Notes to English translation

Point about literal translation for use by scholars of comparative mythology The "guiding star" of this translation effort has been literality and consistency. All previous translations (to my knowledge) have such issues as: rendering identically repeated phrases differently at various places; covering up or obscuring technical and cultural terminology; simplifying kennings and other expressions—and this often without notes, to a point where the original meaning is, at times, unrecognizable. While I wholly encourage all readers of sufficient interest to study Old Norse (and other ancient Germanic languages!), perhaps even using the present edition as a tool, I also realize that this is a demanding ask which not all interested students and scholars of comparative mythology, anthropology, literature, religion and other fields will be able to fulfill. I therefore want these groups to be able to have a text that is as close to the original as possible, at the very least when it regards sense and expression.

Anglish proper nouns

One of the most idiosyncratic parts of the present edition will be its handling of proper nouns. I have opted to render all cultural and religious terms, names of places, heroes, gods, and other entities by their English cognates (thus Thunder for Old Norse Pórr) and where such do not exist, their philologically expected English (Anglish) forms (e.g. wallow for Old Norse volva). One reason for this is ideological. I believe that these myths and poems are a common Germanic or Northern European heritage, and should be treated as such. The English once knew gods such as Weden and Thunder, and called them by names naturally evolved in their language. So too did the Germans and Scandinavians, of course, and I would hope that any translators into those languages would follow this spirit and render the names in their natural forms there as well. Another is philological. Forms like Odin and Thor are, while now commonly accepted, debased. They do not even represent the Old Norse pronunciation as accurate as would be possible (for instance, Odin would be better anglicized as Othin; the dental fricative still survives in English!), and many are difficult for English speakers to pronounce. I shudder when hearing a word like ésir pronounced /ar's::1/

Notes to critical edition

My goal with the critical editing of the texts has been to produce something as close to the original mss. as possible, without excessive emendation to the preserved recension(s). There are texts in three languages in the present edition, namely Old Norse, Old English and Old High German. Old Norse texts have been normalized according to roughly the same orthography as Finnur Jónsson (1932). On the other hand the Old High German and Old English texts have only been lightly normalized, correcting obvious errors and marking vowel length with acute accents.

Normalization

My general goal in normalizing texts has been to strive for a uniform orthography, where the same sound is written with the same character. This of course means disregarding local manuscript traditions and philological tradition, but I see this as justified. My goal is to render the texts themselves in a manner that gives as much information as possible; not to present a facsimile edition for students of paleography. Anyway, such aspects as the long \int , arbitrary punctuation and spelling variants, and lack of line breaks are never reproduced in modern editions of poetry.

In practice this means that the acute accent is used in marking long vowels.

¹For instance in German perhaps Wuten, Donner, Froh, in Swedish Oden, Tor, Frö.

0 xi

Normalization of Old Norse

The orthography is inspired by Finnur Jónsson (1932) in that it strives for a more archaic form than the mss., one that accords with the date at which the poetry may been composed. Because of this, it has more in common with that of the First Grammatical Treatise (see (First Grammarian, 1950)) than with the standard Old Icelandic orthography seen in most editions. Thus I make use of ϕ and ϕ' rather than the traditional α and α , to represent the vowels descended from Proto-Norse \bar{o} and \bar{a} after i-umlaut (cf. the short ϕ , e < 0, a + i-umlaut). \acute{a} and $\acute{\phi}$ are kept separate based on etymology. The old s—which is found even in manuscripts such as AM 237 a fol (c. 1150) and was used by Snorre as late as the 1200s but later becomes r—is retained in the words es 'which, that, where, when', es 'is' (3rd sg. pres. ind. of vesa 'to be'), vesa 'to be', and inflections of it such as vas (3rd sg. pret. ind.). Note that the pl. pres. ind. (erum &c.), pl. pret. ind. (výrum &c.) and pl. pret. subj. ((výrim &c.) forms of vesa retain their r, as it is caused by an ancient alternation termed Verner's law, and not the result of this much younger sound change. Superfluous and hypermetrical pronouns (usually ek, hann, hón) have in many places been removed. When metrically beneficient I have contracted ek 'I', eru 'are' and es 'which &c.', es 'is' to 'k, 'ru and 's. I follow Finnur Jónsson (1932)'s method of distinguishing between the relative particle es and verb form es; the first is directly appended to the previous word, whereas the second has a space before it. Thus hann's 'he who, that' but hann 's 'he is'.

