 3r/19, G] Webthrithner quoth: “Uncountable winters before the Earth was created, then was Bareyelmir born.

It I first remember, when the learned ettin on the tree-trunk was laid.<sup>82</sup>”

In regular prose, lúðr usually means ‘trumpet, blowing horn’, less commonly ‘flour-bin’; the underlying sense seems to be ‘hollowed-out wood’. Considering the transitive nature of Bareyelmir being laid (of lagiðr) upon it, the stanza might instead be referring a ship burial, so that the first thing Webthrithner remembers is Bareyelmir’s funeral.

Óðinn kvað:      36      „Seg þat níunda, · alls þik svinnan kveða,
2                              ok þú Vaf-þrúðnir vitir,
                              hvaðan vindr of kømr · svá’t færr vág yfir,
4                              é mænn hann sjalfan of séa.“      [R 8r/32, A 3r/21]

Weden quoth: “Say the ninth, as they call thee wise,
and thou, Webthrithner, mightst know:
Whence the wind comes which fares over the wave;
men always see his very self?”

4 é mænn hann sjalfan of séa ‘men always see his very self’ | Most likely a negative clitic -t has been lost from the verb séa ‘see’, which would have given the proper reading: “men never see his very self”.

Vafþrúðnir:      37      „Hrê-svelgr hēitir, · es sitr á himins enda,
2                              jötunn í arnar ham;
                              af hans vængjum · kveða vind koma
4                              alla mænn yfir.“      [R 8r/34, A 3r/22]

Webthrithner: “Rawswallower† is he called who sits at heaven’s end;
an ettin in an eagle’s hame†.
From his wings they say that the wind comes over all men.”

[Óðinn kvað:]

38 „Sæg þat tíunda, · alls þú tíva røk
 2 öll Vafþrúðnir vitir, hvaðan Njǫrðr of kom · með ása sonum;
 4 hofum ok hǫrgum · rēðr hund-mǫrgum ok varð-at ósum alinn.“

[R 8v/1, A 3r/24]

“Say the tenth, since thou of the Rakes of the Tews† all, O Webthrithner, mightst know:
 Whence Nearth† did come among the sons of the Eese†?
 Hoves† and harrows† he rules hound-many,
 and he was not to the Eese begotten.”

[Weden quoth:]

4 hofum ok hǫrgum ‘hoves and harrows’ | A formulaic merism, see note to Wsp 7 for other occurrences. This stanza seems to be referring to the large count of cultic places named after Nearth in Norway (TODO: source this); cf. here Grim 16, where it is said that Nearth rēðr hǫ-timbruðum hǫrgi ‘rules a high-timbered harrow’. Also of interest is Lock 51, where a goddess speaks about her véum ok vǫngum ‘wighs and wongs’, other cultic names. All of these examples suggest something about the Heathen view of shrines.

[Vafþrúðnir kvað:]

39 „Í Vana-heimi · skópu hann vís regin
 2 ok seldu at gíslingu goðum, í aldar røk · hann mun aptr koma
 4 heim með vísu vǫnum.“

[R 8v/3, A 3r/26]

“In Waneham† the wise Reins<sup>†83</sup> created him, and sold him as a hostage to/for the gods.
 In the Rakes of Mankind<sup>84</sup> he will come back

The two following stanzas are damaged in both R and A; R has only st. 40, but splits it in two, while A has 40/1 (abbreviated in the ms.: S. þ. e. XI) and then jumps to the answer. The present two stanzas are reconstructed. TODO: explain better.

[Óðinn kvað:]

 cut each other down every day?

[Weden quoth:]

3 val þeir kjósa 'the slain they choose' | It is from this verbal phrase that the agent noun val-kyrja 'walkirrie'† is derived; yet those are all women (as the very gender of the word shows), while the Oncharriers are male.

[A 3r/28]

“All the Oneharriers† in Weden’s yards
cut each other down every day.
The slain they choose and from the battle ride;

<sup>85</sup> Presumably lower underworlds, more severe than the 'normal' one. Finnur Jónsson (1932) considers ór hǣlju 'out of Hell' a later interpolation, presumably for metric reasons, but there is no textual support for it.

What spoke Weden, before he would mount the pyre,<sup>92</sup> himself into the son’s [= Balder’s] ear?”

[Weden quoth:]

<sup>92</sup>The phrase stíga á ‘step onto, mount’ is also used to refer to one stepping aboard a ship or mounting a horse (see CV: stíga for citations). Its use for a person being borne onto the pyre seems formulaic and has been compared with Beow 1118b: gūð-rinc á-stāb ‘the war-champion mounted [his pyre]’, although the interpretation of that line is controversial. Fulk et al. (2008)[186] follow Grundtvig in emending güð-rinc to güð-réc ‘war-smoke’ and relate it to Beow 3144b (wudu-réc á-stáb ‘wood-smoke rose up’, also in a description of a cremation. According to them Grim 54 “almost certainly refers not to Baldr but to Óðinn, probably imagined to mount the pyre in order to set fire to it.”

[Vafþrúðnir kvað:]

55 „Ey mann-gi vęit, • hvat þú í ár-daga

With a fey† mouth have I spoken my ancient staves†, and about the Rakes of the Reins.
Now with Weden have I shared my word-wisdom;
thou art ever wisest of men!”

1 mann-gi | manni dat. sg. RA is impossible; a subject is needed.

3 fęigum ‘fey’ | A word with strong fatalistic connections. Webthrithner realises that he was bound to die from the moment he proposed the wager (v. 19), as no being can outwit Weden.

4 orð-spęki ‘word-wisdom’ | The same word-wisdom Weden in st. 5 set out to try.

5 vera ‘of men’ | verr means ‘husband, man’ and is here used for reasons of alliteration; it does not imply that Weden is not a God.

The Speeches of Grimner

(Grímnismól)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C10th (0.976)

Meter: Leeds-meter, Ancient-words-law (2/3–4, 28/3–5, 45/3–5, 48/4, 49/1–2, 53), Galders-law (46)

The Speeches of Grimner are preserved whole in both R and A.

The poem itself is surrounded by two long introductory prose narratives containing some very old motifs, which are here brought up in the notes. It's hard to say for how long these texts have accompanied the poem (TODO: I may write about this in the Introduction, since this question is important for several other poems), but since they are found in both R and A and contain these motifs it would seem that they are fairly old. Together with sts. 1–3 they form a frame narrative that gives additional meaning to the gnomic sts. enclosed within.

The gnomic sts. themselves, the meat of the poem, are mythological and often quite obscure. In this they align closely with other Eddic gnomic poems such as High, Webth, Syed, and Allw.

Weden begins by listing the halls of the gods (4–17). This section has been discussed in detail by de Vries (1952) TODO! who considers it corrupt. Specifically, he sees the second half of v. 4 as a later insert, since it does not elaborate on the “holy land” mentioned in the first half. Jackson (1995) has argued convincingly against this, showing how the first half serves as a generalized introduction to the list; the holy land is the dwelling-places of the gods.

After this list come several sts relating to Weden and his hall, Walhall (18–23). Mentioned are the preparation of food in Walhall (18), Weden's wolves (19) and ravens (20), the river through which the dead have to wade (21) and the gate through which they have to pass (22), the count of doors in Walhall (23), the count of doors in Thunder's hall Bilshirner (24), and two animals which stand on the hall and gnaw on the branches of the tree Leered (25–26). From the latter animal's—the stag Oakthirner's—horns droplets fall into Wharyelmer, which is the origin of all rivers (26).

This introduces a list of mythic rivers (27–28), ending with the waters through which Thunder must wade on his way to Ugdrassle (29). This leads to a list of the horses ridden by the other gods on their way to Ugdrassle (31) which is followed by a description of the roots of Ugdrassle (31), then its animals (32–36) the Walkirries (37), and beings associated with the sun and moon (38–40), the things created from Yimer's body (41–42) with a digression on the significance of the blood† for men in the present (43, see note there!), the creation of the ship Shidebladner (44) and finally a list of the noblest of several categories of things and groups (45).

After these lists Weden utters an unclear st. invoking the gods (46), before listing many of his names and the circumstances in which they were used (47–50). He then turns to Garfrith, disappointed by the inhospitality and poor conduct of his former protégé, and predicts his imminent death (51–53). He finally reveals himself by his true name, daring Garfrith to face him (53). After this he repeats several of his names (54), and the poem ends.

In the final prose section we are told that Garfrith, after learning that he was torturing Weden, hurried up to take the god away from the fires, but tripped and fell on his sword and died. After this his son Ayner ruled for a long time.

From the sons of king Reading (Frá sonum Hraðungs konungs)

- P1a Hraðungr konungr átti tvá sonu. Hét annarr Agnarr, enn annarr Geirrøðr. [R 8v/31, A 3v/23]
 2 Agnarr var tíu vetra enn Geirrøðr átta vetra. Þeir reru tveir á báti með dorgar sínar at smá-fiski. Vindr rak þá í haf út. Í nátt-myrkri brutu þeir 4 við land ok gingu upp; fundu kot-bónda einn. Þar vóru þeir um vetrinn.
 Kerling fostaði Agnar, enn karl Geirrøð. At vári fekk karl þeim skip. Enn 6 er þau kerling leiddu þá til strandar, þá mælti karl ein-mæli við Geirrøð.
 Þeir fengu byr ok kvómu til stöðva fýður síns. Geirrøðr var fram í skipi.
 8 Hann hljóp upp á land enn hratt út skipinu, ok mælti: „Far þú þar er smyl hafi þik.“ Skipit rak út. Enn Geirrøðr gekk út til bójar; hánú var vel 10 fagnat; þá var faðir hans andaðr. Var þá Geirrøðr til konungs tekinn, ok varð maðr ágétr.

King Reading had two sons. One was called Ayner, and the other Garfrith. Ayner was ten winters old, but Garfrith eight winters. The two were rowing in a boat with their trolling-lines for small fishing. The wind drove them out into the sea. In the dark of night they crashed onto land and walked ashore; they found a lone cottage farmer. There they stayed over the winter. The wife fostered Ayner, but the husband Garfrith.<sup>93</sup> In the spring the husband gave them ships, but when he and his wife led them to the shore, the husband spoke privately with Garfrith.<sup>94</sup> They caught good wind, and came to their father's harbour. Garfrith was in the front of the ship. He leapt onto land and pushed out the ship, and spoke: "Go thou whither the fiends may have thee!" The ship drove out. But Garfrith walked towards the farm; he was welcomed well; by then was his father ended. Garfrith was then taken as king, and became an excellent man.

- P1b Óðinn ok Frigg sátu í Hliðskjölfu ok sá um heima alla. Óðinn mælti: „Sér [R 9r/10, A 4r/3] 2 þú Agnar fóstara þinn, hvar hann elr börn við gýgi í hellinum? En Geirrøðr, fóstri minn, er konungr ok sitr nú at landi.“ Frigg segir: „Hann er mat-4 niðingr sá at hann kvelr gesti sína ef hánú þykkja of-margir koma.“ Óðinn segir at þat er in mesta lygi. Þau veðja um þetta mál. Frigg sendi eskis-mey 6 sína, Fullu, til Geirrøðar. Hon bað konung varask at eigi fyr-gerði hánú fjöl-kunnigr maðr sá er þar var kominn í land, ok sagði þat mark á at engi

8 hundr var svá ólmr at á hann myndi hlaupa. En þat var inn mesti hé-gómi at Geirrøðr væri eigi mat-góðr ok þó léttr hann hand-taka þann mann er 10 eigi vildu hundar á ráða. Sá var í feldi blám ok nefndisk Grímnir ok sagði ekki fleira frá sér þótt hann væri at spurðr. Konungr lét hann pína til sagna 12 ok setja milli elda tveggja ok sat hann þar átta nætr. Geirrøðr konungr átti son tíu vetra gamlan ok hét Agnarr eptir bróður hans. Agnarr gekk 14 at Grímnir ok gaf hánum horn fullt at drekka, sagði at konungr gerði illa er hann lét pína hann sak-lausan. Grímnir drakk af. Þá var eldrinn svá 16 kominn at feldrinn brann af Grímnir. Hann kvað:

Weden and Frie sat in Lithshelf† and looked over all the Homes.<sup>95</sup> Weden spoke: “Seest thou Ayner, thy foster son, as he begets children with a troll-woman in her cave?”<sup>96</sup> But Garfrith, my foster son, is a king and now sits at land.” Frie says: “He is such a meat-nothing that he tortures his guests if he judges too many are coming.” Weden says that this is the greatest lie; they make a wager about this matter. Frie sent her handmaid Full to Garfrith’s hall. She bade the king be wary, lest he be destroyed by that many-cunning† man who was come to the land, and said that his sign was that no hound was so fierce that he would leap at him. But it was the greatest vainglorious lie that Garfrith should not be good of meat†, and yet he has that man bound, whom the hounds would not touch. He was in a blue cloak and called himself Grimner, and did not tell any more about himself, although he was asked. The king had him tortured, that he would speak, and set him between two fires, and he sat there for eight nights. King Garfrith had a son, ten winters old, and he was named Ayner after his brother. Ayner walked up to Grimner, and gave him a full horn to drink; he said that the king did badly, as he had him tortured without cause. Grimner drank from it. Then the fire was so grown, that the cloak burned on Grimner. He quoth:

<sup>96</sup>This may relate to Frie’s role as love-goddess. Ayner is in any case to be understood as a weak, effeminate man or “coomer”.

3 vqrör goða ‘Watchman of the Gods’ | Formulaic epithet of Homedal, also occurring in Lock 49 and possibly in Shir 28: vqrör með goðum ‘the Watchman among the Gods’. Yilv 27, where the present stanza is cited, gives some further details: Hann býr þar er heitir Himinbjörg við Bifrost. Hann er vqrör goða ok sitr þar við himins enda at gęta brúarinnar fyrir berg-risum. Hann þarf minna svefn en fugl. Hann sér jafnt nótt sem dag hundrað rasta frá sér; hann beyrir ok þat, er gras vex á jörðu eða ull á sauðum, ok allt þat er hęra léttr. ‘He lives at the place called the Heavenbarrows near Bivrest. He [= Homedal] is the Watchman of the Gods and sits there at Heaven’s end to guard the bridge against barrow-risers. He needs less sleep than a bird. Both night and day he sees a hundred rests away from him; he also hear when grass grows on the ground or wool on sheep, and everything which sounds louder.’

Folkwong is (the ninth), and there Frow decides the choice of seats in the hall;
half the slain she chooses each day,
but half does Weden own.<sup>100</sup>

pour ale to his retainers and guests (the so-called ‘lady with a mead cup’ ritual; see Enright (1996) and Riseley (2014)). As Weden’s wife, we would expect Frie to have this role. Second, at Balder’s funeral as attested in Yilv (TODO. chapter number), Weden rides with Frie and the Walkirries, while Frow rides alone with her cats. If she were chief walkirrie, it is rather strange that she should not ride with them. Third, there are two separate myths where Frie and Weden contend over the fates of armies and men. These are the prose introduction to the present poem and the Longbeard origin myth (for which see Introduction to the present poem).

3 manna þęngill • hinn męins-vani ‘The lord of men, the guileless one’ | Interesting epithets probably relating to Nearth’s roles in upholding the bounty of the land and the law. Cf. my article on pre-Christian oaths (TODO).

4 hę-timbruðum hęrgi ręðr ‘rules the harrow timbered on high’ | The rare verb hę-timbra ‘timber on high’ otherwise only occurs in Wsp 7, likewise in connection with the hęrgi ‘harrow’. The harrow is an outdoors holy place; see Encyclopedia. Cf. also Webth 38 where Nearth is said to rule a great many.

Gar and Freak† does the battle-accustomed glorious Father of Hosts (= Widen) feed; but on wine alone, esteemed of weapons,
 Widen ever lives.

1–4 Gera ... lifir ‘Gar ... live’ | With what Widen feeds his two hounds it is not said, but it is most likely with the corpses of dead warriors. The wine on which he subsists may perhaps be identified with drink offerings. Cf. the 7th century vita of Saint Columban (TODO: cite source), describing a rite of the Swabians: Quo cum moraretur, et inter habitatores loci illius progredieretur, reperit eos sacrificium profanum litare velle, vasque magnum, quod vulgo cupam vocant, quod viginti et sex modios amplius minusve capiebat, cervisia plenum in medio habebant positum. Ad quod vir Dei accessit, et sciscitatur quid de illo fieri vellent. Illi aiunt Deo suo Vodano, quem Mercurium vocant alii, se velle litare. ‘While he was satyng there and going about the dwellers of that place, he found out that they were going to offer a profane sacrifice, and a large cask called a cupa, which held about twenty-six measures, was filled with beer and set in their midst. When the man of God asked what they wanted to do with it, they answered that they were wanted to offer to their God Wodan, whom others call Mercury.’

2 jormun-grund ‘ermin-ground’ | i.e. ‘the immense ground’ (for the rare prefix ermin-† see Encyclopedia), denoting the earth as a vast flat expanse of land. This compound also occurs in a kenning in the st. on the late C10th Karlevi stone (Öl 1) referring to the unbounded sea as Endils jormungrund ‘Ardle’s ermin-ground’ (Ardle being a known “sea-king”), and in Beow 859 as eormen-grund carrying the same sense.

 thrives in the flood.
 The river-stream seems far too great for the noisy slain host to wade.<sup>103</sup>

1–2 Þjóðvitnis fiskr ‘Thedwitner’s fish’ | Þjóðvitnir is easily analyzed as þjóð- ‘great, main’ + vitnir ‘wolf’. The great wolf is naturally the Fenrerswolf†, the brother of the Middenyardswyrm. That the Wyrms can be called a fish is shown by Hym 24.

<sup>103</sup>A difficult stanza. Thound may be the river surrounding Walhall, which the dead have to pass over to reach it. The stanza may also be referring to the punishment of criminals in waters; see note to Wsp 38 for discussion on that.

 Eight hundred Onecharriers† go out of one door,

2 sveita ‘blood’ | For the sense, see note to this word in Webth 21.

4 ór hausi himinn ‘from his skull the heaven’ | This suggests that the heavens were understood as a dome, something common among many ancients. This also fits well with the floating clouds being Yimer’s brains, as said in the following st.

[R 10v/9, A 5r/26]

The holdness† of Woulder† and of All Gods† has each who first touches the fire, for the Homes† become open for the sons of the Eese, when men lift off the kettles.<sup>111</sup>

1 Ullar ‘Woulder’ | The exact reason for why Woulder is invoked here is unclear, but it suggests that he has a role in the setting of the ritual fire, something possibly attested by the archeological finds at Lilla Ullevi, Sweden. See Encyclopedia: Woulder† and af Edholm (2009) for more.

1 hylli ‘holdness’ | i.e. ‘favour, loyalty, grace’. This word and the corresponding adjective holtr ‘hold; favourable, loyal, gracious’ and verb hylla ‘to make hold’ are often used when speaking about divine grace, not just of the Christian God, but also (as here) of the Heathen Gods. See Encyclopedia: hold† and holdness†.

1 allra goða ‘All Gods’ | Cf. Syed 2–3, Lock 11, which both hail the Gods as a collective (the former as part of a genuine prayer, the latter subversively). For the oneness of the Gods, see Encyclopedia: All Gods†.

4 hvera ‘kettles’ | acc. pl. of hverr, from PGmc. **hweraz*, from PIE **k<sup>w</sup>er-* ‘pot, vessel’. Interestingly the Sanskrit cognate carú is occasionally used in reference to the vat wherein the ritual drink soma is prepared (e.g. RV 10.167.4).

<sup>111</sup>This st. is one of the most difficult in the poem and many interpretations have been made (for a summary see Nordberg (2005)). Many commenters (e.g. Finnur Jónsson (1932) and Sijmons and Gering (p. 208, TODO)) interpret it as relating to the poem’s frame narrative. In this view Weden, still bound between the two fires, cryptically asks for a cauldron to be lifted off so that the Gods can see him through the smoke vent and rescue him. This, however, scarcely makes sense given the current stanza’s placement in the gnomic wisdom section of the poem, unless this whole section is taken to be a later insert (as suggested by Finnur), something for which there is little support. The invocation of the obscure god Woulder is also left unexplained, and there is no mention of a cauldron elsewhere in the poem. I agree with Nordberg’s interpretation, namely that the present st. refers to the cooking of the sacrificial meal in large cauldrons during the blood†, as described in the kings’ saws. More specifically, Weden is speaking of the divine grace (hylli ‘holdness’, see Note to l. 1) gained by the ritualist who sets the fire onto which the cauldron is placed, since this act enables the Gods to become present among those partaking in the ritual meal. Cf. HGoodS 14, describing the traditional blood in the Thronclaw (Dróna-lög), Norway: At veizlu þeiri skyldu allir menn þl eiga; þar var ok drepinn alls konar smali ok svá bross, [...] en slátr skyldi sjóða til mann-fagnaðar; eldar skyldu vera á miðju gólfi í bofinu ok þar katlar yfir. ‘At that gathering all men should have ale; thereat was also slain every kind of small cattle and likewise horses, [...] and the fresh meat would be cooked for men to enjoy. There would be fires on the middle of the floor in the hove and kettles over them.’ This interpretation is especially interesting when one considers the immediately preceding two sts. (41, 42), which deal with the ordering of the world through the dismembering of Yimer, the primordial sacrificial victim slain by the Gods. It is well attested in other Indo-European branches that the ritual sacrifice in the present was seen as a reenactment of the primeval sacrifice in the mythic past, which reenactment was necessary for the continued upholding of the world, and Grim 41–43 would then seem to attest this conception also in the Germanic tradition. See Lincoln (1986)—especially the first two chapters—for the Indo-European analogues.

<sup>114</sup>Linguistically, Garfrith is not bereft of the support of the Oneharriers but rather of the Oneharriers themselves, but presumably the sense is the same. By breaking the code of conduct to which he owns his success he lost Weden's favour, and thus been excluded from the community of oath-bound Odinic warriors (the Oneharriers). Cf. here

The Speeches of Shirner (Skírnismál)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C10th (0.897)

Meter: Leeds-meter, Galders-law (TODO)

The whole poem is attested in both R and A. The name Skírnismál ‘Speeches of Shirner’ comes from A; R has in the typical titular red ink För Skírnis ‘Shirner’s journey’.

The same myth is told in prose in Yilv 37. A single stanza of the present poem is quoted there, namely the last one, with some minor differences in wording that would seem to stem from oral tradition (see Note to st. 42 below). It is unlikely that the author of Yilv knew of the narrative through an oral tradition which included only the last verse, chiefly since his paraphrase does not add a single detail not found in the present poem, but on the other hand condenses and abbreviates. So, Shirner’s journey and curse (roughly sts. 10–38 here) is simply summarized in the following manner: “Then Shirner journeyed and requested the woman [i.e. Gird] for him [i.e. Free], and received her promise, that nine nights later she would come to the place which is called Barrey, and have a wedding with Free.” The summarising of a narrative mythic poem with a single verse quotation in the form of a dialogue-stanza is something done several times in Yilv; see Eddic fragments from Snorre’s Edda below.

On the other hand, the paragraph in Yilv 37 corresponding to what is here P1 is much more detailed and reads: “Gymer was a man called, and his woman Earbode; she was of the lineage of mountain-risers. Their daughter is Gird, who is fairest of all women. It was one day when Free had gone to Lithshelf and looked about all the Homes, but when he looked to the north he saw on a farm a great and fine house, and to that house walked a woman, and when she lifted her hands and closed the doors before her, then it did shine from her hands both into the air and onto the waters, and all the homes were brightened by her. And that beauty, which he had seen in that holy seat, harmed him so that he walked away filled with pain, and when he came home he spoke nothing; he neither slept nor drank; nobody dared to get words out of him. Then Nearth had Shirner, Free’s shoe-swain, called unto himself, and asked him to go to Free and ask him to speak, [...]”

- P1      Freyr, sonr Njarðar, hafði einn dag setsk í Hlið-skjálfr ok sá um heima alla; [R 11r/10, A 2r/11]
2      hann sá í Jǫtun-heima ok sá þar mey fagra, þá er hon gekk frá skála fǫður síns til skemmu; þar af fekk hann hug-sóttir miklar. Skírnir hét skó-sveinn 4      Freys. Njǫrðr bað hann kveðja Frey máls. Þá mēlti Skaði:

Free†, son of Nearth†, had one day set himself in Lithshelf† and looked about all the Homes†. He looked into the Ettinhomes† and saw there a fair maiden as she walked from her father’s hall to her bower; thereof he got great heart-aches. Shirner† was called the shoe-swain of Free. Nearth asked him to speak with Free. Then Shede† spoke:

1 „Rís-tu nú Skírnir · ok gakk at beiða [R 11r/14, A 2r/15]
 2 okkarn málá mōg,
 ok þess at fregna · hvēim hinn fróði séi
 4 of-rēiði afi.“

“Rise thou now, Shirner, and go to ask our lad [= Free] for speech;
 and to learn at whom the wise man [= Free] might be cross.”

1 rís ... beiða ‘Rise ... ask’ | Alliteration is missing here. A simple solution would be to replace gakk ‘go’ with a synonym like rinn ‘run’ or ráð ‘resolve’, but this lessens the semantic mirroring with l. 2/2 below (though, the insertion of the verb ganga in the present stanza may in fact be due to influence from 2/2).

4 afi ‘man’ | While this word usually means ‘father’ or ‘grandfather’, it must here certainly mean ‘man’ without a connotation of old age. See further CV.

Skírnir kvað: 2 „Illra orða · es mér ón at ykkrum syni, [R 11r/15, A 2r/17] 2 ef ek geng at mēla við mōg,
 ok þess at fregna, · hvēim hinn fróði séi
 4 of-rēiði afi.“

Shirner quoth: “Bad words I expect from your son [= Free], if I go with the lad to speak;
 and to learn at whom the wise

Skírnir: 3 „Sæg þat Freyr, · folk-valdi goða, [R 11r/17, A 2r/18]

Shirner [quoth]: “Tell it, O Free, troop-wielder of the gods;
 I too would wish to know:
 why thou sittest alone in the endlong halls,
 my lord, during the days?”

Freyr: 4 „Hví of sęgja’k þér, · sęggr hinn ungi, [R 11r/19, A 2r/20]

2                   mikinn móð-trega?
                  því-at alf-röðull · lýsir of alla daga
 4                   ok þeygi at mínum munum.“

Free [quoth]: “Why should I tell thee, O young youth,
 [of my] great mood-grief?
 For the elf-wheel [SUN] shines during all days,
 and naught to my liking.”

Skírnir:           5   „Muni þína · hykk-a svá mikla vesa, at þú mér seggr né seggir;
                  ungir saman · vörum í ár-daga,
 4                   væl mēttim tvēir trúask.“

[R 11r/20, A 2r/21]

Shirner [quoth]: “Thy liking I do not think so great, that thou, O youth, should not tell me [of it].
 Young together were we in days of yore;
 we two might well trust each other.”

2 seggr ‘youth’ | This word usually means simply ‘man’, but it seems to have a specific connotation with youth. Its original meaning is ‘messenger’, and the semantic shift is thus: ‘messenger’ > ‘young man’ > ‘warrior/man’. The sense of ‘young man’ is also seen in Wyl 23, where it is used in reference to king Nithad’s two young sons. In the present stanza it answers Free’s addressing Shirner as seggr binn ungi ‘the young youth’; Shirner points out that the two are of equal age, and so Free is as much of a young man as he.

Frēyr:           6   „Í Gyms gørdum · ek ganga sá

<sup>118</sup> An excellent example of the fatalistic Germanic worldview, in which one’s course of life was determined (“laid down”) at birth (“in one half-day”). Presumably after uttering these words Shirner rides through the fire surrounding the fortress. — The causative leggja ‘to lay (down, in place)’ is closely connected to fate; the expression is formulaic. Cf. Lock 48: í ár-daga vas þér bit ljóta líf of lagit ‘in days of yore was thy ugly life laid down’ and Wsp 19: þér lög lögðu ‘they [= the Norns] laid down laws’.

[Gērðr] kvað:            16        „Inn bið þú hann ganga · í okkarn sal
2                                ok drekka hinn méra mjǫð, þó ek hitt óumk, · at hér úti séi
4                                minn bróður-bani.“

[R 11v/10, A 2v/11]

[Gird] quoth:

“Bid thou him to go in into our hall,
and to drink the renowned mead;
though I fear that here outside should be my brother’s bane.”

[Gērðr] kvað:      17      „Hvat ’s þat alfa · né ása sona,
2                      né víssa vana;
                    hví ęinn of komt · ęikinn fúr yfir
4                      ór sal-kynni at séa?”

[R 11v/12, A 2v/13]

[Gird quoth:]

“What sort is that, not of Elves, nor of sons of the Eese, nor of wise Wanes?
Why camest thou alone over the raging fire,
to see the state of our hall?”

[Skírnir kvað:]      18      „Em’k-at alfa · né ása sona
2                      né víssa vana,
                    þó ęinn of kom’k · ęikinn fúr yfir
4                      yður sal-kynni at séa.

[R 11v/14]

[Shirner quoth:]

“I am not of Elves, nor of sons of the Eese,
nor of wise Wanes—
yet I came alone over the raging fire, to see the state of your hall.

19      Ępli ęllifu · hér hef’k al-gullin,
2                      þau mun’k þér Gērðr gefa,
                    frið at kaupa, · at þú þér Fręy kveðir
4                      ó·lęiðastan at lifa.”

[R 11v/15, A 2v/14]

Elven apples have I here, all-golden; those I will to thee, O Gird, give to purchase [thy] love, that thou callest Free for thee most unloathsome [MOST LOVELY] in life.<sup>120</sup>

[R 11v/17, A 2v/15]

[Gird quoth:]
 “Eleven apples will I never take,
 to any man’s liking;
 nor will I and Free—while our lifeblood lives—dwell both together.”

[R 11v/19, A 2v/17 (ll. 1-2)]

[Shirner quoth:]
 “The bight† I then give thee, that one which was burned with Weden’s young son [= Balder].
 Eight are even-heavy, which from it drip,
 every ninth night.<sup>121</sup>”

3–4 átta ... nótt ‘Eight ... night.’ | In A these lines and 22:1–2 are missing. Instead 1–2 here and 22:3–4 are combined into one.

<sup>121</sup>The big, while not named, is clearly Drepner as known from Ylvi 49, describing Balder's funeral: "Weden laid on the pyre that gold ring which is called Drepner. Its nature was such that every ninth night, eight even-heavy golden rings dripped from it." When Harmod† later comes to Hell† to try to bring Balder back, Balder tells him to bring the ring back to Weden, as a token of memory.

[R 11v/21, A 2v/18 (ll. 3–4)]

[Gird quoth:]
 “The bigh I take not, though it may have been burned
 with Weden’s young son [= Balder];
 I have no want of gold in Gymer’s yards, in sharing the fee<sup>1</sup> of my father.”

[R 11v/23, A 2v/19]

4 nema mér sétt segir.“

[Shirner quoth:]

“Seest thou this sword, O maiden—slender, pictured-painted—,
which I have in my hand here?
Hew the head will I, off thy neck, unless thou come to terms with me.”

1 mál-fáan ‘picture-painted’ | The sword is inlaid with metal (perhaps gold or silver) forming a pattern. The expression is formulaic; cf. TODO.

[Gērðr kvað:]

24 „Á-nauð þola · vil’k aldri-gi
2 at manns-kis munum, þó hins get’k, · ef it Gymir finniðsk
4 vígs ó·trauðir · at ykk vega tíði.“

[R 11v/25, A 2v/20]

[Gird quoth:]

“Stand coercion will I never,
to any man’s liking;
though I get this, if thou and Gymer meet—men unreluctant of conflict—that ye two will wish to fight.<sup>122</sup>”

2 manns-kis ‘any man’s (lit. ‘no man’s)’ | manns ęnskis A

<sup>122</sup>Gird says that she will never let herself be forced to marry Free, even if that means that her father and Shirner should fight over her.

