Germanic alliterative poetry

Historical significance

The historical-literary significance of the Old Germanic poetry is twofold. On the one hand it forms the oldest extensive monuments in its respective languages, and indeed the earliest indigenous Germanic literature (the Gothic being wholly derivative and translational). It lays the ground for the Nibelungenlied and Chaucer, who in turn precede such famous writers as Shakespeare and Wagner. It forms the first and most important source of our knowledge about the ancient folk-life of Northern Europe.

On the other hand it is by no means an innovative or newly created genre. Already, and perhaps especially, in our oldest sources the language is rich with expressions and images, many of great antiquity: "sea-stallions" sail across the ocean; the sun is drawn across Heaven in her chariot; feasts are held in great chiefly halls. These motifs are very ancient—they are found in the archeology of the Nordic Bronze Age and in the lines of RV and Homer.

The language likewise overflows with archaic poetic synonyms. Indo-European words otherwise extinct in all Germanic languages find their last refuge in the alliterative poetry. Such are the Old English eoh, Old Norse jór, corresponding to the Sanskrit áśva, Latin equus, all meaning ‘horse’; Old Norse týr, corresponding to Sanskrit devá, Latin deus, all meaning ‘god’; Old English and Old Norse fold ‘earth, land’, corresponding to Sanskrit pr̥thivī ‘id.’ The fact that many of these relate to the cult also suggests that the Germanic religion was not as innovative as is commonly supposed.

The organizing poetic principle of alliteration must also have been in effect for some time. Even the earliest scalds and scops have dozens of synonyms for words like man, sword, horse, and hall. Needless to say, many of them—like jór above—are very old, and only found in poetry.

Meter(s)

The Old Germanic poetry has two primary structural elements: stress and alliteration. The exact count of syllables is less important, and end-rhyme is only used as a sporadic flourish.

Stress

When scanning alliterative meter each syllable is generally classed as having either primary stress (p), secondary stress (s), or no stress (x).

Primary stress is reserved for the root syllable in a word, which is not always the same as the first syllable. Compare the English word beginning, where the stress pattern is xPx; the primary stress falls on the syllable ginn-.

Secondary stress falls on the second element in a compound word.

Not all words have the same stress; the general rule is that nouns and adjectives have stronger stress than verbs, which in turn have stronger stress than prepositions and pronouns. Where exceptions occur this coincides with semantic stress, e.g. in a statement like “It was you!”

Alliteration

The following rules describe Germanic alliteration:

1. Alliteration is the resonance between two stressed syllables beginning with the same “sound”, e.g. sand with *re*ceive, or *g*reat with *be*gin.
2. Any vowel or diphthong can alliterate with any other vowel or diphthong.
3. s and the clusters sk, sp and st are counted as four distinct “sounds”.

Further, in West Germanic poetry,

4. g and j are treated as the same sound.

In the present edition alliterating sounds are marked with red font.

Lines

Most alliterative poetry is written in the same common meter, which in Old Icelandic poetics gets the name fornyrðislag ‘measure of ancient words’. The smallest metrical division is the position, a concept related but not identical to the syllable. For instance, two short syllables (that is, one where a short vowel is followed by a single consonant) can resolve into a single position.

Four positions—two stressed, two unstressed—make up the normal half-line or verse. Two half-lines separated by a short break or cæsura (here represented by the interpunct “.”) form a couplet or long-line. The first half-line (or a-verse) may have either one or two alliterations on the stressed positions, with preference for the first position over the second. The second half-line (or b-verse) must always have an alliteration on its first stressed position; never on its second.

In the present edition each long-line is printed on a new line. This is already standard for the publication of West Germanic poetry, whereas many editions of Scandinavian poetry print each half-line.

Fits and stanzas

Bigger structures are fits and stanzas. The former are found in the Old Saxon and English traditions, the latter only in the Scandinavian.

A fit is a section or canto in a longer epic poem. It does not have a fixed length, but is generally around 70–85 lines long. Thus the 3182-line Beow is divided into 44 fits (for an average of 72 lines per fit); the surviving 5983 lines of Heli are divided into 71 (for an average of 84 lines per fit). It is probably not a coincidence that the length of the fit is similar to the length of shorter legendary poems like Guðr I or Hildebrand. In Heli a new fit can begin in the cæsura; this does not happen in Beow.

In Scandinavian poetry a stanza is a group of long-lines, typically (but far from always) four. The regularity of stanza-length varies from poem to poem.

The present corpus

The scope of the present corpus is large, and encompasses most of the alliterative poetry extant in Old Germanic languages. The poetry is divided into the following categories:

1. Norse Mythic poetry, i.e., that which directly treats the Germanic mythology. This category is exclusively Norse for the simple reason that no West Germanic or Gothic mythic narrative poetry survive.
2. Norse Heroic poetry, specifically the whole second half of the Codex Regius and then a few other works. With a few exceptions, subject matter outside of the Walsing cycle is not included.
3. West Germanic Heroic Poetry in Old English, Old Saxon, and Old High German.
4. Poetry on Christian subjects. This category includes explicitly Christian poems where the new religion or its mythology is at the core of the work. Christian heroic poems depicting native legends, like Beow and Hildebrand, are not included.
5. Galders, i.e., alliterative spells and charms, both from runic inscriptions and medieval manuscripts.
6. Miscellaneous runic poetry, apart from that already edited under Galders above.

Exclusions

All Norse Scaldic poetry is excluded, as is the Eddic poetry found in the saws of Icelanders and of ancient ages (forð-aldar-sögur) which does not directly relate to the Walsing cycle. These two categories have already been admirably rendered in the SkP series. It would also require a somewhat different approach in terms of how it is presented, since the underlying poetry is often impossible to take out of its prose context. Further, when it comes to the Eddic poetry it is sometimes doubtful whether it ever existed on its own, or has belonged with prose from the start. Basically, I think it would be more conscientious to edit the whole saws as prosimetra, an undertaking which naturally falls outside of the scope of the present edition.

Manuscripts

See the introduction to each category.

Old English poetry

The edited Old English poetry primarily derives from a few manuscripts. Particularly important are the Exeter Book and Lacning.

Old Saxon and High German poetry

There are no collections of alliterative poetry in these languages; instead the manuscript situation will be discussed in the Introduction to each individual text.

The present edition

The present edition is divided into two equally large parts, presented side by side. Each stanza or group of verse lines is presented first in the original Old Germanic language, and then in English translation.

The Old Germanic text

In the present edition are found texts in four Old Germanic languages: Old Norse, Old English, Old Saxon, and Old High German. All texts have been normalized according to my own standardised orthography for the respective languages. The orthographies are all designed to follow three core principles:

1. A faithfulness to the spoken language at the time when the texts were written, and the distinctions demonstrably found therein.
2. A respect for the etymological origin of words, and their distinctions.
3. A striving for a uniform orthography across the various languages, so that the same etymological sound should be written with the same character.

These choices often stand in conflict with the orthography of the original manuscripts and with most earlier philological tradition, whence there is some reason to justify them. My goal is to render the texts themselves in a manner that gives as much philological information to the reader as possible—not to present a facsimile edition for students of paleography. This follows the philological methods used for printing e.g. the RV, which is generally printed in an entirely scholarly latinized orthography, not the original Devanāgarī. Regardless, such important traits of the original manuscript tradition as the long f, arbitrary punctuation, arbitrary spelling, and lack of line breaks, are seldom reproduced in modern editions of Old Germanic poetry.

General orthographic conventions

The following orthographic conventions are followed for all Old Germanic languages:

1. The voiceless dental fricative is always written with the letter þ, never th.
2. Long vowels are marked with the acute accent, never the macron or circumflex, excepting
3. those which have their origin in earlier diphthongs, which are written with the circumflex.
4. In compounds where the first element has primary stress the elements are separated with a dash,

5. but where the first element is a preposition they are separated with an interpunct.

Below follow specifications for each specific language.

Normalization of Old Norse

My Old Norse orthography is inspired by Finnur Jónsson (1932) in that it strives for a more archaic form than that of the surviving mss.; a form that instead represents the poetry as it may (in many cases, must) originally have looked. For this reason, it often has more in common with the proposed orthography of the First Grammatical Treatise than with the standard Old Icelandic orthography seen in most editions. The following list describes the differences from the standard Old Icelandic orthography:

1. I distinguish short e (from etymological short e) and short ē (from etymological short a + i-umlaut).
2. I distinguish long á and ǫ, as done by the First Grammatical Treatise.
3. I use ó and ē rather than the traditional œ and æ, to represent the vowels descended from Proto-Norse ō and ā after i-umlaut (cf. the short ø, ē < o, a + i-umlaut).
4. I distinguish long nasal vowels ā, ē, ī, ō, ú from long oral á, é, í, ó, ú, as done in the First Grammatical Treatise.
5. I restore the old s—which in modern Scandinavian and even in most Old Norse manuscripts has become r, but which is found consistently in old manuscripts such as AM 237 a fol (c. 1150), and fossilized in forms like þaz (i.e. þat's) in R—in the words es ‘which, that, where, when’, and in inflections of vesa (later vera) such as es ‘is’ (3rd sg. pres. ind.) and vas (3rd sg. pret. ind.). The following forms retain the r, as it is there the result of Verner’s law, and not of this (much younger) sound change: the pl. pres. ind. (erum etc.), the pl. pret. ind. (vǫrum etc.), and the pl. pret. subj. (vǫrim etc.)
6. When metrically benefactorly, I contract ek ‘I’, eru ‘are’, and es ‘which; is’ to ’k, ’ru and ’s, respectively.
7. I use Finnur Jónsson (1932)’s way of distinguishing between the relative particle es and the verb es: the first is appended to the previous word with only an apostrophe (e.g. hann’s ‘he who’), while the second is separated by a space (e.g. hann ’s ‘he is’).

Normalization of Old Swedish and Danish

I employ the same conventions as those described for Old Norse above, including the marking of u-mutated a > ø (that this was indeed found in the Eastern Nordic dialects is most clearly seen by the third-person personal pronoun, which shows u-mutation in such forms as Swedish bonom ‘him’ < hōnum, bon ‘she’ < hōn).

According to rule 3 in the general orthographic conventions above, I distinguish between ó (< ō) and ô (< au, ey); é (< ē) and ê (< ei).

Where unstressed vowels have been reduced into an schwa-like sound spelled e, this is written with ē.

Normalization of Old English

I spell fronted or brightened etymological a and á with æ and ǣ, for instance in dæg ‘day’ (< dagar*) and rǣd ‘advice, counsel’ (< rádar). These are contrasted with ē and é, which represent i-mutated a and á, e.g. in ellen ‘zeal, courage’ (< aljanā*).

An assimilated n is marked with an overpoint, like in rule 3 of Old Norse above.

Normalization of Old Saxon

Normalization of Old High German

The English translation

There is now a very large number of translations of the most popular alliterative poetic texts, namely Beow and the Poetic Edda. These generally fall into two camps:

1. poetic translations, which distort the precise meaning of the text for the sake of meter, often quite radically; and
2. prose translations, which nowise preserve the style or feeling of the original.

Almost all translations, of both types, also tend toward the following inadequacies: obscuring or glossing over difficult technical and cultural terminology; rendering identically repeated phrases and words (formulae) differently at various places; and simplifying or rewriting kennings and other poetic expressions. Even worse this is often done with little in the way of notes or commentary, to a point where the reader is sometimes left entirely oblivious to the sense of the original text.

What sets my translation apart from previous English translations is that it aims to follow the style and register of the original text, without sacrificing the literal sense of the words. This unfortunately means that literality and consistency at times must sometimes come at the cost of fluid idiomatic English, but it has the advantage of giving the reader an image of not just what the original text actually says, but how it says it. The reader should keep in mind that he is in a very foreign land, that he is reading words ancient and long forgotten—not the New York Times.

Maybe this is a pointless effort? One could argue that a translation always is a betrayal, and that those truly interested in the exact meaning of every word in the original text should study just the original (in the original language). While I do agree that the sufficiently interested reader should study the original texts in the languages in which they were written (something made much easier by the present edition with its notes and parallel edition), it is still a “hard ask” for those readers who are not philologically inclined, but instead students and scholars of history, comparative mythology and religion, anthropology, or literature; those who, for whatever reason, are interested in exploring the oldest poetic heritage of the Germanic peoples of northern Europe.

Perhaps the single most idiosyncratic part of the present translation will be its handling of proper nouns. I have opted to render all cultural and religious terms, names of places, heroes, gods, and other entities by their English cognates (thus Thunder for Old Norse Þórr) and where such do not exist, their philologically expected English (Anglish) forms (e.g. wallow for Old Norse vǫlva).

There are two reasons for this. The first is ideological. I believe that the Old Germanic myths and poems, their gods and heroes, are a shared heritage of Northern Europe. When you translate texts from across Germany, England and Scandinavia you quickly come to notice how similar the diction is, how many names reappear. The Scandinavian Vǫlundr is the same character as the English Wēlund; likewise Norse Óðinn is the same as English Wōden. These are ultimately mere distinctions in pronunciation.

The second is aesthetic. Commonly accepted forms like Odin and Thor are debased. They do not even represent the Old Norse pronunciation as accurately as possible within the constraints of English orthography (for instance, Odin would be better anglicized as Othin). Many are also difficult for English speakers to pronounce, or lead to absurd confusions. I shudder at hearing the word ésir pronounced /aɪ'sɪ:ɪ/; even worse is when Ǫs-garðr becomes “ass-guard”.

Mythic Poetry

Introduction to Mythic Poetry

This section encompasses all Norse Eddaic narrative poetry concerning the pre-Christian Germanic gods. That this poetry is exclusively in Old Norse is a matter of preservation, for the Old Norse language is the only Germanic language for which any poetry of this type survives.

Manuscripts

Codex Regius (R)

By far the most important manuscript is GKS 2365 4to (siglum R), the so-called Codex Regius. It dates to around 1270 and consists of 45 surviving foll. containing 29 poems. The ms. itself is divided into two parts or sections; the first (on foll. 1–20, containing 11 poems) dealing mostly with mythology, the second (on foll. 20–45, containing 18 poems) dealing with heroic legend from the Walsing cycle. Scribal characteristics show that these two parts have been copied from separate source manuscripts, and they are each introduced with a particularly large initial letter. (TODO: cite)

R is not a mere anthology of poems, but shows substantial editorial input as well. Short prose sections tie a group of the mythological poems together into a loose narrative, though it is clear from their meter, style, and language that these poems are separate works composed by various poets over time. When it comes to the heroic poems long prose segments occur both within and between them, creating a saw-like prosimetrical form where the prose sometimes comes to dominate the poetry. A manuscript closely related to the heroic half of R has clearly served as the main source for large swathes of the younger VǫlsS.

A large gap famously occurs in the heroic half; between foll. 32 and 33 one quire has gone missing. Its contents are mostly unknown, but it would have included the end of Sigrdr and the beginning of the Fragmentary Lay of Siward (TODO). Some of the stanzas probably contained in it may be restored from the VǫlsS, and these are edited in Fragments from the Saw of the Walsings below. For further literature on R see TODO.

AM 748 I a 4to (A)

Second in importance stands AM 748 I a 4to (siglum A). It dates to around 1300 and is in fragmentary state, consisting of just 6 foll. The beginning and end are absent, and between foll. 2 and 3 there is a lacuna, so that at least 3 (but probably more) foll. are missing.

A contains seven poems. On 1r–2v are found in succession the latter half of Hárþ, the full Bdr, and the first half of Skm. There is then the lacuna—Finnur Jónsson guesses that just one fol. is missing—and on 3r–6v are found in succession most of Vafþ, all of Grm and Hym, and the introductory prose to Vkv. Among medieval mss., Bdr is only attested in A, while the other six poems are also found in the first, mythological, part of R. The order of the poems varies drastically between A and R.

A has no trace of a frame narrative tying together Hym and Lok (and indeed the latter poem has left no trace in it), but otherwise A and R do share a substantial amount of prose. The two mss. generally agree very closely in both prose and poet, a fact which proves beyond any doubt that the two stem from a common manuscript archetype, rather than being independent witnesses of oral tradition.

The edition of A here consulted is Finnur Jónsson (1896).

Manuscripts of Snorre's Edda

The first two sections of Snorre's Edda—Gylf and Skm—contain quotations from several mythological Eddic poems. Snorre reproduces stanzas from (TODO) Vsp, Vafþ, Grm, and a variant of Lok (see introduction to that poem) in Gylf; in addition, the heroic Grotta is attested in full in Skm. Apart from these known works, Snorre also reproduces a few otherwise unknown stanzas in Eddic meters, which are edited at the end of this section under the heading Fragments from Snorre's Edda.

The four main mss. for the Prose Edda are:

1. Codex Regius of the Prose Edda (GKS 2367 4to, siglum S), dating to 1300–1350.
2. Codex Trajectinus (Traj 1374, siglum T), a c. 1595 paper copy of a ms. closely related to S.
3. Codex Wormianus (AM 242 fol., siglum W), dating to 1340–70. W also contains the Rþ.
4. Codex Upsaliensis (DG 11, siglum U), dating to 1300–25. This ms. is a heavily abbreviated and very poorly done copy of an early ms., which makes its frequent errors even more outrageous.

When all four mss. agree on a reading, the abbreviation G is used synonymously with STWU. For discussion on their internal stemmatics and origins I refer to Haukur Þorgeirsson (2017).

Other manuscripts

A few other Eddic-style poems from various sources are also included in the present edition. TODO (Svipdagsmál and Grg) are found only in post-reformation Icelandic paper mss., namely TODO. While I have not consulted such paper mss. for poems attested in medieval mss., I have had to rely on them for these poems. About these poems in particular it has to be said that late first attestation does not necessary imply early composition. A good proof of this is Bdr, which is first attested in the fragmentary medieval A, and then (with some interpolated stanzas) in much later paper mss. We cannot exclude that some of these poems would have existed in other lost medieval mss., perhaps even on the now-lost pages of R or A.

Spae of the Wallow

(Völuspó)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C10th (0.865)–early C11th (0.121)

Meter: Ancient-words-law

Introduction

The Spae of the Wallow (Vsp) is the most comprehensive mythological text surviving from Heathen times. The poem is a spae (spó ‘prophecy’) in the form of a monologue spoken by a wallow (vǫlva ‘seeress, sibyl, prophetess’) summoned by the god Woden in order to relate mythological knowledge. Woden’s frequent journeys to question various beings about mythological lore should be seen in the light of his incessant lust for knowledge and wisdom. The most similar instance is Bdr, wherein Woden summons another wallow out of her grave in Hell in order to find out why the god Balder is having ominous nightmares. There is also Vaff, wherein Woden challenges the wise ettin Webthriðner to a wisdom contest and defeats him. These journeys are further alluded to in Hárb TODO.

In its being a mythic catalogue Vsp also resembles (parts of) poems like Háv, Grm, Sigrdr, and Alv, but it differs from them all in a key way: instead of being a motley collection of scattered mythological lore, Vsp offers a chronological overview of the whole Norse mythic timeline, from the creation of the world to its demise and rebirth.

That is not to say that the events in it are described in a straight-forward manner; they are related in a highly allusive fashion that presupposes that the audience is already familiar with them. There may also be some later omissions and inserts that make the poem more difficult to read.

Vsp is attested in full in two independent recensions. The first and most important is R, where it is the first poem and found on foll. 1r–3r; the other is H, where it is found in the middle of a large collection of saws and Catholic works at 20r–21r.

Many stanzas from the poem are also cited or paraphrased in Gylf, for which Vsp was clearly one of the main sources. These paraphrases are still of critical value, e.g. in st. 19, where sal ‘hall’ in the paraphrase agrees with

H against R sé ‘lake’. For the four mss. of Gylf—S, T, W, and U—see the General Introduction.

For the differences between the mss. the reader may consult the following table prepared by the editor. The several stanzas in Gylf, which are quoted independently and with little relation to the order of the original poem, are marked with plus signs. The sequences containing uninterrupted quotations of several stanzas are marked with an incrementing alphabetic symbol, so that B is the first stanza in the second sequence, and so on. When a stanza found in a ms. is strongly divergent (e.g. st. 10, where Gylf omits the first two half-lines), its number is followed by a star. The stanzas beginning with Þá gingu regin öll ‘Then went the Reins all’ are represented by the half-line immediately following.

The poem begins with a bid for silence (1), and the wallow recalling her earliest memories (2). She then recounts the ordering of the world by the gods (3–6) and the golden age of peace and plenty (7–8), which is, however, interrupted by the intrusion of three unidentified ettin-maidens (8, and see note there). After this follow two verses about the shaping of the dwarfs (9–10), and then several originally separate dwarf-tallies (11–15), which are without doubt later inserts. Returning to the main narrative thread is described the creation and endowment of the first man and woman (16–17), Ugdrassle's Ash (18), and the three norns living under it (19).

At this point the two full redactions of the poem (R and H) diverge. Because of its older age and greater count of stanzas I have here followed the order of R: the wallow recalls how a woman named Goldwey was sacrificed and reborn three times (20), and how she, under the name Heath, practiced sorcery and witchcraft (21). She then recalls the first war in the world, between the Eese and Waness (22–23), and alludes to the slaying of the smith, who according to Gylf 42 was promised Frow and the sun and moon in exchange for building the wall of Oyard (24-25). This is followed by a cryptic verse describing Homedal's hidden silence or hearing (26).

In H the structure is quite different. After the description of the norns (19), the Eese immediately go to decide what action to take regarding the promising of Frow to the ettin (24-25), and Homedal's hearing is described (26). Then follow the two sts about the wolves that will swallow the sun and moon (40-41), and after this come sts 20-23 in the same order as R (see above).

[R 1r/2, H 20r/1]

“For hearing I ask all holy races [GODS], greater and lesser lads of Homedal [MEN]!
Wilt thou, Walfather (= Weden), that I well tell forth the ancient sayings of men which I foremost recall?

1 hęlgar ‘holy’ | so H; om. R

1-4 ALL | The wallow begins by asking for the silence of both gods and men, a meristic expression (West, 2007, pp. 99-100). The whole introductory formula has Indo-European parallels; see West (2007, pp. 63, 92-93, 312).

1 Hljóðs bið'k ‘For hearing I ask’ | The same introductory expression is found in st. 2 of Eyel's Head-ransom (Egill Hfl in SkP 5): hljóðs biðjum bann ‘for hearing we [I] ask him’.

1 hęlgar ‘holy’ | That the omission of this word in R is nothing more than a scribal error is clearly shown by the meter; the a-verse in Hljóðs bið ek · allar kindir is only three syllables long, and has highly unnatural alliteration on the unstressed ek rather than the expected first nominal hljóðs.

2 męiri ok minni ‘greater and lesser’ | It is ambiguous to which phrase these adjectives belong. It may either be (a) ‘holy kindreds greater and lesser’, which could be equivalent to the phrase Eese and Elves (both earthly and heavenly supernatural beings; see Index for occurrences); or (b) ‘greater and lesser lads of Homedal’. (b) is probably to be preferred as the more natural reading, in which case ‘greater or lesser’ may refer literally to physical size (the younger and older members of the audience) or more figuratively to the various social classes.

2 męgu Hęimdalar ‘lads of Homedal [MEN]’ | Homedal sired the three castes of men, as told in Rþ.

3 Val-fęðr ‘Walfather’ | That is, “Father of the Slain”. This name is probably used of Weden since he awoke her from her grave; cf. st. 62/4.

4 þau's fręmst of man ‘which I foremost recall’ | Cf. Vaffþ 34-35 with similar phrasing.

[R 1r/4, H 20r/2]

I recall Ettins born of yore, those who formerly had nourished me.
 Nine Homes I recall, nine Inwithies;
 the renowned measure-tree beneath the soil.

3 iðiðjur | so all. R has previously been as read 'iðiði', but this was made obsolete by an x-ray scan undertaken by Stefan Karlsson (1979) revealing a tiny abbreviation mark for -ur.

3 iðiðjur | Evil-working women or ogresses; this word also appears in a list of names for troll-women (Pul Trollkvenna 3 in SkP 3). The word is a fem. jón-stem. A commonly suggested etymology is i 'in' + viðr 'wood' (i.e. forest-dwellers), but this would be an unusual formation, and leaves the -j- unexplained. A more plausible etymology is an agent-noun based on iðið* 'guile, malice', attested in the cpd. iðið-gjarn (Vkv 28). This etymology can also explain the -j-, since its WGMc. cognates OE inwid, OS inwid, and OHG inwit show it to be a neut. ja-stem.

4 mjot-við mérán · fyr mold neðan. 'the renowned measure-tree beneath the soil.' | Probably Ugdrassle's Ash, being still a seed.

 4 gap vas ginnunga, · en gras hvergi;

[R 1r/6, H 20r/4, G]

It was early of ages where Yimer dwelled;
 there was not sand nor sea nor cool waves.
 Earth was never found, nor Up-heaven;
 there was the Gap of Ginnings [AIR/MIDSPACE], but grass nowhere,¹

1 þar's Ymir byggði 'where Yimer dwelled' | þar's ekki vas 'when nothing was' G 4 hvergi 'nowhere' | ekki 'not' H

3 jörð ... né upp-himinn 'Earth ... nor Up-heaven' | A well-attested formulaic cosmological word-pair found in all four Old Germanic languages with alliterative poetic traditions (viz. ON, OE, OS, OHG), especially in the context of the creation and destruction of the world. See Index: Earth and Upheaven.

4 gap vas ginnunga 'there was the Gap of Ginnings [AIR/MIDSPACE]' | In Gylf Snorre presents ginnunga-gap as a physical place existing between Earth and Upheaven during the beginning of the universe, but that may simply be an idiosyncrasy of that author, and finds no support in older sources. Indeed the present stanza is the only occurrence of the combination of the words gap and ginnunga, outside of Snorre's Edda.

I reject as unfounded the traditional translation "yawning chaos", and instead agree with Meissner in reading gap ginnunga as a kenning "gap of hawks [AIR]", where ginnunga is gen. pl. of ginnungr 'hawk'. The kenning-type "land, path of the bird [AIR]" is conventional (Meissner, 1921, p. 108), and the determinant ginnungr is also found in a kenning in Hauktl 15: pl endi-lóg ginnunga vé 'all the end-low mansions of hawks [SKIES]'. This interpretation is confirmed by Skv 74, which lists it among synonyms (þeiti) for the air: Lopt þeitr ginnunga-gap ok meðal-beimr; fögl-beimr; veðr-beimr. 'Air is called gap of ginnings and middle-home, bird-home, weather-home.'

In the old Germanic cosmology the air was the midspace (whence meðal-beimr ‘middle-home’) between Earth and Upheaven; not synonymous with the latter. This is also why Haustl 15 speaks of the “low SKIES”, contrasted with “Upheaven” or High Heaven in st. 16.

¹A more extensive creation narrative is found in Gylf 4–5, according to which the world first consisted of two extremities: the frozen Nivelham in the north and scorching Muspellsham in the south. From Nivelham the freezing venom-rivers called the Ilevaves ran until they froze to ice, while burning lava flowed from Muspellsham. The ice and lava met in the Gap of Ginnings, “which was as calm as windless air”, and there combined to form the first being, Yimer, who was the ancestor of the ettins.

they who shaped renowned Middenyard.
The sun shone from the south on the stones of the hall;

1 Burs synir ‘the Sons of Byre’ | In Gylf 6 identified as Weden, Will, and Wigh. They sacrificed Yimer and shaped the world out of his body, for which cf. Grm 41–42, Vafþ 21.

4 grønum lauki ‘green leek’ | A sign of the golden age, for the leek was in ancient times held to be the noblest plant. See Index.

The Sun cast from the south—the Moon’s companion—her right hand over heaven’s rim.
The Sun knew not where halls she had;
the stars knew not where seats they had;
the Moon knew not what sort of might he had.

1–2 Sól ... himin-jǫður ‘Sun ... heaven’s rim’ | om. G. 2 himin-jǫður ‘heaven’s rim’ | composite; himin fiðdyrf R; iðður H. 4 stjǫrnur ... ǫttu | In G this line comes last, so that the order is sun, moon, stars.

1–2 Sól ... himin-jǫður ‘Sun ... heaven’s rim’ | Probably a poetic description of the dawn; the Sun lifted herself up over the horizon and rose for the first time.

1 sinni Mána ‘Moon’s companion’ | At times translated as ‘her moon’, understanding sinni as dat. sg. f. of sinn ‘its (reflexive)’. This cannot be correct since ON possessives are inflected based on the gender of the noun they modify, not the gender of the possessor. máni ‘moon’ is masculine, and so ‘her moon’ would be sínum Mána.

2 himin-jǫður ‘heaven’s rim’ | Some recent editors have taken it upon themselves to normalize the reading of R as bimin-jǫ-dýr ‘heaven-horse-beast’, which is not just nonsensical but also unmetrical due the stress pattern. On the other hand the reading of H, normalized to jǫður ‘rim, edge’, is clearly deficient since it lacks the necessary alliteration on b. If we see iodur R as corrupted from iodur* we can restore bimin-jǫður, as done here.

5 Máni ... átti ‘Moon ... had’ | The moon was believed to have supernatural powers and could be invoked in conflict (cf. Háv 137/7.)

Then went the Reins all onto the rake-seats:
 the Yin-holy Gods, and from each other took counsel of that.
 To night and the moon-phases names they gave;
 morning they named, and middle day, afternoon and evening, the years for to tally.

1–2 Þá ... gëttusk ‘Then ... of this.’ | A formulaic expression for the convening of the Thing of the Gods, identically repeated below in sts. 9/1–2, 22/1–2, and 24/1–2. Cf. also the formula shared between Bdr 1/1–3 and Þrk 14/1–3, which follows the structure of the present formula very closely: Senn vǫru ęsir · allir à þingi // ok ęsynjur · allar à máli, // ok umb þat reðu · rikir tivar. ‘Soon were the Eese all at the Thing, // and the Ossens all at speech, // and of this counseled the mighty Tews.’

In the five occurrences of these two formulae outside of the present stanza, the demonstrative pronoun þat ‘this’ clearly refers to an immediately following question introduced by a hv-word (e.g. Þrk 14/4: hvé þęir Hlórriða · hamar of sǫtti? ‘how they Loride’s (= Thunder’s) hammer would find?’) Following this pattern we would expect to find such a question following umb þat gëttusk ‘took counsel of that’ in the present stanza, and it seems reasonable plausible (but not certain) that one has been lost in transmission.

3–5 Nǫtt ... telja ‘To night ... tally’ | Cf. Vǫsp 23, where it is said that the sun and moon turn round in heaven ęldum at ár-tali ‘for mankind’s tally of years’, and 25, where it is said that the Reins created the moon-phases for the same purpose.

The Eese found each other on the Idewolds,

2 þęir’s ... hǫ-timbruðu ‘they who ... timbered on high’ | afls kostuðu · alls freistuðu ‘[their] strength they tried; everything they tempted’ H

2 þeir's ... hö-timbruðu 'they who ... timbered on high' | Two formulae. — þgrgr ok þof 'harrow and hove' is a merism, i.e. ritual structures made of stone and wood; cf. Vafþ 38 and HHj TODO, as well as the Norwegian Christian laws that impose 'the burning of hoves and the breaking of harrows' (brenna þof ok brjóta þorga). — hö-timbra 'timber on high' is a rare compound. Its only other occurrence in the ON corpus is in Grm 16, where it describes a harrow ruled by Nearth. — This line has often been wondered at; why would the Gods themselves make cultic buildings? Yet they partake in ritual slaughter of beasts, divination, and feasting (e.g. Vsp 61, Hym 1, 39, Lok, Haustl 2), and their deeds form the precedent for upright human behaviour.

They played Tables in the yard; merry were they;
for them was nothing golden wanting—until three maidens of Thurses came, most uncanny, out of Ettinham.

1–4 ALL | The whole stanza is paraphrased in Gylf ch. 14: Ok því nęst smiðuðu þeir málms ok stein ok trę ok svá gnóg-liga þann málms, er gull beitir, at ęll bús-gęgn ok ęll reiði-gęgn þęr af gulli, ok er sú ęld kęlluð gull-aldr, áðr en spilltist af til-kvámum kvinnanna; þęr kómu ór Jōtun-heimum. 'And after this they smithed ore and stone and wood, and so abundantly [did they smith] that ore which is called gold, that all their house tools and riding tools were golden. And that age is called the golden age, before it was spoiled by the arrival of the women; they came from Ettinham.'

1 Tęflðu 'played Tables' | A verb derived from tafl 'board game', an old borrowing from Latin tabula. "Tables" is used as a cognate translation; the exact type of board game referred to is unimportant.

2 vas þeim vęttir-gis · vant ór gulli 'for them was nothing golden wanting' | Indeed even the bricks they played with were of gold. See st. 58.

2 vęttir-gis 'nothing' | An archaic gen. of vętt-ki 'nothing'; the -ir representing a fossilized i-stem genitive, for vęttir 'thing' comes from PGmc. wihtir*. The only other occurrence of this form is in the highly linguistically archaic Icelandic Homily Book (ms. Holm perg 15 4°, fol. 36v/30).

3 þrjár ... þursa meýjar 'three maidens of Thurses' | These three maidens are never mentioned again (unless they are taken to be the three norns in st. 19, but they would then be introduced twice). It is possible that an additional stanza giving further information about them has been lost. If it originally existed, it was already absent in the version used for Gylf, since no additional information is found there.

4 ám-átkar 'uncanny' | The word ám-áttigr has a clear association with supernatural beings; trolls and ettins. It occurs in four other places in R. In Grm 11, Skm 10 and HHj 17 it modifies jōtunn 'ettin' in a Leeds-meter c-line. In HHj 14 it is used by the daughter of an ettin to refer to a human hero.

1–4 ALL | After the Golden Age is spoiled, the Gods must get their metal in some other way. For this they need the dwarfs, who are connected with finding minerals, perhaps through techniques similar to dousing. Ancient ideas about the spontaneous generation of maggots in flesh (likened to minerals in the earth) are also clearly at play. — Gylf 14 continues with its paraphrase: Þar nést settuist goðin upp í sęti sín ok réttu dóma sína ok minntust, hvaðan dvergar hefðu kviknat í moldinni ok niðri í jörðunni, svá sem maðkar í holdi. Dvergarnir hefðu skipazt fyrst ok tekit kviknun í holdi Ýmis ok váru þá maðkar, en af atkvęðum goðanna urðu þeir vitandi mann-vits ok hefðu manns líki ok búa þó í jörðu ok í steinum. Móðsognir var óðstr ok annarr Durinn. Svá segir í Völuspá: “Thereafter the gods set themselves up in their seats and made their judgments and remembered whence the dwarfs had come to life in the ground and down in the earth like maggots in flesh. The dwarfs had first taken shape and come to life in Yimer’s flesh and were then maggots, but by the decrees of the gods they became knowing of manwit and had a man’s likeness, and even so they live in the earth and in stones. Moodsowner was the highest in rank, and second Dorn. So it says in the Spae of the Wallow:” after which the text quotes the present st. and 10/3–4.

4 ór brimi blóðgu · ok ór blóum leggjum ‘from the bloody surf and from the blue-black legs’ | I think that the poem simply telling of “the bloody surf” and “the blue-black legs” fits better with its general allusive style, but this requires a composite reading. If we read Bláinn ‘Blown’ (named in the thules as a dwarf) instead of blóum ‘blue-black’, then following Gurevich (Skp 2017, p. 693) we may see a kenning “the legs of Blown (dwarf) [STONES]”. Blown has otherwise usually been read as a poetic name for Yimer, but it is not attested anywhere else. — The “blood” and “legs” are in any case those of Yimer; from his bones were made the rocks, and from his blood the sea (see Grm 41, Vafþ 21). Dwarfs of course dwell in rocks and earth; cf. for instance IngT 2, where the Swedish king Swayther (Sveigðir) runs into a rock in pursuit of a dwarf. More difficult to explain is the creation of dwarfs from the sea. Einheri suggests that it may be referring to the formation of salt-stones by means of evaporating salty seawater.

1–2 Þar ... annarr ‘There ... second’ | om. G, but the author must have had the full stanza, since he paraphrases these lines (see Note to ALL for st. 9 above).

3–4 þeir ... sagði ‘They ... said.’ | The mss. readings offer two conflicting narratives of the creation of the dwarfs. Either they arose on their own; this is supported by the prose of Gylf (see note to previous st.) and by the form of the stanza quoted there (but it may have been changed to correspond to the author’s vision). On the other hand, both R and H have the dwarfs Moodsowner and Dorn shaping “man-likenesses” out of soil. The present edition follows the second version.

The following sts. (11–15) contain two originally distinct lists of dwarf-names; part of them are almost certainly later inserts. It is proof enough that there is a repetition of names (Oakenshield, Great-grandfather) and more than one formulaic conclusion.

Sts. 11–13, having no repeated names, seem to belong together. If they do, st. 12, which contains the formulaic conclusion to the list, should probably switch places with 13.

Sts. 14–15 form the second group, having an introduction and a conclusion which both mention the dwarf Loffer.

²A standard genealogical introduction (cf. HalT 1: meðan bans étt ... til goða tēljum 'while we tally his line ... [back] to the gods'). The (patrilineal) line of dwarfs is to be counted back to their progenitor, Loffer. This possibly disagrees with st. 10, where Moodsowner is said to be the foremost (and presumably the oldest) of the dwarfs, and Loffer is not mentioned, but such details were probably not very important.

That will ever be remembered (þat mun é uppi, but both mss. þat mun enn uppi), evil is the doom of the norms!” The second is found in a runic inscription, U 323 (980–1015): “Ever will lie—while the age lives (meþ + altr + lifir með aldr lifir)—the hard-hammered bridge, broad, after a good man.” An especially close parallel is found in Þstf Stuttur (st. 5, Kari Ellen Gade ed. in SkP II): Ey mun uppi · Eñdils, meðan stendr // sól-borgar salr · svor-góðis for. ‘Always will be remembered—while the hall of the sun’s stronghold [SKY/HEAVEN > EARTH] stands—the journey of the fattener of Andle’s bird [RAVEN/EAGLE > WARRIOR].’

[R IV/1, H 20r/26]

Until three came out of that host:
strong and lovely Eese along the houses;
they found on land the little availing
Ash and Emble, orlay-less.

1–4 ALL | This stanza and the next are paraphrased in Gylf 9: Þá er þeir gengu með sévar-ströndu Bors synir, fundu þeir tré tvau ok tóku upp trén ok skopuðu af menn. Gaf inn fyrsti önd ok lif, annarr vit ok bręring, þriði á-sjónu, mál ok heyrn ok sjón. Gáfu þeim klęði ok nefn; hét karl-maðr’inn Ask, en kona’n Embla, ok ólst þaðan af mann-kind’in, sú er byggð’in var gefinn undir Mið-garði. ‘When the sons of Byre (cf. st. 4) walked along the sea-shore they found two trees (tré, alt. ‘pieces of wood’) and they took up the trees and shaped men out of them. The first one gave breath and life; the second wit and movement; the third outward appearance, speech and hearing and sight. They gave them clothes and names: the male was called Ash and the woman Emble. And from them was begotten mankind, to which the dwelling within Middenyard was given.’ — Based on Gylf, the myth is traditionally seen as referring to pieces of driftwood, but that may be a later Icelandic or Snorroecan interpretation. As pointed out by Hultgård (2006), the comparative evidence suggests that the first humans were in fact originally seen as living, growing trees, and there is really nothing in the Vsp that speaks against such an interpretation. The story is probably the reason why words for trees are used extensively by Norse poets in kennings for men and women (see SkP I, p. lxxv ff., Meissner, 1921, pp. 245, 266–272, 410), more commonly in Scaldic poetry, but at times also in Eddic poetry, e.g. in Sigrdr 5: bryn-þings apaldr ‘apple-tree of the byrnie-Thing [BATTLE > WARRIOR].’

1 Unds ‘Until’ | We seem to be missing a preceding clause here, probably as part of a now-lost stanza. It is of course impossible to say what this st. would have contained, but it may have given a reason for the creation of men.

1 þrír kvömu · ór því liði ‘Until three came out of that host’ | Both mss. show influence from st. 8 in using the fem. þrjár for masc. þrír. H goes further in replacing ór því liði ‘out of that host’ with þussa brúðir ‘brides of thurses’. That these are errors is clearly shown by the masculine oflgir ok ástkir észir in l. 2.

2 at húsi ‘along the houses’ | An adverbial; the gods were walking on the outskirts of their settlement.

4 Ask ok Ẽmblu ‘Ash and Emble’ | Ash (nom. Askr) is easily identified with the same-named wood species (Fraxinus excelsior), but the etymology of Emble (nom. Ẽmbla) is much more difficult to explain. Her name is often translated as “Elm” (so Neil Price), but the ON word for that tree is the masc. almr ‘elm’. Metathesis from earlier Ẽlma*, a derivative of the same type as þella ‘young fir tree’ < þoll ‘fir tree’, is possible but uncertain.

Breath they owned not, wode they had not,

 Breath gave Woden, wode gave Heener,

1 Qnd ‘Breath’ | The breath (animating spirit) of life, which sets living things apart from the unliving. Cf. Gylf 3: Hitt er þó mest, er bann gerði manninn ok gaf bonum qnd þá, er lifa skal ok aldri tynast, þótt líkaminn finni at moldu eða brenni at qsku ‘Yet the greatest thing is when he [= Woden the Allfather] made man and gave him that “breath” which shall live and never perish even though the body molds to dust or burns to ashes.’ On Christian Scandinavian memorial runestones from the C11th onwards this word is used interchangeably with the Anglo-Saxon borrowing sál ‘soul’; compare e.g. Sö 10 Guð hjalpi qnd hans ‘God help his “breath”’, Sö 8 Guð hjalpi sǫlu hans ‘God help his soul’, and the frequent (at least 14 separate inscriptions) pairing of the two, like e.g. U 358 Guð hjalpi hans qnd ok sálu ‘God help his “breath” and soul.’ It seems likely that this idea of an immortal “breath”, instead of being pagan, stems from the Latin spiritus which means both ‘breath’ and ‘spirit’. In old poems a person gives up his “breath” when he dies and stops breathing, cf. HHj, Sigrdr, Sigsk TODO.

2. þolli 'tree' | Literally 'fir', but the word is only used for the alliteration. The same may perhaps apply to askr 'ash' above, the species being indeterminate.

4. sköru á skíði 'they scored billets' | Unclear; perhaps they carve tallies for the number of years allotted to each human being.

4 goð'in ǫll 'all the Gods' | The clitic definite -in is very rare in older Norse poetry; this is its only occurrence in Vsp. — Here "all the Gods" (viz., the Eese and the Wanēs) seem to be contrasted with the Eese, a subset.

Weden hurled and shot into the troop;
 that was yet a troop-conflict earlier in the Home.
 Broken was the plank-wall of the stronghold of the Eese;
 the Wanēs by a war-spae did tread the fields.

2 fyrr 'earlier' | so H; fyrst 'first' R. The R reading cannot be correct as this st. is describing a different war, and thus not the first. It has probably arisen due to the similarity with st. 20/1.

1 Fleǰgði Óðinn · ok i folk of skaut 'Weden hurled and shot into the troop' | The object, a spear, is understood. This first spear-throw was reenacted in a ritual well attested in Icelandic literature, wherein the king leading his troops would hurl the first spear into the opposing host, typically with the phrase Óðinn á yör alla 'Weden owns you all!' The battle-slain were thusly devoted to Weden, and they would join him as Onecharriers in Walhall. The sacrifice of an entire army or nation was not uncommon in ancient warfare, and examples are also found among the Hebrews (the ḥērem) and the Romans (the devotio, Livy 8:9). Weden is also described as "owning" dead warriors in Hárþ TODO, and in runic inscription N B380 (edited below under Galders), a sort of greeting wherein the receiver is wished to be owned by Weden (and "received" by Thunder). For further literature see PCRN HS II:24, p. 560, II:25, p. 617, and especially III:42, p. 1166ff.

4 víg-spó ‘war-spae’ | The Wanes used a magic prophecy (spó ‘spae’) to win the battle and sack Osyard, the stronghold of the Eese.

1–4 ALL | After their stronghold, protected only by a plank-wall (borð-vegger), is sacked by the Wanes, the Eese decide to build a stronger wall. The story of the wall-builder is told in Gylf 42, which ends by quoting sts. 24–25. An ettin craftsman approached the Eese and asked to build them a great wall. His price was Frow’s hand, and the Sun and Moon, but only if he could complete the entire wall alone in a single winter. He also asked for permission to use his workhorse, Swaddlefare, which Lock granted him. The agreement was sealed with strong oaths. The horse was, however, unexpectedly strong, and when three days were left before summer the wall was almost finished. The panicked Eese then turned to Lock and forced him to deal with the horse. His solution was to turn into a mare to distract the ettin’s workhorse, which worked; the two were out all night, and Lock was made pregnant, later giving birth to Slapner. When the ettin realised that he would not finish the wall on time he came into his greatest ettin-wrath, at which point the Eese called on Thunder; he showed up and quickly slew the builder.

Thunder is the defender of the gods (Þrk 18, Þdis Þörr in SkP III) and is willing to break even oaths sworn to an ettin for this purpose (cf. Lok 57–64).

2 fekk spjōll spak-lig 'got foresighted tidings' | The reading of R may be interpreted either as (1): fę-spioll spak-lig 'foresighted wealth-spells' or (2) fę, spioll spak-lig 'wealth, foresighted tidings'; both are metrically deficient. In (1) a second element in a cpd. like fę-spioll cannot carry alliteration, and (2) has three strongly stressed nominals; in both cases fę which stands first would be expected to carry the alliteration. The word fę 'wealth, cattle' also makes little sense in context, since Weden is the one giving her expensive jewellery.

The emendation places the verb fekk 'got, received' for fę. Verbs carry less stress than nouns, and the line is thus metrically equivalent to 28/3b drekkir mjōð Mimir. The line parallels st. 1, where the wallow likewise says that she will relate spjōll 'tidings, sayings' (cf. English gospel, lit. 'good news' which originally translates the Greek εὐαγγέλιον). For discussion on this reading see Haukur Þorgeirsson (2020, pp. 51–53), Males (2023, p. 16).

She saw Walkirries come from afar, ready to ride to the land of the Gots.
 Shild held a shield and Shagle another, Guth, Hild, Gandle and Goreshagle—now are tallied the Nans of Harn (= Weden), ready to ride the ground, the walkirries.

2 gōð-þjóðar 'land of the Gots' | Ambiguous; ON gōð-þjóð may mean either (1) 'land of the Gots' or (2) 'land of the Gods', for the difficult cluster þj in Got-þjóð 'land of the Gots' was at some point changed to ðþ. Alternative 1 is preferred since it is attested in three other places in R, viz. Helr TODO and Gbu TODO and TODO, whereas 2 is entirely unattested. — It is interesting that ON Got-þjóð reflects the attested Gotnish self-name, Gut-þiuda (found in the October 29 entry of the Gotnish calender, TODO: reference). The Walkirries have a particular association with the Gots, who fought the greatest battles of the Migration Period; cf. note to Vkv 1/1b.

3–6 Skuld ... val-kyrjur. 'Shild ... walkirries.' | Judging especially by the out-of-place phrase nú eru talðar 'now are tallied', these four lines seem to be a later insert from a thule counting the walkirries.

5 Nönnur Herjans ‘Nans of Harn (= Weden)’ | Nanna ‘Nan’ (the name itself is a nursing word) was the wife of Balder, but the word is here certainly being used to refer generically to ‘maidens, women’. Cf. Þul Ásynja (SkP 3), where the walkirries are kenned Óðins meyjar ‘Weden’s maidens’.

Told allusively in Vsp 31–33 is the myth about Balder’s death. Balder, the son of Weden and Frie, was slain with an arrow shot by his blind half-brother Hath, whose hand was guided by Lock. Weden could not slay Hath, who was his son, and so he seduced the woman Rind, apparently through love-magic (Cormac Awmundson’s TODO: seð Yggr til rindar ‘Ug won Rind through sorcery’). Rind gave birth to Wonnell, who grew very fast; after just one day he was big enough to kill Hath, which he also did, avenging Balder’s death. The other important sources for this myth are Bdr 8–11, Gylf 49, and Saxo Grammaticus (2015) 3.4.1–8.

The language of Bdr is so similar to the present sts. that they must be of common origin; Bdr 11/2–4 is near-identical to Vsp 32/4–33/2. The biggest narrative difference is that Bdr mentions Rind, who is not found in Vsp.

The most elaborate narrative is found in Gylf 49, which may be shortly summarised as follows: Balder has terrible nightmares about his own death, and so his mother Frie makes all sorts of things (fire, water, venom, metals, stones, trees, diseases, beasts, et c.) swear oaths not to harm him. After this the Eese make sport of shooting and striking at him, since he cannot be harmed. Lock is annoyed by this and approaches Frie while disguised as a woman. He finds out from her that there is one thing that did not swear the oath—the mistletoe, which was thought too young. Lock takes a mistletoe and a bow and gives it to the blind god Hath, showing him where to shoot. Hath does so, and kills Balder. After this Gylf describes Balder’s funeral (treated poetically in Wolf Ugson’s fragmentary House-drape, ÚlfrU Húsdur in SkP III) and how the gods attempted to “weep Balder out of hell”, which failed (see Eddic Fragments in the present ed.) Gylf 50 goes on to describe how the Eese punished Lock (see st. 34 below.)

It is notable that Gylf 49–50 fails to mention Wonnell. This part of the myth may have been left out for moral reasons, but was certainly known to the author of the Prose Edda; cf. Gylf 30: Áli eða Váli heitir einn, sonr Óðins ok Rindar. Hann er djarfr í orrostum ok mjök happ-skeytr ‘Onnel or Wonnell one is called, the son of Weden and Rind. He is brave in battles and a very lucky shot’ and SkM 19: Hvernig skal kenna Vála? Svá, at kalla hann son Óðins ok Rindar, [...] hefni-ás Baldrs, dólgr Haðar ok bana bans, [...] ‘How shall one ken Wonnell? Namely by calling him the son of Weden and Rind, [...] avenging os of Balder, the foe of Hath and his bane, [...]’.

The last source is Saxo Grammaticus (2015) 3.4.1–8, who retells the revenge narrative in typical euhemerized form; his versions of Hath and Balder are distinctly human generals and rulers. It may be summarized as follows: Weden takes counsel from a group of seers; one of them, Horsethief the Finn, foretells that Rind, daughter of the Russian king, will bear him another son to avenge Balder. Weden soon enlists in the king’s army and leads it to great victories, but is continually spurned by the daughter. He tries various other disguises but is still refused. At last he disguises himself as an old woman and becomes her physician. When she turns sick, he binds her, supposedly in order to give her a certain foul potion—he instead rapes her, apparently with her father’s consent. Their son, Bo, grows up to become a fierce raider. One day Weden summons him and reminds him of his duty to avenge his brother, Balder. Bo slays Hath in a duel, but soon perishes from his wounds.

1 tífur 'victim's' | This word is rather difficult and possibly corrupt. It may be connected with týr 'tew, god', but the dat. sg. of týr is tívi and the intrusive r is unexplained. A better explanation is given by CV, who connect it with OE tiber, tifer 'victim, hostage', but this also has some problems. blóðgum 'bloody' is masc. dat. sg., but OE tiber is neuter. If we are dealing with a masc. noun tífurr* with the same declension as jǫfurr, we would expect dat. sg. tífri*, not tífur (which would however be the expected acc. sg.).

2 folgin 'sealed' | Or 'hidden'. The verb fela 'hide, conceal' is used in poetry to describe burial in mounds, as in IngT 24 ("[...] And afterwards the victory-havers hid (fēlu) the ruler on Borrey.") or the Croth Karlevi stone ("Hidden (fulkin fōlginn) in this mound lies he whom the greatest deeds followed; [...]")

1 Þó ... kęmbði 'washed ... combed' | A collocation, see note to Háv 61 for discussion and other examples. Wönnel, being oathbound and on the mission to avenge his brother, could not engage in such acts of personal vanity.

4 vö Val-hallar ‘the woe of Walhall’ | The deaths of two sons; Balder and Hath.

After Balder was avenged the Eese went to catch Lock. They bound him up with his son’s intestines. A snake was then placed over his face to drip venom onto it. His wife, Syein, sat over him and caught the venom in a small basin; when she had to empty it he writhed so greatly that the earth shook. This myth is found in From Lock (the prose at the end of Lok) and Gylf 50.

The following sts. are paraphrased in Gylf 52:

Þá mēlti Gangleri: „Hvat verðr þá eptir, er brenndr er himinn ok jörð ok heimr allr; ok dauð goðin öll ok allir Einherjar ok alt mann-folk, ok bafð ér áðr sagt, at hveirr maðr skal lifa í nokkvörum heimi um allar aldir?“

Þá svarar Þriði: „Margar eru þá vistir góðar ok margar illar; batst er þá at vera á Gimléi á himni, ok all-gótt er til góðs drykkjar þeim, er þat þykkir gaman, í þeim sal, er Brimir heitir; bann stendr ok á himni. Sá er ok góðr salr; er stendr á Niða-fjöllum, gorr af rauðu gulli; sá heitir Sindri. Í þessum solum skulu byggja góðir menn ok sið-látir.

Á Ná-ströndum er mikill salr ok illr ok horfa norðr dyrr; bann er ok ofinn allr orma-bryggjum sem vanda-bús, en orma hefðu öll vitu inn í búsit ok blása eitri, svá at eptir salnum renna eittr-ár, ok vaða þér ár eið-rofar ok morð-vargar, svá sem hér segir:“

‘Then spoke Gangler: “What will then remain, when heaven and earth and the whole world is burned, and gods are dead and all the Onecharriers and all man-kind—and [still] ye have said earlier, that each man will live in some world for all ages?”

Then answers Third: “Many good dwellings are there then, and many ill: it is then best to be in Gimlee in the heaven, and it is very good of good drink for those who find joy in that, in the hall which is called Brimmer; it also stands in heaven. Another good hall is the one which stands on the Nithfells, made from red gold; it is called Sinder. In these halls good and well-mannered men will dwell.

On Neestrand is a great and bad hall, and its doors face north. It is all woven with the spines of serpents like a wicker-house, but the heads of the serpents all look into the house and blow venom, so that through the hall rivers of venom run, and in those rivers wade oath-breakers and murder-wargs, as is said here:”

after which are quoted sts. 37 and 38/1–2, followed by the prose: En í Hver-gelmi er verst ‘But in Wharfymer is is worst’ and 38/4.

2 morð-varga 'murder-wargs' | Murderous outlaws.

⁷In this st. is clearly described watery punishment in the Heathen afterlife, also seen in Reg 3–4 and possibly in Grm 21. The crimes are what one might expect from the Germanic worldview: perjury, shameful murder, and adultery with a married woman. In Anglo-Saxon and Nordic laws the committer of such crimes gained the title of nothing, that is, one afflicted with nithe (severe shame). It is not surprising then that such nothings would be tortured by a creature named Nithehewer 'Nithe-striker'. The practice of burying in bogs and flood-marks (or generally outside of settlements) is well attested in sources about Germanic culture from Taciti Germania onwards—I consider it likely that the heavy streams in this stanza and others represent such graves. This is further elaborated on in *GermanicGems*2.

As the young agentive suffix -ari is found nowhere else in the poem it is possible that this word is corrupt. If it is, it must have occurred early in the transmission, as reflexes of tjúgari are found in all surviving mss.

1 Austr ‘In the east’ | The cardinal direction associated with ettins and other monsters.

⁸The old hag raises the cubs of the wolf Fenrer, of which a particularly fierce one will swallow the moon. According to Grm 40 the sun is chased by a wolf called Skoll, while another wolf, Hate Rothswitner’s son, runs in front of her. This is elaborated upon in Gylf 12, where it is said that Skoll swallows the moon, while Hate swallows the sun. High then explains that “A lone troll-woman (gýgr) lives to the east of Middenyard in that forest called Ironwood”, and “feeds the sons of many ettins, all in the likenesses of wolves, and thereof these wolves (i.e. Skoll and Hate) come. And it is also said that from that lineage a single one becomes the mightiest, and he is called Moongarm. He fills himself with the life of all those men who die and he swallows the moon and stains heaven and all the air with blood. Thereof the sun loses its rays and the winds are violent and moan hither and thither, and thus it says in the Spae of the Wallow: [...]” after which this and the following st. are quoted. This seems very much like a composite from several sources—probably Vsp 40–41 and Grm 40—but becomes contradictory when it states that two wolves swallow the moon. Assuming that this is only a confusion on the part of the author of Gylf, this st. and the next must be describing Skoll, but it is of course not impossible that there was confusion about the exact details of these events among the Heathen poets. In favour of that seems to speak Vafþ 46–47, where the sun is said to be swallowed by Fenrer (but see note there).

Surtr comes from the south with the twig's betrayer [FIRE];

 Boulders clash and the fiends reel;
 men tread the Hellway and heaven is split.

1 Surtr | Svartr U 3 gífr rata 'fiends reel' | guðar brata '[but] the gods stagger' U

2 sól val-tíva 'sun of the slain-Tew' | val-tíva is here taken as gen. sg. of val-tívar 'slain-Tews', for which cf. st. 59 below, but the sense of this is obscure. Perhaps it means that Surtr's sword shines as bright as the heavenly Gods? The word may also (so CV) be read as gen. sg. of unattested *val-tívi 'tew of the slain', referring to Surtr, but this is tautological: "Surtr comes from the south with fire; from his sword shines the sun of Surtr".

3 gífr rata 'fiends reel' | The reading of U is wo. doubt corrupt; the anachronistic masc. pl. ending -ar is proof enough, for the word göð ~ guð 'gods' was always neuter in heathen times.

4 hæl-veg 'Hellway' | The road on which one has to travel after death to reach his final resting place. Cf. Helr.

1 Hlínar · harmr annarr 'Line's second sorrow' | The first sorrow being the death of Balder. Line is described in Gylf 35 as a minor goddess sett til gézlu yfir þeim mǫnnum, er Frigg vill forða við hásku nǫkkurum 'placed to watch over those men which Frie wishes to protect against any particular danger'. In spite of this almost all translators and editors have understood Line as synonymous with Frie, or even asked whether her existence as a distinct goddess is not something invented by the author of Gylf. Hopkins (2017) argues that this need not be the case; as a maidservant of Frie, Line's two sorrows would consist in her failure to protect both the son and husband of her mistress.

Wider and Wonnell live, for the sea and Surt’s flame have not harmed them, and they settle on the Idewolds where there earlier was Osyard; and then the sons of Thunder, Mood and Main, come there, and there they have Millner. Next come Balder and Hath from Hell; then they all make peace with each other and discuss and think back on their runes, and speak about the tidings which had been in antiquity, about the Middenyardswyrm and about the Fenrerswolf. Then they find in the grass those golden game-bricks which the Eese had owned. So it is said:”

after which is quoted Vafþ 51.

1–2 undr-samligar gullnar tōflur 'wondersome golden game-bricks' | A fine literary device. In st. 8 the golden age of the Eese, exemplified by their playing board games, was spoiled by the three ettin-women. The rediscovering of the golden board game then betokens a new golden age.

2 bróðra tveggja 'the two brothers' | The present translation understands tveggja as the gen. pl. of tveir 'two'; the two brothers are presumably Hath and Balder, mentioned in the previous stanza. Since the original ms. does not capitalize proper nouns one could also read bróðra Tveggja 'the brothers of Tway (= Weden)'. Weden's brothers are attested in Gylf 6 as Will and Wigh; they are never said to have children.

Stanzas from Hauksbók

H has a few substantial inserts and differences from R. Their style strongly suggests that they are later compositions.

34/1–2 are replaced by the following.

H₁ Þá kná Váli · víg-bönd snúa [H 20v/12]
2 hēldr vōru harð-gor · hopt ór þormum.

Then did Wonnell the war-bonds twist:
the most sturdy fetters were made from intestines.

1 Váli ‘Wonnell’ | emend.; Vála H

45/5–6 are followed by the following lines, forming another four-line stanza.

H₂ Hrēðask allir · à hēl-vegum [H 20v/28]
2 ãðr Surtar þann · sefi of gleypir.

All are frightened on the Hell-ways,
before Surt’s kinsman does devour it.

The following stanza appears between 52 and 53.

H₃ Ginn lopt yfir · lindi jarðar, [H 20v/39]
2 gapa ýgs kjaptar · orms í hēðum;
mun Óðins son · ęitri móta
4 vargs at dauða · Viðars niðja.

Over the air yawns the Girdle of the Earth [= Middenyardswyrm];
the jaws of the fierce Wýrm gape in the heights.

Weden's son [= Thunder] will meet the venom of the Warg, after the deaths of Wíder's kinsmen [= the Eese].

3 ęitri 'venom' | emend.; ormi 'Wyrn' H. 4 dauða | 'da...' H

1–4 Ginn ... niðja. | The last part of the stanza is almost completely illegible. I have relied on the reading of Jón Helgason (1971, pp. 13, 44 ff.).

3 ęitri 'venom' | Cf. Gylf 51: "Thunder bears the bane-word from the Middenyardswyrn and strides nine paces away from it. Then he falls dead to the earth for the venom (ęitri) which the Wyrn blows on him."

The following half-stanza appears between 61 and 62; it is generally held to be a late Christian insert.

H₄ Þá kœmr hinn ríki · at ręin-dòmi
2 ęflugr ofan · sá's ęllu ręðr.

[H 21r/14]

Then comes the mighty one to the great judgment,

Introduction

The Speeches of the High One (Háv) is the second poem of R, where it follows Vsp and is followed by Vafþ. R is the only medieval witness manuscript for the whole poem, but a few sts. are cited or alluded to in other places, viz. st. 1 in Gylf, st. 76 in Hákm 21, and st. 84 in FbrS TODO.

The text before us does not very much seem like a unitary composition, but rather more like a collection of scattered traditional poetry connected by an association with the god Weden in his role as giver of wisdom. It seems to contain at least two poems of practical life advice, two mythological narratives, scattered gnomic poetry about runes, and a list of galders.

I identify the following major strands, excepting various lone sts. that are probably later inserts. In the present edition each of the following is given a separate, short introduction:

1. 1–80 The Guest-strand; practical life advice
2. 81–90 Various scattered sts. of advice
3. 91–102 Weden's tryst with Billing's daughter
4. 103–110 Weden's obtaining of the Mead of Poetry
5. 111–137 The Speeches of Loddfathomer; Weden's advice to Loddfathomer
6. 138–146 The Rune-tally; various sts. about runes and ritual
7. 146–165 The Leed-tally; Weden's listing of 18 galders

It cannot be claimed for certain that these are all separate compositions, but it seems unlikely that e.g. the Guest-Strand and the Speeches of Loddfathomer were originally part of the same large poem; there is so much repetition from the Guest-Strand to the Speeches that the latter seems quite redundant, not to mention the fact that the former has a perfectly fitting conclusion in the form of sts. 76–77.

Now if these indeed are originally separate compositions, there arise some important questions about the circumstances of their redaction into a single poem.