Manuscripts

Eddic poetry

There are two surviving ancient mss. which contain full Eddic poems.

The first and most important is GKS 2365 4to, here R. It dates to the 1270s and has 45 surviving leaves, containing TODO poems. Of these 10 are mythological, and the rest heroic, dealing with legends mostly of the Migration Period. Notably, following fol. 32, there is a large gap of missing pages. This occurs in the heroic section, specifically cutting off Sighdrive. It is unclear how many leaves and poems went missing. R is not just a compilation of poems, it shows editorial input as well. Several of the mythological poems are separated by short prose sections, which tie them together into a loose frame narrative, though it is clear from their style and composition that they are originally separate works. When it comes to the heroic poems long prose sections occur both within and between them, creating a saw^C-like narrative where the prose in many cases holds up the poetry, rather than the reverse. For further literature see TODO.

The second ms. is AM 748 I a 4to, here A. It dates to the 1300s and is but a fragment, consisting of just 6 leaves. It contains only mythological poems, and in a different order from R; unlike it there is no trace of a frame narrative. On the first two leaves are contained the final stanzas of Hoarbeard (1r–v), the complete Dreams (1v–2r), and the first verses of Shirner, after which a single leaf has been lost. The next four leaves follow eachother and contain the second half of Webthrithner, the complete Grimner and Hymer, and the beginning of the prose introduction to Wayland. A is the only medieval manuscript attesting Dreams, and its variants of the poems attested in R are clearly not copied from it, but rather derive from a common ancestor. This makes it very valuable for textual criticism. For further literature see TODO.

Several Eddic poems are quoted in Yilfer, namely (TODO): Wallow, Webthrithner, Grimner. The text also quotes a few fragmentary verses of Eddic character (possibly from lost Eddic poems), which have here been edited together with their surrounding prose passages. For Yilfer I have relied on the following four main mss.:

- 1. The Codex Regius of the Prose Edda S (GKS 2367 4to; 1300-1350)
- 2. The Codex Trajectinus T (Traj 1374; a c. 1595 paper copy of a ms. closely related to S.)
- 3. The Codex Wormianus W (AM 242 fol.; 1340-70)
- 4. The Codex Upsaliensis U (DG 11; 1300-25)

For discussion on their internal stemmatics and origins I refer to Haukur Porgeirsson (2017). When all employed witness mss. of Yilfer agree on a reading the siglum G is used in the critical apparatus, which is thus equivalent to STWU.

A few other Eddic poems have also been edited. One of them, Righ, only survives in W, though it is sadly incomplete (see its Introduction). Other Eddic poems survive only in younger paper mss., namely: TODO. While I have not consulted these paper mss. for poems attested in medieval mss., I have had to rely on them for these poems. Their exclusive survival there does not necessarily prove them to be late antiquarian works, as is clearly shown by Dreams, which among medieval mss. is only attested in the fragmentary A. It thus cannot be excluded that some of these poems would have existed in other lost medieval mss., perhaps even in the lost pages of R or A.

West Germanic poetry

As none of the West Germanic poems edited here (TODO: Will we be editing other poems than Hildebrandslied?) survive in more than one copy, the specific details of their transmission is discussed in their individual Introductions.

The Spae of the Wallow (Voluspó)

Heathen times.

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C10th (0.865)-early C11th (0.121)

Meter: Firnwordslaw

The Spae of the Wallow is the most comprehensive mythological text surviving from

The poem is attested in full in two independent recensions. The first is R, where it is the first poem, found on folios 1r–3r. The second is H, where it is found at 20r–21r in the middle of a large collection of saws and Catholics works. Many verses are also cited in Yilfer, large parts of which are directly based on the poem. Other verses are not attested directly, but are instead paraphrased. The paraphrases may still have critical value (so e.g. st. 19, where sal in the parapharse corroborates H). For its constituent manuscripts see the General Introduction.