[Skírnir kvað:]

25 „Sér þú méki, mér, · mjóvan, mál-fáan, 2 es hef’k í hendi hér?
fyr þessum eggjum · hnígr sá hinn aldni jötunn,
4 verðr þinn feigr faðir.

[R 11v/27, A 2v/22]

[Shirner quoth:]

“Seest thou this sword, O maiden—slender, pictured-painted—,
which I have in my hand here?
By these edges sinks the aged ettin [= Gymer] down;
fey† becomes thy father.

26 Tams-vęndi þik drep’k, · ęn þik tęmja mun’k,

[R 11v/28, A 2v/24]

With the taming-wand I strike thee—and tame thee I will,
O maiden, to my liking!

There shalt thou go, where thee the sons of men never since may see.

This may be the stick on which the runic curse in st. 36 below should be carved, or it is to be identified with the tams-vǫndr ‘taming-wand’ of st. 26 above. Cf. High 152, which speaks about a runic curse carved on rótum rás víðar ‘the roots of a raw/sappy tree’.

queerness† and madness and restlessness.—
So I carve it off, like I carved it on,
if there be need for that.<sup>124</sup>”

1 Þurs ‘thurse’ | Thurse is the name of the þ-rune (þ); it is carved as part of the curse.

1 þría stafi ‘three staves’ | Three runic letters (or phrases) representing the three following words (ęrgi ‘queerness, degeneracy’ etc.). The ritual practice of carving “three staves” is first found on the C7th Gummarp stone: hapwolafr sate staba þria fff ‘Hathwolf placed three staves: fff’, where the f-rune (ƿ) stands for its name fee† (i.e. ‘wealth, cattle’) and is thus meant to bring wealth.

2 ęrgi ok óði ok ó·þola ‘queerness and madness and restlessness’ | Both ęrgi ‘queerness, degeneracy’ and ó·þoli ‘restlessness’ (here probably from strong lust) are found in the love magic charm on the rune stick B257 from Bryggen (edited below under Galders). ęrgi is also found in the curse-formula on the C7th Proto-Norse runestones from Stentofen and Björketorp. See further introduction to B257.

<sup>124</sup>Shirner has carved the curse (which will make true the curse), but tells Gird that he will scrape it off if she accepts his demands. She promptly does.

though I had intended that I never would love the Waning [= Free] well.”

1–2 Hęill ... mjaðar ‘Hale ... mead’ | Formulaic; the same lines occur in Lock 53.

4 vaningja ‘the Waning [= Free]’ | lit. ‘descendant of the Wanes†’. A rare word. Its only other occurrence in the Norse corpus is in a thule† of boar-names. Boars were sacred to Free, TODO.

The Leed of Hoarbeard

(Hárbarðsljóð)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): early C11th (0.578)–late C11th (0.377)

Meter: Unclear (TODO)

In my opinion the poem can be seen as an allegory on class relations, namely between the self-owning Norwegian and later Icelandic farmers, and the warlike Norwegian earls.

Of all Eddic poems this one is probably the strangest in terms of form. Verse length varies greatly, and many of the lines (see especially the final verse) are of an obscene length reminiscent of late continental Germanic poems like the Heliand; some simply have no metrical qualities at all. The young clitic definite is (uniquely) employed frequently throughout the poem. These criteria would seem to point towards a late origin for the poem (though not later than the late C13th, when R was written).

Against this late origin speaks the presence of rare words (e.g. ǫgurr v. 13) and a thorough understanding of the personalities of the two gods which would seem unlikely to stem from several centuries after the conversion of Iceland. The model devised by Sapp gives the poem a 57.8% likelihood of being from the early C11th, and a 37.7% likelihood of being from the late 11th. These scores are most similar to those obtained by Grip, a poem that on the surface seems much more archaic.

What could we then be dealing with? It may of course be that the poem is heavily corrupt, but there is no good evidence for this (apart from the above-mentioned irregularities). Most lines are readily understandable and fit well both within their respective context and the poem as a whole. I think a better solution to this problem is to assume that the poem has been acted out as a sort of carnivalesque theatre, with two masked actors, each playing one of the gods. This would explain the variations in meter and line length, and the prose; some lines were simply shouted out, and the lack of alliteration in them would then have a powerful, discordant effect.

This is shown also by uses of the word ‘here’ in sts. 9 and 14. TODO: mention concept of “double scene” by Lars Lönnroth?

Thunder journeyed from the Eastern Way and came to a sound. At the other side of the sound was the ferryman with the ship. Thunder called out:

1 „Hvęrr ’s sá svęinn svęina • es stęndr fyr sundit handan?“

[R 12r/32]

“Who is that swain of swains, standing here across the sound?”

Hann svaraði:

2 „Hvęrr ’s sá karl karla • es kallar of váginn?“

[R 12v/1]

He answered:

“Who is that churl of churls, calling out over the wave?”

3 „Fęr þú mik of sundit, • fōði’k þik á morgun;

[Thunder quoth:]

“Ferry me over the sound, I feed thee in the morning!

A basket have I on my back; the food does not get better.<sup>126</sup>

I ate for a while before I journeyed from home, herring and oatmeal/he-goats; I am still full from that.”

4 hafra ‘oatmeal/he-goats’ | The easiest reading here is the acc. pl. of hafr ‘he-goat’. Thunder also eats his goats in Yilv 44, where he butchers and cooks them in the evening and brings them back to life by blessing them with his hammer at dawn. Finnur Jónsson (1932) and Pettit (1986) prefer this reading; see also note to next stanza.—Many other scholars have here read an accusative plural of hafri ‘oat’, i.e. ‘porridge, oatmeal’. Stiles (forthcoming TODO) connects this with Indra’s (who is the Vedic equivalent of Thunder) “partner and yokemate” (RV 6.56.2) Pūṣan’s eating porridge (e.g. 6.56.1, 57.2). Another similarity Stiles notes between Thunder and Pūṣan is that both have chariots driven by goats (e.g. 6.57.3: “Goats are the draft-animals for the one”, 58.2: “Having goats as his horses”). Whether the Vedic tradition has split an original god into two or whether Thunder has absorbed elements of another god is hard to say.

4 „Ár-ligum verkum hrósar þú, vęrðinum; • vęitst-at-tu fyr gęrla,

[R 12v/5]

2 dępr ’ru þín hęim-kynni, • dauð hygğ’k at þín móðir sé.“

“Of early works boastest thou; of eating!<sup>127</sup> Thou knowest not clearly [what lies] before [thee]: dismal is the state of thy home—I think that thy mother is dead!”

<sup>127</sup>TODO. This is pretty difficult. From the previous stanza vęrðinum seems to be referring to eating.

5 „Þat sęgir þú nú • es hęrjum þikkir

“Thou now sayest that which to every man seems most important to know—that my mother is dead!”

brękr þínar.“ [R 12v/8]

“But it is hardly as if thou own three good homesteads; bare-legged thou standest, and hast the gear of a tramp; it is not even as if thou own thy breeches!”

- 7 „Stýr-ðu hingat ęikjunni, · ek mun þér stęðna kęnna
2 eða hęęrr á skipit · es þú hęldr við landit?“ [R 12v/9]

“Steer hither the boat! I will show thee to the harbour—“Hildolf he is called, who asked me to hold it,

the counsel-wise man who lives in Redeseysound.

“I will say my name—although I should be charged—and all my origin: I am Woden's son, Male's brother and Main's father,
the strength-wielder of the Gods; with Thunder dost thou here speak!
Now I will ask something else: What art thou called?”

- 10 „Hár-barðr ek hęiti, · hyl'k of nafn sjaldan.“ [R 12v/18]
- “Hoarbeard I am called, seldom I conceal my name.”

11 „Hvat skalt-u of nafn hylja · nema þú sakar ęigir?“

[R 12v/18]

“Why shalt thou conceal thy name, unless thou have charges?”

12 „En þótt ek sakar ęiga, · fyr slíkum sem þú est
þá mun’k forða fjörvi mínu · nema ek fęigr sé.“

[R 12v/19]

“But though I had charges—for such a one as thou art then I will protect my life, unless I be fey†.”

13 „Harm ljótan mér þikkir í því at vaða of váginn til þín · ok vęta ęgur minn;
skylda’k launa kęgur-sveini · þínum kangin-yrði · ef ek komumk
yfir sundit.“

[R 12v/21]

“An ugly harm it seems to me to wade o’er the wave to thee, and wet my burden.
I would repay thee, swaddle-swain, for thy mocking words, if I could bring myself over the sound.”

2 ęgur ‘burden’ | The sense of this word is not clear, though it is probably the same as the first element of the compound ęgur-stund ‘burdensome hour’, found in Wáyl 42. Some authors have read it as a crude euphemism for ‘penis’, which would not be out of character for this poem. I however consider the best interpretation to be that of an author whose name I’ve forgotten (TODO!), namely that Thunder is referring to the food he carries on his back (cf. v. 3).

14 „Hér mun’k standa · ok þín heðan bíða;
fannt-a-tu mann inn harðara · at Hrungni dauðan.“

[R 12v/23]

“Here will I stand, and from here await thee; thou hast not found a harder man since Rungner† died!<sup>128</sup>”

<sup>128</sup>Rungner was an ettin famously slain by Thunder, TODO. Hoarbeard’s mention of that battle sets off a long argument over the deeds of the two.

15 „Hins vilt-u nú geta · es vit Hrungnir deildum, sá inn stór-úðgi jötunn, · es ór stęini vas hęfuðit á,
þó lét’k hann falla · ok fyrir hníga;
hvat vannt-u þá meðan, Hárbarðr?“

[R 12v/25]

“This wilt thou now mention, when I and Rungner dealt with each other, that great-minded ettin on whom the head was of stone.
Yet I made him fall, and kneel down before [me]—
what didst thou then meanwhile, Hoarbeard?”

- 16 „Vas’k með Fjöl-vari • fimm vetr alla [R 12v/27]
 2 í ey þęiri • es Al-grón heitir;
 vega vér þar knöttum • ok val fella,
 4 margs at fręista, • mans at kosta.“

“I was with Felwar for all of five winters in that island which Allgreen is called.
 There we did fight and fell corpses;
 many a girl to tempt and win.<sup>129</sup>”

<sup>129</sup>I read margs ‘many a’ as modifying mans ‘girl’, i.e. margs mans at fręista, at kosta ‘to tempt and to win many a girl’.

- 17 „Hversu snúnuðu yör konur yörar?“ [R 12v/30]
 “How did your women pleasure (TODO!!) you?.”<sup>130</sup>

- 18 „Sparkar óttum vér konur • ef oss at spökum yrði; [R 12v/30] 2 horskar óttum vér konur • ef oss hollar véri, þér ór sandi • síma undu
 4 ok ór dali djúpum
 grund of grófu;
 6 varð’k þeim einn qlum • øfri at ródum;
 hvílda’k hjá systrum sjau 8 ok hafða’k gęð þęira allt ok gaman;
 hvat vannt-u þá meðan, Þórr?“

“We [I] owned frisky women, if they became pleasing toward us [me];
 we [I] owned clever women, if they were hold<sup>f</sup> toward us [me];
 they wound a rope out of the sand, and out of a deep dale dug up the ground.
 I alone became superior to them all in counsels,
 I rested next to those seven sisters, and had their senses all, and pleasure—
 what didst thou then meanwhile, Thunder?”

- 19 „Ek drap Þjatsa, • hinn þrúð-móðga jøtun, [R 13r/2, A 1r/1 (l. 4b ff.)]
 2 upp ek varp augum • All-valda sonar á þann hinn heįða himin;
 4 þau ’ru męrki męst • minna verka, þau's allir menn síðan of séa;

6 hvat vannt-u þá meðan, Hárbarðr?“

“I slew Thedse†, the strength-minded ettin;
Up I threw the eyes of Allwald's son [= Thedse] onto the clear heaven!
Those are the greatest marks of my works, those which all men since may see<sup>131</sup>—
what didst thou then meanwhile, Hoarbeard?”

<sup>131</sup>Here we seem to have a rare example of native Germanic star-lore. Is the exact constellation identifiable? TODO.

20 „Miklar man-vélar · hafða'k við myrk-riður
2 þá's ek vélta þér frá verum.
Harðan jötun · hugða'k Hlébarð vesa;
4 gaf hann mér gamban-tęin en ek vélta hann ór viti.“

[R 13r/5, A 1r/1]

“Great girl-tricks did I have against mirk-rideresses†, when I lured them away from men.<sup>132</sup>
A hard ettin I judged Leebeard to be;
he gave me a gombentoe†,
but I tricked him out of his wits.”

<sup>132</sup>Alternatiely ‘away from [their] husbands’. The riður ‘(female) riders’ were witches thought to torment people and cause disease and suffering. See Hgb 156 for discussion.

21 „Illum huga launaðir þú þá góðar gjafar.“
“With an evil mind didst thou repay the good gift.”

[R 13r/7, A 1r/3]

22 „Þat hefir ęik · es af annarri skęfr;
2 umb sik es hvęrr í slíku—
hvat vannt-u þá meðan, Þórr?“

[R 13r/8, A 1r/4]

“An oak has that which it chafes from another; each man is for himself in such—
what didst thou then meanwhile, Thunder?”

23 „Ek vas austr · ok jętna barða'k
2 brúðir bęl-vísar · es til bjargs gingu;
mikil myndi ętt jętna · ef allir lifði,
4 vętr myndi manna · undir Mið-garði—

[R 13r/9, A 1r/4]

hvat vannt-u þá meðan, Hárbarðr?

“I was in the East, and bashed ettins:
bale-wise brides who walked to the mountain.
Great would the lineage of ettins be if all lived, naught would remain of men within Middenyard<sup>133</sup>—
what didst thou then meanwhile, Hoarbeard?”

<sup>133</sup>A remarkable clear statement, the underlying worldview of which is far from unique to this stanza; in Hymr 11, for instance, Thunder is described as “the opponent of Rooder”, “the friend of manly retinues” and “Wighward”, referring to His role in slaying ettins and guarding men and their shrines (wighs†). For Thunder’s killing of women cf. sts. 37–39 below and Lindow 1988.

24 „Vas’k á Vallandi • ok vígum fylgða’k, [R 13r/11, A 1r/6]
2 atta ek jofrum • en aldri-gi sétta’k;
Óðinn á jarla • þá’s í val falla
4 en Þórr á þræla kyn.“

“I was in Walland† and followed battles;
I incited princes and never reconciled them.
Weden owns the earls which fall among the slain,
but Thunder owns the kin of thralls.<sup>134</sup>”

<sup>134</sup>We see here a sort of aristocratic, Odinic disregard for lower life and life as a good in itself; where Thunder boasts of saving men, Weden sarcastically responds that he caused the deaths of men so that he could have them for himself.

25 „Ó·jafnt skipta • es þú myndir með ósum liði [R 13r/13, A 1r/8]
2 ef þú éttr vil-gi mikils vald.“
“Translation.”

26 „Þórr á afl órit • en ekki hjarta; [R 13r/14, A 1r/9]
2 af hręðslu ok hug-bleyði • þér vas í handska troðit ok þóttisk-a þú þá Þórr vesa;
4 hvár-ki þá þorðir • fyr hręðslu þinni
hnjósa né fisa • svát Fjalarr heyrði.“

“Thunder owns ample strength, but no heart; out of fear and mind-softness didst thou tread into a glove, and then seemedest thou not to be Thunder. Thou daredest neither—for thy fear—to sneeze nor to fart so that Feller might hear [it].<sup>135</sup>”

<sup>135</sup>This story is also referenced in Lock TODO. It is elaborated heavily on in Yilv 45: Thunder, Lock, and the siblings Thelvé and Wrash had travelled east for a long time when they discovered a large hall, with an opening on one end, as wide as the building. They took rest inside, but in the middle of the night there was a great earthquake and the ground beneath them trembled. Thunder rose and led the party to a side-room to the right in the middle of the hall. He sat closest to the opening with his hammer ready, while the others sat terrified further inside. At daybreak they left the hall and found a huge ettin named Skrymir (Shrimer†) sleeping next to them. His snoring had caused the earth-quakes, and the hall was his mitten; the side-room was the thumb-part.

- 27 „Hár-barðr hinn ragi, • munda’k þik í Hæl drepa
2 ef mætta’k sæilask of sund.“ [R 13r/17, A 1r/11]

if I might sail o’er the sound!”

- 28 „Hvat skyldir of sund sæilask • es sakir ’ru alls øngar?
2 hvat vannt-u þá meðan, Þórr?“ [R 13r/18, A 1r/12]

“Why should thou sail o’er the sound when there are no offenses?—
what didst thou then meanwhile, Thunder?”

- 29 „Ek vas austr • ok ána varða’k

4 þó urðu mik fyrri • friðar at biðja.
hvat vannt-u þá meðan, Hárbarðr?“ [R 13r/19, A 1r/13]

“I was in the east and guarded the river
when I was attacked by Sweering’s sons.
With rocks they bashed me—still they rejoiced little in victory, still they had to beg me first for peace—
what didst thou then meanwhile, Hoarbeard?”

- 30 „Ek vas austr • ok við ein-hvērja dómða’k, 2 lék’k við ina lind-hvítu • ok lqng þing háða’k, gladda’k ina gull-björtu, • gamni mér unði.“ [R 13r/22, A 1r/15]

“I was in the east, and spoke with a certain woman;
I played with the linen-white, and held long-lasting trysts:<sup>136</sup>
I gladdened the gold-bright—the maiden enjoyed pleasure.”

- 31 „Góð óttu þeir man-kynni þar þá.“ [R 13r/24, A 1r/17]
“Then they had good girl-visits there.”

 “I would then have trusted thee, unless thou shouldst betray my trust.”

35 „Em’k-at ek sá hęl-bitr · sem húð-skór forn á vár.“ [R 13r/27, A 1r/19]
 “I am not such a heel-biter as an old hide-shoe in spring.<sup>137</sup>”

<sup>137</sup>Proverbial (a heel-biter being someone who betrays his companions); the leather of a shoe would become very stiff and chafing over the winter.

 Against that one shalt thou use thy strength—that is for thee more urgent!”

---

1 hó ‘lover’ | Most translators take this acc. sg. word as an alternative form of bórr m. ‘adulterer’ (gen. bórs), containing the same root as bóra f. ‘whore, prostitute’, bór n. ‘adultery, fornication’, ModEngl. whore. The -r has presumably been interpreted as the masc. nom. sg. ending, giving nom. **bór*, gen. **bós*. Further, this accusation is also found in Lock TODO, where Lock says that he has been Sib’s lover (bórr). Notably, CV interprets this word as the unrelated bór m. ‘pot-hook’, “insinuating that Thor busied himself with cooking and dairy-work.” This seems very unlikely when considering Thunder’s response in the next verse: “I think that thou liest!” and the parallel in Lock.

- 49 „Mélir þú at munns ráði · svát mér skyldi vęrst þikkja, [R 13v/10, A 1v/5]

The Lay of Hymer

(Hymiskviða)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C10th (0.694)–early C11th (0.268)

Meter: Ancient-words-law

Attested in two manuscripts, R and A. The two agree very well; they share the same stanzas and they come in the same order. The most substantial difference is the header; A has Hymis-kviða ‘the Lay of Hymer’, while R instead has Þórr dró Mið-garðs-orm ‘Thunder pulled the Midden-yardswyrn’.

The poem is a comedy about Thunder’s adventures in Ettinland. This was probably a popular genre, and is also represented by Thrim, but in spite of these similarities of contents the two poems are far apart stylistically. Whereas Thrim is written in a simple and sparse style with free Ancient-words-law-meter and few kennings, the form of Ancient-words-law used in Hyme is unusually strict, almost syllable-counting, and the stanzas are filled with intricate kennings, difficult grammatical constructions and forced word order. In this way Hyme is more akin to Scoldic poetry in intricate measures like Court-recited meter than to typical Eddic poetry in Ancient-words-law.

For this reason it seems likely that the anonymous poet of Hyme was highly trained in the Scoldic arts, and familiar with composition in more advanced meters. (See TODO: Difference between Scoldic and Eddic). Apart from style and meter, the Scoldic composition context of Hyme is also supported by both its dating and subject. There are five extant Scoldic poetic fragments (TODO: list them) that deal with Thunder’s fishing expedition, mostly from the 10th century.

These Scoldic fragments are fragmentary, and (in what survives of them) mostly focus on the scene where Thunder faces off against the hooked Wyrn pressed to the gunwale. There are some interesting verbal correspondences between these fragments and Hyme—most strikingly the kenning for the Middenyardswyrn in st. 22/4 below—that may also support a common composition context. The fragments do not all agree with each other; in some of them the encounter ends with the cowardly Hymer cutting off the fishing line and the Wyrn sinking back unharmed into the sea (the version preferred by Snorre)—in others Thunder strikes the head off the Wyrn, presumably slaying it.

Numerous pictorial depictions of the myth are found on Viking Age objects. These are the Swedish Altuna (U 1611) and Linga (Sö 352) runestones, the picture stones from Hørdum, Northern Jutland, a picture stone from Gosforth in Cumbria, and others (TODO). They typically show Thunder standing in the boat with His hammer raised, and the hooked Wyrn below it. Several smaller details also appear on these objects: the use of the ox-head for bait (U 1611, Sö 352), Thunder’s feet going through the ship (U 1611, Hørdum).

Yilv 48 gives a complete narrative, here paraphrased for the sake of shortness:

Thunder goes out into Middenyard in the shape of a young man (ungr drængr), without his chariot, his goats, or his typical travelling gear. In the evening he comes to the ettin Hymer and begs for lodgings. At dawn Hymer plans to go fishing, and so Thunder asks to join in. Hymer insults Thunder's small stature and youth, and questions his ability to go on such a long and arduous trip as he usually takes. Thunder, angered, says that he will row very far, and then asks Hymer what bait they will use. Hymer tells him to get his own bait, and so he turns to Hymer's flock of oxen and tears off the head from his greatest ox, one named Heavenrid. The two go out to sea, and Thunder rows far past Hymer's usual fishing spot. Hymer, unhappy, warns him that if they row any further out they'll be in danger of the Middenyardswyrm, but Thunder goes on. Eventually Thunder puts away the oars, readies a fishing line, hooks the ox-head and lowers it. The Wyrms soon bites, and struggles so hard that Thunder is pressed against the gunwale. This angers the god, and he brings himself into his Os-might. Strengthened, he pulls back with such force that his feet go through the bottom of the ship and press into the sea-floor; the Wyrms' head goes up against the gunwale. The two archenemies furiously stare at each other, Thunder "sharpening his eyes" and the Wyrms spitting venom. Hymer is frightened, reaches for his bait-cutting knife, and cuts off the line—the Wyrms then sinks back into the sea. Thunder throws the hammer after it, "and men say that he struck off the monster's head, but I think it true to tell thee, that the Middenyardswyrm still lives and lies in the outer sea." Thunder then punches Hymer's ear with his fist so that he is thrown overboard head-first; the god then wades back to land.

This account is clearly based on several sources, possibly including the present poem. The closest wording correspondence is when it is said that Miðgarðs-ormr gein yfir uxa-höfuð'it, en þngull'inn vá i góm'inn orm'inum 'The Middenyardswyrm yawned over the ox-head, and the hook went into the roof of the wyrm's mouth', which is decently close to st. 22 below. The name Heavenrid (Himinhrjóðr) is otherwise only found in thules listing names of oxen, and the interesting detail of Thunder's feet going through the boat is only paralleled by the Swedish Altuna stone (though see note to st. 34/2 below).

While Ylvi 48, the Scoldic fragments, and Hyme all share the central narrative of the fishing expedition, Hyme has several additional narratives woven into it. That is not to say that Hyme consists of multiple originally separate poems. Unlike, say, High, which has noticeable differences of style and language between its constituent strands, Hyme comes off as a strong stylistic and narrative whole, composed by a single poet and thereafter transmitted faithfully. One may roughly identify the following narrative divisions in Hyme, of which only numbers 2–4 are found in the other sources for the myth of Thunder's fishing:

1. 1–6 Thunder attempts to force the ettin Eagre to host a banquet for the Gods; Eagre in turn asks for a cauldron big enough to brew enough ale for them all.
2. 7–16 Thunder and Tew go to visit the stingy ettin Hymer, who owns such a cauldron; horrified at Thunder's great appetite during the evening, Hymer tells them that they must eat fish the next.
3. 17–19 Thunder says that he will go fishing if he is given bait; Hymer challenges him to kill one of his oxen for bait; Thunder tears off the head of one.
4. 20–25 Hymer, Thunder and Tew go fishing; Hymer pulls up some whales; with the ox-head as bait Thunder manages to hook the Middenyardswyrm itself; he loses it.
5. 26–27 Hymer challenges Thunder to carry the boat and whales back to his farm; he does.
6. 28–32 Hymer challenges Thunder to break a supposedly indestructible chalice; he succeeds by smashing it against the ettin's forehead.
7. 33–36 Thunder and Tew depart with the cauldron; they find themselves followed by a troop led by Hymer; Thunder kills them all.
8. 37–38 Lock makes the leg of one of Thunder's goats halt.
9. 39 Thunder returns to the Gods with Hymer's cauldron; they host a banquet.

The fishing expedition, found at the very center of the poem, is thus framed by the unique narrative of Thunder and Tew obtaining a huge cauldron from Hymer for the sake of brewing ale, and several other superfluous narratives scattered throughout. The poet has not been entirely successful in his endeavour, and there are several loose strands. Most notably the god Tew plays no role at all in the fishing expedition, probably because he was not originally in it; in other variants of the myth (including pictorial depictions, like that from Gosforth), Thunder is only accompanied by Hymer. Tew also lacks a reaction to the murder of his father Hymer, and this familiar relationship is also unparalleled; in Scold 16 Tew is called Weden's Son. Also unclear is the function of Lock's halting one of Thunder's goats (sts. 37–38); he does not appear anywhere else in the poem.

The poem has some interesting reoccurring themes. The “otherness” of the Ettins, specifically Hymer, is constantly emphasized in several ways:

- they live far to the East (st. 5) in an inhospitable, frozen climate (st. 10), associated with mountains (sts. 2, 17) and lava-fields (st. 36)
- they are physically deviant, being misshapen (st. 10), grey-haired (st. 16), many-headed (sts. 8, 35), and very hard-boned (sts. 30–31); they are even likened to apes (st. 20), whales (st. 36) and Danes (st. 17; see note!),
- they are stingy and inhospitable (sts. 9, 16),
- and sarcastic and cowardly (st. 19–20, 25–26, 28–32).

In these ways the Ettins oppose the Old Germanic social norms as represented by the Gods, who live in a lush green climate and are young, beautiful and generous. The one exception is of course Tew's mother in st. 8, who is light-haired (in contrast to the swarthy grandmother, presumably) and generous. Perhaps the poet is implying that it is from her that Tew has inherited his good traits?

The last point, viz. sarcasm and cowardice, is seen throughout the poem in the way Thunder comically humiliates the Ettins, especially by completing challenges issued to him. These follow a similar format: Thunder is given a near-impossible test of strength, which he shortly completes through a mix of physical strength and cleverness, humiliating the challenger. These tests are finding a huge kettle (st. 3, explicitly called Eagre's “revenge” (hǫfn)), taking one of Hymer's oxen for bait (st. 17–18), carrying home Hymer's whales and boat (st. 26), breaking Hymer's finest chalice (st. 28), and perhaps also taking away the kettle (st. 33)—though that may just be Hymer's wishing to finally be rid of the pestering gods.

Much like in Thrim the conflict is finally resolved with righteous hammer-slaughter. After the Gods leave, Hymer tries to get his revenge by ambushing them, but Thunder takes his trusty hammer and kills them all. The poem is clearly humorous and meant to be performed before an audience (see st. 38 where the poet directly addresses the listeners). The original performance context may perhaps be gleaned from the difficult final stanza. TODO: It hints at a performance at a harvest bloot.

3 hjarðar | ballar corr. A

4 berg-Dana ‘boulder-Danes [ETTINS]’ | Kennings of this type emphasize the otherness of the Ettins (see Introduction to the poem above) by equating them with ethnic foreigners, and are well known from Anlif Gothrunson’s Drape for Thunder (Þórsdrápa), where Ettins are called Scots, Swedes, Danes, Ruges and Hareds; all ethnic enemies of the Norwegian Earl Hathkin, at whose court that poem may have been composed.

I expect that the bait from the ox will not be an easy catch for thee!”—

The swain [= Thunder] swiftly turned to the wood, where an ox stood, all-black, before [him].

1 véntir mik | so A; vénti ek R 1 myni-t ‘will not’ | so A; myni ‘will’ R. The A reading is preferable since it makes this the first of Hymer’s several challenges of strength to Thunder, which the god, to the ettin’s humiliation, easily accomplishes.

3 Sveinn ‘The swain’ | Thunder was apparently in the shape of a youth. This detail is also found in Ylfr 48, where Snorre writes: Gekk hann út of Miðgarð svá sem ungr drengir ... ‘He went out about Middenyard in the shape of a young warrior’.

4 oxí ... al-svartr ‘all-black ... ox’ | Formulaic, also occurring in Thrim 23; see note there for further parallels to the custom of sacrificing animals of certain colours. It seems that all-black oxen were thought the noblest, and so Thunder’s slaying one instead of an inferior beast is probably intended to humiliate the stingy Hymer. In Ylfr 48 we read that: Hann tók inn mesta uxann, er Himin-brjóðr hét, ok sleit af hǫfuðit ok fór með til sjávar. ‘He took the greatest ox, which was called Heavenrid, and tore of its head and went with it to the sea’.

Off the bull broke the counsel-slayer of the thurse [= Thunder]

the high meadow of the two horns [HEAD] from above.—

“Worse by far thy works do seem to the wielder of ships [= Hymer = me] than if thou mightst sit calm.<sup>147</sup>”

<sup>147</sup>I had originally taken this as Hymer snidely belittling Thunder’s feat of pulling the head off the ox (presumably by the horns); he would have earned greater glory had he simply sat and done nothing. However, it may also be read as a factual statement; Thunder just killed one of his finest oxen, and Hymer would certainly have preferred that he had not.

The scene now shifts, and the party is out at sea. It is possible that a stanza has here been lost, or that it would be indicated in some other way in the original performance.

1 Hraun-gǫlkn 'The lavafield-monsters' | Both mss. have bręin-, which may mean either 'clean' or 'reindeer', neither of which fit. On the other hand braun ONP: 'stone/barren area, wasteland; lavafield' is well attested in scoldic kennings for ettins. The precise meaning of galkn 'monster' (plural gǫlkn) is unclear; but it is attested in three scoldic verses, always in kennings of the type "troll-woman of the shield [AXE]". While the mss. spelling 'galkn' (norm. gálkn) could reflect either singular and plural, the form of the verb is plural. This means that the word cannot be referring to the Middenyardswyrm, refuting the interpretation of Larrington (2014): "the sea-wolf shrieked".

3 [...] | It is very likely that a line is missing here, since the stanzas in the poem otherwise consistently have four lines. In other tellings of the myth it is at this point that Hymer cuts Thunder's fishing line, so that is probably what has been lost.

It is of course impossible to know what exact form it had, but for the reader's enjoyment, based on other poets and the account in Yilv (see introduction to the present poem) I've composed the following variant lines: unds vinr Hrungnis · vað Þórs of skar 'until the friend of Rungner [= Hymer] Thunder's fishing-line did cut'; unds fęlr Hymir · fękk á saxi 'until pale Hymer grasped the knife'.

3 sitjandi 'fastened' | This word is ambiguous and can modify either Thunder (in which case it would mean "sitting") or the columns (súlur). I have chosen the latter and read it as signifying their stability.

 Tew attempted, twice, to move it—each time stood the cauldron still before [him].

2 ql-kjól ‘ale-ship [CAULDRON]’ | ql-kjól is the accusative of ql-kjóll, but in this context (CV: koma, B) we would expect the dative ql-kjóli. The meter does not allow for this, however.