To begin with we may think about the nature of the redaction. It is surely the case that it need not have happened all at once, but could have taken place successively in the form of layered additions. Thus the original Guest-Strand probably ended at st. 77, but sts. 78–90 may have been added shortly after, later the two narratives about Weden's romantic escapades, thereafter the Speeches of Loddfathomer, et c.

A second question is about the context in which the redaction took place; whether in an oral or scribal context, in a Heathen hove or a Catholic monastery. With regard to this question some clues can be gleaned from a careful reading of the final stanza, 166, which, given that it explicitly mentions the title of the poem, must probably be associated with the final layer of the redaction. Its blessing of the reciter, hearers, and learners indicate a context of oral transmission, and its invocation of the Heathen dichotomy between the Gods and Ettins (the friends and enemies of Mankind, respectively) and description of the contents of the poem (which include unambiguous Heathen ritual instructions) as “very useful” (all-þorfr) suggest that it was put together by a Heathen. With this in mind, the poem should have been redacted into something very close to its present form no later than the early 11th century, in an oral, Heathen context.

We may third think about what reason someone would have for redacting numerous disparate sources into a single poem. The mention of “usefulness” suggests that the reason were utilitarian rather than antiquarian, and a picture then emerges of a redactor arranging a corpus of traditional Odinic poetry deemed “useful”—whether for its practical advice or its mythological subject matter—into a single poem, which would then be learned by heart as a whole and recited for spiritual purposes. In practice this of course served to create a sort of Odinic “ark”—or “Hoardmimer's wood”—in which the bulk of the surviving pre-Christian Norse advice poetry was preserved. Forever lost were those scattered stanzas which were not included—and many such must have existed.

The Guest-strand (1–79)

The Guest-Strand (Old Norse: Gæsta-þáttur) is a collection of wisdom poetry, taking its outset in the scenario of a lone wanderer's arriving as a stranger at a farmstead. It begins by discussing the mutual responsibilities between guest and host, before moving on to describing proper conduct in broader human interactions with a particular focus on drinking, speech, and friendship.

While there are some fine transitions employed in order to move from one theme to another (e.g. between sts. 4–5, or 10–11), there is no clear division into thematic sections, and previous subjects often appear again after having been dropped for a few stanzas. The spirit of the advice is in any case very consistent throughout, and the poem at all turns advises caution and shrewdness. Of particular importance is the idea of “manwit” (ON man-vit), a word somewhat analogous with the English “common sense” or “street wisdom”.

It seems very likely that the original Guest-Strand ended at st. 77. This finds strong support in Hákm 21, the final st. of that poem, which likewise begins with the first two lines dęyr fę · dęyja fręndr.

3 à bręndum 'on the fires' | Possibly referring a Norwegian folk custom, wherein a guest would sit down on the wood-pile outside of the door, waiting until being let in; see further TODO SOME ARTICLE on this custom. The speaker is announcing to the hosts (or “givers”) that a guest, frozen, wet and tired, is currently sitting on the wood-pile, and ought to be let in.

4 sins of fręista frama 'test his furtherance' | Try his luck, see how far he gets. The same line is also found in Vafþ 11, 13, 15, 17.

Of water there is need for him who comes for a meal;
 of a towel and a hearty welcome;
 of a good reception—if he might earn it—
 of a word, of and silence in return.

1–4 ALL | There is a good train of thought throughout the st.: the guest must first wash and dry himself, and then be welcomed to sit and eat at the table. After the host has furnished him with these amenities the need for proper conduct now shifts onto the guest, who must speak and speak wisely.

4 ęndr-þǫgu ‘silence in return’ | One may note that the verb þeggja ‘shut up, be silent’—of which þaga*, which only appears in the present cpd., is a derivative formed in the same way as saga ‘saw, history’ to segja ‘say, speak’—and the related noun þęgn ‘silence’ are frequently used at the beginning of Scaldic poems (e.g. Arn Magnǫr 1¹: þęgi sęim-brotar ‘may gold-breakers [GENEROUS MEN] be silent’, Egill Beǫr 1^V: hyggi ... til þagnar þinn ljęr ‘may thy retinue focus on silence’, Glęmr Gráf 1¹: biðjum vęr þagnar ‘we ask for silence’).

Of wit there is need for him who widely roams;
 everything is easy at home.
 Into a laughing-stock turns he who nothing knows,
 and among the clever sits.

3 at auga-bragði ‘Into a laughing-stock’ | Idomatic. auga-bragð literally means ‘twinkling of an eye, moment’; the sense here is thus something like ‘a quick glance of derision’.

Of his thinking should man not be boastful, but rather guarding of his senses
 when sharp and silent he comes to a homestead; sudden harm seldom strikes the wary,
 for an unfickler friend man never gets than great manwit.

5 maðr 'man' | In R abbreviated with the rune Ψ m "man", the first of 45 such instances in the present poem. Whereas Anglo-Saxon Latin-script mss. use several runes ideographically (e.g. 𐌺 o for OE ōðel 'homeland, patrimony'), there do not seem to be any Scandinavian examples with runes other than Ψ.

The tradition of ideographic runes is in any case ancient, and goes back to the time before Latin writing as shown by the pre-Christian inscriptions from Stentofen (DR 357) and Ingelstad (Ög 43); DR 357 uses the rune 𐌺 j for ár 'year, good harvest' and Ög 43 uses 𐌹 d for dagr 'day'. For the names of the runes see the Three Rune Poems, edited below under Miscellaneous Runic Poetry.

 4 svá nýsisk fróðra hvęrr fyrir.

The wary guest who comes for a meal with sharp hearing shuts up.
 With ears he listens and with eyes he watches;
 so looks each learned man ahead.

2 þunnu hljóði 'with sharp hearing' | Lit. 'with thin listening'.

4 nýsisk fyrir 'looks ahead' | This verb underlies the noun for-nýsni as found in Sigrdr 25.

8 Hinn es sęll, · es sér of getr

 4 annars brjóstum i.

This one is blessed, who for himself does get praise and staves of liking.
 It is uneasy regarding that which one shall own in another man's breast.

2 lof ok líkn-stafi 'praise and staves of liking' | líkn 'liking' is a very interesting word. It is defined by ONP as: 'mercy, compassion, relief, comfort, help'. In the present poem its precise meaning seems to be something like 'the state of being liked by your surroundings to the point where people are willing to help you out'. Cf. its two other occurrences in the present poem: sts. 120 and especially 123 (where it is likewise paired with lof 'praise').

- 9 Sá es sǣll, · es sjalfr of á
 2 lof ok vit meðan lifir;

 4 annars brjóstum ór.

That one is blessed, who himself does have

1 Sá 'That one' | Contrasting with hinn 'this one' in the previous stanza.

- 10 Byrði bętri · berr-at maðr brautu at,

A better burden bears man not on the road

 In an unknown place it seems better than wealth;
 such is the destitute man's shelter.

- 11 Byrði bętri · berr-at maðr brautu at,

 4 an sé of-drykkja ǫls.

A better burden bears man not on the road
 than be it great manwit.
 Worse way-provision he drags not along on the plain than a too great drink of ale.

3 vęlli at 'on the plain' | Formulaic, the word vęllr 'plain, (uncultivated) field' is also used in sts. 38 and 49. It is easily understood that the wild heaths and plains of Iron Age Norway were particularly unsafe places where a traveller needed to keep his wits about him, lest he fall victim to robbers or murderers (so st. 38).

- 12 Es-a svá gótt, · sęm gótt kveða, 2 ǫl alda sonum;
 því-at fęra vęit, · es fleira drekk,
 4 sęns til gęðs gumi.

It is not so good, as good they say,
 ale for the sons of men;
 for the less he knows, as the more he drinks,
 man of his own senses.

- 13 Ó-minnis-hegri heitir, · sá's yfir ǫðrum þrumir,

Forgetfulness-heron is he called who hovers over ale-feasts;
 he robs man of his senses.
 By that bird's feathers I was fettered in the yard of Guthlathe.

1 Ó-minnis-hegri 'Forgetfulness-heron' | Lit. "unmemory-heron", the personification of drunkenness as a hovering bird.

3-4 þess ... Gunn-laðar. 'By that bird's feathers I was fettered / in the yard of Guthlathe.' | Weden stole the mead of poetry from Sutting's daughter, Guthlathe, who was placed by her father to guard it. For this myth see introduction to sts. 103-110 below. In the version told in Skm Weden does indeed drink all of the mead, but he soon spits it out again and shows no adverse effects. The conception behind the present stanza may be that the mead has drawbacks of normal alcohol. If this is the case it would lend support to the theory that the Guest-strand and the later parts of Háv were originally separate compositions, since no such drunkenness is found in Háv 103-110. See note to 14/1-2.

- 14 Ǫlr ek varð, · varð ofr-ǫlvi,

Drunk I became—became the greatest drunkard—
 at the learned Fealer's.
 That ale-feast is best where every man gets back to his senses.

1-2 TODO | Another reference to the Mead of Poetry, for Fealer was one of the two dwarfs who slew Quasher and made the mead. Again the sense seems to be that Weden got drunk on it, but in the attested versions of the myth Weden never even meets the two dwarfs.

- 15 Þagalt ok hugalt · skyli þjóðans barn

 if he of war be wary,
 but old age gives him no peace,

¹The coward may have been spared by spears, but he cannot avoid old age; since death is unavoidable it is better to live a glorious life in war than a wretched one in peace. Such an attitude is common in the heroic literature, cf. for instance Fáfn 10. Also related is the ancient view of the "straw-death" (TODO).

2. hefr fjølð of farit 'has journeyed much' | Cf. Vafþ 3, 44, et.c., where Weden repeats: Fjølð ek fór, fjølð fręistaða'k, // fjølð ek reynda regin 'Much I journeyed, much I tried, much I tested the Reins.'

 Man ought not to hold onto the cask; ought yet to drink mead in moderation;
 ought to speak the needful or shut up.
 For this uncouthness will no man blame thee:
 that thou go early to sleep.

1 Haldi-t maðr á kęri ‘Man ought not to hold onto the cask’ | Perhaps referring to a toast wherein the drinking vessel would be passed around in a circle and each recipient would drink in turn. Such toasts were drunk for a long time in Northern Europe—indeed this is the origin of the Scandinavian toasting-word, skål ‘prosit, cheers!’, lit. ‘bowl’. “Holding onto” the vessel (and not letting the next person drink) was surely seen as very rude; indeed, in 1519 a man in Jämtland was killed in an argument resulting from his refusal to pass on the bowl (Sjöberg, 1907). The sense is thus: “Do not refuse a toast when offered, but do not drink too much.”

2 męli þarft eða þęgi ‘ought to speak the needful or shut up’ | Formulaic, line occurs identically in Vafþ 10/2.

 2 etr sér aldr-trega;
 opt fęr hlógis, · es með horskum kómrr,
 4 manni hęmskum magi.

The gluttonous man—unless he know his sense—eats himself a life-sorrow.
 Oft the belly, when among the sharp he comes,
 brings the foolish man ridicule.

2 etr sér aldr-trega ‘eats himself a life-sorrow’ | Or, ‘eats himself to death.’

- 21 Hjarðir þat vitu, · nęr hęim skulu, 2 ok ganga þa af grasi;
 en ó-sviðr maðr · kann ętva-gi
 4 sins of mál maga.

Herds know when homewards they shall,
 and then part from the grass;
 but the unwise man never knows his own belly’s measure.

- 22 Ve-sall maðr · ok illa skapi 2 hlęr at hví-vetna;
 hitt-ki hann vęit, · es vita þyrpti,
 4 at hann es-a vamma vanr.

The wretched man and ill turned out laughs at anything.
 This he knows not, which he might need to know:
 that he is not free of blemishes.

4 hann es-a vamma vanr ‘he is not free of blemishes’ | Formulaic, cf. Lok 30: es-a þęr vamma vant ‘thou art not free of blemishes’.

- 23 Ó-sviðr maðr · vakir umb allar néttr
 ok hyggr at hví-vetna;
 þá es móðr, · es at morni kœmr;
 alt es víl sœm vas.

The unwise man is awake for all nights and thinks of anything.
 Then he is weary when the morning comes;
 all the trouble is as it was.

- 24 Ó-snotr maðr · hyggr sér alla vesa
 við-hléjendr vini;
 hitt-ki hann fiðr, · þótt of hann fár lesi,
 ef með snotrum sitr.

The unclever man thinks all those who laugh with him his friends.
 This he finds not yet, that they make sport of him,
 if among the clever he sits.

- 25 Ó-snotr maðr · hyggr sér alla vesa
 við-hléjendr vini;
 þá þat fiðr · es at þingi kœmr,
 at á for-mélendr fáa.

The unclever man thinks all those
 who laugh with him his friends.
 Then he finds it, when to the Thing he comes,
 that he has spokesmen few.

4 á for-mélendr fáa ‘has spokesmen few’ | Repeated in st. 62. The Thing was the Germanic legal assembly, where small disputes could easily turn into deadly feuds, so the import is that the fool has few friends ready to take his side and speak up for him “when push comes to shove”. True friends are proven in conflict, not in drunken revelry.

- 26 Ó-snotr maðr · þykkisk allt vita,
 ef á sér i vø veru;
 hitt-ki hann vœit, · hvat skal við kveða,
 ef hans frœista firar.

The unclever man seems to know everything
 if he takes shelter in a nook.
 This he knows not, what he shall answer
 if men test him.

2 vō ‘nook’ | From earlier vrō*; cf. Swedish vrå ‘corner, nook’, rare English wroo ‘id.’ The present stanza is to my knowledge the only Norse attestation of the form vō, which features a rare Western sound change from vr- to v-. The more common change vr- to r- yields rō, which is the normal Norse form. — Tangentially this word is brought up in FGT (1950) as an example of a word with nasal ō, and contrasted with oral ó in rō ‘sailyard’.

- 27 Ó-snotr maðr · es með aldir kømr, þat ’s batst at hann þegi;
 engi þat vëit, · at hann ekki kann,
 nema hann mēli til mart.
 vëit-a maðr, · hinn’s vët-ki vëit, þótt hann mēli til mart.

The unclever man who among people comes—it is best that he shut up.
 No one knows that he nothing knows,
 unless he speak too much.
 The man knows not, who nothing knows,
 that he speak too much.

- 28 Fróðr sá þykkisk, · es fregna kann,
 ok segja hit sama,
 ey-vitu lęyna · megu ýta synir
 því es gęngr of guma.

Learned seems he who can ask and answer the same [way].
 In no way may the sons of men hide that which eludes earthlings.

1–2 fregna ... segja ‘ask ... answer’ | Perhaps specifically in the context of a riddling contest of wisdom.

3–4 ey-vitu ... guma. ‘In no way ... earthlings.’ | I.e., when asked a certain question to which one does not know the answer it is not possible to conceal one’s ignorance.

- 29 Órna mēlir, · sá’s éva þęgir,
 stað-lausu stafi;
 hrað-mēlt tunga, · nema haldęndr ęigi,
 opt sér ó-gótt of gęlr.

He who never shuts up speaks plenty many utterings of absurdity.
 A quick-spoken tongue—unless it be held in place—oft sings evil [into being] for itself.

3–4 hrað-mælt ... of gælr ‘A quick-spoken ... for itself’ | Formulaic. Cf. Lok 31.

3 nema haldendr eigi ‘unless it be held in place’ | Lit. ‘unless holders own it’ or ‘unless it own holders’; the “holders” perhaps being the teeth which hold the tongue in place.

- 30 At auga-bragði · skal-a maðr annan hafa, 2 þótt til kynnis komi;
 margr fróðr þykkisk, · ef freginn es-at 4 ok nái þurr-fjallr þruma.

For a laughing-stock shall man not have another when he comes to visit.

Many a one seems learned if he is not asked,
 and gets to loiter about dry-skinned.

4 þurr-fjallr ‘dry-skinned’ | i.e. ‘untested’, equivalent to the English idiom get one’s feet wet. The word fell ~ fall ‘skin, pelt’ is rare in Old Norse literature and only occurs in cpds, e.g. Vkv 11: ber-fjall ‘bear-pelt’. It survives in modern Swedish fjäll ‘scale (on fish and reptiles)’

- 31 Fróðr þykkisk · sá’s flótta tækr 2 gæstr at gæst hœðinn;
 veit-a gørla · sá’s of verði glissir,
 4 þótt með gròmum glami.

Learned seems he who takes to flight,
 the guest, from a scoffing guest.

He knows not clearly, who grins over the food, that he be flirting with fiends.

2 gæstr ‘guest’ | The situation hinted at in this and the following stanza is that two guests—unknown to each other—have come to the same homestead. The sense is that when mocked by a stranger it is best not to engage, since the dealing may quickly turn violent. Cf. sts. 122, 123, and 125.

- 32 Gumnar margir · erusk gagn-hollir, 2 en at virði vrekask;
 aldar róg · þat mun é vesa;
 4 órir gæstr við gæst.

Many men are well true to each other,
 but over food drive each other away.
 The strife of mankind will that ever be;
 guest raves against guest.

2 at virði vrekask ‘over food drive each other away’ | The archaic initial vr- must be restored for metrical reasons. Since vr- > r- is never found in Scaldic poetry younger than 1000 this provides a solid dating criteria. For a summary of present research especially as it relates to the present poem see Males (2024, pp. 87–92).

- 33 Á-r-liga verðar · skyli maðr opt fæa, nema til kynnis komi;
 sitr ok snópir, · léttr sém solginn sé,
 ok kann fregna at fðu.

An early meal should man oft get,
 unless he come to visit:
 he sits and sulks, sounds as if starved,
 and can ask about little.

- 34 Af-hvarf mikit · es til ills vinar,
 þótt á brautu búi,
 en til góðs vinar · liggja gagn-vegir,
 þótt hann sé firr farinn.

A great offroad is it to a bad friend, though on the road he live,
 but to a good friend lie pleasant ways,
 though he be far gone.

- 35 Ganga skal, · skal-a gęstr vesa
 ę ĩ ęinum stað;
 ljufr verðr leįðr, · ef lęngi sitr annars flętjum á.

One shall go; he shall not be a guest forever in one place.
 The loved becomes loathed if for long he sits on another man's benches.¹²

1 skal | emend.; om. R

¹²The customary length of stay in old times was three nights, as noted in Eg, ch. 78: þat var engi siðr, at sitja lengr en þrjár nætr at kynni 'it was not customary to stay longer than three nights when visiting.' Compare a much more recent Jutish saying: en tredje dags gjæst stinker 'a third day's guest stinks', which closely resembles a maxim popularly attributed to Benjamin Franklin: "Guests, like fish, begin to smell after three days." It is probably inspired by such proverbs that Auden and Taylor translate the last two lines of this stanza as "He starts to stink who outstays his welcome, / in a hall that is not his own."

- 36 Bú es bętra, · þótt lítit sé,
 halr es hęima hęrr;
 þótt tvęr geitr ęgi · ok taug-ęrptan sal,
 þat 's þó bętra an bón.

A dwelling is better though small it be;
 each is a hero at home.

Though two goats he own and a cord-roofed hall,
it is yet better than begging.

¹ Bú es bętra, · þótt lítit sé ‘A dwelling is better though small it be’ | The b-line is missing the necessary alliteration, but no good emendation suggests itself.

- 37 Bú es bętra, · þótt lítit sé,
2 halr es hęima hvęrr;
blóðugt es hjarta · þęim’s biðja skal
4 sér i mál hvęrt matar.

A dwelling is better though small it be;
each is a hero at home.
Bloody is the heart in him who shall beg for his every meal of food.

- 38 Vöpnum sünüm · skal-a maðr vęlli á 2 feti ganga framarr,
því-at ö-víst ’s at vita, · nęr verðr á vegum úti 4 geirs of þorf guma.

From his weapons shall man on the plain not take one step further, for it is unsure to know, when on the ways outside,
man comes in need of a spear.

¹ vęlli á ‘on the plain’ | Formulaic, see note to st. 11.

² feti ganga framarr ‘take one step further’ | Formulaic. Cf. Lok 1: svá’t ęinu-gi feti gangir framarr ‘so that thou not take one step further’.

- 39 Fann’k-a mildan mann · eða svá matar góðan,
2 at vęri-t þiggja þęgit;
eða süns féar · svá-gi [...],
4 at lęið sé laun, ef þęgi.

I found not a generous man or one so good of meat,
that a gift were not accepted;
or one with his fee so not [...],
that the repayments were loathed, if he accepted [them].¹³

³ féar ‘fee’ | ‘Wealth, movable property, cattle’; see Index.

¹³No man is so generous that he would refuse a gift presented to him, nor loathe receiving a favour as thanks for his generosity.

- 40 Féar síns, · es fengit hefr, 2 skyli-t maðr þorð þola;
 opt sparir leiðum · þat's hefr ljúfum hugat;
 4 mart gengr verr an varir.
 Of his fee which he has earned should man not suffer need.
 Oft he saves for the loathed what he meant for the loved;
 much goes worse than he expects.

- 41 Vöpunum ok vóðum · skulu vinir glæðjask;
 2 þat 's á sjölfum sýnst;
 viðr-gefendr ok ęndr-gefendr · erusk vinir lengst,
 4 ef þat bíðr at verða vęl.
 With weapons and garments shall friends gladden each other;
 that is best seen on oneself.
 Givers-back and givers-again are friends for the longest if it comes to last long.

¹ Vöpunum ok vóðum 'With weapons and garments' | i.e. weapons and armour (the "garments" are probably no silks); friends are supposed to help each other and strengthen their "violence capital". This alliterative word-pair is formulaic and in other occurrences exclusively refers to implements of war; cf. e.g. Beow 39, where Shield's pyre-ship is loaded with hilde-wępnum and beaðo-wędum 'war-weapons and battle-garments'.

² þat 's á sjölfum sýnst 'that is best seen on oneself' | I.e. in your own lived experience.

⁴ þat 'it' | The friendship.

- 42 Vin sínum · skal maðr vinr vesa,
 2 ok gjalda gjof við gjof;
 hlátr við hlátri · skyli hólðar taka,
 4 en lausung við lygi.
 With his friend shall man be a friend,
 and pay gift against gift;
 laughter for laughter should men employ,
 but duplicity for lie.

- 43 Vin sínum · skal maðr vinr vesa,
 2 þeim ok þess vin;

en ó-vinar síns · skyli ęngi maðr
 4 vinar vinr vesa.

With his friend shall man be a friend,
 with him and with his friend;
 but his enemy's, should no man, friend's friend be.

44 Vęitst, ef vin átt, · þann's vęl trúir
 2 ok vilt af hęnum gótt geta, gęði skalt við þann · ok gjofum skipta,
 4 fara at finna opt.

Thou knowest, if thou hast a friend whom thou trustest well,
 and wilt get good from him:
 thoughts and gifts shalt thou exchange with him;
 journey to find him oft.¹⁴

¹⁴Several lines of the present st. are shared with st. 119.

45 Ef þú átt annan, · þann's illa trúir,
 2 vilt af hęnum þó gótt geta, fagrt skalt męla við þann, · en flátt hygga
 4 ok gjalda lausung við lygi.

If thou hast another whom thou trustest badly, and wilt yet get good from him:
 fairly shalt thou speak with him, but falsely think,
 and pay duplicity for lie.

3 fagrt ... męla, flátt hygga 'fairly ... speak, falsely think' | Formulaic, cf. sts. 90, 91.

46 Þat 's ęnn umb þann, · es þú illa trúir
 2 ok þér es grunr at gęði, hlęja skalt við þeim · ok of hug męla;
 4 glík skulu gjöld gjofum.

This is yet about him whom thou trustest badly, and about whom thou hast doubt:
 laugh shalt thou with him, and speak with care;
 repayments shall be equal to gifts.¹⁵

¹⁵Equivalent to the last line of the previous st. ("pay duplicity for lie").

47 Ungr vas'k forðum, · fór'k ęinn saman,

2 þá varð'k villr vega;
 auðigr þóttumk, · es annan fann'k,
 4 maðr es manns gaman.

Young was I once, I travelled alone;
 then I became lost of ways.
 Wealthy I thought me when another I found;
 man is man's pleasure.

48 Mildir fróknir · menn batst lifa,
 2 sjaldan sút ala;
 en ó-snjallr maðr · uggir hvat-vetna,
 4 sýtir é glögggr við gjöfum.

Generous, brave men live best;
 seldom they nourish sorrow—
 but the unvalorous man is frightened by anything, the stingy always grieves over gifts.

3 ó-snjallr, glögggr 'unvalorous, stingy' | Contrasting respectively with frókn, mildr 'brave, generous' in the first half of the stanza; very fine parallelism.

4 sýtir é glögggr við gjöfum 'the stingy always grieves over gifts' | After receiving a gift, one was culturally obliged to give something back. Cf. sts. 39, 145.

49 Váðir mīnar · gaf'k velli at 2 tveim tré-mönnum;
 rekkr þat þóttusk, · es rípt hofðu;
 4 nēiss es nökkviðr halr.

My garments I gave on the plain to two tree-men.
 Champions they seemed when cloaks they had;
 shameful is the naked hero.

1–4 ALL | I picture the scene in the following way: The wanderer comes walking along the plain when he sees two unadorned “tree-men”. Taking pity for the sorry-looking stick figures, he lends them some clothes, and from a distance they now look like fine chaps. Just such a frail, freezing figure, he argues, is man in his naked state; it is his clothes that afford the hero his status, and even the weak stick-man can look like a champion. Clearly this is quite a different view from the pre-Christian Greek celebration of the naked body, but in the cold Northern climes there was seemingly not much room for public nakedness.

2 tré-mönnum 'tree-men' | Man-shaped wooden figures. Much has been made of their appearance here, including seeing them as cultic idols, but whatever the case, the tone in the stanza is more pessimistic than reverent. Cf. the three stanzas spoken by a tree-man in Ragn (Ragn 38–40 in SkP VIII) and notes there.

4 halr 'hero' | The use of halr 'hero, warrior' (cf. sts. 36, 37) rather than the more neutral maðr 'man, person' is probably intentional.

- 50 Hrørnar þoll, · sú's stendr þorpi á,
 2 hlýr-at henni þorkr né barr;
 svá es maðr, · sá's mann-gi ann;
 4 hvat skal hann lengi lifa?

Wilters the pine that stands on the yard;
 shields her not bark nor leaf.
 So is the man who loves no man;
 why shall he live for long?

2 hlýr-at | 'blyrar' R

- 51 Eldi heitari · brinnr með illum vinum 2 friðr fimm daga,
 en þá sloknar, · es hinn sétti kómr,
 4 ok versnar allr vin-skapr.

Hotter than fire burns love among bad friends,
 for five days;
 but then goes out when the sixth one comes,
 and all the friendship worsens.

2 fimm daga 'for five days' | i.e. "for a week", which was originally five days long. See also st. 74 and the Index: five days.

- 52 Mikit eitt · skal-a manni gefa;
 2 opt kaupir sér i litlu lof, með hqlfum hlēif · ok með hqlu keri
 4 fekk ek mér fé-laga.

Much at once shall one not give a man;
 oft one buys him praise for little.
 With half a loaf and an awry cask
 I got myself a fellow.

4 fé-laga 'fellow' | A business partner or companion.

- 53 Lítilla sanda, · lítilla séva, 2 lítíl eru gæð guma;
 því-at allir menn · urðu-t jafn-spakir;
 4 hqlf es qld hvar.

Of small sands, of small seas:
 small are the senses of man.

For all have not become evenly knowing;
half is every man.

¹ Lítilla sanda, · lítilla séva ‘Of small sands, of small seas’ | Probably a partitive genitive, the sense being that man’s “horizons” are small; the universe will always be far greater than him.

³⁻⁴ því-at ... ǫld hvar. ‘For ... every man.’ | On the meaning of the second half of this stanza I find the view of Guðmundur Finnbogason (1929) most convincing; namely that every man has both strengths and weaknesses in terms of wisdom. As nobody can excel at everything, nobody is complete; every person is “half” (and it should be added that ON halfir has a more general sense of incompleteness than its English cognate). This interpretation fits particularly closely with sts. 71 and 132. — This stanza introduces several stanzas dealing with wisdom and foolishness.

2 éva til snotr séi;
 þeim es fyrða · fegrst at lifa,
4 es vël mart vitu.

Middle-clever should each man be;
never too clever.

For those men it is fairest to live,
who know well enough.

55 Meðal-snotr · skyli manna hværr,
2 éva til snotr séi;
 snotrs manns hjarta · verðr sjaldan glatt,
4 ef sá ’s al-snotr es á.

Middle-clever should each man be;
never too clever.

The clever man’s heart is seldom glad,
if its owner is all-clever.

56 Meðal-snotr · skyli manna hværr,
2 éva til snotr séi;
 orlög sín · viti engi maðr fyrir;
4 þeim es sorga-lausastr sefi.

Middle-clever should each man be;
never too clever.

His own orlay ought no man to know ahead;
his is the most sorrowless mind.

⁴ þeim es sorga-lausastr sefi. ‘his is the most sorrowless mind.’ | i.e. he who is ignorant of his fate. It is surely fitting that Woden should say this, having knowledge of the inevitable destruction of the world and himself (see Rakes of the Reins).

- 57 Brandr af brandi · brinnr unds brunninn es, 2 funi kveṡkisk af funa;
 maðr af manni · verðr at máli kuðr;
 4 en til dólskr af ðul.

Fire by fire burns until it is burned [out];
 flame is quickened by flame.
 Man by man becomes known through speech,
 but the too hickish from his folly.

4 dólskr 'hickish' | Derived from an ablaut variant of dalr 'valley, dale' + -iskr '-ish', the sense being 'provincial, not having left his (home) valley'. Cf. the Icelandic tribal names like vatns-dólr and lang-dólr 'inhabitants of Vatns-dalr (Waterdale), Lang-dalr (Longdale)'.

- 58 Ár skal rísa, · sá's annars vill 2 fé eða fjör hafa;
 sjaldan liggjandi ulfr · lér of getr,
 4 né sofandi maðr sigr.

Early shall he rise who another man's fee or life will have.
 Seldom gets the lying wolf the thigh,
 nor the sleeping man victory.

- 59 Ár skal rísa, · sá's á yrkjendr fáa,
 2 ok ganga síns verka á vit;
 mart of dvǫlr · þann's umb morgin sefr,
 4 halfr es auðr und hvqtum.

Early shall he rise who has workmen few,
 and go his work to meet.
 Much is kept back from him who in the morning sleeps;
 the brisk has half the wealth.

4 halfr es auðr und hvqtum 'the brisk has half the wealth' | i.e. the brisk man has already claimed half of a fortune by simply choosing to wake up early.

- 60 Þurra skíða · ok þakinna néfra, 2 þess kann maðr mjqt,
 ok þess viðar, · es vinnask megi
 4 mál ok misseri.

Of dry billets and thatching birch bark—of this man knows the measure, and of that firewood which he may use for a season and half-year.

4 mál ok misseri ‘for a season and half-year’ | Over nine months.

61 Þvegin ok mettr · ríði maðr þingi at,
 2 þótt sé-t vęddr til vęl;
 skúa ok bróka · skammisk ęngi maðr 4 né hęsts in hęldr, þótt hann hafi-t góðan.

Washed and full ought a man to ride to the Thing,
 although he be not clothed too well;
 of his shoes and breeches ought no man to be ashamed,
 nor the more of his horse,
 even though he haven’t a good one.

1 Þvegin ok mettr ‘Washed and full’ | A formulaic collocation. Cf. Reg 25 (kęmbör ‘combed’ — þvegin ‘washed’ — mettr ‘full’) and Vsp 33: (þó ‘washed’ — kęmböi ‘combed’). These examples attest to the importance of personal hygiene in the culture, something further seen by the ubiquity of combs in pre-Christian graves (TODO: archeological reference). The whole thing reminds of the passage from Germania ch. 22: Statim ē somnō, quem plerumque in diem extrahunt, lavantur, saepius calidā, ut apud quōs plūrimum hiems occupat. Lauti cibum capiunt: sēparātae singulis sēdēs et sua cuique mēnsa. Tum ad negōtia nec minus saepe ad convivia prōcēdunt armāti. ‘On waking from sleep, which they generally prolong to a late hour of the day, they take a bath, oftenest of warm water, which suits a country where winter is the longest of the seasons. After their bath they take their meal, each having a separate seat and table of his own. Then they go armed to business, or no less often to their festal meetings (convivia, i.e., their Things).’

5 þótt hann hafi-t góðan ‘although he has not a good one’ | Finnur Jónsson (1932) considers this a late insert, and I agree. It seems that the inserter was not aware of the rules of the Leeds-meter meter and interpreted the preceding c-verse (né hęsts in hęldr) as an a-verse of Ancient-words-law.

The two following sts. are written in opposite order in R, but a symbol at the start of each indicates that they should switch places.

62 Snapir ok gnafir, · es til sęvar kęmr,
 2 ęrn á aldinn mar;
 svá es maðr, · es með męrgum kęmr
 4 ok á for-męlęndr fāa.

He snaps and stoops when to the sea he comes,
 the eagle on the ancient sea.
 So is the man who among the many comes,
 and has spokesmen few.

4 á for-méðendr fáa ‘has spokesmen few’ | Shared with st. 25.

- 63 Fregna ok segja · skal fróðra hværr, 2 sá’s vill hēitinn horskr;
 einn vita · né annarr skal,
 4 þjóð væt ef þrír ’ru.

Ask and answer shall each learned man who wishes to be called sharp.
One shall know, another shall not;
 thirty know if there are three.

4 þjóð ‘thirty’ | Or “people, nation”; the sense is in any case “many, everybody”. For the translation “thirty” cf. Skm 82, a list of poetic expressions for various numerals: þjóð eru þrír tígir ‘a nation is thirty’ etc.

- 64 Ríki sitt · skyli ráð-snotra 2 hværr i hófi hafa;
 þá þat finnr, · es með fróknum kóm, r,
 4 at engi es einna hvatastr.

His own power should each counsel-clever man use in moderation.
 This he then finds when among the bold he comes—that noone is fiercest of all.¹⁶

3–4 þá ... einna hvatastr ‘then ...fiercest of all’ | Almost identical to Reg TODO/3–4, which however has flétrum ‘more men’ instead of fróknum ‘the bold’.

¹⁶i.e., every man has his match.

- 65 Orða þeira, · es maðr qðrum segir,
 2 opt hann gjöld of getr.

For those words which man says to another he oft gets recompense.

- 66 Mikils til snimma · kom’k i marga staði, 2 en til síð i suma;
 ql vas drukkitt, · sumt vas ó-lagat;
 4 sjaldan hittir leiðr i lið.

Much too early I came to many places,
 and too late to some:

The ale was drunk up, some was unbrewed—seldom finds the loathed his place.¹⁷

¹⁷i.e., “there are no wrong times, only wrong people”.

67 Hér ok hvar · myndi mér heim of boðit,
2 ef þyrpta’k at mólun-gi mat,
 eða tvau lér hengi · at hins tryggva vinar,
4 þar’s ek hafða ęitt etit.

Here and there would I to a home be invited,
if at meal-time I needed no food;
or if two hams should hang at the trusty friend’s [home], where I had eaten one.¹⁸

¹⁸Not everyone is hospitable, especially with regards to food, which was scarce and closely watched among the Norse subsistence farmers. The poet notes that even a “trusty friend” (possibly sarcastic) would invite him over more often if he brought more food than he ate.

68 Ełdr es batstr · með ýta sonum

4 án við lęst at lifa.

Fire is best among the sons of men,
and the sight of the sun;
one’s good health, if he manage to keep it—
[and] living free from vice.

69 Es-at maðr alls ve-sall, · þótt sé illa heill,
2 sumr es af sonum sęll,
 sumr af fręndum, · sumr af fę órnu,
4 sumr af verkum vęl.

Man is not all unblessed, though he be of poor health:
someone is blessed with sons;
someone with kinsmen, someone with ample fee, someone with works done well.

1 ve-sall ‘unblessed’ | Or “wretched”. I have elsewhere translated ve-sall as ‘wretched’, but in the present stanza I render it literally in order to show the etymological relationship to sēll ‘blessed’, the second element in the compound. The form -sall lacks i-umlaut due to a shortening of the vowel before the umlaut became phonemic; the ancestral Proto-Norse form would be wajē-sāliṛ*, for which cf. FföM-MfRlY wajē-marir ‘infamous’ on the Tjurkö bracteate, where the second element is the ancestor of ON mérr ‘renowned, famous’; the expected descendant ve-marr* is not attested. — I translate sēll as ‘blessed’, but it is not a past participle and could also be rendered as ‘lucky’ or ‘blissful’. It carries a certain sense of innateness that is foreign to modern Western culture; thus a king whose land experiences bountiful harvests (ár) is said to be ár-sēll ‘blessed with harvests’, while one whose kingdom is at peace (fríðr) is said to be fríð-sēll ‘blessed with peace’. In this worldview the state of the realm is not due to uncontrollable environmental or political factors, but rather arises from the kingly person himself. Such is by no means an exclusive Germanic conception, but is also shared e.g. with the Chinese, in whose political history the “mandate of Heaven” has been hugely important. TODO: Reference PCRN chapter).

2 sonum ... frændum ‘sons ... kinsmen’ | Cf. st. 72 below, which stresses the importance of sons and kinsmen.

- 70 Bętra ’s lifðom, · an sęi ó-lifðom,

 4

It is better for the living than it may be for the unliving:
 ever the quick gets the cow.

A fire I saw burning high for a wealthy man,
 but outside he was dead before the doors.¹⁹

1 an sęi ó-lifðom | emend.; ‘ęl lifðom’ R.

1 an sęi ó-lifðom ‘than it may be for the unliving’ | The reading of R, which would be normalized as ok sęl-lifðom ‘and for the blessed living’, is metrically defect since sęl- is strongly stressed and should carry alliteration. For the original form of the line we have a close parallel in Füfn 30: Hvøtum ’s bętra · an sę ó-bvøtum ‘It is better for the brisk than it may be for the unbrisk’, on which the pres. ed. is based. The corruption has probably happened in the following way: en* (younger form of an ‘than’) in the prototype was misinterpreted as en ‘and, but’ and copied as ę (the tironian et), while sęi ólifðom* (probably with the words cramped together) became sęl lifðom.

2 ęy getr kvikr kú ‘always gets the quick a cow’ | i.e., “new opportunities always present themselves for the living”. A reference to the cattle-based economy (see also st. 76), the cow being used as a metonym: (cf. churchly English ‘the quick and the dead’, i.e. ‘the living and the dead’).

¹⁹The fire is presumably the man’s funeral pyre, on which a considerable amount of his wealth has been spent; according to ibn Fadlan (TODO) two thirds of a dead chieftain’s estate was spent on his funeral. One notes the contrastive en ‘but’ and may understand it as follows: “I saw a lavish funeral held for a man, but he was still dead.” This interpretation is supported by the Háv 71 below, which expresses the same sentiment.

A son is better, though he late be born after a passed-on man.
 Seldom beat-stones stand near the road,
 save by kinsman for kinsman raised.

1 Sonr es bętri ‘A son is better’ | i.e. it is better for a man to have a son and heir than not, even if the father should die some time before he is born. The son can further his father’s lineage and memory (as exemplified by the raising of a “beat-stone”), and as the poet says, it is rare for a non-relative to do so.

3 bautar-stęinar ‘beat-stones’ | Large standing stones raised in memory of someone. Numerous such stones with runic inscriptions are known from migration period Norway, often near grave fields. Some hold only single personal names or short phrases, like the stone from Sunde in Sunnfjord, western Norway (signum KJ 90): ÞIMMÆTILY widugastir ‘Woodguest’, or the one from Bø in Rogaland, southwestern Norway (signum KJ 78): NTFEMÆ NTFPF hnabdas hlaiwa ‘Naved’s grave’. Others hold longer inscriptions, like the one from Kjølervik in Rogaland (signum KJ 75): NFMNFTFY MGFNÆTTFMY NTFPIWÆMFXNMHTÆ hadulaikaz ekhagustadaz hlaiwidomagumino ‘Hathlac [lies here]. I, Haystald, buried my lad.’

- 73 Tvęir ’ru ęins hęrjar, · tunga es hęfuðs bani;
 2 męr ’s i hęðin hvern · handar vęni.

Two are of one host: the tongue is the head’s bane;
 in every cloak I expect a hand.

1–2 ALL | The whole st. fits poorly in context, and the metre and style are very out of place; it is probably a later insert.

1 Tvęir ’ru ęins hęrjar ‘Two are of one host’ | i.e. “the tongue and head belong to the same body (but the former often leads to the latter’s demise).” — hęrjar is an inflected form of hęrr ‘host, army’, but its function is ambiguous; it can either be (1) the gen. sg., as adopted here, or (2) the nom. pl. ‘harriers, raiders’ (cf. ęin-hęrjar ‘Oneharriers’) which would translate as “two are the destroyers of one”, i.e. “the tongue and head often lead to the demise of the body”.

1 tunga es hęfuðs bani ‘the tongue is the head’s bane’ | Formulaic or proverbial. Cf. the Old Swedish “Heathen Law”, which describes how a duel should be conducted following an insult to a man’s honour (my norm. and trans. following Löffler (1879)): Fallr þann orð bavr givit—glópr orða verstr, tunga hovuð-bani—liggi i ú-gildum akri ‘If he falls who has given the [insulting] word—an insult is the worst of words, the tongue the head-bane—may he lie in an unhallowed field.’

2 handar ‘a hand’ | i.e. a hand holding a dagger.

2 skammar 'ru skips ráar 'short are a ship's sailyards' | TODO: Write about the varying interpretations (Finnur, Cleasby, Skp) of this line.

4 of viðrir 'The winds blow far' | I.e., the weather changes; a verb derived from veðr 'weather, wind'. Consider Weden's name Viðrir 'Withrer; Stormer, One of the Storm', which may be analyzed as an agent noun formed to this verb.

4 fimm dögum 'five days' | i.e. "in a week" (which was originally five days long), paralleling "month" in the next line. See note to st. 51 and Index.

 A man is wealthy, another not wealthy;

2 af aurum 'from wealth' | emend. from meaningless †aflaðrom† R

2 margr verður af aurum api 'many a man turns an ape from wealth' | Cf. Sun 34/4: margan hefr auðr apat 'wealth has aped many a man', which also lends support to the emendation.

1 Deyr fé, · deyja frændr ‘Fee dies, kinsmen die’ | This line is also found in Hákm 21, the final st. of that poem composed ca. 961.

1 fé, frændr ‘Fee, kinsmen’ | In the Germanic Iron Age farming society a man’s wealth was reckoned by how many heads of cattle (and the Norman loan-word cattle is itself the same word as capital) he owned, and his social power by the number of able male relatives ready to side with him in conflict (cf. st. 72 above and TODO: reference?). All one’s earthly power will pass away, and so too oneself, but a good reputation, fame and glory can linger on. For Indo-European poetic analogues, see West (2007, pp. 99 ff.).

It is likely that the original Guest-Strand ended here. The three following stanzas, especially the third, are poorly placed and seem like later inserts.

78 Fullar grindr · sá’k fyr Fitjungs sonum,

Then is proven that which thou learnest from the runes born of the Reins, those which the yin-Reins made,
and the Fimble-Thyle (= Weden) painted.—
Then he has it best, if he shuts up.²⁰

1 rūnum ... hinum rēgin-kunnum 'the runes born of the Reins' | This expression also appears on the C4th–6th Noleby stone (in the acc. sg. rúnó ragina-kundó 'a rune born of the Reins'), which proves that the Eddic rune-magic is (at least in part) founded in oral tradition going back to the Heathen age. See also Index rune.

2–3 þeim's ... Fimbul-þulr 'those which ... Fimble-Thyle' | Formulaic. Cf. st. 142 where these two lines occur almost identically, but in reverse order.

²⁰This stanza, which deals with runic magic and shares expressions with sts. in the Rune-Tally section (beginning with st. 138 below), hardly fits in its current place. The last line with its shift in person is likely to be a later insert.

Scattered stanzas of practical advice (81–90)

The following stanzas are distinguished by a common subject matter and a prevalence of Speeches-meter.

- 81 At kveldi skal dag leyfa, · konu es brēnnd es,
2 mēki es rēyndr es, · mēy es gefin es,

Come evening shall one praise day, a woman when she is burned,

2 gefin 'given' | In marriage.

In wind shall one cut wood, in weather row at sea, in darkness speak with a maiden—many are the eyes of day.
A ship shall one have for speed and a shield for protection,
a sword for striking and a maiden for kisses.

¹ veðri ‘weather’ | i.e. ‘in good weather’; elsewhere the word veðr typically means ‘storm’, but that can hardly be the sense here.

83 Við ęld skal ęl drekka, · en à ísi skriða,

2. völu vil-mēli 'in wallow's pleasing speech' | i.e. in a favourable prophecy (spae).

In R the following two sts. come in the opposite order, but it seems probable from its Speeches-meter meter and the dative case of the words that 89 should follow 87. On the other hand st. 88, with its Leeds-meter meter and self-enclosed form seems a separate composition, and was probably inserted after 87 due to its first line (akri ár-sǫnum), which is also in the dative.

- 89 bróður-bana sīnum · þótt á brautu móti, 2 húsi half-brunnu, · hęsti al-skjótum, in one's brother's bane—though on the road ye meet—in half-burned house, in all-fleet horse—

 the steed is useless if one foot breaks.
 No man be so trusting that he trust in all this!

- 88 Akri ár-sǫnum · trúi engi maðr,

So is the love of those women who falsely think like one rode an unshod horse on slippery ice—a merry one, two winters old, and ill-tamed—or in mad wind tacked a rudderless [ship], or a halt man should catch a reindeer on a thawing fell.

5 i þá-fjalli 'on a thawing fell' | I.e. in springtime, when the melting ice on the ground is most slippery.

The following two groups of sts. (91–102, 103–110) are united by their meter, Leeds-meter (unlike most of the preceding sts.), style, and content; both concern Weden's romantic adventures.

The first strand begins with general maxims about love and relations between the sexes, before moving on to the narrative about Billing's daughter. Billing is an entirely unknown figure, as is his daughter. All attempts to connect this myth to natural phenomena or heroic ballads have been unconvincing and ultimately fruitless.

91 Bērt nú mēli'k, · þvi-at bēði vēt'k,
2 brigðr es karla hugr konum, þā fēgrst mēlum, · es flást hyggyum;
4 þat tēlir horska hugi.

Plainly I now speak, for I know them both:
fickle is men's mind towards women.
Fairest we speak when falsest we think;
that entraps sharp minds.

1 bēði ‘them both’ | The natures of both sexes; bēði is neutr. pl., which in ON is used for mixed-sex groups. The (male) poet declares that he will not attack the fair sex unfairly; he is also aware of men’s faults.

3 fęgrst męlum ... flást hyggjum ‘speak fairest ... think falsest’ | Formulaic. Cf. st. 45.

4 þat tęlir horska hugi ‘that entraps sharp minds’ | Love (or sexual infatuation—the poet does not distinguish between them) turns even wise men into liars or otherwise dishonest persons. Cf. Mbkv 20/1–2, which is probably partly based on this stanza: Ást-blindir ’ru seggir svá · sumir, at þykkja mjök fás gá; // þannig verðr um man-sęng męlt: · marga hefr þat hyggna tęlt. ‘Some men are so love-blind that they seem to heed very little; // for that sake it is said about love-song: many thinking men has it entrapped.’

4 sá fęr, es fríar.

Fairly shall he speak and offer fee,
who will win a woman’s love:
praise the body of the bright girl—
he wins, who woos.

1 Fagrt skal męla ‘Fairly shall speak’ | Formulaic. Cf. st. 45.

4 sá fęr, es fríar ‘he wins, who woos’ | Only he who courts her will win her hand.

- 93 Ástar firna · skyli ęngi maðr

4 lost-fagrir litir ‘lust-fair hues’ | i.e. a (woman with a) countenance so beautiful that men cannot help but lust after her.

- 94 Eý-vitar firna, · es maðr annan skal,
2 þess es of margan ęngr guma;

In no way shall man blame another for that which happens to many a man;

3 allt eru ó-sköp ‘everything is misshapen’ | Or, “the shapes (i.e. fates, destinies) are all awry”. See Index: shape.

Back I turned—and thought myself in love—away from my wise will;
this I thought, that I would have

2 vísuð vilja frá ‘away from my wise will’ | i.e., “against my better judgment”; the wise choice would have been to walk away.

So I came next as the useful war-troop was all awake with burning lights and with carried sticks;
so a sad path was marked out for me.

1 nýta ‘useful’ | Sarcastic. Billing’s daughter had apparently summoned a lynch mob.

3 bornum víði ‘carried sticks’ | The mob was armed with clubs.

4 víl-stígr ‘sad path’ | Ambiguous, referring either to the beating he would have received at the hands of the mob, or to his walk of shame away from the hall. The latter is perhaps more likely.

101 Auk nēr morni, · es vas’k ęnn of kominn,

And by morning when I had come again, then was the hall-troop asleep.
A lone bitch I then found, by the good woman, bound upon the beds.

1 Auk nér morni ‘And by morning’ | Mirroring the beginning of st. 97 above.

3 grey çitt ‘A lone bitch’ | The insult is clearly understood; Weden is compared to a horny dog, and mockingly asked to make love to one—“this is all you get, you dog!”

3 góðu ‘good’ | Possibly not sarcastic, but rather referring to her chastity.

102 Mǫrg es góð mēr, · ef gǫrva kannar,
 2 hug-brigð við hali;
 þá þat reynda’k, · es hit ráð-spaka
 4 teygða’k á fléðir fljóð;

 6 ok hafða’k þess vęt-ki vífs.

Many a good maiden—if one comes to know her well—is heart-fickle towards men.

I found that out when the counsel-clever lady into sins I lured;
 every disgrace that sharp girl sought out for me, and I had naught of the woman.

1 góð mēr ‘good maiden’ | The “goodness” here refers to faithfulness and chastity. Cf. Skm 12, TODO.

Weden’s theft of the Mead of Poetry (103–110)

These stanzas concern Weden’s theft of the Mead of Poetry from the ettin Sutting. The same myth is laid out fully in Skm 5–6, which goes as follows, with minor details left out:

After the war between the Eese and Wanes, the two tribes of gods reconcile through spitting into a vat. Not wanting to discard this token of their truce, they instead make a man out of the spit and call him Quasher. He is so wise that he can answer any question posed to him, and so he travels around the world in order to share his learning with men.

Quasher eventually comes to the dwelling of two dwarfs, Fealer and Galer. They kill him and drain his blood into three vessels: two vats named Soon and Bothem, and a kettle named Woderear. They mix the blood into honey, and from this they make a mead which can make whomever drinks from it “a scold or man of learning (skald eða fróða-maðr)”. The dwarfs lie to the Eese about the murder, telling them that Quasher drowned in his own wisdom for a lack of good questions.

Some time later, the dwarfs murder the ettin Gilling and his wife. Gilling’s son, Sutting, learns of this and prepares to drown the dwarfs. In exchange for their lives and as weregild for his parents, the dwarfs offer Sutting the “dear mead” (mjǫð’inn dýra; cf. here sts. 105 and 140). Sutting accepts the payment and takes the mead home with him. He places his daughter Guthlathe in a cave to guard it.

Chapter 6 continues as Weden is wandering through the world. He finds nine thralls mowing hay and lends them aid by sharpening their scythes with a special whetstone. They now cut much faster. He throws the whetstone in the air and the greedy thralls fight to the death over it, leaving none alive. By evening Weden comes to the owner of the thralls, Baye, Sutting's brother. Baye laments the death of his workmen, and so Weden, calling himself Baleworker, offers to do their work over the summer in exchange for one drink of the mead. Baye tells him that Sutting alone owns the mead, but that he will accompany him to Sutting's to ask.

In autumn the two arrive at Sutting's, who expectedly refuses to give any part of the mead away. Weden then tells Baye that he will get to it anyway. He takes out the drill Rate and tells Baye to drill through the mountains into the cave where the mead is stored. Baye first attempts to trick him by only drilling halfway through, but eventually creates a narrow passage. Weden turns himself into a snake and crawls through it; as he does, Baye tries to strike him with the drill, but misses.

On the other side Weden finds Guthlathe watching over the mead. He seduces her, and she promises him three sips of the mead in exchange for sleeping with her for three nights. Weden sleeps with her and then drinks. With each sip he swallows the contents of one of the three vessels, so that all of the mead ends up in his belly.

Having drunk the mead, he dons his eagle-hame and flies away from the mountain. Sutting sees him, takes his own eagle-hame, and gives chase. The Eese see the chase overhead and set out several large vats on the ground, into which Weden, still flying, spits out the mead. At this point Sutting has almost caught up with him, and so Weden "sends back" (şenda aptŗ, viz. from behind) some of the mead, presumably into Sutting's face.

The mead in the vats is given to the Eese and to skilled poets (þeim mǫnnum, er yrkja kunnu 'those men who can compose verse'), and the portion which was "sent back" becomes the lot of foolish poets (skald-fýfla blutr).

The narrative core most likely goes back to the Bronze Age, for a close parallel is found in the Vedic myth of the origin of the ritual drink Sóma which in the Vedic mythology is not just the plant and its resulting drink, but also a god in its own right. The earliest version is found in the two hymns ṚV 4.26 and 27, in which the Sóma is held inside "a hundred bronze forts" (4.27.1c: śatām púras āyasis) by the archer Kṛśānu, but is stolen by a sweeping, mighty Eagle who brings it to Mānu, the first human sacrificer and ancestor of the Aryans. Kṛśānu does not himself give chase, but does shoot his arrows at the Eagle, missing.

Now onto the present stanzas. The biggest difference between Skm 5–6 and Háv 103–110 is that Háv is very far from a linear retelling of events, and on its own the narrative thread is actually quite difficult to follow.

The most important detail shared between Skm and the Vedic hymns—the eagle—is not found in Háv. Other important Skm elements not found in the present stanzas are Quasher, the two dwarfs, and Baye, and it is thus made clear that Snorre's narrative cannot be exclusively based on Háv, but must also rely on other, now-lost sources. That this is indeed the case is proven by the large number of kennings for poetry found in the Scaldic poetry, which reference Quasher's blood, the two dwarfs, the eagle's flight and its "sending back" of a certain part of the mead (Meissner, 1921, pp. 427–430), the last one being expressed through kennings like Þstf Lv 3 (SkP II) leiirr ara ins gamla 'dung of the ancient eagle [BAD POETRY]'.¹

On the other hand there are elements found in Háv which do not appear in Skm, and the focus of the stanzas is squarely on Weden's visit to Sutting, particularly on his betrayal him and his daughter, Guthlathe, which contrasts with the transactional three-night affair seen in Skm. It is possible that the version underlying Háv even had Weden marry Guthlathe, thereby receiving the mead as a dowry. This is supported by the expression hins bindra dags (st. 109), and would explain Weden's oath (st. 110). The recipient of the oath may even have been Sutting, the father of the bride, as suggested by the description of him as svikvinn 'betrayed' and by the fact that he perhaps hosted a banquet for Weden (st. 110), although an internal problem with that view is that Weden is still said to have had to bore through the mountains (st. 107), presumably to reach Guthlathe, in which case it comes off as unlikely that he would then have asked Sutting for her hand, rather than simply seducing her then-and-there in her chamber. See further notes to the relevant stanzas.

The present sts. are ordered according to R, the only medieval witness manuscript. They begin with some social advice (103), after which the narrative follows (104–110), retold in the first person by Weden himself. The sts. do not tell the myth in chronological order and leave much up to the listener; they are clearly composed for an audience that already knows the story.

1 Vēl kępts hlutar ‘The well bought thing’ | The Mead of Poetry; it was “well bought” in that the price Weden paid for it was three nights with Guthlathe.

The following day went the Rime-Thurses to ask for the High One’s counsel, in the High One’s hall;
 for Baleworker they asked, if he were come among the Bonds (Gods), or if Sutting had slain him.

1 Hins hindra dags ‘The following day’ | This is the only occurrence of the comparative bindra ‘following, next’ in the whole Old Norse-Icelandic corpus. The superlative bindstr ‘last, final’ does occur (e.g. indsta sinni ‘the last time’, with loss of the b-; see CV: bindri), and the possible derivative bindar-dags ‘day after tomorrow, two days after’ is found twice, both times in the Gula, chh. 37 and 266. Looking at the broader Scandinavian sphere, however, we find in the Swedish provincial laws an exact equivalent of the present phrase, namely OSwe. bindra-dagber, a law-word referring specifically to the day after the wedding, used both on its own and in the expression bindra-dags gief ‘morning gift’. If this is indeed the sense in the present stanza, two interpretations are possible: it either (a) refers sarcastically to how Weden slept with Guthlathe as would be done on the wedding night, or (b) means that Weden actually married, or promised to marry, Guthlathe. The latter interpretation may find support in st. 109, see notes there.

 4 ok grótta Gunn-löðu.

A high-oath I ween that Weden has sworn—how shall one trust his truces?
 Away from the simble he left Sutting, betrayed, and Guthlathe, made to weep.

1–4 ALL | The exact narrative referred to in the stanza is hard to pin down, but I find the following most likely: Weden swore an oath on a high (an arming), its contents being that he would marry Guthlathe. Sutting then hosted a simble (banquet, drinking feast) for the new couple (cf. bins bindra dags in st. 108), and Weden slept with her, but after. svikvinn ‘betrayed’ and grótta ‘brought to tears’ are (respectively masc. and fem.) acc. sg. past participles of the transitive verbs svikva ‘to betray’ and gróta ‘to make weep, bring to tears’. I read lét as meaning ‘left, abandoned, forsook’.

The Speeches of Loddfathomer (111–137)

The so-called Speeches of Loddfathomer (ON Loddfáfnismól) is a series of advice stanzas addressed to Loddfathomer, an otherwise unknown figure who is clearly fictional. His name is a compound: the first element, lodd-, is related to ON loddari ‘juggler, tramp’, OE loddere ‘pauper, beggar’, and the second, Fáfnir (Fathomer), is the name of the famous wyrm which literally means ‘embracer’. The name paints the picture of an archetypal greedy fool in desperate need of the wisdom taught by Weden, his intellectual superior. Loddfathomer reappears in st. 164, but is not found anywhere outside of Háv.

The content of the advice is often identical to that found in the Guest-strand (1–79) above, but on the other hand some items have a noticeably superstitious or religious character, something generally absent in 1–79.

In R stanza 111 has a noticeably larger initial M, albeit smaller than the initials which introduce new chapters and poems.

4 fjalli eða firði 'on fell or firth' | Hiking through mountains or sailing at sea; an expression just as well at home on Iceland as in Norway. This word pair is a formulaic merism, and although this is the only poetic attestation it is also found a few times in the Old Norwegian laws (TODO: reference).

1 Ofar-la ‘Sorely’ | Contraction of ofar-liga ‘CV: high up, in the upper part’, presumably meaning that the words were particularly grievous or insulting, i.e., they “got to him”. Whether the man was murdered or committed suicide is not clear.

3 flá-rðð tunga ‘a false-counseling tongue’ | Cf. Lok 31/1: fló ’ þér tunga ‘false is thy tongue’.

4 gaman-rúnum ‘pleasure-runes’ | Here “rune” appears to carry its root meaning of ‘whisper, counsel, speech’, thus ‘pleasing speech’. Cf. st. 129 where this word reoccurs.

5 líknar-galdr ‘liking-galders’ | Ways of speaking which will make one liked or popular. For líkn ‘liking’ see sts. 8 (with note) and 123.

1–2 því-at ... geta ‘For ... praise’ | Cf. st. 117/6–7.

4 líkn-fastan ‘steadfast in liking’ | The first element líkn ‘liking’ is somewhat difficult; see sts. 8 (with note) and 120. For the present cpd La Farge and Tucker (1992) give a tentative ‘assured of favour’, while CV gives ‘fast in goodwill, beloved’.

4 þrím orðum ‘With three words’ | I.e. ‘not even with three words’. If one understands orð to mean ‘speech’ (a valid sense), we may understand that if one man says something (the first speech) to which another responds with an insult (the second speech), the first man should not retaliate (the third speech) and escalate the dispute.

²³I.e. “if somebody puts a curse on you, acknowledge it and act decisively”. This st. has often been interpreted as a command to call out evil, even when committed towards somebody else, and while there is nothing in it that speaks decisively against such a reading, it does not agree with the general spirit of the Háv, which is one of caution and shrewdness.

6 halir ‘warriors’ | Some sort of “supernatural sky warriors” to quote Pettit (1986)—perhaps even the Oneharriers.

²⁴ An obscure superstition; the interpretation hinges on the word gjalti ‘madman’ dat. sg., which must be compared with closely related phrase verða at gjalti ‘to be turned into a “gelt”’.

(1) CV explains it as an old dative of goltr ‘boar, hog’. This necessitates an irregular breaking of ja < ǣ, since goltr (< Proto-Norse galtur*) is an u-stem and should have dat. sg. gēti (< galtiu*, cf. kunimudiu, dat. sg. of Kunimundur*, on the Tjurkö 1 bracteate).

(2) The generally accepted explanation in modern scholarship seems to be a borrowing from Old Irish geilt ‘insane, mad’ (so La Farge and Tucker (1992) and others). The closest parallel to the present stanza is the C12th or C13th tale of Suibhne mac Colmáin, who was cursed by saint Rónán Finn to become mad; the curse took effect when he looked into the sky during a battle, after which he was known as Suibhne geilt. Earlier attestations of the same story are found as early as the 840s (see Males (2024, p. 100)).

4 gaman-rúnum 'pleasure-runes' | While easily interpreted as 'sexual intercourse', the word is used in st. 120 in a decidedly non-sexual sense. Its base meaning is probably 'good conversation'.

I counsel thee, Loddfathomer—and thou oughtst to learn the counsels;
 thou wilt have use if thou learn,
 they will be good for thee if thou get:
 At a hoary thyle do never laugh;
 oft is good that which old men sing.
 Oft from scorched leather come discerning words;
 from him who hangs with hides,
 and dangles with dry skins,
 and sways among lads of toil [THRALLS].²⁵

²⁵TODD: Some note. vil-mǫgum meaning 'veal-stomachs'? Cf. Crawford's video and Finnur on this.

I counsel thee, Loddfathomer—and thou oughtst to learn the counsels;
 thou wilt have use if thou learn,
 they will be good for thee if thou get:
 At a guest bark not, nor spit at the gate;
 furnish the destitute well.

4 né á grind hrækir 'nor spit at the gate' | The guest is presumably standing behind gate waiting for the farmer to open it and let him in.

 every kind of guile onto thy limbs.

1–4 ALL | This stanza is rather difficult, but it clearly relates to the advice in the previous one. The sense seems to be that one's house (symbolized by the door swinging open) will be strengthened by generosity, but weakened and cursed by greed.