As seen from the title, the poem is a spae^C ($sp\acute{\varrho}$ 'prophecy') in the form of a monologue spoken by a wallow ($v\varrho lva$ 'seeress, sibyl, prophetess'), summoned by Weden in order to relate mythological knowledge. The motif of Weden journeying to ask beings (whether ettins or wallows) is also seen in other sources. Closest is Dreams, wherein Weden summons a wallow out of her grave in Hell^L in order to understand why the god Balder^P is having ominous nightmares. There is also Webthrithner, wherein Weden challenges the wise ettin Webthrithner^P to a wisdom contest and defeats him. These journeys are also alluded to in Hoarbeard 43–46.

In its being a mythic catalogue it also resembles the latter part of High, Grimner, Sighdrive and Allwise, though it differs from them in a key way: it gives a (mostly?) complete chronological overview of the whole mythic timeline, from the creation to the end and rebirth of the world. That is not to say that the events are clearly described; they are related in a highly allusive fashion—certainly presupposing that the audience already be familiar with them. There may also be gaps and later inserts that make the poem more difficult.

The poem begins with a bid for silence (1), and the wallow recalling her earliest memories (2). She then recounts the ordering of the world by the gods (3–6) and the golden age of peace and plenty (7–8), which is, however, interrupted by the intrusion of three unidentified ettin-maidens (8, and see note there). After this follow two verses about the shaping of the dwarfs (9–10), and then several originally separate dwarf-tallies (11–15), which are without doubt later inserts. Returning to the main narrative thread is described the creation and endowment of the first man and woman (16–17), Ugdrassle's Ash (18), and the three norns^G living under it (19).

This is where the two full recensions of the poem diverge. Because of its older age and larger count of verses I have here followed the order of R: the wallow recalls how a woman named Goldwey was sacrificed and reborn three times (20), and how she, under the name Heath, practiced sorcery and witchcraft (21). She then recalls the first war in the world, between the Ease and Wanes (22–23), and alludes to the slaying of the smith, who according to Yilfer 42 was promised Frow and the sun and moon in exchange for building the wall of Osyard (24-25). This is followed by a cryptic verse describing Homedall's hidden silence or hearing (26).

In H the structure is quite different. After the description of the norns (19), the Ease go to decide what action to take regarding the promising of Frow to the ettin (my 24-25), and Homedall's hearing is described (26). Then follows the two verses about the old hag in Ironwood who raises the wolves that will swallow the sun and moon (40-41). After this come verses 20–23 in the same order as R (see above).

To illustrate the differences between mss., and which verses are attested in which, I have prepared the following table showing the order of verses by manuscript, compared to the present edition. As most verses in G are quoted on their own, and have little relation to the original order, these are simply marked with plus signs. When verses are quoted in a series, they are preceded by an alphabetically incrementing letter denoting which series they belong to. When there is a major difference in a ms. relative to the ed., such as in st. 10 where G omits the first two lines, it is then marked with a star. The verses beginning with på gingu ręgin oll 'Then went the Reins all' are represented by the following sentence.

2 meiri ok minni 'greater and lesser'] It is unclear what is being modified here. It may either be 'greater and lesser holy kindreds', in which case it may be equivalent to the phrase Ease and Elves^F (both earthly and heavenly supernatural beings; see Encyclopedia for occurences.) or 'the greater and lesser sons of Homedall [MEN]', in which case it refers to all social classes. It seems rather out of character for such a high ranking person in Norse society as the poet must have been to invoke an ancestral relationship between human social classes, considering how biologically such distinctions were otherwise regarded (cf. my introduction to the Rigb), but on the other hand this may be part of the likely liminal nature of the performance. In any case, the wallow is clearly asking all intelligent beings that may be present for silence, and the expression is a merism of the type 'gods and men'; see West (2007)[99-100].