2 hofi ‘hall’ | This is the only Old Norse occurrence of the word hof in the sense ‘hall, house’; it otherwise only means ‘temple’ (hove!). The West Germanic cognates consistently mean ‘hall’, and that is probably the original sense, so it is unclear if this is an instance of foreign influence (if so, most likely Anglo-Saxon) or just a poetic archaism.

 Sib's husband [= Thunder] heaved the cauldron up onto his head, and at his heels the rings clattered.

4 hringar skullu 'the rings clattered' | i.e. the chain-links. This detail is mentioned in an example sentence contrasting long and short phonemes in FGT (1950): heyrði til hōddu, þá er þórr bar hverinn 'the sound of the pot-links (badda) was heard when Thunder bore the cauldron'. According to Finnur Jónsson (1932) the chain (or badda) on a Viking-age cauldron would have reached across, in which case this would be a reference to the cauldron's enormous size, with its diameter—mentioned in st. 5 as one rest†—being roughly the same as Thunder's height.

<sup>150</sup>In the account of Yilv Thunder is said to have stepped through the boat when trying to pull up the Mid-denyardswyrm. This detail is also seen on the carving of the Altuna stone from Uppland, Sweden; it may have been transposed to this place in the narrative. TODO.

1 ér 'ye' | The audience. As pointed out by Finnur Jónsson (1932) an address to the audience of this type is otherwise unparalleled in Eddic mythological poetry. Such are however fairly common in Scaldic poetry, with which this poem shares several traits (see Introduction above).

2 goð-mólugra 'god-speaking' | This word is a hapax, but easily understood. One who is goð-mólugr is 'able to speak about the god-lore', i.e. 'versed in the mythology'.

The valour-mighty one [= Thunder] came onto the Thing† of the gods, and had that cauldron which Hymer [had] owned;
but well the Wighers† (= gods) shall drink one ale-feast at Eage's, every flax-cutting [FALL?].

The Flyting of Lock (Lokasenna)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C10th (0.965)

Meter: Leeds-meter

Preserved in R, directly following Hymr, though the poems without doubt were originally separate; the stylistic differences are drastical.

The poem has been interpreted as blasphemous (TODO: elaborate), but shows no linguistic signs of being particularly late.

b Eagre had two servants: Femfinger† and Elder†. There glowing gold was used instead of fire; the ale there poured itself. That place was a great grith-stead†.<sup>154</sup> Men greatly praised how good the servants of Eagre were. Lock could not stand to hear that, and he slew Femfinger. Then the Eese shook their shields and screamed at Lock,<sup>155</sup> and chased him away to the forest—but they went to drink. Lock turned back around and met Elder outside. Lock greeted him:

and all yin-holy† Gods!<sup>158</sup>

Save for that one os† who sits further within:
Bray, on the benches.”

<sup>158</sup>The first two half-lines prayer formula are identical to Syed 2–3; it may be of authentic Heathen origin, used in cup-offerings, with the second half of the stanza being used to ask for a boon. Lock subverts it by instead insulting one of the gods present, something that may have been highly offensive to the original audience.

[Bragi] kvað:            12    „Mar ok mēki · gef’k þér míns fēar

[Bray] quoth: “Steed and sword I give thee of my own wealth, and so restores thee Bray with a bigh†, lest thou shouldst yield envy to the Eese—anger not the Gods against thee!”

[Bray] quoth: “I know if outside I were, as inside I am thy head I would bear in my hands;

this I see for thy lie.”

4 lít’k þér þat fyr lygi | ‘litt ec þer þat fyr lygi’ R. A variety of emendations have been proposed for this line. Simplest would be litt es þer þat fyr lygi ‘that is little [punishment] for thee for lying’. Based on the similarity of ę (= tt) and c Finnur Jónsson (1932) gives lykak þer þat fyr lygi ‘so I would bring to thee for thy lie’.

<sup>159</sup>As explicitly said in P1, the rule of grith† (a truce of non-violence, even between enemies; see Encyclopedia) applied inside the hall. Being bound to it, Bray (or the other gods) cannot injure Lock.

[Loki] kvað:        15    „Snjallr est í sessi, · skal-at-tu svá gęra,

21 „Örr est, Loki, · ok ør-viti es þú fēr þér Gefjun at grēmi því-at aldar ør-løg · hygg at ǫll of viti jafn-gørla sem ek.“

[Loki] kvað:           22       „Þegi þú, Óðinn, · þú kunnir aldri-gi dçila víg með verum;
opt þú gaft · þeim's gefa skyldir-a,
innum slévurum, sigr.“

[Lock] quoth: “Shut up thou, Weden! Thou couldst never deal out war amongst men—oft thou gavest to them thou shouldst not have given,
to the slower men victory.”

[Óðinn] kvað:        23        „Veitst ef ek gaf · þeim's gefa né skylda, 2                        inum slévrurum, sigr, áttu vetr · vast fyr jörð neðan 4                        kýr mólkandi ok kona ok hefir þar börn of borit
6                        ok hugða'k þat args aðal.“

[Weden] quoth: “Know that if I gave to them I should not have given,
to the slower men victory:
for eight winters wast thou beneath the earth [as] a milch cow and a woman, and thou hast there borne children,
and I've judged that a queer's nature.”

4 kýr mólkandi 'a milch cow' | May also be read as “milking cows”, the nom. sg. kýr being identical to the nom./acc. pl. kýr, and mólka meaning both ‘to milk’ and ‘to give milk’. “Milch cow” is preferable for two reasons, viz. (i) that the phrase is followed by ok kona ‘and a woman’ rather than sem kona ‘as a woman’ or similar, and (ii) that it agrees with another instance where Lock is gives birth in the form of a female animal (cows, of course, only giving milk after calving), namely the episode of the building of the wall around Osyrd as told in Yilv 42.

[Loki] kvað:        24        „En þik síga kóðu · Sámseyju í 2                        ok drapt á vett sem vqlur, vitka líki · fórt ver-þjóð yfir,
4                        ok hugða'k þat args aðal.“

[Lock] quoth: “But thou, they said, didst sink down into Samsy, and thou beatst the drum like [do] wallows.
In the likeness of a sorcerer thou journeyedst among the nations of men,
and I've judged that a queer's nature.”

[Frigg kvað:]        25        „Ør-lögum ykkrum · skylið aldri-gi
2                        sęgja sęggjum frá,

4                        firrisk ę forn røk firar.“

[Frie quoth:] “Of your orlays should ye two never speak to youths,
that which ye two Eese did in days of yore—always be ancient rakes shunned by men.”

4                   ása ok alfa, · es hér inni eru, hværr hēfir þinn hór vesit.“

[Lock quoth:] “Shut up thou, Frow! I know thee full well—thou art not free of blemishes:
of the Eese and Elves which are here within each one has been thy lover!”

2 vamma vant ‘free of blemishes’ | Formulaic, cf. Hígb 22: hann es-a vamma vanr ‘he is not free of blemishes’.

[Frēyja kvað:]           31       „Fló ’s þér tunga, · hygg at þér frēmnr myni
2                   ó·gótt of gala;

4                   hryggr munt hēim fara.“

[Frow quoth:] “False is thy tongue, I ween that it henceforth will sing evil [into being] for thee.
Wroth against thee are the Eese and Ossens:
grieved wilt thou journey home.”

1–2 Fló ... gala; ‘False ... thee’ | The language is again strikingly similar to Hígb, particularly 29/3–4: “A quick-spoken tongue—unless it be held in place—oft sings evil [into being] for itself (opt sér ó·gótt of gēlr).” and 116/3–4: “a false-counseling tongue (flá-rʒð tunga) brought his life to its end, and in no way over a truthful charge.”

4 hryggr munt hēim fara ‘grieved wilt thou journey home’ | Frow here predicts the future; Lock will come to regret his insults.

Loki:                   32       „Þęgi þú, Fręyja, · þú est for-dęða 2                   ok męini blandin mjøk, síðst-u at bróðr þínum · síðu blíð ręgin
4                   ok myndir þá, Fręyja, frata.“

Lock [quoth]: “Shut up thou, Frow! Thou art an evil-working woman, and much mixed with harm,
since against thy brother the blithe Reins enchanted thee,
and thou wouldst then, O Frow, fart.”

Njorðr:               33       „Þat ’s vá-lítit · þótt sér varðir vers fái, 2                   hós eða hvárs;
                      hitt’s undr, es áss ragr · es hér inn of kominn
4                   ok hęfir sá bõrn of borit.“

Nearth [quoth]: “It is little woe that women should get themselves a man, a lover or whomever else;

this is a wonder, that a queer os is come here within,
and he has born children!"

Loki:           34   „Þegi þú, Njörðr, · þú vast austr heðan
                              2           gísl of sęndr at goðum;
                              Hymis meyjar · hofðu þik at hland-trogi
                              4           ok þér í munn migu.“

Lock [quoth]: “Shut up thou, Nearth! Thou wast east hence sent [as] a hostage for the Gods.
Hymer’s maidens had thee for a urinal,
and pissed thee in the mouth!”

Njörðr:       35   „Sú esumk líkn · es vas’k langt heðan
                              2           gísl of sęndr at goðum:
                              þá ek mōg gat · þann’s mann-gi fíar,
                              4           ok þikkir sá ása jaðarr.“

Nearth [quoth]: “That is my relief, as I was far-away hence sent [as] a hostage for the Gods: [that] I then begot that lad whom no man hates [= Free], and he seems the peak of the Eese.”

Loki:           36   „Hétt-u nú, Njörðr, · haf á hófi þik; 2           mun’k-a því lęyna lęngr:
                              við systur þinni · gatst slíkan mōg,
                              4           ok es-a þó ónu verr.“

Lock [quoth]: “Stop thou now, Nearth, restrain thyself;
I will no longer hide it:
by thy sister begotst thou such a lad, and there can be expected nothing worse.”

Týr:           37   „Fręyr ’s bętstr · allra ball-riða 2           ása gōrðum í;
                              męy né grótir · né manns konu,
                              4           ok lęysir ór hōptum hvērn.“

Tew [quoth]: “Free is the best of all bold riders in the yards of the Eese;
he makes no maiden cry, nor [any] man’s woman, and loosens each from his bonds!”

Loki: 38 „Þegi þú, Týr, • þú kunnir aldri-gi 2 bera tilt með tvęim;
 handar ennar hógri • mun’k hinnar geta
 4 es þér sleit Fęnrir frá.“

Lock [quoth]: “Shut up thou, Tew! Thou couldst never the right hand I will next mention, which from thee Fenrer tore.”

Tew [quoth]: “A hand am I lacking, but thou Rothwitner;
 both yearnings are a bale!
 Nor does the Wolf have it well, who in bonds shall await the Twilight of the Reins.”

Loki: 40 „Þegi þú, Týr, • þat varð þinni konu
 2 at hon átti mōg við mér!

 A mackerel nor a penny hadst thou never for that injustice, O wretch!”

 therefore wilt thou next—unless thou now shut up—be bound, O smith of bales!”

[illegible]

4 þá's vógu verar.“
 [Lock quoth:] “Shut up thou, Bewe! Thou couldst never [Hēimdallr kvað:] 47 „Qlr est, Loki · svá't es ør-viti, [Homedal quoth:] “Drunk art thou, Lock, so that thou art out of wits;

 why dost thou not hold back, O Lock?
 For over-drinking causes for every man that he no longer recalls his speech.”

[Loki kvað:] 48 „Þęgi þú, Hēimdallr, · þér vas í ár-daga

 [Lock quoth:] “Shut up thou, Homedal! For thee was in days of yore thy ugly life laid [in place]; with a stiff back wilt thou ever be and waking, O Watchman of the Gods.”

2 líf of lagit ‘life laid [in place]’ | Formulaic. See TODO.

4 vqrðr goða ‘Watchman of the Gods’ | Formulaic epithet of Homedal, who had to guard the rainbow bridge of the Gods against Their enemies. See note to Grim 13.

[Loki kvað:] 50 „Veitst ef mik á hјorvi skulu · ins hrím-kalda magar

P4      Þá gekk Sif fram ok byrлаði Loka í hrím-kálki mjöð ok mēlti:
 Then Sib walked forth and poured for Lock mead in a rime-chalice, and spoke:

53      „Hẽill ves þú nú, Loki, · ok tak við hrím-kálki

 "Hale be thou now, O Lock, and receive this rime-chalice, full of ancient mead, that thou rather let her alone among the sons of the Eese remain blemish-less.<sup>161</sup>"

<sup>161</sup>Sib attempts to bribe Lock with drink, so that she alone will remain unaccused among the gods.

P5 Hann tók við horni ok drakk af:

He received the horn and drank from it:

- 54 „Eín þú værir · ef þú svá værir,
 2 vör ok gröm at veri;

“Alone wert thou, if thou so wert wary and wroth against man.
 I know one—which I think myself to know—adulterer behind even Lorida's back, and that was the guile-wise Lock!”

5 lē-vísi Loki ‘guile-wise Lock’ | Formulaic, also occurring in Hyme 37. Cf. also Wsp 35 where Lock is called lē-gjarn ‘guile-cager’ and note to Wsp 17 where Lothar (possibly to be identified with Lock) gives men lē, which may be an accusative form of lē.

- [Beyla kvað:] 55 „Fjöll ǫll skjalfa, · hygga á fǫr vesa [Beal quoth:] “The fells all quake—I think on the journey from home Lorida to be;

 he brings calm to the one who here maligns
 all Gods and men!”

1–2 Fjöll ... Hlórriða ‘The fells ... to be’ | Thunder's movement is often signalled by such disturbance in poetry. See note to Thrim 21.

- [Loki kvað:] 56 „Þegi þú, Beyla, · þú est Byggvis kvæn [Lock quoth:] “Shut up thou, Beal! Thou art Bewe's wife,
 2 ok mēini blandin mjök;

 and much mixed with harm;
 a greater disgrace came not among the sons of the Eese;
 thou art all, O kneadess, shitty!”

P6 Þá kom Þórr at ok kvað:

Then Thunder arrived and quoth:

57 „Þegi þú, rög vëttr, · þér skal minn þrúð-hamarr,
2 Mjöllnir, mál fyr-nema!
Hęrða klett · drep’k þér halsi af,

“Shut up thou, queer wight! Thee shall my thrith-hammer [Lock quoth:] “The son of Earth is now here come inside, why thrashest thou so, O Thunder?

But then darest thou not, as thou shalt fight against the wolf, and he swallows Syefather (= Weden) whole.”

[Þórr kvað:] 59 „Þegi þú, rög vëttr, · þér skal minn þrúð-hamarr, [Thunder quoth:] “Shut up thou, queer wight! Thee shall my thrith-hammer

[Loki kvað:] 60 „Austr-fјorum þínum · skalt aldri-gi

Ale madest thou, Eagre, but thou wilt never since make a simble;
 all thy ownings which are here within,
 over [them] may flame play,
 and burn thee on the back!”

From Lock (Frá Loka)

The myth told here is known from two other places. Closest at hand is Wsp

Yilv 50 has a longer but somewhat different account: the Eese captured Lock’s two sons, Wonnell and “Nare or Narve”. They turned Wonnell into a wolf (vargr, which also means ‘outlaw’) and had him tear his brother Narve apart. Narve’s intestines were then taken and used to bind Lock on top of three pointed stones, with one digging into his shoulder-blades, the other digging into his loins, and the third digging into his houghs. The intestines then turned into iron.

Since the author of Yilv knew Wsp, it is possible that he combined a text similar to From Lock with this st., interpreting Vála víg-bönd as ‘Wonnell’s war-bonds’ and vargr as ‘wolf’ rather than the more probable ‘outlaw’. Wonnell is otherwise only known as the son of Weden, and there is no reason as to why he could not have bound Lock. For further differences between Yilv and From Lock see introduction to From Lock below.

- P7      En eptir þetta falst Loki í Fránangrs-forsi í lax líki. Þar tóku ésir hann.
 2              Hann var bundinn með þørmum sonar Nara; en Narfi, sonr hans, varð at vargi. Skaði tók eittr-orm ok festi upp yfir and-lit Loka; draup þar ór 4              eittr. Sigyn, kona Loka, sat þar ok helt munn-laug undir eitrit. En er munn-laugin var full bar hon út eitrit, en meðan draup eitrit á Loka. Þá 6              kipptist hann svá hart við, at þaðan af skalf jörð ǫll; þat eru nú kallaðir land-skjálftar.

But after this Lock hid himself in the Freenangersforce in the form of a salmon. There the Eese took him. He was bound with the intestines of his son Nare, but his son Narve became an outlaw. Shede took a venomous serpent and fastened it over Lock’s face; out of it dripped venom. Syein, Lock’s wife, sat there and held a basin [for hand-washing] under the venom. But when the basin was full she bore out the venom, and meanwhile the venom dripped on Lock. Then he revolted so hard that thence all the earth quaked; that is now called earth-quakes.

1 Vreǰör ‘Wroth’ | The vr- is restored for the sake of the alliteration, but is not strictly metrically necessary;
cf. st 13. The manuscript has r-. In any case the poem (generally considered to be the oldest Eddic poem) most likely predates the change vr- > r-.

if I my hammer might find?”

3 fjaðr-hams 'feather-hame' | A “feather-skin” by which the wearer can transform or fly like a bird.

- Freyja kvað:      4      „Þó mynda'k gefa þér · þótt ór gulli véri
2      ok þó selja · at véri ór silfri.“

“Still would I give it to thee though it were golden, and yet hand it to thee if it were silvern.”

[Frow quoth:]

2 selja 'selja' | selja, cognate of English sell, here has its older sense of 'hand over', cf. Gotish saljan Streitberg (1910, p. 116): 'opfern; θύειν'.

- 2      5      Fló þá Loki, · fjaðr-hamr dunði,
         unds fyr útan kom · ása garða
         ok fyr innan kom · jǫtna hęima.

Flew then Lock—the feather-hame rustled—until he came outside the Yards of the Eese†, and he came inside the Homes of the Ettins†.

1 Loki 'Lock' | Though Thunder is the one asking for the feather-hame (“if I my hammer might find”), Lock is the one that takes off flying with it.

- 2      6      Þrymr sat á haugi, · þursa dróttinn, greyjum sínum · gull-bönd snøri
         ok mǫrum sínum · mǫn jafnaði.

Thrim sat on the mound, the lord of Thurses†:
on his greyhounds the golden leashes he twirled,
and on his steeds the manes he evened.

1 sat á haugi ‘sat on the mound’ | Apparently a typical seat for ettins. See Wsp 42 for other attestations.

1 þursa dróttinn ‘lord of Thurses’ | This formulaic expression also occurs in several Runic charms against such thursen lords (see below under Galders); an example of the close connection between mythology and ritual.

2–3 greyjum sínum ... mörum sínum ‘his greyhounds ... his steeds’ | Thrim sits surrounded by dogs and horses. The scene is reminiscent of the ancient “master of animals” motif, especially as attested on panel A of the Gundestrup cauldron.

[Þrymr kvað:]                7    „Hvat ’s með ǫsum? · Hvat ’s með ǫlfum?
                                          2        Hví est ǣinn kominn · í jǫtun-heima?“
 [Loki kvað:]                „Illt ’s með ǫsum, · illt ’s með ǫlfum!
                                          4        Hǣfir þú Hlórriða · hamar of folginn?“ [Thrim quoth:]    “What’s with the Eese? What’s with the Elves?
                                          Why art thou alone come into the Ettin-homes†?”— [Lock quoth:]    “Tis ill with the Eese! ’Tis ill with the Elves!
                                          Hast thou the hammer of Lorida (= Thunder) hid?”

3 illt ’s með ǫlfum | Required by the meter; om. R

1 Hvat ’s með ǫsum? · Hvat ’s með ǫlfum? ‘What is with the Eese? What is with the Elves?’ | Formulaic, the same line occurs in Wsp 47.

[Þrymr kvað:]                8    „Ek hǣfi Hlórriða · hamar of folginn 2        áttarǫstum · fyr jǫrð neðan;
                                          hann ǣngi maðr · apr of heimtir
                                          4        nema fǫri mér · Freyju at kvén.“ [Thrim quoth:]    “I have the hammer of Lorida hid eight rests† beneath the earth!
                                          It no man will fetch back,
                                          unless he bring me Frow for a wife.”

9    Fló þá Loki, · fjaðr-hamr dunði,
                                          2        unds fyr útan kom · jǫtna heima
                                          ok fyr innan kom · ása garða;
                                          4        mǫtti hann Þór · miðra garða
                                          ok hann þat orða · alls fyrst of kvað:

Flew then Lock—the feather-hame rustled—
 until he came outside the Yards of the Eese, and he came inside the Homes of the Ettins.
 Met he Thunder in the middle yards,
 and he [= Thunder] that word first of all did say:

5 hann þat | emend.; þat hann R, with elsewhere unprecedented word order. Cf. note to st. 2.

- 10 „Hefir þú ørendi · sem erfiði?
 2 Seg-ðu á lopti · lōng tíðendi!
 Opt sitjanda · sōgur of fallask,
 4 ok liggjandi · lygi of bęllir.“

“Hast thou an errand of hardship?
 Tell thou aloft the long tidings!
 Oft the sitter's tales fail each other and the liar blows up his lie.”<sup>162</sup>

1 Hefir þú ørendi · sem erfiði? ‘Hast thou an errand of hardship?’ | Thunder asks Lock if he has bad news. The collocation ørendi ‘errand’ ... erfiði ‘trouble, hardship’ is formulaic and occurs in X other (TODO!!) places, including in st. 5 of HHarw.

<sup>162</sup>Proverbial. If one sits or lies (liggjandi means to ‘lie down’; it is rather unfortunate that the two sound the same in English) down and thinks too much over bad news, details will be left out, excuses thought up. Thus it is best that Lock immediately tell Thunder what he has learned.

- [Loki kvað:] 11 „Hefi’k ørendi, · erfiði ok:
 2 Þrymr hefir þinn hamar, · þursa dróttinn;
 hann ęngi maðr · aptr of heimtir
 4 nema hōnum fōri · Freyju at kvęn.“

“I have an errand, hardship also:
 Thrim has thy hammer, the lord of Thurses.
 It no man will fetch back,
 unless he bring him Frow for a wife.”

[Lock quoth:]

- 12 Ganga þęir fagra · Freyju at hitta
 2 ok hann þat orða · alls fyrst of kvað:
 „Bitt-u þik, Freyja, · brúðar líní!
 4 Vit skulum aka tvau · í jōtun-hęima.“

Go they the fair Frow to find,
 and he this word first of all did say:
 “Bind thyself, Frow, with a bride's linen!
 We two shall drive into the Ettin-homes.”

2 hann ‘he’ | The speaker is either Thunder or Lock.

3 brúðar líní! ‘bride's linen’ | i.e. bridal cloth.

- 13 Vreð varð þá Freyja · ok fnasaði, 2 allr asa salr · undir bifðisk, stōkk þat it mikla · męn Brísinga:

4 „Mik veitst verða • ver-gjarnasta ef ek ęk með þér • í jotun-hęima.“

Wroth became then Frow, and snorted;
the whole hall of the Eese quivered below;
down crashed the great torc of the Brisings†— “Thou knowest that I will become the most man-eager, if I drive with thee into the Ettin-homes.”

3 męn Brisinga ‘torc of the Brisings’ | A legendary jewel owned by Frow.

4 verða • ver-gjarnasta ‘become the most man-eager’ | Presumably Frow is speaking out of self-awareness of her own lustful inclinations, i.e., she will be gripped by uncontrollable lust. It is also possible that she complains about being accused of promiscuity by the other gods, but that is not the literal sense. For Frow’s promiscuity cf. Lock 30, and also st. 26 of that poem where Frie is likewise called ver-gjörn ‘man-eager’.

14 Sęnn vóru ęsir • allir á þingi

and the Ossens† all at speech,
and of this counseled the mighty Tews†:
How they Loride’s (= Thunder’s) hammer would get?

1–3 Sęnn ... tívar ‘Soon ... Tews’ | The exact same three lines also occur Bldr 1/1–3; see Note there.

15 Þá kvað þat Hęimdallr, • hvítastr ása,
2 vissi vęl framm • sęm vanir aðrir:
„Bindu vér þór þá • brúðar líni;
4 hafi hann it mikla • męn Brisinga!

Then quoth this Homedal†, whitest of the Eese;
he foreknew well like the other Wanes†:
“Let us bind Thunder then, with a bride’s linen;
he may have the great torc of the Brisings.

2 vissi vęl framm ‘he foreknew well’ | i.e. saw the future. Compare the derived adjective fram-viss ‘forth-wise, prescient.’

16 Lötum und hönum • hrynja lukla
2 ok kven-váðir • umb kné falla en á brijósti • breįða stęina
4 ok hag-liga • umb hęfuð typpum!“

Let us set by his side keys to jingle,
and women's garments to fall about the knees,
but on the breast broad stones,
and skillfully let us tip his head.<sup>163</sup>

<sup>163</sup> An interesting description of Wiking age bridal dress. As the everyday manager of the household, keys were the mark of a respectable married woman. The “broad stones” on the breast may be tortoise brooches (also mentioned in Wáyl 25, 36.) or beads. The tipping of the head refers to some sort of bridal hat, perhaps a veil (TODO: Literature).

17 Þá kvað þat Þórr, • þrúðugr áss:
2 „Mik munu ésir • argan kalla ef ek bindask lét • brúðar líni!“

Then quoth this Thunder, the mighty Os: “Me will the Eese call queer†,
if I let myself be bound with a bride's linen!”

18 Þá kvað þat Loki • Laufeyjar sonr:
2 „Þegi þú, Þórr, • þeira orða!
Þegar munu jotnar • Ös-garð búa
4 nema þú þinn hamar • þér of heimtir.“

Then quoth this Lock, Leafie's son:
“Shut up thou, Thunder, with those words!
Shortly the Ettins will settle Osyrd, unless thou thy hammer for thyself dost fetch!”

3–4 Þegar ... heimtir. ‘Shortly ... dost fetch!’ | Guarding Osyrd from transgressive and destructive forces was Thunder's task, and the hammer his most important tool. Cf. Hbl TODO, and a couplet by the obscure poet Thurbern Disescold, cited in Scold 11: Þórr hgr Yggs með órum • Ösgarð af þrek varðan. ‘Thunder has with the messengers of Üg [GODS] mightily guarded Osyrd.’

19 Bundu þeir Þór þá • brúðar líni
2 ok hinu mikla • meni Brísinga, en á brijósti • breiða stęina

6 ok hag-liga • of höfuð typpðu.

Bound they Thunder then with a bride's linen,
and with the great torc of the Brisings.
They set by his side keys to jingle,
and women's garments to fall about the knees,

but on the breast broad stones,
and skillfully they tipped his head.

- 20 Þá kvað þat Loki · Laufeyjar sonr:
2 „Mun’k auk með þér · ambótt vesa, vit skulum aka tvau · í jötun-hęima.“

Then quoth this Lock, Leafie’s son:
“I will also with thee be a handmaid;
we two<sup>164</sup> shall drive into the Ettin-homes.”

<sup>164</sup>The form used, tvau, is the neuter plural, i.e. one of the pair is female and the other male. This is either an error due to mindless copying of v. 11, or a backhanded insult against Thunder.

- 21 Sęnn vęru hafrar · hęim of vrekni,
2 skyndir at skęklum, · skyldu vęl renna;

4 ók Óðins sonr · í jötun-hęima.

Soon were the he-goats† driven home, hastened onto the cart-poles; they were to run well.
Crag burst, earth burned with flame;
drove Weden’s son [= Thunder] into the Ettin-homes.<sup>165</sup>

1 hafrar ‘he-goats’ | Thunder’s chariot was driven by two he-goats, whence he is called “the Lord of He-goats” (e.g. in Hyme 20, 31).

<sup>165</sup>Thunder’s driving is often connected with cosmic disturbance. So, his arrival in Lock 55 is signalled by the mountains quaking. The description most similar to the present stanza is found in Thedwolf’s Hvl 14–16, where crags (bjęrg) burst asunder and fires rage before him. A possibly Indo-European parallel to this is the Vedic myth of Indra breaking the mountains and releasing the rivers (as described most famously in RV 1.32). Cf. Bldr 3 where the ground rumbles beneath the riding Weden.

- 22 Þá kvað þat Þrymr, · þursa dróttinn:
2 „Standiđu upp, jętnar, · ok stráiđu bękki!
Nú fóriđu mér · Freyju at kván,
4 Njarðar dóttur · ór Nóa-túnum.

Then quoth this Thrim, the lord of Thurses:
“Stand up, O ettins, and strew the benches!
Now bring me Frow for a wife,

- 23 Ganga hér at garði · gull-hyrnðar kýr,

- 2            øxn al-svartir, · jǫtni at gamni,

 4            ęinnar mér Fręyju · á-vant þykkir.“

Here march to the farm golden-horned kine, all-black oxen to the ettin's [= my] pleasure.
 A multitude I own of treasures, a multitude I own of torcs—only Frow I think myself missing.”

2 øxn al-svartir 'all-black oxen' | Formulaic, also occurring in Hyme 18. That all-black (i.e. spotlessly black) oxen were most valued is seen by the pairing with “golden-horned”. One may also compare Grammaticus (2015)[1.8.12], where the hero Hadding has to atone for his slaying of a heavenly being by a sacrifice of dark-coloured victims (furvae hostiae): Siquidem propiciandorum numinum gratia Frø deo rem diuinam furuis hostiis fecit. Quem litationis morem annuo feriarum circuitu repetitum posteris imitandum reliquit. Frøblod Sueones uocant. ‘In order to mollify the divinities he [= Hadding] did indeed make a holy sacrifice of dark-coloured victims to the god Frø. He repeated this mode of propitiation at an annual festival and left it to be imitated by his descendants. The Swedes call it Frøblot.’ This ancient ritual taboo finds parallel even in the Tanakh, where animals dedicated to YHWH were to be without blemish (תמים; Leviticus 1:3)

- 24        Vas þar at kveldi · of komit snimma

               drakk Sifjar verr · sáld þrjú mjaðar.

There was the evening come early,
 and for the ettins ale brought forth.
 Alone ate he [= Thunder] an ox, eight salmons,
 all the dainties meant for the women;
 drank Sib's husband [= Thunder] three sieves of mead.<sup>166</sup>

<sup>166</sup>Cf. Hyme 15, where Thunder eats two of Hymer's oxen. It is rather interesting that the same kenning is used in both stanzas relating the god's great eating; perhaps one poet was playing on the other's expression, or they were both referencing another, now-lost work.

- 25        Þá kvað þat Þrymr, · þursa dróttinn:
 2            „Hvar sát-t-u brúðir · bíta hvassara?

 4            né ęnn męira mjǫð · męy of drekka!“

Then quoth this Thrim, the lord of Thurses:
 “Where hast thou seen brides bite sharper?
 I have never seen brides bite yet broader;
 nor yet more mead a maiden drink!”

- He looked 'neath the linen, lusted for a kiss—but he from the outside flung back across the length of the hall—“Why are the eyes of Frow blazing?
 Methinks there be flames coming out of the eyes!”<sup>167</sup>

- 28 Sat hin al-snotra · ambótt fyrir

- 29 Inn kom hin arma · jǫtna systir,
 2 hin's brúð-féar · biðja þorði:
 „Lát þér af hǫndum · hringa rauða
 4 ef þú ǫðlask vill · ástir mínar, ástir mínar, · alla hylli!“

In came the wretched sister of the ettins, she who for the bride-fee [= Millner] dared ask: “Slide off from thy hands the red rings,
 if thou wilt win my love,
 my love; all [my] holdness†.”<sup>168</sup>

5 ástir mínar, · alla hylli ‘my love; all [my] holdness’ | Probably formulaic. There are no preserved parallels in poetry, but there may be one in Yilv 49 (excerpt, following the death of Balder): En er goðin vitkuðust, þá mēlti Frigg ok spurði, hværr sá véri með ásum, er eignast vildi „allar ástir mínar (so TW; ástir bennar ‘her loves’ SU) ok hylli, ok vili hann ríða á bel-veg ok freista, ef hann fái fundit Baldr, ok bjóða Helju út-laun, ef hon vill láta fara Baldr heim í As-garð.“ ‘But when the gods came back to their wits, then Frie spoke and asked which one among the Eese would own “all my loves and boldness, and will ride on the Hellway† and see if he may find Balder and offer Hell a ransom if she will let Balder come home to Osyard.” We can tell from the citation of a Leeds-meter stanza at the end of ch. 49 (see Eddic Fragments below) that Snorre knew one or more now-lost Eddic poems about Balder’s death, and it may be that one of these poems contained the same two long-lines as the present stanza. For such a sharing of whole lines cf. e.g. st. 14/1–3 above, which are identical to Bldr 1/1–3.