I counsel thee, Loddfathomer, that thou learn the counsels;
 thou wilt have use if thou learn,
 they will be good for thee if thou get:

Wherever thou drinkest ale choose for thee the earth's might,
 for earth takes against drunkenness and fire against sicknesses, oak against dysentery, the ear of corn against sorcery, bearded rye against hernia—in feuds shall one hail Moon—heather against bite-sicknesses and runes against a bale;
 earth shall be taken against flood.

1–9 ALL | This stanza gives a rare glimpse into Wiking Age folk medicine and magic. The exact application of the listed cures is naturally uncertain; is the drunk man, for example, supposed to ingest dirt or should he simply (in some way) invoke the earth?

7 heiptum skal Mána kvēðja 'in feuds shall one hail Moon' | That the Moon had a certain "might" is also attested in Vsp 5; it is presumably for this might which he is invoked here, that he may give strength to the man in conflict. For kvēðja 'hail, invoke' cf. Lok P3.

The Rune-Tally (138–146)

This group of stanzas is introduced by a large initial in R, marking the beginning of a new section. In younger paper manuscripts they have the header

Rúna-tals þátrr ‘Strand of the Rune-Tally’, and generally give an archaic, mystic impression; at times one gets a feeling that they were drawn from the lips of an Odinic priest.

Apart from these stanzas there are a few other manuscript attestations of similar Runic magic. Closest at hand is st. 80 above, which would fit seamlessly into the present section. Outside of Háv there is Sigrdr 5–17, also preserved in R.

 6 hvers af rótum rinnr.

I know that I hung on the windy beam for nine nights all, wounded by spear and given to Weden, myself to myself,
 on that tree where no man knows of whose roots it runs.

1 vindga-meiði ‘the windy tree’ | Generally understood to be a variant of vinga-meiðr ‘gallows tree’, a word found in three Scaldic stanzas (SkP signa: Egill Lv 14, Eyv Hál 5, Anon (FoGT) 17).

5–6 á þeim meiði, es mann-gi veið, hvers af rótum rinnr ‘on that tree where no man knows of whose roots it runs.’ | Probably Ugdrassle’s Ash, which is named after this hanging, being the “ash-tree of Ug’s (Weden) gallows”. The unknowability of its roots clearly adds to the mystery of the self-sacrifice.

 I peered down; I took up the runes; screaming I took—I fell back thence.

1 Við hlęifi mik sóldu-t · né við horni-gi ‘With loaf they relieved me not, nor with any horn.’ | I.e. “I got neither bread to eat nor ale to drink.”

4 ausinn Óð-róri.

Nine fimble-leeds I learned from the famed son and a drink I got of the dear mead poured from Woderearer.

1 Fimbul-ljóð níu 'Nine fimble-leeds' | Nine very great chants or spells (galders), compare the eighteen leeds below (st. 147 onward). It is unclear what this has to do with Weden's Hanging; this stanza may be an insert.

1–2 hinum frégja syni Bólþorns, Bestlu föður 'the famed son of Balethorn, Bestle's father' | According to Gylf 6: [Borr] fekk þeirar konu, er Bestla hét, dóttir Bólþorns jötuns, ok fengu þau þrjá sonu; hét einn Óðinn, annarr Vili, þriði Vē [...] '[Byre] got the wife called Bestle, the daughter of the ettin Balethorn, and they had three sons: one was called Weden, the other Will, the third Wigh.' Balethorn's son is then Weden's uncle, an instance of the old Indo-European custom of sending sons away to be fostered by the mother's male relations. Cf. TODO: some reference.

2 ok vaxa ok vęl hafask;

4 verk mér af verki · verks leitaði.

Then I took to flourish and be wise,
and grow and have it well.
My word from a word a word sought out;
my work from a work a work sought out.

1 nam'k frévask 'I began to flourish' | A notorious mistranslation popularized by Greenberg (1988) has rendered these words as "I took semen". They would supposedly reference Weden stealing the ejaculate from hanged men in order to replenish his own powers—something not otherwise attested. This preposterous notion makes no sense in the context of the text and has no philological grounding. While Old Norse fré does mean "seed", it only refers to the seeds of plants, not the seed animals or men. Regardless, frévask is without doubt a reflexive verb literally meaning something like 'cultivate oneself'.

3–4 orð ... leitaði. 'My word ...sought out.' | Every good speech led to another; every good deed likewise.

and Roft (= Weden) of the Reins carved.

6 ragna 'of the Reins' | 'ragna' R

1 Rúnar munt finna · ok ráðna stafi 'Runes wilt thou find, and interpreted staves' | A strong resemblance is found in the long-line on the medieval runestone N 13: rúnar ek rist · ok ráðna stafi 'runes I carve, and interpreted staves.'

143 Óðinn með ǫsum, · en fyr ǫlfum Dáinn,

Weden among the Eese and Dowen for the Elves;
Dwollen for the Dwarfs;

4 ek 'I' | The identity of the speaker is unclear; one would expect it to be Weden, but He is already named in line 1.

Veitst, hvé biðja skal? · Veitst, hvé blóta skal?

Knowest thou how one shall carve? Knowest thou how one shall read?
Knowest thou how one shall paint? Knowest thou how one shall try?
Knowest thou how one shall bid? Knowest thou how one shall blood?
Knowest thou how one shall send? Knowest thou how one shall soo?^{26, 27}

²⁶The first four verbs refer to runes: carving, interpreting, colouring (with blood?), and divining. The latter four refer to sacrifice: praying, worshipping, sending (the sacrifice or the prayer to the gods), and wasting the victim. See further relevant Index entries: blood, soo.

²⁷The meter of this st. is unusual, but bears some resemblance to Vg 216 (the Högstena galder). TODO: Elaborate.

It is better unbid than over-blooded;
a gift always looks for recompense.

It is better unsent than over-sooed;

1–4 ALL | An identical progression of four verbs suggests a close relation with the previous st. — I believe Males (2024) has the correct interpretation: since a gift always requires recompense, an excessive sacrifice could be seen as offensive and upset the relationship with the god. Males draws the analogy with an episode in Eg, where a rival poet leaves an expensive shield for Eyel and rides off; the latter understands this as a demand to compose a poem about the shield, and is greatly angered. The cycle of gifts and rewards between men and the gods is very important in Indo-European pagan religions; compare the Sanskrit phrase Debi me, dádamī te ‘Give to me, I give to thee’ and Latin dō ut dēs ‘I give that thou might give’.

4 [...] | For metrical reasons it is very likely that a line has been lost here.

146 Svá Þundr of reist · fyr þjóða røk,

Thus did Thound (= Weden) carve for the rakes of nations,

²⁸TODO: A very cryptic st.

The Leed-Tally (147–165)

This section of Háv, the so-called the Leed-Tally (Ljóðatal), is not separated from the preceding section (which is marked out with a large initial), but is usually taken as separate since it is a self-contained list not much concerned with runes. The speaker, Weden, addressing Loddfathomer, lists eighteen galders or spells he knows. The spells themselves are not given; only their purpose. They are aristocratic and Odinic in character and deal with such things as battle (3, 4, 5, 8, 11, 13), healing (galder 2, 12), countering sorcery (6, 10), controlling the elements (7, 9), and seduction (16, 17). The eighteenth and last spell is a mystery; not even its purpose is told, and it is known only by Weden and his closest women.

There is a clear relation to other known Germanic galders. The fourth bears a strong likeness to Grg 10, and its effect (removing fetters) is shared with the High German Mers I, an actual galder of that type. The mysterious eighteenth spell finds an interesting parallel in the unknowable eighteenth question posed by Weden in Vafþ 54.

147 Ljóð þau kann’k, · es kann-at þjóðans kona

Hjǫlp heitir ęitt, · þat þér hjalpa mun

4 við sorgum ok sǫkum, · ok sútum gǫrv-ǫllum.

Those leeds I know, which no king's wife knows,
and no man's lad.

Help is one called, it will help thee against sorrows and sakes, and all kinds of griefs.

4 sǫkum 'sakes' | Legal charges, the first element of English sakeless.

148 Þat kann'k annat, · es þurfu ýta synir,
2 þeir's vilja lēknar lifa.

This I know second, which the sons of men need,
who wish to live as leechers.

1 þurfu ýta synir 'the sons of men need' | Cf. the similar wording in 166/2.

149 Þat kann'k þriðja, · ef mér verðr þorǫf mikil
2 hapti við mína heipt-mögu, eggjar deýfi'k · minna and-skota,
4 bíta-t þeim vöpn né vëlir.

This I know third, if I come in great need of hindrance against my feud-lads [FOES];
I dull the edges of my opponents;
for them bite no weapons nor staffs.

4 vëlir 'staffs' | Plural of vplr, here referring to the magic staff or sceptre used by witches and warlocks; the word vplua 'wallow' (seeress, prophetess) is probably derived from this word. The reading vélir 'wiles, tricks, deceits' must be excluded for metrical reasons, since a c-verse in Leeds-meter cannot end in a trochée.

150 Þat kann'k fjórða, · ef mér fyrðar bera
2 bǫnd at bóg-limum,
svá ek gæl, · at ganga má'k, 4 sprettr mér af fótum fjǫturr, en af hǫndum hapt.

This I know fourth, if men bear bonds onto my shoulder-limbs:
so I gale that I may walk;
springs from my feet the fetter,
and from my hands the bond.

1–5 ALL | Cf. Gr̥g 10, which is very similar to the present stanza, and Mers I (edited below under Galders), a galder that seems actually to have been used for loosening fetters.

- 151 Þat kann'k fimta, · ef sé'k af fāri skotinn 2 flēin i folki vaða, flýgr-a svá stint, · at stöðvi'g-a'k,
 4 ef hann sjónum of sé'k.

This I know fifth, if I see a dangerously shot arrow in the troop wading:
 it flies not so stiff that I may not stop it,
 if I see it with my sights.

- 152 Þat kann'k sétta, · ef mik sérir þegn
 2 á rótum rás viðar, þann hal, · es mik heipta kveðr,
 4 þann eta meín heldr an mik.

This I know sixth, if athane wounds me on the roots of a raw/sappy tree:
 that man who sings hatred against me,
 him the harms eat instead of me.

3 þann hal 'that man' | ok þann hal 'and that man' R

1–2 ef mik sérir þegn á rótum rás viðar 'if athane wounds me on the roots of a raw/sappy tree' | I.e., "if a man carves a runic curse against me". The sappy wood was apparently of importance for the curse; cf. the curious account of Grettis 79, where a hag curses Grettir in the following way: after finding a small tree and planing a small smooth surface onto a scorched side of it, she carves runes in its roots and reddens them with her own blood. She then chants galders while walking counter-clockwise around it. Lastly she pushes it out to sea, praying for it to drift to Grettir's homestead and curse him. Cf. also Skm 32 where Shirner goes to a brár viðr 'raw/sappy tree' to get a certain curse-object.

2 rás 'raw/sappy' | The normal form of this word is brár (cf. Skm 32), but the required alliteration with rótum makes it impossible here.

- 153 Þat kann'k sjaunda, · ef sé'k hōvan loga 2 sal of sess-mōgum, brinnr-at svá breitt, · at hōnum bjargi'g-a'k;
 4 þann kann'k galdr at gala.

This I know seventh, if I see a high hall ablaze over seat-lads [WARRIORS]:
 it burns not so broadly that I cannot save it—
 that galder I can gale.

1 loga 'ablaze' | The word order makes this word look like the noun logi 'flame' ("if I see a high flame"), but the noun modified by the adj. hōvan 'high' is in fact sal 'hall', and loga is a verb 'to burn, be ablaze'.

4 galdr 'galder' | The use of this word makes the synonymy of "galder" and "leed" (ljóð) clear.

- 154 Þat kann’k átta, · es qllum es
 2 nyt-sam-ligt at nema, hvar’s hatr vęx · með hildings sonum,
 4 þat má’k bóta brátt.

This I know eighth, which for all men is useful to learn:
 wherever hatred grows among a prince’s sons,
 it I may shortly mend.

3 hatr ‘hatred’ | i.e. with regard to the father’s inheritance.

- 155 Þat kann’k níunda, · ef mik nauðr of stęndr 2 at bjarga fari mínu á floti, vind ek kyrrí · vági á 4 ok svęfi’k allan sę.

This I know ninth, if I come in need of saving my ride on a floater [SHIP]:
 the wind I calm upon the wave,
 and put all the sea asleep.

- 156 Þat kann’k tíunda, · ef sé’k tún-riður 2 lęika lopti á,
 ek svá vinn’k, · at þęr villar fara 4 sinna hęim-hama
 sinna hęim-huga.

This I know tenth, if I see town-rideresses playing aloft:
 I work it so that they go astray
 of their home-hames, of their home-minds.

3 þęr villar fara ‘they (fem.) go astray’ | emend.; þęir villir fara ‘they (masc.) go astray’ R

1 tún-riður ‘town-rideresses’ | The riður ‘rideresses’ were witches who would leave their original human shapes or skins (hamir) in order to fly around in the air tormenting and poisoning villagers. Their original bodies would then be lying in a coma-like state, something like “astral projection”. It was not the case that their whole mental faculties would disconnect from their bodies, but rather they would leave behind something of their humanity, which was thought to be inextricably linked to their human bodies. Through his second sight, Woden was could see these riders, and would then use his superior magical wisdom to confuse them so that they would not be able to return to their human “home-shapes” or minds, but would instead be forced to stray as tormented bodyless ghosts; a cruel fate. Woden also brags about tricking riders in Hárþ 20.

- 157 Þat kann’k ęllipta, · ef skal’k til orrostu

- 2 lęiða lang-vini,
und randir gęl'k, · en þęir með ríki fara, 4 hęilir hildar til,
 hęilir hildi frá,
6 koma þęir hęilir hvaðan.

This I know eleventh, if I shall into the fray lead old friends:
beneath the shields I gale, and they go with power healthy to the battle, healthy from the battle;
they return healthy anywhence.

2. lang-vini 'old friends' | In Germanic paganism the followers and protégés of a god are his friends (vinir). Already in Beow we see that the Shieldings are called the Ing-wine 'friends of Ing', and in Hym 11 Thunder is called the vinr ver-liða 'friend of manly retainues'. Two other places where it is used of Woden's followers in particular are Grm 54 and Sont 22, where Egel speaks about his friendship (vin-átt) with Woden.

- 158 Þat kann'k tolpta, · ef sé'k á tré uppi 2 váfa virgil-ná,
 svá ek ríst · ok i rúnum fá'k, 4 at sá gęngr gumi.
 ok męilir við mik.

This I know twelfth, if I see in a tree up high a gallow-corpse dangling;
so I carve and paint in the runes, that that man walks
and speaks with me.

- 159 Þat kann'k þrettánda · ef skal'k þęgn ungan 2 verpa vatni á,
 mun-at hann falla · þótt i folk komi,
4 hnígr-a sá halr fyr hjorum.

This I know thirteenth, if on a young thane
I shall sprinkle water:
he will not fall though he come into battle;
that warrior sinks not down before swords.

1-2. ef skal'k þęgn ungan verpa vatni á 'if on a young thane I shall sprinkle water' | A reference to the Heathen name-giving ceremony in which the infant would be sprinkled with water; cf. the attestations in Rþ 7, 21, 34.

- 160 Þat kann'k fjórtánda, · ef skal'k fyrða liði

- 2 tēlja tíva fyr,
 ása ok alfa · ek kann allra skil,
 4 fár kann ó-snotr svá.
- This I know fourteenth, if before a retinue of men
 I shall count forth the Tews:
 of the Eese and Elves all I know the discernments;
 few unwise men can do so.

³ skil 'discernments' | Their unique traits. Cf. Hym 38, where the corresponding verb skilja 'to discern, understand' is used in the context of god-lore.

- 161 Þat kann'k fimtánda, · es gól Þjóð-rórir 2 dvergr fyr Dēllings durum, afl gól ôsum, · en ôlfum frama,
 4 hyggju Hropta-tý.
- This I know fifteenth, which Thedrearer galed, the dwarf, before Delling's doors.
 Strength he galed for the Eese, and fame for the Elves, thought for Roft-Tew (= Weden).
- 162 Þat kann'k sextánda, · ef vil'k hins svinna mans 2 hafa gēð allt ok gaman, hugi hvef'k · hvit-armri konu
 4 ok sný'k hennar öllum sefa.
- This I know sixteenth, if I will from the smart girl have her senses all, and pleasure:
 the heart I change of the white-armed woman,
 and I twist her whole mind.

- 163 Þat kann'k sjautjanda · at mik sēint mun firrask 2 hit man-unga man.
- This I know seventeenth, that the girl-young girl will lately shun me.

- 164 Ljóða þessa · munt Loddfáfnir 2 lengi vanr vesa;
 þó sé þér góð ef getr,
 4 nýt ef nemr,
 þorð ef þiggr.

These leeds wilt thou, Loddfathomer, for long be lacking!
 Though they would be good for thee if thou get,
 useful if thou learn,
 needful if thou receive.

- 165 Þat kann'k á tjánda, · es éva kenni'k 2 mey né manns konu,
 —allt es bæt看ra · es einn of kann,
 4 þat fylgir ljóða lokum—

 6 eða mín systir séi.

This I know eighteenth, which I will never teach a maiden nor man's woman, (everything is better which one alone knows;
 that follows the last of the leeds,
 save for her alone who holds me in her arm, or is my sister.

5 mik armi verr 'holds me in her arm' | A similar expression is also used Vkv 2. The one who wraps Weden in her arm may be his wife, Frie.

- 166 Nú eru Hóva mól kveðin · Hóva hollu i; 2 all-þorfr ýta sonum,
 ó-þorfr jötna sonum;
 4 heill sá's kvað, · heill sá's kann,
 njóti sá's nam,
 6 heilir þeir's hlýddu.

Now are the High One's speeches sung in the High One's hall, of great use for the sons of men,
 of harm for the sons of ettins.
 Hail he who sang; hail he who knows;
 may he use who learned;
 hail they who heeded!

3 jötna 'ettins' | corr. by other hand from ýta 'men' R

4–6 kvað, kann, nam, hlýddu 'sang, knows, learned, heeded' | The implied subject is the speeches, i.e. 'hail he who sang them, hail he who knows them,' et.c.

Speeches of Webthrithner

(Vafþrúðnismál)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C10th (0.894)

Meter: Leeds-meter

Introduction

The Speeches of Webthrithner (Vafþ) are found in full in R; the latter half (from st. 20 onwards) in A. Several stanzas are also cited in Gylf.

Structure

The poem essentially consists of a riddle contest between the god Weden and the ettin Webthrithner. Far from being a loose collection of mythic lore, it has a tight structure and logical plan throughout. The whole may be divided into 4 sections, first the prologue, where Weden takes counsel from his wife Frie and sets out for Webthrithner's hall (sts. 1–10). The remaining 3 sections form the contest, and consist of alternating stanzas where one part asks and the other answers. They are distinguished from each other by means of repeated refrains in the question stanzas, and consist of Webthrithner's 4 unnumbered questions (11–19), Weden's 12 numbered questions (20–43), and Weden's 6 unnumbered questions about the end times (44–55).

The following table illustrates the refrains; for stanza 40 see note there:

11–17	Seg mér/þat, Gagnráðr, · alls á golfi vill þíns of fręista frama
20–42	Seg þat (bit) N(:a) · Vaf-þrúðnir vitir
44–54	Fjqlð ek fór, · fjqlð fręistaða'k, fjqlð ek reynda ręgin

Something must be said on the numerology of the questions—it is hardly a coincidence that Weden asks exactly 18 questions, this being a multiple of the sacred number 9. It is notable that another Odinic list, Leed-tally (sts. 147–165) of Háv, also has 18 items, especially that the 18th spell there, like the 18th question here, is a mystery known only to Weden himself.

Summary

Weden asks his wife, Frie, for counsel, as he is curious about the ancient wisdom which the ettin Webthriðner might possess (1). Frie expresses worry, since she considers Webthriðner stronger than all other ettins (2), but Weden says that he has travelled far and wide, and wishes to know what Webthriðner's hall is like (3). Frie wishes him good luck against the ettin (4) and he departs, to challenge Webthriðner's orð-spēki 'word-wisdom' (5). He arrives at the ettin's hall and introduces himself (6); Webthriðner promptly declares that Weden will not come out of the hall unless he be wiser than him (7). Weden introduces himself as Gainred, saying that he has travelled far in need of Webthriðner's hospitality (8). Webthriðner invites Gainred to sit down (9), who in turn utters a gnomic stanza (10) not unlike those of the first section of Háv.

Webthriðner begins by asking four mythological questions, each answered by Gainred in turn. The questions concern the horse that pulls the Day (11–12) and the one that pulls the Night (13–14), the river which divides the gods and ettins (15–16), and the plain where Surt and the gods will fight (17–18).

Webthriðner calls the guest learned and invites him to sit. He declares that the loser of the contest must give his head (19). The roles are now reversed, and Gainred poses twelve numbered questions to the ettin. He asks about the origins of earth and heaven (20–21), of sun and moon (22–23), of day, night, and the phases of the moon (24–25), and of winter and summer (26–27); then about the earliest being, namely the ettin Earyelmer (28–29), his origins (30–31) and how he reproduced asexually (32–33). Gainred continues by asking what Webthriðner himself first remembers (34–35), about the origin of the wind (36–37), the god Nearth (38–39), Walhall and the Onecharriers (40–41), and where Webthriðner has learned all this wisdom (42–43).

The tone of the questions now changes, and Gainred asks six questions concerning the end times, all beginning with the same refrain. He asks which humans will survive after the Fimblewinter (44–45), how the sun can rise after Fenrer has destroyed it (46–47), about some obscure maidens (48–49; see there), which Eese will survive after the flame of Surt goes out (50–51), and how Weden will die (52–53). Finally, he asks the unknowable question: what did Weden speak in the ear of Balder before he was burned on the pyre? (54)

Webthriðner at last understands the identity of his challenger, since only Weden himself could know the answer to that question. He laconically accepts his imminent death and the futility of his own wisdom; the poem ends with his admission that Weden will always be the wisest (55).

3 Hreįð-gotum ‘Reth-Gots’ | An old tribe name referring to the Eastern Gots around the Black Sea, apparently mentioned due to their location in the East. The first element is unclear. There may be a pun of sorts here, since goti can mean both ‘Got’ and ‘horse’.

[R 8r/9, A 3r/1]

“Tell this one, if thy wisdom avails and thou, Webthrithner, oughtst to know, whence Earth did come, or Up-heaven,
first, O learned ettin.”

1 óði | The first word on fol. 3r of A; from this point we have the poem in both manuscripts.

3 jorð ... eða upp-himinn ‘Earth ... or Up-heaven’ | An old Common Germanic formulaic merism; see Index of formulae: Earth and Upheaven.

Vafþrúðnir: 21 „Ór Ymis holdi · vas jorð of sköpuð, 2 en ór beinum björg, himinn ór hausi · hins hrím-kalda jötuns,
4 en ór sveita sér.“

[R 8r/10, A 3r/2]

“From Yimer’s flesh was the earth shaped, and from his bones the mountains;
the heaven from the skull of that rime-cold ettin,
and from his blood the sea.”

1–4 ALL | The gods sacrificed Yimer and created the world from his body, as told more fully in Grm 41–42; for the deeper religious significance of this myth see note to Grm 43. — The whole st. bears very close resemblance to Grm 41; ll. 1 and 4 here are identical to ll. 1–2 there, and ll. 2 and 3a here are clearly related to ll. 3a and 4 there. Still, the sts. are distinct enough that the one cannot be a direct scribal copy of the other, and the relationship is more likely to be oral. Both have probably been composed in the same West Norwegian milieu, deriving from an older Common Germanic tradition (cf. the Hymn from Wessobrunn under Poetry on Christian Subjects).

3 himinn ór hausi ‘the heaven from the skull’ | The heavens are understood as a dome, a view common to many ancient peoples. This also fits well with the floating clouds being Yimer’s brains, as told in Grm 42.

4 ór sveita sér ‘from his blood the sea’ | According to Gylf 7, the slaying of Yimer produced so much blood that it drowned the whole race of Rime-Thurses save one; for this see st. 35 below. — Cf. Sont 3/3: jötuns bals · undir hjóta ‘the neck-wounds of the ettin [SEAS] roar’, which attests that Yimer was slain by decapitation, the typical way of wasting beasts of sacrifice (so e.g. Hym 15). That this is not a mere literary construct is proven by the excavation of the Wiking Age Hove-steads (Hofstaðir) on Iceland, where bulls were seasonally slain in what was undoubtedly ritual sacrifice: “The most likely reconstruction from the forensics of the skulls requires at least a two-person team, one of whom struck the animal between the eyes (effectively killing it and certainly stunning it into momentary immobility) while the second swung a fairly broad-bladed axe at the neck or base of the skull for a beheading stroke.” After the slaying (and presumed feasting on the meat), their skulls were displayed for a prolonged period of time (Lucas and McGovern, 2007, p. 23). Lucas and McGovern note that this was not the usual manner of slaughtering animals on Iceland, and even has practical downsides compared to a slower cutting of the throat, like splintered bones and damage to the cutting blade. On the other hand, the swift beheading and flow of blood would have great dramatic effect, and, what the authors neglect to mention, clearly reenact the slaying of Yimer: the separation of the skull (heaven) from the body (earth), and the great flow of blood (sea-water) from the neck-wound, lastly the burial of the body in the earth, and the display of the skull on high to symbolize the heaven.

4 sveita ‘blood’ | In poetry sveiti ‘sweat’ almost always means ‘blood’. This is shared with OE swāt, as seen e.g. in Beow 1286a: sweord swāte fāb ‘sword stained with “sweat”’, 2689b–2690: hé ge-blóðegod wearð / sáwul-driore; · swāt ýðum wéoll. ‘he was bloodied in soul-gore; the “sweat” gushed in waves’.

Óðinn: 22 „Sęg þat annat, · ef þitt óði dugir

[R 8r/12, A 3r/3]

“Tell this other, if thy wisdom avails,
and thou, Webthritner, oughtst to know,
whence Moon did come who journeys over men,
or Sun likewise.”

Vafþrúðnir: 23 „Mundil-fóri heitir, · hann ’s Mána faðir

[R 8r/13, A 3r/4]

“Mundfære he is called—he is the father of Moon, and so of Sun likewise.
Turn round heaven shall they every day,
for mankind’s tally of years.”

1 Mundil-fóri ‘Mundfærer’ | An otherwise unknown figure; see Index for etymology, which likens the cosmos to a Wiking Age flour-mill turned by a handle.

4 ǫldum at ár-tali ‘for mankind’s tally of years’ | According to Vsp 6 the Gods gave names to night, the moon-phases, morning, midday, afternoon, and evening órum at tölja ‘the years for to tally’. — Numerous examples of the chronological reckoning of the Heathen Icelanders are found in Are’s Book of Icelanders and in the Book of Landtakings. Both of them relate the years to the Christian Common Era, but they must originally have been based on the reigns of kings, of which many examples are found in those two books.

Óðinn: 24 „Seg þat hit þriðja, · alls þik svinnan kveða

 4 því's þat é alt til atalt.“

“From the Ilewaves splashed venom-drops;
 so it grew until it formed an ettin.
 Our lineages came there all together, thus it is ever all too fierce.”

1–4 ALL | Over æons the splashing venom-drops combined until they formed a sentient being: this was Earyelmer, whom Gylf identifies with Yimer. In Gylf 5 Snorre cites this stanza and the latter half of 30 in support of his lengthy and embellished creation narrative, but it is not certain that is what the older poet had in mind.

The Ilewaves are probably a reflex of the chaotic primeval Waters found in many West Eurasian mythologies, including Genesis 1:1–3 and RV 10.129. Of these two foundational religious sources the latter is closer to the present stanza, and probably holds the more archaic conception. Where we find in the Jewish narrative a proper creation; at the very beginning of time God's spirit is on the Waters and He makes the light shine over them, we find in these two Indo-European texts a spontaneous emergence of a single primeval entity long before the Gods are born—here from the violent splashing of venom, in RV 10.129.3 from “the power of heat” (tápasas mabiná). This entity in turn asexually begets sexual beings—here through rubbing his limbs together, in RV 10.129.4 simply giving rise to “desire” (kāma) which serves as the “primal seed of thought” (mānasas rétas prathamām)—and it is from these that the world is populated.

[R 8r/27, A 3r/17]

“In the hand of the rime-thurse, they said, did grow a maiden and a lad together.
 Foot against foot begat for the learned ettin
 a six-headed son.”

1–3 Und hendi ... fótr við fœti ‘In the hand ... Foot against foot’ | The image is masturbatory and monstrous. The stanza is paraphrased in Gylf 5: En svá er sagt, at þá er bann svaf, fekk bann sveita. Þá óx undir vinstri bendi bonum maðr ok kona, ok annarr fótr hans gat son við øðrum, en þaðan af kómu ęttir. ‘But so is said, that when he slept he began to sweat. Then grew within his left hand a man and a woman, and one foot of his begat a son by the other, and thereof come the lineages [of Etnas].’

“Tell this eighth, since they call thee learned,

what thou first recallest or foremost knowest—

1 Seg þat hit óttunda, · alls þik fróðan kveða, ‘Tell this eighth, since they call thee learned’ | This line lacks the required alliteration, but may easily be supplied by replacing alls þik fróðan kveða with ef þitt óði dugir from sts. 20 and 22, or alls þik svinnan kveða from 24.

Vafþrúðnir kvað: 35 „Ør-ófi vetra · áðr vęri jorð of sköpuð, “Uncountable winters before the Earth was created,

then was Bareyelm born.
It I first remember, when the learned ettin on the tree-trunk was laid.”

3–4 es hinn fróði jötunn / á vas lúðr of lagiðr ‘when the learned ettin on the tree-trunk was laid’ | An obscure mythological reference.

Gylf explains it in the following way: the sons of Byre (that is, Weden, Will and Wigh) slew Ymer and when he died so much blood flowed from his wounds that the whole race of Etnas was drowned save for Bareyelm and his household, who survived by getting up on his lúðr. This is clearly a variant of the Great Flood or Deluge myth. It may have been found even among the Scandinavians, but it may also be Snorre’s invention based on the Bible, in which case the present stanza was about as obscure to him as it is to us.

In Old Norse prose lúðr usually means ‘trumpet, blowing horn’, less commonly ‘flour-bin’; the underlying sense seems to be ‘hollowed-out wood’, which is why it is presently translated as “tree-trunk”. Considering the transitive nature of Bareyelm being laid (of lagiðr) upon it, the stanza could be read as speaking of a ship burial, so that the first thing Webthritner remembers is Bareyelm’s funeral.

“Tell this eleventh, if thy wisdom avails,
and thou, Webthritner, oughtst to know,
where all men in yards strike at each other every day.”

1–4 ALL | This question-stanza is malformed in both R and A and thus has to be partly reconstructed on the basis of st. 41. The ms. preservation of 40–41 is as follows:

All four mss. of Gylf attest st. 41 with no textual variants. R has one complete stanza, which is clearly a mix between the question and the answer: Seg þu þat hit ellipta, hvar ýtar tūnum i hoggvask hverjan dag? Val þeir kjósa ok riða vígi frá sitja meirr of sáttir saman. (normalised.) A has only the very beginning of st. 40 (“Tell this eleventh”), followed by the full st. 41: Seg þat hit ellipta allir eins herjar Óðins tūnum i hoggvask hverjan dag. Val þeir kjósa ok riða vígi frá sitja meirr of sáttir saman. (norm.) Although R has a complete question-stanza it stands out by lacking a refrain in the first two lines, something found in all other questions in the poem (see Introduction); it also has no corresponding answer-stanza.

In order to restore stanza 40, the following conjectural reconstruction has been undertaken in the pres. ed.: in lines 1a–2 the refrain ef þitt óði dugir ok þú Vafþrúðnir vitir ‘if thy wisdom avails, and thou, Webthritner, oughtst to know,’ has been inserted from sts. 20 and 22, which also have ordinal numbers alliterating with vowels; in line 3a the word allir ‘all’ has been inserted from 41 to get vowel-alliteration with ýtar.

Considering all other questions introduced with the words fjölð ek fôr et.c. have something to do with the end times, this one should as well. With this in mind they are probably to be identified with the maidens Weden asks about in Bdr 12.

3 á bál stigi ‘step onto the pyre’ | The phrase stíga á ‘step onto, mount’ is also used to refer to one stepping aboard a ship or mounting a horse (see CV: stíga for citations). Its use for a person being borne onto the funeral pyre has been compared with Beow 1118b: gūð-rinc á-stāb ‘the war-champion mounted [his pyre]’, but the interpretation of that line is controversial; Fulk et al. (2008) [186] follow Grundtvig in emending gūð-rinc to gūð-réc ‘war-smoke’ and compare it with Beow 3144b (wudu-réc á-stāb ‘wood-smoke rose up’, which also describes a cremation; (according to them) the present stanza “almost certainly refers not to Baldr but to Óðinn, probably imagined to mount the pyre in order to set fire to it.”

1 mann-gi | manni dat. sg. RA is impossible; a subject is needed.

3 fęigum ‘fey’ | A word with strong fatalistic connections. Webthritner realises that he was bound to die from the moment he proposed the wager (st. 19), as no being can outwit Weden.

3 mına fona stafi ‘my ancient staves’ | Referencing st. 1.

5 orð-spęki ‘word-wisdom’ | Referencing st. 5.

6 vera ‘of men’ | verr means ‘husband, man’ and is here used for reasons of alliteration; it does not imply that Weden is not a God.

Introduction

The Speeches of Grimner (Grm) are preserved whole in both R and A.

Structure

Grm essentially consists of several nested layers. The outermost layer is the prose passages which bracket the actual poem (P1-P2). It is hard to say for how long these have accompanied the verses, but since they are found in both R and A they must go back to a now-lost manuscript archetype. The second layer is sts. 1-3 and 53-55, which together with the prose form a narrative frame for the gnomic wisdom stanzas which make up the bulk of the poem and its core. These gnomic stanzas are mythological and sometimes obscure, and align closely with other Eddic wisdom verse like Háv, Vafþ, Sigrdr, and Alv.

Summary

The text begins with the frame narrative, which tells the story of the two king's sons Ayner and Garfrith. Ayner is fostered by Frie, while the two winners younger Garfrith is fostered by her husband Weden himself. After their father's death it is Garfrith who becomes king, following his betrayal of his elder brother. (P1) One day Weden and Frie are arguing over their respective foster-sons, and Frie accuses Garfrith of torturing wayfaring guests. Weden sets out to test the hospitality of his protégé, but unbeknownst to him, his wife has already sent her handmaid in disguise to warn Garfrith about the coming of an evil wizard. When Weden arrives he is thus promptly captured and placed between two fires so that he will reveal his name. Garfrith's young son, Ayner (clearly named after his uncle), kindly approaches the god and offers him a horn of drink. Grimner drinks from it, and here the poem proper begins. (P2)

Weden begins by complaining about the fires which are now burning his cloak (1); he states that for eight nights not a soul has offered him any help save Ayner, Garfrith's son, who will soon become king after his father (2). As thanks for the drink he gives him good health, and will offer him holy knowledge (3).

Here the gnomic section begins as Weden lists the individual abodes of the gods (4–17). The locations are numbered, but a few facts speak to these numbers being a later insert:

1. The alliteration is never reliant on the numbers; if one compares the numbered questions in Vafþ 20–42 the difference is striking.
2. The numbering is inconsistent; Thunder's realm (st. 4) is not counted, and Wider's land (st. 17) has no numeral (perhaps since the form of the stanza would not allow it.)
3. In sts. 11–15 cited in Gylf, the numbers are missing.

After this list come several sts. relating to Weden and his hall, Walhall (18–23). Mentioned are the preparation of food in Walhall (18), Weden's wolves (19) and ravens (20), the river through which the dead have to wade (21) and the gate through which they have to pass (22), the count of doors in Walhall (23), the count of doors in Thunder's hall Bilshirner (24), and two animals which stand on the hall and gnaw on the branches of the tree Leered (25–26). From the latter animal's—the stag Oakthirner's—horns droplets fall into Wharyelmer, which is the origin of all rivers (26).

This introduces a list of mythic rivers (27–28), ending with the waters through which Thunder must wade on his way to Ugdrassle (29). This leads to a list of the horses ridden by the other gods on their way to Ugdrassle (31) which is followed by a description of the roots of Ugdrassle (31), then its animals (32–36) the Walkirries (37), and beings associated with the sun and moon (38–40), the things created from Yimer's body (41–42) with a digression on the significance of the blood for men in the present (43, see note there!), the creation of the ship Shidebladner (44) and finally a list of the noblest of several categories of things and groups (45).

After these lists Weden utters an unclear st. invoking the gods (46), before listing many of his names and the circumstances in which they were used (47–50). He then turns to Garfrith, disappointed by the inhospitality and poor conduct of his former protégé, and predicts his imminent death (51–53). He finally reveals himself by his true name, daring Garfrith to face him (53). After this he repeats several of his names (54), and the poem ends.

In the final prose section we are told that Garfrith, after learning that he was torturing Weden, hurried up to take the god away from the fires, but tripped and fell on his sword and died. After this his son Ayner ruled for a long time.

King Reading had two sons. One was called Ayner, and the other Garfrith. Ayner was ten winters old, but Garfrith eight winters. The two were rowing in a boat with their trolling-lines for small fishing. The wind drove them out into the sea. In the dark of night they crashed onto land and walked ashore; they found a lone cottage farmer. There they stayed over the winter. The farmer's wife fostered Ayner and the farmer Garfrith.²⁹ In the spring the husband gave them ships, but when he and his wife led them to the shore, the husband spoke privately with Garfrith.³⁰ They caught good wind, and came to their father's harbour. Garfrith was in the front of the ship. He leapt onto land and pushed out the ship, and spoke: "Go thou whither the fiends may have thee!" The ship drove out. But Garfrith walked towards the farm; he was welcomed well; by then was his father ended. Garfrith was then taken as king, and became an excellent man.

²⁹The husband and wife were Weden and Frie; this is clarified by the following prose. The motif of Weden preferring the youngest brother is also found in Rþ.

Weden and Frie sat in the Lithshelf and looked about all the Homes.³¹ Weden spoke: “Dost thou see Ayner, thy foster-son, where he begets children with a troll-woman in her cave?”³² But Garfrith, my foster-son, is king and now rules his land.” Frie says: “He is such a meat-nithing that he torments his guests if he thinks too many are coming!” Weden says that this is the greatest lie; they make a wager over this matter. Frie sent her handmaid, Full, to Garfrith’s hall. She bade the king be wary, lest he be destroyed by the many-cunning man who had come to his land; and said that his mark was that no hound was so fierce that it would rush at him. But it was the greatest falsehood that Garfrith was not good of meat; and yet he has that man bound whom the hounds would not touch. He was in a blue cloak and called himself Grimner, and did not tell anything more about himself, even though he was asked. The king had him tortured that he would speak, and set him between two fires; and he sat there for eight nights. King Garfrith had a son ten winters old, and he was called Ayner after his brother. Ayner went up to Grimner and gave him a full horn to drink, saying that the king did badly as he had him tortured without cause. Grimner drank it up. Then the fire had grown so much that the cloak burned on Grimner. He quoth:

³¹Very similar to the Longbeard Origin Myth (TODO: reference and elaborate).

³²This may relate to Frie’s role as love-goddess. Ayner is in any case to be understood as a weak, effeminate man.

To my knowledge this sense is never otherwise attested, and its common meaning is ‘defraud, trick, betray’. A simpler reading would be to see this as a reference to the myth of the Ettin-smith who built the wall of Osyard. The Gods had promised him Sun, Moon, and Frow, if he could build it in a year, but employed various tricks to hinder him. When it at last looked like he would make it in time, Thunder slew him. This myth is told in Gylf 42 and alluded to in Vsp 24–25.

Gladsham is (the fifth) one called, where the gold-bright Walhall, wide, stands fast, and there Roft (= Weden) chooses every day weapon-dead warriors.³³

³³Cf. st. 14.

In A the order of the following two sts. is reversed.

- 9 Mjök 's auð-kennt · þeim's til Óðins koma
 sal-kynni at séa,
 vargr hangir · fyr vestan dyrr
 ok drúpir orn yfir.

Very easily recognized, for those who come to Weden,
 is the hall to see:
 A wolf hangs before the western door,
 and an eagle droops above.³⁴

2 sal-kynni at séa | 'sia at sia' A

³⁴Something very similar is found in Widukind's History of the Saxons 1:12. The Saxons have just conquered a fortress, and mane [...] facto ad orientalem portam ponunt aquilam, aramque victoriae construentes secundum errorem patrum sacra sua propria veneratione venerati sunt 'at the coming of morning they set an eagle at the eastern gate, and, building an altar of victory, they worshipped it with their own holy worship in accordance with their ancestral error.' The altar was pledged to Ermin, whom the author identifies with Mars or Hermes, but who is surely Weden. According to Hyltén-Cavallius (1863, p. 156) it was custom in Wärend, southern Sweden to hang the bodies of killed wolves high up in old oaks, and killed birds of prey above the stable-door.

- 10 Mjök 's auð-kennt · þeim's til Óðins koma
 sal-kynni at séa,
 skoptum 's rann rept, · skjöldum 's salr þakiðr,
 brynjum of þekki stráat.

Very easily recognized, for those who come to Weden,
 is the hall to see:

With shafts is the house roofed, with shields is the hall thatched;
with byrnies the benches strewn.

3 vörðr goða ‘Watchman of the Gods’ | Formulaic epithet of Homedal, also occurring in Lok 49 and possibly in Skm 28: vörðr með goðum ‘the Watchman among the Gods’. Gylf 27, where the present stanza is cited, gives some further details: Hann býr þar er heitir Himinbjörg við Bifrost. Hann er vörðr goða ok sitr þar við himins enda at gæta brúarinnar fyrir berg-risum. Hann þarf minna svefn en fugl. Hann sér jafnt nótt sem dag hundrað rasta frá sér; hann beyrir ok þat, er gras vex á jörðu eða ull á sauðum, ok allt þat er þerra létr. ‘He [= Homedal] lives at the place called the Heavenbarrows near Bivrest. He is the Watchman of the Gods and sits there at Heaven’s end to guard the bridge against barrow-risers. He needs less sleep than a bird. In night as in day he always sees a hundred rests away; he also hears when grass grows on the earth or wool on sheep, and all which makes more sound.’

Folkwong is (the ninth), and there Frow decides the choice of seats in the hall;
half the slain she chooses each day,
but half does Woden own.³⁵

1 es (hinn níundi) ‘is (the ninth)’ | þeitur ‘[one] is called’ G

³⁵This st. is cited and closely paraphrased in Gylf 24. — The roots of kjósa val ‘choose the slain’ are the same as those in walkirie (val-kyrja ‘chooser of the slain’), and as Frow is a prominent goddess this would surely make her the chief walkirie. This is paralleled by Sarle, where Frow assumes the name Gandle (Gndul, a name attested in several lists of walkiries; see Vsp 30 and Notes) and incites the legendary never-ending Conflict of the Headnings (Hjaðningavíg). In spite of this parallel, there are good reasons to believe that the chief walkirie was Frie, Woden’s wife. First, one of the functions of the walkiries is to bear ale to the Oneharriers (Grm 37). This mirrors royal Germanic banquets attested in heroic poetry, where the host’s wife or daughter would pour ale to his retainers and guests (the so-called ‘lady with a mead cup’ ritual; see Enright (1996) and Riseley (2014)). As Woden’s wife, we would expect Frie to have this role. Second, at Balder’s funeral as attested in Gylf (TODO. chapter number), Woden rides with Frie and the Walkiries, while Frow rides alone with her cats. If she were chief walkirie, it is rather strange that she should not ride with them. Third, there are two separate myths where Frie and Woden contend over the fates of armies and men. These are the prose introduction to the present poem and the Longbeard origin myth (for which see Introduction to the present poem).

4 hǫ-timbruðum hǫrgi ręðr 'rules the harrow timbered on high' | The rare verb hǫ-timbra 'timber on high' otherwise only occurs in Vsp 7, likewise in connection with the hǫrg 'harrow'. The harrow is an outdoors holy place; see Index. Cf. also Vafþ 38 where Nearth is said to rule a great many hoves and harrows.

[R 9v/26, A 4v/14, G]

Gar and Freak does the battle-accustomed glorious Father of Hosts (= Weden) feed;
but on wine alone, esteemed of weapons,
Weden ever lives.

1–4 Gera ... lifir ‘Gar ... live’ | With what Weden feeds his two hounds it is not said, but it is most likely with the corpses of dead warriors. The wine on which he subsists may perhaps be identified with drink offerings. Cf. the 7th century vita of Saint Columban (TODO: cite source), describing a rite of the Swabians: Quo cum moraretur, et inter habitatores loci illius progredereetur, reperit eos sacrificium profanum litare velle, vasque magnum, quod vulgo cupam vocant, quod viginti et sex modios amplius minusve capiebat, cervisia plenum in medio habebant positum. Ad quod vir Dei accessit, et sciscitatur quid de illo fieri vellent. Illi aiunt Deo suo Vodano, quem Mercurium vocant alii, se velle litare. ‘While he was satyng there and going about the dwellers of that place, he found out that they were going to offer a profane sacrifice, and a large cask called a cupa, which held about twenty-six measures, was filled with beer and set in their midst. When the man of God asked what they wanted to do with it, they answered that they were wanted to offer to their God Wodan, whom others call Mercury.’

[R 9v/28, A 4v/15, G]

Highen and Minden fly every day

I worry for Highen, that he might not come back, yet I fear more for Minden.

2 jormun-grund ‘ermin-ground’ | i.e. ‘the immense ground’ (for the rare prefix ermin- see Index), denoting the earth as a vast flat expanse of land. This compound also occurs in a kenning in the st. on the late Croth Karlevi stone (Öl 1) referring to the unbounded sea as Ēndils jormungrund ‘Andle’s ermin-ground’ (Andle being a known “sea-king”), and in Beow 859 as eormen-grund carrying the same sense.

4 val-glaumi at vaða.

Thound roars; Thedwitner's fish thrives in the flood.
The river-stream seems far too great for the noisy slain host to wade.³⁸

1–2 Þjóðvitnis fiskr 'Thedwitner's fish' | Þjóðvitnir is easily analyzed as þjóð- 'great, main' + vitnir 'wolf'. The great wolf is naturally the Fenerswolf, the brother of the Middenyardswyrm. That the Wyrm can be called a fish is shown by Hym 24.

³⁸ A difficult stanza. Thound may be the river surrounding Walhall, which the dead have to pass over to reach it. The stanza may also be referring to the punishment of criminals in waters; see note to Vsp 38 for discussion on that.

Five hundred doors, and around fourty,

Eight hundred Oneharriers go out of one door,

3 átta hundruð ‘eight hundred’ | The hundred is probably here the long hundred (120, rather than 100), which gives a sum of $640 * 960 = 614\,400$ Oneharriers.

Woulder’s holdness and that of All Gods has whoever first starts the fire, for the Homes open up for the sons of the Eese [GODS], when men lift off the kettles.

1–4 ALL | This st. is one of the most difficult in the poem and many interpretations have been made.

The traditional view (e.g. Finnur Jónsson (1932), Bellows, Sijmons and Gering (p. 208)) relates it to the poem’s frame narrative. Weden, bound between the two fires, cryptically asks for a cauldron hanging above him from the roof to be moved aside so that the Gods will be able to see him through the smoke-vent and rescue him. This explanation leaves very much unexplained, namely the stanza’s placement in the gnomic wisdom section of the poem (unless the whole section is taken to be a later insert—so Finnur—, for which there is no textual support), the invocation of the obscure god Woulder, the lack of mention of a cauldron elsewhere in the poem, and the big question of why the gods would bestow their grace unto the person who first set the fire which is presently torturing Weden.

I find the interpretation of Nordberg (2005) more convincing. He argues that the st. is another piece of gnomic wisdom, referring to the cooking of the sacrificial meal in large cauldrons during the blood. This has textual support, e.g. HákGöð 14, describing the traditional blood in the Thronclaw (Þrónða-lög), Norway: At veizlu þeirri skyldu allir menn ǫl eiga; þar var ok drepinn alls konar smali ok svá bross, [...] en slátr skyldi sjóða til mann-fagnaðar; eldar skyldu vera á miðju gölfi í hofinu ok þar katlar yfir. ‘At that gathering all men were to have ale; thereat were also slain all kinds of small cattle and likewise horses, [...] and the fresh meat was to be cooked for men to enjoy. There were to be fires in the middle of the floor in the hove and kettles above them.’ According to this view, the stanza is speaking of the Heavenly favour (hylli) earned by the ritualist who sets the cooking fire, since that act enables the Gods to become guests at the ritual meal.

Nordberg’s interpretation is especially interesting when one considers the immediately preceding stanzas 41–42 which describe the ordering of the world by the Gods through the sacrifice and dismembering of Yimer, the primordial victim. (That the slaying of Yimer was in fact a sacrifice is supported by the manner in which it was done, viz. beheading, which was the typical manner of slaying sacrificial bulls in the Wiking Age; see note to Vafþ 21/4.) In other Indo-European religions—most famously the Vedic Púruṣa, ṚV 10.90—the first sacrifice of a Great Being serves as the model for all future sacrifice, the performance of which reenacts the creation and enables the continued existence of the world and the social order (Lincoln, 1986), and the sequence Grm 41–43 would then attest this also in the Germanic tradition. For the role of fire in Germanic and Vedic sacrifice see Kaliff (2005).

1 Ullar ‘Woulder’s’ | It is uncertain why the rather obscure god Woulder is invoked here. It cannot be simply for the sake of alliteration, since Óðins ‘Weden’s’ would work just as well. It is possible that Woulder had a particular role in the setting of the ritual fire, which would find support in the large number of firesteel-shaped amulets at the archeological site of Lilla Ullevi (‘Woulder’s little wigh’) in Sweden; see Index: Woulder and af Edholm (2009).

1 hylli ‘holdness’ | ‘Favour, loyalty, grace’. This root (from which also the adjective hollr ‘hold; favourable, loyal, gracious’ and verb hylla ‘to make hold’) is used to refer to the grace of god(s) in both Heathen and Christian texts. See Index: hold and holdness.

1 allra goða ‘All Gods’ | Cf. Sigrdr 3–4, Lok 11, which both hail the Gods as a collective (the former as part of a genuine prayer, the latter subversively). For the oneness of the Gods see Index: All Gods.

2 tękr ... á funa ‘starts the fire’ | An otherwise unattested phrase, for which cf. taka ęld ‘light a fire’. With á ‘on’ the verb taka ‘take’ has a variety of idiomatic senses like ‘touch, react to, get involved in, get on, et c’.

4 hverá ‘kettles’ | Acc. pl. of hverr, from PGmc. hweraz*, from PIE k^wer-* ‘pot, vessel’. The Sanskrit cognate carú is occasionally used in reference to the vat from which the ritual drink sóma is drunk (RV 10.167.4), but any particular religious significance for the PIE root cannot be reconstructed.

Of much art thou bereft when thou art [bereft] of my support,

³ qllum ein-herjum 'of all the Oneharriers' | Linguistically, Garfrith is not bereft of the support of the Oneharriers but rather of the Oneharriers themselves, but the sense is the same. By breaking the Odinic code of conduct he has lost Weden's favour, and thus been excluded from the community of oath-bound warriors, the Oneharriers.

On the other hand a righteous king could expect to have the truce of the Oneharriers; this was the case for Hathkin the Good according to the poem composed about him (Eyv Hák in SkP i). In that poem (st. 16/1–2) Bray greets him in the hall of the Gods, saying: Ein-herja grið · skalt allra hafa; / þigg þú at øsum øl. 'All the Oneharriers' truce shalt thou have; accept ale from the Eese!

Dreams of Balder

(Baldrs draumar)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C10th (0.890)

Meter: Ancient-words-law

Introduction

The Dreams of Balder (Bdr) are not preserved in R, but rather in the early C14th ms. A. The poem also survives in much younger paper mss., where a number of post-medieval stanzas have been inserted.

The poem begins in medias res; Balder has been having nightmares, which the Gods meet at the Thing to discuss (1). Woden rides to Hell, where he has an encounter with a bloody hound; he passes it and continues to “the high house of Hell” (2–3), from which he rides west, to the grave of a certain wallow whom he revives using magic (4). She asks which man has forced her out of the grave (5), and Woden introduces himself as Waytame, before asking for whom the benches of Hell are covered with gold (6). The wallow responds that barrels of mead stand brewed for Balder and that the gods are very anxious (7). Woden asks her who will slay Balder (8), and she responds that it is Hath, carrying a “high fame-beam” (9). Woden asks who will avenge Balder’s death (10), the wallow responds that Rind will give birth to Woden’s son Wonnell, who will slay Hath when only one night old (11). Woden then asks about some mysterious maidens (12), which apparently betrays his identity. The wallow announces that she now knows that it is Woden, who in turn retorts that she is not a wallow, but rather the “mother of three thurses” (13). The wallow tells him to ride home and “be famous” and taunts him over his unavoidable death at the Rakes of the Reins (14).

⁴⁶ According to Gylf 49 Heli promised to give Balder back to the Esei if “all things in the world, living and dead, cry for him”. The Esei relayed this message, and “the men and the animals and the earth and the stones and trees and all metals” cried for Balder. It may be that these maidens were included among the griever (perhaps they were the walkiries, and this is what reveals Woden’s identity?), but their identity is otherwise unknown. They may perhaps be identified with the maidens in Vafþ 49.

4 rjúfendr ‘rippers’ | Presumably Surt and Lock with his children, as described in Vsp 40 ff. The verb rjúfa ‘CV: to break, rip up, break a hole in’ is used in the same context in the formulaic þá’s rjúfask regin ‘when the Reins are ripped’ (Vafþ 52), unds (of) rjúfask regin ‘until the Reins are ripped’ (Grm 4, Lok 41 and Sigrdr 17). One may also compare the similar sounding (but not or only very distantly related) verb rifna ‘be riven, rent apart’; see Introduction to Runic inscription Sö 154 (Skarpåker, Sweden).

Introduction

The Leeds of Hoarbeard are preserved in full in R, and in part in A. The poem might be seen as an allegory on class relations, namely between the self-owning yeomen farmers and the warlike earls, represented through their patron gods.

Of all Eddic poems Hárþ is probably the strangest in terms of form. Verse length varies greatly, and many of the lines (see especially the final verse) are of an obscene length reminiscent of late continental Germanic poems like the Heliand; some simply have no metrical qualities at all. The young clitic definite is (uniquely) employed frequently throughout the poem. These criteria would seem to point towards a late origin for the poem (though not later than the late C13th, when R was written).

Against this late origin speaks the presence of rare words (e.g. ogurr v. 13) and a thorough understanding of the personalities of the two gods which would seem unlikely to stem from several centuries after the conversion of Iceland. The model devised by Sapp gives the poem a 57.8% likelihood of being from the early C11th, and a 37.7% likelihood of being from the late 11th. These scores are most similar to those obtained by Grip, a poem that on the surface seems much more archaic.

What could we then be dealing with? It may of course be that the poem is heavily corrupt, but there is no good evidence for this (apart from the above-mentioned irregularities). Most lines are readily understandable and fit well both within their respective context and the poem as a whole. I think a better solution to this problem is to assume that the poem has been acted out as a sort of carnivalesque theatre, with two masked actors, each playing one of the gods. This would explain the variations in meter and line length, and the prose; some lines were simply shouted out, and the lack of alliteration in them would then have a kind of discordant effect.

This is shown also by uses of the word ‘here’ in sts. 9 and 14. TODO: mention concept of “double scene” by Lars Lönnroth?

The Leed of Hoarbeard

- P1 Þórr fór ór austr-vegi ok kom at sundi einu. Qðrum megum [R 12r/30]
 2 sundsins var ferju-karlinn með skipit. Þórr kallaði:

Thunder journeyed from the Eastern Way and came to a sound. At the other side of the sound was the ferryman with the ship. Thunder called out:

- 1 „Hvęrr ’s sá sęęinn sęęina · es stęndr fyr sundit handan?“ [R 12r/32]
 “Who is that swain of swains, standing here across the sound?”

- Hann svaraði: 2 „Hvęrr ’s sá karl karla · es kallar of váginn?“ [R 12v/1] “Who is that churl of churls, calling out over the wave?”

- 3 „Fęę þú mik of sundit, · fðði’k þik á morgun; [R 12v/2]
 2 męis hęfi’k á baki, · verðr-a matr inn bętri.
 Át’k í hvíld · áðr ek hęiman fór,
 4 síldr ok hafra; · saðr em’k ęnn þęss.“

“Ferry me over the sound, I feed thee in the morning!
 A basket have I on my back; better food will not be found.
 I ate for a while before I journeyed from home, herring and oatmeal/he-goats; I am still full from that.”

4 hafra ‘oatmeal/he-goats’ | (1) The easiest reading is the acc. pl. of hafr ‘he-goat’. Thunder also eats his goats in Gylf 44, where he butchers and cooks them in the evening and brings them back to life by blessing them with his hammer at dawn. Finnur Jónsson (1932) and Pettit (1986) prefer this. (2) Other scholars instead read an acc. pl. of hafri ‘oat’, i.e. ‘porridge, oatmeal’. Stiles (forthcoming TODO) connects this with the porridge-eating of the Vedic god Pūśān (RV 6.56.1, 57.2), who is “partner and yokemate” (RV 6.56.2) of Indra, Thunder’s vedic equivalent. Another similarity Stiles notes between Thunder and Pūśān is that both have chariots driven by goats (e.g. 6.57.3: “Goats are the draft-animals for the one”, 58.2: “Having goats as his horses”). Whether the Vedic tradition has split the Thunder-god in two or whether the Germanic Thunder has absorbed elements of his yokemate is hard to say.

- 4 „Ár-ligum verkum hrósar þú, vęrði’num; · vęitst-at-tu fyr [R 12v/5]
 gørla,

Hins vil’k nú spyrja, · hvat þú heitir.“

“I will speak to my name—even though I should be charged—and to all my origin: I am Weden’s son, Male’s brother and Main’s father,
the strength-wielder of the Gods; with Thunder dost thou here speak!
Now I will ask this, what thou art called.”

10 „Hár-barðr ek heiti, · hyl’k of nafn sjaldan.“ [R 12v/18]

“Hoarbeard I am called; I seldom conceal my name.”

11 „Hvat skalt-u of nafn hylja · nema þú sakar eigir?“ [R 12v/18]

“Why shalt thou conceal thy name, unless thou have charges?”

12 „En þótt ek sakar eiga, · fyr slíkum sem þú est
2 þá mun’k forða fǫrvi mínu · nema ek feigr sé.“ [R 12v/19]

“Even though I had charges—for such a one as thou art
I would then protect my life, unless I be fey.”

13 „Harm ljótan mér þikkir í því
2 at vaða of váginn til þín · ok véta qgur mín; [R 12v/21] skylda’k launa kqgur-svęini · þínum kangin-yrði · ef ek komumk yfir sundit.“

“An ugly harm it seems to me to wade o’er the wave to thee, and wet my burden.
I would repay thee, swaddle-swain, for thy mocking words, if I could bring myself over the sound.”

2. qgur ‘burden’ | The sense of this word is not clear, though it is probably the same as the first element of the compound qgur-stund ‘burdensome hour’, found in Vkv 42. Some authors have read it as a crude euphemism for “penis”, which would not stand out much in this poem. Another interpretation is that it refers to the food Thunder carries on his back (st. 3).

14 „Hér mun’k standa · ok þín heðan bíða;
2 fannt-a-tu mann inn harðara · at Hrungni dauðan.“ [R 12v/23]

“Here will I stand and hence await thee;
thou foundest not a harder man since Rungner died!⁴⁸”

⁴⁸Rungner was a famous ettin slain by Thunder in a fierce battle. Hoarbeard’s mention of that battle sets off a long argument over their respective accomplishments.

- 15 „Hins vilt-u nú geta · es vit Hrungnir deildum, [R 12v/25] 2 sá inn stór-úðgi jötunn, · es ór stęini vas hęfuðit á, þó lét’k hann falla · ok fyrir hníga;
 4 hvat vannt-u þá meðan, Hárbarðr?“

“Of this wilt thou now speak, when I and Rungner dealt with each other, that great-minded ettin on whom the head was of stone.
 Yet I made him fall, and kneel down before [me]—
 what didst thou then meanwhile, Hoarbeard?”

- 16 „Vas’k með Fjöl-vari · fimm vetr alla [R 12v/27]
 2 í ęy þęiri · es Al-grón hęitir;
 vega vér þar knöttum · ok val fęlla,
 4 margs at fręista, · mans at kosta.“

“I was with Felwar for five winters all in that island which is called Allgreen.
 There we did fight and fell the slain,
 many a girl tempt and win.⁴⁹”

⁴⁹I read margs ‘many a’ as modifying mans ‘girl’.

- 17 „Hversu snúnuðu yðr konur yðrar?“ [R 12v/30]
 “How did your women pleasure (TODO!!!) you?⁵⁰”

⁵⁰Seemingly a prose line; see Introduction.

- 18 „Sparkar óttum vér konur · ef oss at spøkum yrði; [R 12v/30] 2 horskar óttum vér konur · ef oss hollar véri, þęr ór sandi · síma undu
 4 ok ór dali djúpum
 grund of grófu;
 6 varð’k þeim ęinn ęllum · øfri at róðum;
 hvílda’k hjá systrum sjau 8 ok hafða’k gęð þęira allt ok gaman; hvat vannt-u þá meðan, Þórr?“

“We had smart women if we found them pleasing;
 we had clever women if they were hold toward us.
 They wound a rope out of the sand, and out of a deep dale dug up the ground.
 I alone became superior to them all in counsels,

I rested beside those sisters seven,
and had their senses all, and pleasure—
what didst thou then meanwhile, Thunder?”

- 19 „Ek drap Þjatsa, · hinn þrúð-móðga jötun, 2 upp ek varp augum · All-valda sonar á þann hinn heðða himin;
4 þau ’ru merki mest · minna verka, þau’s allir menn síðan of séa;
6 hvat vannt-u þá meðan, Hárbarðr?“

[R 13r/2, A 1r/1 (l. 4b ff.)]

“I slew Thedse, the strength-minded ettin;
Up I threw the eyes of Allwald’s son [= Thedse] onto the clear heaven.

Those are the greatest marks of my works, those which all men since may see⁵¹ —
what didst thou then meanwhile, Hoarbeard?”

⁵⁵This story is also referenced in Lok 60, and is told in full in Gylf 45: Lock, Thunder, and his servants Thelvé and Wrash had journeyed east for a long time when they came upon a large hall, with an opening on one end as wide as the building. They rested inside, but in the middle of the night they were awakened by a great earthquake. Thunder rose and led the party to a side-room to the right in the middle of the hall. He stayed closest to the opening with his hammer ready, while the terrified others were further inside. At daybreak they left the hall and found the huge ettin Skrymir (Shrimer) asleep outside. His snoring had caused the earth-quakes, and the hall was his mitten; the side-room was its thumb.