4 grønum lauki 'green leek'] The leek had great cultural significance in the North. A fine example is Gutbrun II 2, where Siward's superiority to the Yivickings is compared to a stag among wild beasts, gold among silver and a green leek in grass. The leek was valued for its magical use, as seen already on C5th–6th bracteates where it appears as a charm word in the form <code>MNKFY laukar</code>, in one inscription paired with <code>MFR line</code> 'linen'. Later attestations of magic use include <code>Sighdrive</code> TODO, where the leek is to be used along with runes to prevent mead from being poisoned, and the <code>WalsTh</code>, where the eponymous worshipped horse-penis is <code>lini góddr · en laukum studdr</code> 'endowed with linen and supported by leeks'. The leek has a particular association with women; women-kennings frequently have the leek as a determinant (TODO: Meissner reference?), and Anon <code>Sveinfl 1</code> (SkP I TODO.) sarcastically states that a battle was not <code>sem manni · mér lauk eða ol béri</code> 'as if a maiden brought a man leek or ale'.

^aAccording to Yilfer 4–5 the world first consisted of two extremities: Nivelham in the north, from which the freezing venom-rivers called the Ilewaves^L ran until they froze to ice; and Muspellsham in the south, from which sparking lava flowed. The ice and lava met in the Gap of Ginnings^L (Ginnungagap; see Encyclopedia), "which was as calm as windless air", and there combined to form the first being, Yimer^P, who was the ancestor of the ettins. The creation is also mentioned in Webthrithner TODO.

^aThe sons of Byre (according to Yilfer 6: Weden, Will and Wigh) "lifted" the earth (apparently both land and water) out of the primordial chasm.

² of himin-joour 'over heaven's rim'] Composite reading; of himin †iodyr† 'over the heaven-horse-beast(?)' R is both nonsensical and unmetrical and must be rejected; of ioour 'over the rim' H lacks alliteration.

¹ sinni Mana 'the companion of Moon'] At times translated as 'its moon'. This cannot be correct, as màni 'moon' is masculine, while sinni, dative singular of sïnn 'its (reflexive)' is feminine.

^aThe sun heaved herself up over the horizon and rose for the first time.

Then went the Reins all onto the rake-seats: the yin-holy gods, and from each other took counsel about that: Who would shape the retinue of Dwarfs^G, out of the bloody surf and out of the blue-black legs?

^aIndeed, even the gaming bricks were made out of gold; cf. st. 59.

^bThese three maidens are never mentioned again (unless they are taken to be the norns in st. 19, but they would then be introduced twice). It's possible that an additional verse would have come after this one, giving further information about them, but if it was it was already lost in the version employed by the author of Yilfer (ch. 14), who transparently paraphrases:

According to Yilfer 14 the dwarfs first originated as maggots in the corpse of Yimer, whose bones are described in Grimner TODO and Webthrithner TODO as being used to make rocks. Dwarfs dwell in the rocks and earth; cf. for instance IngT 2, where the Swedish king Swayther (Sveigŏir disappears into a rock in pursuit of a dwarf. More difficult to explain is the creation of dwarfs out of Yimer's blood (which according to Grimner TODO and Webthrithner TODO is the sea), since dwarfs are never said to dwell in water. — If one chooses the reading Bláinn 'Blown' (named in the thules as a dwarf) instead of blóum 'blue-black', then following Gurevich (Skp 2017, p. 693) one may see a kenning "the legs of Blown (dwarf) [STONE]". Blown has otherwise been read as a poetic name for Yimer, but that is never attested elsewhere.

There was Moodsowner made the worthiest of all dwarfs, but Dorn [was] second. They man-likenesses many did make: dwarfs in the earth, as Dorn said.

Two lists of dwarfs. That both belonged to the original poem is impossible, since several names (Oakenshield, Great-grandfather) appear in both. The three following verses seem to belong together, since there is no repetition of names. From the last line of the middle one, it seems that it should have been placed at the end of the group.