<sup>168</sup>The sister, who was apparently the one who asked for the Hammer, now has the audacity to ask Thunder (disguised as Frow) to give her the very rings on his hands.

30 Þá kvað þat Þrymr, · þursa dróttinn:
2 „Berð inn hamar · brúði at vígja, læggið Mjöllni · í meýjar kné,

Then quoth this Thrim, the lord of Thurses:

“Bear ye in the hammer, the bride to bless;
lay ye Millner in the maiden’s knee;
bless ye us two together by Ware†’s hand!”

4 Várar ‘Ware’ | According to Snorre one of the goddesses, presiding over vows between men and women. See Encyclopedia.

31 Hló Hlórriða · hugr í brjósti
2 es harð-hugaðr · hamar of þekkiði;
Þrym drap hann fyrstan, · þursa dróttin,
4 ok étt jötuns · alla lamði.

Laughed Loride’s (= Thunder’s) heart in the chest,
when, hard-hearted, he recognized the hammer.
Thrim he slew first, the lord of Thurses, and all the ettin’s lineage he beat lame.

32 Drap hann ina ǫldnu · jǫtna systur,
2 hin’s brúð-féar · of beðit hafði;
hón skell of hlaut · fyr skillinga,
4 en hogg hamars · fyr hringa fjöld.
Svá kom Óðins sonr · ǣndr at hamri.

He slew the aged sister of the ettins,
she who for the bride-fee had asked;
a smiting she received for shillings,
and a strike of the hammer for a multitude of rings.
So got Weden's son [= Thunder] back his hammer.

The Thule of Rígh

(Rígsþula)

Meter: Ancient-words-law

Dumezil hypothesis. Irish influence? Many interesting things to write here!

The language of Rígh is highly formulaic, but also often unique to it. Of particular note are the alliteration between the adverb męirr ‘further’ and miðra, e.g. in st. 2/1: gekk męirr at þat

- P1 Svá segja menn í fornum sǫgum, at ęinn-hvęrr af ǫsum, sá er Hęimdallr hęt, [W 78r/1]

húsa-bó ok nęfndisk Rigr; ęptir þęiri sǫgu er kvęði þetta.

So say men in ancient saws† that one of the Eese†, he who was called Homedal†, went on his journey and came forth along a certain lake shore, came upon a lone homestead and called himself Rígh—according to that saw is this poem.

- 1 Ár kvǫðu ganga • grónar brautir [W 78r/TODO]
2 ǫflgan ok aldinn • ǫs kunnigan,

Of yore, they said, did walk on green roads
a mighty and aged os†, cunning:
the strong and brisk Rígh, striding.

1 Ár ‘Of yore’ | sens. emend. (see note); at W

1 Ár ‘Of yore’ | Formulaic. It is very common for poems to begin with ár. Cf. Wsp 3/1, Hyme 1/1, HHund I 1/1, Guth I 1/1, Siw 1/1

- 2 Gekk męirr at þat • miðrar brautar, [W 78r/TODO]

Went he further after that on the middle of the road, came he to a house—the door was wide open.
 He took to go inside, fire was on the floor.
 A couple sat there, hoary by the hearth:
 Great-Grandfather and Great-Grandmother, old-fashioned.

[W 78r/TODO]

There came to the farm a gangle-boned woman:
mud was on her footsoles, her arm sunburnt, downturned her face—she called herself Thew.

1 gęgil-bęina ‘gangle-boned woman’ | Derogatory, somebody who (due to poverty) only travels by foot.

3 Þír ‘Thew’ | The name probably means ‘maid-servant’ or ‘female slave’. Unlike Thrall, it is not attested in any prose texts, but probably corresponds to OS thiwi ‘maid(-servant)’, being further root-related to þéa - þjá ‘to enthal’, Proto-Norse þewar ‘servant’, OE þéow ‘slave, servant’,.

4 ǫtul ... yrmlingi 'fierce ... the young serpent' | A person of noble stock being recognised as such through their appearance is a motif in Norse literature. Cf. esp. the incident at the beginning of HHund II, where Hallow, disguised as a thrall-woman, is almost caught due to his unslavelike eyes, which are, as in the present stanza, likewise said to be ǫtul 'fierce, terrible'.

1–5 Kom ... bygðir. | Rígh approaches his son, Earl. He reveals himself as his father and initiates him into the warrior aristocracy through teaching him the runes and giving him the noble title Rígh (henceforth he will be known as Rígh Earl). Finally he instructs him to set out and win land for himself, which Rígh Earl soon does.

2 ér ‘ye’ | metr. emend.; þér ‘id.’ W, which is simply a younger form of ér, and shows that the poem has been linguistically modernised.

2 óðal ‘ethel’ | Ancestral farmland, in this case the eighteen homesteads owned by Earl.

3 kjól at riða ‘ship to ride’ | i.e. to sail.

4 egg at kenna ‘the blade to teach’ | i.e. to fight, wage war. Apparently a euphemism; to “teach someone the blade” is to fight him.

At this point leaf 78 ends. The rest of the poem is lost.

Eddic fragments from Snorre's Edda

A number of Eddic lines, stanzas and groups of stanzas are quoted in Snorre's Edda. The majority of them are taken from longer Eddic poems preserved in full in other manuscripts (primarily R and A), but a few are found nowhere else. These fragments will be edited in the present section.

The fragments have some things in common: they are generally pieces of spoken dialogue quoted in the context of longer narrative prose sections, and are, with one exception (Homedal's galder, see below), not introduced by reference to their source but rather with phrases like þá kvað hann 'then he quoth'.

A lost riddle-poem

This half-stanza is quoted in Yilv 2, being the second Eddic verse in the text, following High 1 in the same chapter, which is uttered by Yilfer himself when he enters the hall of the Eese. The whole section is clearly referencing other Eddic mythic wisdom contests and particularly reminiscent of Webth.

- P1     Hann sá þrjú há-sėti ok hvert upp frá ǫðru, ok sátu þrír menn sinn í hverju.
2        Þá spurði hann, hvert nafn høfðingja þeira véri. Sá svarar, er hann leiddi

4        sá, er heitir Jafnhárr, en sá ofast, er Þriði heitir. Þá spyrr Hárr komandann, hvárt fleira er erendi hans, en heimill er matr ok drykkir honum sem ǫllum 6        þar í Háva hǫll. Hann segir, at fyrst vill hann spyrja, ef nokkurr er fróðr maðr inni. Hárr segir, at hann komi eigi heill út, nema hann sé fróðari,

He [= Yilfer] saw three high-seats and each higher than the other, and three men sat there, each in his own seat. Then he asked what the names of those chieftains were. He who led him in answers that the one who sat in the lowest high-seat was a king called High, and next to him he who is called Evenhigh, and uppermost he who is called Third. Then High asks the guest whether he has any other errands, but food and drink will be freely offered him, like all men there in the High One's hall. He [= Yilfer] asks whether anyone within is a learned man. High says that he will not come out whole unless he be more learned [than he],

Nearth and Shede

The following passage is almost the whole of Yǫlv 23, excepting at the very end svá er sagt ‘so it is said’, after which is quoted Grim 11. Notably, the two stanzas cited here are also found translated in Grammaticus (2015)[1.8.18–19], where they are said to have been spoken by Hadding and Rainhild, respectively. For discussion Hopkins (2021).

12     þetta:

The third Os is that one who is called Nearth. He lives in the heaven in the place called Nowetowns. He rules the course of the wind, and stills sea and fire. On him shall one call for sea-faring and for hunting. He is so wealthy and blessed with money that he may give them a wealth of lands or loose property; on him shall one call for that sake. Nearth is not of the lineage of the Eese. He was brought up in Wanehome, but the Waners gave him as a hostage to the gods, and in return got as hostage that one who is called Heener. He was used to reconcile the gods and the Waners. Nearth has that woman who is called Shede, the daughter of the ettin Thedse. Shede wishes to have the dwelling which her father had owned, which lies on some fells in the place called Thrimham—but Nearth wishes to live by the sea. They agreed with each other that they would live for nine nights in Thrimham, but the other nine at Nowetowns. But when Nearth came back to the Nowetowns from the fell, he quoth this:

- 2     „Lćð erumk fjöll, • vas’k-a lćngi á,
2     nćtr ęinar níu;

- 4 hjá sǫngvi svana.“
 “The fells are loathsome to me; I was not long thereon—only for nine nights.
 The howling of the wolves thought me evil, compared to the song of swans.”

P3 Þá kvað Skaði þetta:

Then Shede quoth this:

- 3 „Sofa né mát'k-a'k · sǫvar beðjum á 2 fugls jarmi fyrir;
 sá mik vǫkr · es af víði kǫmr
 4 morgun hverjan már.“
 “I could not sleep on the beds of the sea for the bleating of the bird.
 He awakes me, when from the wide sea he comes,
 every morning, the mew.”

- P4 Þá fór Skaði upp á fjall ok byggði í Þrym-heimi, ok ferr hon mjök á skíðum
 2 ok með boga ok skýtr dýr. Hon heitir ǫndur-goð eða ǫndur-dís.
 Then Shede went up to the fells and dwelled in Thrimham, and she often goes on skis with her bow and shoots beasts. She is called ski-god or ski-dise.

Homedal's Galder (Heimdallargaldr)

This mysterious fragment is quoted in Yilv 27, the chapter describing Homedal, which is here reproduced in full. The fragment consists of two c-lines and appears to be the end of a stanza in the fitting meter Galders-law.

The same poem is mentioned again in Scold 15: Heimdallar hǫfuð heitir sverð. Svá er sagt, at hann var lostinn manns hǫfði í gegnum. Um þat er kveðit í Heimdallar-galdri, ok er síðan kallat hǫfuð mǫptuðr Heimdallar ‘A sword is called Homedal's head. So is said that he was run through with a man's head. About that it is sung in Homedal's galder, and henceforth the head is called Homedal's bane.’

- P5 Heimdallr heitir einn. Hann er kallaðr hvíti áss; hann er mikill ok heilag.
 2 Hann báru at syni meyjar níu ok allar systir; hann heitir ok Hallinskíði ok Gullintanni; tennr hans váru af gulli. Hestr hans heitir Gulltoppr. Hann 4 býr þar er heitir Himinbjörg við Bifröst; hann er vörðr goða ok sitr þar við himins enda at gæta brúarinnar fyrir berg-risum. Hann þarf minna svefn ok þat, er gras vex á jörðu eða ull á sauðum, ok allt þat er héra lètr. Hann 8 hefir lúðr þann er Gjallar-horn heitir, ok heyrir blástr hans í alla heima.

 Heimdallar sverð er kallat hofuð manns. Hér er svá sagt:

Homedal one is named. He is called the White Os; he is great and holy. He was born as the son of nine maidens, sisters all. He is also named Haldenshid and Goldentooth; his tooth were of gold. His horse is called Goldtop. He lives at the place called the Heavenbarrows near Bivrest. He is the Watchman of the Gods and sits there at Heaven's end to guard the bridge against barrow-risers. He needs less sleep than a bird. Both night and day he sees a hundred rests away from him; he also hear when grass grows on the ground or wool on sheep, and everything which sounds louder. He has the basoon called the Horn of Yell, and his blowing can be heard in all realms. Homedal's sword is called a man's head. Here it says so:

P6 Ok enn segir hann sjalfr í Heimdallar-galdri:

And further he himself says in Homedal's Galder:

 of nine sisters I'm the son.”

Gna and the Wanes

The following passage is from Ylfr 35, which lists the Ossens†.

- P7 Fjórtánda Gná, hana sendir Frigg í ymsa heima at ørindum sínum. Hon á þann hest, er renn lopt ok lög, er heitir Hóf-varpnir. Þat var eitt sinn, er hon reið, at vanir nokkvörir sá reið hennar í loptinu. Þa mælti einn:

The fourteenth is Gna; Frie sends her into every home to do her errands. She owns the horse who runs through air and sea, and is called Hoofwarpner. It was one time when she rode that some Wanes saw her riding in the air. Then one spoke:

- 5 „Hvat þar flýgr, · hvat þar ferr,
2 eða at lopti liðr?“

“What flies there, what fares there, or passes through the air?”

- P8 Hon svarar:

She answers:

- 6 „Né ek flýg, · þó ek fer
2 ok at lopti lið’k á Hóf-varpni, · þeim’s Ham-skępir
4 gat við Garð-rofu.“

“I fly not, though I fare, and pass through the air,
on Hoofwarpner, whom Hamsherper begot with Yardrove.”

- P9 Af Gnár nafni er svá kallat, at þat gnéfar, er hátt ferr:

From Gna’s name it is so called that something which fares high up protrudes.

Balder's Death

Yilv 49 contains the narrative of Balder's death, beginning with his ominous dreams, and ending with the Eese failing to "weep him out of Hell" (for a summary and discussion of the myth and its attestations, see the introduction to Wsp 31–33). At the end of the chapter, a single Leeds-meter speech-stanza is quoted.

- P10 Því nęst sendu ęsir um allan heim ęrind-reka at biđja, at Baldr vęri grátinn
 2 őr Helju, en allir gerđu þat, menninir ok kykvendin ok jęrđin ok steinarnir ok trę ok allr málmr, svá sem þú munt sęt hafa, at þęssir lutir gráta, þá er 4 þęir koma őr frosti ok í hita. Þá er sendi-menn fóru heim ok hęfđu vel rekit sín ęrindi, finna þęir í helli nękkvęrum, hvar gýgr sat; hon nefndist 6 Þękk. Þęir biđja hana gráta Baldr őr helju, hon segir:

Next after that the Eese sent an errand-runner through all the Home†, to ask that Balder be wept out of hell. And all did that, the men and the beasts and the earth and the stones and trees and all bedrock, as thou must have seen, that these things weep when they come out of cold and into heat. When the messengers journeyed home, and had ran their errand well, they find in a certain cave that a gow† sat there; she called herself Thanks. They ask her to weep Balder out of hell. She says:

- 7 „Þękk mun gráta • þurru tęrum 2 Baldrs bál-farar;
 kyks né dauđs • naut'k-a Karls sonar
 4 hafi Hęl því's hęfir.“

“Thanks will weep—with dry tears for Balder's pyre-journey [DEATH].
 Neither alive nor dead did I benefit from Churl's son [= Balder];
 let Hell have what she has!”

- P11 En þęss geta menn, at þar hafi verit Loki Laufeyjarson, er flest hęfir illt 2 gęrt með ásum.

But men guess that this must have been Lock, Leafy's son, who has done the most evil among the Eese.

Thunder's Journey to Garfrith

Scold 26, here edited in part, is the only surviving retelling of Thunder's journey to the ettin Garfrith, and his following fight with, and slaying of, him and his two daughters, Yelp and Grope. This was apparently a well-known story, and is also mentioned in Vetr l 1/1b (quoted in Scold 11, which lists kennings for Thunder): stétt of Gjǫlp dauða 'thou didst step over the dead Yelp'. The prose of Scold 26 seems to be based on an earlier, now-lost poem in Leeds-meter, from which it quotes two stanzas. The first is found in all four main manuscripts, while the second is found only in U. Both are spoken by Thunder and closely resemble each other stylistically, which is why they most likely come from the same poem.

- P12 Þá fór Þórr til ár þeirar, er Vimur heitir, allra á mest. Þá spennti hann
 2 sik megin-gjörðum ok studdi for-streymis Gríðar-völ, en Loki helt undir megin-gjarðar. Ok þá er Þórr kom á miðja ána, þá óx svá mjök áin, at uppi 4 braut á qxl honum. Þá kvað Þórr þetta:

Then Thunder journeyed to that river which is called Wimbre, greatest of all rivers. Then he wrapped his might-girdle around himself and leaned upon Grith's stave against the stream, and Lock held up the might-girdle. And when Thunder came to the middle of the river, then it waxed so great that it broke over his shoulders. Then Thunder quoth this:

- 8 „Vax-at-tu nú, Vimur, • alls mik þik vaða tíðir 2 jǫtna garða í;
 vætst, ef þú vęx • at þá vęx mér ós-męgin
 4 jafn-hátt upp sem himinn.“

“Wax not now, O Wimbre, as I wish to wade through thee into the yards of the ettins.
 Thou knowest, if thou waxest, then my os-might waxes up as high as the heaven.”

- P13 Þá sér Þórr uppi í gljúfrum nokkurum, at Gjǫlp, dóttir Geirrðar stóð þar 2 tveim megin árinna, ok gerði hon ár-vøxtinn. Þá tók Þórr upp ór ánni stein mikinn ok kastaði at henni ok męlti svá: „At ósi skal á stemma.“ Eigi 4 missti hann, þar er hann kastaði til, ok í því bili bar hann at landi ok fekk tekit reyni-runn nokkurn ok steig svá ór ánni. Því er þat orð-tak haft, at 6 reynir er björg Þórs.

Then Thunder sees that up in some certain gorges Yelp, daughter of Garfrith, stood on both sides of the river, and she caused the river's growth. Then Thunder took up from the river a great stone and threw it at her and spoke so: “At its source shall the river be dammed.” He did not miss his target, and in that moment he threw himself towards land and got hold of a certain rowan shrub, and thus stepped out of the river. From this comes the saying that the rowan is Thunder's deliverance.

1–2 stóð þar tveim megin árinna, ok gerði hon ár-vøxtinn. ‘stood on both sides of the river, and she caused the river’s growth’ | She stood with her legs spread and befouled the river.

- P14 En er Þórr kom til Geirrøðar, þá var þeim fê-lögum vísat fyrst í geita-hús
 2 til her-bergis, ok var þar einn stóll til sëtis, ok sat Þórr þar. Þá varð hann þess varr, at stóllinn fór undir honum upp at réfri. Hann stakk Gríðar-veli 4 upp í raftana ok lét sígast fast á stólinn. Varð þá brestr mikill, ok fylgði skrékr. Þar hofðu verit undir stólinum dótr Geirrøðar, Gjálp ok Greip, ok 6 hafði hann brotit hrygginn í báðum. Þa kvað Þórr:

And when Thunder came to Garfrith’s home the fellows were first shown into a goathouse for lodgings, and therein one chair was for sitting, and Thunder sat down on it. Then he noticed that the chair beneath him was moving up toward the roof. He thrust Grith’s stave up against the rafters and made it push firm onto the chair. Then there was a great crack, followed by a shriek; there beneath the chair had been the daughters of Garfrith, Yelp and Grope, and he had broken both their backs. Then Thunder quoth:

- 9 „Einu sinni · neytta’k alls meginis 2 jøtna gøðum í
 þá’s Gjølþ ok Greip, · dótr Geir-raðar, 4 vildu hefja mik til himins.“

“Only one time I used all my might in the yards of the ettins, when Yelp and Grope, daughters of Garfrith, would lift me to the heaven.”

1 sinni ‘time’ | metr. and sens. emend.; om. U

On the Making of Glapner

The following stanza about the making of Glapner, the fetter used to bind the Fenrerswolf, is found in the short work on kennings today called the Little Scald (Lítla skálda), which text was probably used as a source by Snorre; see further Males (2020, pp. 129–47). A variant of this stanza is transparently paraphrased in Yilv 28: Hann var gørr af sex blutum: af dyn kattarins ok af skeggi konunnar ok af rótum bjargsins ok af sinum bjarnarins ok af anda fisksins ok affogls bráka. ‘It [Glapner] was made of six things: of the cat’s din and of the woman’s beard and of the mountain’s root and of the bear’s sinews and of the fish’s breath and of the fowl’s spittle.’ The two differences—bráka ‘spittle’ for mjolk ‘milk’, and the inverted order of lines 2 and 3—suggest that Snorre had access to a somewhat different version. It is not attributed to any named poem.

10      Ór kattar dyn · ok ór konu skeggi,
2            ór físk's anda · ok ór fugla mjólk,
            ór bergs rótum · ok bjarnar sinum,
4            ór því vas hann Gleipnir gørr.

“From cat's din and from woman's beard;
from fish's breath and from fowls' milk;
from mountain's roots and bear's sinews;
from this was Glapner made.”

Heroic Poetry of the Codex Regius

The Lay of Wayland (Völundarkviða)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C10th (0.428)–early C11th (0.475)

Meter: Ancient-words-law

The Lay of Wayland (Wayl) is a story of immense psychological complexity, one of the masterpieces of Norse narrative poetry.

The poem begins with a prose introduction, which survives in both R and A.

Wayland gets his revenge on the whole royal household. He murders Nithad's two young sons (affectionately, his "bear-cubs") and thus ends his male lineage. Likewise he defangs Nithad's "cunning wife" (she is never called anything else) by reducing her once powerful counsels to cold words; and finally he rapes Beadhild, depriving her of her maidenhood and value in marriage. They are thus reduced to the same state of complete powerlessness as he himself experienced, something clearly seen in the repetition of the adjective viljalauss 'powerless'; in v. 12 it describes Wayland after he wakes in shackles, but in v. 31 Nithad uses it to refer to his own mental state after the deaths of his sons. This sense of hopelessness is also seen in Beadhild's haunting concluding speech. "I knew by naught struggle against him; I could by naught struggle against him."

From the other versions of the story it is known that Beadhild gave birth to a son, Woody (OE Wudga, ThdrS Viðga, in Danish ballads Vidrik Verlandson). He went on to become a great hero, and in the later heroic ballads by far eclipses his father. His birth seems heavily foreshadowed by Wayland forcing Nithad to swear an oath in v. 33, but he is nowhere directly mentioned in the poem, probably for artistic reasons.

Apart from this lay there is one other telling of the full story, namely the Strand of Wayland the Smith in ThdrS. While written in Old Norse, it is clear from the proper names and content that it is based on German sources (probably heroic ballads). Thus the native form Völundr is replaced with Velent [sic], Niðuðr with Niðungr. Interestingly there is a note within it showing that the native form was still known, namely about "Velent, the excellent smith, whom Warrings (væringjar) call Wayland (Völundr)". Apparently Wayland was so famous that "all men seem to praise his workmanship so, that the maker of any smith's work which is made better than other works, is called a Wayland (Völundr) with regards to workmanship."

Far more stark than minor differences of language is that of tone. The psychological complexity and tension of the older redaction is almost entirely gone: Wayland is no longer a mysterious wild man, but a chivalrous knight who can escape from any peril through his ingenuity and craftsmanship. He is not kidnapped out of Nithad's greed, nor hamstrung out of the suspicion of his cruel wife, but rather a loyal servant of Nithad's, banished from the kingdom after defending himself against the king's corrupt steward, and hamstrung after being caught attempting to poison the king's food in revenge.

Most frustratingly the personality of Beadchild is entirely expulged. She is the anonymous “king’s daughter”, an unnamed maiden (jungfrú, a borrowing from Low German) who is peacefully seduced by Wayland and quickly falls in love with him. Likewise the person of Nithad’s cunning wife is completely gone, and the murder of his sons no longer ends his lineage, since he has another, older son who survives him and takes over the kingdom. Wayland still flies away laughing after telling Nithad what he has done, but only four years (his son with Beadchild is three years old) later reconciliates with Nithad’s son, retrieves Beadchild and their son and lives a long life as a famous craftsman.

With this it is clearly seen that the story by the time of the ThdrS had been heavily distorted, a tragic victim of medieval romantic sensibilities. It does not have any high literary value, but is of interest since it shows the wide reception and variation of the narrative.

Finally there are also traces of the story in the Anglo-Saxon tradition, where it is alluded to in both Walder and Deer, the latter of which particularly emphasising the powerlessness felt by Wayland and Beadchild (thus being much closer in spirit to the present poem than to ThdrS). Parts of the narrative are depicted on the early C8th Frank’s casket, where it is as prominent as the depiction of the Adoration of the Magi—a true testament to the weight with which it was regarded within that culture.

To illustrate the narrative correspondences and differences of the various redactions, I present the following table:

Regarding Wayland (Frá Völundi)

- P1 Níðuðr hét konungr í Svíþjóð. Hann átti tvá sonu ok eina dóttur; hon hét [R 18r/4, A 6v/26]
 2 Bøðvildr. Bróðr vöru þrír, synir Finna konungs. Hét einn Slagfiör, annarr Egill, þriði Völundr. Þeir skriðu ok veiddu dýr. Þeir kvómu í Úlfadali 4 ok gerðu sér þar hús. Þar er vatn, er heitir Úlfsjár. Snemma of morgin fundu þeir á vatsströndu konur þrjár, ok spunnu lín. Þar vátu hjá þeim 6 álfarhamir þeira; þat vátu valkyrjur. Þar vátu tvær dótr Hlōðvés konungs:
 Hlaðguðr svanhvít ok Hervor alvitr. In þriðja var Qlrún Kjárs dóttir af
 8 Vallandi. Þeir hófðu þér heim til skála með sér. Fekk Egill Qlrúnar, en Slagfiör Svanhvítrar, en Völundr Alvitrar. Þau bjuggu sjau vetr. Þá flugu
 10 þér at vitja víga ok kvómu eigi aptr. Þá skreið Egill at leita Qlrúnar, en

12 Slagfiör leitaði Svanhvítrar, en Völundr sat í Úlfdöllum. Hann var hagrastr maðr, svá at menn viti í fornum sögum. Níðuðr konungr lét hann hönðum taka, svá sem hér er um kveðit:

Nithad was a king called in Sweden. He had two sons and one daughter; she was called Beadhild. Three brothers were there; the sons of a king of the Finns. One was called Slayfinn, the other Eysel, the third Wayland. They fared on skis and hunted wild beasts. They came into the Wolfdales and made for themselves houses there. There is a lake there which is called the Wolfsea. Early in the morning they found on the lake-shore three women, and they span linen. There were by them their swan-hames†; those were Walkirries. There were two daughters of king Ladwigh: Ladguth Swanwhite and Harware Elwight. The third was Alerune, daughter of Choser† of Walland†. The men took the women to their halls with them. Eysel got Alerune, and Slayfinn Swanwhite, and Wayland the Elwight. The couples lived there for seven winters; then the women left to attend battles, and did not come back. Then Eysel fared on skis to search for Alerune, but Slayfinn searched for Swanwhite—but Wayland stayed in the Wolfdales. He was the most skilled craftsman whom men know of in the ancient saws. King Nithad had him taken, as it is here sung of:

1 hon hét 'she was called' | so R; ok hét hon 'and she was called' A 2 vöru 'were' | so A; om. R 4–13 sér þar hús ... um kveðit 'for themselves houses ... sung of' | so R; om. (due to loss of the following foll. in the ms.) A

Maidens flew from the south through Mirkwood —young elwights— to fulfill orlay†.
They on the lake-shore set down to rest, southern ladies, they span costly linen.

1 Myrk-við 'Mirkwood' | Mirkwood is surely referenced for its association with the war-ravaged lands of the Gots and Huns; a natural environment for Walkirries.

2 al-vitr 'elwights' | i.e. "strange beings, foreign wights", continuing a hypothetical **alja-wihtiz*.

2 ør-lög drýgja; 'fulfill orlay' | That is, to fulfill their preordained destinies, and act according to their innate nature, as described in P1 and st. 3. Clunies Ross (2005)[103] and some other editors see a sign of English influence in these words; they translate drýgja ør-lög as "engage in war", considering ør-lög a semantic borrowing from the OE cognate of Dutch oorlog 'war'. This is unnecessary; ON ør-lög otherwise means 'fate, destiny', and so may its OE cognate, as seen by the equivalent phrase found in l. 29 of a poem on the Christian Doomsday (TODO?), where a man going to Hell for his sins and þonne á tó ealdre • or-leg dreóged 'and then for ever and ever [he] suffers his orlay'.

They stayed then for seven winters after that,
 but all the eighth they yearned, and the ninth did need divorce them.—
 The maidens longed for the Mirky wood:
 the young elwights, to fulfill orlay.

2 gingu ... sal 'went ... hall' | Formulaic. The fixed variant line bón/bann inn of gekk · end-langan sal 'he/she inside did go the endlong hall' (i.e. 'through the entire length of the hall', cf. English "livelong") occurs in three other places: sts. 16 and 30 of the present poem, and st. 3 of Ordr. end-langr salr 'endlong hall' occurs in two additional places: st. 27 of Thrim and st. 3 of Sbir.

And they took off, and they slid on;
 save for one, which off they slid.—
 Came there from the hunt the stormy-eyed shooter:
 Wayland passing over a long way.

2 fyr çinn útan, · es af létu 'save for one, which off they slid' | This bigh is probably the one mentioned in sts. 17 and 26, since Beadchild has it already when Wayland is brought back after being captured. It may have been kept for its particular beauty. Finnur Jónsson (1932) writes (my translation from the Danish): "The ring which Nithad kept must have had special properties, and distinguished itself before others. There is no doubt that the ring is a flight ring; whether this was clear to the poet is however questionable. This much is certain, that Wayland seems to be able to fly away only after he has got back the ring; that is, the one which Beadchild brings him." This is by no means certain. Wayland was a craftsman of legendary skill and could certainly have built wings for himself without a magical flight-ring. That is what he does in the Low German version; it is also what happens in the related Daidalos myth. For both of these see the introduction to the present poem.

Sat he on the bear-pelt, bighs he counted—the prince of elves was missing one!
 Thought he that Ladwigh's daughter [= Harware] might have it, that the young elwight might be come back.

1 bauga talði 'bighs he counted' | Wayland's grief and loneliness are skilfully illustrated by his counting all seven hundred rings, something which had apparently become a habit for him.

2 alfa ljóði ‘prince of elves’ | Probably referring to Wayland’s nature as a half-dæmonic Wild Man, something also seen by his hunting of bears, skiing, and fierce gaze. Cf. 14/2b and 32/1b, where Nithad calls him vísi alfa ‘overseer of elves’.

- Now called Nithad, lord of the Nears: “Where gottest thou, Wayland, overseer of elves, our ounces, in the Wolfdales?
 Gold was there not on Grane†’s path;
 far I’ve thought our land from the fells of the Rhine.<sup>172</sup>”

<sup>172</sup>Grane was the horse of the legendary hero Siward†, slayer of the dragon Fathomer†. These events were thought to have taken place in Germany. Nithad’s speech is thus sarcastic: “Where did you get that gold? I have never heard of a dragon’s hoard in the Wolfdales!”, the implication being that Wayland has stolen the gold (from king Nithad).

- [Völundr kvað:] 15      „Man’k at męiri · męti ǫttum, [R 18v/13]

- [Wayland quoth:] “I recall that we owned greater wealth, when we a whole household were at home:

Ladguth and Harware were born to Ladwigh; known was Alerune, Choser's daughter."<sup>173</sup>

<sup>173</sup>Wayland responds rather cryptically and almost seems to be speaking to himself. It seems that by asserting the noble lineages of the three swan-wives he gives a legitimate reason for his wealth, but, judging by the tone, he is aware that Nithad neither believes him nor cares.

         kvað:

King Nithad gave his daughter Beadhild the golden ring which he took from the bast rope in Wayland's hall, but he himself carried the sword which Wayland had owned. But the queen quoth:

His teeth are bared when he is shown the sword,

So it was done that the sinews in his houghs were cut, and he was placed on a lonely islet lying there before the land, which was called Seastead. There he smithed for the king every kind of jewelry. No man dared go to him save the king alone. Wayland quoth:

1 húna ‘bear-cubs’ | An affectionate term for the young boys, perhaps relating to warrior-initiations done in bear-skins.