¹ hó ‘lover’ | Most translators take this acc. sg. word as an alternative form of bórr m. ‘adulterer’ (gen. bórs), containing the same root as bóra f. ‘whore, prostitute’, bór n. ‘adultery, fornication’, ModEngl. whore. The -r has presumably been interpreted as the masc. nom. sg. ending, giving nom. bór*, gen. bós*. Further, this accusation is also found in Lok TODO, where Lock says that he has been Sib’s lover (bórr). Notably, CV interprets this word as the unrelated bór m. ‘pot-hook’, “insinuating that Thor busied himself with cooking and dairy-work.” This seems very unlikely when considering Thunder’s response in the next verse: “I think that thou liest!” and the parallel in Lok.

Introduction

The Speeches of Shirner (Skm) are attested in full in both R and A. The name Skírnismál ‘Speeches of Shirner’ comes from A; R instead has Fyr Skírnis ‘Shirner’s journey’.

Parallel in Gylfaginning

The same narrative is found in Gylf 37, which also quotes stanza 42 of the present poem. That account begins with a long introduction, corresponding to P1–2:

‘Gymer was a man called, and his woman Earbode; she was of the lineage of mountain-risers. Their daughter is Gird, who is fairest of all women. It was one day when Free had gone to Lithshelf and looked about all the Homes. And when he looked north he saw on a farm a great and fine house, and to that house walked a woman, and when she lifted her hands and closed the doors behind her it shone from her hands into both the air and onto the waters, and all the homes were brightened by her. And that beauty which he had seen in that holy seat harmed him so greatly that he walked away filled with grief, and when he came home he spoke nothing; he neither slept nor drank. No one dared to get words out of him.’

After this it paraphrases sts. 3–9, describing Shirner’s interaction with Free:

‘Then Nearth had Shirner, Free’s shoe-swain, called unto him, and asked him to go to Free and bid him to speak and ask at whom he was so wroth that he would not speak with men. And Shirner said that he would go, although not eagerly, and said that he expected ill answers from him.

And when he came to Free he asked why Free were so downcast and spoke nothing with men. Then Free answers, and said that he had seen a fair woman and for her sakes was he so full of grief that he would not live long if he should not reach her, “and now shalt thou journey to ask for her hand for me, and have her home hither whether her father wants to or not, and I shall reward thee well for that.”

Then Shirner answers; said so, that he will go on the errand-journey, but Free shall give him his sword; it was such a good sword that it struck by itself. And Free did not refuse that and gave him the sword.’

The rest of the poem (sts. 10–38) is summarised very succinctly:

‘Then Shirner journeyed and asked for the woman’s [Gird’s] hand for him [Free], and got her promise that nine nights later she would come to that place which is called Barrey and have a wedding with Free. And when Shirner told Free his errand, then he quoth this:’

After which the author cites a variant of stanza 42, with some minor differences in wording that seem to stem from oral tradition (see Note to that st.) He last explains that Þessi sǫk er til þess, er Freyr var svá vápn-lauss, er hann barðist við Belja ok drap hann með hjartar-borni. ‘This event is the reason why Free was so weaponless when he fought against Bellow and slew him with a hart’s antler.’

It seems near-certain that the author of Gylf had access to Skm directly rather than a mere retelling of the story. There is no detail in his paraphrase that is not found in the present version of the poem, although the introductory prose differs a fair bit, and Shirner’s curse is entirely omitted. This is easily explained if he his version of Skm was written down from a slightly different oral tradition; the poetry, being in bound form, would be much more stable than the more fluid introductory prose. To sum up a narrative mythic poem in prose form and then quote one or two stanzas is something probably done elsewhere in Gylf; see the Fragments from Snorre’s Edda below.

The Speeches of Shirner

- Pr Freyr, sonr Njarðar, hafði einn dag setsk í Hlið-skjálfr ok sá um 2 heima alla; hann sá í Jötun-heima ok sá þar mey fagra, þá er hon gekk frá skála fǫður síns til skemmu; þar af fekk hann hug-sóttir 4 miklar. Skírnir hét skó-sveinn Freys. Njorðr bað hann kveðja Frey máls. Þá mælti Skaði:

[R 11r/10, A 2r/11]

Free, son of Nearth, had one day set himself in Lithshelf, and looked about all the Homes. He looked into the Ettinhomes and saw there a fair maiden as she walked from her father's hall to her bower; thereof he got great heart-aches. Shirner was called the shoe-swain of Free; Nearth asked him to speak with Free. Then Shede spoke:

1 Hlið-skjálfr 'Lithshelf' | The heavenly lookout point of the Gods.

- 1 „Rís-tu nú Skírnir · ok gakk at þeiða 2 okkarn málá mög, ok þess at fregna · hveim hinn fróði séi
 4 of-reiði afi.“
- “Rise thou now, Shirner, and go to ask our lad for speech;
 and to learn at whom the wise

1 rís ... þeiða 'Rise ... ask' | Alliteration is missing here. A simple solution would be to replace gakk 'go' with a synonym like rinn 'run' or ráð 'resolve', but this lessens the semantic mirroring with l. 2/2 below (though, the insertion of the verb ganga in the present stanza may in fact be due to influence from 2/2).

4 afi 'man' | While this word usually means “father” or “grandfather”, it should here mean “man” without a connotation of old age. See further CV.

- Skírnir kvað: 2 „Illra orða · es mér ón at ykkrum syni, 2 ef ek geng at mæla við mög,
 ok þess at fregna, · hveim hinn fróði séi
 4 of-reiði afi.“
- “Ill words I expect from your son,
 if I go to speak with the lad,
 and to learn at whom the wise

- Skírnir: 3 „Seg þat Freyr, · folk-valdi goða, 2 ok ek vilja vita,
 hví þú einn sitr · end-langa sali,
 4 minn dróttinn, of daga?“
- “Tell it, O Free, troop-wielder of the gods—
 I too would wish to know,

why thou sittest alone in the endlong halls,
my lord, during the days.”

Freyr: 4 „Hví of segja’k þér, · seggr hinn ungi, 2 mikinn móð-trega?
því-at alf-röðull · lýsir of alla daga
4 ok þeygi at mínum munum.“
“Why should I tell thee, O young youth, my great heartache?
For the elf-wheel (= Sun) shines during all days,
and nowise to my liking.”

[R 11r/19, A 2r/20]

3 alf-röðull ‘elf-wheel’ | A rare poetic synonym (hēiti) for the sun; see note to Vǫf 47/1.

Skírnir: 5 „Muni þína · hykk-a svá mikla vesa, 2 at þú mér seggr né segir;
ungir saman · vörum í ár-daga,
4 vël mēttim tvēr trúask.“
“Thy liking I do not think so great, that thou, O youth, should not tell me.
Young together were we in days of yore;
we two might well trust each other.”

[R 11r/20, A 2r/21]

2 seggr ‘youth’ | This word usually means simply ‘man’, but it seems to have a specific connotation with youth. Its original meaning is ‘messenger’, and the semantic shift is thus: ‘messenger’ > ‘young man’ > ‘warrior/man’. The sense of ‘young man’ is also seen in Vkv 23, where it is used in reference to king Nithad’s two young sons. In the present stanza it answers Free’s addressing Shirner as seggr hinn ungi ‘the young youth’; Shirner points out that the two are of equal age, and so Free is as much of a young man as he.

Freyr: 6 „Í Gyms gørdum · ek ganga sá 2 mér tíða mēy;
armar lýstu, · en af þaðan
4 allt lopt ok lōgr.
“In Gymer’s yards I saw walking a maiden, dear to me.
Her arms shone and thereof
all the air and sea.

[R 11r/22, A 2r/23]

4 lopt ok lōgr ‘air and sea’ | Formulaic and very old, also paralleled in the Anglo-Saxon. TODO.

7 Mēr’s mér tíðari · an manna hveim

[R 11r/24, A 2r/24]

- 2 ungum í ár-daga;
 ása ok alfa · þat vill engi maðr,
 4 at vit sátta séim.“
- The maiden is dearer to me than to any man
 young in days of yore.
 Of the Eese and Elves does no man⁵⁷ wish that we two should be brought together.”

⁵⁷i.e. ‘person’. For other examples of gods being called men see note to final st. of Vafþ 55.

- Skírnir: 8 „Mar gef mér þá, · es mik of myrkvan beri
 vísan vafr-loga,
 2 ok þat sverð, · es sjalft vegisk við jötna étta.“
- 4 “The steed then give me, which might bear me over the dark,
 wise wavering-flame;
 and that sword, which by itself might strike against the line of the Ettins.”
- Fréyr: 9 „Mar þér þann gef’k, · es þik of myrkvan berr
 vísan vafr-loga,
 2 auk þat sverð, · es sjalft mun vegask, ef sá’s horskr es hefr.“
- 4 “‘That steed I give thee, which bears thee over the dark,
 wise wavering-flame;
 and that sword which by itself will strike,
 if he is wise who owns it.”

1–4 berr ‘bears’; mun vegask, ef sá’s horskr es hefr ‘will strike, if he is wise who owns it’ | In his response Free replaces the subjunctive verb forms (beri ‘might bear’, vegisk ‘might strike’) with indicative and future forms, giving a sense of certainty and authority. The steed and sword are faultless, and if Shirner fails on the mission, it would be only due to his own fault (“if he is sharp who owns it.”).

P2 Skírnir mælti við hestinn:

Shirner spoke with the horse:

- 10 „Myrk es úti, · mál kveð’k okkr fara
 úrig fjöll yfir
 2 þursa þjóð yfir;
 báðir vit komumk · eða okkr báða tekr
- 4
- [R 11r/29, A 2r/28]

sá hinn ám-átki jøtunn.“

“’Tis dark outside; I declare it time for us to journey over the drizzling mountains, over the tribe of Thurses.
We will both come, or us both does take that uncanny ettin.”⁵⁸

³ þursa ‘of the Thurses’ | so A; þýria R

⁵ ám-átki jøtunn ‘uncanny ettin’ | Formulaic. See note to Vsp 8.

⁵⁸ Shirner declares his intention not to abandon the horse given to him by his lord; they will either both make it, or both perish.

P3 Skírnir reið i Jøtun-heima til Gymis garða; þar váru hundar [R 11r/31, A 2v/1]
2 ólmir ok bundnir fyrir skið-garðs hliði þess, er um sal Gerðar
var. Hann reið at þar, er fé-hirðir sat á haugi, ok kvaddi hann:

Shirner rode into the Ettinhomes, to Gymer’s yards. There were fierce hounds there, bound before the slope of the pale fence which surrounded the hall of Gird. He rode to where a shepherd sat on a mound, and greeted him:

2. Gerðar ‘Gird’ | It is only now that we learn the maiden’s name.

II „Seg þat hirðir, · es á haugi sitr [R 11v/2, A 2v/4] 2 ok varðar alla vega:
hvé ek at and-spilli · komumk hins unga mans
4 fyr grøyjum Gymis.“

“Tell this, O herdsman who sittest on the mound, and watchest all the ways,
how I to discourse might come with the young girl [= Gird], past the greyhounds of Gymer.”

2 [...];
and-spillis vanr · þú skalt é vesa
4 góðrar meyjar Gymis.“

“Either art thou fey, or gone forth [dead];
[...].
Discourse-less shalt thou always be,
with the good maiden of Gymer [= Gird].”

4 góðrar meyjar ‘good maiden’ | Formulaic, carrying with it a sense of chastity. See note to Háv 102/1 for further occurrences.

- [Skírnir] kvað: 13 „Kostir ’ru þetri · an klökkva séi [R 11v/6, A 2v/7]
 2 hveim es fúss es fara,
 3 einu dógri · mér vas aldr of skapaðr
 4 ok alt líf of lagit.“ “Choices are better than sobbing might be for whomever is eager to journey.
 In one half-day my age was shaped,
 and all my life laid down.”

1 an ‘than’ | so A; þeldr an at ‘rather than to [be]’ R

1–4 ALL | An excellent example of the fatalistic Germanic worldview, according to which one’s course of life is determined at birth. Presumably after uttering these words Shírnir rides through the fire surrounding the fortress.

1 Kostir ‘Choices’ | i.e. ‘alternatives, other ways’.

4 alt líf of lagit ‘all my life laid down’ | The causative leggja ‘to lay (down, in place)’ is closely connected to fate; the expression is formulaic. Cf. Lok 48: í ár-daga vas þér bit ljóta líf of lagit ‘in days of yore was thy ugly life laid down’ and Vsp 19: þér lög lögðu ‘they [= the Norns] laid down laws’.

- [Gerrðr] kvað: 14 „Hvat ’s þat hlym hlymja · es hlymja heyrri’k nú til [R 11v/7, A 2v/8] 2 ossum rönnum í?
 3 jörð bifask, · en allir fyr
 4 skjalfa garðar Gymsis.“
 “What is that din of dins, which I of dins now hear in our halls?
 The earth quakes, and before me tremble
 all Gymer’s yards.”

- Ambótt kvað: 15 „Maðr ’s hér úti, · stiginn af mars baki, [R 11v/9, A 2v/10]
 2 jó léttr til jarðar taka.“
 “A man is here outside, stepped down off horseback;
 he lets his steed take to the earth.”

2 jó léttr til jarðar taka ‘he lets his steed take to the earth’ | He lets his horse graze. According to Finnur Jónsson (1932) an Icelandic expression still known in his time.

- [Gerrðr] kvað: 16 „Inn bið þú hann ganga · í okkarn sal [R 11v/10, A 2v/11] 2 ok drekka hinn mæra mjöð, þó ek hitt óumk, · at hér úti séi

4 minn bróður-bani.“

“Bid thou him to go in into our hall, and to drink the renowned mead;
though I fear that here outside should be my brother’s bane.”

[Gērðr] kvað: 17 „Hvat ’s þat alfa · né ása sona,

[R 11v/12, A 2v/13]

2 né víska vana;
hví ǣinn of komt · ǣikinn fúr yfir
4 ór sal-kynni at séa?“

“What kind is that, not of Elves, nor of sons of the Eese, nor of wise Waness?
Why camest thou alone over the raging fire,
to see the state of our hall?”

[Skírnir kvað:] 18 „Em’k-at alfa · né ása sona

[R 11v/14]

2 né víska vana,
þó ǣinn of kom’k · ǣikinn fúr yfir
4 yður sal-kynni at séa.

“I am not of Elves, nor of sons of the Eese,
nor of wise Waness—
still, I came alone over the raging fire, to see the state of your hall.

19 Epli ǣllifu · hér hef’k al-gullin,

[R 11v/15, A 2v/14]

2 þau mun’k þér Gērðr gefa, frið at kaupa, · at þú þér Frey kveðir
4 ð·lǣiðastan at lifa.“

Eleven apples have I here, all-golden; those will I to thee, Gird, give to buy thy love, that thou callest Free for thee most unloathsome [lovely] in life.”

4 at lifa ‘in life’ | at lifa here seems to mean ‘in life/living’ rather than the typical infinitive sense ‘to live’; cf. st. 22 at deila ‘in sharing’ below. This may be an archaism.

[Gērðr] kvað: 20 „Epli ǣllifu · ek þigg aldri-gi

[R 11v/17, A 2v/15]

2 at manns-kis munum,
né vit Freyr, · meðan okkart fǫr lifir,
4 byggum bæði saman.“

“Eleven apples will I never take,
to any man’s liking;
nor will I and Free while our life remains dwell both together.”

[Skírnir kvað:] 21 „Baug þér þá gef’k, · þann’s brændr of vas
2 með ungum Óðins syni;
átta ’ru jafn-höfgir, · es af drjúpa
4 hina níundu hverja nótt.“

[R 11v/19, A 2v/17 (ll.)]

“The bigh I then give thee, which was burned with Weden’s young son [= Balder].
Eight are even-heavy, which from it drip,
every ninth night.”

1 Baug ‘The bigh’ | While not named, it is clearly Dleepner as known from Gylf 49, which describes Balder’s funeral: “Weden laid on the pyre that gold ring which is called Dleepner. Its nature was such that every ninth night eight even-heavy golden rings dripped from it.” When Harmod later comes to Hell to try to bring Balder back, Balder tells him to bring the ring back to Weden as a token by which to remember him.

3–4 átta ... nótt ‘Eight ... night.’ | In A these lines and 22:1–2 are missing. Instead 1–2 here and 22:3–4 are combined into one.

[Görðr] kvað: 22 „Baug þikk-a’k, · þótt brændr séi,
2 með ungum Óðins syni;
es-a mér gulls vant · í görðum Gymis
4 at deila fé fǫður.“

[R 11v/21, A 2v/18 (ll.)]

“The bigh I take not, though it may have been burned with Weden’s young son;
I lack no gold in Gymer’s yards, in sharing the fee of my father.”

[Skírnir kvað:] 23 „Sér þú mēki, mér, · mjóvan, mál-faan,
2 es hef’k í hendi hér?
höfuð höggva · mun’k þér halsi af,
4 nema mér sétta segir.“

[R 11v/23, A 2v/19]

“Seest thou this sword, maiden—slender, picture-painted—
which I have in my hand here?
Strike the head will I from thy neck, unless thou come to terms with me.”

1 mál-fáan ‘picture-painted’ | The sword is inlaid with metal (perhaps gold or silver) forming a pattern. The expression mékir mál-fár ‘picture-painted sword’ also occurs in Brot TODO.

- [Geðr kvað:] 24 „Á-nauð þola · vil’k aldri-gi
 2 at manns-kis munum,
 þó hins get’k, · ef it Gyimir finniðsk
 4 vígs ó-trauðir · at ykkir vega tíði.“ “Stand coercion will I never,
 to any man’s liking;
 though I get this, if thou and Gymer meet—men unreluctant of conflict—that ye two will come to fight.”

2 manns-kis ‘any man’s (lit. ‘no man’s)’ | manns enskis A

- [Skirnir kvað:] 25 „Sér þú méki, mér, · mjóvan, mál-fáan, 2 es hef’k í hendi hér?
 fyr þessum eggjum · hnígr sá hinn aldni jötunn,
 4 verðr þinn feigr faðir.
 “Seest thou this sword, maiden—slender, picture-painted—
 which I have in my hand here?
 By these edges sinks the aged ettin [= Gymer] down;
 fey becomes thy father.

- 26 Tams-vendi þik drep’k, · en þik tēnja mun’k,

 4 síðan éva sei.
 With the taming-wand I strike thee—and thee I will tame,
 O maiden, to my liking!
 Thou shalt go where the sons of men never since may see thee!

1 Tams-vendi ‘taming-wand’ | Has been interpreted as a sword, TODO. The imagery is phallic.

- 27 Ara þúfu á · skalt ár sitja, 2 horfa hēimi ór;
 snugga hēljat til;
 4 matr sé þér mér leiðr · an manna hveim
 hinn fráni ormr með frum.

[R 11V/30, A 2V/26]

On an eagle's perch shalt thou sit for long,
 turn away from the world,
 hanker after Hell!
 Be thy food more loathsome than to any man
 the gleaming wyrm [= the Middenyardswyrm] among folk.⁵⁹

²⁻³ horfa hēimi ór; snugga hēljár til 'turn out of the world; hanker after Hell' | i.e. "you will look toward and yearn for the underworld".

⁵ fírum | This is the last word on fol. 2v of A, after which the text cuts off. Apart from the very last stanza, the rest of the poem is preserved only in R.

⁵⁹ Her food will be more disgusting than the Middenyardswyrm, for which cf. Hym 22.

 Sit thyself down, and I will tell thee a heavy roaring-breaker, and a twined grief.

¹ Tópi ok ópi, · tjsull ok ó-þoli 'Toop and woop, tarsle and restlessness' | The first three words are magic curse words without clear meaning; I have left them untranslated. tjsull may perhaps be related to OE teors 'penis' and mean 'little phallus'.

 Weeping for joy shalt thou have in exchange,

 May thy senses seize;

 during highest harvest!

1 þursi þrí-hęęuęum 'three-headed thurse' | Ettins often have an abnormal number of body parts. For their "manyheadedness" see note to Hym 8/2.

5 ves þú sem þistill 'be thou like the thistle' | The thistle was apparently held to be a worthless plant; cf. the English galder against a cattle-thief (Charm IX in margins of CCC 41. TODO: edit this!) cursing him to be swá bręęel swa sęo þystel 'as wretched as the thistle'.

 gamban-tęin ek gat.

 the gombentoe I got.

1 til hrás viðar ‘to the raw/sappy tree’ | The wood of a sapling was apparently thought to be the most effective for magic; cf. Háv 152, which speaks about a runic curse carved on rótum rás viðar ‘the roots of a raw/sappy tree’.

2 gamban-tǣin ‘gombentoe’ | Perhaps “mighty twig”. A compound consisting of the very rare word gamban ‘magic/curse?’ and tǣinn ‘twig, branch’ (cf. mistil-tǣinn ‘mistle-toe’). This may be the stick on which the runic curse in st. 36 below should be carved, or it is to be identified with the tams-vǫndr ‘taming-wand’ of st. 26 above.

Thurse I carve for thee, and three staves:
 queerness and madness and restlessness.—
 So I carve it off as I carved it on,

1 Þurs ‘thurse’ | Thurse is the name of the þ-rune (þ); it is carved as part of the curse.

1 þríá stafi ‘three staves’ | Three runic letters (or phrases) representing the three following words (ęrgi ‘queerness, degeneracy’ etc.). The ritual practice of carving “three staves” is first found on the C7th Gummarp stone: haþuwolafir sate staba þríá fff ‘Hathwolf placed three staves: fff’, where the f-rune (f) stands for its name fee (i.e. ‘wealth, cattle’) and is thus meant to bring wealth.

2 ęrgi ok óði ok ó-þola ‘queerness and madness and restlessness’ | Both ęrgi ‘queerness, degeneracy’ and ó-þoli ‘restlessness’ (here probably from strong lust) are found in the love magic charm on the rune stick B257 from Bryggen (edited below under Galders). ęrgi is also found in the curse-formula on the C7th Proto-Norse runestones from Stentofen and Björketorp. See further introduction to B257.

⁶⁰ Shirner has carved the curse (which will make true the curse), but tells Gird that he will scrape it off if she accepts his demands. She promptly does.

1 hrim-kalki ‘rime-chalice’ | Some kind of expensive glazed drinking vessel; the second element kalkr ‘chalice’ is a borrowing from Latin calix and suggests a Roman origin. Cf. the kalkr in Hym 28/4b.

4 vaningja ‘the Waning [= Free]’ | lit. ‘descendant of the Waners’. A rare word. Its only other occurrence in the Norse corpus is in a thule of boar-names. Boars were sacred to Frey, TODO.

Lay of Hymer

(Hymiskviða)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C10th (0.694)

Meter: Ancient-words-law

Introduction

The Lay of Hymer (Hym) is attested in both R and A. The two mss. agree very well with each other; they share the same stanzas in the same order. The most substantial difference is the title; A has Hymis kviða ‘the lay of Hymer’ while R instead has Þórr dró Miðgarðs-orm ‘Thunder pulled the Middenyardsworm’.

Content

At its core Hym is a comedy about Thunder’s adventures in Ettinland. This seems to have been a popular genre, which in the Poetic Edda is also represented by Þrk and to some degree Hárþ. Other related stories are Thunder’s journey to Outyards-Lock in Gylf 44–47, his fight with Rungner in Skm 24, and his journey to Garfrith in Skm 26 (edited in the present edition under Eddic fragments). These tales involve fantastical events and a fair bit of humour, and usually end with Thunder having slaughtered yet more Ettins.

The otherness of the Ettins

The Ettins are very much an other to the Gods, and this is something which Hym strongly emphasizes:

- They live in the far east (st. 5) in an inhospitable, frozen climate (st. 10) of mountains (sts. 2, 17) and lavafields (sts. 36, 38);
- they are physically deviant: misshapen (st. 10), grey-haired (st. 16), many-headed (sts. 8, 35), having bodies harder than stone (sts. 30–31);
- they are likened to apes (st. 20), whales (st. 36) and Danes (st. 17, see note!);
- they are stingy and inhospitable (sts. 9, 16);
- they are snide and cowardly (sts. 19–20, 25–26, 28–32).

In general the Ettins stand in direct opposition to the Old Germanic social norms, as represented by the Gods; they live in a lush green land and are young, beautiful, generous, and brave. The one exception in the poem is Tew's mother in st. 8, who is blonde, beautiful, and hospitable; the mother of a god must also be godlike.

As natural inferiors and a threat to the social order the Ettins must be subjugated by the Gods, and the agent of this is Thunder. Throughout the poem he constantly humiliates the ettins Eagre and Hymer, recurringly through completing their challenges, which follow a similar scheme: Thunder is given a dangerous or near-impossible test of strength, but quickly accomplishes it through a combination of brawn and brain, humiliating the challenger. The challenges consist of finding an enormously large kettle (st. 3, explicitly called Eagre's "revenge"), wrestling one of Hymer's oxen for bait (sts. 17–18), carrying home Hymer's whales and boat (st. 26), breaking Hymer's finest chalice (st. 28), and perhaps also taking away the cauldron (st. 33)—though that may just be Hymer wishing to finally be rid of the pestering gods.

In the end Thunder delivers justice by slaughtering Hymer and his troop of many-headed Ettins, probably his clansmen.

The fishing expedition

At the center of the poem stands Thunder's famous fishing expedition; the god gets the Middenyardswyrn on the hook but ultimately fails to catch it. In this section, especially in sts. 22–24, one finds a more reverent tone than elsewhere in the poem.

This myth was very popular in the Wiking Age and is dealt with in five fragmentary Scaldic poems from the 9th or 10th centuries. These are all found in quotations in Skm; they are (by their SkP 3 sigla) Bragi Þórr, ÚlfrU Húsdr 3–6, Qlv Þórr, Evald Þórr, and Ggnæv Þórr. In their present state the fragments are not complete narratives, but specifically focus on Thunder in the boat facing off against the hooked Wyrn pressed against the gunwale. They also disagree on the course of events; in some of them the starging contest ends when the cowardly Hymer cuts the fishing line and the Wyrn sinks back unscathed into the sea (the version preferred by Gylf 48)—in others Thunder strikes the head off the Wyrn, slaying it.

In addition to literary sources there are also numerous pictorial depictions of the myth from the Wiking Age. These are the Swedish runestones from Altuna (U 1611) and Līnga (Sö 352), several Jutlandic picture stones from Hørdum, a Cumbrian picture stone from Gosforth, and the Gotlandic picture stone GP 21 from Ardre church. The images depict the same scene as the Scaldic fragments: Thunder stands in the boat above the hooked Wyrn, often depicted as a fish; next to him is one companion. Some of them have additional details like the use of the ox-head for bait (U 1611, Sö 352), or Thunder's foot going through the boat (U 1611, Hørdum).

Other than Hym the only complete retelling of the myth is found in Gylf 48, which may be summarized as follows:

Thunder goes out alone into Middenyard in the shape of a young man (ungr drengr) without his goats and chariot. In the evening he comes to the ettin Hymer and asks to stay the night. At dawn Hymer plans to go fishing and Thunder asks to join him. Hymer says that Thunder will not be of much help since he is "small and but a young man" (litill ok ungmenni eitt), and warns him that he usually takes long and arduous trips. Thunder, angered, says that he will row very far, and then asks Hymer what bait they will use. Hymer tells him to find it himself, and so he turns to his flock of oxen; he tears off the head from the greatest ox, one called Heavenrid (Himin-brjóðr).

The two go out to sea, and Thunder rows far past Hymer's usual fishing waters. Hymer, unhappy, warns him that if they row any further out they will be in danger of the Middenyardswyrm, but Thunder keeps on. After some time he puts down the oars, readies his fishing line, hooks the ox-head and lowers it. The Wyrm soon bites, and struggles so hard that Thunder is pressed against the gunwale. In rage he brings himself into his Os-might (ás-megin) and pulls back with such force that his feet go through the bottom of the ship and press into the seabed. The Wyrm's head goes up against the gunwale. The two enemies ferociously stare at each other, Thunder "sharpening his eyes" and the Wyrm spitting venom. Hymer is frightened, reaches for his bait-cutting knife, and cuts the line—the Wyrm then sinks back into the sea. Thunder throws his hammer after it, "and men say that he struck off the monster's head, but I think it true to tell thee that the Middenyardswyrm still lives and is lying in the outer sea." Thunder gives Hymer a punch to the ear so that he flies headfirst overboard; the god then wades back to land.

This account is clearly based on multiple sources, certainly including the Scaldic fragments cited in Skm. It is hard to say whether Snorre had access to Hym; the closest agreement is when it is said that Miðgarðs-ormr gein yfir uxa-böfuð'it, en þngull'inn vá í góm'inn orm'inum 'The Middenyardswyrm snapped at the ox-head and the hook went into the roof of the wyrm's mouth', which has some resemblance to st. 22, but it is not conclusive. Some details must derive from now-lost texts available to Snorre: the detail of Thunder's feet going through the boat is also found on the Swedish Altuna stone and the Danish Hørdum stone (but see note to st. 34/2 below), and the name Heavenrid is attested in thules listing names of oxen.

More broadly, Thunder's fishing reflects the archetypal fight between the Storm-god and the Dragon found in a great many mythologies. Important examples of this include Vedic Indra and Vṛtrá (RV 1.32 et c.), Babylonian Marduk and Tiamat (Enūma Eliš), Greek Zeus and Typhon, Hebrew Yahweh and Leviathan (TODO: references). With these analogies in mind it seems that the versions where Thunder slays the Wyrm reflect an older layer of Germanic mythology, before the lethal fight between Thunder and the Wyrm had been transposed to the End Times (see Vsp 53).

Hym as a composite

In Hym one can roughly identify the following strands:

1. 1–6 The Gods wish to drink, and Thunder goes to Eagre to make him host; Eagre in turn asks for a cauldron big enough to brew enough ale for all the Gods.
2. 7–16 Thunder and Tew go to visit Tew's father, the stingy ettin Hymer, who owns such a cauldron; horrified at Thunder's great appetite during the evening he tells them that they must go fishing for food.
3. 17–19 Thunder says that he will do it, if he is given bait; Hymer challenges him to kill one of his oxen; Thunder tears off the head from one of them.
4. 20–25 The three go fishing; Hymer pulls up some whales; with the ox-head as bait Thunder manages to hook the Middenyardswyrm itself; he loses it.
5. 26–27 Hymer challenges Thunder to carry the boat and whales back to his farm; he does.
6. 28–32 Hymer challenges Thunder to break a supposedly indestructible chalice; he succeeds by smashing it against the ettin's forehead.

7. 33–36 Thunder and Tew depart with the cauldron; they find themselves followed by Hymer and his ettins; Thunder kills them all.
8. 37–38 One of Thunder's goats goes halt.
9. 39 Thunder returns to the Gods with Hymer's cauldron; they host a banquet.

The fishing expedition as found in the Scaldic fragments and Gylf 48 is represented by 3–4. Hym is the only source that places it within the context of Thunder and Tew obtaining a huge cauldron from Hymer for the sake of brewing ale, and also scatters several other incidents throughout. It seems inescapable to presume, both from the other sources just mentioned and broader comparative mythology, that these additional narratives originally had nothing to do with Thunder's encounter with the Wyrn.

These strands have been woven together into a single narrative, perhaps even by the poet himself for the sake of a more entertaining and complete story. This weaving has not been entirely successful, and there are a few loose threads. The halt goat of sts. 37–38 finds a parallel in Gylf 44, where it serves as the origin story of Thunder's two servants who are to play an important part in the narrative, but it is here an entirely superfluous detail—something the poet himself anticipates in his address to the audience. It is also strange that Lock should appear at this point, since he is never mentioned before or since.

Another loose strand is the god Tew, who plays no role at all in the fishing expedition: he is last alluded to in st. 16 where Hymer speaks of “[us] three”, and then reappears in st. 33 where he fails to lift the cauldron. The simplest explanation for this is that he originally had nothing to do with fishing; his role is to bridge the frame-narrative of the cauldron and the fishing expedition. In the other variants of the latter Thunder only has one companion, Hymer; this includes the pictorial depictions, which only show two figures on the boat. Moreover, it is strange that Tew has no reaction to the murder of his father in front of him, although that paternity is in doubt; Tew is elsewhere called the son of Weden (Skm 16), so that Hymer may perhaps be his stepfather. This would reflect the common motif of a god mating with a beautiful ettin-woman, e.g. in Skm.

Style

When speaking of a composite poem, one must distinguish between a text where several separate works have been put together mostly unchanged and a text composed by a single author drawing from multiple sources. A likely example of the former is Háv, but Hym undoubtedly belongs to the latter category. It has a distinct style and rhythm throughout which stands alone in the Poetic Edda. Indeed, the sharpest stylistic contrast is with the poem most similar content-wise, viz. Þrk. Where Þrk is written in a rustic style with fairly loose Ancient-words-law meter, Hym uses an unusually strict meter and is filled with kennings, difficult grammatical constructions, and highly unnatural word order (see especially sts. 16, 20, and 39). These are all traits one associates more closely with Scaldic poetry in intricate measures like Court-recited meter than Eddic poetry in Ancient-words-law, and it seems clear that the anonymous poet of Hym had some training in the Scaldic art and familiarity with compositions in that genre. Two kennings (17/4a brjótr berg-Dana, 22/4 umb-gjörð allra landa) are even shared identically with Scaldic poems in Court-recited meter.

Meter

The meter of Hym is Ancient-words-law, but of a stricter variant than that of any other poem in the Poetic Edda; this is especially true when it comes to the count and weight of syllables. Three-syllable lines are rare, and the ones that do exist can all be corrected by restoring older hiatus forms (see note to 23/1b below). The poet also has a notable tendency to avoid lines of type C₁ (xP#Px) where both stresses are heavy, something shared with Scaldic poems in Lay-meter and with Eyel's Headransom. This probably explains his unique obsession with placing the two-syllable preposition fyrir 'before, in front, (up) ahead' at the end of the b-verse (never the a-verse), which he does 6 times—more frequently than in any other Ancient-words-law poem of the Poetic Edda.

[R 13v/26, A 5v/25]

Of yore the slain-Tews <Gods> had caught game, and assembled at the simble before they might eat
they shook the twigs and looked at the leat;
they found at Eagre's a great choice of cauldrons.

2 áðr saðir yrði 'before they might eat' | Lit. "might become sated".

3 hristu tęina · ok á hlaut sǫu 'they shook the twigs and looked at the leat' | The Gods performed an augury, the means of which are not clear from this stanza alone. The term "leat" (hlaut) is explained in HákGóð and Eb as the sacrificial blood of the slaughtered beasts, which was sprinkled by means of "leat-twigs" (hlaut-tęinar). If we trust these sources the simplest explanation is that the Gods sprinkled the animal blood and interpreted the pattern formed. In any case they found it most auspicious to feast at Eagre's.

[R 13v/28, A 5v/27]

The crag-dweller [ETTIN = Eagre] sat merry like a child ahead much alike to the lad of Misherblind.
Into his eyes looked Ug's <Weden's> child [= Thunder] in defiance:
"Thou shalt for the Eese oft make simbles!"⁶¹

4 gǫra 'make' | gefa 'give' A

2 megi · Miskur-blinda ‘lad of Misherblind’ | An unexplained reference. Misherblind might be another name for Firneet, Eagre’s father, in which case the line would be a tautology: “he looked much like himself”.

⁶¹Having seen that Eagre has a great store of cauldrons, Thunder orders him to brew ale for the feasts of the Eese.

- 3 Qnn fekk jǫtni · orð-béginns halr, [R 13v/31, A 5v/29] 2 hugði at hefndum · hann nýst við goð, bað Sifjar ver · sér föra hver,
 4 „þann’s ek ǫllum ǫl · yðr of hęita.“

Great toil for the ettin the word-peevisish man [= Thunder] caused;
 he thought of revenge, soon, against the gods.
 He bade Sib’s husband [= Thunder] bring him a cauldron,
 “that one with which I for you all ale might warm.”⁶²

4 ǫl ‘ale’ | Often drunk by the gods at their feasts; see Grm 37/6 and note.

⁶²Eagre gets back at Thunder by telling him that he needs a single cauldron which can hold enough ale to supply all the Eese.

- 4 Né þat mǫttu · męrir tívar [R 14r/1, A 5v/30]
 2 ok ginn-ręgin · of geta hver-gi,

That one could not the renowned Tews and the yin-Reins anywhere get hold of—until, out of loyalty, Tew to Loride (= Thunder) a great loving counsel in private told:

- 5 „Býr fyr austan · Éli-vága [R 14r/3, A 6r/2]
 2 hund-viss Hymir · at himins ęnda,

 4 rúm-brugðinn hver · rastar djúpan.“

“Dwells to the east of the Ilewaves the hundred-wise Hymer, at heaven’s end.”⁶³
 Owns my father [= Hymer], fierce, a kettle:
 a size-famed cauldron one rest deep.”

4 rúm-brugðinn | †rumbrýgðan† A

2 hund-viss ‘hundred-wise’ | Alternatively “hound-wise”; the prefix simply means “very”.

⁶³According to Vafþ 31 the Illewaves were the poisonous wild rushes from which the ettins emerged, and so it makes sense that they would be found in the east, where the ettins dwell. That Hymer should dwell even to the east of them then illustrates his unusual ettin-ness.

[Þórr kvað:] 6 „Veitst, ef þiggjum · þann lög-velli?“ [R 14r/4, A 6r/4] [Týr kvað:] 2 „Ef, vinr, vélar · vit görum till!“

“Knowest thou if we will receive that liquid-boiler [CAULDRON]?” —
 “If, friend, we two make use of wiles!”⁶⁴

⁶⁴Like elsewhere in this poem the speakers are not indicated, but it is most sensible that Thunder asks and Tew answers.

7 Föru drjúgum · dag þann framan [R 14r/5, A 6r/4]
 2 Ásgarði frá · unds til Egils kvömu;

 4 hurfu at hollu · es Hymir átti.

They journeyed far from the beginning of the day, away from Osyrd, until to Eyel they came—he kept the he-goats noblest of horns—they turned to the hall which Hymer owned.

1 dag þann framan ‘from the beginning of the day’ | emend. after Finnur Jónsson (1932); dag þann fram ‘on that day forth’ R; dag frálíga ‘swiftly at day’ A 2 Egils ‘Eyel’ | so R; Égis ‘Eagre’ A.

2 Egils ‘Eyel’ | The reading of A is probably from confusion with the ettin Eagre, who is mentioned earlier in the poem. Eyel, who takes Thunder’s goats in possession, is not otherwise known. He may perhaps be identified with the farmer in Gylf 44, for which see Note to st. 37 below.

8 Møgr fann qmmu, · mjök leiða sér, [R 14r/7, A 6r/6]
 2 hafði hqfða · hundruð níu, en qnnur gekk · al-gullin framm
 4 brún-hvít bera · bjór-vęig syni:

The lad [= Tew] found his grandmother very loathsome;
 of heads she had nine hundred.
 But another woman, all-golden, walked forth,
 white-browed, bringing a beer-draught for [her] son [= Tew]:

2 hafði hqfða · hundruð níu ‘of heads she had nine hundred’ | Malformed bodies, especially with a deviant number of body parts, are typical of ettins. Other examples include a three-headed thurse in Skm 31, the nine-headed ettin Thriwold (Bragi Frag 3 in SkP 3), and the eight-armed Starked Eeldreng. Cf. Introduction and st. 35 below.

3 qnnur ‘another woman’ | The use of the word “son” in the following line reveals this as Tew’s mother. The poet stresses her beauty of dress and countenance, in contrast to the grandmother.

[Týs móðir:]

[R 14r/9, A 6r/8]

“O clansman of ettins [= Tew]! I would wish to put

 Many a time has my lover [= Hymer] been stingy with guests, quick to ill mood.”

2 hug-fulla | hugfulla hugfulla R 3 frii ‘lover’ | so R; faðir ‘father’ A

4 glöggr ... hugar ‘stingy ... mood’ | Ettins are characteristically inhospitable, in stark opposition to the Old Germanic social norms; see Introduction to the poem above. This statement foreshadows the later hunting expedition starting at st. 16 below.

- 10 En vá-skapaðr · varð síð-búinn,
 2 harð-ráðr Hymir, · heim af vęiðum;

And the misshapen one was come late,
 hard-minded Hymer, home from the hunt.
 He entered the hall; icicles clattered;
 on the churl who came was the cheek-shaw [BEARD] frozen.

1 síð-búinn ‘come late’ | om. A

3 jǫklar ‘icicles’ | In Hymer’s frozen beard. In modern Icelandic the word jökull has come to mean ‘glacier’, but its original sense (as found here) is that of its English cognate “icicle”.

[Týs móðir:]

1 Ves þú heill, ... i hugum góðum! ‘Be thou hale ... in good spirits!’ | A formulaic greeting; cf. the almost identical greeting in N B380 (edited below under Galders). Further afield cf. the type exemplified by Beow 407a: Wes þú, Hrōðgār, hāl ‘Be thou, Rothgar, hale!’

Loride's ⟨Thunder's⟩ eating far too great;

1–4 ALL | Hymer's stinginess—he refuses to share more of his own food but instead forces his guests to go hunt—breaks all Indo-European rules of hospitality and illustrates the otherness of the Ettins; see Introduction above.

3–4 munum ... lifa. 'the next ... live.' | The poet is pushing at the limits of Old Norse syntax. In prose word order it should be construed as: at ǫðrum aptni munum vér þrír verða lifa við vęiði-mat, where verða 'have to, must' is used like its modern German cognate werden.

Cf. also Þdr, where ettins are called Scots, Swedes, Danes, Ruges and Hareds; all peoples hostile to the Norwegian Earl Hathkin, at whose court that poem may have been composed.

1 vęntir mik | so A; vęnti ek (norm.) R 1 myni-t 'will not' | so A; myni 'will' R. The A reading is preferable since it makes this the first of Hymer's several challenges of strength to Thunder, which the god, to the ettin's humiliation, easily accomplishes.

3 Svęinn 'The swain' | Thunder was in the shape of a young (prepubescent) boy, a detail which is also found in Gylf 48; see Introduction to the poem.

4 oxi ... al-svartr 'ox ... all-black' | Formulaic, also occurring in Þrk 23; see note there for further parallels to the custom of sacrificing animals of certain colours. It seems that all-black oxen were thought the noblest, and so Thunder's slaying one instead of an inferior beast is probably intended to humiliate the stingy Hymer. We learn more about this ox in Gylf 48: Hann tók inn mesta uxa'nn, er Himin-brjóðr hét, ok sleit af hęfuð'it ok fór með til sjávar. 'He took the greatest ox, which was called Heavenrid, and tore off its head and went with it to the sea'.

3 agni ‘bait’ | so A; ęngli ‘hook’ R

4 umb-gjörð ... allra landa ‘engirdler of all lands’ | Also found in a fragment by Alewigh Snub (SkP: Qly Þórr) quoted in Skm 11: Óstisk allra landa · umb-gjörð ok sonr Jarðar ‘The engirdler of all lands and the son of Earth surged.’ Closely related is the kenning in Braye’s fragment quoted in the same chapter (SkP: Bragi Þórr 3): ęndi-sęðör allra landa ‘boundary-saith of all lands’. Both kennings relate to the cosmological idea of the Wyrms as lying in the outer sea wrapped around the land, biting its tail.

The poetic juxtaposition between the Storm-god and the Wyrms may be very old; cf. RV 1.32.13c: Índraş ca yád · yuyudāte Abiş ca ‘When Indra and the Wyrms (āhi) fought each other.’

With the hammer he struck the high mountain of hair [HEAD]—

1 Þóarr 'Thunder' | Out of 8 three-syllable lines in Hym, this is the only one which is deficient in both R and A and cannot easily be emended by restoring an hiatus form. In the quite strict meter (see Introduction above) observed by the Hym poet we should expect a disyllabic form in this spot, and this may be had if we restore an archaic *Þóarr or *Þóurr. Such a form is less secure than other hiatus forms, but is also required by the meter of Hym 28/2b below, and further in the Scaldic Þdr 2/2b. This issue is treated in depth by Haukur Þorgeirsson (2023), who argues for the form *Þóurr.

3 hó-fjall skarar 'high mountain of hair [HEAD]' | A rather unfitting kenning, since serpents do not have hair.

thereafter sank that fish [= the Wyrms] into the sea.

1 hrutu | so A; blumðu 'dashed' R.

1 Hraun-gǫlkn 'The desert-monsters' | Both mss. have brǫin-, which may mean either 'clean' or 'reindeer', neither of which fit. On the other hand braun ONP: 'stone/barren area, wasteland; lavafield' is well attested in Scaldic kennings for ettins. The precise meaning of galkn 'monster' (plural gǫlkn) is unclear, but it is attested in 3 Scaldic verses, in all cases as the base-word in kennings of the type "troll-woman of the shield [AXE]", which suggests that it (like another neuter word, flagð) refers specifically to female malevolent beings.

While the mss. spelling 'galkn' (norm. gálkn) could reflect either singular or plural, the form of the verb is plural. This means that the word cannot be referring to the Middenyardswyrms, refuting the interpretation of Larrington (2014): "the sea-wolf shrieked".

1 hrutu | The A reading is preferred since it has the metrically required short root syllable. The end rhyme is paralleled elsewhere in the poem (st. 3/3).

3 [...] | It is very likely that a line is missing here, since the stanzas in the poem fairly consistently have four lines. In other tellings of the myth it is at this point that Hymer cuts Thunder's fishing line, so that is probably what has been lost.

For the reader's enjoyment, based on other poets and Gylf 48, I have composed the following lines that may be inserted: unds vinr Hrunnis · vað Þörs of skar* 'until the friend of Rungner [= Hymer] Thunder's fishing-line did cut'; unds fǫlr Hymir · fekk á saxi* 'until pale Hymer grasped the knife'.

4 fiskr 'fish' | A good example showing that pre-modern speciation, especially in mythology, was not exact. The appellation is not a mere fancy of the poet, for the Wyrms appears in the shape of a fish in various pre-Christian pictorial sources (e.g. GP 21). It may also be called a fish in Grm 21 (see note there), and in Scaldic sources it is often called a saithe (seiðr).

2 [...] | Another likely missing line. As said in the previous stanza the meter usually requires four lines; more importantly the first half of the sentence is incomplete without a verb.

3 svá't ár 'so that for a long time' | Finnur Jónsson (1932) suggests svá't at ór 'so that by the oar', but this burdens the strict meter. For this sense of ár cf. Skm 27.

2 með austri 'with the bilge-water' | That is, the bilge-water was still inside the boat; another comically impressive work of strength.

5 holt-riða hver 'spring of woodland ridges' | An uncertain geographical description apparently meant to impress the original audience. In Iceland hverr 'cauldron' also carries the sense '(hot) spring', in which case this could be an attestation of Thunder's prowess in wading (for which see Grm 29). 2 fórdisk allra · i ős-megin ‘brought himself to his highest Os-might’ | The exact meaning of this is not clear, but a likely reading is that Thunder brings himself into his true form as the mighty, red-bearded man; recall that he was previously in the shape of a young boy (st. 18). Cf. Gylf in its description of Thunder attempting to pull up the Wyrms: Þá varð Þórr reiðr ok fórðist í ás-megin ‘Then Thunder turned wroth and drew himself into his Os-might’ and the Eddic fragment about Thunder’s journey to Garfrith.

2 ql-kjól ‘ale-vessel [CAULDRON]’ | ql-kjól is the accusative of ql-kjóll, but in this construction (CV: koma, B) we would expect the dative ql-kjóli. Since the meter does not allow for this the poet has probably taken a grammatical liberty.

2 hofi 'hall' | This is the only Old Norse occurrence of the word hof in the sense “hall, house”—it otherwise only means “temple” (hove). The West Germanic cognates consistently mean “hall”, but that is probably the original sense, so it is unclear if this is an instance of foreign (if so, most likely Anglo-Saxon) influence or just a poetic archaism.

This detail is mentioned in an example sentence contrasting long and short phonemes in FGT (1950): beyrði til þøddu, þá er þórr bar þverinn 'the sound of the pot-links (þaðda) was heard when Thunder bore the cauldron'. According to Finnur Jónsson (1932) the chain (or þaðda) on a Wiking-age cauldron would have reached across, in which case this would be a reference to the cauldron's enormous size, with its diameter—mentioned in st. 5 as one rest—being roughly the same as Thunder's height.

⁶⁷In the account of Gylf Thunder is said to have stepped through the boat when trying to pull up the Middenyardswyrm. This detail is also seen on the carving of the Altuna stone from Uppland, Sweden; it may have been transposed to this place in the narrative. TODO.

For this notion cf. Skm 43, where the Hammer is said to always return to Thunder when thrown, and the numerous amulets where the Hammer is given eyes, most famously the Scanian silver amulet from Claes Kurck’s collection (106659 HST).

The colt of the cart-pole [GOAT] was halt in the leg, and that the guile-wise Lock had caused.

3 skér | emend. from meaningless †skirr† RA

1–4 ALL | The detail of Thunder’s halt goat is also found in Gylf 44:

Thunder and Lock were on the way to visit Outyards-Lock and stayed the night with a certain farmer. For supper Thunder cut his two goats and invited the farmer and his family to dine with him. After they had eaten he spread the goatskins before the fire and bade the housefolk throw the bones of the goats onto them. The farmer’s son stealthily pried open the thigh of one of the goats and ate the marrow. At dawn Thunder blessed the goatskins with his hammer and the goats came back to life, but the one Thelvé had cut had a halt leg. Thunder was enraged, but the farmer begged for his life and offered to give up his two children, namely his son Thelvé his daughter and Wrash. Thunder spared him, and the two became his servants.

The present stanza may reference a version of the myth where Lock had a part to play in the halting of the goat, perhaps by encouraging Thelvé to pry the bone open. Since the goats were previously (st. 7) left with the farmer Eyel, he may be identical to the farmer in Gylf:

- 38 En ér heyrtr hafð, · hverr kann umb þat

1 ér 'ye' | The listeners. A direct address to the audience of this type is otherwise unparalleled in Eddic mythological poetry. Such are, however, typical for the Scaldic poetry with which this poem shares several traits; see Introduction above.

1–2 hværr ... goð-mǫlugu 'each god-speaking man' | Literally "each of the god-speaking ones". goð-mǫlugu 'god-speaking' is an hapax, but easily understood as "learned in the (lore of) the gods".

The valour-strong man [= Thunder] came to the Thing of the Gods, and had the cauldron which Hymer had owned,
 and the Wighers <Gods> well shall drink an ale-feast at Eage's, each flax-cutting [FALL?].

4 ǣtt hǫr-meitið 'an ... flax-cutting' | The latter word is an hapax and very obscure. La Farge and Tucker (1992) give several suggestions based on WINTER-kennings of the type "harm of the snake", viz. ǣtr-hǫr-meitir 'poison-rope-cutter [SNAKE > WINTER]', ǣtr-orm-meitir 'poison-worm-injurer' [WINTER]. A solution without emendation is to read ǣtt 'one' n. acc. sg. as modifying ǫlðr n. acc. 'ale-feast', and hveŕjan masc. acc. sg. 'every' as modifying hǫr-meitiðr masc. acc. 'flax-cutting', a compound made up of hǫrr 'flax, cord' and meita 'to cut'. The whole thing might refer to an obscure harvest festival and give the poem something of an etiological purpose. If this interpretation is correct it is not unlikely that Hym was originally composed for performance at such a festival.

Introduction

The Flyting of Lock (Lok) is only preserved in R, where it follows Hym and comes before Þrk. In R it is tied together with Hym by the prose passage “From Eagre and the Gods”, but the two poems are certainly distinct compositions, for they are drastically different in style and meter, and Hym stands alone in A.

A stanza that appears to belong to Lok is found in Gylf 20; it is edited below at the end of the poem.

The poem has been interpreted as blasphemous (TODO: elaborate), but there is nothing in the language to suggest a late dating.

From Eagre and the Gods (Frá Égi ok goðum)

PI Égir, er qðru nafni hét Gymir, hann hafði búit ásum ql þá er
2 hann hafði fengit ketil inn mikla sem nú er sagt. Til þeirar veit-slu kom Óðinn ok Frigg kona hans. Þórr kom eigi því at hann var 4 í austr-vegi. Sif var þar, kona Þórs; Bragi, ok Iðunn kona hans.
Týr var þar, hann var ein-hendr; Fenrisulfr sleit hõnd af hánun, 6 þá er hann var bundinn. Þar var Njörðr ok kona hans Skaði;
Freyr ok Freyja; Viðarr son Óðins. Loki var þar, ok þjónustu-8 menn Freys, Byggvir ok Beyla. Mart var þar ása ok alfa.

Eagre, who by another name was called Gymer—he had prepared an ale-feast for the Eese when he had got the great kettle as is now told.⁶⁸ To that gathering came Weden and Frie his wife. Thunder came not, for he was on the Eastern Way. Sib was there, Thunder's wife; Bray and Idun his wife. Tew was there; he was one-handed; the Fenrerswolf tore his hand off when it was bound.⁶⁹ Nearth was there and his wife Shede; Free and Frow; Wider the son of Weden. Lock was there, and the servants of Free, Bew and Beal. A multitude of Eese and Elves⁷⁰ were there.

⁶⁸ See the immediately preceding Hym.

⁶⁹ This detail is probably brought up to chronologically date the events of the poem as happening after the binding of Fenrer.

⁷⁰ A formulaic expression, see Eese and Elves.

P2 Égir átti tvá þjónustu-menn, Fimafengr ok Eldir. Þar var lýsi-
 2 gull haft fyr elds-ljós; sjálft barsk þar ǫl. Þar var gríða-stadr mikill. Menn lofuðu mjök hversu góðir þjónustu-menn Égis 4 vóru. Loki mátti eigi heyra þat, ok drap hann Fimafeng. Þá skóku ésir skjöldu sína ok óptu at Loka, ok eltu hann braut til 6 skógar, en þeir fóru at drekka. Loki hvarf aprt ok hitti úti Eldi;
 Loki kvaddi hann:

Eagre had two servants, Femfinger and Elder. There glowing gold was used instead of fire; the ale there carried itself. It was a great grith-place there.⁷¹ The men greatly praised how good the servants of Eagre were; Lock could not stand to hear that, and he slew Femfinger. Then the Eese shook their shields and screamed at Lock,⁷² and drove him away to the forest, and they went [back] to drinking. Lock turned back around and met Elder outside. Lock greeted him:

⁷¹ A place wherein all violence was forbidden, see Index.

⁷² Some sort of ancient war dance. Cf. the Old Swedish Heathen Law: "He screams three nothing-screams TODO".

The Flying of Lock

1 „Seg þú þat, Eldir, · svá't einu-gi
 2 feti gangir framarr, hvat hér inni · hafa at ǫl-mólum
 4 sig-tíva synir.“

“Tell thou this, O Elder, so that thou not take one step further:
What here within they say over the ale,
the sons of the victory-Tews [GODS]?”

1–2 svá't ... framarr ‘so that ... further’ | Shared with Háv 38.

3 hafa at ǫl-mólum ‘they say over the ale’ | Lit. “they have for their ale-speeches”.

Eldir: 2 „Of vǫpn sîn dóma · ok of víg-risni sîna
2 sig-tíva synir;
ása ok alfa, · es hér inni eru,
4 mann-gi 's þér i orði vinr.“

“Of their weapons they speak and of their battle-prowess,
the sons of the victory-Tews [GODS].
Of the Eese and Elves which are here within none is thee a friend in words.”

4 mann-gi 's þér i orði vinr. ‘none is thee a friend in words.’ | I.e., “nobody says anything good about you.”

The alliteration here is notable, and also occurs in st. 10 (Viðarr : ulfi, see note there). There are no signs of corruption, and so there are two possible explanations. Either (1) the semi-vowel v (/w/) is participating in vowel-alliteration with o— such alliteration between v and true vowels is never encountered in Scaldic poetry, but there are some examples from Eddic styles—or (2) the poem (or the relevant lines) was composed before the North Germanic loss of v before rounded vowels. (2) finds support in the notable fact that in both the present st. and st. 10 the words orð ‘word’ and ulfr ‘wolf’ originally began with v; in the case of the word ulfr this consonant is attested in old Scandinavian runic inscriptions. For metrical reasons the lines must postdate the syncope of most unstressed short vowels, but on the basis of the three closely related C7th runestones from Blekinge (DR 357–359, from Stentofen, Gummarp, and Istaby) the loss of w before rounded vowels is shown to have occurred later; so DR 359 hāþuwulafir Hāþuwulafir. If the alliteration indeed should fall on v, this would not require dating the whole Lok to the late Proto-Norse period (indeed, according to the analysis done by Sapp (2022), it is not even the linguistically oldest poem preserved); the older forms could, for instance, reflect archaic poetic formulae.

A C7th Proto-Norse form of this c-line might be: *mann-gi 's þér in wordé winir.

Loki kvað: 3 „Inn skal ganga · Égis hallir i
2 á þat sumbl at séa,
jǫll ok ǫfu · fóri'k ása sonum
4 ok blænd'k þeim svá męini mjǫð.“

“I shall go into Eage's halls,
on that simble for to see.
Scorn and hatred I bring the sons of the Eese,
and I mix for them so the mead with harm.”

2 sumbl ‘simble’ | The Germanic word for “feast, banquet”.

3 jöll ok ófu ‘scorn and hatred’ | Two rare words to which the present translation hardly does justice. The former occurs nowhere else, while the latter only otherwise occurs in Sigsk 33. They have been interpreted in a variety of ways: CV sees the first word as jóll ‘wild angelica’, whereas the second is taken to be an error for áfr (“a beverage [...] translated by Magnaeus by sorbitio avenacea, a sort of common ale brewed of oats”). TODO: What do other editors say? Esp. Kommentar.

4 blænd’k ... mœini mjöd ‘I mix ... the mead with harm’ | Formulaic, cf. Sigrdr 8 (and others TODO).

Eldir kvað: 4 „Veitst, ef inn gængr · Égis hallir ĩ
2 á þat sumbl at séa,
hrópi ok rógi · ef eyss á holl rëgin,
4 á þér munu þau þerra þat.“
“Thou knowest if thou goest into Eage’s halls,
on that simble for to see—
if slander and strife thou pourest on the hold Reins, on thee will they dry it off!”

Loki kvað: 5 „Veitst þat Eldir, · ef ĩnir skulum
2 sár-yrðum sakask,
auðigr verða · mun’k ĩ and-svorum,
4 ef þú mœlir til mart!“ “Thou knowest that, Elder, if one-on-one we shall banter with wounding words, wealthy will I grow in answers,
if thou speak too much!”

4 ef þú mœlir til mart! ‘if thou speak too much!’ | Formulaic; cf. Háv 27.

P3 Síðan gekk Loki inn í hollina; en er þeir sá, er fyrir váru, hvern 2 inn var kominn, þögnuðu þeir allir.

Thereafter Lock went into the hall, but when those who were there before him saw who was come inside, they all turned silent.

Loki kvað: 6 „Þyrstr ek kom · þessar hallar til 2 Loptr of langan veg, ðsu at biðja, · at mér ĩnn gefi
4 mæran drykk mjaðar.
“Thirsty I came unto these halls,
Loft (= Lock), over a long way, to bid the Eese that they give me but one renowned drink of mead.

4 męran drykk mjaðar ‘renowned drink of mead’ | Formulaic language for describing mead; cf. Háv 105, 140, Skm 16. TODO: more parallels.

- 7 Hví þęgið ér svá · þrunġin goð,
 2 at męla né męguð;
 sessa ok staði · vęlið mér sumbli at,
 4 eða hęitið mik heðan!“

Why shut ye up so, ye pressed Gods, that ye cannot speak?
 Choose seats and places for me at the simble, or call me away hence!”

3–4 sessa ... heðan! ‘Choose ... hence!’ | That is, “Cease your dallying; give me a seat or tell me to leave!”

- Bragi: 8 „Sessa ok staði · vęlja þér sumbli at 2 ęsir aldri-gi;
 því-at ęsir vitu · hvęim alda skulu
 4 gamban-sumbl of geta.“

“Choose seats and places for thee at the simble
 the Eese will never do, for the Eese know for which man they shall prepare the gomben-simble.”

3 hvęim alda ‘which man’ | Here “person, being”. See note to Vafþ 55/6.

4 gamban-sumbl ‘gomben-simble’ | gamban ‘gomben’ being an obscure prefix which only occurs in Lok, Skm and Hárþ. CV suggest it means something like “costly”.

- [Loki:] 9 „Mant þat Óðinn, · es vit i ár-daga 2 blendum blóði saman?
 ęlvi þęgja · létsk ęgi mundu,
 4 nema okkr vęri bęðum borit.“

“Recallest thou, Weden, when we two in days of yore blended our blood together?
 Taste ale wouldst thou never do,
 unless it were for us both borne forth!”

1–4 All | Lock turns to Weden, chief of the Eese, and reminds him of an oath of blood-brotherhood the two had undertaken in the early days of the world. The circumstances of the oath between them are otherwise entirely unknown.

- [Óðinn:] 10 „Rís þá Víðarr · ok lát ulfs fǫður 2 sitja sumbli at,
 síðr oss Loki · kvæði lasta-stofum
 4 Ēgis hǫllu ĩ.“
 “Then rise, O Wider, and let the Wolf’s father [= Lock] sit at the simble, lest Lock should greet us with words of vice
 in Eagre’s hall.”

1 Rís þá Víðarr · ok lát ulfs fǫður ‘Rise thou, Wider, and let the Wolf’s father [= Lock]’ | For the alliteration see note to st. 2. A C7th Proto-Norse form of the line might be: Rís þan Wíðarr · auk lát wulfs fǫður*.

- P4 Þá stóð Víðarr upp ok skenkti Loka, en áðr hann drykki, kvaddi 2 hann ásunu:
 Then Wider stood up and poured a drink to Lock, but before he [= Lock] drank, he greeted the Eese:

- 11 „Hēilir ēsir, · hēilar ōsynjur
 2 ok ǫll ginn-hēilōg goð, nema sá ēinn ōss · es innar sitr
 4 Bragi bēkkjum ā.“
 “Hail the Eese! Hail the Ossens, and all yin-holy Gods!⁷³
 Save for that one os who sits further within:
 Bray, on the benches.”

⁷³The first two half-lines are identical to the prayer in Sigrdr 3–4. The prayer formula may actually have been used in Heathen toasts, where the second half of the stanza was used to ask for a boon. Lock subverts it by instead insulting one of the gods present, which would have come off as blasphemous to the Heathen audience.

- [Bragi] kvað: 12 „Mar ok mēki · gef’k þér míns féar 2 ok bōtir þér svá baugi Bragi, síðr þú ōsum · ōfund of gjaldir;
 4 grēm þú ēigi goð at þér!“
 “Steed and sword I give thee of my own wealth, and so restores thee Bray with a bigh, lest thou repay the Eese with envy;
 anger not the Gods against thee!”

1 Mar ok mēki ‘Steed and sword’ | Formulaic pair; see Háv 83/2.

[Loki] kvað: 13 „Jós ok arm-bauga · munt é vesa
 2 þeggja vanr Bragi,
 ása ok alfa, · es hér inni eru,
 4 þú est við víg varastr, ok skjarrastr við skot.“
 “Of steed and arm-bighs both wilt thou always be lacking both, O Bray!
 Of the Eese and Elves which are here within,
 thou art with war wariest and shiest with shot.”