2 fęn fjǫturs ‘the fetter’s fen’ | Unclear. The smithy or islet may be Wayland’s “fetter”, in which case he buried them in a bog close-by.

3 þęr skálar, · es und skǫrum vǫru ‘those bowls which were under their curls’ | i.e. their skulls.

1 jarkna-stęina ‘arkenstones’ | Probably round crystals.

---

Something appears to be missing here, but the narrative can be gleaned. Beadhild breaks the bigh stolen by Nithad (mentioned above in sts. 10 (see note there) and 17), and is afraid that her parents will be angry about it. She thus goes to Wayland in secret and asks him to mend it. The sight of this ring may be what angers Wayland, and makes him take it out on Beadhild.

4 nema ęinna ‘save one’ | Presumably the deprivation of his mobility due to the hamstringing, which he resolves by crafting his flight suit.

4 í-við-gjarna ‘insidious ones’ | King Nithad and his house.

[Nithad quoth:] “I am always awake, powerless;
I fall asleep the least since my sons have died.
My head turns cold; cold seem thy counsels—
I wish now but this: to speak with Wayland.”

1 vilja-lauss ‘powerless’ | Used earlier of Wayland in st. 12, immediately after his binding.

3 kold erumk rōð þín ‘cold seem thy counsels’ | A severe insult to a woman, evenmoreso to a queen, for such counsels to their husbands were how they could influence worldly affairs.

2–3 at skips ... egg ‘by deck ... of sword’ | Which are all tools of war; in this way Wayland asks Nithad to swear on his honour as a warrior. A familiar oath-formula; TODO.

2 en ó-kátr Níðuðr · sat þá ęptir.

Laughing, Wayland threw himself in the air;
but, gloomy, Nithad stayed behind.

[Níðuðr kvað:] 39 „Upp rís Þakkráðr, · þréll minn batsti, [R 19v/2]
2 bið Bøðvildi, · mey hina brá-hvítu,

[Nithad quoth:] “Rise up, O Thankred, my best thrall;
bid Beadhild, the brow-white maiden,
to go, fair-clothed, with her father to counsel.”

2–3 mey hina brá-hvítu ... fagr-varið ‘the brow-white maiden ... fair-clothed’ | With these expressions Nithad strongly stresses the purity of his daughter (męr ‘maiden’ here simply meaning ‘virgin’). Perhaps he thinks that her innocence can be restored if she dresses in fair clothes, but it will not be so.

[Níðuðr kvað:] 40 „Es þat satt Bøðvildir, · es sęgðu mér, [R 19v/3]
2 sętuð it Völundr · saman í holmi?“

[Nithad quoth:] “Is it true, Beadhild, as they told me:

2 sötum vit Völundr · saman í holmi
ęina ęgur-stund, · ęva skyldi;
4 ek vętr hęnum · vinna kunna’k, ek vętr hęnum · vinna máttu’k.“

[Beadhild quoth:] “Tis true, Nithad, as be told thee:
I and Wayland stayed together on the islet, for one heavy hour—it should never [have been]!
I by naught against him knew struggle;
I by naught against him could struggle.”

4 vinna | metr. and sens. emend.; om. R

1 sagði ‘be told’ | Beadhild knows that Wayland is the only one aware of the rape and thus deduces that be told her father. She makes a subtle change in the conjugation from her father’s general third person plural (“what they told”), to the specific singular form (“what be told”).

4–5 kunna 'knew', mátta 'could' | Beadhild was totally incapable of defending her honour, both mentally (kunna 'to know, understand') and physically (mega 'to have strength to do, avail'. — As Finnur Jónsson (1932) comments, an excellent final stanza.

First Lay of Hallow Hundingsbane (Helgakviða Hundingsbana fyrsta)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): late C12th (0.805)

Meter: Ancient-words-law

This rather late poem is very well written. Particularly beautiful are the introductory stanzas, which tell of Norns arriving in the night to predetermine Hallow's life.

From Harward and Syelind (Frá Hjörvarði ok Sigrlinn)

P1 Hjörvarðr hét konungr. Hann átti fjórar konur. Ein hét Alfhildr; sonr 2 þeira hét Heðinn. Önnur hét Sereifr; þeira sonr hét Humlungr. In þriðja hét Sinrjóð; þeira sonr hét Hymlingr. Hjörvarðr konungr hafði þess heit 4 strengt at eiga þá konu er hann vissi vænsta. Hann spurði at Sváfnir ko-nungr átti dóttur allra<sup>a</sup> fegrsta; sú hét Sigrlinn. Þömundr hét jarl hans; Atli 6 var hans sonr er fór at biðja Sigrlinnar til handa konungi. Hann dvalðisk vetrlangt með Sváfni konungi. Fránmarr hét þar jarl, fóstri Sigrlinnar; dó-8 tir hans hét Álof. Jarlinn réð, at meyjar var synjat, ok fór jarlinn heim.
Atli jarls sonr stóð einn dag við lund nokkurn, en fugl sat í limunum uppi
10 yfir hánun ok hafði heyrt til, at hans menn kǫlluðu vænstar konur þær, er Hjörvarðr konungr átti. Fuglinn kvakaði, en Atli hlýddi, hvat hann sagði.
12 Hann kvað:

P1 Hælgí fekk Sigrúnar ok óttu þau sonu; vas Hælgí ęigi gamall. Dagr Hęgna sonr blótaði Óðin til fęður-hefnda. Óðinn léði Dag geirs síns. Dagr fann Helga, mág sinn, þar sem heitir at Fjóturlundi. Hann lagði í gęgnum Hęlga með geir'num. Þar fell Hęlgí, en Dagr reiš til fjalla ok sagði Sigrúnu tíðindi:

Hallow got Syerun and they had sons; Hallow was not old. Day, son of Hain, made a bloot† to Weden for the sake of avenging his father. Weden lent Day his spear. Day found Hallow, his brother-in-law, where it is called Fetterlund; he ran through Hallow with the spear. There Hallow fell, but Day rode to the fells and told Syerun the tidings:

1 „Trauðr em ek, systir, • trega þér at sęgja
2 því-at ek hefi nauðigr • nipti grótta:
Fell í morgun • und Fjóturlundi 4 buðlungr sá's vas • bętstr í heimi ok hildingum • á halsi stóð.“

“Regretful am I, O sister, to grieve thee by saying it—for, forced, must I make my kinswoman weep:
this morning fell in Fetterlund that noble who was the best in the world, and on the throats of princes stood.”

[Sigrún kvað:]

2 „Þik skyli allir • ęiðar bíta,

 4 es øfri fęrr · ęllum dýrum,

So did Hallow surpass the princes who fares higher than all beasts, and its horns gleam against heaven itself.”

“Go out, O Syerun from the Sevefells, if thou hast lust to find the leader of the troop!
The barrow is unlocked; Hallow is come!
The ruler of bloody wounds bade thee that thou his wound-drops shouldst soothe.”

P5 Sigrún gekk í haug’inn til Helga ok kvað:

Syerun walked into Hallow’s barrow, and quoth:

14 „Nú em’k svá fęgin • fundi okkrum
2 sem át-frękir • Óðins haukar es val vitu, • varmar bráðir,
4 eða dōgg-litir • dags-brún séa.“

“Now do I so rejoice at our meeting, like do the ravenous hawks of Wēden [RAVENS]
when they know corpses, warm venison, or, gleaming with dew, they see the day’s brow [DAWN].

15 Fyrr vil’k kyssa • konung ó·lifðan

6 hvé skal'k þér, buðlungr, · þess bót of vinna?“

Sooner would I kiss the unliving king, than thou the bloody byrnie mightst cast away!
Thy hair is, O Hallow, with hoarfrost swollen;
the prince is all with corpse-dew [BLOOD] whipped;
the hands spray-cold on Hain's in-law [= Hallow].—
How shall I for thee, O noble, remedy that?”

4 allr es vísi · val-dögg sléinn ‘the prince is all with corpse-dew whipped’ | Cf. Bldr 5, where the dead wallow says something similar.

[Hēlgi kvað:]

“Thou alone causest, O Syerun from the Sevefells, that Hallow be with harm-dew whipped.
Thou weapest—O gold-covered—bitter tears—
O sun-bright southern lady—before thou go to sleep.
Each one falls bloody on the prince's chest,
spray-cold, stifled, pressed forth by grief.

17 Vēl skulum drekka · dýrar vęigar

Nú eru brúðir · byrgðar í haugi,
6 lofða dísir, · hjá oss liðnum!“

Well shall we drink dear draughts, although we have lost both love and land!
Let no one sing songs of sorrow,
although he behold the wounds on my chest.
Now are the brides shut within the barrow, the praised one's dises†, next to us, passed-on.”

5–6 brúðir, dísir, oss ‘brides, dises, us’ | Hallow speaks in the plural. “Now has my bride, my goddess, come into the barrow, next to me, who am dead.”

P6 Sigrún bjó sęing í haug'inum.

Syerun made a bed in the barrow:

- 18 „Hér hef’k þér, Hēlgi, · hvílu gørva, 2 angr-lausa mjök, · Ylfinga niðr;
vil’k þér í faðmi, · fylkir, sofna
4 sem’k lofðungi · lifnum mynda’k!“

“Here I’ve for thee, Hallow, made a place of rest, all without sorrow, O kinsman of the Wolvings!
I will in thy arms, O marshal, fall asleep, like I would with the living man of praise.”

4 sem’k lofðungi · lifnum mynda’k! ‘like I would with the living man of praise’ | i.e. “just as I would if you were still alive.”

- [Hēlgi kvað:] 19 „Nú kveð’k ęnskis · ør-vént vesa, 2 síð né snimma, · at Sefa-fjöllum es þú á armi · ó·lifðum søfr, 4 hvít, í haugi, · Høgna dóttir, ok est-u kvik, · in konung-bornal!“

[Hallow quoth:] “Now, I say, there is naught more missing neither late nor soon from the Sevefells, when thou dost sleep on the unliving arm,
O white daughter of Hain—in the barrow, and thou art alive!—of kingly birth.”

(The night has passed; dawn is breaking, and Hallow speaks. The manuscript does not indicate the change of scene.)

---

- [Hēlgi kvað:] 20 „Mál’s mér at riða · roðnar brautir, 2 láta fólvan jó · flug-stíg troða;
skal’k fyr vestan · vind-hjalms brúar
4 áðr Sal-gofnir · sigr-þjóð vęki.“

“Tis time for me to ride the reddening roads, to let my pale steed tread the path of flight [SKY/HEAVEN].
I shall go west of the wind-helm’s bridges [SKY/HEAVEN > CLOUDS?], before Salgovner may awaken the victorious folk.”

1 roðnar ‘reddening’ | From the rising dawn.

- P7 Þeir Hęlgi riðu leið sína, en þęr fóru hęim til bójar. Annan aptan lét 2 Sigrún ambótt halda vörð á haugi’num. En at dag-setri, es Sigrún kom til haugs’ins, hón kvað:

Hallow and his men rode on their way, but the women journeyed home to the farm. The next evening Syerun made her maid-servant keep watch on the barrow. And at sunset as Syerun came to the barrow, she [= the maid-servant] quoth:

- 21 „Kominn véri nú, • ef koma hygði,
 2 Sigmundar burr • frá solum Óðins;
 kveð’k grams þinig • gręnask vánir 4 es á ask-limum • ęrnir sitja ok drífr drótt ęll • draum-þinga til.“

“Come were now, if to come he had thought, Syemund’s son [= Hallow] from Weden’s halls;
 hopes fade, I say, of the prince’s coming,
 when on ashen branches eagles sit,
 and all mankind drifts off to dream-Things†.

4 es á ask-limum • ęrnir sitja ‘when on ashen branches eagles sit’ | i.e. “when the eagles roost on yonder trees”. This is a sign of Hallow and his men not coming; if they were, the eagles would be following them and picking at their bodies.

5 drífr ... draum-þinga til ‘drifts off to dream-Things’ | i.e. “falls asleep”. A fine metaphor.

- 22 Ves ęigi svá ór • at ęin farir,
 2 dís skjöldunga, • draug-húsa til!
 Verða ęflgari • allir á nóttum
 4 dauðir dólgar, męr, • an of daga ljósa.“

Be not so mad that thou journey alone,
 O dise of the Shieldings, to the ghost-houses!
 Mightier at night do all become dead fiends, O maiden, than during the bright days!”

- P8 Sigrún varð skamm-líf af harmi ok trega. Þat var trúa í forneskju, at menn 2 véri endr-bornir, en þat er nú kęlluð kerlinga-villa. Hęlgi ok Sigrún er kallat at véri endr-borin. Hét hann þá Hęlgi Haddingjaskati en hon Kára 4 Hálfdanar dóttir, svá sem kveðit er í Kárułjóðum, ok var hon val-kyrja.

Syerun became short-lived for pain and grief. It was the belief in olden times that men were born again, but that is now called an old wives' tale. Of Hallow and Syerun it is said that they were born again. He was then called Hallow Hardingskate and she Cheer Halfdanesdaughter, as is told in the Leeds of Cheer, and she was a walkirrie.

P1      Sigurđor gekk til stóðs Hjálp-reks ok kaus sér af hest einn er Grani var
2      kallaðr síðan. Þá var kominn Reginn til Hjálp-reks, sonr Hreið-mars.
3      Hann var hverjum manni hagari ok dvergr of vöxt. Hann var vitr, grimmr
4      ok fjöl-kunnigr. Reginn veitti Sigurði fóstr ok kennslu ok elskaði hann
5      mjök. Hann sagði Sigurði frá for-ellri sínu ok þeim at-burðum at Óðinn
6      ok Hónir ok Loki höfðu komit til And-vara-fors; í þeim forsi var fjöldi
7      fiska. Einn dvergr hét And-vari; hann var löngum í forsinum í geddu líki
8      ok fekk sér þar matar. „Otr hét bróðir várr,“ kvað Reginn, „er oft fór í
9      forsinn í otrs líki. Hann hafði tekit einn lax ok sat á ár-bakkanum ok át
10      blundandi. Loki laust hann með steini til bana. Þóttust ésir mjök heppnir 11      verit hafa ok flógu belg af otrinum. Þat sama kveld sóttu þeir gisting til 12      Hreið-mars ok sýndu veiði sína. Þá tóku vér þá hǫndum ok lögðum þeim 13      fjör-laun at fylla otr-belginn með gulli ok hylja útan ok með rauðu gulli.
14      Þá sendu þeir Loka at afla gullsins. Hann kom til Ránar ok fekk net hen-
15      nar ok fór þá til And-vara-fors ok kastaði netinu fyr gedduna en hon hljóp
16      í netit. Þá mēlti Loki:

Siward went to Helpric's stable and thereof chose for himself one horse, which was henceforth called Grane. Then Rein, son of Rethmar, was come to Helpric. He was more crafty than any man and a dwarf in stature; he was clever, cruel and many-cunning†. Rein fostered and taught Siward and love him very much. He told Siward about his own parents, and about the events that Weden, Heener and Lock had come to Andwareforce; in that force was a multitude of fish. A dwarf was named Andware; he was for a long time in the force in the likeness of a pike and got his food there. "Otter was our brother called," said Rein, "who often journeyed in the force in the likeness of an otter. He had caught a salmon and sat on the riverbank and ate it with closed eyes Lock struck him with a stone unto his death. The Eese thought themselves to have been very lucky, and flayed the skin off the otter. The same evening they sought to pass the night at Rethmar's house, and showed their catch. Then we bound them and proposed to them as a life-ransom that they would fill the otter-skin with gold, and also cover the outside with red gold. Then they sent Lock to procure the gold. He came to Ran and got her net, and then journeyed to Andwareforce and threw the net in front of the pike, and it jumped into the net. Then spoke Lock:

1       „Hvat 's þat fiska · es rinn flóði í,
2               kann-at sér við víti varask.
             Höfuð þitt · leys-tu hēlju ór;
4               finn mér lindar loga!“

“What kind of fish is it who runs in the flood?
It cannot protect itself from harm.
Ransom thy head out of Hell;
find me the flame of the linden [GOLD]!”

2       „And-vari ek hēiti, · Óinn hét minn faðir,
2               margan hēfi'k fors of farit.
             Aumlig norn · skóp oss í ár-daga
4               at skylda í vatni vaða.“

“Andware I am called; Owen was called my father;
through many a force have I fared.
A wretched norn shaped for us in days of yore,
that I should in the water wade.”

3       „Sęg-ðu þat, And-vari, (kvað Loki) ef þú ęiga vill
2               líf í lýða solum:
             Hver gjöld · fāa gumna synir
4               ef hęggvask orðum á?“

“Say that, Andware—quoth Lock—if thou wilt own life in the halls of men:
Which recompense do the sons of men get,
if they hew at each other with words?”

4       „Ofr-gjöld · fāa gumna synir
2               þęir's Vaðgęlmi vaða;
             ó·saðra orða · hverr's á annan lýgr,
4               of lęngi lęiða limar.“

“Great recompense do the sons of men get,
those who in Wadyelmer† wade.
By the ramifications of untrue words is each who lies to another long followed.<sup>176</sup>”

<sup>176</sup>Watery torment in the afterlife for oath-breakers and liars is well attested in the Germanic sources. See note to Wsp 39 for discussion.

P2      Loki sá allt gull þat er And-vari átti. En er hann hafði fram reitt gullit, þá
2      hafði hann eftir einn hring ok tók Loki þann af hánnum. Dvergrinn gekk inn í steininn ok mælti:

Lock saw all the gold which Andware owned. But when he had brought forth all the gold, then he had one ring left, and Lock took it off him. The dwarf went into the stone and spoke:

5      „Þat skal gull · es Gustr átti
2      bróðrum tveim · at bana verða ok ǫðlingum · átta at rógi;
4      mun míns féar · mann-gi njóta.“

“That gold which Gust owned shall for two brothers become the bane, and for eight nobles the [cause of] strife;
of my wealth will no man benefit.”

P3      Ésir reiddu Hreið-mari féit ok tráðu upp otr-belginn ok reistu á fóttr; þá
2      skyldu ésirnir hlaða upp gullinu ok hylja. En er þat var gørt gekk Hreið-marr framm ok sá eitt grana-hár ok bað hylja. Þá dró Óðinn framm 4      hringinn And-vara-naut ok hulði hárit.

The Eese prepared the wealth for Rethmar and stuffed the otter-skin and raised it on its feet. Then the Eese should fill it up with gold and cover it. But when that was done Rethmar stepped forth, and saw a single whisker-strand and bade it be covered. Then Weden drew forth the ring Andwaresgift and covered the strand.

6      „Gull ’s þér nú reitt (kvað Loki) en þú gjöld hefir syni þínum · verðr-a sēla skǫpuð;

“Thou gavest a gift—gavest not a gift of love;
gavest not out of a true heart!
From your lives would ye be removed,

- 8 „Enn es verra, · þat vita þikkjumk,

- P4 Fáfñir ok Reginn kröfðu Hreið-mar nið-gjalda eptir Otr, bróður sinn.
2 Hann kvað nei við. En Fáfñir lagði sverði Hreið-mar, föður sinn, sofanda.
Hreið-marr kallaði á dótr sínar:

Fathomer and Rein demanded from Rethmar the kinsman-payment after Otter, their brother. He said no to it. But Fathomer laid the sword through Rethmar, his father, sleeping. Rethmar called upon his daughters:

- 10 „Lyng-heiðr ok Lofn-heiðr, · vitið mínu lífi farit!
2 Mart ’s þat’s þörf þear!“

“Lingheath and Lovenheath, witness my destroyed life!
TODO.”

Lyngheiðr svaraði:

- 11 „Fá mun systir, · þótt föður missi,

2                    hęfna hlýra harms!“

Lingheath answered:

“Not many a sister, although she misses her father, will avenge her brother’s harm!”

2                    12        „Al þú þó dóttur, (kvað Hreiðmarr) dís úlf-huguð,

2                    P5        Þá dó Hreið-marr en Fáfnir tók gullit allt. Þá beiddisk Reginn at hafa fğður-arf sinn, en Fáfnir galt þar nei við. Þá leitaði Reginn ráða við Lyngheiði, systur sína, hvernig hann skyldi heimta fğður-arf sinn. Hon kvað:

Then Rethmar died, and Fathomer took all the gold. Then Rein asked to have his father’s inheritance, but Fathomer gave back a no. Then Rein looked for counsel from Lingheath, his sister, over how he should get his father’s inheritance. She quoth:

2                    13        „Brúðar kvęðja · skalt blíð-liga arfs ok óðra hugar;
                  es-a þat hóft · at þú hjörvi skylir

“TODO.”

2                    P6        Þessa hluti sagði Reginn Sigurði. Einn dag, er hann kom til húsa Regins, var hánun vel fagnat. Reginn kvað:

These things Rein said to Siward. One day when he came to Rein’s house he was greeted well. Rein quoth:

2                    14        „Kominn ’s hingat · konr Sig-mundar, sęggr inn snar-ráði, · til sala várra;
                  móð hęfir meýra · en maðr gamall,
4                    ok es mér fangs vön · at frekum ulfi.

“Hither is come the son of Syemund [= Siward],
the quick-counselling youth, to our halls;

he has greater courage than an old man,
and I expect a catch from the hungry wolf!

- 15 Ek mun fœða · folk-djarfan gram;
2 nú 's yngva konr · með oss kominn;
sjá mun rêsir · ríkstr und sólu,
4 þrymr um ǫll lǫnd · ǫr·lǫg-símu.“

I will raise the troop-bold prince, now the son of a king is come among us!
This ruler will become mightiest under the sun,
he fastens through all lands his orlay-strands!”

4 þrymr ... ǫr·lǫg-símu ‘he fastens ... orlay-strands’ | i.e. “his fate is being fixed throughout all lands”. Cf. the first four sts. of HHund I.

- P7 Sigurðr var þá jafnan með Regin ok sagði hann Sigurði at Fáfñir lá á Gnita-2 heiði ok var í orms líki. Hann átti ógis-hjalm er ǫll kvikvendi hréddusk við. Reginn gerði Sigurði sverð er Gramr hét. Þat var svá hvasst at hann 4 brá því ofan í Rín ok lét reka ullar-lagð fyr straumi ok tók í sundr lagðinn sem vatnit. Því sverði klauf Sigurðr í sundr steðja Regins. Eptir þat eggjaði 6 Reginn Sigurð at vega Fáfni. Hann sagði:

Then Siward was always with Rein, and he told Siward that Fathomer lay on the Gnit-heath in a Wyrms likeness; he owned the helm of awe by which all living things were frightened. Rein made for Siward the sword which is called Gram; it was so sharp that he plunged it down into the Rhine, and floated a lock of wool down the stream, and it split the lock like it did the water. With that sword Siward split asunder Rein's anvil; after that Rein urged Siward to slay Fathomer. He said:

- 16 „Hátt munu hléja · Hundings synir

- P8 Hjalp-rekr konungr fekk Sigurði skipa-lið til fǫður-hefnda. Þeir fengu 2 storm mikinn ok beittu fyr bergs-nȝs nakkvara. Maðr einn stóð á berginu ok kvað:

Helpric got Siward a ship-retinue in order to avenge his father. They caught a great storm, and tacked the ships through some rocky cliffs. A lone man stood on the cliff and quoth:

The Speeches of Fathomer

(Fáfnismól)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C10th (0.442)–early C11th (0.402)

Meter: Leeds-meter (TODO)

Titled Frá dauða Fáfnis ‘From Fathomer’s death’ in R.

1 „Sveinn ok sveinn! • Hverjum est sveini of borinn?
2 Hverra est manna mögr?
es þú á Fáfni rautt • þinn hinn frána mēki;
4 stöndumk til hjarta hjörri!“

[Fathomer quoth:]

“O swain and swain! To which swain art thou born;
of which men art thou son?
As thou on Fathomer hast reddened thy gleaming blade,
the sword stands unto my heart!”

P1 Sigurðr dulði nafns síns fyr því at þat var trúa þeira í forneskju at orð feigs
2 manns mētti mikit ef hann bölvaði óvin sínum með nafni. Hann kvað:

Siward concealed his name, because it was their belief in ancient times that the word of a fey† man could do much if he baled his enemy by his name. He [= Siward] quoth:

2 „Göfugt dýr ek heiti • en ek gengit hef’k
2 hinn móður-lausi mögr, föður ek á’kk-a • sem fira synir,
4 geng ek einn saman.“

“Noble Deer am I called, and I have gone
as the motherless lad.
A father I have not like the sons of men;
I go alone.”

- 3 „Veitst, ef fǫður né átt-at · sem fira synir,
2 af hverju vastu undri alinn? [...]“

[Fathomer quoth:]

“Dost thou know, if thou hast no father, like do the sons of men, by which wonder thou wast begotten?”

- 4 „Étterni mitt · kveð’k þér ó·kunnigt vesa
2 ok mik sjalfan hit sama:
Sigurðr ek heiti · Sigmundr hét minn faðir
4 es hef’k þik vopnum vegit.“

[Siward quoth:]

“My lineage I declare is unknown to thee, and my self the same.<sup>178</sup>

Siward am I called—Syemund was called my father—who with weapons have struck thee.”

<sup>178</sup>The meaning is that Fathomer would not recognize Siward’s lineage (i.e. his father) or name, since he is an orphan who up until this point has not won any glory. He is not saying that he is lineage is unknown even to himself, since sjalfan mik ‘my self’ is accusative, not dative.

- 5 „Hværr þik hvatti, · hví hvetjask lést,
2 mínu fjörvi at fara?
Hinn frán-eygi sveinn, · þú áttir fǫður bitran,
4 á-bornu skjór á skeið.“

[Fathomer quoth:]

“Who goaded thee—why didst thou let thee be goaded—my life for to destroy?

O gleaming-eyed swain, thou haddest a sharp father;
inborn traits quickly show!”

4 á-bornu skjór á skeið. ‘inborn traits quickly show.’ | The original is cryptic. á skeið means roughly ‘rapidly, quickly’, whence the expression ríða á skeið ‘CV: to ride at full speed’, but the other words are uncertain. La Farge and Tucker (1992) read ‘your innate qualities show quickly’, suggesting two unattested words: an adjective **áborinn* ‘innate, inborn’ and a verb **skjóa* ‘to show’. Yet the lack of i-umlaut in the supposed 3rd sg. pres. ind. skjór is difficult. We would expect \*skýr*, as in skjóta ‘to shoot,’ with 2nd/3rd sg. pres. ind. skýtr. A solution here would be reading a 2nd sg. pres. subj. skjóir, with a vowel TODO

- 6 „Hugr mik hvatti, · hendr mér full-týðu
2 ok minn inn hvassi hjör;
fár es hvatr · es hrøðask tæk
4 ef í barnósku ’s blauðr.“

[Siward quoth:]

“My heart goaded me, my hands availed me,
and this my sharp sword.
Few a man is brave when he takes to grow,
if in youth he be soft.”

7      „Veit’k, ef þú vaxa nęðir · fyr þinna vina brjósti,
2                      séi-t maðr þik vręiðan vega;
            nú est haptr · ok hęr-numinn,
4                      ę kveða bandingja bifask.“

[Fathomer quoth:]

“TRANSLATION”

8      „Því bregðr þú nú mér, Fáfnir, · at til fjarri sjá’k 2                      mínum fęðr-munum, ęgi em’k haptr · þótt vęra hęr-numi;
4                      þú fannt, at ek lauss lifi!“

[Siward quoth:]

“TRANSLATION”

9      „Heipt-yrði ęin · tęlr þú þér í hví-vętna
2                      en ek þér satt ęitt sęgi’k:
            It gjalla gull · ok it glóð-rauða fę,
4                      þér verða þęir baugar at bana!“

[Fathomer quoth:]

“With only hateful words dost thou answer anything, but I tell thee truth alone:
The resounding gold and the glowing red wealth,
those bighs will be thy bane!”

10      „Féi ráða · skal fyrða hvērr
2                      ę til ins ęina dags því-at ęinu sinni · skal alda hvērr
4                      fara til hęljar heðan.“

[Siward quoth:]

“Rule [his] wealth shall every man, always, until the one day;
for at one time must every man journey hence to Hell.”

2 ins çina dags ‘the one day’ | i.e. his predetermined time of death. Siward dismisses the idea of the curse, since he knows that he will die regardless of whether he takes the gold or not; and he would rather die rich and famous than wretched and forgotten.

11 „Norna dóm · munt fyr ñesjum hafa
2 ok ó·svinns apa;
í vatni þú drukknar · ef í vindi rër;
4 allt es fęigs forað.“

[Fathomer quoth:]

“The doom of the Norns shalt thou have before the headlands, and that of an unwise ape.

In water wilt thou drown if thou row in wind; everything is the pit of the fey†.<sup>179</sup>”

---

1 fyr ñesjum ‘before the headlands’ | i.e. ‘close at hand, imminent’. A formulaic expression for imminent death, cf. the last st. of Sont (TODO).

---

<sup>179</sup>That is, the cursed, death-doomed (fey) man will find sudden death no matter where he turns.

12 „Sęg mér, Fáfnir, · alls þik fróðan kveða
2 ok vęl mart vita:
Hvęrjar ’ru þęr nornir · es nauð-gonglar ’ru
4 ok kjósa móðr frá mögum?“

[Siward quoth:]

“Say to me, Fathomer, as they call thee wise,
and knowing well enough:

Who are the Norns that attend in need,
and choose mothers from their lads?”

3 es nauð-gonglar ’ru ‘that attend in need’ | lit. ‘who are attendant in need’, i.e. who help ailing mothers during childbirth. Cf. Syed 8.

13 „Sundr-bornar mjök · hygg at nornir sé,
2 ęigu-t þęr ęt samann;
sumar ’ru ás-kunngar, · sumar alf-kunngar,
4 sumar dótr Dvalins.“

[Fathomer quoth:]

“Of very sundry birth I judge the norns to be;
they come not from a common lineage:

Some are begotten of the Eese, some begotten of the Elves, some are the daughters of Dwollen [DWARFS].”

14     „Sæg mér þat, Fáfnir, · alls þik fróðan kveða
2                ok vël margt vita, hvé sá holmr heitir · es blanda hjör-lęgi
4                Surtr ok ęsir saman.“

[Siward quoth:]

“Say to me, Fathomer, as they call thee wise,
and knowing well enough:
What is the islet called, where Surt and the Eese blend sword-water [BLOOD] together?”

15     „Ó·skópnir heitir · en þar ęll skulu
2                geirum lęika goð;
              Bil-ręst brotnar · es á brott fara
4                ok svima í móðu marir.

[Fathomer quoth:]

“Unshopner it is called, and there shall all the Gods play with spears; Bilrest shatters when they fare away,
and the horses swim in the sea.

Fathomer continues speaking, but there is probably something missing here, since the transition is abrupt. Between its paraphrases of st. 15 and of st. 16, N has Ok enn męlti Fáfnir: „Reginn bróðir minn veldr mínum dauða, ok þat blęgir mik, er hann veldr ok þínum dauða, ok ferr þá, sem hann vildi.“ ‘And further spoke Fathomer: “My brother Rein causes my death, and it gladdens me that he also causes thy death, and then it will go like he has willed.”’, which may either be a paraphrase of a lost st., or an addition by the redactor.

---

16     Ógis hjalm · bar’k of alda sonum
2                meðan of menjum lá’k;
              ęinn rammari · hugðumk ęllum vesa,
4                fann’k-a’k marga męgu.“

A helmet of terror I carried over the sons of men
while on the rings I lay;

stronger than all I thought myself alone to be;

The Speeches of Syedrive (Sigrdrífumól)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C10th (0.961)

Meter: Leeds-meter

Syed is attested in two medieval mss., namely R (which is the main mss. for the pres. ed) and N (WalsS ch. 21), which begins with a paraphrase of the present poem up to P2:

Brynhildr segir, at tveir konungar þorðust. Hét annarr Hjalmgunnarr; hann var gamall ok hinn mesti hermaðr, ok hafði Óðinn honum sigr heitit, en annarr Agnarr eða Auða bróðir. „Ek fellda Hjalmgunnarr í orrostu, en Óðinn stakk mik svefn-þorni í hefnd þess ok kvað mik aldri síðan skyldu sigr hafa ok kvað mik giptast skulu. En ek strengða þess heit þar í mót at giptast engum þeim, er bræðast kynni.“ Sigurðr mælti: „Kenn oss ráð til stórra hluta.“ Hun svarar: „Þér munuð betr kunna, en með þökkum vil ek kenna yðr, ef þat er nokkut, er vér kunnum, þat er yðr mætti líka, í rúnum eða öðrum blutum, er liggja til hvers blutar, ok drekkum bæði saman, ok gefi goðin okkr góðan dag, at þér verði nýt ok fregð at mínum vitrleik, ok þú munir eptir þat, er vit réðum.“ Brynhildr fyllði eitt ker ok fýrði Sigurði ok mælti:

‘Byrnhild says that two kings fought. One was called Helmguther; he was old and the greatest warrior, and Weden had promised him victory, but the other was called Eyner or Eade’s brother. “I felled Helmguther in battle, but Weden stung me with a sleeping-thorn as revenge for that, and declared that I should never thenceforth have victory, and said that I must marry, but I made a vow in response, to marry no man who could be frightened.” Siward spoke: “Teach us counsels regarding great things.” She answers: “Ye will know better, but with thanks I will teach you, if there is anything which we know that may please you, of runes or other things of importance; and let us both drink together, and may the gods give us two a good day, that thou have use and joy from my wisdom and that thou afterwards recall that which we two speak of.” Byrnhild filled a vessel and brought it to Siward and spoke:’

After this it cites sts. 4–12 and 14–18 in uninterrupted sequence, and paraphrases sts. 19 ff. (TODO: edit these!). The order of stanzas in N is not identical to R. Both mss. have sts. 4–5 and 12, 14–18 in the same place, but the order of sts. 6–11 in between is divergent, as seen by the following table:

- P1 Sigurðr settisk niðr ok spyrr hana nafns. Hón tók þá horn fullt mjaðar ok 2 gaf hönnum minnis-vęig.

Siward set himself down, asking for her name. Then she took a horn full of mead, and gave him a draught of memory:

- 2 Heill Dagr, • heilir Dags synir, heil Nōtt ok nipt!
 Ó-ręiðum augum • lítið okkr þinig
 4 ok gefið sitjōndum sigr!

“Hail Day†! Hail Day’s sons!
 Hail Night and [her] kinswoman [= Earth]!
 With unwrathful eyes look ye the way of us two,
 and give the sitters [= us] victory.

1 Dags synir ‘Day’s sons’ | Their identity is uncertain.

2 nípt '[her] kinswoman' | According to Yilv 10 Earth is the daughter of Night; nípt typically refers to a younger female relative.

3 Ó-reiðum augum · litið okkr þinig 'With unwrathful eyes look ye the way of us two' | i.e. "behold us two with friendly gaze". An archaic conception; the grace or wrath of the Gods is conveyed by their "face" looking upon the worshipper. The same thing is found in other ancient literatures, e.g. in the Hebrew Bible, most famously in the "Priestly Blessing" of Numbers 6:24–26 ("25 May Yahweh light up His face to you and grant grace to you; / 26 May Yahweh lift up His face to you and give you peace.") Other Biblical examples include Psalms 4:6 ("Lift up the light of Your face to us, Yahweh) and the chorus of Psalm 80 ("Yahweh God of Armies, bring us back. / Light up Your face, that we may be rescued.")

Hail this much-giving Fold†!
Speech and manwit† give ye to us renowned two,
and a leecher's hands, while we live."

1 Hēilir ésir, · hēilar ósynjur 'Hail the Eese! Hail the Ossens!' | Probably formulaic, subverted by Lock in Lock 11; see note there for possible ritual use.

2 sjá in fjöl-nýta fold 'this much-giving Fold' | i.e. "the bountiful Earth†"; an Old Indo-European expression. In the Norse poetic corpus fold elsewhere refers to 'land, earth' without mythological associations, the present st. being the only exception. It is probably a ritual archaism; cf. the Old English Acreboot: Hāl wes þú Folde · fira mōdor! 'Hail be thou, Fold, mother of men!' and the Old Indian cognate name Pṛthivī (Mother Earth), found frequently in RV. The common Indo-European root is **pṛth₂-éwih₂* 'flat, broad one'; cf. Hfr Hákdur 8 (in SkP III), where Earth is the brēið-lēita brúðr Bálęys 'broad-faced bride of Baleeyed (= Weden)'. For the epithet 'much-giving' cf. Iliad 3.89: ἐπὶ χθονὶ πολλοῦ-βοτρίῃ 'upon the much-nourishing earth', where πολλοῦ is cognate with ON fjöl-, both coming from PIE **pélh₁u-* - **pólh₁u-* 'much, many'.

4 lēknis-hęndr 'a leecher's hands' | The hands of a physician, i.e., hands with healing powers. The singular lēknis-hęnd occurs on the Ribe galder stick (DR EM85;493), edited below under Galders.

8 er hręðask kynni.“ Hann segir ok biðr hana kenna sér speki ef hon vissi tíðendi ór ęllum heimum. Sigrdrífa kvað:

She called herself Syedrive and was a walkirrie. She said, that two kings fought. One was called Helmguther; he was then old and the greatest warrior, and Weden had promised him victory. But the other was called Eyner, Eade's brother, who in no way wished to surrender. Syedrive felled Helmguther in the battle, but Weden stung her with a sleeping-thorn as revenge for that, and declared that she should never thenceforth cause victory in battle, and said that she must marry, “but I said to him that I made a vow in response, to marry no man who could be frightened.” He [= Siward] speaks and asks her to teach him wisdom, if she knew any tidings out of all the Homes†. Syedrive quoth:

1 bók-rúnar 'book-runes' | Or 'beech-runes'. The word may also be emended to bót-rúnar 'cure-runes', since the letters c and t were, in the TODO miniscule used on Iceland, very similar. This emendation is favourable for two reasons: (i) it makes more sense, since the semantic pair bót 'cure' : bjarg 'rescue' is surely stronger than bók 'book, beech' : bjarg 'rescue', and since the present stanza is specifically referring to the practical use of the runes; (ii) the pair bót-rúnar : bjarg-rúnar is already found in a runic charm (B 257, edited under Galders from Bryggen).

[Syedrive quoth:] “This I counsel thee first: that thou against thy kinsmen

Late oughtst thou to take revenge, although they incur charges; that, they say, befits the dead.

20 Þat réð’k þér annat, · at eið né svęrir, [R 32v/22–24]

This I counsel thee second: that thou not swear an oath, save for the one which is true.
Grim strands follow the troth-breach; wretched is the outlaw of vows.<sup>189</sup>

3 simar ‘strands’ | i.e. ‘strands of fate’; cf. HHund I 3, where the norns are said to twist such strands. Often emended to limar ‘ramifications’ in accordance with Rein 4, where that word is used in basically the same context. Such a scribal confusion is easily understood, since s in this position was always spelled with long f in the old mss. The paraphrase (see other note) is not conclusive, since it replaces this word with hefn ‘revenge’.

This I counsel thee fourth: if there lives an evil-working woman, full of faults, by the road,
to walk is better than to take lodgings,

 4                   teygj-at þér at kossi konur.

This I counsel thee fifth: although thou seest fair brides on the benches, let not kinsmen's silver rule thy sleep;
 lure not women to thee for kisses.

[R 32v/34]

This I counsel thee sixth: although among warriors may grow the ale-speech too awry, drunkenly deal shalt thou not with war-trees [WARRIORS];
 wine steals wit from many.

Fragments from the Saw of the Walsings

In R Syed is followed by the famous “great lacuna”. Numerous pages are missing, and with them much poetry about Siward. The author of the WalsS had access to and drew from a manuscript collection of Eddic poetry closely related to R. He quotes many stanzas known to us from R, but also some which are not found in the extant copy—these are edited here. The following stanzas in WalsS occur at the part of the narrative which would have been found on the lost pages of R, and so it is likely that some or all of them derive from longer poems found there.

[Guthrun quoth:]

1–2 Svá vas ... vaxinn 'So was ... grown' | These two lines are almost identical to Guth II 2/1–2. Since the present poem is probably older (Sapp, 2022), it is likely the source.

2 geir-laukr 'garlic' | or 'spear-leek'. I have opted for this translation based on etymology (cf. OE gār-léac 'spear-leek'), but the botanical identity is unclear. Guth II 2 has grónn laukr 'green leek' instead. For the cultural importance of leeks and onions see note to Wsp 4.

3–4 eða véri ... þölingum. 'or were ... athlings.' | Beaded necklaces were commonly worn by Scandinavian women of the time, and the beads were mostly of opaque coloured glass. Siward is thus likened to a bright crystal, the sons of Yivick to (dull) glass.

The Hell-ride of Byrnhild

TODO: INTRODUCTION.

- P1 Eptir dauða Brynhildar voru gōr bōl tvau: annat Sigurði, ok brann þat fyrr, 2 en Brynhildr var á ǫðru brennd ok var hon í reið þeiri er guð-vefjum var tjölduð. Svá er sagt at Brynhildr ók með reið'inni á hel-veg ok fór um tún 4 þar er gýgr nǫkkur bjó. Gýgr'in kvað:

After Byrnhild's death two pyres were made: one for Siward, and it burned earlier; but Byrnhild was burned on the other, and she was in that wagon which was covered with godweb†. It is said that Byrnhild drove with the wagon onto the Hellway and passed through a plot where there lived a certain gow†. The gow quoth:

2–3 í reið þeiri er guð-vefjum var tjölduð 'in that wagon which was covered with godweb' | The tent-covering of the wagon was made of precious garments. For the burial of women in wagons, cf. TODO (Oseberg ship?).

3 Brynhildr ók með reið'inni á hel-veg 'Byrnhild drove with the wagon on the Hellway' | This gives us some interesting insight into old afterlife beliefs. After Byrnhild is burnt she ends up between the worlds of the dead and the living, the so-called "Hell-way", or road to Hell (the underworld); she is buried in a wagon so that she will be able to travel comfortably. We may presume that the animals driving the wagon were slaughtered and burnt with her on the pyre.

- 1 „Skalt í gǫgnum · ganga ęigi

hafði beðit Oddrúnar, systur Atla, ok gat eigi; þá fekk hann Glaumvarar, 10 en Hogni átti Kostberu. Þeira synir voru þeir Sólar ok Snévarr ok Gjúki.
En er Gjúkungar kómu til Atla, þá bað Guðrún sonu sína at þeir bæði sína. Þjóðrekr ok Guðrún kærðu harma sín á milli. Hon sagði hánnum ok 16 kvað:

Guthur and Hain then took all the gold, Fathomer's inheritance. Hatred was then between the Yivickings and Attle; he blamed the Yivickings for Byrnild's passing. These were their terms, that they would marry off to him Guthrun; and they gave her a forgetfulness-draught to drink before she agreed to be married off to Attle. The sons of Attle were Earp and Oatle, and Swanhild was Seward's daughter and Guthrun's. Attle invited to his home Guthur and Hain, and sent Winge or Kneefrith<sup>1</sup>. Guthrun knew his wiles and sent a word with runes, that they should not come, and as a sign she sent Hain the ring Andwaresneat, and tied through it a wolf's hair. Guthur had asked for Ordrun's hand, Attle's sister, and did not get her; then he got Gleamware, and Hain had Costbeare. Their sons were Solwer and Snower and Yivick. And when the Yivickings came to Attle, then Guthrun asked her sons that they should ask for the life of the Yivickings, but they would not. The heart was cut out of Hain, and Guthur set in the serpent-yard. He struck his harp and soothed the serpents, but an adder stung him unto the liver. King Thedric was with Attle, and had there lost almost all of his men. Thedric and Guthrun recounted their griefs to each other. She spoke to him and quoth:

The Third Lay of Guthrun

(Guðrúnarkviða þriðja)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C10th (0.731)–early C11th (0.178)

Meter: Ancient-words-law

A very short narrative poem of ballad-type, depicting a single event from the legendary cycle. It is especially notable for its depiction of a trial by ordeal and the mention of a woman being drowned in a bog.

Herch, one of Attle's concubines tells Attle that she has seen his wife Guthrun sleeping with Thedric. Attle becomes distressed upon hearing this (P1). Guthrun asks him what is wrong (1), and he responds that Herch has accused her of sleeping with Thedric (2). Guthrun promises to prove her innocence through a trial by ordeal involving picking up a white stone from boiling water (3). She further says that while she and Thedric did sit down together, they did so in mutual grief over the deaths of her brothers (4–5). She tells Attle to summon a German lord named Saxe, who knows how to carry out the trial. Seven hundred men arrive to witness the event (6). Before picking up the stone, Guthrun laments over her brothers' deaths, saying that they would have disputed the accusation through violence, but that she must now prove her innocence by herself (7). She then puts her hand in the boiling water, and unscathed takes out the stones. She holds it up and shows it to the witnesses (8). Attle laughs, knowing that his wife has been faithful, and orders Herch to pick up the stone (9). She does so, but her hands are horribly scorched, and men lead her to a "foul bog", presumably to be drowned. The poet ends by laconically stating that Guthrun in such a way was "reconstituted for her affronts".

by the white, holy stone—that I did not do such a thing with Thedmar,<sup>191</sup> which neither wife nor husband has been able to swear upon,—<sup>192</sup>

<sup>191</sup>Historically, Thedmar was the father of Thedric, who took over the kingdom after his father’s death (see Encyclopedia). Thedmar may here be a scribal error for Thedric, a scribal error for “Thedmar’s son”, or a nickname due to conflation of the father and son.

<sup>192</sup>Guthrun says that she will prove her innocence through a trial by ordeal (that is, by lifting “the white holy stone” out of boiling water; see st. 8). She further strengthens her position by pointing out that no reliable person has sworn an oath attesting to her guilt.

The Lay of Attle

(Atlakviða)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C10th (0.719)–early C11th (0.212)

Meter: Speeches-meter, Ancient-words-law

A famously archaic poem.

Attle sends his messenger Kneefrith to Guthur (1). He arrives at Guthur's hall, where the mood is one of unease, and addresses Guthur (2). Kneefrith invites him and his brother Hain to Attle's court (3), offering them treasures, weapons and land (4–5). Guthur asks his brother Hain for advice, since he has not heard of Attle having gold to give away (6).

The Death of Attle (Dauði Atla)

- P1      Guðrún Gjúkadóttir hefndi bróðra sinna, svá sem frégt er orðit. Hon drap 2      fyrst sonu Atla, en eptir drap hon Atla ok brendi hollina ok hirðina alla;
         um þetta er sjá kviða ort.

Guthrun Yivicksdaughter avenged her brothers, as has become famous. She first killed the sons of Attle, and after that she killed Attle, and burned the hall and the whole hird. Regarding that this lay is wrought.

- 1      Atli sendi · ár til Gunnars
2      kunnan segg at riða, · Knéfrøðr vas sá heitinn;
         at gorrðum kom hann Gjúka · ok at Gunnars hollu, 4      bækkjum arin-græypum · ok at bjóri svqsum.

Attle sent—of yore—to Guthur a well-known messenger to ride; Kneefrith† he was called.
To the yards of Yivick he came, and to the hall of Guthur;
to the hearth-surrounding benches, and to the lovely beer.

- 2       2       Drukku þar drótt-męgir · —ęn dylęędr þoęđu—
           vín í val-hoęllu, · vręiði sęusk þęir Húna;
           kallaði þá Knęfręðr · kaldri roęđu,
           4       sęęgr inn suð-róni · sat hann á bękk hęm:

There the dright-lads [WARRIORS] drank—but the concealed ones shut up—wine in the walhall; they feared the wrath of the Huns.
 Then called Kneefrith with cold voice,
 the southern messenger, he sat on a high bench:

1 dylęędr ‘concealed ones’ | Finnur Jónsson (1932) reasonably interprets this as referring to Atle’s spies at Guthur’s court.

2 val-hoęllu ‘the walhall’ | The interpretation of this compound is difficult in the current context. The first element val- could be (1) valr ‘falcon’, referring to the aristocratic hunting practice; (2) valr ‘Wale’†, cognate with ‘Welsh’ but in ON referring to the French or Romans, stressing the southern location or appearance of the hall; or (3) valr ‘(collective) the battle-slain’, foreshadowing the inevitable death (feyness†) of the Yivickings†. If (3) is correct the word is linguistically identical to Walhall†, Weden’s hall, whither the battle-slain go.

- 3       „Atli mik hingat sęędi · ríða oęęędi, 2       mar inum męl-gręypa, · Myrk-við inn ó·kunna at biðja yðr, Gunnarr, · at it á bękk kómið
           4       með hjoęlmum arin-gręypum · at sękja hęim Atla.

“Atle sent me hither to ride with an errand, on the bit-champing steed through Mirkwood uncharted—to ask you, O Guthur, that ye two [= Guthur and Hain] on the bench come, with hearth-surrounding helmets, to seek the home of Atle.

- 4       Skjoęldu knęęuð þar vęlja · ok skafna aska,
           2       hjalma gull-roðna · ok Húna męęęi, silfr-gyllt sęðul-klęði, · sęrki val-rauða,
           4       dafar, darraða, · droęsla męl-gręypa.

There ye might choose shields, and shaven ash-spears, helmets gold-reddened, and the multitude of the Huns, silver-gilt saddle-cloths, blood-red serks,
 daves, spears, bit-champing steeds.

- 5       Vęll létsk ykkir ok myndu gefa · víðrar Gnita-hęiðar 2       af gęiri gjallanda · ok af gylltum stoęnum, stórar męiðmar · ok staði Danpar,
           4       hrís þat it męra · es meðr Myrk-við kalla.“

He also declared himself willing to give you two the field of wide Gnit-heath, [and] of yelling spears and of gilded prowls, great treasures and the place of Danp;

the renowned brush which men call Mirkwood.

- 6     Hǫfði vatt þá Gunnarr · ok Hǫgna til sagði:
2     „Hvat rēðr þú okkr, sēggr hinn óri, · alls vit slíkt heyrum?
       Gull vissa’k ekki · á Gnita-heiði,
4     þat’s vit étim-a · annat slíkt.

His head turned Guthur then, and said to Hain:

“What dost thou counsel us two, O younger man, as such a thing we hear?

I knew of no gold on the Gnit-heath which we two should not own as much of.

- 7     Sjau ęigu vit sal-hús · sverða full,
2     hverju ’ru þeira · hjǫlt ór gulli;
       mín vait’k mar bętstan · en męki hvassastan,
4     boga bękk-sóma · en brynjur ór gulli;

We own seven hall-houses filled with swords—

on each of them is a golden hilt;

I know my horse to be the best and [my] sword the sharpest,

[my] bow bench-fit and [my] byrnies golden,

- 8     hjalm ok skjǫld hvítastan, · kominn ór hǫll Kíars;
2     ęinn ’s mín bętri · en sé allra Húna.“

[my] helmet and shield the whitest, come from Choser’s hall;

mine alone is better, than [those] of all of the Huns might be!”

- 9     „Hvat hyggr brúði bęndu · þá’s hón okkr baug sęndi,
2     varinn vǫðum heiðingja? · Hykk at hón vǫrnuð byði!
       Hár fann’k heiðingja · riðit í hring rauðum;
4     ylfskr es vegr okkarr · at riða ǫręndi.“

[Hain quoth:]

“What dost thou think the bride meant, when she sent us two an armlet wrapped with a heath-dweller’s garment [WOLF > WOLF’S HAIR]? I think that she gave us a warning!

I found the heath-dweller’s [WOLF’S] hair tied through the red ring:

wolven is our road, if we ride that errand!<sup>194</sup>”

<sup>194</sup>That it is the more cautious Hain who speaks here is clear from Guthur’s response in the following stanzas. Whereas Hain judges the wolf-hair to be a warning of Hunnish treachery, Guthur thinks that it is a warning that wolves will steal his treasure if he does not show up.

- 10 Niðjar-gi hvøttu Gunnar · né náungr annarr, 2 rýnendr né ráðendr, · né þeir's ríkir vöru;
 kvaddi þá Gunnarr · sëm konungr skyldi,
 4 mærr í mjöð-ranni · af móði stórum:

Kinsmen urged not Guthur, nor any other relation,
 not counselors nor advisors, nor those who were mighty.
 Guthur then announced—as a king should,
 renowned in the mead-hall—with great spirit:

- 11 „Rís-tu nú, Fjornir, · lát-tu á flöt vaða
 2 greppa gull-skálir · með gumna höndum!

“Rise now, Ferner; let on the benches wade forth the golden bowls of warriors along the hands of men!

---

1 Fjornir ‘Ferner’ | An otherwise unknown servant.

- 12 Ulfr mun ráða · arfi Niflunga, birnir blakk-fjallir · bíta þref-tønnum,

 4 gamna grey-stóði, · ef Gunnarr né kœmr-at.“

The wolf will rule the inheritance of the Nivlings—

 Black-furred bears [will] bite with wrangling teeth—

daves, spears; but there drank Attle wine in the wale-hall; the watchmen sat outside to watch for Guthur's men, if they came here to visit, with yelling spear, to wake the ruler with war.

Their sister found earliest they they had come into the hall,
both of her brothers—on beer was she lightly drunk:
“Betrayed art thou now, Guthur; how wilt thou, powerful man, work against the harm-tricks of the Huns? Go early out of the hall!”<sup>195</sup>

 4        Gotna þjóðann • gulli kaupa.

Thus shall the bold against fiends ward himself;
 Hain warded the hands of Guthur.
 They asked the bold man [= Guthur] if his life he wished—the ruler of the Gots—to buy with gold.<sup>197</sup>

1 Svá ... verjask | Line moved from the last st. to this one since it seems to connect semantically with the immediately following line, and also creates a regular line distribution of 4-4 instead of 5-3.

<sup>197</sup>The Huns ask Guthur (it is clear that “ruler of the Gots” refers to him, cf. sts. 1, 3, 10) if he wishes to ransom Hain. He instead responds with the following:

- 23 „Hjarta skal mér Høgna · í hendi liggja blóðugt, ór brjósti · skorit bald-riða, saxi slíðr-bæitu, · syni þjóðans.“

[Guthur quoth:] “The heart of Hain shall lie in my hands:
bloody from the breast, cut from the bold rider [= Hain], with a slide-biting sax,<sup>198</sup> from the son of the sovereign [= Hain].”

<sup>198</sup>i.e. a short-sword with a blade so sharp that it draws blood when one slides the finger across it.

- 24 Skóru þeir hjarta · Hjalla ór brjósti, blóðugt, ok á bjóð lögðu · ok bōru þat fyr Gunnar.

Cut they the heart of Helle from the breast, bloody, and on a platter laid it, and carried it before Guthur.

- 25 Þá kvað þat Gunnarr, · gumna dróttinn:
„Hér hefi’k hjarta · Hjalla ins blauða, ó-líkt hjarta · Høgna ins frókna, es mjök bifask · es á bjóði liggr;
bifðisk hōlfu meirr · es í brjósti lá!“

Then quoth that Guthur, the lord of men:
“Here have I the heart of Helle the soft—unlike the heart of Hain the bold!— which much trembles when on the platter it lies;
it trembled twice as much when in the breast it lay.”

- 26 Hló þá Høgni · es til hjarta skóru kvikvan kumbla-smið; · kløkkva síðst hugði;
blóðugt þat á bjóð lögðu · ok bōru fyr Gunnar.

Hain laughed then, when unto the heart they cut the living wound-smith [WARRIOR = Hain]; he thought least of sobbing.
Bloody on a platter they laid it, and carried it before Guthur.

- 27 Mérr kvað þat Gunnarr, · Gęir-Niflungr:

- 2 „Hér hefi’k hjarta • Høgna ins frókna, ólíkt hjarta • Hjalla ins blauða, 4 es lítt bifask • es á bjóði liggr;
 bifðisk svá-gi mjök • þá’s í brjósti lá!

Renowned, quoth Guther, the Spear-Nivling:

“Here have I the heart of Hain the bold—unlike the heart of Helle the soft!— which little trembles, when on the platter it lies;
 it trembled not so much when in the breast it lay.

Other Norse Heroic Poetry

The Leed of Hindle

(Hyndluljóð)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): late C11th (0.996)

Meter: Ancient-words-law

1 „Vaki mér meýja, · vaki mín vina,
2 Hyndla systir, · es í helli býr;
nú 's røkr røkra, · ríða vit skulum
4 til Valhallar · ok til vés heilags.

[Frow quoth:] “Wake, O maiden of maidens; wake, my friend, sister Hindle, who lives in the rock-face!

Now is the twilight of twilights; we two shall ride to Walhall, and to the holy wigh†!

2 Biðjum Hęrjafoðr · í hugum sitja,
2 hann geldr ok gefr · gull verðugum,
gaf hann Hęrmóði · hjalm ok brynju,
4 en Sigmundi · sverð at þiggja.

Let us bid Harryfather (= Woden) to remain in good spirits;
he rewards and gives gold to the worthy:

He gave to Heremod† a helmet and byrnie, but to Syemund† a sword to receive.

2 verðugum ‘to the worthy’ | emended to verðungu ‘to the retinue’ by Finnur Jónsson (1932), Guðni Jónsson (1954)

3 Gefr hann sigr sonum, · en svinnum aura,
2 męlsku mǫrgum · ok manvit firum, byri gefr brǫgnum, · en brag skǫldum,
4 gefr hann mann-sęmi · mǫrgum rekki.

He gives victory to sons, but silver to the wise;
 speech to many, and manwit† to men.
 Fair wind he gives to noble ones, and poetry to scolds†;
 he gives manly valour to many a champion.

- 4 Þór mun'k blóta, · þess mun'k biðja,
 2 at hann é við þik · ein-art láti;
 þó 's hönum ó-títt · við jötuns brúðir.

Thunder I will blout†, of this I will bid:
 that he always behave upright with thee,
 although he has hate for the brides of the ettins.

- 5 Nú tak-tu ulf þinn · einn af stalli,
 2 lát hann rinna · með runa mínum.“—
 „Seyinn es gyltr þinn · goð-veg troða,
 4 vil'k-at mar minn · méttan hlóða.

Now take thy single wolf from the stable;
 let him run together with my boar.”— [Hindle quoth:] “Slow is thy boar to tread the God-ways;
 I wish not load my noble steed.”

- 6 Fló est Freyja, · es freistar mín, 2 vísar þú augum · á oss þannig, es hafir ver þinn · í val-sinni
 4 Óttar unga · Innsteins bur.“

Deicitful art thou, Frow, as thou temptest me;
 thou showest thy eyes on us this way
 since thou hast thy lover on the slain-ways:
 the young Oughter, Instone's offspring.”

2–3 vísar ... val-sinni ‘thou showest ... slain-ways’ | i.e., “You only show favour to me because you want me to help your lover”. For the expression cf. Syed 2/3 and note.

- 7 „Dulið est Hyndla, · draums étla'k þér,
 2 es kveðr ver minn · í valsinni.

[Frow quoth:] Deluded art thou, Hindle; I think thee dreamy as thou sayest that my man is on the slain-ways.

- 2        8       Þar's góltr glóar · Gullinbursti, Hildisvíni, · es mér hagir gęřđu, dvergar tvęir · Dáinn ok Nabbi.

There where the boar Goldenbristle glows,
the Hildswine, which the two skillful dwarfs Downen and Nab did make for me.

---

2 Hildisvíni 'Hildswine' | Presumably an alternative name of Goldenbristle.

- 2        9       Sęnn í sęðlum · sitja vit skulum ok of jęfra · ęttir dýma, gumna þęira, · es frá goðum kómu.

Soon in the saddles we two shall sit,
and speak about the lineages of princes,
of those men who are come from the gods.

- 2        10      Þęir hafa vęðjat · vala malmi Óttarr ungi · ok Angantýr;
             skylt 's at vęita, · svá't skati hinn ungi
4        fęður-leiřđ hafi · ępt fręndr sína.

They have wagered the Welsh ore [GOLD], young Oughter and Ongenthew—it must be divulged, so that the young prince may have the patrimony left by his kinsmen.

- 2        11      Hęrg hann mér gęřđi · hlađinn stęinum;
             nú 's grjót þat · at glęri orđit;
             rauđ hann í nýju · nauta blóđi;
4        ę trúđi Óttarr · á ósynjur.

A harrow† he made for me, loaded with stones;
now that stone-pile has turned into glass.
He reddened it in the fresh blood of oxen;
always did Oughter trust on the Ossens†.

- 2        12      Nú lát forna · niđja talđa ok upp-bornar · ęttir manna
             hvat 's Skjöldunga, · hvat 's Skilfinga,

- 6           hvat 's hǫld-borit, · hvat 's hęrs-borit
            męst manna val · und Mið-garði?“

Now let ancient kinsmen be counted, and the high born lineages of men:
What is of the Shieldings? What is of the Shilvings?
What is of the Athlings? What is of the Wolvings?
What is born of hero? What is born of chief,
the mightiest choice of men in Middenyard?”

- 13       „Þú est Óttarr · borinn Innstęini,
2       en Innstęinn vas · Alfi inum gamla, Alfr vas Ulfi, · Ulfr Sęfara,
4       en Sęfari · Svan inum rauða.

[Hindle quoth:] “Thou<sup>200</sup> art, Oughter, born to Instone, and Instone was born to Elf the old, Elf to Wolf, Wolf to Seafare, and Seafare to Swan the red.

<sup>200</sup>Hindle, maybe in a trance-like state, speaks straight to Oughter.

- 14       Móður átti faðir þinn · męnjum gǫfga,
2       hygg at hęti · Hlędís gyðja,
          Fróði vas faðir þęirar, · en Fríund móðir;
4       ǫll þótti ęt sú · með yfir-męnnum.

Thy father had thy mother, esteemed with neck-rings,
I think that she was called Leedise the gidden†.
Frood was her father and Friend her mother;
all her lineage seemed to be among overmen†.

3 Fríund | emend. from meaningless †friaut† F

- 15       Auði vas áðr · ǫflgastr manna,
2       Halfdanr fyrri · hęstr Skjöldunga, fręg vǫru folk-víg, · þau's framir gęrðu,
4       hvarfla þóttu verk · með himins skautum.

Ed was once the mightiest of men,
Halfdane earlier the highest of Shieldings.
Renowned were the troop-conflicts [wars] which the famous ones made;
his (= Halfdane's) works seemed to circle along the corners of heaven.

- 16      Eððisk við Eymund · óðstan manna
 2          en vá Sigtrygg · með svølum eggjum, eiga gekk Almvæg, · óðsta kvinna,
 4          ólu þau ok óttu · átján sonu.

He (= Halfdane) became the in-law of Iemund<sup>201</sup>, the noblest of men, and he slew Syettrue with cool edges.

He went on to have Elmwey, the noblest of women;
 they begot and had eighteen sons.

<sup>201</sup>lit. "[he] was strengthened by". Elmwey was Iemund's daughter or sister.

- 17      Þaðan eru Skjöldungar, · þaðan eru Skilfingar, 2          þaðan eru Qðlingar, · þaðan eru Ynglingar, þaðan es hǫld-borit, · þaðan es hęrs-borit, 4          mest manna val · und Mið-garði;
             alt 's þat ęt þín, · Óttarr hęmski.

Thence come the Shieldings! Thence come the Shilvings!

Thence come the Athlings! Thence come the Inglings!<sup>a</sup>

Thence is born of hero! Thence is born of chief

the mightiest choice of men in Middenyard!

All of this is thy lineage, O foolish Oughter!"

---

<sup>a</sup>Note the contradiction with v. 12. Since the Inglingas have already been mentioned (under the name Shilvings, for the difference between the two see Encyclopedia), it seems likely that Wolvings is the original reading.