[Bragi] kvað: 14 „Veit’k, ef fyr útan véra’k, · svá sem fyr innan em’k, 2 Égis holl of kominn, höfuð þitt · béra’k i hendi mér;
 4 lit’k þér þat fyr lygi.“
 “I know if outside I were as inside I am come into Eage’s hall,⁷⁴ that head on thee would I bear in my hands;
 this I see for thy lie.”

4 lit’k þér þat fyr lygi | ‘litt ec þer þat fyr lygi’ R. A variety of emendations have been proposed for this line. Simplest would be litt es þér þat fyr lygi ‘that is little [punishment] for thee for lying’. Based on the similarity of é (= tt) and c Finnur Jónsson (1932) gives lykak þér þat fyr lygi ‘so I would bring to thee for thy lie’.

⁷⁴ As said in P1, the rule of grith (a truce of non-violence, even between enemies; see Index) applied inside the hall. Bray and the other gods are thus bound not to injure Lock.

[Loki] kvað: 15 „Snjallr est i sessi, · skal-at-tu svá gæra, 2 Bragi þekk-skrautuðr;
 vega þú gakk · ef vræiðr séir;
 4 hyggsk vétr hvatr fyrir.“
 “Valiant art thou in the seat; thou shalt not do so,
 O Bray the bench-adorned!
 Go to fight if thou art wroth;
 the bold thinks not ahead.⁷⁵”

⁷⁵ Lock attacks Bray’s excuse; a true brave would fight regardless of the grith.

[Íðunn] kvað: 16 „Bið ek, Bragi, · barna sífjar duga
 2 ok allra ösk-maga, at þú Loka · kveðir-a lasta-stöfum

4 Égis hǫllu i:“

“I bid thee, Bray, to respect the bond of children and all beloved sons, that thou not greet Lock with words of vice
in Eagre’s hall.”

[Loki] kvað: 17 „Þegi þú, Iðunn, · þik kveð’k allra kvinna
2 ver-gjarnasta vesa
 síðst þú arma þína · lagðir ítr-þvegna
4 umb þinn bróður-bana.“

“Shut thou up, Idun! Thee I call of all women the most man-eager, since thy brightly washed arms thou didst cast about thy brother’s bane.”

[Iðunn] kvað: 18 „Loka ek kveð’k-a · lasta-stofum
2 Égis hǫllu i;
 Braga ek kyrrir · bjór-reifan,
4 vil’k-at at it vręðir vegisk.“

“I greet not Lock with words of vice,
in Eagre’s hall.
Bray I calm, made rowdy from beer—
I wish not that ye two wroth ones should fight.”

[Gefun] kvað: 19 „Hví it ęsir tvęir · skuluð inni hér
2 sár-yrðum sakask?
 Lopts-ki þat vęit · at hann leikinn es
4 ok hann fјorg-vall fría.”

“Why shall ye two Eese here within,
with wound-words each other blame?
Loft (= Lock) knows not that he is being played,
and him TODO.”

[Loki] kvað: 20 „Þegi þú, Gefun, · þess mun’k nú geta
2 es þik glapði at gęði:
 svęinn inn hvíti · es þér sigli gaf
4 ok þú lagðir lęr yfir.“

“Shut thou up, Giben! Of him will I now speak, who seduced thy senses:

the white swain who gave thee a necklace,
and thou cast o'er him thy leg!"

[Óðinn kvað] þat: 21 „Örr est, Loki, · ok ør-viti,
2 es þú fēr þér Gefjun at grēmi
því-at aldar ør-løg · hygg at ǫll of viti
4 jafn-gørla sem ek.“

“Mad art thou, Lock, and out of wits,
as thou earnest Giben’s anger against thee,
for all the orlays of men I think she knows,
just as clearly as I.”

1 Örr ... ok ør-viti ‘Mad ... and out of wits’ | Formulaic, occurs at two other places (TODO). Cf. also st. 47 below.

[Loki] kvað: 22 „Þegi þú, Óðinn, · þú kunnir aldri-gi
2 deila víg með verum;
opt þú gaft · þeim’s gefa skyldir-a,
4 inum slévvurum, sigr.“ “Shut thou up, Weden! Thou couldst never deal out war amidst men—oft hast thou given them thou shouldst not have given,
the slower men, victory.”

[Óðinn] kvað: 23 „Veitst ef ek gaf · þeim’s gefa né skylda,
2 inum slévvurum, sigr,
átta vetr · vast fyr jörð neðan 4 kýr mólkandi ok kona ok hefir þar bǫrn of borit
6 ok hugða’k þat args aðal.“
“Thou knowest, that if I have given them I should not have given,
the slower men, victory;
for eight winters wast thou beneath the earth
a milch cow and a woman, and thou hast there borne children,
and I’ve judged that a queer’s nature.”

4 kýr mólkandi ‘a milch cow’ | May also be read as “milking cows”, the nom. sg. kýr being identical to the nom./acc. pl. kýr, and mólka meaning both ‘to milk’ and ‘to give milk’. “Milch cow” is preferable for two reasons, viz. (i) that the phrase is followed by ok kona ‘and a woman’ rather than sem kona ‘as a woman’ or similar, and (ii) that it agrees with another instance where Lock is given birth in the form of a female animal (cows, of course, only giving milk after calving), namely the episode of the building of the wall around Osyard as told in Gylf 42.

[Loki] kvað: 24 „En þik síga kóðu · Sáms-eyju i
 2 ok drapt á vett sem vqlur, vitka líki · fórt ver-þjóð yfir,
 4 ok hugða'k þat args aðal.“
 “But thou, they said, didst sink down in Samsey, and beatest the drum like do wallows.
 In a warlock's likeness thou didst journey through mankind,
 and I've judged that a queer's nature.”

[Frigg kvað:] 25 „Ør-lögum ykkrum · skylið aldri-gi
 2 seǵja seǵgjum frá,
 hvat it ęsir tveir · drýgðuð i ár-daga;
 4 firrisk ę forn rok firar.“
 “Of your orlays should ye two never speak to the youths.
 Whatever ye two Eese did in days of yore, let ancient fates be ever shunned by folk.”

[Loki kvað:] 26 „Þegi þú, Frigg, · þú est Fjörgyns mér
 2 ok hefir ę ver-gjorn vesit, es þá Vea ok Vilja · létst þér, Viðris kvæn,
 4 báða i baðm of tękit.“
 “Shut thou up, Frie! Thou art Firgyn's maiden, and has always been man-eager:
 as [when] Wigh and Will, thou hadst, O Withrer's wife, both in thy bosom taken.”

[Frigg kvað:] 27 „Veitst ef inni ętta'k · Ęgis hollum i
 2 Baldri líkan bur
 út né kvęmir · frá asa sonum
 4 ok vęri þa at þér vręiðum vegit.“ “Thou knowest, if within I owned, in Eagre's halls, a boy alike to Balder:
 out came thou not from the sons of the Eese,
 and thou wouldst be fought with wrath.”

[Loki kvað:] 28 „Enn vill þú, Frigg, · at ek fleiri telja
 2 muna meın-stafi:
 ek því réð · es þú riða sér-at 4 síðan Baldr at solum.“

“Still wilt thou, Frie, that I count more of my harmful deeds:
I did plan that thou shouldst not see Balder riding to the halls henceforth.”

[Fręyja kvað:] 29 „Örr est, Loki, · es þú yðra tēlr
2 ljóta leið-stafi;
ør-lög Frigg · hygg at ǫll viti
4 þótt hōn sjölf-gi sęgi.“

“Mad art thou, Lock, when thou dost count your ugly, loathsome deeds:
all orlays I think that Frie might know,
though she tell them not herself.”

[Loki kvað:] 30 „Þęgi þú, Fręyja, · þik kann’k full-gørva;
2 es-a þér vamma vant:
ása ok alfa, · es hér inni eru,
4 hvęrr hęfir þinn hór vesit.“

“Shut thou up, Frow! I know thee full well—thou art not free of blemishes:
of the Eese and Elves which are here within has each one been thy lover!”

2 vamma vant ‘free of blemishes’ | Formulaic, cf. Háv 22/4: bann es-a vamma vanr ‘he is not free of blemishes’.

[Fręyja kvað:] 31 „Fló’s þér tunga, · hygg at þér fręmr myni
2 ò-gótt of gala;
vręiðir ’ru þér ęsir · ok ǫsynjur,
4 hryggr munt hęim fara.“

“False is thy tongue, I ween that it henceforth will sing evil [into being] for thee.
Wroth with thee are the Eese and Ossens:
grieved wilt thou journey home.”

1–2 Fló ... gala ‘False ... thee’ | The language is again strikingly similar to Háv, particularly 29/3–4 and 116/3–4.

4 hryggr munt hęim fara ‘grieved wilt thou journey home’ | Frow here shows her ability to foresee the future. Lock will come to regret his insults.

Loki: 32 „Þegi þú, Freyja, · þú est for-déða 2 ok meini blandin mjök, síðst-u at bróðr þínum · siðu blíð regin
 4 ok myndir þá, Freyja, frata.“ “Shut thou up, Frow! Thou art an evil-working woman, and much mixed with harm,
 since against thy brother the blithe Reins bewitched thee,
 and thou wouldst then, O Frow, fart.”

Njörðr: 33 „Þat ’s vá-lítit · þótt sér varðir vers fái, 2 hós eða hvárs;
 hitt ’s undr, es áss ragr · es hér inn of kominn
 4 ok hefir sá börn of borit.“
 “It is little woe that women should get themselves a man, a lover or whomever else.
 This is a wonder, that a queer os is come here within,
 and that man has born children!”

Loki: 34 „Þegi þú, Njörðr, · þú vast austr heðan
 2 gísl of sendr at goðum;
 Hymis meyjar · hofðu þik at hland-trogi
 4 ok þér i munn migu.“ “Shut thou up, Nearth! Thou wast east hence sent as hostage for the Gods.
 Hymer’s maidens had thee for a lant-trough,
 and pissed thee in the mouth!”

Njörðr: 35 „Sú esumk líkn · es vas’k langt heðan
 2 gísl of sendr at goðum:
 þá ek mög gat · þann’s mann-gi fiar,
 4 ok þikkir sá ása jaðarr.“
 “This is my relief, as I was far-away hence sent as hostage for the Gods,
 when I begot the lad whom no man hates and he seems the peak of the Eese.”

3 mög ... þann’s mann-gi fiar ‘the lad whom no man hates’ | Free.

Loki: 36 „Hétt-u nú, Njörðr, · haf á hófi þik;

2 mun'k-a því lęyna lęngr:
við systur þinni · gatst slíkan mög,
4 ok es-a þó önu verr.“
“Stop now, Nearth; restrain thyself!
I will no longer hide it:
by thy sister didst thou beget such a lad,
and there can be expected nothing worse.”

Týr: 37 „Fręyr 's bętstr · allra ball-riða 2 ása gęrðum i;
 męy né grótir · né manns konu,
4 ok lęysir ór hęptum hvern.“ “Free is the best of all bold riders in the yards of the Eese;
he makes no maiden cry, nor any man's woman,
and loosens anyone from his bonds!”

Loki: 38 „Þęgi þú, Týr, · þú kunnir aldri-gi 2 bera tilt með tvęim;
 handar ennar hógri · mun'k hinnar geta
4 es þér slęit Fęnrir frá.“ “Shut thou up, Tew! Thou couldst never settle strife among two;
of the right hand I next will speak,
which from thee Fenrer tore.”

2 bera tilt með tvęim ‘settle strife among two’ | Uncertain. TODO.

Týr: 39 „Handar em'k vanr · en þú hróðrs vitnis;
2 bøl es bęggja þráa;
 ulf-gi hęfir ok vel · es i bęndum skal
4 bíða ragna røkrs.“
“A hand am I lacking, but thou the Famous Wolf;
both yearnings are a bale!
Nor does the Wolf have it well, who in bonds shall await the Twilight of the Reins.”

Loki: 40 „Þęgi þú, Týr, · þat varð þinni konu
2 at hon átti mög við mér!
 Qln né penning · hafðir þess aldri-gi

4 van-réttis, vę-sall.“

“Shut thou up, Tew! It happened to thy woman, that she had a lad by me!
Neither ell nor penny hadst thou ever for that injustice, O wretch!”

3 Qln ‘ell’ | Wool, measured in ells, was often used for barter in Iceland and Norway.

Freyr: 41 „Ulf sé’k liggja · áar ósi fyr 2 unds rjúfask ręgin;
því munt nęst, · nema nú þęgir,
4 bundinn, bǫlva smiðr!“

“The Wolf I see lying before a river-mouth, until the Reins are ripped;
therefore wilt thou next—unless thou now shut up—
be bound, O smith of bales!”

Loki: 42 „Gulli kępta · létst Gymis dóttur 2 ok sęldir þitt svá sverð, en es Múspells synir · ríða Myrk-við yfir
4 vęitst-a þá, vę-sall, hvé vęgr!“

“Bought with gold thou hadst Gymer’s daughter [= Gird], and didst so sell thy sword,
but when Muspell’s sons ride over Mirkwood knowest thou not, O wretch, how to fight!”

Byggvir: 43 „Vęitst ef ęðli ętta’k · sem Ingunar-Freyr, 2 ok svá sęl-ligt setr:
męrgi smęra · mǫlða’k þá męin-króku
4 ok lęmða alla i liðu.“

“Thou knowest, if I had a pedigree like Ingwin-Free, and such blessed pasture—smaller than bone meal would I mill this harm-crow, and beat all his limbs lame!”

Loki: 44 „Hvat ’s þat it litla · es þat lęggra sé’k
2 ok snap-víst snapir?
At ęyrum Freys · munt ęt vesa
4 ok und kvęrnum klaka.“

“What is this little thing I see crawling and snap-wisely snapping?
At the ears of Free wilt thou ever be,
and chirping under mills!”

- [Byggvir kvað:] 45 „Byggvir ek hēiti, · en mik bráðan kveða 2 goð ǫll ok gumar;
því em’k hér hróðugr · at drekka Hropts megir
4 allir ǫl saman.“
“Bewer I am called, and hurried do call me
all the Gods and men;
therefore I am here honoured that Roft’s lads [the ESE] drink ale all together.”

2 goð ... ok gumar ‘Gods and men’ | This pairing also occurs in Lok 55/4 and Reg 19.

- [Loki kvað:] 46 „Þegi þú, Byggvir, · þú kunnir aldri-gi 2 deila með mǫnnum mat;
ok þik i flets strá · finna né mǫttu
4 þá’s vǫgu verar.“ “Shut thou up, Bewer! Thou couldst never deal out food amidst men,
and in the bench-straw they could not find thee,
whenever men did fight.”

- [Heimdallr kvað:] 47 „Qlr est, Loki · svá’t es ǫr-viti, 2 hví né letsk-a þú, Loki?
því-at of-drykkja · veldr alda hveim
4 es sína mēlgi né man-at.“ “Drunk art thou, Lock, so that thou art out of wits;
why holdest thou not back, Lock?
For over-drinking makes every man
no more recall his speech.”

- [Loki kvað:] 48 „Þegi þú, Heimdallr, · þér vas i ár-daga 2 it ljóta líf of lagit;
ǫrgu baki · munt é vesa
4 ok vaka vǫrðr goða.“
“Shut thou up, Homedal! For thee in days of yore thy ugly life was laid [down].

With a stiff back wilt thou ever be and waking, O Watchman of the Gods.”

2. líf of lagit ‘life laid [down]’ | His course of life was decreed (by the Norns). Formulaic; see TODO.

4. vörðr goða ‘Watchman of the Gods’ | Formulaic epithet of Homedal, who had to guard the rainbow bridge of the Gods against their enemies. See note to Grm 13.

[Skaði kvað:] 49 „Létt ’s þér, Loki; · mun-at-tu lēngi svá 2 lēka lausum hala, því at þik à hjörvi skulu · ins hrīm-kalda magar
4 gornum binda goð.“
“Thou takest it lightly, Lock—thou wilt not so for long play with a loose tail, for on a sword with thy rime-cold lad’s guts the Gods shall bind thee.”

1 [Skaði kvað:] ‘[Shede quoth:]’ | The speaker of sts. 49 and 51 is not indicated anywhere, but is almost certainly Shede for both. Lock’s mention of Thedse’s slaying in 50 (see Note) is only effective if it relates personally to whomever he is attacking, and this is only the case for Shede. This also explains her answer in 51. Further, since Shede is explicitly mentioned in P1, she should be expected to have a speaking role in the poem.

3–4 því at þik à hjörvi skulu · ins hrīm-kalda magar / gornum binda goð. ‘for on a sword with thy rime-cold lad’s / guts the Gods shall bind thee’ | See From Lock below.

[Loki kvað:] 50 „Veitst ef mik à hjörvi skulu · ins hrīm-kalda magar
2 gornum binda goð,
fyrstr ok øfstr · vas’k at fjör-lagi
4 þar’s vér à Þjatsa þrifum.“
“Thou knowest, if on a sword with my rime-cold lad’s guts the Gods shall bind me, first and highest was I in life-taking where we laid hands on Thedse.”

4 þar’s vér à Þjatsa þrifum ‘where we laid hands on Thedse’ | A reference to a longwinded myth told most fully in Skm 2–4 and Haustl 2–13. After Thedse abducted Idun the Eese made Lock recover her, which he set out to do by flying to Thedse’s farm in the shape of a hawk. When he found Idun he turned her into a nut, took her in his claws, and turned back to Osyard. Thedse quickly spotted him, set chase in the form of an eagle, and was soon closing the distance. The Eese within Osyard saw this and hurriedly threw wood shavings on the ground; just as Lock had passed above them they set fire to the shavings; the fire rose and burned the wings of Thedse, who fell down to the ground and was soon killed. After this, Shede, Thedse’s daughter, came to Osyard to avenge her father, but the gods convinced her to a settlement, after which she married Nearth and became one of them. It is most sensible that Lock brings this myth up in order to insult Shede.

2 þá's ér á Þjatsa þrifuð, frá mīnum véum · ok vǫngum skulu
4 þér ę kǫld rǫð koma.“ “Thou knowest, if first and highest thou wast in life-taking where ye laid hands on Thedse:
from my wighs and wongs shall for thee ever cold counsels come.”

[Loki kvað:] 52 „Léttari i mǫlum · vast við Laufeyjar son
2 þá's létsk mér á bęð þinn boðit;
getit verðr oss slíks · ef vér gǫrva skulum
4 telja vǫmmin vǫr.“
“Lighter in speech wast thou with Leafie's son [= Lock = me] when thou hadst me bid to thy bed;
such will be said of us, if we clearly shall recount our blemishes.

P5 Þá gekk Sif fram ok byrlaði Loka í hrím-kalki mjǫð ok mēlti:
Then Sib walked forth and poured for Lock mead in a rime-chalice, and spoke:

53 „Hęill ves þú nú, Loki, · ok tak við hrím-kalki
2 fullum forns mjaðar, hęldr þú hana ęina · látir með ása sonum
4 vamma-lausa vesa.“
“Hale be thou now, O Lock, and receive this rime-chalice, full of ancient mead!
Rather oughtst thou to let me alone among the sons of the Eese remain blemish-less.”

1–2 Hęill ... mjaðar ‘Hale ... mead’ | Formulaic; repeated identically in Skm 37/1–2.

P6 Hann tók við horni ok drakk af:
He received the horn and drank from it:

54 „Ęin þú vérir · ef þú svá vérir,
2 vǫr ok grǫm at veri;
ęinn ek vęit, · svá't ek vita þikkjumk,
4 hór ok af Hlórriða, ok vas þat sá inn lē-vísi Loki.“

“Alone wouldst thou be, if thou so wert wary and wroth against man.
I know one—whom I think me to know—adulterer behind even Loride’s back, and that was the guile-wise Lock!”

5 lē-vísi Loki ‘guile-wise Lock’ | Formulaic, also occurring in Hym 37. Cf. also Vsp 35 where Lock is called lē-gjarn ‘guile-eager’ and note to Vsp 17 where Lothar (possibly to be identified with Lock) gives men lō, which may be an accusative form of lē.

[Beyla kvað:] 55 „Fjöll öll skjalfa, · hygg á fōr vesa
2 heiman Hlórriða;
hann rēðr ró · þeim’s rógir hér
4 goð öll ok guma!“

“The fells all quake—I think on the journey from home Loride to be.
He brings to rest him who here maligns
all the Gods and men!”

1 Fjöll öll skjalfa ‘The fells all quake’ | The movement of gods, especially Thunder, is often signalled by cosmic disturbance. See note to Þrk 21.

[Loki kvað:] 56 „Þegi þú, Beyla, · þú est Byggvis kvæn
2 ok mēini blandin mjök;
ð-kynja’n mēira · kom-a með ása sonum;
4 öll est, dēigja, dritin.“

“Shut thou up, Beal! Thou art Bewer’s wife,
and much mixed with harm.
A greater disgrace came not among the sons of the Eese;
thou art all, dough-girl, dungy!”

4 öll est, dēigja, dritin ‘thou art all, dough-girl, dungy’ | dēigja ‘dough-girl’ is a derivative of dēigr ‘dough’ and refers to a young girl at a farm who kneads dough, milks the cows and such. The insult here is that she is still dirtied with the dung of milch cows.

P7 Þá kom Þórr at ok kvað:
Then Thunder arrived and quoth:

57 „Þegi þú, rōg vēttr, · þér skal munn þrúð-hamarr,
2 Mjöllnir, mál fyr-nema!
Hērða klett · drep’k þér halsi af,

- 4 ok verðr þá þínu fǫrvi of farit.“
 “Shut thou up, queer wight! Thee shall my thrith-hammer
 Millner, deprive of speech!
 The shoulder-rock [HEAD] I strike off thy neck, and then is thy life destroyed!”

¹ þrúð-hamarr ‘thrith-hammer’ | “Strength-hammer”, þrúðr ‘thrith’ being an obsolete word for strength used only in connection with Thunder or ettins. Þrúðr ‘Thrith’ is also the name of Thunder’s daughter.

- [Loki kvað:] 58 „Jarðar burr · es hér nú inn kominn;
 2 hví þrasir þú svá, Þörr?
 En þá þorir ekki · es skalt við ulf’inn vega
 4 ok svelgr hann allan Sig-föður.“
 “Earth’s Son is here now come inside, why thrashest thou so, Thunder?
 But thou wilt nowise dare when thou shalt fight the Wolf and he swallows Syefather (= Weden) whole.”

³⁻⁴ es skalt við ulfenn vega / ok svelgr hann allan Sig-föður ‘when thou shalt fight the Wolf / and he swallows Syefather (= Weden) whole.’ | A reference to the Rakes of the Reins, where Weden is slain by the Wolf and then avenged by his son Wider. Thunder, meanwhile, dies while slaying the Wyrn; see Vsp 51–53, Vafþ 53.

- [Þörr kvað:] 59 „Þegi þú, röð vetttr, · þér skal minn þrúð-hamarr,
 2 Mjöllnir, mál fyr-nema!
 Upp ek þér verp · ok á austr-vega
 4 síðan þik mann-gi sér.“
 “Shut thou up, queer wight! Thee shall my thrith-hammer
 Millner, deprive of speech!
 Up I throw thee, and onto the eastern ways;
 thereafter no man may see thee!”

- [Loki kvað:] 60 „Austr-förum þínum · skalt aldri-gi
 2 segja seggjum frá
 síðst í hanska þumlungi · hnúkðir þú, Eín-hęri, 4 ok þöttisk-a þá Þörr vesa!“
 “From thy eastern journeys shalt thou never speak to the youths,
 since in the thumb of a glove thou crawleddest, Oneharrier, and didst not seem to be Thunder then!”

3 í hanska þumlungi · hnúkðir þú ‘in the thumb of a glove thou didst crawl’ | This stanza and 62 below refer to Thunder’s encounter with the ettin Shrimer, which is retold in Gylf 45. A related narrative is mentioned in Hárþ TODO, although the ettin there is called Feller.

[Þórr kvað:] 61 „Þegi þú, röð véttr, · þér skal minn þrúð-hamarr,
 2 Mjöllnir, mál fyr-nema!
 hendi inni hógri · drep’k þik Hrunnis bana,
 4 svát þér brotnar beina hvat.“
 “Shut thou up, queer wight! Thee shall my thrith-hammer
 Millner, deprive of speech!
 With the right hand I strike thee with Rungner’s bane [= Millner], so that every bone in thee breaks.”

[Loki kvað:] 62 „Lifa étla’k mér · langan aldr
 2 þótt hótir hamri mér;
 skarpar álar · þóttu þér Skrymis vesa 4 ok máttir-a þá neṣti náa ok svaltsk þá hungri heill.“ “To live a long life I intend for myself, though thou mightst threaten me with the hammer.
 Sharp seemed Shrimer’s straps to thee,
 and then couldst thou not reach thy provisions,
 and then wast thou dying, healthy, of hunger.”

[Þórr kvað:] 63 „Þegi þú, röð véttr, · þér skal minn þrúð-hamarr,
 2 Mjöllnir, mál fyr-nema!
 Hrunnis bani · mun þér í hæl koma
 4 fyr Ná-grindr neðan.“
 “Shut thou up, queer wight! Thee shall my thrith-hammer
 Millner, deprive of speech!
 Rungner’s bane will take thee to hell,
 down beneath Neegrind!”

[Loki kvað:] 64 „Kvað’k fyr ȝsum, · kvað’k fyr ása sonum,
 2 þat’s mik hvatti hugr,
 en fyr þér ȝinum · mun’k út ganga
 4 því-at ek væt at þú vegr.
 “I spoke before the Eese; I spoke before the sons of the Eese whatever my heart did goad me, but for thee alone will I walk out,

for I know that thou strikest.

65 Ql gørðir þú, Égir, · en þú aldri munt
 2 síðan sumbl of gøra;
 eiga þin qll, · es hér inni es, 4 leiði yfir logi
 ok brenni þér á baki.“

Ale hast thou made, Eagre, but thou wilt never henceforth make a simble!
 All thy estate which is here within—let flame play over it, and burn thee in the back!”

From Lock (Frá Loka)

The binding of Lock is known from two other places. Closest at hand is Vsp 34, but it offers no full narrative.

Gylf 50 has a longer account, somewhat different from the present prose. There the Eese captured Lock's two sons, Wonnell and “Nare or Narve”. They turned Wonnell into a wolf (vargr, which also means ‘outlaw’) and had him tear his brother Narve apart. Narve's intestines were then taken and used to bind Lock on top of three pointed stones, with one digging into his shoulder-blades, the other digging into his loins, and the third digging into his houghs. At last the intestines turned into iron and Lock was bound.

Since the author of Gylf knew Vsp, it is possible that he combined a text similar to From Lock with Vsp H1, interpreting Vála víg-bond as ‘Wonnell's war-bonds’. Wonnell is otherwise only known as the son of Weden, and there is no reason as to why he could not have bound Lock.

P8 En eptir þetta falst Loki í Fránangrs-forsi í lax líki. Þar tóku észir 2 hann. Hann var bundinn með þormum sonar Nara; en Narfi, sonr hans, varð at vargi. Skaði tók eitr-orm ok festi upp yfir 4 and-lit Loka; draup þar ór eitr. Sigyn, kona Loka, sat þar ok helt munn-laug undir eitrit. En er munn-laugin var full bar hon 6 út eitrit, en meðan draup eitrit á Loka. Þá kipttist hann svá hart við, at þaðan af skalf jörð qll; þat eru nú kallaðir land-skjálftar.

And after this Lock hid himself in the Freenangersforce in the form of a salmon. There the Eese took him. He was bound with the intestines of his son Nare, but his son Narve was made a wolf/outlaw. Shede took a venomous serpent and fastened it up above Lock's face; from it ran venom. Syein, Lock's wife, sat there and held a basin under the venom. And when the basin was full she carried out the venom, but meanwhile the venom ran onto Lock. Then he struggled so hard that thereof all the earth quaked; that is now called earth-quakes.

Stanza from Gylf

In Gylf 20 the following stanza is cited as proof of Frie's foresight regarding the orlays of men. It is introduced by the words svá sem hér er sagt, at Óðinn mēlti sjalfr við þann ás, er Loki heitir 'just as it is said here, that Weden himself spoke to that Os who is called Lock'.

The text looks like an amalgamation of several Lok stanzas (which is why it has been placed here, rather than among the Fragments From Snorre's Edda); l. 1 corresponds to st. 21/1 (spoken by Weden), l. 2 to st. 47/2 (spoken by Homedal), and ll. 3–4 to st. 29/3–4 (spoken by Frow). It is possible that it derives from an alternate version of Lok, but it could also have been formed due to Snorre's misremembering the rest of the stanza after the first line, which is also attributed to Weden in st. 21.

2 „Órr est, Loki, · ok ør-viti, hví né lętsk-a þú, Loki?
ø-r-løg Frigg · hygg at ǫll viti
4 þótt hōn sjølf-gi sęgi.“

“Mad art thou, Lock, and out of wits, why holdest thou not back, O Lock?
All orlays I think that Frie might know,
though she tell them not herself.”

Lay of Thrim

(Þrymskviða)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C9th (o.741)

Meter: Ancient-words-law

Introduction

The Lay of Thrim (Þrk) is only found in R, where it follows Lok and precedes Vkv. It has oft been considered the oldest poem in the R collection, and Sapp's model agrees with that judgment.

Comedic stories involving Thunder and his ettin-bashing seem to have been very popular in Wiking age Norway and Iceland, and the god himself is not infrequently the butt of the joke in them. Apart from Þrk there are also the Eddic poems Hym and Hárb, and the Scaldic poems Haustl and Þdr. Fragments of a lost Eddic poem about Thunder's fight with the ettin Garfrith and his daughters also survive in Gylf; see Eddic fragments below.

[R 17r/13]

Wrath was then Wing-Thunder when he woke,
and of his hammer was bereaved.
His beard he took to rustle, his locks he took to rip;
the son of Earth resolved to grope about.

1 Vreiðr 'Wrath' | Reiðr R

1 Vrēiðr ‘Wroth’ | Initial v- is restored for the sake of alliteration but is not strictly metrically necessary; cf. st. 13. In any case Þrk—generally considered to be the oldest Eddic poem—most almost certainly predates the West Norse sound change vr- > r-.

1 Ving-Þórr ‘Wing-Thunder’ | A rare poetic synonym for Thunder; it only elsewhere occurs in Alv 6. See Index for etymology.

3 skęgg ... dýja ‘beard ... pull’ | Apparently formulaic. Cf. Brot TODO.

- 2 Ok hann þat orða · alls fyrst of kvað: [R 17r/15]
 2 „Hęyr-ðu nú, Loki, · hvat ek nú męli es ęgi vęit · jarðar hver-gi
 4 né upp-himins: · ęss es stolinn hamri!“

And he this word first of all did say:

“Hear thou now, Lock, what I now speak, which no man knows anywhere on earth

nor in up-heaven: the os [= Thunder = I] is robbed of His hammer!”

1 Ok hann þat orða · alls fyrst of kvað ‘And he this word first of all did say’ | The whole line is formulaic, occurring in five other places: sts. 3, 9 and 12 of the present poem; st. 3 of Oddrgr; st. 5 of Brot.

3–4 jarðar ... upp-himins ‘earth ... up-heaven’ | The whole cosmos. Formulaic, see Index: Earth and Up-heaven.

- 3 Gingu þęir fagra · Freyju tůna [R 17r/17]
 2 ok hann þat orða · alls fyrst of kvað:
 „Munt-u męr, Freyja, · fjaðr-hams léa
 4 ef ek mőnn hamar · mętta’k hitta?“

Went they to the fair yards of Frow,

and he this word first of all did say:

“Wilt thou me, O Frow, the feather-hame lend,

if I my hammer might find?”

2 hann ‘he’ | The speaker is Thunder, since he speaks about “my hammer”.

3 fjaðr-hams ‘feather-hame’ | A “feather-skin” by which the wearer can transform or fly like a bird.

- Freyja kvað: 4 „Þó mynda’k gefa þęr · þótt ór gulli vęri [R 17r/19]
 2 ok þó sęlja · at vęri ór silfri.“

“Yet would I give it to thee though it were golden,

and yet hand it to thee if it were silvern.”

2 sęlja ‘hand’ | sęlja, cognate of English sell, here has its older sense of ‘hand over’, cf. Gotish saljan ‘opferri; θύειν’ (Streitberg, 1910, p. 116).

- 5 Fló þá Loki, · fjaðr-hamr dunði,
 2 unds fyr útan kom · ása garða ok fyr innan kom · jötna hęima.

[R 17r/20]

Flew then Lock—the feather-hame rustled—
 until he came outside the Yards of the Eese, and he came inside the Homes of the Ettins.

1 Loki ‘Lock’ | Though Thunder is the one asking for the feather-hame (“if I my hammer might find”), Lock is the one that takes off flying with it.

- 6 Þrymr sat á haugi, · þursa dróttinn,
 2 greyjum sínum · gull-bönd snøri ok mörum sínum · mōn jafnaði.

[R 17r/22]

Thrim sat on the mound, the lord of Thurses:
 on his greyhounds the golden leashes he twirled, and on his steeds the manes he cut even.

1 sat á haugi ‘sat on the mound’ | Meditating on mounds was a common pastime for the ancients. See Vsp 41 for other attestations.

1 þursa dróttinn ‘lord of Thurses’ | This formulaic expression also occurs in several Runic charms against such thursen lords (see below under Galders); an example of the close connection between mythology and ritual.

2–3 greyjum sínum ... mörum sínum ‘his greyhounds ... his steeds’ | Thrim sits surrounded by dogs and horses. The scene is reminiscent of the ancient “master of animals” motif, especially as attested on panel A of the Gundestrup cauldron.

- [Þrymr kvað:] 7 „Hvat ’s með ǫsum? · Hvat ’s með ǫlfum?
 2 Hví est ęinn kominn · i jötun-ęęima?“
 [Loki kvað:] „Illt ’s með ǫsum, · illt ’s með ǫlfum!
 4 Hęfir þú Hlórriða · hamar of folginn?“

[R 17r/23]

“What’s with the Eese? What’s with the Elves?
 Why art thou alone come into the Ettin-homes?”— “’Tis ill with the Eese! ’Tis ill with the Elves!
 Hast thou the hammer of Lorde (= Thunder) hid?”

3 illt ’s með ǫlfum | Required by the meter; om. R

1 Hvat ’s með ǫsum? · Hvat ’s með ǫlfum? ‘What is with the Eese? What is with the Elves?’ | Formulaic, the same line occurs in Vsp 46/1.

- [Þrymr kvað:] 8 „Ek hęfi Hlórriða · hamar of folginn 2 áttarǫstum · fyr jörð neðan;
 hann ęngi maðr · aþr of hęimtir

[R 17r/25]

4 nema føri mér · Freyju at kvæn.“

“I have the hammer of Loride hid eight rests beneath the earth.
It no man might fetch back, unless he bring me Frow for a wife.”

2 áttu røstum ‘eight rests’ | Eight leagues; a “rest” being an old distance measurement. See Index.

9 Fló þá Loki, · fjaðr-hamr dunði,
2 unds fyr útan kom · jotna hejma ok fyr innan kom · ása garða;

ok hann þat orða · alls fyrst of kvað:

[R 17r/27]

Flew then Lock—the feather-hame rustled—
until he came outside the Homes of the Ettins and he came inside the Yards of the Eese.
He met Thunder in the middle yards,
and he [= Thunder] this word first of all did say:

5 hann þat | emend.; þat hann R, with elsewhere unprecedented word order. Cf. note to st. 2.

10 „Hefir þú ørendi · sem erfiði?
2 Seg-ðu á lopti · long tíðendi!
Opt sitjanda · sögur of fallask,
4 ok liggjandi · lygi of þellir.“

[R 17r/29]

“Hast thou an errand of hardship?
Tell thou the long tidings aloft!
Oft the sitting man’s stories fail each other and the lying down blows up his lie.”⁷⁶

1 Hefir þú ørendi · sem erfiði? ‘Hast thou an errand of hardship?’ | Thunder asks Lock whether he is the bearer of ill tidings. The pair ørendi ‘errand’ ... erfiði ‘trouble, hardship’ is formulaic and occurs in X other (TODO!!) places, including HHf 5.

⁷⁶ Proverbial. If one sits or lies (ON liggja ‘lie down’ and ljúga ‘lie, speak falsely’ are entirely different verbs; it is rather unfortunate that they sound the same in English) and mulls over bad news, details will be left out, excuses thought up. It is best that Lock immediately tell Thunder what he has learned.

[Loki kvað:] 11 „Hefi’k ørendi, · erfiði ok:
2 Þrymr hefir þinn hamar, · þursa dróttinn;
hann ergi maðr · aptr of hejmtir

[R 17r/31]

4 nema hönnum föri · Freyju at kvæn.“

“I have an errand, hardship also:
Thrim has thy hammer, the lord of Thurses.
It no man will fetch back,
unless he bring him Frow for a wife.”

12 Ganga þeir fagra · Freyju at hitta

[R 17r/33]

„Bitt-u þik, Freyja, · brúðar líni!

4 Vit skulum aka tvau · i jötun-hęima.“

Go they the fair Frow to find,
and he this word first of all did say:
“Bind thyself, Frow, with a bride’s linen!
We two shall drive into the Ettin-homes.”

2 hann ‘he’ | The speaker is either Thunder or Lock.

3 brúðar líni! ‘bride’s linen’ | i.e. bridal cloth.

13 Vreið varð þá Freyja · ok fnasaði,

[R 17v/1]

4 „Mik vęitst verða · ver-gjarnasta

ef ek ek með þér · i jötun-hęima.“

Wroth became Frow then, and snorted;
the whole hall of the Eese shook beneath;
down crashed the great Torc of the Brisings—“Thou knowest that I will become the most man-eager, if I drive with thee into the Ettin-homes.”

3 męn Brisinga ‘Torc of the Brisings’ | A legendary jewel owned by Frow.

4 verða · ver-gjarnasta ‘become the most man-eager’ | Presumably Frow is speaking out of self-awareness of her own lustful inclinations, i.e., she will be gripped by uncontrollable lust. It is also possible that she complains about being accused of promiscuity by the other gods, but that is not the literal sense. For Frow’s promiscuity cf. Lok 30, and also st. 26 of that poem where Fric is likewise called ver-gjörn ‘man-eager’.

Soon were the Eese all at the Thing,
and the Ossens all at speech,

and of this counseled the mighty Tews:
How they Lorde's (= Thunder's) hammer would get?

1–3 Şenn ... tívar 'Soon ... Tews' | The exact same three lines also occur Bdr 1/1–3; see Note there.

- 15 Þá kvað þat Hēimdallr, · hvítastr ása, [R 17v/5]

4 hafi hann it mikla · mēn Brísinga!

Then quoth this Homedal, whitest of the Eese;
he foreknew well like the other Wanes:
“Let us bind Thunder then, with a bride's linen;
he may have the great torc of the Brisings.

2 vissi v̥l fram̥ 'he foreknew well' | i.e. saw the future. Compare the derived adjective fram-viss 'forth-wise, prescient.'

- 16 Lótum und h́onum · hrynja lukla [R 17v/6]
2 ok kven-váðir · umb kné falla

Let us by his side set keys to jingle,
and women's garments to fall about the knees,
but on the breast broad stones,
and skillfully let us tip his head.”

1–4 ALL | A unique description of Wiking Age bridal dress. Cf. the description's of dress in Rþ, which is, however, a much younger poem than Þrk. Being the mistress of the household, keys were the mark of a respectable married woman. The “broad stones” on the breast may be tortoise brooches (also mentioned in Vkv 25, 36.) or beads in a large necklace. The “tipping” of the head refers to some sort of bridal hat which would have included a veil (cf. st. 27 below).

- 17 Þá kvað þat Þórr, · þrúðugr óss: [R 17v/8] 2 „Mik munu ęsir · argan kalla ef ek bindask lét · brúðar líní!“

Then quoth this Thunder, the mighty Os: “Me will the Eese call queer if I let me be bound with a bride's linen!”

- 18 Þá kvað þat Loki · Laufęyar sonr: [R 17v/9]
2 „Þęgi þú, Þórr, · þęira orða!

Þegar munu jǫtnar · Ǫs-garð búa
4 nema þú þinn hamar · þér of heimtir.“

Then quoth this Lock, Leafie's son:
“Shut up thou, Thunder, with those words!
Shortly the Ettins will settle Osyard, unless thou thy hammer for thyself dost fetch!”

3-4 Þegar ... heimtir. ‘Shortly ... dost fetch!’ | Guarding Osyard from transgressive and destructive forces was Thunder's task, and the hammer his most important tool. Cf. Hárb TODO, and a couplet by the obscure poet Thurbern Disecold, cited in Skm 11: Þörr hefir Yggs með ǫrum · Ǫsgarð af þrek varðan. ‘Thunder has with the messengers of Ug [GODS] mightily guarded Osyard.’

4 ok kven-váðir · umb kné falla
en á brjósti · bręða stęina
6 ok hag-liga · of hǫfuð typpðu.

[R 17v/11]

They bound Thunder then with a bride's linen, and with the great Torc of the Brisings.
They by his side set keys to jingle,
and women's garments to fall about the knees,
but on the breast broad stones,
and skillfully they tipped his head.

20 Þá kvað þat Loki · Laufeyjar sonr:
2 „Mun'k auk með þér · ambótt vesa, vit skulum aka tvau · i jǫtun-heima.“

[R 17v/13]

Then quoth this Lock, Leafie's son:
“I will also with thee be a handmaid;
we two shall drive into the Ettin-homes.”

3 vit ... tvau ‘we two’ | tvau ‘two’ is here in the neuter, which is used for mixed-sex groups. This is either an error due to mindless copying of st. 11, or a backhanded insult against Thunder by Lock.

21 Sęnn vǫru hafrar · heim of vrekni,
2 skyndir at skǫklum, · skyldu vęl renna;
bjǫrg brotnuðu, · brann jǫrð loga;
4 ók Óðins sonr · i jǫtun-heima.

[R 17v/14]

Soon were the he-goats driven home, hastened onto the cart-poles—they were to run well.

Crags burst, earth burned with flame;
Weden's son [= Thunder] drove to the Ettin-homes.

1 hafrar 'he-goats' | Thunder's chariot was driven by his two goats; cf. the kenning Lord of He-goats (hafrá dróttinn, Hym 20, 31).

3 björg brotnuðu, · brann jörð loga 'Crags burst, earth burned with flame' | Thunder's driving is often heralded by cosmic disturbance. So, his arrival in Lok 55 is signalled by the mountains quaking. The description most similar to the present stanza is found in Thedwolf's Haustl 14–16, where crags (björg) burst asunder and fires rage before him as he rides to fight Rungner. A possibly Indo-European parallel is the Vedic myth of Indra breaking the mountains and releasing the rivers (as described most famously in RV 1.32). Cf. also Bdr 3 where the ground rumbles beneath the riding Weden.

- 22 Þá kvað þat Þrymr, · þursa dróttinn:
2 „Standið upp, jöttnar, · ok stráið bækki!
Nú fœrið mér · Fręyju at kván,
4 Njarðar dóttur · ór Nóa-túnum.

[R 17v/16]

Then quoth this Thrim, the lord of Thurses:
“Stand up, ye ettins, and strew the benches!
Now bring me Frow for a wife,
Nearth's daughter from the Nowetowns!

- 23 Ganga hér at garði · gull-hyrndar kýr,
2 øxn al-svartir, · jötni at gamni,
fjöld á'k meïðma, · fjöld á'k menja;
4 einnar mér Fręyju · á-vant þykkir.“

[R 17v/18]

Here march to the farm golden-horned kine, all-black oxen to the ettin's [my] pleasure.
A multitude I own of treasures, a multitude I own of torcs—only Frow I think me missing.”

2. øxn al-svartir 'all-black oxen' | Formulaic, also occurring in Hym 18. That all-black (i.e. spotlessly black) oxen were most valued is seen by the pairing with “golden-horned”. One may also compare Saxo Grammaticus (2015) 1.8.12, where the hero Hadding has to atone for his slaying of a heavenly being by a sacrifice of dark-coloured victims (furvae bostiae): Siquidem propiciandorum numinum gratia Frø deo rem diuinam furuis hostiis fecit. Quem litationis morem annuo feriarum circuitu repetitum posteris imitandum reliquit. Frøblod Sueones uocant. ‘In order to mollify the divinities he [= Hadding] did indeed make a holy sacrifice of dark-coloured victims to the god Frø. He repeated this mode of propitiation at an annual festival and left it to be imitated by his descendants. The Swedes call it Frøblot.’ This ancient ritual taboo finds parallel even in the Tanakh, where animals dedicated to YHWH were to be without blemish (ויקרא 1:3)

- 24 Vas þar at kveldi · of komit snimma
2 ok fyr jötna · ǫl framm borit.
Einn át oxa, · átta laxa,

[R 17v/20]

- 4 krásir allar, · þér's konur skyldu,
 drakk Sifjar verr · sáld þrjú mjaðar.

There was the evening come early,
and for the ettins ale brought forth.
He [= Thunder] alone ate an ox, eight salmons,
all the dainties meant for the women;
drank Sib's husband three sieves of mead.

3–5 Einn ... mjaðar. 'He alone ... of mead.' | Thunder is renowned for his great appetite; cf. Hym 15, where he eats two of Hymer's oxen. It is curious that the same kenning (Sifjar verr 'Sib's husband') is used in that stanza.

- 25 Þá kvað þat Þrymr, · þursa dróttinn: [R 17v/23]
2 „Hvar sátst-u brúðir · bíta hvassara?
 Sá'k-a brúðir · bíta enn bręðara
4 né enn męira mjǫð · męy of drekka!“

Then quoth this Thrim, the lord of Thurses:
“Where sawest thou brides bite sharper?
I never saw brides bite yet broader;
nor yet more mead a maiden drink!”

- 26 Sat hin al-snotra · ambótt fyrir [R 17v/25]
2 es orð of fann · við jǫtuns máli:
 „Át vętr Freyja · áttu nótum,
4 svá vas hón óð-fús · i jǫtun-þęima.“

Sat the all-clever handmaid [= Lock] in front,
who a word did find against the ettin's speech:
“Frow ate naught for eight nights;
so madly she longed for the Ettin-homes.”

- 27 Laut und līnu, · lýsti at kyssa, [R 17v/27]
2 en hann útan stókk · ęnd-langan sal:
 „Hví eru ǫndótt · augu Freyju?
4 Þykki mér ór · augum brenna!“

He [= Thrim] looked 'neath the linen, lusted to kiss—but flung back out across the length of the hall—“Why are the eyes of Frow blazing?
Methinks it burning from the eyes!”

1 līnu 'linen' | The bridal veil.

4 Þykki mér ór · augum brenna! ‘Methinks it burning from the eyes!’ | The meter of this line is very poor: the first half-line is only three syllables long, and the alliteration falls on ór ‘from’, which has no reason to be stressed. It would be much improved by inserting eldar ‘fires’ between augum ‘eyes’ and brenna ‘burns’, and this expression is actually attested in Gylf 51: Eldar brenna ór augum hans ok nǫsum ‘Fires burn from his eyes and nostrils’.

- 28 Sat hin al-snotra · ambótt fyrir
 2 es orð of fann · við jǫtuns máli:
 „Svaf vétr Freyja · átta nótturn,
 4 svá vas hón óð-fús · i jǫtun-heima.“

[R 17v/29]

Sat the all-clever handmaid in front,
 who a word did find against the ettin’s speech:
 “Frow slept naught for eight nights;
 so madly she longed for the Ettin-homes.”

1 fyrir | add. þf. f R.

- 29 Inn kom hin arma · jǫtna systir,
 2 hin’s brúð-féar · biðja þorði:
 „Lát þér af hǫndum · hringa rauða
 4 ef þú ǫðlask vill · ástir minnar, ástir minnar, · alla hylli!“

[R 17v/30]

In came the wretched sister of the ettins,
 she who for the bride-fee [= Millner] dared ask:
 “Slide off from thy hands the red rings,
 if thou wilt win my affections,
 my affections, all [my] holdness.”⁷⁷

5 ástir minnar, · alla hylli ‘my love; all [my] holdness’ | Probably formulaic. There are no preserved parallels in poetry, but there may be one in Gylf 49 (excerpt, following the death of Balder): En er goðin vitkuðust, þá mælti Frigg ok spurði, hvern sá véri með ásum, er eignast vildi „allar ástir minnar (so TW; ástir hennar ‘her loves’ SU) ok hylli, ok vili hann riða á hel-veg ok freista, ef hann fái fundit Baldr, ok bjóða Helju út-laun, ef þou vill láta fara Baldr heim í Ás-garð.“ ‘But when the gods came back to their wits, then Frigg spoke and asked which one among the Esei would own “all my loves and holdness, and will ride on the Hellway and see if he may find Balder and offer Hell a ransom if she will let Balder come home to Osyard.” We can tell from the citation of a Leeds-meter stanza at the end of ch. 49 (see Eddic Fragments below) that Snorre knew one or more now-lost Eddic poems about Balder’s death, and it may be that one of these poems contained the same two long-lines as the present stanza. For such a sharing of whole lines cf. e.g. st. 14/1–3 above, which are identical to Bdr 1/1–3.

⁷⁷The sister, who was apparently the one who asked for the Hammer, now has the audacity to ask Thunder (disguised as Frow) to give her the very rings on his hands.

- 30 Þá kvað þat Þrymr, · þursa dróttinn:
 2 „Berð inn hamar · brúði at vígja,

[R 17v/32]

4 leggið Mjöllni · ì meyjar kné,

Then quoth this Thrim, the lord of Thurses:
“Bear ye in the hammer the bride for to bless;
lay ye Millner in the maiden’s knee;
bless us two together by Ware’s hand!”

4 Várar ‘Ware’ | A goddess who, according to Gylf 35, rules vows between men and women. See Index.

31 Hló Hlórriða · hugr ì brjósti

4 ok étt jotuns · alla lamði.

[R 17v/34]

Laughed Loride’s (= Thunder’s) heart in his chest, when, hard-hearted, he recognised the hammer.
Thrim he smote first, the lord of Thurses, and all the ettin’s lineage he beat lame.

32 Drap hann ina qldnu · jotna systur,

Svá kom Óðins sonr · endr at hamri.

[R 18r/1]

He smote the aged sister of the ettins, she who for the bride-fee had asked;
she got a smiting for shillings,
and a blow of the hammer for a multitude of rings.
So came Weden’s son back to his hammer.

Introduction

A list of poetic synonyms set in a frame narrative of Thunder encountering a dwarf who wishes to marry his daughter. The synonyms are often archaic, representing older common Indo-European and Germanic words which have been displaced by innovations in the common register. Some are not found elsewhere.

The translation is currently incomplete.

 “Allwise I am called; I live beneath the earth;
 I own under a stone my home.
 The man of wagons [= Thunder] I am come to visit;
 let no man break a firm promise!”

3 vagna vers ‘man of wagons’ | The “wagons” may here be constellations in the heavens, namely the Charles’ Wain (Great Bear, “Big Dipper”) and Women’s Wain (Little Bear, “Little Dipper”). Cf. Skm 31, where heaven/the sky is kened land sólár ok tungls ok himin-tungla, vagna ok veðra ‘the land of sun and moon, and the heavenly bodies, wagons and winds.’

- 4 „Ek mun bręgda · því-at ek brúðar á

Introduction

The Thule of Righ (Rþ) is an interesting poem. It is only preserved in a single leaf in the C14th ms. W, where it follows, and is written in the same hand, as the Prose Edda and four grammatical treatises. Numerous leaves are unfortunately missing from W—among them the conclusion to Rþ.

The poem itself is difficult to date, but comes off as rather late. The meter is also unusually free, and there are numerous 3-syllable lines. Rþ uses a highly formulaic language, with some unique expressions. Of particular note are the alliteration between the adverb męirr ‘further’ and míðra, e.g. in st. 2/1: gekk męirr at þat.

TODO: Dumezil three-part society, racial caste system, Irish influence. Many interesting things to write here!

So say men in ancient saws, that one of the Eese, he who was called Homedal, went on his journey and passed forth along a certain lake shore, came upon a lone homestead and called himself Righ—according to that saw is this poem.

Unlike Thrall, it is not attested in any prose texts, but probably corresponds to OS thiwi ‘maid(-servant)’, being further root-related to þéa ~ þjá ‘to enthrall’, Proto-Norse þewar ‘servant’, OE þéow ‘slave, servant’.

4 3tul v3ro augu · sem yrmlingi ‘fierce were his eyes like the young serpent’s’ | That noble stock distinguishes itself through physical appearance, especially a sharp and fierce gaze, is a common motif. It appears e.g. in Vkv where Wayland’s gaze is like the serpent’s, and the incident at the beginning of HHund II, where Hallow, disguised as a thrall-woman, is almost caught due to his unslavelike eyes, which are, like in the present stanza, also said to be 3tul ‘fierce, terrible’.

Then quoth a crow—sat on a branch alone—
“For what shalt thou, Kin the Young, hunt birds?

Dan and Danp own dearly halls,

They know well the ship to ride,

2 ér ‘ye’ | metr. emend.; þér ‘id.’ W, which is simply a younger form of ér, and shows that the poem has been linguistically modernised.

2 óðal ‘ethel’ | Ancestral farmland, in this case the eighteen homesteads owned by Earl.

3 kjól at riða ‘ship to ride’ | i.e. to sail.

4 egg at kenna ‘the blade to teach’ | To wage war. A euphemism; to “teach someone the blade” is to fight (and kill) him.

(At this point leaf 78 of W ends. The rest of the poem is lost. TODO: other sources.)

Fragments from Snorre's Edda

A number of Eddic lines, stanzas and groups of stanzas are quoted in Snorre's Edda. The majority of them are taken from longer Eddic poems preserved in full in other manuscripts (primarily R and A), but a few are found nowhere else. These fragments will be edited in the present section.

The fragments have some things in common: they are generally pieces of spoken dialogue quoted in the context of longer narrative prose sections, and are, with one exception (Homedal's galder, see below), not introduced by reference to their source but rather with phrases like þá kvað hann 'then he quoth'.

1. A lost riddle-poem

This half-stanza is quoted in Gylf 2, being the second Eddic verse in the text, following Háv 1 in the same chapter, which is uttered by Yilfer himself when he enters the hall of the Eese. The whole section is clearly referencing other Eddic mythic wisdom contests and particularly reminiscent of Vaff.

2 Hann sá þrjú há-sėti ok hvert upp frá ǫðru, ok sátu þrír menn sinn í hverju. Þá spurði hann, hvert nafn hǫfðingja þeira véri.
 Sá svarar, er hann leiddi inn, at sá, er í inu neðsta há-sėti sat, var
4 konungr, ok heitir Hárr, en þar nést sá, er heitir Jafnhárr, en sá ofast, er Þriði heitir. Þá spyrr Hárr komandann, hvárt fleira er 6 erendi hans, en heimill er matr ok drykkr honum sem ǫllum þar í Háva hǫll. Hann segir, at fyrst vill hann spyrja, ef nokkurr er 8 fróðr maðr inni. Hárr segir, at hann komi eigi heill út, nema hann sé fróðari,

He [= Yilfer] saw three high-seats and each higher than the other, and three men sat there, each in his own seat. Then he asked what the names of those chieftains were. He who led him in answers that the one who sat in the lowest high-seat was a king called High, and next to him he who is called Evenhigh, and uppermost he who is called Third. Then High asks the guest whether he has any other errands, but food and drink will be freely offered him, like all men there in the High One's hall. He [= Yilfer] asks whether anyone within is a learned man. High says that he will not come out whole unless he be more learned [than he],

10 „ok statt-u framm · meðan þú fregn sitja skal sá es seggir.“

“and stand forth while thou askest; sit shall he who speaks!”

2. Nearth and Shede

The following passage is almost the whole of Gylf 23, excepting at the very end svá er sagt ‘so it is said’, after which is quoted Grm 11. Notably, the two stanzas cited here are also found translated in Saxo Grammaticus (2015) 1.8.18–19, where they are said to have been spoken by Hadding and Rainhild, respectively. For discussion Hopkins (2021).

2 Inn þriði áss er sá, er kallaðr er Njörðr. Hann býr á himni, þar sem heitir Nóatún. Hann ræðr fyrir gongu vinds ok stillir sjá ok 4 eld. Á hann skal heita til sé-fara ok til veiða. Hann er svá auðigr ok fé-séll, at hann má gefa þeim auð, landa eða lausa-fjár. Á hann skal til þess heita. Eigi er Njörðr ása éttar. Hann var upp fódðr 6 í Vana-heimi, en Vanir gísluðu hann goðunum ok tóku í mót at gíslingu þann, er Hónir heitir. Hann varð at sétt með goðum ok 8 Vðnum. Njörðr á þá konu, er Skaði heitir, dóttir Þjatsa jötuns.
Skaði vill hafa bú-stað þann, er átt hafði faðir hennar, þat er á 10 fjöllum nökkurum, þar sem heitir Þrym-heimr, en Njörðr vill vera nær sé. Þau séttust á þat, at þau skyldu vera níu nêtr í Þrym-12 heimi, en þá aðrar níu at Nóa-túnum. En er Njörðr kom aftr til Nóatúna af fjallinu, þá kvað hann þetta:

The third Os is that one who is called Nearth. He lives in the heaven in the place called Nowetowns. He rules the course of the wind, and stills sea and fire. On him shall one call for sea-faring and for hunting. He is so wealthy and blessed with money that he may give them a wealth of lands or loose property; on him shall one call for that sake. Nearth is not of the lineage of the Eese. He was brought up in Wanehome, but the Wanese gave him as a hostage to the gods, and in return got as hostage that one who is called Heener. He was used to reconcile the gods and the Wanese. Nearth has that woman who is called Shede, the daughter of the ettin Thedse. Shede wishes to have the dwelling which her father had owned, which lies on some fells in the place called Thrimham—but Nearth wishes to live by the sea. They agreed with each other that they would live for nine nights in Thrimham, but the other nine at Nowetowns. But when Nearth came back to the Nowetowns from the fell, he quoth this:

14 „Lęið erumk fjoll, · vas'k-a lęngi á, nętr ęinar níu;
16 ulfa þytr · mér þótti illr vesa hjá sęngvi svana.“

“Loathsome are the fells for me; I was not long thereon—only nine nights.
The wolves' howl seemed ill to me against the song of swans.”

18 Þá kvað Skaði þetta:
Then Shede quoth this:

„Sofa né mát'k-a'k · sęvar beðjum á 20 fugls jarmi fyrir;
sá mik vękr · es af víði kęmr
22 morgun hverjan már.“

“I could not sleep on the beds of the sea for the bleating of the bird.
He awakes me, when from the wide sea he comes,
every morning, the mew.”

Þá fór Skaði upp á fjall ok byggði í Þrym-heimi, ok ferr hon mjök 24 á skíðum ok með boga ok skýtr dýr. Hon heitir ęndur-goð eða ęndur-dís.

Then Shede went up to the fells and dwelled in Thrimham, and she often goes on skis with her bow and shoots beasts. She is called ski-goð or ski-dise.

3. Homedal's Galder (Heimdallargaldr)

This mysterious fragment is quoted in Gylf 27, the chapter describing Homedal, which is here reproduced in full. The fragment consists of two c-lines and appears to be the end of a stanza in the fitting meter Galders-law.

The same poem is mentioned again in Skm 15: Heimdallar hǫfuð heitir sverð. Svá er sagt, at hann var lostinn manns hǫfði í gegnum. Um þat er kveðit í Heimdallar-galdri, ok er síðan kallat hǫfuð mjǫtuðr Heimdallar 'A sword is called Homedal's head. So it is said that he was pierced through with a man's head; about that it is sung in Homedal's galder, and thenceforth the head is called Homedal's bane.'

Heimdallr heitir einn. Hann er kallaðr hvíti áss; hann er mikill
 2 ok heilagr. Hann báru at syni meyjar níu ok allar systr; hann heitir ok Hallinskíði ok Gullintanni; tennr hans váru af gulli.
 4 Hestr hans heitir Gulltoppr. Hann býr þar er heitir Himinbjörg létr. Hann hefir lúðr þann er Gjallar-horn heitir, ok heyrir blástr 10 hans í alla heima. Heimdallar sverð er kallat hǫfuð manns. Hér er svá sagt: [...] Ok enn segir hann sjalfr í Heimdallar-galdri:

Homedal one is named. He is called the White Os; he is great and holy. He was born as the son of nine maidens, sisters all. He is also named Haldenshid and Goldentooth; his tooth were of gold. His horse is called Goldtop. He lives at the place called the Heavenbarrows near Bivrest. He is the Watchman of the Gods and sits there at Heaven's end to guard the bridge against barrow-risers. He needs less sleep than a bird. Both night and day he sees a hundred rests away from him; he also hear when grass grows on the ground or wool on sheep, and everything which sounds louder. He has the basoon called the Horn of Yell, and his blowing can be heard in all realms. Homedal's sword is called a man's head. Here it says so: [...] And further he himself says in Homedal's Galder:

11 [...] | Here the text cites Grm 13; see there.

4. Gna and the Wanes

The following passage is from Gylf 35, which lists the Ossens.

2 Fjórtánda Gná, hana sendir Frigg í ymsa heima at ørindum sínum.
 2 Hon á þann hest, er renn lopt ok lög, er heitir Hóf-varpnir. Þat var eitt sinn, er hon reið, at vanir nokkvörir sá reið hennar í lopt-4 inu. Þa mēlti einn:

The fourteenth is Gna; Frie sends her into every home to do her errands. She owns the horse who runs through air and sea, and is called Hoofwarpner. It was one time when she rode that some Wanes saw her riding in the air. Then one spoke:

6 „Hvat þar flýgr, · hvat þar fęrr, eða at lopti líðr?“

“What flies there, what fares there, or passes through the air?”

Hon svarar:

She answers:

8 „Né ek flýg, · þó ek fęr ok at lopti líðr“ 10 á Hóf-varpni, · þeim's Ham-skęrpir gat við Garð-rofu.“

“I fly not, though I fare,
 and pass through the air,
 on Hoofwarpner, whom Hamsherper
 begot with Yardrove.”

12 Af Gnár nafni er svá kallat, at þat gnéfar, er hátt ferr:
 From Gna's name it is so called that something which fares high up protrudes.

5. Balder's death

Gylf 49 contains the narrative of Balder's death, beginning with his ominous dreams, and ending with the Eese failing to "weep him out of Hell" (for a summary and discussion of the myth and its attestations, see the introduction to Vsp 31–33). At the end of the chapter, a single Leeds-meter speech-stanza is quoted.

Því nést sendu  sir um allan heim  rind-reka at bi ja, at Baldr
 v ri gr tinn  r Helju, en allir ger u  at, menninir ok kykvendin

Thereafter the Eese sent an errand-runner through all the Home to ask that Balder be wept out of hell. And all did that, the men and the beasts and the earth and the stones and trees and all ore, just like thou must have seen that these things weep when they come out of cold and into heat. When the messengers journeyed home and had run their errand well, they find in a certain cave where a gow was sitting; she called herself Thanks. They ask her to weep Balder out of hell. She says:

„  kk mun gr ta ·  urrun t rum Baldrs b l-farar;
 kyks n  dau s · naut'k-a Karls sonar

“Thanks will weep—with dry tears—for Balder's pyre-journey [DEATH].
 Neither living nor dead did I benefit from Churl's son [= Balder];
 let Hell have what she has!”

En  ess geta menn, at  ar hafi verit Loki Laufeyjarson, er flest hefir illt g rt me   sum.

But men guess that this must have been Lock, Leafy's son, who has done the most evil among the Eese.

6. Thunder's journey to Garfrith

Skm 26, here edited in part, is the only surviving retelling of Thunder's journey to the ettin Garfrith, and his following fight with, and slaying of, him and his two daughters, Yelp and Grope. This was apparently a well-known story, and is also mentioned in Vetr l v 1/1b (quoted in Skm 11, which lists kennings for Thunder): stétt of Gjǫlp dauða 'thou didst step over the dead Yelp'. The prose of Skm 26 seems to be based on an earlier, now-lost poem in Leeds-meter, from which it quotes two stanzas. The first is found in all four main manuscripts, while the second is found only in U. Both are spoken by Thunder and closely resemble each other stylistically, which is why they most likely come from the same poem.

2 Þá fór Þórr til ár þeirar, er Vimur heitir, allra á mest. Þá spennti hann sik megin-gjörðum ok studdi for-streymis Gríðar-völ, en 4 þá óx svá mjök áin, at uppi braut á qxl honum. Þá kvað Þórr þetta:

Then Thunder journeyed to that river which is called Wimbre, greatest of all rivers. Then he wrapped his might-girdle around himself and leaned upon Grith's stave against the stream, and Lock held up the might-girdle. And when Thunder came to the middle of the river, then it waxed so great that it broke over his shoulders. Then Thunder quoth this:

6 „Vax-at-tu nú, Vimur, · alls mik þik vaða tíðir
jǫtna garða í;
8 vætist, ef þú vœx · at þá vœx mér ós-megin jafn-hátt upp sem himinn.“

“Wax not now, O Wimbre, as I wish to wade through thee into the yards of the ettins.

Thou knowest, if thou waxest, then my Os-might waxes up as high as the heaven.”

10 Þá sér Þórr uppi í gljúfrum nokkurum, at Gjálp, dóttir Geirrðar stóð þar tveim megin árinna, ok gerði hon ár-vøxtinn. Þá tók 12 Þórr upp ór ánni stein mikinn ok kastaði at henni ok mælti svá:
„At ósi skal á stemma.“ Eigi missti hann, þar er hann kastaði til,

14 ok í því bili bar hann at landi ok fekk tekit reyni-runn nokkurn ok steig svá ór ánni. Því er þat orð-tak haft, at reynir er björg 16 þórs.

Then Thunder sees that up in some certain gorges Yelp, daughter of Garfrith, stood on both sides of the river, and she caused the river's growth. Then Thunder took up from the river a great stone and threw it at her and spoke so: "At its source shall the river be dammed." He did not miss his target, and in that moment he threw himself towards land and got hold of a certain rowan shrub, and thus stepped out of the river. From this comes the saying that the rowan is Thunder's deliverance.

11 stóð þar tveim megin árinna, ok gerði hon ár-vøxtinn 'stood on both sides of the river, and she caused the river's growth' | She stood with her legs spread and befouled the river.

En er Þórr kom til Geirrøðar, þá var þeim fé-lögum vísat fyrst í 18 geita-hús til her-bergis, ok var þar einn stóll til sëtis, ok sat Þórr
þar. Þá varð hann þess varr, at stóllinn fór undir honum upp at 20 réfri. Hann stakk Gríðar-veli upp í raftana ok lét sígast fast á stólinn. Varð þá brestr mikill, ok fylgði skrékr. Þar hófðu verit 22 undir stólinum dótr Geirrøðar, Gjálp ok Greip, ok hafði hann brotit hrygginn í báðum. Þa kvað Þórr:

And when Thunder came to Garfrith's home the fellows were first shown into a goathouse for lodgings, and therein one chair was for sitting, and Thunder sat upon it. Then he became aware that the chair beneath him was moving up toward the roof. He thrust Grith's stave up against the rafters and pushed himself firmly down into the chair. Then there was a great crack, followed by a shriek; there beneath the chair had been the daughters of Garfrith, Yelp and Grope, and he had broken both their backs. Then Thunder quoth:

24 „Einu sinni · neytta'k alls megin
jötna gørdum í
26 þá's Gjǫlp ok Greip, · dótr Geir-raðar, vildu hefja mik til himins.“

"A single time I used all my might in the yards of the ettins, when Yelp and Grope, the daughters of Garfrith, would lift me to the heaven."

24 sinni 'time' | metr. and sens. emend.; om. U.

7. The tree Glazer

The original context of this half-stanza in Leeds-meter is obscure. The present excerpt represents the whole ch. 42 of Skm.

2 Hví er gull kallat barr eða lauf Glasis? Í Ásgarði fyrir durum Valhallar stendr lundr, sá er Glasir er kallaðr, en lauf hans allt er gull-rautt, svá sem hér er kveðit, at

Why is gold called the needle or leaf of Glazer? In Osyrd, before the doors of Walhall standa a tree which is called Glazer, and his leafing is all golden red, as it is sung here, that

4 Glasir stendr · með gullnu laufi

Glazer stands with golden leaf before Sye-Tew's (Weden's) halls.

6 Sá er víðr fegrstr með goðum ok mǫnnum.
That is the fairest tree among men and gods.

8. On the making of Glapner

The following fragmentary stanza about the making of Glapner—the fetter used to bind the Fenrerswolf—is found in the short work on kennings today called the Little Scalda (Litla skálda), a text which probably served as a source for Snorre (for which see further Males (2020, pp. 129–47)). A variant of this stanza is transparently paraphrased in Gylf 28: Hann var gerr af sex blutum: af dyn kattarins ok af skeggi konunnar ok af rótum bjargsins ok af sinum bjarnarins ok af anda fisksins ok af fogls bráka. ‘It [Glapner] was made of six things: of the cat’s din and of the woman’s beard and of the mountain’s root and of the bear’s sinews and of the fish’s breath and of the fowl’s spittle.’ The small variants—bráka ‘spittle’ for mjolk ‘milk’, and the inverted order of lines 2 and 3—suggest that Snorre had access to a somewhat different version.

Ór kattar dyn · ok ór konu skeggi,

Norse Heroic Poetry

Lay of Wayland

(Völundarkviða)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C10th (o.428)–early C11th (o.475)

Meter: Ancient-words-law

Introduction

The Lay of Wayland (Vkv) is a psychologically complex, finely wrought poem.

Wayland gets his revenge on the whole royal household. He murders Nithad's two young sons (affectionately, his “bear-cubs”) and thus ends his male lineage. Likewise he defangs Nithad's “cunning wife” (she is never called anything else) by reducing her once powerful counsels to cold words; and finally he rapes Beadhild, depriving her of her maidenhood and value in marriage. They are thus reduced to the same state of complete powerlessness as he himself experienced, something clearly seen in the repetition of the adjective viljalauss ‘powerless’; in st. 12 it describes Wayland after he wakes in shackles, but in st. 31 Nithad uses it to refer to his own mental state after the deaths of his sons. This sense of hopelessness concludes the poem in Beadhild's haunting words: “I nowise knew withstand him; I nowise could withstand him.”

From the other versions of the story it is known that Beadhild gave birth to a son, Woody (OE Wudga, ThidS Viðga, in Danish ballads Vidrik Verland-son). He went on to become a great hero, and in the later heroic ballads by far eclipses his father. His birth seems heavily foreshadowed by Wayland forcing Nithad to swear an oath in st. 33, but he is nowhere directly mentioned in the poem, probably for artistic reasons.

Apart from this lay there is one other telling of the full story, namely the Strand of Wayland the Smith in ThidS. While written in Old Norse, it is clear from the proper names and content that it is based on German sources (probably heroic ballads). Thus the native form Völundr is replaced with the Low German Velent [sic], Niðuðr with Niðungr. Interestingly there is a note within it showing that the native form was still known, namely about “Velent, the excellent smith, whom Warrings (væringjar) call Wayland (Völundr)”. Apparently Wayland was so famous that “all men seem to praise his workmanship so, that the maker of any smith’s work which is made better than other works, is called a Wayland (Völundr) with regards to workmanship.”

Far more stark than minor differences of language is that of tone. The psychological complexity and tension of the older redaction is almost entirely gone: Wayland is no longer a mysterious wild man, but a chivalrous knight who can escape from any peril through his ingenuity and craftsmanship. He is not kidnapped out of Nithad’s greed, nor hamstrung out of the suspicion of his cruel wife, but rather a loyal servant of Nithad’s, banished from the kingdom after defending himself against the king’s corrupt steward, and hamstrung after being caught attempting to poison the king’s food in revenge.

Most frustratingly the personality of Beadhild is entirely expulged. She is the anonymous “king’s daughter”, an unnamed maiden (jungfrú, a borrowing from Low German) who is peacefully seduced by Wayland and quickly falls in love with him. Likewise the person of Nithad’s cunning wife is completely gone, and the murder of his sons no longer ends his lineage, since he has another, older son who survives him and takes over the kingdom. Wayland still flies away laughing after telling Nithad what he has done, but only four years (his son with Beadhild is three years old) later reconciliates with Nithad’s son, retrieves Beadhild and their son and lives a long life as a famous craftsman.

Thus, by the time of the ThidS the old story of Wayland had been heavily distorted, a tragic victim of chivalric sensibilities. This younger version does not have any high literary value, but is of course still of interest since it shows the wide reception and variation of the narrative.

Finally there are also traces of the story in the Anglo-Saxon tradition, where it is alluded to in both Walder and Deer, the latter of which particularly emphasising the powerlessness felt by Wayland and Beadhild (thus being much closer in spirit to the present poem than to ThidS). Parts of the narrative are depicted on the early C8th Frank’s casket, where it is as prominent as the depiction of the Adoration of the Magi—a true testament to the weight with which it was regarded within that culture.

From Wayland (Frá Völundi)

- Pr Níðuðr hét konungr í Svíþjóð. Hann átti tvá sonu ok eina dóttur; hon hét Þoðvildr. Bróðr vöru þrír, synir Finna konungs. Hét einn Slagfiðr, annarr Egill, þriði Völundr. Nithad was a king called in Sweden. He had two sons and one daughter; she was called Beadchild. Three brothers were there; the sons of a king of the Finns. One was called Slayfinn, the other Eyel, the third Wayland. They fared on skis and hunted wild beasts. They came into the Wolfdales and made for themselves houses there. There is a lake there which is called the Wolfsea. Early in the morning they found on the lake-shore three women, and they span linen. There were by them their swan-hames; those were Walkirries. There were two daughters of king Ladwigh: Ladguth Swanwhite and Harware Elwight. The third was Alerune, daughter of Choser of Walland. The men took the women to their halls with them. Eyel got Alerune, and Slayfinn Swanwhite, and Wayland the Elwight. The couples lived there for seven winters; then the women left to attend battles, and did not come back. Then Eyel fared on skis to search for Alerune, but Slayfinn searched for Swanwhite—but Wayland stayed in the Wolfdales. He was the most skilled craftsman whom men know of in the ancient saws. King Nithad had him taken, as it is here sung of:

The Lay of Wayland

1 Męjjar flugu sunnan · Myrk-við í gögnum
2 al-vitr ungar, · ør-lög drýgja;
þér á sęvar-strönd · sęttusk at hvílask,
4 drósir suð-rónar · dýrt lín spunnu.

[R 18r/19]

Maidens flew from the south through Mirkwood
—young elwights—to fulfill orlay.
They on the lake-shore set down to rest;
the southern ladies span costly linen.

1 Myrk-við ‘Mirkwood’ | A great border forest, surely referenced for its association with the war-ravaged lands of the Gots and Huns; a natural environment for Walkirries.

2 al-vitr ‘elwights’ | “Strange beings, foreign wights”, reflecting a hypothetical alja-wibtiz*.

2 or-lög drýgja; ‘fulfill orlay’ | That is, to fulfill their preordained destinies, and act according to their innate nature as described in P₁ and st. 3. Clunies Ross (2005, p. 103) and some other editors see these words as a sign of English influence and translate drýgja or-lög as “engage in war”, considering or-lög a semantic borrowing from the OE or-leg which is taken to mean the same as Dutch oorlog ‘war’. This is unnecessary; ON or-lög otherwise means ‘fate, destiny’, and so may its OE cognate as seen by the equivalent phrase found in l. 29 of a poem on the Christian Doomsday (TODO?), where a man going to Hell for his sins þenne á ró ealdre · or-leg dreógeð ‘then for ever and ever [he] suffers his orlay’.

- 2 Eḡin nam þeira · Eḡil at verja [R 18r/21]
 2 fōgr mēr fira · faðmi ljósum;
 4 qnnur vas Svanhvít, · svan-fjaðrar dró,

 en hin þriðja · þeira systir
 6 varði hvítan · hals Völundar.

One of them took to embrace Eyel
 —the fair maiden among men—in her pale bosom.
 Second was Swanwhite; her swan-feathers she rustled,
 [...]

 And the third sister among them embraced the white throat of Wayland.

4 [...] | A line mentioning Slayfinn has probably been lost here.

6 hvítan ‘white’ | Pale skin being a sign of noble ancestry; cf. 17/3.

- 3 Sótu síðan · sjau vetr at þat, [R 18r/24]
 2 en hinn átta · allan þróðu,

 4 meýjar fýstusk · á myrkvan við,
 al-vitr ungar · or-lög drýgja.

They stayed then seven winters after that,
 and all the eighth they yearned,
 and the ninth did need divorce them.
 The maidens longed for the Mirky Wood:
 the young elwights, to fulfill orlay.

- 4 Kom þar af vęiði · veðr-ęygr skyti [R 18r/26]

 Came there from the hunt the stormy-eyed shooter:
 Wayland passing over a long way.
 Slayfinn and Eyel found the halls deserted;
 they walked out and in, and looked about.

 He struck red gold by fastened gem;
 he enclosed all the serpent-bighs well;
 so he awaited his own bright wife,
 if to him she might come.

[R 18r/29]

2 linn-baugum 'serpent-bighs' | It is unclear whether this word refers to rings actually shaped like snakes or is merely a poetic description of twisted rings. Archeological examples of the former include the so-called "snake-head rings" (German Schlangenkopfringe, Swedish ormbuvudringar) from the Migration Period, and the snake- or dragon-shaped armlet from the Viking Age found in a hoard in Undrom, Ångermanland, northern Sweden (108822 HST). <https://samlingar.shm.se/object/5C5658C4-0813-4DFF-947F-E5E4C4BAB965>.

 This learns Nithad, lord of the Nears, that alone Wayland stayed in the Wolfdales.
 Nightly journeyed warriors—nailed were their byrnies—their shields gleamed by the sickle moon.

[R 18r/31]

1 Níara 'the Nears' | An obscure tribe, perhaps the residents of Närke, an ancient province of Sweden. See Index.

3 nęglðar vǫru brynjur ‘nailed were their byrnies’ | The “byrnies” here are apparently some kind of costly plate armour.

- 8 Stigu ór söðlum · at salar gaffli, [R 18r/33]

They stepped off their saddles by the hall’s gables;
 went thence inside the endlong hall;
 saw they on a bast-rope bighs drawn up,

2 gingu ... sal ‘went ... hall’ | Formulaic. The fixed variant line bón/bann inn of gekk · ęnd-langan sal ‘he/she inside did go the endlong hall’ (i.e. ‘through the entire length of the hall’, cf. English “livelong”) occurs in three other places: sts. 16 and 30 of the present poem, and st. 3 of Oddręr. ęnd-langr salr ‘endlong hall’ occurs in two additional places: st. 27 of Þrk and st. 3 of Skm.

 4 Vǫlundr líðandi · of langan veg.

And they took off and they slid on,
 save for one which they slid off.—
 Came there from the hunt the stormy-eyed shooter:
 Wayland passing over a long way.

2 fyr ęinn útan, · es af létu ‘save for one, which off they slid’ | This big is probably the one mentioned in sts. 17 and 26, since Beadhild has it already when Wayland is brought back after being captured. It may have been kept for its particular beauty. Finnur Jónsson (1932) writes (my translation from the Danish): “The ring which Nithad kept must have had special properties, and distinguished itself before others. There is no doubt that the ring is a flight ring; whether this was clear to the poet is however questionable. This much is certain, that Wayland seems to be able to fly away only after he has got back the ring; that is, the one which Beadhild brings him.” This is by no means certain. Wayland was a craftsman of legendary skill and could certainly have built wings for himself without a magical flight-ring. That is what he does in the Low German version; it is also what happens in the related Daidalos myth. For both of these see the introduction to the present poem.

- II Sat á ber-fjalli, · bauga talði, [R 18v/5]
 2 alfa ljóði · eins saknaði;

 4 al-vitr unga · véri aptur komin.

Sat he on the bear-pelt, bighs he counted—
 the prince of elves was missing one!
 Thought he that Ladwigh's daughter [= Harware] might have it,
 that the young elwight might be come back.

1 bauga talði 'bighs he counted' | Wayland's grief and loneliness are skilfully illustrated by his counting all seven hundred rings, something which had apparently become a habit for him.

2 alfa ljóði 'prince of elves' | Probably referring to Wayland's nature as a Wild Man, something also seen by his hunting of bears, skiing, and fierce gaze, all associated with his Finnish or Saami ancestry. Cf. 14/2b and 32/1b, where Nithad calls him vísi alfa 'chief of elves'.

- 12 Sat svá lengi, · at sofnaði, [R 18v/7]
 2 ok vaknaði · vilja-lauss;

 4 en á fótum · fjotur of spenntan.

Sat he so long that asleep he fell,
 and he awoke, powerless.
 He knew on his hands heavy restraints,
 and on his feet a fetter tight.

- [Völundr kvað:] 13 „Hverir 'ru jǫfrar · þeir's á lögðu [R 18v/9]

“Which are the princes that laid on

- 14 Kallaði nú Níðuðr, · Níara dróttinn: [R 18v/10]
 2 „Hvar gatst, Völundr, · vísi alfa,

 4 Gull vas þar ęigi · á Grana leiðu, fjarri hugða'k vart land · fjollum Rínar.“

Now called Nithad, lord of the Nears:
 “Where didst thou, Wayland, chief of elves, get our ounces in the Woldfdales?”

Gold was there not on Grane's path;
far I thought our land from the fells of the Rhine.⁷⁹

⁷⁹Grane was the horse of the legendary hero Siward, who slew the dragon Fathomer and took his gold. Nithad's speech is sarcastic: "Is there a dragon's hoard in the Wolfdales?"

[Völundr kvað:]

- 15 „Man'k at męiri · męti ętum,
2 es vér hęil hjú · hęima vórum:
Hlaðguðr ok Hęrvor · borin vas Hlęðvé,
4 kunn vas Qlrún · Kíars dóttir.“

[R 18v/13]

"I recall that we owned greater wealth
when we a whole household were at home.
Ladguth and Harware were born to Ladwigh;
known was Alerune, Choser's daughter."⁸⁰

⁸⁰Wayland responds rather cryptically and almost seems to be speaking to himself. By asserting the noble lineages of the three swan-wives he gives a legitimate origin for his wealth, but he is aware that Nithad neither believes him nor cares.

- 16 Úti stóð kunnig · kvón Níðaðar,

[R 18v/15]

Outside stood the cunning wife of Nithad;
she went inside the endlong hall,
stood on the floor, steered her voice:
"He is not mild now, who comes out of the wood."

¹ Úti ... Níðaðar 'Outside ... of Nithad' | emend. based on st. 30/1–2; om. R

² hón ... sal 'she went ... hall' | Formulaic, also occurring in st. 30 of the present poem and in Oddręgr 3.

- P2 Níðuðr konungr gaf dóttur sinni Bęðvildi gull-hring þann er
2 hann tók af bastinu at Vólundar, en hann sjalfr bar sverðit er Vólundr átti. En dróttning kvað:

[R 18v/16]

King Nithad gave his daughter Beadhild the golden ring which he took from the bast rope in Wayland's hall, but he himself carried the sword which Wayland had owned. And the queen quoth:

- 17 Tǣnn hǫnum tǣygjask · es hǫnum 's tét sverð, [R 18v/19]
 2 ok hann Bǫðvildar · baug of þekkir,

 4 sníðið ér hann · sina magni, ok setið hann síðan · í Sǣvarstöð.“

His teeth are bared when he is shown the sword, and Beadchild's bigh he recognizes;
 reminiscent are his eyes to the gleaming serpent's.
 Snithe ye from him the might of his sinews, and set him thereafter on Seastead!"

- P₃ Svá var gort, at skornar vǫru sínar í knés-fótum ok settr í holm [R 18v/21]

 konungi alls-kyns gǫr-simar; engi maðr þorði at fara til hans, 4 nema konungr einn. Völundr kvað:

So it was done that the sinews in his houghs were cut, and he was placed on the lonely islet which there lay before the land, which was called Seastead.
 There he forged for the king every kind of jewelry. No man dared go to him save the king alone. Wayland quoth:

- 18 „Skínn Níðaði · sverð á linda, [R 18v/24]

“The sword shines on Nithad's belt, which I sharpened as most handily I could,
 and I hardened as most pleasingly seemed.
 That gleaming blade is ever further from me carried;
 I see it not for Wayland to the smithy carried!

¹ Skínn 'shines' | Metrically deficient, since sk- and s- cannot alliterate. A possible emendation is se'k 'I see'.

- 19 Nú berr Bǫðvildr · brúðar minnar [R 18v/27]

He sliced off the heads of those bear-cubs, and under the fetter's fen their feet he laid.
And the bowls which were under their curls
he coated with silver, gave to Nithad.

1 húna 'bear-cubs' | An affectionate term for young boys, perhaps relating to warrior-initiations done in bear-skins. This word is repeated by Nithad in st. 32 and mirrored by Wayland in st. 34.

2 fæn fjoturs 'the fetter's fen' | Unclear. The smithy or islet may be Wayland's "fetter", in which case he buried them in a fen on the island.

3 þér skálar, · es und skorum vöru 'those bowls which were under their curls' | i.e. their skulls.

[R 19r/5]

And from the eyes arkenstones
he sent to the cunning wife of Nithad.
And from the teeth of the two he struck breast-brooches, sent to Beadhild.

1 jarkna-steina 'arkenstones' | Probably round crystals.

Something appears to be missing here, but the narrative can be gleaned. Beadhild breaks the bigh given to her by Nithad (mentioned above in sts. 10—see note there—and 17), and fears her father's anger. She goes to Wayland in secret and asks him to mend it. The sight of this ring reminds Wayland of his wife, and he decides to rape Beadhild.

26 Þá nam Bøðvildr · baugi at hrósa

 „þori'g-a'k segja, · nema þér einum.“

[R 19r/7]

Then Beadhild began the bigh to praise, [...] which she had broken,
“I dare not tell, save to thee alone.”

2 [...] | The meter requires a half-line here, perhaps containing a repetition of 1a: baugi at hrósa 'the bigh to praise'.

Völundr kvað: 27

- „Ek bóti svá · brest á gulli,

[R 19r/10]

He overcame her with beer—for he knew better—
 so that she in the seat did fall asleep.
 “Now have I avenged my harms, all, save one, on the insidious ones.”

1 því-at bętr kunni ‘for he knew better’ | i.e. he was more cunning than her.

4 nema ęinna ‘save one’ | Presumably the deprivation of his mobility due to the hamstringing, which he resolves by crafting his flight suit.

4 ívið-gjarna ‘insidious ones’ | King Nithad and his house.

- 29 „Vęl ek,“ kvað Völundr, · „verða’k á fitjum,

 Laughing, Wayland threw himself in the air;
 weeping, Beadhild went from the island,
 grieved the lover’s flight and the father’s wrath.

1 fitjum ‘paddles’ | CV: fit ‘the webbed foot of water-birds’, here a reference to the flight-suit which allows Wayland to regain his freedom.

[R 19r/17]

“I am always awake, powerless;
 I sleep the least since my sons died.
 My head turns cold; cold seem thy counsels—
 I would now but that I with Wayland may speak.”

1 Vaki’k á-valt · vilja-lauss ‘I am always awake, powerless’ | This line references sts. 12 and 20, but there Wayland was the powerless man who never slept. By his revenge the suffering has been transferred onto Nithad.

3 křld erumk rřð þín ‘cold seem thy counsels’ | A severe insult to a woman of power, for such counsels to her husband was how she would influence worldly affairs. In this way Wayland’s revenge reaches also Nithad’s wife.

by the steed's bough and the sword's edge—that thou shalt not torment the wife of Wayland, nor of my bride become the bane,
though a wife we might own whom ye might know;
or a babe might own within the hall.

2–3 at skips ... egg 'by deck ... of sword' | Nithad must swear the oaths by his tools of trade as a warrior; by extension on his martial honour. Cf. HHund II, where broken oaths are to come back "biting" the oath-breaker by cursing his ship, horse, and sword, in that order.

4 kvēlj-at 'shalt not torment' | A negative imperative. The normal 2nd. sg. imper. of kvēlja is kvēl, but the negative clitic -at causes the -j- to reappear in a rare liaison effect. See Rosenberg (2024): "A Norse sandhi?" (TODO: add to bibliography).

 gangi fagr-varið · við fęður róða.“

“Rise up, Thankred, my best thrall;
 bid Beadhild, the brow-white maiden,
 to go, fair-clothed, with her father to counsel.”

1 Þakkráðr ‘Thankred’ | A German name never found elsewhere in ON, but equivalent to MHG Dancrāt.

2–3 mey hina brá-hvítu ... fagr-varið ‘the brow-white maiden ... fair-clothed’ | Nithad still has some doubt in his heart and by these words tries to convince himself of the innocence of his daughter (męr ‘maiden, virgin’).

- [Níðuðr kvað:] 40 „Es þat satt Bęðvildr, · es sęğðu mér, [R 19v/3]
 2 sętuð it Völundr · saman í holmi?“

“Is it true, Beadhild, as they told me—stayed thou and Wayland together on the islet?”

[Bǫðvildr kvað:]

41 „Satt ’s þat Níðuðr · es sagði þér:
2 sǫtum vit Vǫlundr · saman í holmi
3 ęina ǫgur-stund, · ęva skyldi;
4 ek vętr hǫnum · vinna kunna’k, ek vętr hǫnum · vinna mǫtta’k.“

[R 19v/4]

“True it is, Nithad, as he told thee—
I and Wayland stayed together on the islet for one heavy hour—it should never have been.
I nowise knew withstand him;
I nowise could withstand him.”

4 vinna | metr. and sens. emend.; om. R

1 sagði ‘he told’ | Beadhild knows that Wayland is the only one aware of the rape and thus deduces that he told her father. She makes a subtle change in the conjugation from her father’s general third person plural (“what they told”), to the specific singular form (“what he told”).

4–5 kunna’k ‘knew’, mǫtta’k ‘could’ | Beadhild could defend herself neither mentally (kunna ‘to know, understand’) nor physically (mega ‘to have strength to do, avail’). A powerful final stanza.

Introduction

This rather late poem is very well written. Particularly beautiful are the introductory stanzas, which tell of Norns arriving in the night to predetermine Hallow's life.

First Lay of Hallow Hundingsbane

P1 Hér hefr upp kvæði frá Helga Hundings bana, þeira ok Hǫðbrodds.
2 Vǫlsunga kviða.

Here begins a lay regarding Hallow, bane of Hunding and his men, and of Hathbrod. A lay of the Walsings.

1 Ár vas alda · þat's arar gullu
2 hnigu heilǫg vǫtn · af Himin-fjollum;
þá hafði Helga · inn hugum stóra
4 Borghildr borit · í Brálundi.

[R 207/21]

It was the dawn of elds, when eagles shrieked;
holy waters poured down from the Heavenfells;

then to Hallow the great of heart
Burhild in Browlund had given birth.

1 ÁR was alda ‘It was the dawn of elds’ | This formulaic introduction immediately situates the events of the poem in the distant mytho-heroic past, indeed, if one compares Vǫp 3, at the beginning of history.

- 2 Nǫtt varð í bǫ, · nornir kvǫmu, [R 20r/23]
2 þér’s ǫðlingi · aldr of skópu;
 þann bǫðu fylki · frégstan verða
4 ok buðlunga · bætstan þykkja.

It turned night in the settlement; norns did come,
they who shaped the athling’s age.
They bade that battle-arrayer become the noblest,
and among princes seem the best.

- 3 Sneru þér af afli · ǫr-log-þóttu [R 20r/25]
2 þá’s borgir braut · í Brálundi;
 þér um græddu · gullin-símu
4 ok und mána sal · miðjan fæstu.

They turned mightily orlay-strands when castles were broken in Browlund.
They wrapped a golden band, and beneath the moon’s hall [SKY/HEAVEN] fastened it in the middle.

- 4 Þér austr ok vestr · ǣnda fǫlu, [R 20r/27]
2 þar átti lofðungr · land á milli, brá nipt Nera · á norðr-vega 4 ǣinni fæsti, · ǣy bað hon halda.

They in the east and west hid its ends;
there the praised one owned land in between.
The kinswoman of Nare tugged onto the northern ways
a single cord—she bade it hold forever.

Dating (Sapp, 2022): late C11th (o.587)

Meter: Ancient-words-law (TODO)

Introduction

TODO: Introduction.

The latter part of the poem features a touching description of Syreun's visit to Hallow's grave. It reflects a folkloric motif found in many traditional British ballads, e.g. Roud 50 (Sweet William's Ghost), Roud 179 (the Lover's Ghost or the Grey Cock), and Roud 22568 (the Night Visiting Song), where two lovers must part at cock-crow, although in some variants of 179 and 22568 the supernatural element is not explicit. Compare the version recorded by The Dubliners in 1972:

*I must away now; I can no longer tarry
This morning's tempest I have to cross
I must be guided without a stumble
Into the arms I love the most.*

*And when he came to his true love's dwelling
He knelt down gently upon a stone
And through her window he's whispered lowly:
"Is my true lover within at home?"*

*"Wake up, wake up, love, it is thine own true lover Wake up, wake up, love, and let me in
For I am tired, love, and oh so weary
And more than near drenched to the skin."*

She's raised her off her down soft pillow She's raised her up and she's let him in

*And they were locked in each other's arms
Until that long night was past and gone.*

*And when that long night was past and over
And when the small clouds began to grow
He's taken her hand and they've kissed and parted
Then he saddled and mounted and away did go.*

I must away now et c.

 fell Hēlgi, en Dagr reĩð til fjalla ok sagði Sigrúnu tíðindi:

Hallow got Syerun and they had sons; Hallow was not old. Day, son of Hain, made a bloot to Weden for the sake of avenging his father. Weden lent Day his spear. Day found Hallow, his brother-in-law, where it is called Fetterlund; he ran through Hallow with the spear. There Hallow fell, but Day rode to the fells and told Syerun the tidings:

1–5 ALL | Cf. the very similar description of Siward in Guðr II 2.

P₂ Haugr var gørr eptir Helga. En er hann kom til Valhalla, þá
 2 bauð Óðinn hánum öllu at ráða með sér. Helgi kvað:

A barrow was made for Hallow. But when he came to Walhall Woden offered him to rule everything together with him. Hallow quoth:

10 „Þú skalt, Hundingr, · hverjum manni

“Thou shalt, Hunding, for every man make a foot-bath and kindle the fire, bind the hounds, feed the horses, give broth to the swine—before thou mightst go to sleep!”

P₃ Ambótt Sigrúnar gekk um aptan hjá haugi Helga ok sá at Helgi
 2 reið til haugs'ins með marga menn. Ambótt kvað:

Syerun's maid-servant walked by Hallow's barrow at evening, and saw that Hallow rode to the barrow with many men. The maid-servant quoth:

11 „Hvart 'ru þat svik ein · es séa þikkjumk “Either these are only tricks, as I seem to see or are the princes granted leave to go home?”

[Einn þeirra kvað:]

12 „Es-a þat svik ein · es séa þikkisk

“It is not only tricks, as thou seemest to see—nor the Ripping of the Age, although thou behold us;
 although we drive our steeds on by spear-points
 the princes are not granted leave to go home.”

2. aldar rof ‘Ripping of the Age’ | Formulaic. Cf. TODO rjúfask reggin. This is the same root, only zero-grade.

P4 Heim gekk ambótt ok sagði Sigrúnu:

The maid-servant walked home and said to Syerun:

- 13 „Út gakk Sigrún, · frá Sæfa-fjöllum 2 ef þik folks jaðarr · finna lystir;
 upp 's haugr lokinn, · kominn es Hælg!
 4 Dólg-spor dreýra · döglingr bað þik at þú sár-dropa · svæfja skyldir.“

“Go out, O Syerun from the Sevefells, if thou hast lust to find the leader of the troop!
 The barrow is unlocked; Hallow is come!
 The ruler of bloody wounds bade thee that thou his wound-drops shouldst soothe.”

P5 Sigrún gekk í haug'inn til Helga ok kvað:

Syerun walked into Hallow's barrow, and quoth:

- 14 „Nú em'k svá fegin · fundi okkrum
 2 sem át-frækir · Óðins haukar es val vitu, · varmar bráðir,
 4 eða dögglitir · dags-brún séa.“

“Now do I so rejoice at our meeting, like do the ravenous hawks of Weden [RAVENS]
 when they know corpses, warm venison, or, gleaming with dew, they see the day's brow [DAWN].

- 15 Fyrr vil'k kyssa · konung ó·lifðan
 2 an þú blóðugri · brynju kastir;
 hár 's þitt, Helgi, · hélu þrungit, 4 allr es vísi · val-döggl slæginn,
 hendr úr-svalar · Høgna mági;
 6 hvé skal'k þér, buðlungr, · þess bót of vinna?“

Sooner would I kiss the unliving king, than thou the bloody byrnie mightst cast away!
 Thy hair is, O Hallow, with hoarfrost swollen;
 the prince is all with corpse-dew [BLOOD] whipped;
 the hands spray-cold on Hain's in-law [= Hallow].—
 How shall I for thee, O noble, remedy that?”

4 allr es vísi · val-dögg sléinn ‘the prince is all with corpse-dew whipped’ | Cf. Bdr 5, where the dead wallow says something similar.

- [Hēlgi kvað:] 16 „Eín veldr þú, Sigrún · frá Sefafjöllum,
 2 es Hēlgi es · harm-dögg sléinn:
 Grétr þú, gull-varið, · grimum tǫrum,
 4 sól-björt suð-rón, · áðr þú sofa gangir, hvert fella blóðugt · á brjóst grami,
 6 úr-svalt, inn-fjalgt · ekki þrungit.

“Thou alone causest, O Syerun from the Sevefells, that Hallow be with harm-dew whipped.
 Thou weepst—O gold-covered—bitter tears—
 O sun-bright southern lady—before thou go to sleep.
 Each one falls bloody on the prince’s chest,
 spray-cold, stifled, pressed forth by grief.

- 17 Vél skulum drekka · dýrar veigar
 2 þótt misst hafim · munar ok landa!
 Skal engi maðr · angr-ljóð kveða
 4 þótt mér á brjósti · þenjar líti.
 Nú eru brúðir · byrgðar í haugi,
 6 lofða dísir, · hjá oss liðnum!“

Well shall we drink dear draughts, although we have lost both love and land!
 Let no one sing songs of sorrow,
 although he behold the wounds on my chest.
 Now are the brides shut within the barrow,
 the praised one’s dises, next to us, passed-on.”

5–6 brúðir, dísir, oss ‘brides, dises, us’ | Hallow speaks in the plural. “Now has my bride, my goddess, come into the barrow, next to me, who am dead.”

P6 Sigrún bjó séting í hauginum.

Syerun made a bed in the barrow:

- 18 „Hér hefi’k þér, Hēlgi, · hvílu gørva, 2 angr-lausa mjök, · Ylfinga niðr;
 vil’k þér í faðmi, · fylkir, sofna
 4 sem’k loðungi · lifnum mynda’k!“

“Here I’ve for thee, Hallow, made a place of rest, all without sorrow, O kinsman of the Wolvings!
I will in thy arms, O marshal, fall asleep,
like I would with the living man of praise.”

4 sem’k loðungi · lifnum mynda’k! ‘like I would with the living man of praise’ | i.e. “just as I would if you were still alive.”

[Hēlgi kvað:] 19 „Nú kveð’k ęnskis · ęr-vęnt vesa,
2 síð né snimma, · at Sefa-fjǫllum es þú á armi · ǫ-lifðum søfr, 4 hvít, í haugi, · Hęgna dóttir, ok est-u kvik, · in konung-born!“

“Now, I say, there is naught more missing neither late nor soon from the Sevefells, when thou dost sleep on the unliving arm,
O white daughter of Hain—in the barrow,
and thou art alive!—of kingly birth.”

(The night has passed; dawn is breaking, and Hallow speaks. The manuscript does not indicate the change of scene.)

[Hēlgi kvað:] 20 „Mál ’s mér at ríða · roðnar brautir, 2 láta fǫlvan jó · flug-stíg troða;
skal’k fyr vestan · vind-hjálms brúar
4 áðr Sal-gofnir · sigr-þjóð vęki.“

“’Tis time for me to ride the reddening roads, to let my pale steed tread the path of flight [SKY/HEAVEN].
I shall go west of the wind-helm’s bridges [SKY/HEAVEN > CLOUDS?], before Salgovner may awaken the victorious folk.”

1 roðnar ‘reddening’ | From the rising dawn.

P7 Þęir Hęlgi riðu leið sína, en þęr fóru hęim til bójar. Annan aptan
2 lét Sigrún ambótt halda vǫrð á haugi’num. En at dag-setri, es Sigrún kom til haugs’ins, hón kvað:

Hallow and his men rode on their way, but the women journeyed home to the farm. The next evening Syerun made her maid-servant keep watch on the barrow. And at sunset as Syerun came to the barrow, she [= the maid-servant] quoth:

- 21 „Kominn véri nú, · ef koma hygði,
2 Sigmundar burr · frá sölum Óðins;
kveð'k grams þinig · grénask vánir
4 es á ask-limum · ęrnir sitja ok drífr drótt ęll · draum-þinga til.“

“Come were now, if to come he had thought, Syerund's son [= Hallow] from Weden's halls;
hopes fade, I say, of the prince's coming,
when on ashen branches eagles sit,
and all mankind drifts off to dream-Things.

4 es á ask-limum · ęrnir sitja 'when on ashen branches eagles sit' | i.e. “when the eagles roost on yonder trees”. This is a sign of Hallow and his men not coming; if they were, the eagles would be following them and picking at their bodies.

ę drífr ... draum-þinga til 'drifts off to dream-Things' | i.e. “falls asleep”. A fine metaphor.

- 22 Ves ęigi svá ęr · at ęin farir,
2 dís skjöldunga, · draug-húsa til!
Verða ęlgari · allir á nöttum
4 dauðir dólgar, męr, · an of daga ljósa.“

Be not so mad that thou journey alone,
O dise of the Shieldings, to the ghost-houses!
Mightier at night do all become dead fiends, O maiden, than during the bright days!”

- P8 Sigrún varð skamm-líf af harmi ok trega. Þat var trúa í for-2 nesku, at menn véri endr-bornir, en þat er nú kǫlluð kerlingavilla. Helgi ok Sigrún er kallat at véri endr-borin. Hét hann 4 þá Helgi Haddingjaskati en hon Kára Hálfðanar dóttir, svá sem kveðit er í Kárukjóðum, ok var hon val-kyrja.

Syerun became short-lived for pain and grief. It was the belief in olden times that men were born again, but that is now called an old wives' tale. Of Hallow and Syerun it is said that they were born again. He was then called Hallow Hardingskate and she Cheer Halfdanesdaughter, as is told in the Leeds of Cheer, and she was a walkirrie.

Griper was called the son of Ilime, Hardise’s brother. He ruled lands and was wisest of all men, and forthwise. Siward rode alone and came to Griper’s hall.
 Siward was easily recognized. He approached a man for speech outside of the hall; he was named Goater. Then Siward greeted him with a speech, and asks:

Speeches of Rein

(Reginsmól)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C10th (o.666)–early C11th (o.259)

Meter: Leeds-meter, Ancient-words-law

Introduction

The Speeches of Rein (Reg) are preserved in R, where they follow Grípand and are introduced with a large initial and a near-illegible title. The text clearly serves as the basis for Vǫls 14–15 and 17–18 (for ch. 16 see Gríp), where sts. 1–2, 6 and 18 are cited.

In R, Reg is the first of a group of three very similar “poems” in an unbroken narrative sequence which also includes Fáfn and Sigrdr, for which reason the whole group will be shortly discussed here.

The existence of these three “poems”—indeed their very names—is entirely a product of later philology, and to paraphrase Bellows, it is doubtful whether it is logically sound. Although Fáfn is introduced by a title and large initial and thus separated from Reg, the distinction between Fáfn and Sigrdr is entirely arbitrary, and the two are continuous in the ms. More importantly, none of the three poems is a unit, but throughout them one finds the same amalgamation of narrative prose and stanzas in Ancient-words-law and Leeds-meter. It may be noted that the style of the Leeds-meter stanzas is very similar throughout, and this may also be the case for the Ancient-words-law stanzas, so that we appear to be dealing with at least two long separate cycles treating the same overlapping story. A particularly transparent example of overlap between sources is the speech of the tits in Fáfn (TODO: stanza numbers), where there is a perfect logical progression of thought if one only reads the stanzas in one meter, but which is lost if one reads both.

Since they are not three distinct poems (unlike say Vǫsp, Grm and Vafþn), the whole group should be understood as a continuous narrative saw or prosimetrum, where the redactor tells the story primarily through prose, with the stanzas are reserved for direct speech. It is not improbable that this reflects some convention of oral storytelling. In any case, this division into three poems has been retained in the present edition for reasons of convention and accessibility, but the reader is strongly encouraged to read the entire sequence in order.

The Speeches of Rein

- 1 Pr Sigurðr gekk til stóðs Hjálp-reks ok kaus sér af hest einn er 2 Grani var kallaðr síðan. Þá var kominn Reginn til Hjálp-reks, sonr Hreið-mars. Hann var hverjum manni hagari ok dvergr of 4 vöxt. Hann var vitr, grimmr ok fjöl-kunnigr. Reginn veitti Sigurði fóstr ok kennslu ok elskaði hann mjök. Hann sagði Sigurði 6 frá for-ellri sínu ok þeim at-burðum at Óðinn ok Hónir ok Loki höfðu komit til And-vara-fors; í þeim forsi var fjöldi fiska. Einn 8 dvergr hét And-vari; hann var löngum í forsinum í geddu líki ok fekk sér þar matar. „Otr hét bróðir várr,“ kvað Reginn, „er 10 oft fór í forsin í otrs líki. Hann hafði tekit einn lax ok sat á ár-bakknum ok át blundandi. Loki laust hann með steini til bana.
 12 Þóttust ésir mjök heppnir verit hafa ok flógu belg af otrinum.
 Þat sama kveld sóttu þeir gisting til Hreið-mars ok sýndu veiði 14 sína. Þá tóku vér þá höndum ok lögðum þeim fjör-lausn at fylla otr-belginn með gulli ok hylja útan ok með rauðu gulli. Þá sendu 16 þeir Loka at afla gullsins. Hann kom til Ránar ok fekk net hen-nar ok fór þá til And-vara-fors ok kastaði netinu fyr gedduna en 18 hon hljóp í netit. Þá mælti Loki:

Siward went to Helpric's stable and thereof chose for himself one horse which was thenceforth called Grane. Then Rein, son of Rethmar, was come to Helpric. He was craftier than every man and a dwarf in stature; he was clever, cruel and many-cunning. Rein granted Siward fosterage and teaching, and loved him much. He told Siward about his parentage, and about the events that Weden, Heener and Lock had come to Andwaresforce; in that force was a multitude of fish. One dwarf was called Andware; he was for a long time in the force in the likeness of a pike and got his food there. "Otter was our brother called," said Rein, "who often went forth in the force in the likeness of an otter. He had taken a salmon and sat on the riverbank and ate it with his eyes closed. Lock beat him with a stone to his death. The Eese thought themselves to have been very lucky and flayed the skin from the otter. The same evening they sought lodgings at Rethmar's house, and showed their catch. Then we bound them and gave them as a life-ransom to fill the otter-skin with gold and cover even the outside with red gold. Then they sent Lock to procure the gold. He came to Ran and got her net, and then journeyed to Andwaresforce and threw the net in front of the pike, and it jumped into the net. Then spoke Lock:

1 „Hvat 's þat fiska · es rinn flóði í;
2 kann-at sér við víti varask?
Höfuð þitt · leys-tu hēlju ór;
4 finn mér lindar loga!“
“What kind of fish is this that runs in the flood?
It cannot ward itself from harm.
Redeem thy head out of Hell;
find me the linden's flame [GOLD]!”

2 „And-vari ek hēiti, · Óinn hét minn faðir,
2 margan hēfi'k fors of farit.
Aumlig norn · skóp oss í ár-daga
4 at ek skylda í vatni vaða.“
“Andware I am called; Owen was called my father;
through many a force have I fared.
A wretched norn shaped for us in days of yore,
that I should in the water wade.”

3 „Seg-ðu þat, And-vari, (kvað Loki) ef þú ęiga vill
2 lif í lýða solum:
Hver gjöld · fāa gumna synir
4 ef hoggvask orðum á?“ “Tell this, Andware—quoth Lock—if thou wilt own life in the halls of men:
Which recompense do the sons of men get,
if they hew at each other with words?”

4 „Ofr-gjöld · fāa gumna synir
2 þeir's Vað-gēlmi vaða;
ó-saðra orða · hver's á annan lýgr,
4 of lęngi lęiða limar.“ “Great recompense do the sons of men get,
those who in Wadyelmer wade.
By the branches of untrue words is each who lies to another long followed.⁸³”

⁸³ Watery torment in the afterlife for oath-breakers and liars is well attested in the Germanic sources. See note to Vsp 39 for discussion.

- P2 Loki sá allt gull þat er And-vari átti. En er hann hafði fram reitt
 2 gullit, þá hafði hann eftir einn hring ok tók Loki þann af hánum.
 Dvergrinn gekk inn í steininn ok mælti:

Lock saw all the gold which Andware owned. But when he had readied all the gold, then he still had one ring, and Lock took it from him. The dwarf went into the stone and spoke:

- 5 „Þat skal gull · es Gustr átti
 2 bróðrum tvæim · at bana verða ok qðlingum · áttá at rógi;
 4 mun míns féar · mann-gi njóta.“

“That gold which Gust owned shall for two brothers become the bane, and for eight nobles the [cause of] strife;
 of my wealth will no man benefit.”

- P3 Ésir reiddu Hreið-mari féit ok tráðu upp otr-belginn ok reistu á 2 fótr; þá skyldu ésirnir hlaða upp gullinu ok hylja. En er þat var gørt gekk Hreið-marr framm ok sá eitt grana-hár ok bað hylja.
 4 Þá dró Óðinn framm hringinn And-vara-naut ok hulði hárit.

The Eese readied the wealth for Rethmar and stuffed the otter-skin and raised it on its feet. Then the Eese should fill it up with gold and cover it. But when that was done Rethmar stepped forth, and saw a single whisker-strand and bade it be covered. Then Weden drew forth the ring Andwaresgift and covered the strand.

- 6 „Gull ’s þér nú reitt (kvað Loki) en þú gjöld hefir 2 mikil míns hofuðs;
 syni þínum · verðr-a sēla sköpuð;
 4 þat verðr ykkarr bægga bani!“

“The gold is now readied for thee—quoth Lock—and thou hast the great payment for my head.
 For thy son no welfare will be made;
 it will be the bane of you both!”

Hreiðmarr sagði:

- 7 „Gjafar þú gaft— · gaft-at óst-gjafar,
2 gaft-at af heilum hug!
Fjörvi yðru · skylduð ér firrðir vesa
4 ef vissu’k þat fár fyrir.“

“Thou gavest a gift—gavest not a gift of love;
gavest not out of true heart!
From your lives would ye be far taken,
if I had known that danger before!”

- 8 „Enn es verra, · þat vita þikkjumk,

4 es þat ’s til hatrs hugat.“
“TODO.”

- 9 „Rauðu gulli (kvað Hreiðmarr) hygg ek mik ráða munu 2 svá lengi sem ek lifi;
hót þín · hrēðumk ekki lyf
4 ok haldið heim héðan!“

“The red gold—quoth Rethmar—I think that I will rule so long as I live.
Thy threats I fear not at all (TODO)
and hold home from hence!”

- P4 Fáfñir ok Reginn kröfðu Hreið-mar nið-gjalda eptir Otr, bróður 2 sinn. Hann kvað nei við. En Fáfñir lagði sverði Hreið-mar, föður sinn, sofanda. Hreið-marr kallaði á dótr sínar:

Fathomer and Rein demanded from Rethmar the kin-payment after Otter, their brother. He said no to it. But Fathomer ran the sword through Reth-mar, his father, sleeping. Rethmar called on his daughters:

- 10 „Lygñ-heiðr ok Lofn-heiðr, · vitið mínu lífi farit!
2 Mart ’s þat’s þorð þéar!“
Lyngheiðr svaraði: „Fö mun systir, · þótt föður missi,
4 hefna hlýra harms!“

“O Lingheath and Lovenheath, witness my life destroyed!
Much does need compel!”
“Few a sister, though she miss her father, will avenge her brother’s harm!”

2. Mart 's þat's þorþ þéar! 'Much does need compel!' | Or "Much is required by necessity". Rethmar refers to the duty of his daughters to avenge him, even by killing their own brother.

- 11 „Al þú þó dóttur, (kvað Hreiðmarr) dís úlf-huguð, 2 ef þú getr-at son · við siklingi;
 fà þú mey manni · megin-þarfar,
 4 þá mun þeirar sonr · þíns harms vreaka.“

“Beget yet a daughter—quoth Rethmar—a wolf-minded lady,
 if thou gettest no son by the prince.
 Wed that maiden to a man of great need,
 then her son will avenge thy harm!⁸⁴”

3 manni · megin-þarfar | mann imeginþarfar R

⁸⁴Rethmar's last words foretell the life of Siward, whose mother, Hardise, would then be Lingheath's daughter.

- P5 Þá dó Hreið-marr, en Fáfñir tók gullit allt. Þá beiddisk Reginn
 2 at hafa fǫður-arf sinn, en Fáfñir galt þar nei við. Þá leitaði
 Reginn ráða við Lyng-heiði, systur sína, hvernig hann skyldi
 4 heimta fǫður-arf sinn. Hon kvað:

Then Rethmar died and Fathomer took all the gold. Then Rein begged to have his father's inheritance, but Fathomer gave back a no. Then Rein sought counsel from Lingheath, his sister, over how he should take his father's inheritance. She quoth:

- 12 „Brúðar kvęðja · skalt blíð-liga 2 arfs ok óðra hugar;
 es-a þat hóft · at þú hjörvi skylir
 4 kvęðja Fáfni fęar!“

“From the bride shalt thou blithely call for heritance and nobler thoughts;
 it is not fitting that thou shouldst by sword call for Fathomer's wealth!”

1 Brúðar 'From the bride' | "From me." It seems that Lingheath here offers Rein her part of the inheritance.

- P6 Þessa hluti sagði Reginn Sigurði. Einn dag, er hann kom til 2 húsa Regins, var hánun vel fagnat. Reginn kvað:

These things Rein told Siward. One day when he came to Rein's house he was greeted heartily. Rein quoth:

- 13 „Kominn 's hingat · konr Sig-mundar, 2 seggj inn snar-ráði, · til sala várra;
mód hefir meira · an maðr gamall,
4 ok es mér fangs vón · at frekum ulfi.

“Hither is come the son of Syemund [= Siward],
the youth of quick counsel to our halls!
He has greater heart than an old man,
and I expect a catch from the hungry wolf.

- 14 Ek mun fœða · folk-djarfan gram;
2 nú 's yngva konr · með oss kominn;
sjá mun ræsir · rikstr und sólu,
4 þrymr um ǫll lönd · ør·løg-símu.“

I will raise the troop-bold prince;
now the son of the king is come amidst us!
This ruler will become mightiest under the sun;
he fastens through all lands his orlay-strands!”

4 þrymr ... ør·løg-símu 'he fastens ... orlay-strands' | “His fate is being fixed through all lands.”
Cf. the first four sts. of HHund I.

- P7 Sigurðr var þá jafnan með Regin ok sagði hann Sigurði at Fáfni 2 lá á Gnita-heiði ok var í orms líki. Hann átti ógis-hjalm er ǫll kvikvendi hréddusk við. Reginn gerði Sigurði sverð er Gramr 4 hét. Þat var svá hvasst at hann brá því ofan í Rín ok lét reka ullar-lagð fyr straumi ok tók í sundr lagðinn sem vatnit. Því sverði
6 klauf Sigurðr í sundr steðja Regins. Eptir þat eggjaði Reginn Sigurð at vega Fáfni. Hann sagði:

Thereafter Siward was always with Rein, and he told Siward that Fathomer lay on the Gnit-heath and was in a Wyrms likeness; he owned the helm of awe by which all living things were frightened. Rein made Siward the sword called Gram; it was so sharp that he plunged it down into the Rhine, and let a lock of wool float down the stream, and it split the lock like it did the water. With that sword Siward split asunder the anvil of Rein; after that Rein urged Siward to slay Fathomer. He said:

- 15 „Hátt munu hléja · Hundings synir

- 2 þeir's Ey-lima · aldrs synjuðu,
 ef meirr tiggja · munar at sókja 4 hringa rauða · an hefnd fǫður.“

 a great storm, and tacked the ships before a group of crags. A lone man stood “Nicker they called me when young Walsing gladdened Highen and had conquered.

Now mayst thou call me churl-from-the-crag,
Feng or Fillner—I wish to beg passage.”

¹ Hugin gladdi ‘gladdened Highen’ | A variant of the extremely common motif “feed the raven”, i.e., by the corpses of slain foes on the battlefield.

² Volsungr ungi ‘young Walsing’ | Siward’s grandfather, the founder of the Walsing dynasty.

P9 Þeir viku at landi, ok gekk karl á skip, ok léðði þá veðrit.

4 hamalt fylkja ‘draw up the flying wedge’ | This formation, known as the swine-array (svínfylking), was favoured by the Germanic peoples. It is mentioned already in Tacitus Germania ch. 6: acies per cuneos componitur ‘their line of battle is drawn up in a wedge-like formation’. In the legendary saws it has a particular association with Weden; according AncKings it was taught by Weden to the Danish king Harold Hildtooth, who went on to win great victories with it. At last his rival, the Swedish king Siward Ring, was also taught it, and went on to slay Harold at the battle of the Browolds (Brávellir). Cf. AncKings 8: Brúni segir: „Svá list mér sem Hringr muni biúinn at berjask ok hans lið. Hann hefir undarlíga fylkt. Hann hefir svín-fylkt þer sínum, ok mun eigi gott at berjask við hann.“ Þá segir Haraldr konungr: „Hverr mun Hringi hafa kennt hamalt at fylkja? Ek hugða engan kunna nema mik ok Óðin, eða mun Óðinn vilja skjöplast í sigr-gjöfinni við mik? [...]“ ‘Brown says: “It seems to me that Ring is ready to fight, and his troop too. He has drawn up them in a wondrous way; he has drawn up his host in the swine-shape, and it will not be good to fight against him. Then says king Harold: “Who will have taught Ring to draw up the flying wedge? I thought noone knew it save for me and Weden; or will Weden wish to fail in his giving me victory? [...]”’

4 Hugin gladdi 'has gladdened Highen' | i.e. "has fed the raven (with corpses)."

Pii Heim fór Sigurðr til Hjálpreks. Þá eggjaði Reginn Sigurð til at 2 vega Fáfni. Sigurðr ok Reginn fóru upp á Gnitaeiði ok hittu þar slóð Fáfnis þá er hann skreið til vats. Þar gørði Sigurðr grǫf 4 mikla á veginum ok gekk Sigurðr þar í. En er Fáfni skreið af gullinu blés hann eitri ok hraut þat fyr ofan hǫfuð Sigurði. En 6 er Fáfni skreið yfir grǫfina þá lagði Sigurðr hann með sverði til hjarta. Fáfni hristi sik ok barði hǫfði ok sporði. Sigurðr hljóp 8 ór grǫfinni ok sá þá hvárr annan. Fáfni kvað:

Siward journeyed home to Helpric. Then Rein incited Siward to smite Fathomer. Siward and Rein journeyed up on the Gnit-heath and found there Siward's trail as he was slithering to water. There Siward made a great trench in the way, and Siward went down into it. And when Fathomer slithered off the gold he blew venom, and it flew over Siward's head. But when Fathomer slithered over the trench, then Siward ran him through with the sword to the heart. Fathomer shook himself and struck his head and spurned. Siward leapt out of the trench, and then each of them saw the other. Fathomer quoth:

Introduction

The Speeches of Fathomer (Fáfn) are only preserved in R, where it has the title Frá dauða Fáfnis ‘From the death of Fathomer’. It directly continues the narrative of Reg, and is, like that poem, a prosimetrum.

The Speeches of Fathomer

1 „Sveinn ok sveinn! · Hverjum est sveini of borinn?
2 Hverra est manna mögr?
es þú á Fáfni rautt · þinn hinn frána mēki;
4 stöndumk til hjarta hjörri!“

“O swain and swain! To which swain art thou born;
of which men art thou the son?
When on Fathomer thou hast reddened this thy gleaming blade;
the sword stands unto my heart!”

PI Sigurðr dulði nafns síns fyr því at þat var trúa þeira í forneskju
2 at orð feigs manns mētti mikit ef hann þolvaði óvin sínum með nafni. Hann kvað:

Siward hid his name, for it was belief of those in ancient times that a fey man’s word could do much if he cursed his foe by his name. He quoth:

- 2 „Göfugt dýr ek heiti · en ek gengit hef’k
 2 hinn móður-lausi mögr, fǫður ek á’kk-a · sem fira synir,
 4 geng ek ǫinn saman.“

“Noble Deer am I called, and I have gone
 as the motherless lad.
 A father I have not like the sons of men;
 I go alone.”

- 3 „Veitst, ef fǫður né átt-at · sem fira synir,
 2 af hverju vastu undri alinn?
 [...]“

“Knowest thou, if thou hast no father like the sons of men, by which wonder thou wast begotten?”

- 4 „Étterni mitt · kveð’k þér ó-kunnigt vesa
 2 ok mik sjalfan hit sama:
 Sigurður ek heiti · Sigmundur hét minn faðir
 4 es hef’k þik vopnum vegit.“

“My lineage, I say, is unknown to thee, and my self the same.⁸⁶
 Siward am I called—Syemund was called my father—who with weapons have smitten thee.”

⁸⁶The sense is that Fathomer would not recognize Siward’s lineage (i.e. his father) or name, since he is an orphan who up until this point has not accomplished much. He is not saying that he is lineage is unknown even to himself, since sjalfan mik ‘my self’ is accusative, not dative.

- 5 „Hverr þik hvatti, · hví hvætjask lést,
 2 mínu fjörvi at fara?
 Hinn frán-eygi sveinn, · þú áttir fǫður bitran,
 4 á-bornu skjór á skeið.“

“Who goaded thee; why didst thou let thee be goaded my life for to destroy?
 O gleaming-eyed swain, thou hadst a sharp father;
 inborn traits show quickly!”

4 á-bornu skjór á skeið. ‘inborn traits show quickly’ | The original is cryptic. á skeið means roughly ‘rapidly, quickly’, whence the expression ríða á skeið ‘CV: to ride at full speed’, but the other words are uncertain. La Farge and Tucker (1992) read ‘your innate qualities show quickly’, suggesting two unattested words: an adjective áborinn* ‘innate, inborn’ and a verb skjóa* ‘to show’. Yet the lack of i-umlaut in the supposed 3rd sg. pres. ind. skjór is difficult. We would expect skýr*, as in skjóta ‘to shoot’, with 2nd/3rd sg. pres. ind. skýtr. A solution here would be reading a 2nd sg. pres. subj. skjóir, with a vowel TODO

- 6 „Hugr mik hvatti, · hęndr mér full-týðu
 2 ok minn inn hvassi hjęrr;
 fār es hvatr · es hrōðask tękr
 4 ef i barn-esku es blauðr.“

“My heart goaded me; my hands availed me,
 and this my sharp sword.

Few a man is bold when he takes to grow,
 if he in youth is soft.”

- 7 „Veit’k, ef þú vaxa nęðir · fyr þinna vina brjósti,
 2 séi-t maðr þik vręðan vega;
 nú ert haptr · ok hęr-numinn,
 4 ę kveða bandingja bifask.“

“I know that if thou hadst managed to grow up at the breasts of thy friends, no man would see thee wrathfully fight.

Now art thou a captive and war-taken;
 the bounding is ever said to tremble.”

- 8 „Því bregðr þú nú mér, Fáfñir, · at til fjarri sjá’k 2 mínun fęðr-munum,
 ęigi em’k haptr · þótt vęra hęr-numi;
 4 þú fanntr, at ek lauss lifi!“

“For this thou now upbraidest me, Fathomer, that I be too far from my fathers’ love.

I am no captive, though I be war-taken;
 thou hast found that I live loose!”

- 9 „Hęipt-yrðri ęin · tęlr þú þér i hví-veřna
 2 en ek þér satt ęitt segi’k:
 It gjalla gull · ok it glóð-rauða fę,
 4 þér verða þęir baugar at bana!“

“With hateful words alone dost thou answer anything, but I tell thee truth alone:

The clanging gold and the glowing red wealth—
those bighs will be thy bane!”

- 10 „Féi ráða · skal fyrða hvern
2 é til ins çina dags
 því-at çinu sinni · skal alda hvern
4 fara til hēljār heðan.“

“Rule his wealth shall every man, ever, until the one day;
for at one time shall every man
journey hence to Hell.”

2 ins çina dags ‘the one day’ | i.e. his predetermined day of death. Siward dismisses the curse; he must die regardless of whether he takes the gold or not, and it is better to die wealthy and renowned than wretched and unknown.

- 11 „Norna dóm · munt fyr neşjum hafa 2 ok ó-svinns apa;
 í vatni þú drukknar · ef í vindi rēr;
4 allt es feigs forað.“

“The doom of the Norns shalt thou have before the headlands, and that of an unwise ape.
In water wilt thou drown if thou row in wind;
everything is the pit of the fey.”⁸⁷

1 fyr neşjum ‘before the headlands’ | i.e. ‘close at hand, imminent’. An established metaphor for imminent death, cf. the last st. of Sont (TODO).