- 18      Vas Hildigunnr · hęnnar móðir, 2          Svǫfu barn · ok Sę-konungs;
             alt 's þat ęt þín, · Óttarr hęmski.
 4          varði at viti svá, · viltu ęnn lęgra?

Hildguth was her mother,

the child of Sweve and Sea-king.

All of this is thy lineage, O foolish Oughter!—

It is meaningful that one might know thus; wilt thou [hear] yet further?

- 19      Dagr átti Þóru · dręngja móður,
 2          ólusk í ęt þar · óðstir kappar,
             Fraðmarr ok Gyrðr · ok Frekar báðir,
 4          Ámr ok Jǫsurmarr, · Alfr hinn gamli.
             varðar at viti svá, · viltu ęnn lęgra?

Day had Thure, the mother of valiant men;
 in that lineage were begotten the noblest champions:
 Fradmer and Yird, and both Frekes;
 Ame and Essirmer; Elf the old.—
 It is meaningful that one might know thus; wilt thou [hear] yet further?

- 20      Kettill hét vinr þęira · Klypps arf-þęgi, 2            vas hann móður-faðir · móður þinnar;
           þar vas Fróði · fyrr ęnn Kári,
 4            en Hildi vas · Hóalfir of getinn.

Kettle was their friend, the heir of Clip;
 he was the father of thy mother's mother.
 There was Frood, yet earlier Keer,
 but by Hild was Highelf begotten.

Meter: Ancient-words-law

For the text of original poem I present the manuscript text with as few textual emendations as possible. As for the orthography, I have found it impossible to produce a normalised without too heavily distorting the received text, being as it is, a blend of several dialects (one need only observe the treatment of the name Thedric, which appears thrice, and each time in a markedly different form). Apart from my typical practice of capitalising proper names, marking prefixes with ⟨·⟩ and compounds with ⟨-⟩, and using acute accents to signify long vowels, circumflex accents to signify now-monophthongised original diphthongs, and overdots to mark nasal vowels, I have done the following changes in order to clarify etymological relationships and make the text somewhat more wieldy. Of these, 8–10 have also been noted in the apparatus where they occur:

1. Consistently replaced both p (wynn) and uu with w.
2. Consistently replaced c with k.
3. Consistently replaced qu with kw.
4. Consistently replaced t with ṭ in positions affected by the Second Sound Shift.
5. Replaced th with þ.
6. Replaced e with ē when reflecting an original a-vowel affected by i-mutation.
7. Replaced ó with ō where originally an a.
8. Removed unetymological double nn.
9. Restored initial b- where etymological and/or metrically required.
10. Removed initial b- unetymological and/or metrically deficient.

The punctuation of the original, entirely consisting of interpuncts, at times representing metrical breaks, at others sporadically placed, has not been retained.

Where they appear in cæsuræ, the words kwad Hilti-brant ‘Hildbrand quoth’ (found in ll. 30, 49, and 58) replace the usual interpunct. Due to their hypermetrical nature, I had originally planned to remove these, and instead indicate the speaker in the margins—but after comparison with various Norse stanzas (e.g. Rein 3, wherein the words kvað Loki ‘Lock quoth’ appear in the stanza’s first cæsura), I have come to believe that these represent an ancient oral interjection, seemingly going back as far as the Migration Period (as it seems incredulous to think that the scribe of ms. should have influenced the four centuries younger scribe of R in such a minor point.)

The poet begins with a short formulaic introduction; he is the reteller of older stories (1–2). The two duellists, Hildbrand and Hathbrand, father and son, arm themselves and ride into battle at the head of two opposing hosts (3–6). They speak, and Hildbrand asks Hathbrand for his name and lineage (7–13). Hathbrand gives his name and ancestry, and reveals his father as the warrior Hildbrand, who abandoned him as a newborn to serve Thedric in his fight against Edwaker. This was long ago; he is most likely dead (14–29). Hearing this, Hildbrand calls on God as witness, and offers his son a golden torc as a token of loyalty (30–35). Hathbrand thinks it an insulting trick. He proclaims that wealth should be won by struggle alone and insults Hathbrand, accusing him of having grown old through treachery (36–41). He has learned from sailors on the Mediterranean that his father is dead (42–44).

After this follow three short speeches. The second is certainly spoken by Hildbrand, but the other two may be misplaced or misattributed. Hildbrand first reflects on his son's prosperity: from his clothes he can tell that he has a good lord, and that he, unlike himself, has not suffered the fate of exile (45–48). He then calls on God, and laments that after thirty years in various armies, he is at last forced to fight against his own son. Still, Hathbrand should easily be able to kill such an old man as himself, if he has strength and fate on his side (49–57). He (or Hildbrand, if we choose to emend) at last says that only the most cowardly easterner would refuse a fight so greatly desired. When the duel is over the winner will strip the armour of the other (58–62).

The two men then throw their javelins, each of which gets stuck in the opposing shield, before rushing into each other, hacking away at their shields until they become worthless (63–68). The rest of the poem was continued on the now-lost, following page(s).

Hathbrand spoke, Hildbrand’s son:
 “This our liegemen have said to me—
 the old and learned, they who earlier lived:
 that Hildbrand was called my father—I am called Hathbrand.
 Of yore he turned east; he fled Edwaker’s hate away with Thedric and his multitude of thanes.
 He left in the land a little one to stay:
 a bride in the bower, a bairn ungrown, heritance-less. He rode away to the East, at a time when Thedric was in great need of my father—that was so friendless a man!
 He was toward Edwaker utterly hostile,

the dearest of thanes under Thedric.

He was always in the front of the troop; him did always the fighting gladden;

known was he among keen men.—

I guess not that he still live.”

37 mit gêru skal man · geba in·fâhan 'With spear shall one win gifts' | This ancient mindset was codified by the Indians as part of the kṣatra-dharma, the code of the Warrior (kṣatriya) caste, which explicitly forbade them from taking gifts. So in a part of the Mahabharata (12.192.73), a Warrior King refuses a gift from a priest since "it is the duty prescribed for a Kṣatriya that he must fight and protect (people). Kṣatriya are said to be the givers, then, how can I take (this) from you?" (Hara (1974) transl.)

Widesith spoke, unlocking his word-hoard, he who through the most tribes over the earth and nations had journeyed; often on the bench he received delightful treasures. From the Mirgings his ancestry stemmed. Together with Elhild, the good peace-weaveress, for the first time he sought out the Reth-King's realm, to the east of the Angles, [the realm of] Erminric†,
the fierce oath-breaker. — He then began to speak long:

6 freoþu-wębban 'peace-weaveress' | A woman used in a political marriage to bring peace between two tribes or families, in this case apparently between King Edwin (see ll. 97–98) and the Gots.

7 Hreð-cyninges 'Reth-King' | i.e. the king of the Reth-Gots, which is apparently just a poetic name for the (Eastern) Gots; cf. ll. 18, 57, 88–89.

Misceallaneous Runic Poetry

Not all poetry preserved in Runic inscriptions is included here; see below under Galders. The stanza from the Rök runestone is included under Other Heroic Poetry, and the Runic version of the Dream of the Rood is found there.

Metrically the poetry is generally in Ancient-words-law. A few fragments from Jutland are in Leeds-meter and two from Sweden are in Court-recited meter.

Three Rune Poems

Introduction to the Rune Poems

TODO: Acrophonic principle

The order and names of the letters in the Runic alphabets or futharks stayed relatively consistent throughout the many centuries and countries in which they were used. This can probably be ascribed to the rune poems—poetic lists of the names of each rune with a short explanation, passed down orally as mnemonic devices to aid early Germanic learners, who were doubtless far more accustomed to learn by heart spoken poems than written letters.

Three such rune poems survive, from three countries: England, Norway, and Iceland. The English rune poem documents the English futhorc, while the Norwegian and Icelandic document the Scandinavian younger futhark.

When compared to the Common Germanic elder futhark, these two daughter scripts have taken opposing paths. Whereas the English futhorc has appended several letters for new vowels to the end of the rune row, the Scandinavian futhark has instead done away with numerous runes, namely those for ng, plosives d, g, p, the semi-vowel w and the vowels o and e, along with the obscure hook-shaped rune (TODO). That much of this simplification was probably intentional, rather than the result of neglect or language change, is seen from the following facts.

First, several of the lost runes stood for sounds that did not undergo any major sound shifts in the North Germanic languages in the relevant time period. For instance, all modern Scandinavian dialects still clearly distinguish between the initial consonants in the descendants of dagr ‘day’ and Týr ‘Tew†’, and most even have the same articulation of these consonants as modern English.

Second, in two archaic runic inscriptions we find clear proof that the names and sound values of some of the lost runes were still remembered and passed down even after the adoption of the simplified younger futhark. On the Swedish Rök stone (Ög 136), which is mostly composed in the younger futhark, runes of the elder futhark are used in a cipher, which works in the following way: Every younger futhark rune representing two distinct phonemes, where one of those was the sound value of that rune in the elder futhark system, and the other has been assimilated from a lost rune, is replaced by the elder futhark rune whose value it assimilated. For instance, the k rune, which in the elder futhark stood for only /k/, but which in the younger futhark stands for both /k/ and /g/, is replaced with the old g rune. A similar instance of two-scriptedness is found on the Ingelsta stone (Ög 43), where the old d rune is used in an otherwise younger futhark inscription, probably standing for its name dagr ‘day’, which is also attested as a male given name.

Third, there is virtually no regional variation in which runes disappear in the transition from elder to younger futhark. There is some variation in their shapes, but there is no region which, say, simplifies only the plosive consonants t/d, k/g, b/p > t, k, b, but retains the written distinction between o and u—they all go away at once.

These facts point away from neglect or a natural development of the script—they instead suggest deliberate reform. Since we lack historical sources, the motivations behind such a reform can only be guessed at, but making the script simpler may have been intended to increase literacy by making it easier to learn and faster to write. If this were the case it was certainly successful: the transition to the simplified younger futhork brings with it a huge increase in inscriptions in Scandinavia, along with interest in various ciphers, and a new tradition of inscribed stones in Denmark, where they were previously unknown.

This new system also quickly gave rise to even more simplified systems, like the “short-stave” runes found already on the C9th Rök stone, or the “staveless” runes known from northern Sweden. Both of these variants make it even faster to write on materials like wood, wax and bone; the runes also take up less space—very useful for carvers writing on limited surfaces.

In any case, the names of the runes seem to have survived these developments. Of the 16 runes found in both the English and Icelandic (which appears to be more conservative than the Norwegian) rune poems, 10—f, r, h, n, i, j, s, b, m and l—have etymologically identical names. Three of the remaining six—þ, a and t—in the Icelandic stand for words with clear Heathen associations—Thurse, Os, and Tew—and so may have been changed deliberately after the conversion of England, rather than lost in the process of oral transmission. Two more—u and k—have names which agree in form but not in meaning. Thus it is only the old ᚱ-rune where this is total disagreement about its ancient name. This is easily understood, since the sound which that rune designated was lost in early Old English.

Sm 39

Dating: C11th

Meter: Ancient-words-law

A standing stone inscribed on two sides, one of which has a large cross. The expression is formulaic; cf. Sm 44, Sö 130, U 703, U 739, and U 805. For “good of meat†”, which also occurs in Higb; see Encyclopedia. The first line is not poetic.

Sö 65 (Djulefors)

Dating: 1000–C12th

Meter: Ancient-words-law with hendings in the b-verses

A standing stone inscribed on one side with a large cross. Already on the earliest depictions the stone was damaged, but an even larger part has now gone missing. Other stones that mention Longbeardland† (Lombardy) include TODO... The meter is highly unusual for runic Swedish poetry, relying on hendings (in line 2 an ethel-hending arð- : barð-, in line 3 a shot-hending land- : end-). Line 2b is formulaic; see note.

                      auk à Langbarði- · landi endaðis.

Inge raised this stone after Anlaf, her ...
 Easterly he ploughed with the prow,
 and on Longbeardland was ended.

---

2 arði barði ‘ploughed with the prow’ | i.e. “sailed”. A formulaic poetic expression shared with an anonymous line from the Third Grammatical Treatise, which reads: sá’s af Íslandi · arði barði ‘he who [away] from Iceland ploughed with the prow’.

Sö 130

Dating: 1000–C12th

Meter: Ancient-words-law

A standing stone. TODO. The expression is formulaic; cf. Sm 39, Sm 44, U 703, U 739, and U 805.

U 703

Dating: C11th

Meter: Ancient-words-law

A standing stone inscribed on one side. There is no cross present, but a large four-legged beast with a long tail. The stone is heavily damaged, but mostly readable, except for what is here taken to be the half of line 2, which is entirely lost. The expression is formulaic; cf. Sm 39, Sm 44, Sö 130, U 739, and U 805. For “good of meat†”, which also occurs in High; see Encyclopedia. The first line is not poetic.

mandr matar góðr · ok mál̥s risinn.

Oswye let raise this stone after Arnolf, her good son.
He dwelled here ...,
a man good of meat and proud of speech.

---

U 739

Dating: C11th

Meter: Ancient-words-law

A standing stone inscribed on one side, with a large cross present. There are no major difficulties with the reading. The expression is formulaic; cf. Sm 39, Sm 44, Sö 130, U 703, and U 805. “mild of meat” appears to be a variant of “good of meat†”, which also occurs in Hígh; see Encyclopedia. The first line is not poetic. For other stones raised by someone in memory of themselves, see TODO.

Holbjörn lét reisa stein at sik sjalfan.

U 805

Dating: C11th

The stone has been lost, and only survives in old depictions, which makes the reading, especially two of the personal names, uncertain. My transliteration follows Rundata.

The expression is formulaic; cf. Sm 39, Sm 44, Sö 130, U 703, and U 739. For “good of meat†”, which also occurs in Hígh; see Encyclopedia. The first line is not poetic.

Galders: Poetic Charms, Spells, and Curses

Under this section are gathered sundry galders† (metrical magic charms) attested in Old Germanic languages. I have only included those with clear Heathen or otherwise traditional elements (especially certain poetic formulae known from older texts). Thoroughly Christian prayers are found below under “Poetry on Christian Subjects”.

Continental Germanic galders

The Two Merseburg galders

Dating: TODO.

Meter: Ancient-words-law, Galders-law

These two galders, preserved in a manuscript (TODO) are some of the only surviving examples of genuine Heathen galders from the continent. Both share a common two-part structure, each beginning with an historiola—a “historical” account describing the successful effects of the galder in the mythic past—followed by an imperative commanding that the willed magic effect take place in the present.

The first galder begins with the historiola describing a group of supernatural women in the midst of a battle, affecting its outcome by fastening or loosening fetters. The imperative then commands that some fetters in the present be destroyed, so that captive(s) may escape.

The second galder begins with the historiola describing a group of Gods riding through the woods. Among them is Balder†, whose young foal sprains its foot. Three Gods—the otherwise unknown goddess Sithguth†, the goddess Sun†, the god Woden†—in turn chant a healing galder over it. The imperative—apparently the galder sung by Woden—then commands that a present sprain be healed.

          suma klubodun · umbi kuonjo-widi
4        in·sprink hapt-bandun · in·far figandun
          .H.

Of yore sat dises, sat here, then there:
some fastened fetters, some hindered armies,
some cleaved shackles (TODO!).—
Destroy the fetter-bonds, lead the way from the fiends!
.H.

5 .H. | The meaning of this letter, which is very clear and written in the same hand as the galders, is uncertain. To me the most convincing suggestion is that it be read as .N., short for Latin nomen ‘name’, presumably the name of the person whom the singer wishes to free from the fetters.

- 63 Fol ęnde Wuodan • fuorun zi holza
 2 dú wart demo Balderes folon • sín fuoz bi·ręnkit þú bi·guol en Sinthgunt • Sunna era swister

 bēn zi bēna
 8 bluot zi bluoda
 lid zi ge·liden • só-se ge·limida sín“!

Phol and Weden journeyed in the woods;
 then was the foot of Balder's foal sprained.
 Then him Sithguth† begaled†—Sun† her sister;
 then Frie† begaled him—Full† her sister;
 then Weden begaled him, as well he knew:
 “Like bone-sprain, like blood-sprain, like joint-sprain!
 Bone to bone,
 blood to blood,
 joint to joints, like were they glued together!”

1 Fol | Phol ms. 3 Sinthgunt | Sinhtgunt ms.

3 bi·guol ‘begale’ | third past singular of bi-galan ‘begale’, transitive of galan ‘gale, sing a galder’. This verb is the origin of the noun “galder”, literally ‘something galed’. Cf. Ordr TODO, wherein a woman “gales” “bitter galders” over another in order to help her in childbirth.

4 bi·guol en ‘begaled him’ | i.e. “sang galders over him”

Against wyrms (Contra vermes)

Dating: ?

Meter: Ancient-words-law

A manuscript charm against wyrms located in the bone-marrow, probably thought to cause aching. The galder calls upon a chief worm, Nesse, and its nine offspring, to depart from the patient. It lays out a path for the worms, who are to leave the sufferer's body and instead go into an arrow or sharp point (strála), probably a ritual implement used to pierce the affect area.

The structure “Go from X to Y, from Y to Z” may be very old, as it is also found in Romani charms collected by Leland (1891, pp. 27, 28, 95) The charm on p. 95 is also against wyrms. Like in our galder the wyrms (kirmora, from Sanskrit kṛmi, which is probably related to Germanic **wurmiz*, although the difference in the initial consonant is unusual—perhaps a taboo formation?) are to leave the body and instead go into the ritual implement, in the Gypsy charm an ointment. I take me the freedom to reproduce this charm in full, with Leland's introduction and translation:

“Before sunrise wolf's milk (Wolfsmilch, rukeskro tęud) is collected, mixed with salt, garlic, and water, put into a pot, and boiled down to a brew. With a part of this the afflicted spot is rubbed, the rest is thrown into a brook, with the words:—

Kirmora jánen ándre tçud Andrál tçud, andré sir Andrál sir, andré páñi, Panensá kiyá dádeske, Kiyá Niváseske Pçándel tumen shelebá Eñávárdesb teñá!

“Worms go in the milk, From the milk into the garlic, From the garlic into the water,
With the water to (your) father, To the Nivasi, He shall bind you with a rope, Ninety-nine (yards long).”

---

2           Gang út, Nesso, · mid nigun nessi-klínon, ut fana þemo marge an þat bæn, · fan þemo bêne an þat fleşg, ut fan þemo fleşgke an þia húd, · ut fan þera húd an þesa strála.
4           Drohtin, werþe só.

Go out, O Nesse, with the nine small Nesses!
Out from the marrow into the bone, from the bone into the flesh, out from the flesh into the skin, out from the skin into this arrow.
Lord, may it be so.

---

1 Nesso ‘Nesse’ | The naming of the daemon or being which is to be excised is common in ancient magic, including several other galders edited here. The idea is that knowledge of the name of the entity gives the healer power over it.

How, earth works against everywhich wight and against mischief and against neglect and against that mighty tongue of man.

4 þá micelan · mannes tungan ‘that mighty tongue of man’ | The tongue is surely here standing in for “speech”, specifically galder; i.e., if the swarming of the bees were caused by an enemy’s cursing, the earth will disarm it.

P2      And wiððon for·weorp ofer greót, þonne hí swirman, and cweð:

And with that throw the grit over, when they swarm, and say:

Old Norse galders

The Ribe galder stick

(DR EM85;493)

Dating: Medieval.

Meter: Ancient-words-law, Galders-law

A wooden stick from the Danish city of Ribe. The galder is syncretic, and as such contains numerous pre-Christian elements, albeit in a Christian(ised) context.

The inscription may be conveniently divided into four parts. Part one (ll. 1–4) contains an introductory prayer where the healer asks for the support of natural forces (Earth, Up-heaven and the Sun) and Christian divinities (God and Saint Mary), that the healing may be successful. Part two (ll. 5–8) ritually exorcises any sickness which may have entered any part of the body. Part three (ll. 9–14) apparently warns the addressee that they will be haunted by “nine needs” (an old Heathen formula; see Note) until they pray. Part four (ll. 15, which is probably prose) gives the personal name “Bonde”, perhaps the addressee, and concludes with an “Amen”.

The Canterbury Galder

Dating: c. 1075

Meter: Ancient-words-law

This Old Norse galder is found in the Anglo-Saxon manuscript Cotton Caligula A XV. It runs across the bottom margin of the two facing pages 123v and 124r and is written in very clear runes of Wiking Age long-stave type. One rune, viz. g in vigi vegi ‘smite’ is “stung”. The text has no word separators.

The galder is very similar to those on the amulets from Sigtuna (U Fv1933;134, U NOR1998;25) below. They all belong to a type of magical healing where an illness-causing devil is commanded to leave the suffering person. The final line, viðr áðra-vari ‘against pus of veins’ is probably a declaration of purpose.

Galders from Bryggen

Several galders or magical inscriptions are part of the cache of medieval rune-inscribed objects found at Bryggen in the city of Bergen, Norway. For simplicity's sake, they are here listed in ascending order of their runological numbers.

B 257

Dating: c. 1335

Meter: Galders-law

A stick inscribed on four planed sides. Part of the stick is broken off, which renders the text incomplete. The inscription is clearly a “love-charm” (that is, a piece of sexually coercive magic), addressed—as shown by the feminine dative sjalfri þér ‘thy self’ on side D—to a woman. The language closely resembles that of Shir 36, in which Shirner, Free’s servant, threatens to carve a runic inscription which will curse the ettin-woman Gird with ęrgi ‘queerness, degeneracy’, óði ‘madness’, and ó·þoli ‘restlessness, impatience’ unless she sleep with his master. It seems that we are here dealing with just such a surviving runic curse, and that Shir 36 is reflecting an authentic form of Norse “love magic” (for it is unlikely that the present inscription should derive directly from that poem) by which a woman is cursed with sexual restlessness until she succumb to the will of the male curser.

A more distant parallel may be seen in the curse-formula found on the two C7th runic inscriptions from Stentoft and Björketorp (see TODO), wherein the destroyer of the respective monuments is cursed to become herma-lausak argjú ‘restless (a different root from ó·þoli above!) with queerness’, i.e. ‘incessantly randy’.

Side D ends with a string of fake-Latin gibberish, a clear sign of Christian syncretic influence on the Old Norse-Germanic magical tradition.

A     Ríst ek bót-rúnar · ríst ek bjarg-rúnar
2             ein-falt við ęlfum threefold against thurses.

may restlessness stick on thee, and an ettin's wrath!
Never sit, never sleep!

2 †Beirist rubus rabus et arantabus laus abus rosa gava† '...' | Latin-like gibberish.

B 380

Dating: ?

Meter: Galders-law

A short little charm explicitly invoking the two most important Heathen Gods, Thunder† and Weden†. The inscription postdates the official conversion of Norway by over a hundred years, and it is an open question whether the two mentioned gods were still seen in a good light or whether they had already been assimilated into the Catholic system of demons and devils. This question is important since it determines the context of the letter: was it well-wishing, assuming that the receiver was of like mind to the sender, or did he have more sinister intent than the first line lets on? Judging from the first line, and from the half-Heathen contents of many other inscriptions found at Bryggen (some from as late as the C14th), I see it as crypto-Heathen.

1 Hęill sé þú · ok í hugum góðum ‘May thou be hale and in good spirits’ | A formulaic greeting. The very same line is found in Hyme 41; see note there for parallels.

3 Óðinn þik ęigi ‘may Weden own thee’ | See note to Wsp 23.

Poetry on Christian Subjects

Old Saxon Baptismal Vow

Dating: ?

Meter: Prose.

While not an alliterative poem in the slightest, this short text is important for its mention of Saxon Heathen Gods, and as I have no section for Miscellanea, I have here set it first among the Christian poetry, in order to give relevant cultural context. The format of the text is straightforward and resembles the modern Catholic questions asked to participants during the Sacrament of Confirmation (TODO: reference). The person to be baptised is to respond positively to three denying and three affirming questions; first to forsake the Devil (P1), all “Devil-yields” (i.e. non-Christian rituals, see note to that word) (P2), and all the Devil’s “works and words” and his followers, among which are listed the three Germanic-Saxon gods Thunder, Woden, and Saxneet (P3); and then to profess belief in each member of the Trinity: God the almighty father (P4), Christ God’s son (P5), and the Holy Ghost (P6).

---

P1 „For·sachistu diobole?“ et respondeat: „ec for·sacho diobole“

“Forsakest thou the Devil?” and he should respond: “I forsake the Devil.”

P2 „end allum diobol-gelde?“ respondeat: „end ec for·sacho allum diobol-gelde.“

“And all devil-yields?” he should respond: “I forsake all devil-yields.”

---

1 diobol-gelde ‘devil-yields’ | An obvious calque of OE TODO, which means TODO.

P3 „End allum dioboles wercum?“ respondeat „end ec for·sacho allum dioboles wercum and wordum, Thuner ende Wóden ende Sax-nôte ende allem them un·holdum the hira ge·nôtas sint.“

“And all the Devil’s works” he should respond: “and I forsake all the works and words of the Devil; Thunder and Woden and Saxneet and all those unhold ones who are their fellows.”

P4 „Ge·lôbistu in Got ala-męhtigun fader?“ „Ec ge·lôbo in Got ala-męhtigun 2 fader.“

“Believest thou in God, the almighty father?” “I believe in God, the almighty father.”

P5 „Ge·lôbistu in Crist Godes suno?“ „Ec ge·lôbo in Crist Gotes suno.“

“Believest thou in Christ, God’s son?” “I believe in Christ, God’s son.”

P6 „Ge·lôbistu in hâlogan gâst?“ „Ec ge·lôbo in hâlogan gâst.“

“Believest thou in the Holy Ghost?” “I believe in the Holy Ghost.”

Heliand

Dating: 830s

Meter: Ancient-words-law

Very much a work in progress.

The following is a complete list of source manuscripts, in chronological order.

Siglum	Date	Lines	Full name
L	840–850	TODO	(Thomas 4073 (Ms))
P	840–850	TODO	(R 56/2537 (PA))
V	800–850	TODO	(Palatini Latini 1447)
S	850	TODO	(cgm. 8840)
M	850–875	TODO	(cgm. 25)
C	950–1000	TODO	(Cotton Caligula A. VII sign. 3-11)

The two main manuscripts of the poem are M and C. Fragments L and P appear to originally belong to the same codex; they are identical in terms of handwriting and page layout.

Notes on the normalization:

- Long vowels are marked by the acute rather than by the circumflex accent or macron. This is both faithful to the original manuscripts and concordant with my practice in normalising other Germanic languages.
- Long vowels  $\hat{e}$  and  $\hat{o}$  resulting from monophthongisation of diphthongs ai and au are, however, written with the circumflex accent. That these were in fact articulated separately is seen by the following circumstance: in the mss. etymological  $\acute{e}$  and  $\acute{o}$  are frequently written as ie and uo, but this is never done for  $\hat{e}$  and  $\hat{o}$ .
- When attested in all mss., epenthetic (svarabhakti) vowels are marked with an underdot. Otherwise they are deleted.
- Long vowels resulting from nasal assimilation are marked with an overdot. i is written as  $\ddot{i}$ .
- ms. e and i, when occurring between vowels are written as j.
- ms. i, when word-initial or following g and corresponding to etymological j is written as j.
- ms. e as resulting from i-mutation is written as  $\acute{e}$ .
- ms. b or  $\acute{b}$ , when representing the voiced bilabial fricative, is written as v.
- ms. th is written as  $\acute{p}$ .
- ms. uu is written as w.

Muspilli

Dating: C9th

Meter: Ancient-words-law

Found in the margins of a single theological manuscript from the 820s, CLM 14098.

The second sound shift is applied consistently. That this was the case at composition is seen by the alliteration between Latin words starting with p- and Germanic words which originally began with b-:

- l. 16: Germanic pú (= OE, ON bú) with borrowed pardísu (< Latin paradisum),
- l. 21: Germanic piutit (= OE biett, ON býðr) with borrowed pebbes (< Latin pix) and pína (< Latin poena),
- l. 25: Germanic prinnan (= OE biernan, ON brinna), palw- (= OE bealu, ON bǫlv-) with borrowed pehbhe (see above).

The Wessobrunner Hymn

Dating: late 700s

Meter: Ancient-words-law

This text can be split into two parts, the poem and the prayer. Following my principle of including sources rather than excluding (TODO: see Introduction), I here present both.

The first part is a short alliterative poem describing the earliest beginning of the world. The poet describes “the greatest of wonders”, namely that the universe began as a void, where neither earth nor heaven existed. In this void was, however, the almighty God, along with his many spirits (presumably the Heavenly Host or the Angels). While the cosmogony expressed is clearly Jewish-Christian rather than Germanic, the poem does contain two word-pairs also found in Norse Heathen stanzas about the creation of the world (see Notes to ll. 2, 3.), which may point toward a repurposing of older Heathen motifs and expressions in the new, Christian context.

The second part is a thoroughly Christian prayer. The author first thanks God for creating the earth and heaven, this is presumably why the poem was included, and for giving good things to mankind. He then asks for faith, strength and wisdom to help him in his mission.

I have learned among men that greatest of wonders, that earth was not nor up-heaven,
nor wood nor mountain was not,
nor any [...]; nor did the sun shine,
nor the moon give off light, nor the glittering sea.
Then there was nothing, neither of limit nor infinity (TODO: Translation),— and then was the One Almighty God:
the Mildest of Men [= Christ], and there were also many with Him:
good ghosts, and Holy God.

2 erdo ... úf-himil ‘earth ... up-heaven’ | A formulaic merism attested across the Germanic world, expressing the totality of the universe. Cf. especially Webth 21, where the god Weden asks the ettin Webthrithner about the origin of “earth and up-heaven”, and Wsp 3/3, where it is said, about the time before the World existed, that “earth and up-heaven” never existed.

3 paum ... perek ‘forest ... mountain’ | The same word-pair is found in Grim 40 describing the creation of the world from Yimer’s body by the Gods, and in Muspell 50 describing the Christian destruction of the world prior to the Judgment.

Encyclopedia (INCOMPLETE!)

NOTE: This encyclopedia is both incomplete and inconsistently formatted. New entries will be added, and old ones be corrected and expanded in the future.

Cultural and religious terms and expressions (C)

- ape (ON api, OE apa, OS apo, OHG affo, PNWGmc. **apó*) In the Old Norse the word seems to mean ‘fool, buffoon’, in the other old languages apparently ‘monkey’, though this sense should be a later development of the former; why would the early Germanic tribes have a word for an animal that they had never encountered?
- aught (ON étt, OE éht ‘possession, property’) The Nordic (paternal) clan or family line.
- begale (OHG bi-galan) To enchant, bewitch something or someone by singing a galder†. Transitive of gale†.
- bigh (ON baugr, OE béag, OHG boug) Armlets used as currency during the Migration Period. — The giving of rings and armlets in exchange for loyalty (holdness† being the word used for a warrior’s loyalty towards his lord, and of a lord’s grace towards his servants) was common across all of Germanic Europe, as seen in the many poetic ruler-kennings of the type “breaker of rings” (e.g. béaga brytta ‘the breaker of bighs’ in Beow ll. 35, 352, 1487). An illustrative example of this is Hild 33–35. This is also connected with the oath-ring, and the famous ring-swords. TODO? reference some literature on this.
- bloot (ON blót, OE blót, OHG bluoz) A sacrifice or a sacrificial feast, one of the best attested Germanic pagan practices. The animals would be sacrificed by the host, cooked in large kettles and eaten communally. See also bloot-house†.
- bloot-house (ON blót-hús, OHG bluoz-hús) A heathen temple. Glosses Latin fānum in OHG. See also harrow†, hove†, wigh†.
- Doom (ON dómr, OE dóm) Commonly ‘judgement, verdict’ (whence Doomsday, ‘Judgement Day’), in the Norse and Anglo-Saxon poetry often specifically referring to one’s fame or good reputation (that is, how others will judge one’s character and deeds), especially after death. It is clear that this verdict was of utmost importance to the ancient Germanic people. The clearest examples are High 77 (see there): I know one that never dies: the Doom o’er each man dead. and Beow 1384–1389, where Beowulf consols king Rothgar after Grendle’s mother has slain his trusted advisor Asher (Æschere): Ne sorga, snotor guma! · Sélre bið ég-bwém, / þæt hé his fréond wrece, · þonne hé fela murne. / Ûre éghwylc sceal · ende ge-bídan / worolde lifes; · wyrce sé þe móte / dómes ér déape; · þæt bið driht-guman / un-lifgendum · æfter sélest. ‘Grieve not, wise man! ’Tis better for each one / that he avenge his friend than that he mourn much. / Each one of us shall suffer the end / of worldly life—win he who might / Doom before death: that is for the warrior, / unliving, afterwards the best.’ Other illustrative examples in Beow include 884b–887a: [...] Sige-munde ge-sprong / æfter déað-dæge · dóm un-lýtel / syððan wíges heard · wrym á-cwealde / hordes hyrde [...] ‘For Syemund† sprang up / after his death-day an unlittle [great] Doom, / since hard in conflict he defeated the wrym†, / the hoard’s herder.’ and 953b–955a: [...] þú þé self hafast / dēdum ge-frēmed · þæt þín dóm lyfað / áwa tó aldre [...] ‘Thou hast for thyself / by deeds accomplished that thy Doom lives / for ever and ever.’
- feather-hame (ON fjǫðr-hamr, OE fēðer-hama, OS fēðar-, fēðer-hamo) A plumage which when donned by the wearer lets him fly like, or become a bird. One is owned by Frow and used by Lock to fly between the homes in Thrim. In the Christian Healend feather-hames are donned by angels who fly from heaven to earth. See also hame†.