⁸⁷The man fated to die will find his death no matter where he turns.

- 12 „Seg mér, Fáfñir, · alls þik fróðan kveða
2 ok vël mart vita:
 Hverjar ’ru þér nornir · es nauð-gonglar ’ru
4 ok kjósa móðr frá moggum?“

“Tell me, Fathomer, as they call thee wise,
and knowing well enough:
Who are the Norns that attend in need,
and choose mothers from their lads?”

3 es nauð-gonglar ’ru ‘attend in need’ | lit. ‘are attendant in need’, i.e. help ailing mothers during childbirth. Cf. Sigrdr 9.

- 13 „Sundr-bornar mjök · hygg at nornir sé, 2 ęigu-t þęr ęt saman;
 sumar ’ru ős-kunngar, · sumar alf-kunngar,
 4 sumar dōtr Dvalins.“

“Of most sundry birth I judge the norns to be,
 they come not from a common lineage:
 some are Os-born, some Elf-born,
 some are the daughters of Dwoollen [DWARFESSES].”

- 14 „Sęg mér þat, Fáfñir, · alls þik fróðan kveða 2 ok vęl margt vita, hvę sá holmr hęitir · es blanda hjęr-lęgi
 4 Surtr ok ęsir saman.“

“Tell me this, Fathomer, as they call thee wise,
 and knowing well enough:
 What is the islet called, where Surt and the Eese blend sword-water [BLOOD] together?”

- 15 „Ó-skópñir hęitir · en þar ęll skulu
 2 gęirum lęika gōð;
 Bil-ręst brotnar · es á brott fara
 4 ok svima í móðu marir.“

“Unshopner it is called, and there shall all the Gods play with spears [MAKE WAR]; Bilrest shatters when they go away,
 and the steeds swim in the sea.”

Fathomer continues speaking, but there is probably something missing here, since the transition is abrupt. Between its paraphrases of st. 15 and of st. 16, N has Ok enn męlti Fáfñir: „Reginn bróðir minn vęldr mínum dauða, ok þat blęgir mik, er hann vęldr ok þínum dauða, ok ferr þá, sem hann vildi.“ ‘And further spoke Fathomer: “My brother Rein causes my death, and it gladdens me that he also causes thy death, and then it will go like he has willed.”’, which may perhaps be a paraphrase of a lost st.

- 16 „Ógis hjalm · bar’k of alda sonum
 2 meðan of męñjum lá’k;

4 ¹inn rammari · hugðumk ²llum vesa, fann'k-a'k marga ³mögu.“

“The helmet of terror I carried over the sons of men while on the neckrings I lay;
stronger than all I thought me alone to be;
I did not find many lads.”

17 „¹Ögis hjalmr · bergr ²inu-gi hvar's skulu ³reiðir vega;
 þá þat ⁴finnr · es með ⁵fléirum kómr
 at ⁶engi es ⁷inna hvatastr.“

“The helmet of terror saves no man, wherever wroth ones should fight;
this he then finds, when among the many he comes,
that none is the boldest of all.”

18 „¹Eitri ek fnésta · es á ²arfi lá'k ³miklum ⁴míns föður.“

“Venom I snorted while I lay on the great inheritance of my father.”

19 „¹Inn rammi ormr, · þú ²gørðir frés mikla ok gatst ³harðan hug;
 ⁴heipt at meiri · verðr ⁵holða sonum at þann ⁶hjalm ⁷hafi.“

“O mighty wyrm, thou madest a great snort, and didst win a hard heart;
greater hatred arises for the sons of men,
who might have that helm.”

20 „¹Réð'k þér nú, Sigurðr, · en þú ²ráð nemir ok ríð ³heim ⁴heðan;
 it ⁵gjalla gull · ok it ⁶glóð-rauða fé,
 þér verða þeir ⁷baugar at ⁸bana!“

“I counsel thee now, Siward—and thou oughtst to take the counsel, and ride home hence:
The clanging gold and the glowing red wealth—
those highs will be thy bane!”

- 21 „Ráð 's þér ráðit · en ek ráða mun
 2 til þess gulls es í lyngvi liggr, en þú, Fáfni, ligg · í fjör-brotum
 4 þar's þik Hæl hafi!“
 “Thy counsel has been counseled—but I will ride to the gold which in the heather lies;
 but thou, Fathomer, do lie in the blood-tracks,
 where Hell may have thee!”

4 þar's þik Hæl hafi 'where Hell may have thee' | Formulaic. TODO.

- 22 „Reginn mik réð, · hann þik ráða mun,
 2 hann mun okkr verða bõðum at bana;
 fjör sitt láta · hygg at Fáfni myndi;
 4 þitt varð nú meira megin.“
 “Rein fooled me; he will fool thee;
 he will become the bane of us both!
 Let up his life I think that Fathomer will—thy strength was now the greater.”

- P2 Reginn var á brott horfinn meðan Sigurðr vaf Fáfni ok kom þá
 2 aþr er Sigurðr strauk blóð af sverðinu. Reginn kvað:
 Rein had disappeared while Siward smote Fathomer, and then came back as Siward wiped the blood off the sword. Rein quoth:

- 23 „Heill þú nú, Sigurðr, · nú hefir sigr vegit
 2 ok Fáfni of farit;
 manna þeira · es mold troða
 4 þik kveð'k ò-blauðastan alinn.“
 “Hail thee now, Siward—now thou hast won victory and Fathomer destroyed!
 Of those men who tread on the earth
 I declare thee unsoftest begotten.”

- 24 „Þat 's ò-víst at vita · þá's komum allir saman,
 2 sig-tíva synir,
 hvefr ò-blauðastr es alinn;
 4 margr es sá hvatr · es hjör né rýðr
 annars brjóstum i.“

“’Tis unsure to know, when we all come together, sons of the victory-Tews [MEN],
 who is unsoftest begotten.
 Many a man is bold who reddens no sword in another’s chest.”

- 25 „Glaðr ert nú, Sigurðr, · ok gagni feginn
 2 es þú þerrir Gram á grasi;
 bróður minn · hefir þú benjaðan
 4 ok veld ek þó sjalfr sumu.“

[Rein quoth:]

“Glad art thou now Siward, and in gain rejoicing when thou driest Gram on the grass.
 My brother hast thou deathly wounded, and yet I myself played some part.”

- 26 „Þú því rétt · es ek ríða skyldak
 2 heilög fjöll hinnig;
 féi ok fjörvi · réði sá inn fráni ormr
 4 nema þú frýðir mér hvats hugar.“

“Thou didst counsel that I should ride
 the holy fells hither.
 Wealth and life would the gleaming Wyrms rule, unless thou didst brave my bold heart.”

- 27 Þá gekk Reginn at Fáfni ok skar hjarta ór hánnum með sverði er Riðill heitir ok þá drakk hann blóð ór undinni eptir.

Then Siward walked up to Fathomer and cut the heart out of him with the sword called Riddle, and then he drank blood from the wound afterwards.

- 28 „Sit-tu nú, Sigurðr, · en ek mun sofa ganga
 2 ok halt Fáfnis hjarta við funa!
 Eisköld ek vil · etin láta
 4 eptir þenna dreypa drykk.“

[Rein quoth:]

“Sit thou now, Siward—but I will go to sleep—and hold Fathomer’s heart by the fire!
 The heart-strings I wish to eat,
 after this drink of blood.”

³ Eisköld 'heart-strings' | An obscure poetic synonym for heart, it is here in the plural. The translation "heart-strings" is probably inaccurate.

- 29 „Fjarri þú gekkt · meðan ek á Fáfni rauð’k ² minn inn hvassa hjör;
 afli mínu · átta’k við orms megin
⁴ meðan þú í lyngvi látt.“

“Far didst thou go while I on Fathomer reddened this my sharp sword.
 My strength I held against the Wýrm’s might,
 while thou in the heather layst.”

- 30 „Lengi liggja · létir þú þann lyngvi í, ² inn aldna jötun,
 ef þú sverðs né nytir, · þess es ek sjalfr gørða,
⁴ ok þíns ins hvassa hjørs.“

[Rein quoth:]

“Lie long in the heather wouldst thou have let this ancient ettin [me], if the blade thou hadst not used, which I myself made,
 and this thy sharp sword.”

- 31 „Hugr es bættri · en sé hjørs megin ² hvar’s vręiðir skulu vega, því at hvatan mann · ek sé harð-liga vega
⁴ með slévu sverði sigr.

“Heart is better than might of sword may be wherever worth men should fight, for a bold man I see fighting a hard victory with sluggish sword.

- 32 Hvötum ’s bættra · en sé ó·hvötum ² í hildi-lęik hafask
 glöðum es betra · en sé glúpnanda
⁴ hvat sem at hęndi kęmr.“

For the bold it is better than it may be for the unbold, in battle-play to hold themselves;
 for the glad it is better than for the gloomy, whatever comes to their hands.”

- P₃ Sigurðr tók Fáfnis hjarta ok steikði á teini. Er hann hugði at full-2 steikt vëri ok freyddi sveitinn ór hjartanu þá tók hann á fingri sínúm ok skynjaði hvárt full-steikt vëri. Hann brann ok brá fin-4 grinum í munn sér. En er hjart-blóð Fáfnis kom á tungu hánúm ok skildi hann fugls rødd. Hann heyrði at iðður kløkuðu á hris-6 inum. Igðan kvað:

Siward took Fathomer's heart and roasted it on a stick. But when he thought that it was fully roasted and the blood frothed out of the heart then he touched it with his finger to see whether it was fully roasted. He burned himself and threw his finger in his mouth. But when the heart blood of Fathomer came on his tongue and he understood the speech of birds. He heard that some tits were chirping in the brushes. The tit quoth:

- 33 „Þar sitr Sigurðr · sveita stokkinn,
 2 Fáfnis hjarta · við funa steikir;
 spakr þótti mér · spillir bauga
 4 ef hann fjor-sega · fránan éti.“

“There sits Siward spattered by blood,
 Fathomer's heart by the fire he roasts.
 Wise would seem me the spiller of rings
 if he the gleaming life-muscle ate.”

- 34 „Þar liggr Reginn, · rēðr umb við sik, 2 vill tēla mög · þann's trúir hönúm;
 berr af vrēiði · vrøng orð saman,
 4 vill bølva smiðr · bróður hefna.“

“There lies Rein, counsels with himself, wants to betray the lad who trusts in him.
 From wrath he carries ill words together;
 the smith of bales wants to avenge his brother.”

- 35 „Høfði skemmra · láti hann inn hára þul
 2 fara til hełjar heðan!
 Qllu gulli · þá kná hann çinn ráða,
 4 fjøłð, því's und Fáfni lá.“

“Shorter by a head he should make the hoary thyle
 journey hence to Hell!
 All the gold he can then wield alone:

the trove which under Fathomer lay.”

“The Shapes will not be so strong that Rein should

P4 Sigurðr hjó höfuð af Regin ok þá át hann Fáfnis hjarta ok drakk
 2 blóð þeira beggja, Regins ok Fáfnis. Þá heyrði Sigurðr hvað igður mæltu:

Siward struck the head off Rein and then he ate Fathomer’s heart and drank the blood of them both, Rein and Fathomer. Then Siward heard what the tits spoke:

42 „Bitt þú, Sigurðr, · bauga rauða;
 2 es-a konung-ligt · kvíða mǫrgu.

- 4 Mey v^eit'k çina, · myklu f^egrsta,

“Bind, O Siward, the red highs;

“Toward Yivick lie green highways:
 the Shapes show [the way] forth for wandering exiles.
 There the wealthy king has begotten a daughter;
 her wilt thou, Siward, for a bride-fee buy!”

- 44 „Salr 's á höu · Hindar-fjalli,

 Yggr stakk þ^orni— · aðra f^ellði

“I know on the fell a war-wight sleeping and over her licks the linden's harm [FIRE].
 Ug has stung her with a thorn; the flax-Yevn [LADY] felled the other men who wished to have her.”

- 46 „Knátt, mogr, séa · mey und hjalmi

“Thou canst, lad, see a maiden beneath a helmet,

she who from the fray rode on Wingshorner.
 One may not break Syedrive's sleep,
 O kinsman of the Shieldings, before the Shapes of the Norns!"

P₅ Sigurðr reið eptir slóð Fáfnis til bólis hans ok fann þat opit ok 2 hurðir af járn ok gétu; af járn vóru ok allir timbr-stokkar í húsinu en grafit í jörð niðr. Þar fann Sigurðr stór-mikit gull ok 4 fylldi þar tvær kistur. Þar tók hann ógis-hjálms ok gull-brynju ok sverðit Hrotta ok marga dýr-gripi ok klyfjaði þar með Grana. En 6 hestrinn vildi eigi fram ganga fyrr en Sigurðr steig á bak hönnum.

Siward rode along Fathomer's trail to his dwelling and found it open and doors and rabbets of iron. Of iron were also all the timber trunks in the house, and dug down into the earth. There Siward found very much gold and filled there two chests. Then he took the helmet of terror and a golden byrnie and the sword Rotte and many precious things and loaded Grane with them. But the horse did not want to go forth before Siward mounted his back.

Introduction

The Speeches of Syedrive (Sigrdr) are found in R, where they directly continue the narrative told in Reg and Fáfn. In the manuscript there is no marker of any kind, not even an initial, separating the poem from Fáfn; the title is editorial.

Stanzas in VǫlsS

A number of stanzas are quoted in N, the main ms. of VǫlsS. VǫlsS ch. 21 begins:

Brynhildr segir, at tveir konungar þorðust. Hét annarr Hjalmgunnarr; hann var gamall ok hinn mesti hermaðr, ok hafði Óðinn bonum sigr heitit, en annarr Agnarr eða Auða bróðir. „Ek fellda Hjalmgunnarr í orrostu, en Óðinn stakk mik svefn-þorni í hefnd þess ok kvað mik aldri síðan skyldu sigr hafa ok kvað mik giptast skulu. En ek strengða þess heit þar í mót at giptast engum þeim, er bræðast kynni.“ Sigurðr mælti: „Kenn oss ráð til stórra hluta.“ Hun svarar: „Þér munuð betr kunna, en með þökkum vil ek kenna yðr, ef þat er nokkut, er vér kunnum, þat er yðr mætti líka, í ránum eða qðrum blutum, er liggja til hvers hlutar, ok drekkum bæði saman, ok gefi goðin okkr góðan dag, at þér verði nýr ok fregð at mínum vitrleik, ok þú munir eptir þat, er vit réðum.“ Brynhildr fyllði eitt ker ok fæðði Sigurði ok mælti:

‘Byrnhild tells that two kings fought each other. The one was called Helmguther; he was old and the greatest warrior, and Weden had promised him victory, but the other was called Ayner or Eade’s brother. “I felled Helmguth in battle, but Weden stung me with a sleeping-thorn as revenge for that, and said that I should never thenceforth have victory and said that I must marry. But in response I made the vow to marry no man who could be frightened." Siward spoke: "Teach us counsels regarding great things." She answers: "Ye will know better, but with thanks will I teach you, if there be anything which we know that may please you, of runes or other things of importance; and let us both drink together, and may the gods give us two a good day, that thou mayst have use and happiness from my wisdom and that thou mayst afterwards recall that of which we two speak." Byrnhild filled a vessel and brought it to Siward and spoke:

After this the saw cites sts. 5–13 and 15–19 in uninterrupted sequence, and paraphrases sts. 20 ff. (TODO: edit these!) The order of stanzas in N is rather different from that of R. Both mss. have sts. 5–6 and 13–19 in the same order, but the order of sts. 7–12 in between is divergent. The following table illustrates the relationship:

The Speeches of Syedrive

- Pr Sigurðr reið upp á Hindarfjall ok stefndi suðr til Frakklands. Á fallinu sá hann ljós mikit svá sem eldr brynna, ok ljómaði af

4 til himins. En er hann kom at þá stóð þar skjald-borg ok upp
 6 ór merki. Sigurðr gekk í skjald-borgina ok sá at þar lá maðr ok
 8 svaf með ǫllum her-vápnun. Hann tók fyrst hjálminn af höfuði 10 hánum; þá sá hann at þat var kona. Brynjan var fōst sem hon vëri hold-gróin. Þá reist hann með Gram frá höfuð-smátt brynjuna í gognum niðr ok svá út í gognum báðar ermar. Þá tók hann brynju af henni en hon vaknaði ok settisk hon upp ok sá Sigurð ok mēlti:

Siward rode up on the Hinderfell and stood looking south toward Frankland. On the fell he saw a light as great as if a fire burned; and the rays from it went up to heaven. But when he came to it there was a shield-wall rising up out of the ground. Siward went into the shield-wall and saw that a man lay there, sleeping in full armour. He first took the helmet off the man's head; then he saw that it was a woman. The byrnie was as tight as if it were grown out of her flesh. Then he took Gram and cut the byrnie from the head-hole down through and then out through both sleeves. Then he took the byrnie off her, and she awakened and sat herself up and saw Siward and spoke:

1 „Hvat beit brynju? · Hví brá'k svefni?

[R 31v/33]

2 Hvęrr felldi af mér · folvar nauðir?“

Hann svaraði:

„Sigmundar burr, · sleit fyr skǫmmu

4 hrafns hrę-lundir · hjǫrr Sigurðar.“

“What bit the byrnie? How did I break my sleep?
 Who loosened from me these death-pale chains?”

“Syemund's son [= Siward] has just torn off the raven's corpse-trees [BYRNIE?] with Siward's sword.”

4 hrafns hrę-lundir ‘the raven's corpse-trees [BYRNIE?]' | An unclear kenning. TODO.

[Sigrdrífa kvaði:] 2 „Lęngi ek svaf, · lęngi ek sofnuð vas,

[R 32r/2]

2 long eru lyða lę;

Óðinn því vęldr · es ęigi mátt'a'k

4 bregða blund-stǫfum.“

“Long I slept, long was I asleep, long are the guiles of men.

Weden has caused that I could not break the staves of sleep.”

P2 Sigurðr settisk niðr ok spyrr hana nafns. Hón tók þá horn fullt

2 mjaðar ok gaf hǫnum minnis-vęig.

Siward sat himself down, asking for her name. She then took a horn full of mead and gave him a draught of remembrance:

2 minnis-veig ‘draught of remembrance’ | To drink someone’s minni ‘memory, remembrance’ seems originally to have referred specifically to the funerary toast, but here has clearly come to carry a broader sense, viz. to drink a toast to someone’s favour, whether man or god.

- 3 Hēill Dagr, · hēilir Dags synir, [R 32r/6]
 2 hēil Nōtt ok nipt!
 Ö-rēiðum augum · litið okkr þinig
 4 ok gefið sitjendum sigr!
 “Hail Day! Hail Day’s sons!
 Hail Night and her Kinswoman [= Earth]!
 With unwrathful eyes look Ye towards us two and give the sitters [= us] victory.

1 Dags synir ‘Day’s sons’ | Their identity is uncertain.

2 nipt ‘her kinswoman [= Earth]’ | According to Gylf 10 Earth is the daughter of Night; nipt typically refers to a younger female relative.

3 Ö-rēiðum augum · litið okkr þinig ‘With unwrathful eyes look Ye towards us two’ | I.e., “gaze upon us with gracious eyes”, the grace or wrath of the Gods being conveyed by their eyes turning towards the worshipper. Cf. Hdl 6/2–3.

This anthropomorphic conception is very old and is found among both the Hebrews and Egyptians, which however speak about the face rather than the eyes. Biblical examples include the famous Priestly Blessing of Numbers 6:25–26 (“May Yahweh light up His face to thee and grant grace to thee; / May Yahweh lift up His face to thee and give thee peace.”), Psalms 4:6 (“Lift up the light of Thy face to us, Yahweh”), and the chorus of Psalms 80 (“Yahweh God of Armies, bring us back. / Light up Thy face, that we may be rescued.”) Egyptian examples involve the phrase nfr hr ‘good, fair of face,’ which refers specifically to the grace of a god or god-like ruler (Spiegelberg, 1917, p. 115). This expression is known from inscriptions as early as the 4th dynasty of the Old Kingdom (c. 2600 BCE; Abdelhamid, 2018, p. 146) until as late as the very last known Hieroglyphic inscription (394 CE; Griffith, 1937, pp. 126–127; Parkinson, 1999, pp. 178–179). As an example Spiegelberg cites the following Middle Kingdom prayer to Osiris from the 18th dynasty (c. 1400 BCE), my translation from his German: “mayst thou be gracious to me (hṯp=k n-j); may thy face be fair towards me (nfr hr=k m-j) on the day when I behold thy fairness.”

 Mál ok man-vit · gefið okkr mērum tvēim
 4 ok lēknis-hēndr meðan lifum!
 Hail the Eese! Hail the Ossens!
 Hail this much-giving Fold!
 Speech and manwit give Ye us renowned two,
 and a leecher’s hands, while we live.”

1 Hēilir ēsir, · hēilar ôsynjur ‘Hail the Eese! Hail the Ossens!’ | Probably formulaic, subverted by Lock in Lok 11; see note there for possible ritual use.

2 sjá in fjöl-nýta fold ‘this much-giving Fold’ | I.e. “the bountiful Earth”; an expression with Indo-European roots. In the Norse poetic corpus fold ‘Fold’ elsewhere refers to ‘land, earth’ without religious associations, but the present instance seems to be a ritual archaism; cf. the Old English Acreboot: Hál wes þú Folde · fira módor! ‘Hail be thou, Fold, mother of men!’ and the Old Indian cognate name Prthivī (Mother Earth), found frequently in R̥V. The common Indo-European root is p̥l̥h₂-éwih₂* ‘flat, broad one’; cf. Hfr Hákr 8 (in SkP III), where Earth is the brēið-leita brúðr Bál-eygs ‘broad-faced bride of Bale-eye (= Weden)’. — For the epithet ‘much-giving’ cf. Iliad 3.89: ἐπὶ χθονὶ πολλοῦ-βοτείρῃ ‘upon the much-nourishing earth’, where the Greek πολλοῦ- is cognate with ON fjöl-, both coming from PIE p̥l̥h₂u-* ~ p̥ólh₂u-* ‘much, many’.

4 lēknis-hęndr ‘a leecher’s hands’ | The hands of a physician, i.e., hands with healing powers. The singular lēknis-þęndr occurs on the Ribe galder stick (DR EM85;493), edited below under Galders.

- P₃ Hon nefndisk Sigrdrífa ok var valkyrja. Hon sagði, at tveir konungar þorðusk. Hét annarr Hjalmgunnarr; hann var þá gamall ok inn mesti hermaðr, ok hafði Óðinn hánun sigrí heitit. En annarr hét Agnarr, · Auðu bróðir // er vętr engi · vildi þig-gja. Sigrdrífa felldi Hjalmgunnarr í orrostunni. En Óðinn stakk hana svefn-þorni í hefn þess ok kvað hana aldri skyldu síðan sigrvega í orrostu, ok kvað hana giftask skyldu, „en sagða’k hánun at strengða’k heit þar í mót, at giptask ęngom þeim manni er hręðask kynni.“ Hann segir ok biðr hana kenna sér speki ef hon vissi tíðendi ór ęllum heimun. Sigrdrífa kvað:

She called herself Syedrive and was a walkirrie. She said that two kings fought. One was called Helmguther; he was then old and the greatest warrior, and Weden had promised him victory. And the other was called Eyner, Eade’s brother, who in no way wished to surrender. Syedrive felled Helmguther in the battle, but Weden stung her with the sleeping-thorn as revenge for that, and declared that she should never thenceforth win victory in battle, and said that she must marry, “but I told him that I in response made a vow to marry no man who could be frightened.” He [= Siward] speaks and asks her to teach him wisdom; if she knew any tidings out of all the Homes. Syedrive quoth:

1 bók-rúnar ‘book-runes’ | Or ‘beech-runes’. The word may also be emended to bót-rúnar ‘cure-runes’, since the letters c and t were, in the TODO miniscule used on Iceland, very similar. This emendation is favourable for two reasons: (i) it makes more sense, since the semantic pair bót ‘cure’ : bjarg ‘rescue’ is surely stronger than bók ‘book, beech’ : bjarg ‘rescue’, and since the present stanza is specifically referring to the practical use of the runes; (ii) the pair bót-runar : bjarg-rúnar is already found in a runic charm (B 257, edited under Galders from Bryggjen).

[R 32v/22–24]

This I counsel thee second: that thou not swear an oath, save for the one which is true.
 Grim strands follow the troth-breach;
 wretched is the outlaw of vows.⁹²

3 simar 'strands' | i.e. 'strands of fate'; cf. HHund I 3, where the norms are said to twist such strands. Often emended to limar 'ramifications' in accordance with Reg 4, where that word is used in basically the same context. Such a scribal confusion is easily understood, since s in this position was always spelled with long f in the old mss. The paraphrase (see other note) is not conclusive, since it replaces this word with hefn 'revenge'.

⁹²The punishment is one of torment in the afterlife; see note to Vsp 39. — The whole stanza is paraphrased in Völs ch. 21: Ok sver eigi rangan eið, því at grimmi hefn fylgir gríðrofi. 'And swear no wrong oath, for grim revenge follows the grith-breach.'

Everything is wrong if thou shut up in reply;
 then thou seemest born with softness,

 Risky is the hometown-verdict,
 unless one get himself a good one.
 On another day destroy his life,

 This I counsel thee fourth: if there lives an evil-working woman, full of faults, by the road,
 to walk is better than to take lodgings,
 although night overtake thee.

- 25 For-njósnar augu · þurfu fira synir [R 32v/30–32]
 2 hvar's skulu vreiðir vega;
 oft bǫl-vísar konur · sitja brautu nér;
 4 þér's deýfa sverð ok sefa.
 Eyes of looking-ahead the sons of men need,
 wherever wroth men should fight;
 oft bale-wise women sit near the highway,
 they who dull sword and sense.

1 For-njósnar 'looking-ahead' | Verbal noun to nýsask fyrir 'to look ahead', as found in Háv 7.

- 26 Þat réð'k þér it fimmta, · þótt fagar séir [R 32v/32–34] 2 brúðir bækkjum á, sífja silfr · lát-a þínum svefni ráða,
 4 tægj-at þér at kossi konur.
 This I counsel thee fifth: although thou seest fair brides on the benches, let not kinsmen's silver rule thy sleep;
 lure not women to thee for kisses.

- 27 Þat réð'k þér it sétta, · þótt með sęggjum fari [R 32v/34] 2 ǫlðr-mál til ǫfug:
 drukinn deila · skal-at við dolg-viðu
 4 margan stelr vín viti.
 This I counsel thee sixth: although among warriors may grow
 the ale-speech much awry, drunkenly deal shalt thou not with war-trees [WARRIORS];
 wine steals wit from many.

Fragments from the Saw of the Walsings

Introduction

In R, Sigrdr ends abruptly at stanza 27, after which a number of pages have gone missing; the so-called “great lacuna”. The poetry contained in them undoubtedly belonged to the Walsing cycle, specifically concerning the life of Siward.

The author of Vǫls drew heavily from a collection of Walsing-cycle poetry closely related to R. He quotes many stanzas known from R, but also some which do not survive anywhere else—these are the stanzas edited here. They correspond to the story which would have been found in the great lacuna, and it is probable that they derive from the now-lost poems found there.

Fragment of a Lay of Siward (Brot af Sigurðarkviða)

Meter: Ancient-words-law

Introduction

After the Great Lacuna the text of R picks up in the middle of a lay about Siward and Byrnhild, namely the present Fragment (Brot). According to the following prose (see Guðr I) the poem began with Siward's death. TODO: Translation is in progress.

Fragment of a Lay of Siward

- 1 „hvat hefir Sigurð · saka unnit
2 es þú fróknan vill · fjörvi néma?“

“[What has Siward] done for a crime, that thou wilt deprive the brave of life?”

- 2 „Mér hefir Sigurðr · selda eiða
2 eiða selda · alla logna
þá vélti hann mik · es hann vesa skyldi
4 allra eiða · þinn full-trúi.“

“To me has Siward given oaths, oaths given, all lies.
He betrayed me when he should have been of all oaths the one true keeper.”

- 3 Þik hefir Brynhildr · bøl at gerva
 2 heiptar hvattan · harm at vinna.

- 5 Úti stóð Guðrún · Gjúka dóttir
 2 ok hōn þat orða · alls fyrst of kvað:
 „Hvar es nú Sigurðr · seggja dróttinn
 4 es frēndr mínir · fyrri riða?“

Outside stood Guthrun, Yivick's daughter, and she this word first of all did say:
 “Where is now Siward, the lord of men,
 when my kinsmen ride in front?”

- 6 Einn því Hōgni · and-svōr veitti:
 2 „Sundr hōfum Sigurð · sverði hōgginn;
 gnapir é grár jór · yfir gram dauðum.“

Alone did Hain this answer grant:
 “We have cut Siward asunder by sword;
 the grey steed always neighs over the dead prince.”

- 7 Þa kvað þat Brynhildr · Buðla dóttir:
 2 „vęl skuluð njóta · vápna ok níu landa;
 ęinn myndi Sigurðr · ęllu ráða
 4 ef hann lęngr litlu · lifi hęldi.“

Then quoth this Byrnhild, Budle's daughter:
 “Well shall ye enjoy weapons and nine lands!
 Alone would Siward rule them all if a little longer he had held his life.”

 2 einu sinni · af öllum hug:
 „væl skuluð njóta · landa ok þegna

Then Byrnhild laughed—the farm all resounded—
 a single time out of her whole heart:

“Well shall ye enjoy the lands and thanes, since ye made the brave prince to fall.”

- 10 Þá kvað þat Guðrún · Gjúka dóttir:
 2 „Mjök mælir þú · miklar firnar

 „Ykkir mun Atli · eggjar rjóða
 4 munu víg-skáa · of víða eiðar.“

Dead was Siward to the south of the Rhine;
 a raven on a branch loudly called out:

“On you two will Atle redden his blades;
 the warriors will be destroyed by the oaths!”

Alone did Guthr wake longer than all;
 his foot he took to move, much he took to speak.
 Of that the army-destroyer thought:
 what in the fray they both had said,
 the raven always and the eagle, when home they rode.

- 14 Vaknaði Brynhildr · Buðla dóttir
 2 dís skjöldunga · fyr dag lítu:

First Lay of Guthrun

Introduction

After Siward's death Guthrun is so upset that she cannot make herself weep.

From the Death of Siward (Frá dauða Sigurðar)

1 PI Hér er sagt í þessi kviðu frá dauða Sigurðar ok víkr hér svá til
2 sem þeir drépi hann úti. En sumir segja svá at þeir drépi hann
3 inni í rekkju sinni sofanda. En þýðverskir menn segja svá at þeir
4 drépi hann úti í skógi ok svá segir í Guðrúnar kviðu inni fornu
5 at Sigurðr ok Gjúka synir hefði til þings riðit þá er hann var
6 drepinn—en þat segja allir einnig at þeir sviku hann í tryggð ok
7 vógu at hán um liggjanda ok ó-búnum. Guðrún sat yfir Sigurði 8 dauðum. Hon grét eigi sem aðrar konur en hon var búin til at 9 springa af harmi. Til gengu bæði konur ok karlar at hugga hana
10 en þat var eigi auðvelt. Þat er sögn manna at Guðrún hefði etit
11 af Fáfnis hjarta ok hon skilði því fugls rødd. Þetta er enn kveðit
12 um Guðrúnu:

Here it is said in this lay about the death of Siward, and it is at this point that they slew him outside. But some say that they slew him inside in his chamber asleep. But German men say that they slew him outside in the forest, and so it says in the Ancient Lay of Guthrun that Siward and the sons of Yivick had ridden to the Thing when he was slain—but this they all say in agreement that they betrayed him while he trusted them, and struck at him lying and unarmed. Guthrun sat over Siward, dead. She did not weep like other women, but she was ready to burst apart from sorrow. Both women and men came to her to console her, but that was not easily done. It is the saying of men that Guthrun had eaten of Fathomer's heart, and she therefore understood the speech of birds. This is further said about Guthrun:

The First Lay of Guthrun

- 1 Ár vas þat's Guðrún · gørðisk at deyja, 2 es hön sat sorg-full · yfir Sigurði, gørði-t hön hjúfra · né hön dum sláa
 4 né kvæina umb · sem konur aðrar.

It was of yore that Guthrun made ready to die
 as she sat sorrowful above Siward.

She did not pant nor beat her hands nor wail about it like other women.

- 2 Gingu jarlar · al-snotrir framm,
 2 þeir's harðs hugar · hana lottu;
 þeygi Guðrún · gráta mátti,
 4 svá vas hön móðug; · mundi hön springa.

Came earls all-clever forth,
 they who would loosen her hard heart;
 nowise could Guthrun weep,
 so moody was she—she would burst apart.

- 3 Sötu ítrar · jarla brúðir
 2 golli búnar · fyr Guðrúnu;
 hver sagði þeira · sinn of-trega
 4 þann's bitrastan · of beðit hafði.

Sat the splendid brides of the earls adorned with gold, before Guthrun.

Each one of them told her own great sorrow,
 the most bitter one that she had suffered.

- 4 Þá kvað Gjaflaug, · Gjúka systir:

- 2 „Mik veit’k á moldu · munar-lausasta;
 hefi’k fimm vera · for-spell beðit, 4 tveggja dótra, · þriggja systra, átta bróðra, · þó ek ein lifi.“

Then quoth Yeflie, Yivick’s sister:
 “I know myself on earth the most joyless.
 Of five husbands I have suffered the loss,
 of two daughters, three sisters,
 eight brothers—yet I alone live.”

- 5 Þeygi Guðrún · gráta mátti;
 2 svá vas hön móðug · at mög dauðan
 ok harð-huguð · um hrør fylkis.

Nowise could Guthrun weep;
 so moody was she after the lad’s death,
 and hard-hearted over the marshaller’s corpse.

- 6 Þá kvað þat Hærborg, · Húna lands dróttning:
 2 „Hæfi’k harðara · harm at segja:
 mínir sjau synir · sunnan lands,
 4 verr inn átti, · í val fellu.

Then quoth this Harbury, queen of Hunland:
 “I have a harder harm to tell.
 My seven sons south of the land,
 —my husband the eighth—in battle fell.”

- 7 Faðir ok móðir, · fjórir bróðr,
 2 þau á vági · vindr of lék, barði bára · við borð-þili.

My father and mother, four brothers—them on the wave the wind outplayed;
 the breaker beat over the ship-side.

- 8 Sjölf skylda’k gøfga, · sjölf skylda’k gøtva,
 2 sjölf skylda’k høndla, · hæl-før þeira;
 þat ek allt of beïð · ein misseri
 4 svá’t mér maðr engi · munar leitaði.

I alone had to honour them; I alone had to bury them;
 I alone had to handle their hell-journey [DEATH].

All this I suffered in one half-year,
when no man found me any joy.

2 hǫl-fǫr | emend.; hǫr-fǫr R

- 9 Þá varð'k hapta · ok hēr-numa 2 sams misseris · síðan verða;
skylda'k skreyta · ok skúa binda
4 hērsis kván · hvērjan morgin.

Then I became a captive and war-taken,
in the same half-year afterwards.
I had to dress and bind the shoes of the ruler's wife every morning.

- 10 Hón ógði mér · af af-brýði 2 ok hǫrðum mik · hǫggum keyrði;
fann'k hús-guma · hvērgi inn bētra
4 en hús-fręyju · hvērgi verri.“

She tortured me out of jealousy, and with hard blows drove me on;
a husband I never found better,
and a housewife never worse.”

- 11 Þęygi Guðrún · gráta mátti;
2 svá vas hón móðug · at mǫg dauðan
ok harð-huguð · um hrør fylkis.

Nowise could Guthrun weep;
so moody was she after the lad's death,
and hard-hearted over the marshaller's corpse.

- 12 Þá kvað þat Gullrond, · Gjúka dóttir:
2 „Fǫ kannt, fǫstra, · þótt fróð séir, ungu vífi · and-spjöll bera.“
4 Varaði hón at hylja · umb hrør fylkis.

Then quoth this Goldrand, Yivick's daughter:
“Thou canst, foster-mother—though thou be wise—to the young wife give few answers.”
She bade the corpse of the marshal be uncovered.

- 13 Svípti hön bléju · af Sigurði
 2 ok vatt vengi · fyr vífs knjám:
 „Lít-tu á ljúfan, · legg þú munn við grön
 4 sem þú halsaðir · heilan stilli.“

She cast the cover off of Siward and turned his face before the wife's knees: “Look upon the loved one! Lay your mouth to his lips like thou didst embrace the hale prince.”

- 14 Á leit Guðrún · einu sinni;
 2 sá hön döglinga skör · dreyra runna, fránar sjónir · fylkis liðnar,
 4 hug-borg jofurs · hjörvi skorna.

On him looked Guthrun a single time;
 she saw the noble's locks run with blood,
 the gleaming gaze of the marshall gone,
 the heart-fort [CHEST] of the ruler cut by the sword.

- 15 Þá hné Guðrún · holl við bólstri;
 2 haddr losnaði, · hlýr roðnaði en regns dropi · rann niðr umb kné.

Then Guthrun sank down, sloped against the bolster;
 her hair loosened, her cheek reddened,
 and a drop of rain ran down to her knee.

- 16 Þá grét Guðrún, · Gjúka dóttir, 2 svá't tór flugu · tresk í gognum ok gullu við · gæss í túni,
 4 mérir fuglar · es mér átti.

Then wept Guthrun, Yivick's daughter, so that the tears flew through her veil(?)
 and in response shrieked the geese in the yard,
 the famous fowls which the maiden owned.

2 tresk 'veil(?)' | Guess translation; this word is an unexplained bapax.

- 17 Þá kvað þat Gullrönd, · Gjúka dóttir:
 2 „ykkar vísu'k · ástir mestar manna allra · fyr mold ofan;
 4 unðir þú hvarki · úti né inni, systir mín, · nema hjá Sigurði.“

Then quoth this Goldrand, Yivick's daughter:
 “I knew the love of you two to be the greatest of all men above the earth.
 Thou wast never content, not outside nor inside,
 O my sister, save beside Siward.”

- 18 „Svá vas míninn Sigurðr · hjá sonum Gjúka
 2 sēm vęri gęir-laukr · ór grasi vaxinn, eða vęri þjartr steinn · á band dreginn:
 4 jarkna-steinn · yfir qðlingum.

“So was my Siward beside the sons of Yivick like were a garlic out of grass grown,
 or were a bright stone drawn on a band:
 an arkenstone over the athlings.

1–2 Svá vas ... vaxinn ‘So was ... grown’ | These two lines are almost identical to Guðr II 2/1–2. Since the present poem is probably older (Sapp, 2022), it is likely the source.

2 gęir-laukr ‘garlic’ | or ‘spear-leek’. I have opted for this translation based on etymology (cf. OE gār-lēac ‘spear-leek’), but the botanical identity is unclear. Guðr II 2 has gróinn laukr ‘green leek’ instead. For the cultural importance of leeks and onions see note to Vsp 4.

3–4 eða vęri ... qðlingum. ‘or were ... athlings.’ | Beaded necklaces were commonly worn by Scandinavian women of the time, and the beads were mostly of opaque coloured glass. Siward is likened to a bright crystal, the sons of Yivick to dull glass.

- 19 Ek þótta auk · þjóðans rekkum
 2 hveřri hęrri · Hęrjans dísi;
 nú em’k svá lítil · sem lauf séa
 4 opt í jqlstrum · at jqlfur dauðan.

I seemed even to the ruler's champions higher than each of the Lord of Hosts' dises [WALKIRRIES].
 Now I am as small as if a leaf I were,
 high in the willows, after the ruler's death.

- 20 Sakna’k í sessi · ok í sęingu
 2 míns mál-vinar— · valda męgir Gjúka;
 valda męgir Gjúka · mínu bqlvi
 4 ok systir sinnar · sqrum gráti.

I miss in the seat and in the bed
 my confidant—the lads of Yivick are the cause;
 the lads of Yivick are the cause of my bale,
 and their sister's [my] bitter weeping.

- 21 Svá ér of lýða · landi eyðið
 2 sem ér of unnuð · ęða svarða;
 man-a þú, Gunnarr, · gulls of njóta; 4 þęir munu þęr baugar · at bana verða es þú Sigurði · svarðir ęða.

So will ye make the land deserted by folk,
 like ye treated the sworn oaths!
 Thou wilt not, Guthur, enjoy the gold;
 those highs will for thee become the bane,
 on which thou to Siward didst swear oaths.

- P2 Guðrún gekk þaðan á braut til skógar á eyði-merkr ok fór allt til 2 Danmarkar ok var þar með Þóru, Hákonar dóttur, sjau misseri.
 Brynhildr vildi eigi lifa eptir Sigurð. Hon lét drepa þręla sína
 4 átta ok fimm ambóttir, þá lagði hon sik sverði til bana svá sem segir í Sigurðar kviðu inni skömmu.

Guthrun then went away to the woods in the wilderness and journeyed all the way to Denmark and stayed there with Thure, Hathkin's daughter, for seven half-years. Byrnhild did not want to live after Siward. She had her eight thralls and five handmaids slain, then she ran herself through with a sword unto her death, as it says in the Short Lay of Siward.

Introduction

Byrnhild is burned on her pyre in a beautiful chariot or wagon. In the afterlife she rides on the Hellway to reach her resting place in Hell, and meets a gow or troll-woman on the way. The poem consists of their conversation.

Pr Eptir dauða Brynhildar vóru gōr bōl tvau: annat Sigurði, ok
2 brann þat fyrr, en Brynhildr var á qðru brennd ok var hon í reið þeiri er guð-vefum var tjōlduð. Svá er sagt at Brynhildr ok með 4 reið'inni á hel-veg ok fōr um tūn þar er gýgr nōkkur bjō. Gýgr'in kvað:

After Byrnhild's death two pyres were made: one for Siward, and it burned earlier; but Byrnhild was burned on the other, and she was in that chariot which was covered with godweb. It is said that Byrnhild drove with the chariot onto the Hellway and passed through a plot where there lived a certain gow. The gow quoth:

2-3 í reið þeiri er guð-vefum var tjōlduð 'in that chariot which was covered with godweb' | The tent-covering of the chariot was made of precious garments. For the burial of women in wagons and chariots, cf. TODO (Oseberg ship?).

3-4 Brynhildr ok með reið'inni á hel-veg 'Byrnhild drove with the chariot on the Hellway' | This gives us some interesting insight into old afterlife beliefs. After Byrnhild is burned she ends up between the worlds of the dead and the living, the so-called "Hell-way", or road to Hell (the underworld); she is buried in a chariot so that she will be able to travel comfortably. We may presume that the animals driving the chariot were slaughtered and burnt with her on the pyre.

Guther and Hain then took all the gold, Fathomer's inheritance. Hatred was then between the Yivickings and Attle; he blamed the Yivickings for Byrnhild's passing. These were their terms, that they would marry off to him Guthrun; and they gave her a forgetfulness-draught to drink before she agreed to be married off to Attle. The sons of Attle were Earp and Oatle, and Swanhild was Siward's daughter and Guthrun's. Attle invited to his home Guther and Hain, and sent Winge or Kneefrith. Guthrun knew his wiles and sent a word with runes, that they should not come, and as a sign she sent Hain the ring Andwaresneat, and tied through it a wolf's hair. Guther had asked for Ordrun's hand, Attle's sister, and did not get her; then he got Gleamware, and Hain had Costbeare. Their sons were Solwer and Snower and Yivick. And when the Yivickings came to Attle, then Guthrun asked her sons that they should ask for the life of the Yivickings, but they would not. The heart was cut out of Hain, and Guther set in the serpent-yard. He struck his harp and soothed the serpents, but an adder stung him unto the liver. King Thedric was with Attle, and had there lost almost all of his men. Thedric and Guthrun recounted their griefs to each other. She spoke to him and quoth:

Introduction

A very short narrative poem of ballad-type, depicting just a single scene. It is especially notable for its depiction of a trial by ordeal (trial by cauldron) and the mention of a woman being drowned in a bog.

Herch, one of Atle's concubines tells Atle that she has seen his wife Guthrun sleeping with Thedric. Atle becomes distressed upon hearing this (P1). Guthrun asks him what is wrong (1), and he responds that Herch has accused her of sleeping with Thedric (2). Guthrun promises to prove her innocence through a trial by ordeal involving picking up a white stone from boiling water (3). She further says that while she and Thedric did sit down together, they did so in mutual grief over the deaths of her brothers (4–5). She tells Atle to summon a German lord named Saxe, who knows how to carry out the trial. Seven hundred men arrive to witness the event (6). Before picking up the stone, Guthrun laments over her brothers' deaths, saying that they would have disputed the accusation through violence, but that she must now prove her innocence by herself (7). She then puts her hand in the boiling water, and unscathed takes out the stones. She holds it up and shows it to the witnesses (8). Atle laughs, knowing that his wife has been faithful, and orders Herch to pick up the stone (9). She does so, but her hands are horribly scorched, and men lead her to a "foul bog", presumably to be drowned. The poet ends by laconically stating that Guthrun in such a way was "reconstituted for her affronts".

Herch was named the female thrall of Attle; she had been his concubine. She told Attle that she had seen Thedric and Guthrun both together. Attle was then wholly displeased. Then Guthrun quoth:

1 „Hvat ’s þér, Atli? · é, Buðla sonr,

“This troubles me, Guthrun, Yivick’s daughter:

⁹³i.e., they threw off their clothes and slept together.

“To thee I will swear oaths of all of that—by the white, holy stone—that I did not do such a thing with Thedmar,⁹⁴ which neither wife nor husband has been able to swear upon,—⁹⁵

⁹⁴Historically, Thedmar was the father of Thedric, who took over the kingdom after his father’s death (see Index). Thedmar may here be a scribal error for Thedric, a scribal error for “Thedmar’s son”, or a nickname due to conflation of the father and son.

⁹⁵Guthrun says that she will prove her innocence through a trial by ordeal (that is, by lifting “the white holy stone” out of boiling water; see st. 8). She further strengthens her position by pointing out that no reliable person has sworn an oath attesting to her guilt.

3 hrink-tu 'surround' | Consisting of bring, 2nd sg. imper. of bringja 'surround, encircle' + þú 'thou'. The clitic form -tu has caused devoicing.

 Seven hundred men went into the hall, before the king's wife should reach into the kettle.

1 Saxa, · sunn-manna gram 'Saxe, the lord of Southmen' | It seems that the trial by cauldron was still foreign to the poet, who associated it with the Christian Saxons (or “Southmen”). This may date the poem to the time shortly before conversion period, something supported by Sapp (2022)'s statistical model.

- 7 „Kømr-a nú Gunnarr, · kalli'k-a Høgna,

She thrust to the bottom her bright palms,
and she up did take the arkenstones:
“Let men now see—I am proven innocent,

Lay of Attle

Introduction

A famously archaic poem.

Attle sends his messenger Kneefrith to Guthur (1). He arrives at Guthur's hall, where the mood is one of unease, and addresses Guthur (2). Kneefrith invites him and his brother Hain to Attle's court (3), offering them treasures, weapons and land (4–5). Guthur asks his brother Hain for advice, since he has not heard of Attle having gold to give away (6).

The Death of Attle (Dauði Atla)

Pr Guðrún Gjúkadóttir hefndi bróðra sinna, svá sem frégt er orðit.
2 Hon drap fyrst sonu Atla, en eptir drap hon Atla ok brendi hóllina ok hirðina alla; um þetta er sjá kviða ort.

Guthrun Yivicksdaughter avenged her brothers, as has become famous. She first killed the sons of Attle, and after that she killed Attle, and burned the hall and the whole hird. Regarding that this lay is wrought.

The Lay of Attle

I Atli sændi · ár til Gunnars

- 2 kunnan segg at ríða, · Knéfrøðr vas sá hēitinn;
 at gørdum kom hann Gjúka · ok at Gunnars hǫllu, 4 þekkjum arin-græypum · ok at bjóri svǫsum.

Attle sent—of yore—to Guthur a well-known messenger to ride; Kneefrith he was called.
 To the yards of Yivick he came, and to the hall of Guthur;
 to the hearth-surrounding benches, and to the lovely beer.

- 2 Drukku þar drótt-męgir · —ęn dyljęndr þęgðu—
 2 vín í val-hǫllu, · vręði sǫusk þęir Húna;
 kallaði þá Knéfrøðr · kaldri rǫddu,
 4 sęggr inn suð-róni · sat hann á þekk hǫm:

There the dright-lads [WARRIORS] drank—but the concealed ones shut up—wine in the walhall; they feared the wrath of the Huns.
 Then called Kneefrith with cold voice,
 the southern messenger, he sat on a high bench:

1 dyljęndr ‘concealed ones’ | Finnur Jónsson (1932) reasonably interprets this as referring to Attle’s spies at Guthur’s court.

2 val-hǫllu ‘the walhall’ | The interpretation of this compound is difficult in the current context. The first element val- could be (1) valr ‘falcon’, referring to the aristocratic hunting practice; (2) valr ‘Wale’, cognate with ‘Welsh’ but in ON referring to the French or Romans, stressing the southern location or appearance of the hall; or (3) valr ‘(collective) the battle-slain’, foreshadowing the inevitable death (feyness) of the Yivickings. If (3) is correct the word is linguistically identical to Walhall, Weden’s hall, whither the battle-slain go.

“Attle sent me hither to ride with an errand, on the bit-champing steed through Mirkwood uncharted—to ask you, O Guthur, that ye two [= Guthur and Hain] on the bench come, with hearth-surrounding helmets, to seek the home of Attle.

- 4 Skjǫldu knęguð þar vęlja · ok skafna aska,

 silfr-gyllt sǫðul-klęði, · sęrki val-rauða,
 4 dafar, darraða, · drǫsla męl-gręypa.

There ye might choose shields, and shaven ash-spears, helmets gold-reddened, and the multitude of the Huns,

silver-gilt saddle-cloths, blood-red serks,
daves, spears, bit-champing steeds.

- 5 Völl létsk ykkir ok myndu gefa · víðrar Gnit-heiðar
2 af geyri gjallanda · ok af gylltum stöfnum, stórar meiddmar · ok staði Danpar,
4 hrís þat it mēra · es meðr Myrk-við kalla.“

He also declared himself willing to give you two the field of wide Gnit-heath,
[and] of yelling spears and of gilded prowls, great treasures and the place of Danp;
the renowned brush which men call Mirkwood.

- 6 Høfði vatt þá Gunnarr · ok Høgna til sagði:
2 „Hvat réðr þú okkr, sæggr hinn øri, · alls vit slíkt heyrum?
Gull vissa'k ekki · á Gnit-heiði,
4 þat's vit ettim-a · annat slíkt.

His head turned Guthur then, and said to Hain:
“What dost thou counsel us two, O younger man, as such a thing we hear?
I knew of no gold on the Gnit-heath which we two should not own as much of.

- 7 Sjau eigu vit sal-hús · sverða full,
2 hverju 'ru þeira · hjölt ór gulli;
mínin veit'k mar betstan · en mēki hvassastan,
4 boga bekk-sóma · en brynjur ór gulli;

We own seven hall-houses filled with swords—
on each of them is a golden hilt;
I know my horse to be the best and [my] sword the sharpest,
[my] bow bench-fit and [my] byrnies golden,

- 8 hjalm ok skjöld hvítastan, · kominn ór hǫll Kíars;
2 einn 's mínin betri · en sé allra Húna.“

[my] helmet and shield the whitest, come from Choser's hall;
mine alone is better, than [those] of all of the Huns might be!”

- 9 „Hvat hyggr brúði bendu · þá's hön okkr baug sendi,
2 varinn vøðum heiðingja? · Hykk at hön vögnuð byði!
Hár fann'k heiðingja · riðit í hring rauðum;

4 ylfskr es vegr okkarr · at ríða ørænda.“

“What thinkest thou the bride meant when she sent us a bigh covered by a heath-dweller’s [WOLF’s] cloth? I think she offered a warning!
A heath-dweller’s hair I found wrapped round the red ring:
wolvern is our road, if we ride that errand!⁹⁷”

⁹⁷That it is the more cautious Hain who speaks here is clear from Guthur’s response in the following stanzas. Whereas Hain judges the wolf-hair to be a warning of Hunnish treachery, Guthur thinks that it is a warning that wolves will steal his treasure if he does not show up.

10 Niðjar-gi hvøttu Gunnar · né náungr annarr, 2 rýnændr né ráðændr, · né þeir’s ríkir vóru;
 kvaddi þá Gunnarr · sëm konungr skyldi,
4 mærr í mjøð-ranni · af móði stórum:

No kinsmen Guthur, nor any other relation,
not counselors nor advisors, nor those who were powerful.
Then Guthur announced—as a king should,
renowned in the mead-hall—with great spirit:

11 „Rís-tu nú, Fjörnir, · lát-tu á flæt vaða
2 greppa gull-skálar · með gumna hǫndum!

“Rise now, Ferner! Let on the benches wade forth the golden bowls of warriors along the hands of men!”

1 Fjörnir ‘Ferner’ | An otherwise unknown servant.

12 Ulfr mun ráða · arfi Niflunga,
2 gamlir gran-varðir, · ef Gunnars missir;
 birnir blakk-fjallir · bíta þref-tǫnnum,
4 gamna grey-stóði, · ef Gunnarr né kǫmr-at.“

The wolf will rule the inheritance of the Nivlings—
the old grey guardians [WOLVES]—if Guthur is absent.
Black-furred bears will bite with wrangling teeth—amusing the bitch-pack—if Guthur comes not.”

13 Leiddu land-rǫgni · lýðar ó-neisir,
2 grátændr, gunn-hvatan, · ór garði Húna;
 þá kvað þat inn øri · erfri-vörðr Hognar:
4 „Heilir farið nú ok horskir · hvar’s ykkir hugr tægir!“

Unshamed men led the lord of the land, weeping, the battle-bold man out of the yards of the Huns.

Then quoth this the young inheritance-ward [SON] of Hain:
 “Fare ye two now whole and wise wherever your heart may draw you!”

1 lýðar ó-néisir ‘unshamed men’ | Compare the long-line on the Thorsberg chape (~160–240 AD):

With strides the braves made the bit-champing steed
 rush o’er the fells through Mirkwood uncharted.
 All Hunmark shook where the hard-minded went forth;

 her brothers both—on beer was she lightly drunk:

“Betrayed art thou now, Guthur; what wilt thou, powerful man, work against the Hunnish harm-tricks? Go soon out of the hall!”⁹⁸

⁹⁸Before anything evil might happen.

⁹⁹i.e. if he turned the Hunnish shield-maidens into enslaved farmhands.

Guthur answers:

- 20 „Sęinað ’s nú, systir, · at samna Niflungum, 2 langt ’s at lęita · lýða sinnis til,
 of rosmu-fjöll Rínar, · rekka ó-neissa.“

“’Tis late now, sister, to gather the Nivlings; ’tis far to look for the support of men: over the great fells of the Rhine for unshamed warriors.”

- 21 Fengu þęir Gunnar · ok í fјotur sęttu, 2 vin Borgunda, · ok bundu fastla;
 sjau hjó Hęgni · sverði hvęssu
 4 en inum átta hratt hann · í ęld heitan.

They caught Guthur and in fetters placed him—the friend of the Burgends—and bound him firmly. Hain smote seven with a sharp sword, and the eighth one he threw into hot fire.

2 vin Borgunda ‘the friend of the Burgends’ | The historic Guthur was king of the Burgundians. The manuscript has a small stroke above the n that abbreviates the syllable ir, indicating the plural vinir ‘friends’, who would then be the people binding Guthur. This is probably due to a scribal misunderstanding of a not uncommon type, since the significance of the kenning had been forgotten. It is clearly old, for in Walder 46 Walder addresses Guthur, whom he is just about to fight, by the identical phrase wine Burgenda.

- 22 Svá skal frókn · fjöndum verjask;
 2 Hogni varði · hendir Gunnars.
 frógu fróknan · ef fjör vildi
 4 Gotna þjóðann · gulli kaupa.
- So shall a brave guard himself against foes;
 Hain guarded the hands of Guthur.
 They asked the brave [Guthur] if his [Hain’s] life he wished—the ruler of the Gots—to buy with gold.¹⁰⁰

1 Svá ... verjask | Line moved from the last st. to this one since it seems to connect semantically with the immediately following line, and results in two typical four-line stanzas.

¹⁰⁰The Huns try to make Guthur (the “ruler of the Gots”, cf. sts. 1, 3, 10) pay for Hain’s life. Guthur instead responds with the following.

- 23 „Hjarta skal mér Hogna · í hendi liggja 2 blóðugt, ór brjósti · skorit bald-riða, saxi slíðr-þeitu, · syni þjóðans.“
- “The heart of Hain shall lie in my hands:
 bloody from the breast, cut from the bold rider [= Hain], with a slide-biting sax, from the son of the sovereign [= Hain].”

3 saxi slíðr-þeitu ‘slide-biting sax’ | A short-sword with a blade so sharp that it draws blood when one slides the finger across it.

- 24 Skóru þeir hjarta · Hjalla ór brjósti, 2 blóðugt, ok á bjóð lögðu · ok bóru þat fyr Gunnar.
- They cut the heart of Helle from the breast, bloody, and on a platter laid it, and bore it before Guthur.

- 25 Þá kvað þat Gunnarr, · gumna dróttinn:
 2 „Hér hef’ik hjarta · Hjalla ins blauða, ólíkt hjarta · Hogna ins frókna, 4 es mjök bifask · es á bjóði liggr;
 bifðisk hólfa meirr · es í brjósti lá!“

Then quoth this Guthur, the lord of men:

“Here have I the heart of Helle the soft—unlike the heart of Hain the bold!— which quivers greatly when on the platter it lies;
it quivered twice as much when in the breast it lay.”

- 26 Hló þá Hogni · es til hjarta skóru
2 kvikvan kumbla-smið · —klökkva síðst hugði.
 Blóðugt þat á bjóð lögðu · ok bóru fyr Gunnar.

Hain then laughed as to the heart they cut the living wound-smith [WARRIOR = Hain]; he thought least of sobbing.
Bloody on a platter they laid it, and bore it before Guthur.

- 27 Mérr kvað þat Gunnarr, · Geir-Niflungr:
2 „Hér hefi’k hjarta · Hogna ins frókna, ólíkt hjarta · Hjalla ins blauða, 4 es lítt bifask · es á bjóði liggr;
 bifðisk svá-gi mjök · þá’s í brjósti lá!

Renowned Guthur quoth this, the Spear-Nivling:
“Here have I the heart of Hain the bold
—unlike the heart of Helle the soft!— which quivers lightly when on the platter it lies;
it quivered not so much when in the breast it lay.

Greenlandish Speeches of Attle

(Atlamól in grónlendsku)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): late C11th (o.472)

Meter: Speeches-meter

Introduction

The Greenlandish Speeches of Attle are only preserved in R. The poem is composed in Speeches-meter throughout. Unlike the preceding Akv, it seems actually to have been composed in one of the Norse settlements on Greenland, for in st. 18 the poet makes reference to a “white bear”. The polar bear (Ursus maritimus) is indeed found on Greenland, but not on Iceland or the Scandinavian peninsula. To what inhospitable northern wastes the Norse had brought the legends about Attle (Attila)!

The language of the poem is noticeably younger than its predecessor; most notably the sound change vr- > r- is consistently applied.

Introduction

TODO: INTRODUCTION.

From Guthrun (Frá Guðrúnu)

Pr Guðrún gekk þá til sévar er hon hafði drept Atla, gekk út á sjáinn
2 ok vildi fara sér. Hon mátti eigi sökkva. Rak hana yfir fjörðinn á land Jónakrs konungs. Hann fekk hennar. Þeira synir voru 4 þeir Sörli ok Erpr ok Hamðir. Þar fóddisk upp Svanhildr Sigurðar dóttir. Hon var gift Jörmunrekk inum ríkja. Með hánun 6 var Bikki. Hann réð þat at Randvér konungs son skyldi taka hana; þat sagði Bikki konungi. Konungr lét hengja Randvé en 8 troða Svanhildi undir hrossa fótum. En er þat spurði Guðrún þá kvaddi hon sonu sína.

Guthrun then went to the sea after she had slain Attle; walked out into the sea and wanted to take her own life. She could not sink. She was driven across the firth to the land of king Enacker. He got her. Their sons were Sarrel and Earp and Hamthew. There Swanhild, Siward's daughter was raised up. She was married to Erminric the powerful; with him was Bicke. He counseled that Randwigh, the king's son, should rape her; this Bicke told the king. The king had Randwigh hanged and Swanhild trampled under horses' feet. But when Guthrun learned of this she called on her sons.

The Goadings of Guthrun

- 1 Þá frá'k sennu · slíðr-feng-ligasta, 2 trauð mól talit · af trega stórum, es harð-huguð · hvatti at vígi
 4 grimum orðum · Guðrún sonu:

That gibing I've found most direly caught—loth speeches told from great grief—when hard-hearted she goaded to war, with fierce words, Guthrun, her sons:

- 2 „Hví sitið? · Hví sofið lífi?
 2 Hví treg-at ykkir · tēiti at mēla?
 es Jormunrekr · yðra systur, 4 unga at aldri, · jóm of traddi, hvítum ok svörtum · á her-vegi
 6 gróm, gang-tómum · Gotna hrossum.

“Why sit ye two? Why sleep ye your lives away?
 Why troubles it you not to speak merrily?
 when Erminric has had your sister,
 young of age, trampled with steeds;
 with whites and blacks on the war-path,
 with grey, pacing, Gotnish horses!

3–6 es ... hrossum. ‘when ... horses!’ | Repeated almost identically in Hamð 3.

- 3 Hléjandi Guðrún · hvarf til skemmu,

 4 hlóðusk móðgir · á mara bógu.

Laughing, Guthrun turned to her chamber the heirlooms of kings from the chests she picked:
 the long byrnies, and to her sons brought them;
 the gloomy men loaded themselves on the backs of steeds.

- 4 Þá kvað þat Hamðir · inn hugum stóri:

“Wake, maiden of maidens! Wake, my friend!

Let us bid the Father of Hosts (= Woden) to remain in good spirits;
he pays and gives gold to the worthy.
He gave Harmod helmet and byrnie, and Syemund a sword to receive.

2. hann geldr ok gefr · gull verðugum ‘he pays and gives gold to the worthy’ | Closely related to HHund I 9/3, which is why Finnur Jónsson (1932), Guðni Jónsson (1954) emend verðugum ‘the worthy’ to verðungu ‘the retinue’.

Lay of Hildbrand

(Hildebrandslied)

Dating: C8th

Meter: Ancient-words-law

Introduction

For the text of original poem I present the manuscript text with as few textual emendations as possible. As for the orthography, I have found it impossible to produce a normalised without too heavily distorting the received text, being as it is, a blend of several dialects (one need only observe the treatment of the name Thedric, which appears thrice, and each time in a markedly different form). Apart from my typical practice of capitalising proper names, marking prefixes with ⟨·⟩ and compounds with ⟨-⟩, and using acute accents to signify long vowels, circumflex accents to signify now-monophthongised original diphthongs, and overdots to mark nasal vowels, I have done the following changes in order to clarify etymological relationships and make the text somewhat more wieldy. Of these, 8–10 have also been noted in the apparatus where they occur:

1. Consistently replaced both p (wynn) and uu with w.
2. Consistently replaced c with k.
3. Consistently replaced qu with kw.
4. Consistently replaced t with ȝ in positions affected by the Second Sound Shift.
5. Replaced th with þ.
6. Replaced e with ē when reflecting an original a-vowel affected by i-mutation.
7. Removed unetymological double nn.
8. Restored initial h- where etymological and/or metrically required.

9. Removed initial b- unetymological and/or metrically deficient.

The punctuation of the original, entirely consisting of interpuncts, at times representing metrical breaks, at others sporadically placed, has not been retained.

Where they appear in cæsuræ, the words kwad Hilti-brant 'Hildbrand quoth' (found in ll. 30, 49, and 58) replace the usual interpunct. Due to their hypermetrical nature, I had originally planned to remove these, and instead indicate the speaker in the margins—but after comparison with various Norse stanzas (e.g. Reg 3, wherein the words kvað Loki 'Lock quoth' appear in the stanza's first cæsura), I have come to believe that these represent an ancient oral interjection, seemingly going back as far as the Migration Period (as it seems incredulous to think that the scribe of ms. should have influenced the four centuries younger scribe of R in such a minor point.)

Summary

The poet begins with a short formulaic introduction; he is relating older stories (1–2). The two duellists, Hildbrand and Hathbrand, father and son, arm themselves and ride into battle at the head of two opposing armies (3–6). They speak, and Hildbrand asks Hathbrand for his name and lineage (7–13). Hathbrand gives his name and ancestry; his father was the warrior Hildbrand, who abandoned him as a newborn. This was long ago, and Hathbrand does not think him still alive (14–29). Hearing this, Hildbrand calls on God as witness, and offers his son a golden torc as a token of loyalty (30–34). Hathbrand takes this as an insulting trick. He proclaims that wealth should be won by struggle alone and accuses Hildbrand of having grown old through treachery (35–40); he has heard from sailors on the Mediterranean that his father is dead (41–43).

After this straight-forward narrative sequence three short speeches follow, in the ms. all spoken by Hildbrand. The second is certainly spoken by Hildbrand, but the other two may be misplaced or misattributed.

1. Hildbrand reflects on his son's prosperity: from his clothes he can tell that he has a good lord, and that he, unlike himself, has not suffered the fate of exile (44–47).

2. Hildbrand calls on God, and laments that, after thirty years at war, he is now forced to fight against his own son. Still, Hathbrand should easily be able to kill such an old man as Hildbrand, if he has strength and fate on his side (48–56).

3. Hildbrand (or Hathbrand, and there is a case for emending here) says that only the most cowardly easterner could refuse the fight so greatly desired. Let both men fight their hardest, and when the duel is over the winner will strip the armour of the other (57–61).

The two men then throw their javelins into each other's shield and rush at each other, hacking away at their shields until they become worthless (62–67). Here the poem abruptly ends.

Hathbrand spoke, Hildbrand's son:

“This our liegemen said to me—
 the old and learned who earlier lived—that Hildbrand my father was called—I'm called Hathbrand.
 Long ago he turned east—he fled Edwaker's hate—away with Thedric and his multitude of thanes.
 He left in the land a little one to stay;
 a bride in the bower, a bairn ungrown, heritance-less. He rode away east, at which time Thedric was in great need of my father—that was so friendless a man!
 He was toward Edwaker utterly hostile;
 the dearest of thanes under Thedric;

Then he wound from his arm twisted bighs, made of Caesar’s coin, which him the king had given,
the lord of the Huns.—“This I now give thee out of holdness.”

30 hevane ‘heaven’ | beuane ms.

30 hevane ‘heaven’ | A likely Old Saxon form, which merits some discussion on the relation between the synonymous bimil and bevan in Old Saxon and High German. The form bimil is found in both OS and OHG, but a cognate of bevan is never found in OHG. Further, the use of OS bevan is heavily stereotyped; it is never used in prose, and in poetry (Heli and OSGen) its use is heavily stereotyped, being restricted to 5 cpds and 3 genitive expressions. As a simplex, it is never used in any other form than the gen. sg. Of course, it must have been used in some other context, since it has left descendants in modern Low German dialects.

In any case these facts pose serious difficulties for the providence of the poem. If Hildebrand is an originally OHG text (cf. Note to l. 47), translated into OS in a scribal context, it seems very strange that a translator would replace the neutral bimil with the rare, stereotyped bevan. Yet the presence of bevan in the OHG archetype would be a major anomaly, since that form has never existed in any known variety of High German, up until the present day.

32 wuntane bauga ‘twisted bighs’ | The association between bighs (armlets, torcs) and a warrior’s honour is well attested; see Index. This encounter is particularly reminiscent of Hárþ 42.

33 kheisur-ingu gi-tán ‘made of Caesar’s coin’ | A cultural memory of the melting of Roman solidi by Germanic smiths.

34 hunjo truhtin ‘lord of the Huns’ | Almost certainly Atle, although he is not mentioned by name in the poem.

Thou art thus an aged man, since thou always didst work deceit.—
This seafarers said to me
west o’er the Wendle-sea: that war did take him—dead is Hildbrand, Harbrand’s son!”

36 mit gēru skal man · geba in-fāhan ‘By his spear shall man win gifts’ | This ancient mindset was codified by the Indians as part of the kṣātra-dharma, the code of the Warrior-caste (kṣatriya), which explicitly forbade them from taking gifts. So in MB^b 12.192.73, a kṣatriya king refuses a gift from a priest (brāhmaṇa), for “it is the duty prescribed for a kṣatriya that he must fight and protect (people). Kṣatriya are said to be the givers, then, how can I take (this) from you?” (Hara (1974) transl., see further there.)

42 Wēntil-sēo ‘Wendle-sea’ | The Mediterranean Sea, the name referring to the Vandali, who for a time ruled North Africa.

Hildbrand spoke, Harbrand's son:
 “Well do I behold on thy garb, that thou yet in this realm hast not become an exile.”

48 „welaga nú waltant got (kwad Hilti-brant) wê-wurt skihit

“Well now—O Ruler God!—the woeful weird comes to pass.
 I roamed for sixty summers and winters from the land, where I always was placed in the troop of shooters,
 as at no fortress my bane was fastened.—
 Now shall my very child hew at me with his sword, strike me with his blade, or I become his bane.
 Yet mayst thou now easily—if thy zeal avail thee—
 from such a hoary man win the garb, bear away the booty—if thou have any right thereto!”

56 bi·rahanen | bibrabanen ms.

48 waltant got ‘O Ruler God!’ | Cf. OE wealdend god, OS waldand god. Apparently a common West Germanic poetic expression.

48 wê-wurt ‘woeful weird’ | wurt ‘weird’ here meaning ‘inexorable course of events’, not the noun; cf. ON grimmar urðir ‘grim “weirds”’ TODO.

49 sumaro ġnti wintro · sehs-tik ‘sixty summers and winters’ | i.e. thirty years. Cf. Beow 1498, 1769: bund misséra ‘a hundred half-years’. Hathbrand must then be thirty years old, while Hildbrand is in his fifties or sixties.

50 skeoġantero ‘shooters’ | Cf. Beow 702, where the OE cognate sceotend stands for “warriors” in general.

54 ibu dir dīn ġllen taok ‘if thy zeal avail thee’ | Formulaic. Cf. Beow 572b–573: [...] · Wýrd oft nēreð // un-fēgne eorl · þonne his ġllen deab. ‘Weird often saves the un-fey earl when his zeal avails.’

8 éastan of ƿngle, · Eorman-ríces, wr̃aþes wær-logan. · ƿn·gōnn þá worn sprecan:

Widsith spoke, unlocked his word-hoard,
he who mots through tribes on earth and nations had journeyed. Oft on the bench had he received delightful treasures. From the Mirgings his ancestry stemmed. Along with Elhild, the good peace-weaveress, for the first time had he sought out the Reth-King's realm, east of the Angles, [the realm of] Erminric, the fierce oath-breaker. He then began a long speech:

6 freoþu-wēbban ‘peace-weaveress’ | A woman used in a political marriage to bring peace between two tribes or families, in this case between King Edwin of the Mirgings (see ll. 97–98) and Erminric of the Gots.

7 Hreð-cyniges ‘Reth-King’ | The king of the Reth-Gots, which is apparently just a poetic name for the (Eastern) Gots; cf. ll. 18, 57, 88–89.

 2 Sceal þeōða ge·hwylc · þeawum lifgan,

“A great deal of men I’ve learned ruling tribes.
 Every person shall live in virtue,
 each earl after the other lead his homeland who on his ruling-seat will prosper.

- 3 Þāra wæs Wala · hwīle sélast,

Of them was Wale for a while the best,
 and Alexander of all the strongest of mankind, and he prospered most of those men over the earth of whom I’ve learned.

 Bicke the Banings, Yivick the Burgends.

 Hain the Holmrighs and Henden the Glams.”

 4 ac Offa ge-slōg · ārest mōnna,

Offe ruled the Angles, Alewigh the Danes;
 of those men he was the bravest of all,
 but he never furthered greater earlship than Offe,
 for Offe won—youngest of men,
 still a boy—the greatest of kingdoms.

 Engle ƿnd Swāfe, · swā hit Offa ge-slōg.

No man of his age accomplished greater earlship: with but one sword he marked the border against the Mirgings by Fiveldoor. It was thenceforth held by the Angles and Sweves as Offe had won it.

Rotholf and Rothgar held for the longest the peace together, uncle and nephew, since they drove away the race of Wikings,

 and bent down Ingeld's spear-point;
 at Hart they cut down the host of the Hathbeards.

So I journeyed through a great deal of strange lands through the wide world. Of good and evil
 I there became acquainted; of kin deprived, far from dear kinsmen, I strayed widely.

And I was with Ermenric for the longest time,
 where the king of the Gots treated me well.
 He gave me a bigh—that chief of city-dwellers—in which were reckoned six hundred shats of purest gold in shilling-count.
 I gave it in the possession of Edgils
 my dear shelter and lord, when I came home,
 as repayment for his giving me land,

And then Elhild gave me another,
 the noble queen of the old troop, daughter of Edwin.
 Her praise stretched further through a multitude of lands;
 then I in song should say,
 where beneath the heaven I know the most blessed gold-adorned queen dispensing gifts.

Then I and Shilling with clear voices, before our victorious lord raised up a song, loudly by the harp—the tune rang out.
 Then many men proud of heart told with words—those who knew well—that they never had heard a better song.

So passing through fates they wander,
 the song-men of mankind, through many lands;
 they say their needs, speak thoughtful words;
 whether in the south or north they meet some one,
 gay in songs, unstingy with gifts,
 who for the old troop will rear up doom, accomplish earlship until all goes away, light and life together. He who works praise has under the heavens a high, firm doom.

Introduction

A heroic poem preserved in two fragments. The flyting between the heroes Walder and Guthur in fragment 2 is very reminiscent of the dialogue in Hildebrand.

Introduction

A dirge from the Exeter Book. The poem briefly summarizes the tragic lives of five figures from Germanic heroic legend, each ending with the refrain Þæs ofer-eode · þisses swá mæg ‘That passed over; this may likewise.’ After this he reflects on fate, and finally tells of his own tragedy.

1. Wayland the Smith, who was captured by the tyrant Nithad and forced to make jewelry for him and his family. He took revenge by raping
2. Nithad’s daughter, Beadhild. The child born from this act was Woody (OE Wudga), an obscure hero.
3. Mathild, the protagonist of a poorly attested love tragedy.
4. Thedric the Great, who ruled over the Gots before
5. Erminric.

The name Déor is the ancestor of modern English “deer”, and can mean this in Old English as well, but it can also mean ‘beast, animal’. It is not otherwise known as a personal name, but we may perhaps compare Fáfn 2, where the young hero Siward calls himself gofugt dýr ‘noble beast/deer’.

Poetry on Christian Subjects

Old Saxon Baptismal Vow

Dating: ?
Meter: None

Introduction

While not an alliterative poem in the slightest, this short text is important for its mention of Saxon Heathen Gods, for which reason I have here set it before the Christian poetry, in order to give some relevant cultural context.

The format of the text is straight-forward and resembles the modern Catholic questions posed to participants during the Sacrament of Confirmation (TODO: reference). The person to be baptised is to respond positively to three denying and three affirming questions; first to forsake the Devil, all “Devil-yields” (i.e. non-Christian rituals, see note to that word), and all the Devil’s works and words and followers, among which are listed the three Germanic-Saxon gods Thunder, Woden, and Saxneet; second to profess belief in each member of the Trinity: God the Almighty Father, Christ, son of God, and the Holy Ghost (P6).

Old Saxon Baptismal Vow

„For·sachistu diobole?“ et respondeat: „ec for·sacho diabole“

“Forsakest thou the Devil?” and he should respond: “I forsake the Devil.”

² „end allum diabol-gelde?“ respondeat: „end ec for·sacho allum diabol-gelde.“

“And all devil-yields?” he should respond: “I forsake all devil-yields.”

² diabol-gelde ‘devil-yields’ | An obvious calque of OE TODO, which means TODO.

- 4 „End allum dioboles wercum?“ respondeat „end ec for·sacho al-lum dioboles wercum and wordum, Thuner ende Wōden ende
 6 Sax·nôte ende allem them un·holdum the hira ge·nôtas sint.“

“And all the Devil’s works” he should respond: “and I forsake all the works and words of the Devil; Thunder and Weden and Saxneet and all those unhold ones who are their fellows.”

- 8 „Ge·lôbistu in Got ala·męhtigun fader?“ „Ec ge·lôbo in Got alamęhtigun fader.“

“Believest thou in God, the almighty father?” “I believe in God, the almighty father.”

- 10 „Ge·lôbistu in Crist Godes suno?“ „Ec ge·lôbo in Crist Gotes suno.“

“Believest thou in Christ, God’s son?” “I believe in Christ, God’s son.”

„Ge·lôbistu in hâlogan gâst?“ „Ec ge·lôbo in hâlogan gâst.“
 “Believest thou in the Holy Ghost?” “I believe in the Holy Ghost.”

Heliland

Dating: 830s

Introduction

The Heliland (OS Hēljand ‘Saviour’, cf. OE Hēlend, German Heiland) is an Old Saxon epic poem that narrates the life of Jesus. It is by far the most important source of Old Saxon literature. Heli is essentially a verse paraphrase of Tatian’s C2nd gospel harmony, the Diatessaron.

A Latin preface is preserved independently of the poem itself. According to this short text, Heli was composed at the behest of emperor Ludwig (Ludowicus, probably Louis ‘the Pious’ 778–840, son of Charlemagne), who commanded a Saxon man, “one who was regarded among his own as a not undistinguished poet” (qui apud suos non ignobilis vates habebatur) to render the entirety of the Old and New Testaments into Germanic verse. Thus, he, “beginning with the creation of the world, and summarizing according to the truth of history the most significant events, at times depicting certain events with a mystical sense where he saw fit, led the interpretation, according to poetic custom and with rather witty eloquence, through to the end of the entire Old and New Testaments.” (a mundi creatione initium capiens, iuxta historiae veritatem quaeque excellentiora summatim decerpens, interdum quaedam ubi commodum duxit, mystico sensu depingens, ad finem totius Veteris ac Novi Testamenti interpretando more poetico satis faceta eloquentia perduxit.) According to native custom, the work was divided into fitts (vitteas).

There is no reason to doubt the general truth of this account, although it is hard to believe that he should have rendered the entirety of the Old and New Testaments, including the prophets and epistles, into alliterative poetry. The rendering of the Old Testament is probably to be identified with OS Gen, while the New Testament is what we have before us.

At the end of this preface we are faced with something more unbelievable, for we are told that “they say that this same poet, while he was still entirely ignorant of this art, was warned in a dream to adapt the precepts of the Sacred Law into song, with a fitting melody in his own language.” (ferunt eundem Vatem dum adhuc artis huius penitus esset ignarus, in somnis esse admonitum, ut Sacrae Legis praecepta ad cantilenam propriae linguae congrua modulatione coaptaret.)

This story can scarcely be true, for the poetry of Heli and OSGen is very intricate, and the poet was certainly trained in the traditional craft. Good evidence for that fact can be found in his use of such Beowulfian type scenes as the great feast in the mead-hall (2005–12, 2736–42) or the stormy sea-voyage (2233–68, 2906–65). It is just in these episodes that the poetry is most fluid and expressive, for it is here that he can make use of his inherited stock of oral poetic formulaic expressions, synonyms, and kennings. Likewise, the language of Christ's disciples, with their talk of ever-lasting fame and glory (e.g. Thomas's speech 3994–4002), and their service as thanes to their lord (drihten) Christ, clearly harkens back to pagan heroic poetry, as does the constant emphasis on the noble ancestry of Christ and his disciples—these are no commoners!

On the other hand we should not make the mistake (as some authors have done) of taking these traditional elements as proof that the religion of Heli is some kind of Germanic warrior Christianity. Such elements were unavoidable since they were built into the very essence of the traditional poetry, but in spite of them the Christian message of pacifism and humility is ever present, and the Germanic warrior ideology comes under direct attack, e.g. in lines 5040–45. I will but mention two other important changes. First, the concept of hostile fate, seen e.g. in Hildebrand l. 48, since although fated events are referred to by (what are in all likelihood originally pagan) expressions like regano-gi-skapu 'shapes of the Reins', they are also godes gi-skapu 'God's shapes', indicating that God is the ruler of the destinies of men, not hostile Norns. Second the language of war, especially in the disuse of the traditional feminine words for war, gūðia* and hildi. Both are very common in Hildebrand and Old Norse and English poetry, but in Heli the former is entirely absent, while the latter is only used twice, in both cases disparagingly.

Notes on the normalization:

- Long vowels are marked by the acute rather than by the circumflex accent or macron. This is both faithful to the original manuscripts and concordant with my practice in normalising other Germanic languages.
- Long vowels ê and ô resulting from monophthongisation of diphthongs ai and au are, however, written with the circumflex accent. That these were in fact articulated separately is seen by the following circumstance: in the mss. etymological é and ó are frequently written as ie and uo, but this is never done for ê and ô.
- If attested in all mss., epenthetic (svara-b^hakti) vowels are marked with an underdot. Otherwise they are deleted.
- Unstressed a-vowels reduced to e in C are reverted back to a - Long vowels resulting from nasal assimilation are marked with an over-dot. i is written as ī.

- ms. e and i, when occurring between vowels are written as j.
- ms. i, when word-initial or following g and corresponding to etymological j is written as j.
- ms. e as resulting from i-mutation is written as ē.
- ms. b or ḃ, when representing the voiced bilabial fricative, is written as v.
- ms. th is written as þ.
- ms. uu is written as w.

The following is an exhaustive list of source mss. in chronological order.

Siglum	Date	Lines	Full name
L	840–850	TODO	(Thomas 4073 (Ms))
P	840–850	TODO	(R 56/2537 (PA))
V	800–850	1279–1358a	(Palatini Latini 1447)
S	850	TODO	(cgm. 8840)
M	850–875	TODO	(cgm. 25)
C	950–1000	TODO	(Cotton Caligula A. VII sign. 3-11)

The two main mss. are M and C. Fragments L and P are identical in terms of handwriting and page layout and appear to have originally belonged to the same codex. V is the same ms., as OSGen, which suggests a close relation between that text and Heli.

The following is very much a work in progress. The radically normalized orthography has been implemented, as has the marking of alliteration, but the original text has not been critically edited, nor is there any English translation.

Old Saxon Genesis

Dating: C9th

Meter: Ancient-words-law

Introduction

The normalization follows that adapted for Heli. There is only one ms., Palatinus latinus 1447 (V, https://digi.vatlib.it/view/MSS_Pal.lat.1447/0005), where the poem is found written on a few fragmentary pages between Latin theological texts. In this ms. a small fragment of the Heli is also found.

Much of the poem, including parts not extant in V, was closely translated into Old English and later inserted into an English poem on Genesis. The translation is called Genesis B, and will be edited below. Lines 1–26 of the present poem correspond almost exactly with lines 791–817 of that poem.

Dating: C9th

Introduction

Found in the margins of a single theological manuscript from the 820s, CLM 14098.

The second sound shift is applied consistently. That this was the case at the time of composition is seen by the alliteration between Latin borrowings beginning with p- and Germanic words originally beginning with b-:

- l. 16: Germanic pú (= OS bú) — pardisu (< Latin paradisum),
- l. 21: Germanic piutit (= OS biudid) — pebbes (< Latin pix) and pína (< Latin poena),
- l. 25: Germanic prinnan (= OS brinnan) and palw- (= OS balu) — pebbe (see above).

Wessobrunn Hymn

Dating: late 700s

Meter: Ancient-words-law

Introduction

This text can be split into two parts, the poem and the prayer. Following my principle of including sources rather than excluding (TODO: see Introduction), I here present both.

The first part is a short alliterative poem describing the earliest beginning of the world. The poet describes “the greatest of wonders”, namely that the universe began as a void, where neither earth nor heaven existed. In this void was, however, the almighty God, along with his many spirits (presumably the Heavenly Host or the Angels). While the cosmogony expressed is clearly Jewish-Christian rather than Germanic, the poem does contain two word-pairs also found in Norse Heathen stanzas about the creation of the world (see Notes to ll. 2, 3.), which may point toward a repurposing of older Heathen motifs and expressions in the new, Christian context.

The second part is a thoroughly Christian prayer. The author first thanks God for creating the earth and heaven, this is presumably why the poem was included, and for giving good things to mankind. He then asks for faith, strength and wisdom to help him in his mission.

Hymn from Wessobrunn

2 Dat ga·fregin ih mit fīrahim · firi·wizzó meīsta, dat erdo ni was · noh úf-himil noh paum · noh perek ni was 4 ni [...] nohh-ēinig · noh sunna ni skēin noh máno ni liuhta · noh der márjo sēo.
6 Dó dar ni·wiht ni was · ċntjó ni wēntjó,

- 8 $\text{ęnti dó was der ęino} \cdot \text{al-mahtiko kot,}$
 $\text{manno miltisto,} \cdot \text{ęnti dar wárun auh manaké mit inan}$
 $\text{kót-líhhé gęistá,} \cdot \text{ęnti kot heĭlak.}$

I have learned among men that greatest of wonders, that earth was not nor up-heaven,
 nor wood nor mountain was not,
 nor any [...]; nor did the sun shine,
 nor the moon give off light, nor the glittering sea.
 Then there was no kind of end or border,
 and then was the One Almighty God,
 the Mildest of Men [= Christ], and there were also many with Him:
 good ghosts, and Holy God.

2. erdo | ero ms.

2. erdo ... uf-himil 'earth ... up-heaven' | A formulaic merism attested across the Germanic world, expressing the totality of the universe. Cf. especially Vafþ 21, where the god Woden asks the ettin Webthrithner about the origin of "earth and up-heaven", and Vsp 3/3, where it is said, about the time before the World existed, that "earth and up-heaven" never existed.

3. noh paum · noh perek ni was 'nor wood nor mountain was not' | The same word-pair is found in Grm 40 (describing the creation of the world from Yimer's body by the Gods) and in Muspilli 50 (describing the Christian destruction of the world prior to the Judgment.) The meter of the line is very poor; there may perhaps originally have been a third word starting with p-.

- Pr Kot al-mahtiko, dú himil ęnti erda ga·worahtós, ęnti dú mannun 2 só manak kót for·gápi, for·gip mir in dína ga·náda rehta ga·laupa,

 4 widar·stantanne, ęnti ark za pi·wísanne, ęnti dínan willjon za ga·wurkhanne.

O God almighty! Thou didst work heaven and earth and Thou didst give men so much good. Give me in Thy mercy right belief and good will; wisdom and foresight and power to withstand devils and to reproach queerness and to work thy will.

Cadman's Hymn

Introduction

Found in Bede's English history.

Cadman's Hymn

Nú scylun hērgan · hevēn-ricæs ward,

Þā middun-geard · mōn-cynnæs ward,

Now shall we praise the Heavenly Kingdom's Guardian, the Measurer's might and his strong thought,
the works of the Glory-Father, as he every wonder,
the everlasting Lord, in the beginning set up.
He first created for the children of men
the heaven as a roof, the holy Creator.
Then Middenyard did Mankind's Guardian, the everlasting Lord, afterwards make:
the land for humans, the Lord Almighty.

Galders: Poetic Charms, Spells, and Curses

Under this section are gathered sundry galders (metrical magic charms) attested in Old Germanic languages. I have only included those with clear Heathen or otherwise traditional elements (especially certain poetic formulae known from older texts). Thoroughly Christian prayers are found below under "Poetry on Christian Subjects".

Continental Germanic galders

The Two Merseburg galders

Dating: C9th–10th

Meter: Ancient-words-law, Galders-law

These two galders, preserved in a manuscript (TODO) are some of the only surviving examples of genuine Heathen galders from the continent. Both share a common two-part structure, each beginning with an historiola—a “historical” account describing the successful effects of the galder in the mythic past—followed by an imperative commanding that the willed magic effect take place in the present.

The first galder begins with the historiola describing a group of supernatural women in the midst of a battle, affecting its outcome by fastening or loosening fetters. The imperative then commands that some fetters in the present be destroyed, so that captive(s) may escape.

The second galder begins with the historiola describing a group of Gods riding through the woods. Among them is Balder, whose young foal sprains its foot. Three Gods—the otherwise unknown goddess Sithguth, the goddess Sun, the god Weden—in turn chant a healing galder over it. The imperative—apparently the galder sung by Weden—then commands that a present sprain be healed.

 .H.

Of yore sat dises, sat here, then there:

Destroy the fetter-bonds, lead the way from the foes!
 .H.

3 kuonjo-widi ‘chains’ | A rare word apparently cognate with Gothic kuna-wida ‘Fessel; ἄλυσις’ (Streitberg, 1910, p. 76), although the first element is not formally identical.

5 .H. | The meaning of this letter, which is very clear and written in the same hand as the galders, is uncertain. To me the most convincing suggestion is that it be read as .N., short for Latin nomen ‘name’, presumably the name of the person whom the singer wishes to free from the fetters.

Phol and Weden journeyed in the woods;
 then was the foot of Balder’s foal sprained.
 Then Sithguth begaled him—Sun her sister;
 then Frie begaled him—Full her sister;
 then Weden begaled him, as well he knew:
 “Like bone-sprain, like blood-sprain, like joint-sprain!
 Bone to bone,

3 bi-guol en ‘begaled him’ | Sang a galder over the horse, the third past singular of bi-galan ‘begale’, the transitive of galan ‘gale, sing a galder’. Cf. Oddrgr TODO, where a midwife “gales” “bitter galders” over a birthing mother.

Against wyrms (Contra vermes)

Dating: ?

Meter: Ancient-words-law

An Old Saxon manuscript charm against wyrms located in the bone-marrow, probably thought to cause aching. The galder calls upon a chief worm, Nesse, and its nine offspring, to depart from the patient. It lays out a path for the worms, who are to leave the sufferer’s body and instead go into an arrow or sharp point (strála), probably a ritual implement used to pierce the affect area.

The structure “Go from X to Y, from Y to Z” may be very old, as it is also found in Romani charms collected by Leland (1891, pp. 27, 28, 95). The charm on p. 95 is also against wyrms. Like in our galder the wyrms (kirmora, from Sanskrit kṛmi, which is probably related to Germanic wurmiz*, although the difference in the initial consonant is unusual—perhaps a taboo formation?) are to leave the body and instead go into the ritual implement, in the Gypsy charm an ointment. I take me the freedom to reproduce this charm in full, with Leland’s introduction and translation:

“Before sunrise wolf’s milk (Wolfsmilch, rukeskro tçud) is collected, mixed with salt, garlic, and water, put into a pot, and boiled down to a brew. With a part of this the afflicted spot is rubbed, the rest is thrown into a brook, with the words:—

Kirmora jânen ândre tçud
Andrâl tçud, andré sir
Andrâl sir, andré pâñi,
Panensâ kiyâ dâdeske,
Kiyâ Nivâseske
Pçândel tumen shelehâ Eñâvârdesh teñâ!

‘Worms go in the milk,
 From the milk into the garlic,
 From the garlic into the water,
 With the water to (your) father,
 To the Nivasi,
 He shall bind you with a rope,
 Ninety-nine (yards long).’”

2 Gang út, Nesso, · mid nigun nessi-klínon, ut fana þemo marge an þat bën, · fan þemo bêne an þat fleşg, 4 ut fan þemo fleşgke an þia húd, · ut fan þera húd an þesa strála.
 Drohtin, werþe só.

Go out, O Nesse, with the nine small Nesses!
 Out from the marrow into the bone, from the bone into the flesh, out from the flesh into the skin, out from the skin into this arrow.
 Lord, may it be so.

1 Nesso ‘Nesse’ | The namíng of the daemon or being which is to be excised is common in ancient magic, including several other galders edited here. The idea is that knowledge of the name of the entity gives the healer power over it.

Old Norse galders

Ribe galder stick (DR EM85;493)

Dating: Medieval.

Meter: Ancient-words-law, Galders-law

A wooden stick from the Danish city of Ribe. The galder is syncretic, and as such contains numerous pre-Christian elements, albeit in a Christian(ised) context.

The inscription may be conveniently divided into four parts. Part one (ll. 1–4) contains an introductory prayer where the healer asks for the support of natural forces (Earth, Up-heaven and the Sun) and Christian divinities (God and Saint Mary), that the healing may be successful. Part two (ll. 5–8) ritually exorcises any sickness which may have entered any part of the body. Part three (ll. 9–14) apparently warns the addressee that they will be haunted by “nine needs” (an old Heathen formula; see Note) until they pray. Part four (ll. 15, which is probably prose) gives the personal name “Bonde”, perhaps the addressee, and concludes with an “Amen”.

The Canterbury Galder

Dating: c. 1075

Meter: Ancient-words-law

This Old Norse galder is found in the Anglo-Saxon manuscript Cotton Caligula A XV. It runs across the bottom margin of the two facing pages 123v and 124r and is written in very clear runes of Wiking Age long-stave type. One rune, viz. g in vigi vegi ‘smite’ is “stung”. The text has no word separators.

The galder is very similar to those on the amulets from Sigtuna (UFv1933;134, UNOR1998;25) below. They all belong to a type of magical healing where an illness-causing devil is commanded to leave the suffering person. The final line, viðr áðra-vari ‘against pus of veins’ is probably a declaration of purpose.

Galders from Bryggen

Several galders or magical inscriptions are part of the cache of medieval rune-inscribed objects found at Bryggen in the city of Bergen, Norway. For simplicity's sake, they are here listed in ascending order of their runological numbers.

B 257

Dating: c. 1335

Meter: Galders-law

A stick inscribed on four planed sides. Part of the stick is broken off, which renders the text incomplete. The inscription is clearly a “love-charm” (that is, a piece of sexually coercive magic), addressed—as shown by the feminine dative sjalfri þér ‘thy self’ on side D—to a woman. The language closely resembles that of Skm 36, in which Shirner, Free’s servant, threatens to carve a runic inscription which will curse the ettin-woman Gird with ergi ‘queerness, degeneracy’, óði ‘madness’, and ó-þoli ‘restlessness, impatience’ unless she sleep with his master. It seems that we are here dealing with just such a surviving runic curse, and that Skm 36 is reflecting an authentic form of Norse “love magic” (for it is unlikely that the present inscription should derive directly from that poem) by which a woman is cursed with sexual restlessness until she succumb to the will of the male curser.

A more distant parallel may be seen in the curse-formula found on the two C7th runic inscriptions from Stentoften and Björketorp (see TODO), wherein the destroyer of the respective monuments is cursed to become herma-lauser argjú ‘restless (a different root from ó-þoli above!) with queerness’, i.e. ‘incessantly randy’.

Side D ends with a string of fake-Latin gibberish, a clear sign of Christian syncretic influence on the Old Norse-Germanic magical tradition.

A short little charm explicitly invoking the two most important Heathen Gods, Thunder and Woden. The inscription postdates the official conversion of Norway by over a hundred years, and it is an open question whether the two mentioned gods were still seen in a good light or whether they had already been assimilated into the Catholic system of demons and devils. This question is important since it determines the context of the letter: was it well-wishing, assuming that the receiver was of like mind to the sender, or did he have more sinister intent than the first line lets on? Judging from the first line, and from the half-Heathen contents of many other inscriptions found at Bryggen (some from as late as the C14th), I see it as crypto-Heathen.

Miscellaneous Runic Poetry

Introuction to Runic Poetry

Not all poetry preserved in Runic inscriptions is included here; see below under Galders. The stanza from the Rök runestone will be found under Norse Heroic Poetry, and the Runic version of the Dream of the Rood under Christian poetry.

Metrically the poetry is generally in Ancient-words-law. A few fragments from Jutland are in Leeds-meter and two from Sweden are in Court-recited meter.

Three Rune Poems

Introduction to the Rune Poems

TODO: Acrophonic principle

The order and names of the letters in the Runic alphabets or futharks stayed relatively consistent throughout the many centuries and countries in which they were used. This can probably be ascribed to the rune poems—poetic lists of the names of each rune with a short explanation, passed down orally as mnemonic devices to aid early Germanic learners, who were doubtless far more accustomed to learn by heart spoken poems than written letters.

Three such rune poems survive, from three countries: England, Norway, and Iceland. The English rune poem documents the English futhorc, while the Norwegian and Icelandic document the Scandinavian younger futhark.

When compared to the Common Germanic elder futhark, these two daughter scripts have taken opposing paths. Whereas the English futhorc has appended several letters for new vowels to the end of the rune row, the Scandinavian futhark has instead done away with numerous runes, namely those for ng, plosives d, g, p, the semi-vowel w and the vowels o and e, along with the obscure hook-shaped rune (TODO). That much of this simplification was probably intentional, rather than the result of neglect or language change, is seen from the following facts.

First, several of the lost runes stood for sounds that did not undergo any major sound shifts in the North Germanic languages in the relevant time period. For instance, all modern Scandinavian dialects still clearly distinguish between the initial consonants in the descendants of dagr ‘day’ and Týr ‘Tew’, and most even have the same articulation of these consonants as modern English.

Second, in two archaic runic inscriptions we find clear proof that the names and sound values of some of the lost runes were still remembered and passed down even after the adoption of the simplified younger futhark. On the Swedish Rök stone (Ög 136), which is mostly composed in the younger futhark, runes of the elder futhark are used in a cipher, which works in the following way: Every younger futhark rune representing two distinct phonemes, where one of those was the sound value of that rune in the elder futhark system, and the other has been assimilated from a lost rune, is replaced by the elder futhark rune whose value it assimilated. For instance, the k rune, which in the elder futhark stood for only /k/, but which in the younger futhark stands for both /k/ and /g/, is replaced with the old g rune. A similar instance of two-scriptedness is found on the Ingelsta stone (Ög 43), where the old d rune is used in an otherwise younger futhark inscription, probably standing for its name dagr ‘day’, which is also attested as a male given name.

Third, there is virtually no regional variation in which runes disappear in the transition from elder to younger futhark. There is some variation in their shapes, but there is no region which, say, simplifies only the plosive consonants t/d, k/g, b/p > t, k, b, but retains the written distinction between o and u—they all go away at once.

These facts point away from neglect or a natural development of the script—they instead suggest deliberate reform. Since we lack historical sources, the motivations behind such a reform can only be guessed at, but making the script simpler may have been intended to increase literacy by making it easier to learn and faster to write. If this were the case it was certainly successful: the transition to the simplified younger futhark brings with it a huge increase in inscriptions in Scandinavia, along with interest in various ciphers, and a new tradition of inscribed stones in Denmark, where they were previously unknown.

This new system also quickly gave rise to even more simplified systems, like the “short-stave” runes found already on the C9th Rök stone, or the “staveless” runes known from northern Sweden. Both of these variants make it even faster to write on materials like wood, wax and bone; the runes also take up less space—very useful for carvers writing on limited surfaces.

In any case, the names of the runes seem to have survived these developments. Of the 16 runes found in both the English and Icelandic (which appears to be more conservative than the Norwegian) rune poems, 10—f, r, h, n, i, j, s, b, m and l—have etymologically identical names. Three of the remaining six—þ, a and t—in the Icelandic stand for words with clear Heathen associations—Thurse, Os, and Tew—and so may have been changed deliberately after the conversion of England, rather than lost in the process of oral transmission. Two more—u and k—have names which agree in form but not in meaning. Thus it is only the old ᚱ-rune where this is total disagreement about its ancient name. This is easily understood, since the sound which that rune designated was lost in early Old English.

The Norwegian Rune Poem

Dating: Medieval.

Meter: Unclear.

The Norwegian rune poem is clearly very closely related to the Icelandic. With the exception of runes 2 (úr 'slag') and 4 (óss 'river-mouth'), the names of the runes are identical, as are many of the kennings used to describe them.

Still the language is unmistakably that of mediæval Norway. As can be seen from the rhymes and alliteration the following uniquely Norwegian sound changes have occurred:

- hl, hn, hr > l, n, r (2 lęyr < hlęyr; 8 nęppa < hnęppa; 5 rosum < brosum).
- rst > st (5 vęsta < vęrsta)

Cultural and religious terms and expressions (C)

All Gods (ON ǫll goð) Occurs especially in ritual or ritual-adjacent use (Grm 43, Lok 11; cf. Hákm 18, where the piety of the dead king Hathkin is shown by his being greeted by rǫð ǫll ok rǫgin ‘all the Redes and Reins’, and the prayer in Sigrdr 3–4, which collectively invokes the Eese and Ossens). This suggests a native Germanic conception of Godly Oneness; see also the Thing of the Gods, where the Gods gather to steer the fates of the world.

Similar expressions are found in other old Indo-European religions, e.g. the Vedic vīṣve devāḥ ‘All Gods’, to Whom are dedicated numerous hymns of ṚV, and the Greek Πάν·θειον, that is, a temple dedicated to All Gods.

The idea of Godly Oneness may have been disputed; about this Saxo Grammaticus (2015) 1.7.2 gives an interesting anecdote. At one point Weden departed, and during his absence was usurped by the obscure Mithothin (perhaps “With-Weden”), who reformed the cult:

Cuius secessu Mithothyn quidam prestigiis celebrer, perinde ac celesti beneficio vegetatus, occasionem et ipse fingende divinitatis arripuit barbarasque mentes novis erroris tenebris circumfusus prestigiarum fama ad cerimonias suo nomini persolvendas adduxit. Hic deorum iram aut numinum violationem confusus permixtisque sacrificiis expiari negabat ideoque eis vota communiter nuncupari prohibebat, discreta superum cuique libamenta constituens. Qui cum Othino redeunte relicta prestigiarum ope latendi gratia Pheoniam accessisset, concursu incolarum occiditur.

‘A certain Mithodin, a famous illusionist, was animated at his departure as if by a kindness from heaven and snatched the chance to pretend divinity himself; his reputation for magicianship clouded the barbarians’ minds with the murk of a new superstition and led them to perform holy rites to his name. He asserted that the gods’ wrath and the profanation of their divine authority could not be expiated by confused and mingled sacrifices; so he arranged that they must not be prayed to as a group, but separate offerings (libamenta) be made to each deity. When Odin returned, the other no longer resorted to his conjuring but went off to hide in Funen, where he was rushed upon and killed by the inhabitants.’

This obviously mythologised retelling may perhaps reflect an actual historical theological conflict or attempted religious reform, but if that is the case it does not appear to have been successful.

- ape (ON api, OE apa, OS apo, OHG affo, PNWGmc. apó*) In the Old Norse the word seems to mean ‘fool, buffoon’, in the other old languages apparently ‘monkey’, though this sense should be a later development of the former; why would the early Germanic tribes have a word for an animal that they had never encountered?
- aught (ON étt, OE éht ‘possession, property’) The Nordic (paternal) clan or family line.
- begale (OHG bi-galan) To enchant, bewitch something or someone by singing a galder. Transitive of gale.
- high (ON baugr, OE béag, OHG boug) Armlets used as currency during the Migration Period. — The giving of rings and armlets in exchange for loyalty (holdness being the word used for a warrior’s loyalty towards his lord, and of a lord’s grace towards his servants) was common across all of Germanic Europe, as seen in the many poetic ruler-kennings of the type “breaker of rings” (e.g. béaga brytta ‘the breaker of highs’ in Beow ll. 35, 352, 1487). An illustrative example of this is Hildebrand 33–35. This is also connected with the oath-ring, and the famous ring-swords. TODO? reference some literature on this.
- blood (ON blót, OE blót, OHG bluoz) A sacrifice or a sacrificial feast, one of the best attested Germanic pagan practices. The animals would be sacrificed by the host, cooked in large kettles and eaten communally. See also blood-house.
- blood-house (ON blót-hús, OHG bluoz-hús) A heathen temple. Glosses Latin fānum in OHG. See also harrow, hove, wigh.
- Doom (ON dómr, OE dóm) Base meaning ‘judgment, verdict’ (whence Doomsday, ‘judgment Day’), but in the Norse and Anglo-Saxon poetry often specifically referring to one’s fame or good reputation (that is, how others will judge one’s character and deeds), especially after death. It is clear that this verdict was of utmost importance to the ancient Germanic people. The clearest examples are Háv 77 (see there): I know one that never dies: the Doom o’er each man dead. and Beow 1384–1389, where Beowulf consols king Rothgar after Grendle’s mother has slain his trusted advisor Asher (Æschere): Ne sorga, snotor guma! · Sélre bið ég-hwém, / þæt hé his fréond wrece, · þonne hé fela murne. / Úre égbwylc sceal · ende ge-bidan / worolde lífes; · wyrce sé þe móte / dômes éar déape; · þæt bið driht-guman / un-lifgendum · æfter sélest.
- ‘Grieve not, wise man! ’Tis better for each one / that he avenge his friend than that he mourn much. / Each one of us shall suffer the end / of worldly life—win he who might / Doom before death: that is for the warrior, / unliving, afterwards the best.’ Other illustrative examples in Beow include 884b–887a: [...] Sige-munde ge-sprong / æfter déað-dæge · dóm un-lýtel / syþðan wíges beard · wyrn á-cwealde / hordes byrde [...] ‘For Syemund sprang up / after his death-day an little feather-hame (ON flaðr-hamr, OE fēðer-hama, OS fēðar-, fēðer-hamo) A plumage which when donned by the wearer lets him fly like, or become a bird. One is owned by Frow and used by Lock to fly between the homes in Þrk. In the Christian Heli feather-hames are donned by angels who fly from heaven to earth. See also hame.

[great] Doom, / since hard in conflict he defeated the wyrm, / the hoard's herder.' and 953b–955a: [...] þú þé self hafast / dēdum ge-frēmed · þæt þín dóm lyfað / áwa tó aldre [...] 'Thou hast for thyself / by deeds accomplished that thy Doom lives / for ever and ever.'

fee (ON fé, OE fēoh) Originally 'cattle, kine', however also used in a broader sense to refer to one's mobile wealth; for that cf. particularly Háv.

fey (ON fēigr, OE fēge, OHG fēigi 'cowardly') Being doomed or fated to die, with a sense of predestination and inevitability. Its earliest documented Scandinavian use is on the Rök stone: aft uamuþ stanta runar þar + n uarin faþi faþir aft faikign sunu Apt Vāmóð standa rúnar þár, en Varinn fáði, faðir aft fēigjan sonu 'After Woemood (Vāmóðr) stand the runes, but Warren (Varinn) painted, the father after the fey son.' See PCRN HS II:35, p. 928 ff. (TODO) feyness (ON fēigð) The state of being fey.

fimble- (ON fimbul-) The ultimate, final, greatest. See Fimblethyle, Fimble-winter.

five days (ON fimm dagar) The Old Scandinavian (and perhaps Germanic) week was originally five days long, the seven-day week being a later import, as seen by the names of the days, which are obviously calqued from the Latin (Dies Mercurii = Weden's day, et.c.). According to the Gula there were six weeks in a month, and "five days" is used as a generic period of time in Háv 51 and 74; in st. 74 it is contrasted with month. Related to this is the legal term fifþ (ON fimmt, OSw. fēmt), a meeting or gathering set to be held at a five-day notice. See fimt in CV, Love et al. (2020) for further discussion.

galder (ON galdr, OE gealdor, OHG galdar) A magical song or incantation, probably synonymous with leed. Verbal noun formed to gale 'to sing, chant'.

gale (ON gala, OE galan, OHG galan) To sing, chant, especially of magical songs; verbal root of galder 'something sung, chanted'.

gand (ON gandr, Latin gandus) A witch's familiar or foul spirit sent out to do her bidding. See PCRN HS I:17, p. 361 and II:26, p. 656. TODO gid (ON goði, OE Gydda masc. given name) A heathen priest or master of ceremonies.

gidden (ON gyðja, OE gyden 'goddess') The womanly equivalent or wife of a gid.

good of meat (ON matar góðr, góðr matar) An old formula appearing in Háv 39 and numerous Swedish Wiking Age Runic inscriptions Sm 39, Sm 44, Sö 130, U 703, and U 805. Cf. U 739 which has the related mildr matar ‘mild of meat’. Antonyms are matar illr ‘evil of meat’ and meat-nothing.

guest (ON gestr, OE giest, OS gast, OHG gast, Got. gasts, PGmc. gastiz) Guests were often strangers, wanderers, who would come to beg for food and lodgings. The Old Germanic peoples placed great value on hospitality. TODO.

hame (ON hamr) A skin, shape. People could “shift hames” (ON skipta hōmum), leaving their human hames behind and instead entering into the shapes of wolves, bears, birds. During this process the original hame, that is, the human body, would be sleeping in a vulnerable state. A concise description of this is found in IngS 7: Óðinn skipti hōmum, lá þá búkr’inn sem sofinn eða dauðr, en hann var þá fugl eða dýr, fiskr eða ormr, ok fór á einni svipstund á fjarlæg lōnd at sinum erendum eða annarra manna. ‘Weden shifted hames; then lay the trunk of his body as if sleeping or dead, but he was then a fowl or beast, a fish or serpent, and journeyed in a short while to foreign lands with his errands or those of other men.’

See also feather-hame, town-rideresses, evening-rideresses.

harrow (ON høgr, OE hearg, PNWGmc. harugar*) A hallowed cairn or stone-heap. Hdl 10 describes the construction of one. The Norwegian laws prescribe the “breaking of harrows and burning of hoves”.

See also hove, wigh.

hold (ON hollr, OE hold, OS hold, OHG hold) ‘Favourable, loyal, gracious’, often of a ruler towards his subject (in the sense of ‘gracious, benevolent’) or vice-versa (in the sense of ‘loyal, devoted’). Mirroring these earthly relationships, it is often used to refer to divine grace, both of the Christian God—thus in the Ecclesiastical Laws of King Cnut ALIE I (p. 372): Þam byþ witod-lice God hold, þe bið his blāforde riht-lice hold ‘Indeed God is hold to him who is rightly hold to his lord’—but in the oldest Scandinavian material likewise of the Heathen gods. So Lok 4 (e): holl rēgin ‘hold Reins’, and Oddrgr 9/1: Svá hjalpi þér · hollar vettir ‘So help thee hold wights’.

This word is common in old Scandinavian oath formulæ, e.g. in the elder redaction of the West-Geatish Law: Svá sé mér goð holl ‘So may the Gods(!) be hold to me,’ in medieval Norwegian laws (NgL II[197,397]) and Grey-Goose (TODO: cite): Guð sé mér hollr ef ek satt segi, gramr ef ek lȳg ‘God be hold to me if I speak truly, wroth if I lie,’ in Grey-Goose (TODO) also: Sé guð hollr þeim er heldr grīðum, en gramr þeim er grīð rýfr ‘God be hold to him who keeps the truce, but wroth against him who breaks the truce’. I refer to Löffler (1895) for further discussion on these formulæ.

holdness (ON hylli, OE hyldu, OHG huldī) Abstract noun formed to hold, meaning ‘favour, loyalty, grace,’ with the same semantics as the adjective.

Notably, this word appears three times in connection with the grace of gods in the poetry, namely in Grm 43, where (according to my interpretation) the preparer of food at the bloot is said to earn the “holdness of Woulder and of all the gods;” and Grm 53 where the disgraced king Garfrith is said to have been bereft of the support gengi of Weden and all the Oneharriers, and of “Weden’s holdness” (Öðins hylli). “Weden’s holdness” is also mentioned in a stanza by Hallfred (edited as Hfr Lv 7 by Diana Whaley in SkP V), who laments that: “The whole race of man has wrought songs to win the holdness of Weden; I recall the fully rewarded works of our kinsmen/ancestors.”

From the semantics of this word the Germanic view on heavenly grace is clear: the Gods are hold towards those who do good works, which include swearing true oaths, faithfully observing truces, partaking in the bloot, following rules of hospitality, and composing poetry—and gram ‘wroth’ towards those who do the opposite.

Home (ON heimr, OE hám, PNWGmc. haimar*) In the Norse often referring to a realm in the cosmology (Vsp 2: “I remember nine Homes”, Vafþ TODO: “From the runes of the Ettins and of all the gods I can speak truly, for I have come into each Home”). Thus Ettinham is the ‘Home/realm of the ettins’. When used on its own it means ‘the world (that we inhabit)’. See also Nine Homes, Thrithham.

leat (ON blaut) In some saws explained as the blood drained from the offered animal; the verbal root is bljóta ‘to get by lot’ and this word certainly refers to the use of the blood for auguries.

leat-twigg (ON blaut-tǣinn) A twig used to sprinkle the leat. The pattern of the blood would presumably be inspected for the augury; cf. Hym 1.

leek (ON laukr, OE léac, PNWGmc laukar) The leek was a plant of great cultural importance. It was seen as the noblest plant, so Guðr II 2, where Siward’s superiority to the Yivickings is compared to a stag among wild beasts, gold among silver, and a green leek in grass; and Vsp 4, where the earth of the Golden Age was grown with green leek.

The leek was highly valued in folk magic, as seen already on gold bracteates from the C5th and C6th, where it often appears as a charm word in the old form 𐌺𐌹𐌺𐌹 laukar; in one inscription also paired with 𐌺𐌹𐌺 lina ‘linen’. Classical Norse attestations of magic use include Sigrdr 8, where the leek is thrown into mead against poison; and the Völsp, where a horse penis is said to be líni góddr · en laukum studdr ‘endowed with linen and supported by leeks’ in a poetic line. The leek was particularly associated with women and domestic life, as seen by its pairing with “linen” and its frequent use as the determinant in women-kennings (Meissner, 1921, p. 418)). Anon Sveinfl 1 (SkP I) sarcastically states that a battle was not sem manni · mēr lauk eða ǫl bēri ‘as if a maiden brought a man leek or ale’.

leed (ON ljóð, OE léod) A magical chant or incantation, as seen by Háv 153 near-synonymous with galder. See also gale, begale.

manwit (ON man-vit) Common sense and wits.

many-cunning (ON fiql-kunnigr) Skilled with sorcery or the dark arts.

meat-nithing (ON mat-níðingr) One who is a nithing with food, i.e. one who does not properly furnish his guest.

See also good of meat.

nithe (ON níð, OE nīþ, OHG níd) Originally ‘hatred, emnity’. In the Norse the sense has developed in the direction of ‘shame’, not just as a social abstract, but almost a tangible thing. So the curse ritual of Eysel, where the curser will “turn nithe” (snýja níð against his enemy to cause him misfortune. Scolds would “compose nithe” (yrkja níð) through singing slanderous verses, which likewise had an adverse supernatural effect on their subject. See also nothing.

nothing (ON níðingr, OE nīþing) One afflicted with nithe; a villain, criminal. Among the Scandinavians a legal term; a nithing could not swear oaths or bear witness and was forbidden to marry.

orlay (ON orlög, OE orlæg) One’s predetermined fate, destiny, purpose as decreed by the Norns.

queer (ON argr, ragr (with metathesis), OE earg, OHG arg) This derogatory adjective refers to gendered sexual deviancy, typically promiscuity for women and effeminacy or cowardice for men. This is the reason for the present English translation. Unlike the English word, the Old Germanic arg was always a severe insult, and this from an early period; so the Longbeardish Edict of Rothari, codified in 643 AD: Si quis alium arga per furorem clamaverit et negare non potuerit et dixerit, quod per furorem dixisset, tunc iuratus dicat, quod eum arga non cognovisset; postea componat pro ipso iniurioso verbo solidos duodecim. Et si perseveraverit, convincat per pugnam, si potuerit, aut certe componat, ut supra. ‘If anyone calls another man queer in anger, and cannot deny it, and says that it was said in anger, then in his oath he says that he does not know him as queer; let him thereafter settle for the insulting word with twelve solidi. But if he persists, let him prove it by fighting if he can, or otherwise settle it as above.’

rest (ON rǫst) The distance between two rest-stops, a geographical mile (about 1850 metres). See CV: rǫst.

rune (ON rún, OE rún, OS rúna, OHG rúna, Got. rúna, PNWGmc. rünü) An (esoteric) secret message or formula. That this—rather than ‘letter (of a Runic alphabet)’—is the original and proper sense is apparent from among others the Finnish borrowing runo ‘poem; poetry; a division of a poem (specifically of the Kalevala)’, and its use in the singular in the earliest Runic inscriptions (e.g. Noleby Vg 63, which contains the linguistically indecipherable string of letters ᚱᚢᚷᚰᚾᚦᚳᚲᚱᚸᚨᚹᚠᚩᚱᚪᚢᚷᚱᚫ, a rune in the proper sense or the recently discovered Svingerud fragment.) Thus, Weden’s taking of the runes should not be interpreted as merely a myth for the invention of profane writing, but rather the origin of esoteric incantations, not at all unlike Indian māntrās. The word for letter was instead stave, see also there.

scold (ON skald) A Scandinavian court poet. The name probably comes from their ability to slander with words.

simble (ON sumbl, OE symbol) A banquet, symposium.

soo (ON sóa) To ritually waste, to slay in a sacrificial context.

spae (ON spǫ) Prophecy, foresight.

Tables (ON tafl, OE tæfl) Generic term for board games (e.g. chess). In the golden age the Etese played such games (Vǫsp 8). Pre-Christian Germanic burials commonly feature boards and bricks (TODO: reference, maybe to the Salme ship burials).

thill (ON þylja) To recite poetry learned by heart. Cf. the so called thules (poetic lists) and the title thyle.

Thing (ON, OE þing, OS thing, OHG ding) The Old Germanic assembly, where cases were settled and the law determined. In connection with the Thing certain rituals were in order, viz. the enclosing of the space wherein the judges sat by means of wigh-bonds or sacred ropes. Cf. Háv 61 for an excerpt from Germania ch. 22. See also the Thing of the Gods.

thule (ON þula) A poetic list, typically of various items of a category (e.g. gods, legendary horses) or poetic synonyms (e.g. for swords, men, Woden). Decoratively also a ditty, poorly composed poem. See thyle.

thyle (ON pulr, OE hyle, PNW Gmc. pulir*) A sage who through rote learning has acquired a large amount of mythological lore (cf. thule 'a list in poetic form; a ditty, bad poem' and thill 'to recite, to chant'). Thus Weden is the Fimblethyle, being the unbeaten master of lore, as can be seen in his wisdom contests (like Vaff). Runic inscription DR 248 (Snoldelev) suggests that the thyle may have tied to a specific place, and in Beow it seems to have been a court position, with the poet Unferth being described (l. 1456) as the "Rothgar's thyle".

- wale (ON vǫlr) The staff or sceptre of a wallow. TODO: archeological finds, mention Sutton Hoo.
- wallow (ON vǫlva, OE wealwe* (cf. ON svǫlva, OE swealwe 'swallow')) A sibyl, seeress, oracle. The word derives from the wale, a staff or sceptre probably used for ritual purposes.
- wigh (ON vé, OE wéob, wih, PNWGmc. wihq*) A holy place or sanctuary. It seems that where the harrow was a pile of stones or cairn used for carrying out rituals, the wigh was an enclosed space. The earliest Norse attestation is the runic inscription Ög N288 (Oklunda), which reads: "Guthar <= Gunnarr> painted these runes, and he fled, charged (with a crime, sought out this wigh, and he fled into this clearing. [...]" The implication seems to be that the wigh was considered so sacred that Guthar could not be apprehended or punished for his crime while in it.
- In OE the word means 'pagan idol'. It is not immediately clear which meaning is the original one, but in the present edition the Norse sense has been adopted, since the Anglo-Saxon sources are all of a Christian nature. The name Wighstone (Wih- or Wéobstān) as found in Beow in any case suggests it is the Norse meaning, since 'idol-stone' makes little sense.
- wode (ON óðr, OE wód, PNWGmc. wódur*) Heener's gift to men, though the name may suggest it be from Weden. The word has several related meanings: 'mind, (poetic) inspiration, rage'. See also Woderearer.
- wyrm (ON ormr, OE wyrm, PNWGmc. wurmīr*) A dragon, serpent. The distinction between "wyrm" and "worm; snake" is purely editorial and not made in the original languages.
- yin- (ON ginn-) A rare augmentative prefix. TODO.
- yin-holy (ON ginn-ḥeilagr) High holy, sacrosanct. Used of the Gods in the formula ginn-ḥeilǫg goð 'yin-holy Gods'.

Persons and objects (P)

- Attle (Attila, ON Atli, OE Ætla, MHG. Etzel, PNWGmc. Attilô*) The ruler of the Huns (historically from 434–453). Husband of Guthrun, and with her father of Earp and Oatle.

- Beadhild (ON Bǫðvildr, OE Beadobild) The daughter of the tyrannical king Nithad. She is raped by her father's prisoner, Wayland.

- Bellower (ON Bēli) A being fought by Free, who killed him with an antler, having lost his sword after the events of Skm. The myth is very obscure and never told in full. It is shortly mentioned in Gylf 37 and informs the kenning bani Bēlja 'bane of Bellower [= Free]' in Vsp 51/3, along with two Scaldic kennings of the same type.
- Bicke (ON Bikki) A servant or general of Attle.
- Earp and Oatle (ON Erpr ok Eitill) The sons of Attle and Guthrun.
- Earth (ON jörð, OE eorþe, OHG erda, PNWGmc. erþu*, PGmc. erþó*) The personified Earth. By Weden the mother of Thunder.
- Erminric (ON Jǫrmunrekr, OE Eormanric, MHG Ermenrîch) Legendary king of the eastern Gots, based on the historical Ermanaric (dead 376). TODO: Jordanes.
- Fathomer (ON Fáfnir) The son of Rethmar, brother of Otter and Rein. He turns into a great wyrm and is eventually slain by Siward, who takes his treasure.
- Fimblethyle (ON Fimbulþulr) The 'ultimate thyle' or sage; name for Weden.
- Fold (ON Fold, OE Folde) A poetic or ritual name of Earth, especially in her role as Mother Earth. In Germanic poetry the word fold is typically used to simply refer to 'land', however. It is cognate with Sanskrit TODO.
- Foresitter (ON Forseti) An obscure god associated with legal proceedings. TODO.
- Free (ON Frēyr, OE frēa 'lord', PNWGmc. Frauþjar*) Son of Nearth, brother of Frow. See also Ing.

- Frow (ON Frēyja) Cat-goddess, daughter of Nearth, sister of Free, wife of Wode. Promised to the Ettin. Possibly = Easter?
- Full (ON Fulla, OHG Folla) In the Norse sources the maid-servant of Frie. Mers II has her as Frie's sister, though this need not be literal (cf. Hdl i).
- Guthier (ON Gunnarr, MHG Gunther) The lord of the Gots. In the Norse sources the brother of Hain. Historically he is based on king Gundaharius (Gunþiharjaz*) of the Burgundians.
- Guthlathe (ON Gunnlǫð) Daughter of the ettin Sutting; she guarded the Mead of Poetry in the mountain, but gave it to Weden after he seduced her. See Háv 103–110.
- Guthrun (ON Guðrún) Daughter of king Yivick, sister of Guthier and Hain. The wife of Attle.

Hain [Hain 1] (ON Hogni, OE Haguna, Hagena, OHG Hagano, Ger. Hagen, PNWGmc. Hagunó*) A Nivling and Yivicking, son of king Yivick, brother of Guthur and Guthrun. In Akv he defeats seven warriors before being captured by Attle, who has his heart cut out at the request of Guthur.

Hain 2 [2] A petty king of East Geatland, contemporary with Granmer, the king of Southmanland and Ingeld Illred, the Ingling king of Upland.

Hath (ON Hǫðr) The blind son of Weden, the slayer of his brother Balder.

Heener (ON Hónir, PNWGmc. Hónijar ‘the little swan(?)’) An obscure god. Rydberg (1886) [552] has convincingly argued that he is connected with the stork, connecting his name with the Greek κύκνος ‘swan’ and Sanskrit śakuná ‘bird of omen’, and noting that his epithets langi fótr ‘long foot’ and aurkonungr ‘mud-king’ (both found in Skm 22) accurately describe the stork. He gives wode TODO.

Hell (ON Hell) Owneress of Hell.

Hindle (ON Hyndla) A witch awoken by Frow in Hdl.

Homedal (ON Hēimdal(l)r, OE Hāmdeall*) The Watchman of the Gods (vorðr goða Grm 13, Lok 48), whose home is the Heavenbarrows (Grm 13). According to Rþ he fathered the three castes of men, which may also be referenced in Vsp 1/2b. He is the whitest of the Eese (Þrk 15). Homedal was the subject of the lost poem “Homedal’s galder” (Hēimdal-largaldr), of which only two lines survive; see Eddic Fragment 3 under Mythic Poetry.

Hymer (ON Hymir) An ettin, Tew’s father according to Hym.

Ing (ON Yngvi, OE Ing) Probably an older name of Free. The legendary ancestor of the Ingling. Cf. the Old English Rune Poem.

Millner (ON Mjöllnir, OE Meldne*, PNWGmc. Meldunjar*) The hammer of Thunder.

Moon (ON Máni) The personified moon. Son of Mundlefare and brother of the Sun (Vǫlf 23). For ritual invocations of the Moon see Note to Háv TODO (þęiptum kveða).

Mundlefarer (ON Mundilföri or Mundilfari) The father of Sun and Moon (Vǫfþ 23). Perhaps 'Millhandle-turner', if the first element = ON mǫndull 'handle of a mill'.

Nearth (ON Njǫrðr) One of the Waners. Father of Free and Frow.

Nithad (ON Níðuðr, OE Nīþhad, PNWGmc. Nīþa-haduz*) The king that imprisoned Wayland, father of Beadhild and two unnamed sons (Vkv, Deer).

Sithguth (OHG Sinthgunt, PNWGmc. Sinþa-gunþik*(?)) Only known from Mers II as the sister of Sun.

Siward (ON Sigurðr) A hero of the Walsings, slayer of the wyrm Fathomer.