- fee (ON fē, OE fēoh) Originally ‘cattle, kine’, however also used in a broader sense to refer to one’s mobile wealth; for that cf. particularly High.
- fey (ON fēigr, OE fēge, OHG fēigi ‘cowardly’) Being doomed or fated to die, with a sense of predestination and inevitability. Its earliest documented Scandinavian use is on the Rök stone: aft uamuþ stanta runar þar + n uarin faþi faþir aft faikiqn sunu Apt Vamōð standa rúnar þár, en Varinn fāði, faðir aft fēigjan sonu ‘After Woemood (Vamōðr) stand these runes†, but Warren (Varinn) painted, the father after the fey son.’ See PCRN HS II:35, p. 928 ff. (TODO)
- feyness (ON fēigð) The state of being fey†.
- fimble- (ON fimbul-) The ultimate, final, greatest. See Fimblethyle†, Fimble-winter†.
- five days (ON fimm dagar) The Old Scandinavian (and perhaps Germanic) week was originally five days long, the seven-day week being a later import, as seen by the names of the days, which are obviously calqued from the Latin (Dies Mercurii = Weden’s day, et.c.). According to the Gole there were six weeks in a month, and “five days” is used as a generic period of time in High 51 and 74; in st. 74 it is contrasted with month. Related to this is the legal term fifþ (ON fimmt, OSw. fæmt), a meeting or gathering set to be held at a five-day notice. See fimt in CV, Love et al. (2020) for further discussion.
- galder (ON galdr, OE gealdor, OHG galdar) A magical song or incantation, probably synonymous with leed†. Verbal noun formed to gale† ‘to sing, chant’.
- gale (ON gala, OE galan, OHG galan) To sing, chant, especially of magical songs; verbal root of galder† ‘something sung, chanted’.
- gand (ON gandr, Latin gandus) A witch’s familiar or foul spirit sent out to do her bidding. See PCRN HS I:17, p. 361 and II:26, p. 656. TODO
- gid (ON gōði, OE Gydda masc. given name) A heathen priest or master of ceremonies.
- gidden (ON gyðja, OE gyden ‘goddess’) The womanly equivalent or wife of a gid†.
- good of meat (ON matar gōðr, gōðr matar) An old formula appearing in High 39 and numerous Swedish Wiking Age Runic inscriptions Sm 39, Sm 44, Sö 130, U 703, and U 805. Cf. U 739 which has the related mildr matar ‘mild of meat’. Antonyms are matar illr ‘evil of meat’ and meat-nothing†.
- guest (ON gestr, OE giest, OS gast, OHG gast, Got. gasts, PGmc. gastiz) Guests were often strangers, wanderers, who would come to beg for food and lodgings. The Old Germanic peoples placed great value on hospitality. TODO.
- hame (ON hamr) A skin, shape. People could “shift hames” (ON skipta hqumum), leaving their human hames behind and instead entering into the shapes of wolves, bears, birds. During this process the original hame, that is, the human body, would be sleeping in a vulnerable state. A concise description of this is found in IngS 7: Óðinn skipti hqumum, lá þá búkr’inn sem sofinn eða dauðr, en hann var þá fugl eða dýr, fiskr eða ormr, ok fór á einni svipstund á fjarlæg lǫnd at sínum erendum eða annarra manna. ‘Weden shifted hames; then lay the trunk of his body as if sleeping or dead, but he was then a fowl or beast, a fish or serpent, and journeyed in a short while to foreign lands with his errands or those of other men.’ See also feather-hame†, town-rideresses†, evening-rideresses†.
- harrow (ON hǫgr, OE bearg, PNWGmc. **barugar*) A hallowed cairn or stone-heap. Hind 10 describes the construction of one. The Norwegian laws prescribe the “breaking of harrows and burning of hoves”. See also hove†, wigh†.

hold (ON hollr, OE hold, OS bold, OHG bold) ‘Favourable, loyal, gracious’, often of a ruler towards his subject (in the sense of ‘gracious, benevolent’) or vice-versa (in the sense of ‘loyal, devoted’). Mirroring these earthly relationships, it is often used to refer to divine grace, both of the Christian God—thus in the Ecclesiastical Laws of King Cnut ALIE I (p. 372): þam byþ witod-líce God hold, þe bið his bláforde rihtlíce hold ‘Indeed God is hold towards him who is rightly hold to his lord’—but in the oldest Scandinavian material likewise of the Heathen gods. Thus Lock 4 (e.): holl regin ‘hold Reins’, and Ordr 10 (e.):

Svá hjalpi þér · hollar véttir,

This word is common in old Scandinavian oath formulæ, e.g. in the elder redaction of the West-Geatish Law: Svá sé mér goð holl ‘So may the Gods(!) be hold towards me,’ in medieval Norwegian laws (NgL II[197,397]) and Grey-Goose (TODO: cite): Guð sé mér hollr ef ek satt segi, gramr ef ek lýg ‘God be hold towards me if I speak truly, wroth if I lie,’ in Grey-Goose (TODO) also: Sé guð hollr þeim er heldr gríðum, en gramr þeim er gríð rýfr ‘God be hold towards him who keeps the truce, but wroth against him who breaks the truce’. I refer to Löffler (1895) for further discussion on these formulæ.

holdness (ON hylli, OE hyldu, OHG buldi) Abstract noun formed to hold†, meaning ‘favour, loyalty, grace,’ with the same semantics as the adjective.

Notably, this word appears three times in connection with the grace of gods in the poetry, namely in Grim 43, where (according to my interpretation) the preparer of food at the blót is said to earn the “holdness of Woulder† and of all the gods;” and Grim 53 where the disgraced king Garfrith is said to have been bereft of the support gengi of Weden and all the Oneharriers, and of “Weden’s holdness” (Óðins hylli). “Weden’s holdness” is also mentioned in a stanza by Hallfred (edited as Hfr Lv 7 by Diana Whaley in SkP V), who laments that: “The whole race of man has wrought songs to win the holdness of Weden; I recall the fully rewarded works of our kinsmen/ancestors.”

From the semantics of this word the Germanic view on heavenly grace is clear: the Gods are hold towards those who do good works, which include swearing true oaths, faithfully observing truces, partaking in the blót, following rules of hospitality, and composing poetry—and gram† ‘wroth’ towards those who do the opposite.

Home (ON heimr, OE hām, PNWGmc. **haimar*) In the Norse often referring to a realm in the cosmology (Wsp 2: “I remember nine Homes”, Webth TODO: “From the runes of the Ettins† and of all the gods I can speak truly, for I have come into each Home”). Thus Ettinham† is the ‘Home/realm of the ettins’. When used on its own it means ‘the world (that we inhabit)’. See also Nine Homes†, Thrithham†.

leat (ON blaut) In some saws explained as the blood drained from the offered animal; the verbal root is hljóta ‘to get by lot’ and this word certainly refers to the use of the blood for auguries.

leat-twíg (ON blaut-tęinn) A twig used to sprinkle the leat†. The pattern of the blood would presumably be inspected for the augury; cf. Hyme 1.

manwit (ON man-vit) Common sense and wits.

many-cunning (ON ffjöl-kunnigr) Skilled with sorcery or the dark arts.

meat-níthing (ON mat-niðingr) One who is a níthing† with food, i.e. one who does not properly furnish his guest†.

See also good of meat†.

- thyle (ON þulr, OE þyle, PNWGmc. **þulir*) A sage who through rote learning has acquired a large amount of mythological lore (cf. thule† ‘a list in poetic form; a ditty, bad poem’ and thill† ‘to recite, to chant’). Thus Weden† is the Fimblethyle†, being the unbeaten master of lore, as can be seen in his wisdom contests (like Webth). Runic inscription DR 248 (Snoldelev) suggests that the thyle may have tied to a specific place, and in Beow it seems to have been a court position, with the poet Unferth being described (l. 1456) as the “Rothgar’s thyle”.
- wale (ON vǫlr) The staff or sceptre of a wallow†. TODO: archeological finds, mention Sutton Hoo.
- wallow (ON vǫlva, OE **wealwe* (cf. ON svǫlva, OE swealwe ‘swallow’)) A sibyl, seeress, oracle. The word derives from the wale†, a staff or sceptre probably used for ritual purposes.
- wigh (ON vé, OE wéob, wíh, PNWGmc. **wīhą*) A holy place or sanctuary. It seems that where the harrow† was a pile of stones or cairn used for carrying out rituals, the wigh was an enclosed space. The earliest Norse attestation is the runic inscription Ög N288 (Oklunda), which reads: “Guthur <= Gunnarr> painted these runes, and he fled, charged (with a crime, sought out this wigh, and he fled into this clearing. [...]” The implication seems to be that the wigh was considered so sacred that Guthur could not be apprehended or punished for his crime while in it.
- In OE the word means ‘pagan idol’. It is not immediately clear which meaning is the original one, but in the present edition the Norse sense has been adopted, since the Anglo-Saxon sources are all of a Christian nature. The name Wighstone (Wíh- or Wéobstān) as found in Beow in any case suggests it is the Norse meaning, since ‘idol-stone’ makes little sense.
- wode (ON óðr, OE wód, PNWGmc. **wódur*) Heener†’s gift to men, though the name may suggest it be from Weden†. The word has several related meanings: ‘mind, (poetic) inspiration, rage’. See also Woderearer†.
- wyrm (ON ormr, OE wyrm, PNWGmc. **wurmīr*) A dragon, serpent. The distinction between “wyrm” and “worm; snake” is purely editorial and not made in the original languages.
- yin- (ON ginn-) A rare augmentative prefix. TODO.
- yin-holy (ON ginn-heilagr) High holy, sacrosanct. Used of the Gods in the formula ginn-heilög goð ‘yin-holy Gods’.

Persons and objects (P)

- Balder (ON Baldr, OE Bældæg (not directly cognate), OHG Balter, PWGmc. **Baldrar*) The beautiful son of Weden†, slayed by his brother Hath†, avenged by his other brother Wönnel†. Husband of Nan†.
- Beadhild (ON Bǫðvildr, OE Beadobild) The daughter of the tyrannical king Nithad†. She is raped by her father’s prisoner, Wayland†.
- Earp and Oatle (ON Erpr ok Æitill) The sons of Attle† and Guthrun†.
- Earth (ON jörð, OE eorþe, OHG erda, PNWGmc. **erþu*, PGmc. **erþō*) The personified Earth. By Weden† the mother of Thunder†.
- Erminric (ON Jǫrmunrekr, OE Eormanric, MHG Ermenrich) Legendary king of the eastern Gots†, based on the historical Ermanaric, who died in 376. TODO: Jordanes.

- Fathomer (ON Fáfnir) The son of Rethmar†, brother of Otter† and Rein†. He turns into a great wyrm† and is eventually slain by Siward†, who takes his treasure.
- Fimblethyle (ON Fimbulþulr) The ‘ultimate thyle’† or sage; name for Weden†.
- Foresitter (ON Forseti) An obscure god associated with legal disputes. TODO.
- Free (ON Frēyr, OE frēa ‘lord’, PNWGmc. **Frawjar*) Son of Nearth†, brother of Frow†. See also Ing†.
- Frie (ON Frigg, OE **Frige*, OHG Frija, PNWGmc. **Frijju*) Wife of Weden†, mother of Balder†. Related to Full†, who is either her sister (Second Merseburg Charm, though this may be metaphorical, as in Hind 1) or her maid-servant (the Norse sources).
- Frow (ON Frēyja) Cat-goddess, daughter of Nearth†, sister of Free†, wife of Wode†. Promised to the Ettin. Possibly = Easter?
- Full (ON Fulla, OHG Folla) Maid-servant (or sister?) of Frie†; see there.
- Guther (ON Gunnarr, MHG Gunther) Brother of Hain†.
- Guthrun (ON Guðrún) Daughter of king Yivick†, sister of Guther† and Hain†. The wife of Attle†.
- Hain [Hain 1] (ON Hogni, OE Haguna, Hagena, OHG Hagano, Ger. Hagen, PNWGmc. **Hagunó*) A Nivling† and Yivicking†, son of king Yivick†, brother of Guther† and Guthrun†. In Attl he defeats seven warriors before being captured by Attle†, who has his heart cut out at the request of Guther.
- Hain 2 [2] A petty king of East Geatland†, contemporary with Granmer†, the king of Southmanland† and Ingeld Illred, the Ingling† king of Upland†.
- Hath (ON Hǫðr) The blind son of Weden†, the slayer of his brother Balder†.
- Heener (ON Hœnir, PNWGmc. Hónijar ‘the little swan(?)’) An obscure god. Rydberg (1886)[552] has convincingly argued that he is connected with the stork, connecting his name with the Greek κύκνος ‘swan’ and Sanskrit śakuna ‘bird of omen’, and noting that his epithets langi fōtr ‘long foot’ and aurkonungr ‘mud-king’ (both found in Scold 22) accurately describe the stork. He gives wode† TODO.
- Hell (ON Hell) Owneress of Hell†.
- Hindle (ON Hyndla) A witch awoken by Frow† in Hind.
- Homedal (ON Hœimdallr, OE **Hámdall*) The Watchman of the gods, whitest of the Eese†.
- Hymer (ON Hymir) Tew†’s father according to Hyme.
- Ing (ON Yngvi, OE Ing) Probably an older name of Free†. The legendary ancestor of the Ingling†. Cf. the Old English Rune Poem.
- Life and Lifethrasher (ON Líf ok Líf-þrasir) The only surviving humans after the Rakes of the Reins†.
- Lock (ON Loki) The bound Os. TODO.
- Lothar (ON Lóðurr, OS Logapōre, PNWGmc. **Logapōrjar* ‘Flame-darer(?)’) Gives three gifts to man. The Old Saxon attestation is uncertain.
- Millner (ON Mjöllnir, OE **Meldne*, PNWGmc. **Meldunjar*) The hammer of Thunder†.
- Moon (ON Máni) The personified moon. Son of Mundlfare† and brother of the Sun† (Webth 23). For ritual invocations of the Moon see Note to High TODO (beiptum kveða).
- Mundlfare (ON Mundilfari) The father of Sun† and Moon† (Webth 23).
- Nearth (ON Njǫrðr) One of the Waness†. Father of Free† and Frow†.

- Nithad (ON Niðuðr, OE Níþbad, PNWGmc. **Niþa-baduz*) The king that imprisoned Wayland†, father of Beadhild† and two unnamed sons (Wayl, Deer).
- Oughter (ON Óttarr, OE Óðthere, PNWGmc. **Óhta-barjar*) Legendary Swedish king.
- Reading (ON Hrauðungr) A king in the prologue to Grim.
- Rotholf (ON Hrólfr kraki, OE Hrǫpulf, PNWGmc. **Hrǫpi-wulfar*) A king of the Shieldings† (see family tree). As foreshadowed in Beow 1017–9, 1180–90, he betrays the sons of Rothgar†, his cousins Rethrich and Rothmund†, in order to take the throne for himself. In the later Icelandic tradition this has been forgotten, and he is consistently portrayed as a heroic king.
- Rothgar (ON Hróarr, OE Hrǫpgár, PNWGmc. **Hrǫpi-gairar*) A king of the Shieldings† (see family tree), one of the main characters in Beow.
- Shede (ON Skadi, OE Scede(?), PGmc. **Skadi*) A female figure, possibly the namesake of Shedeny† and the Shedelands†, in which case she was in an early period closely associated with, and perhaps thought to guard, the Scandinavian (or properly Scadinavian, see Shedeny) peninsula. In the Norse tradition the daughter of Thedse†, and later wife of Nearth†. Their marriage is the subject of Yilv which preserves.
- Shield (ON Skjǫldr, OE Scyld, PNWGmc. **Skelduz*) Legendary Danish king, founder of the Shieldings†.
- Sithguth (OHG Sinthgunt, PNWGmc. **Sinþa-gunþir*(?)) Only known from Mers II as the sister of Sun†.
- Siward (ON Sigurðr) A hero of the Walsings†, slayer of the wyrm† Fathomer†.
- Sun (ON Sól, OHG Sunna) The personified Sun, who in the Germanic mythology is a woman. In Webth 22 the daughter of Mundlefare† and sister of Moon†. In Mers II the sister of Sithguth†.
- Thedse (ON Þjatsi) An ettin slain by the Gods; his myth is told at length in Hvl. Father of Shede†.
- Thrim (ON Þrymr) Ettin who steals Thunder's hammer in Thrim and is later killed.
- Thunder (ON Þórr, OE Þunor, OHG Donar, PNWGmc. **Þonarar*) Son of Weden† and Earth†. Friend of men, guarding of Middenyard.
- Tew (ON Týr, OE Tīw) Son of Hymer†. One-handed god. The name is not identical to Sanskrit Dyāus, Greek Zeus, Latin Iuppiter.
- Wayland (ON Vǫlundr, OE Weland, Wélund) A legendary smith captured by the tyrannical king Nithad†. In both the Norse Wayl and English Deer he takes his revenge by first killing Nithad's unnamed sons and then raping his daughter Beadhild†. In the Norse version he is married to Harware Elwright†.
- Webthritner (ON Vafþrúðnir) An Ettin defeated by Weden in the wisdom contest in Webth.
- Weden (rhymes with leaden; ON Óðinn, OE Wóden, Wéden, OHG Wuotan, PNWGmc. **Wóðanar* 'Lord of wode† (poetry, intelligence)') Chief of the Eese†, God of Wisdom, Galder, Poetry, War. Husband of Frie†, and by her father of Balder†. Father of Thunder† by Earth†. Brother of Heener† and Lothar† or Will† and Wigh†.
- Wider (ON Víð-arr, OE **Wid-here*, PNWGmc. **Wida-barjar*) Son of Weden†, who avenges him at the Rakes of the Reins†.

- Wigh (ON Vei, PNWGmc. **Wibā* ‘hallower, (heathen) priest’) Brother of Weden† and Will†.
- Will (ON Vili, PNWGmc. **Wiljā*) Brother of Weden† and Wigh†.
- Wode (ON Óðr, OE Wód) Obscure husband of Frow†. His name looks to be the same word as wode†.
- Wonnel (ON Váli, OE **Wonela*, PNWGmc. **Wanilō* ‘the little Wane†?’) Son of Weden†, who just one night old avenges his brother Balder† through slaying Hath†, his half-brother.
- Woulder (ON Ullr, **Wuldor*, PNWGmc. **Wulþuz*) A rather obscure god. He is mentioned in connection with oath-rings (TODO) and the setting of ritual fires (Grim TODO). These obscure references are likely related to the interesting finds at Lilla Ullevi (‘the small wigh† of Woulder’) in Upland, Sweden, consisting of several dozen fire striker-shaped iron amulet rings dating to 660–780 (for a detailed description see (af Edholm, 2009)).
- Yimer (ON Ymir, OE **Yime*) The primeval ancestor of the Ettins†, probably equivalent to Earylmer†. The first Gods slew Yimer and arranged the world out of his corpse.
- Yivick (ON Gjúki, OE Gifca, OHG Gibicho, MHG. Gibeche) King of the Burgends† (historically from late 300s–407) of the Nifling dynasty, ancestor of the Yivickings†. Father of Guthrun†, Guthur† and Hain†.

Groups and tribes (G)

TODO: Map of rough tribal areas. Genealogies.

- All Gods (ON öll goð) Occurs especially in ritual or ritual-adjacent use (Grim 43, Lock 11; cf. HathSp 18, where the piety of the dead king Hathkin is shown by his being greeted by rþð öll ok rggin ‘all the Redes and Reins†’, and the prayer in Syed 2–3, which collectively invokes the Eese† and Ossens†). This suggests a native Germanic conception of Godly Oneness (Divine Unity); see also the Thing of the Gods†, where the Gods convene and together steer the world.

Similar expressions are found in other pre-Abrahamic religions, e.g. the Vedic viṣve devāḥ ‘All Gods’, to Whom are dedicated numerous hymns of ṚV, and the Greek Πάν·θειον, that is, a temple dedicated to All Gods.

The idea of Godly Oneness may have been disputed; an interesting anecdote is given by Saxo (i.7.2). After Weden departs he is usurped by an obscure figure Mithothin (perhaps “With-Weden”), who reforms the cult:

Cuius secessu Mithothyn quidam prestigiis celebrer, perinde ac celesti beneficio vegetatus, occasionem et ipse fingende divinitatis arripuit barbarasque mentes novis erroris tenebris circumfusas prestigiarum fama ad cerimonias suo nomini persolvendas adduxit. Hic deorum iram aut numinum violationem confusis permixtisque sacrificiis expiari negabat ideoque eis vota communiter nuncupari prohibebat, discreta superum cuique libamenta constituens. Qui cum Othino redeunte relicta prestigiarum ope latendi gratia Pheoniam accessisset, concursu incolarum occiditur.

‘A certain Mithodin, a famous illusionist, was animated at his departure as if by a kindness from heaven and snatched the chance to pretend divinity himself; his reputation for magicianship clouded the barbarians’ minds with the murk of a new superstition and led them to perform holy rites to his name. He asserted that the gods’ wrath and the profanation of their divine authority could not be expiated by confused and mingled sacrifices; so he arranged that they must not be prayed to as a group, but separate offerings (libamenta) be made to each deity. When Odin returned, the other no longer resorted to his conjuring but went off to hide in Funen, where he was rushed upon and killed by the inhabitants.’

It is possible that this account reflects an historical attempted religious reform. It does not appear to have been successful.

- Danes (ON danir, OE dene, PNWGmc. **danír*) A tribe in eastern modern-day Denmark and southern Sweden. They probably originated in Scania in southern Sweden, before moving westwards into the Danish isles and eventually Jutland, driving out the Earls† and Jutes†. Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO
- Dwarfs (ON dvergar, OE dweorgas, OHG twerca, PNWGmc. **dwerǵor*) Earthly (chthonic) supernatural beings, often referred to as living in rocks and mountains. Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO
- Eese (rhyming with geese; ON ésir, OE ése, PNWGmc. **ansiwir*; sg. os, ON óss, OE ós, PNWGmc. **ansur*) The (male) gods. Snorre has them as a separate tribe from the Wanes†. See also Gods†, Tews†, Reins†. Noted members: Weden†, Thunder†, Frie†, Hath† and Balder† Attestations: TODO
- Elves (ON alfar, OE ielfe, PNWGmc. **alþír*) Earthly (chthonic) minor deities. Possibly ancestral spirits? Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO
- Ettins (ON jotnar, OE eotenas, PNWGmc. **etunór*) The fundamental enemies of the Gods, the agents of chaos and disorder. See Rises†, Thurses†. Noted members: Hymer†, Thrim†, Webthrihner†, Yimer† Attestations: TODO
- Geats (ON gautar, OE géatas, PNWGmc. **gautór* from **geut-* ‘to pour’, perhaps ‘the libators’) A tribe in what is today southern-central Sweden. See also Geatland†, Swedes†. Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO
- yin-Reins (ON ginn-rgin) yin-† + Reins†. The sacrosanct, highest Divine Powers.
- Gods (ON goð, OE godu, OHG gota, PNWGmc. **godu*) TODO. Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO
- Huns (ON búnir, OE Húne, OHG Húni, Hunni, PNWGmc. **búnír*) An invading Asiatic tribe in the Migration Period. In the Scandinavian legends they have been assimilated into the Germanic framework, and are not presented as racially or culturally distinct. Noted members: Attle†, TODO Attestations: TODO
- Inglings (ON ynlingar, PNWGmc. **ingwalingór* ‘the descendants of Ing†’) The oldest known Swedish kingly lineage. The difference between this term and Shelvings† is a bit unclear; Beow knows them only by the latter term, while they seem to be used synonymously in the Norse sources.
- Nears (ON njárar - níarar) An old Swedish tribe mentioned in Wáyl, where it is ruled by king Nithad†. The location may allow us to connect them with the Swedish province of Närke, cf. Old Swedish Nærikjar ‘inhabitants of Närke’, Nærisker ‘belonging to Närke’. The Old Swedish stem nær- (with unclear vowel length, though it is probably long) would then be a reduced form of níar-, njár-.
- Norns (ON nornir) Supernatural women responsible for the fates (orlay†s) of men. Probably synonymous with Dises†, Mothers†.
- Ossens (ON ósynjur) The wives of the Eese†, the goddesses.
- Oneharriers (ON ein-herjar, OE **án-hergas*) Weden’s chosen warriors, probably corresponding to the Vedic Maruts. The Ownharriers have some agency (Grim TODO) and were probably also invoked in rituals. Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO
- Reins (ON rogn, rgin) The heavenly powers. Judging from Webth TODO the term may be more closely associated with the Wanes† than the Eese†.

- Saxons (ON saxar, OE Seaxan, Seaxe) TODO. Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO
- Shieldings (ON skjöldungar, OE Scyldingas, PNWGmc. **skeldungóR*) The descendants of Shield†; the legendary Danish† royal dynasty. With Harward†'s death after his slaying of Rotholf† their rule ended. TODO Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO
- Shelvings (ON skilfingar, OE scilfingas, PNWGmc. **skilþingóR*) The descendants of Shelf†; the legendary Swedish† royal dynasty. The exact difference between the terms Shelvings and Inglings† is unclear, but the first may have referred to the old royal family in Sweden, while the latter to the Norwegian branch which claimed descent from the former. TODO Noted members: TODO Attestations: Hind 15, 20
- Swedes (ON sviár, OE swéon, PNWGmc. **swihanir*) The tribe around the Mälar valley in eastern Sweden. Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO
- Thurses (sg. Thurse; ON þurs, OE þyrs, OS thuris, OHG duris, PNWGmc. **þurisar*) Possibly a poetic synonym for Ettins†. See also Rime-Thurses†. Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO
- Tews (ON tívar, PNWGmc. **tíwóR*) A poetic synonym for Gods†. Attestations: TODO
- Walsings (ON vǫlsungar) The descendants of king Walsing†.
- Wanes (ON vanir, OE wan-?) A subgroup or tribe of the gods, associated with fertility, harvests and the sea. Noted members: Nearth†, Free†, Frow† Attestations: TODO
- Yivickings (ON gjúkungar) The descendants of Yivick†, including Guthur†, Guthrun† and Hain†. Attestations: TODO

Places and events (L)

- Eastern Way (ON Austr-vegr) In the mythology the eastern lands of the Ettins†, to which Thunder† goes to fight the Ettins and protect the realms of Gods and men. Probably the same as Ettinham†. In Scandinavian (especially Swedish) runic inscriptions this word refers to Eastern Europe and Asia.
- Ettinham (ON Jǫtun-heimr, Jǫtna-heimar) The 'Ettin†-Home†' or 'home of the Ettins'; the eastern realm of chaotic and inhospitable beings. See also Eastern Way†, Outyards†.
- Fimble-winter (ON fimbulvetr) The great winter, which kills all humans apart from Life and Lifethrasher†.
- Geatland (ON Gaut-land, Gauta-land) The land of the Geats†.
- Hell (ON hēl, PNWGmc. **halju*, Got. halja) The Underworld, personified as and formally identical to Hell†. After the arrival of Christianity the word came to refer to the Christian hell-fire (= Gehenna), which is the case in all attested languages apart from the Old Norse. See also Nivelhell†.
- Middenyard (ON Mið-garðr, OE Middan-geard, OS Middil-gard, OHG Mittil-gart, Got. midjun-gards) The 'Middle Enclosure'; the realm of men. See also Otyard†, Outyards†.
- Nivelhell (ON nifl-hēl) 'Mist-Hell'. From the poetic evidence it seems like it may originally have been a synonym for Hell†.
- Otyard (ON Ós-garðr) The 'Enclosure of the Eese†'; the heavenly realm. See also Middenyard†, Outyards†.
- Outyards (ON Út-garðar) Not Eddic. The 'Outer Enclosures', described in Yilv. See also Ettinham†, Middenyard†, Otyard†.

Rakes of the Reins (ON ragna røk) The ‘judgments, fated events of the Reins’†, namely the destruction of the world as narrated most completely in Wsp.

Rakes of the Tews (ON tíva røk) See Rakes of the Reins†.

Thing of the Gods (ON þing goða) The Divine Council or Assembly, where the Gods convene and make decisions; a conception well known from Near Eastern literature. Like the historical Germanic assemblies, the Thing is only attended by the male Eese†, whereas the Ossens† are á máli ‘at speech’ (Bldr 1, Thrim 14). The Thing is held every day at Ugdrassle’s Ash†; Thunder wades to it, and the other Eese ride to it (Grim 29–30). Thirteen Gods were present at the Thing: Weden†, Thunder†, Nearth†, Free†, Tew†, Homedal†, Bray†, Wider†, Wonnell†, Woulder†, Heener†, Foresitter†, Lock†) (Yilv TODO). With Lock excluded this makes twelve, which corresponds to the Old Germanic jury of twelve men.

The Germanic Thing of the Gods has Near Eastern equivalents, including in the Hebrew Bible. TODO.

Occurrences: Wsp 6, 9, etc; Bldr 1; Grim 29–30; Thrim 14; Hyme 39.

Ugdrassle’s Ash (ON askr Yggdrasils) The noblest tree; the site of the Thing of the Gods†.

Up-heaven (ON upp-biminn, OE up-beofon, OS upp-bimil, OHG úf-bimil) Highest Heaven; used in Earth and Up-heaven†.

Walhall (ON Valhöll, OE Wælheall) The Hall of the Slain owned by Weden† and inhabited by the Oneharriers†.

Poetic formulæ (F)

All formulæ are given in English translation, their attested forms and a Proto-Germanic rendition. For those consisting of two words bound together by a conjunction, & is written in its place.

Earth and Up-heaven (ON jörð & uppbiminn, OE eorpe & upbeofon, PGmc. **erþō & upbiminaz*) An ancient poetic merism, i.e. “the whole world, cosmos”. It has a particular connection to the creation and destruction of the world, and in prayers. ON: Wsp 3/3, Weibth 20, Thrim 2, DR EM85;493 (under Galders), Sö 154 (under Miscellaneous Runic Poetry), Ordr 17; OE: Acreboot; OS: Healend 2886; OHG: Wessobrunner Hymn 2.

Eese and Elves (ON ésir & alfar, OE ése & ielfe, PNWGmc. **alþír & ansiwīr*) A merism; both heavenly and earthly spiritual beings. Notably the two words always occur in this order (never ‘Elves and Eese’), even in OE.

words and works (ON orð & verk, OE word & weorc, PGmc. **wurdó & werkó*) Beow 289, 1100, 1833