^{3–4} þeir ... sagði 'They ... said.'] There are two conflicting interpretations of the creation of the dwarfs. Either they arose on their own; this is supported by the prose of Yilfer (see note to previous st.) and by the form of the stanza quoted there (but it may have been changed to correspond to the author's vision). On the other hand, both R and H have the dwarfs Moodsowner and Dorn shaping "man-likenesses" out of soil. The present edition follows the second version.

a'This verse is paraphrased in Yilfer 9: Dá er þeir gengu með sévar-strondu Bors synir, fundu þeir tré tvau ok tóku upp trén ok skopuðu af menn. Gaf inn fyrsti ond ok lif, annarr vit ok hréring, þriði á-sjónu, mál ok heyrn ok sjón, gáfu þeim kléði ok nofn. 'When the sons of Byre (cf. st. 4) walked along the sea-shore they found two trees and they took up the trees and shaped men from them. The first one gave breath (ond) and life, the second wit and movement, the third sight, speech, appearance and sight; they gave them clothes and names. The male was called Ash, and the woman Emble, and from them mankind was begotten, to whom were given the dwelling within Middenvard'

The ON cognate of tree, tré, can also mean 'pieces of wood', and it is traditionally seen as referring to pieces of driftwood. Yet as pointed out by Hultgård (2006) the comparative evidence suggests that the two were in fact living, growing trees (they would thus be part of the foliage described in st. 4) and there is nothing in the sources that speaks against this.

While Ash is easily identified with the same-named wood species (Fraxinus excelsior), the etymology of Emble is much more difficult. The shaping of men from trees is used by poets in various kennings for men and women, especially in scoldic poetry (for a short discussion see SkP I, p. lxxv ff.). While this is rarer in the Eddic corpus it does occur, e.g. in Sighdrive 4: brynpings apaldr 'apple-tree of the byrnie-Thing^C [BATTLE > WARRIOR]'.

It is well known that in Old Norse as in other old Germanic languages the simple past can have both perfective and imperfective sense. — This st. is paraphrased in Yilfer 15: Par stendr salr einn fagr undir askinum við brunninn, ok ór þeim sal koma þrjár meyjar, þér er svá heita: Urðr, Verðandi, Skuld. Pessar meyjar skapa monnum aldr; þér kollum vér nornir. Told allusively in 31–33 is the death of Balder at the hands of his blind brother Hath; it is elsewhere depicted with very similar language in Dreams 8–11, and described in detail in Yilfer 49.

While the slaying of Balder is told in Yilfer 49 and the revenge the gods took on Lock is told in Yilfer 50, the slaying of Hath by his half-brother Wonnel is not elaborated on there. The brother-slaying may have been left out for moral reasons. He was not unknown to the author, as seen by Yilfer 30, where he is said to be "the son of Weden and Rind", "brave in battles and a very lucky shot", and by Scold 19, where relevant kennings for him are "son of Weden and Rind" and "revenge-os of Balder; the enemy of Hath and his bane".

² fekk spjǫll spak-lig 'received wise tidings'] fé, spjǫll spaklig 'wealth, wise tidings' R is metrically deficient, since alliteration would need to fall on the strongly stressed noun fé. The emended text also works better in context since it parallels st. 1, where the wallow likewise says that she will relate spjǫll 'tidings, sayings' (cf. English gospel lit. 'good news' which originally translates the Greek εὐαγγέλιον). See Haukur Þorgeirsson (2020, pp. 51–53), Males (2023, p. 16) for discussion on this reading.

^{3–6} Skuld ... val-kyrjur] These four lines, especially from the out-of-place ending ($n\acute{u}$ eru talðar), seem to be a latter insert from a thule C counting the walkirries.

⁵ Nonnur Herjans 'Nans (maidens) of Harn \langle = Weden \rangle [walkirries]'] Nanna 'Nan $^{\rm P}$ ' was the wife of Balder $^{\rm P}$, but her name is here in the plural certainly being used to mean 'maidens, goddesses'. The walkirries are also referred to as Weden's maidens in two thules, namely TODO.

The revenge narrative is also dealt with by Saxo (III.4.1–8) in his typical euhemerized form (for Saxo's Latin forms of relevant names see respective Encyclopedia entries): Weden learned from the Finnish wizard Horsethief that Rind, daughter of the Russian king,

This leaves the most explicit account of the revenge-narrative Dreams 11. TODO.

1 Váli 'Wonnel'] emend.; Vála H

1–2 $\not\! pa$... $\not\! pormum$.] Only attested in H, where it is combined with 35b.

^aAccording to From Lock, the Ease captured Lock and bound him with the intestines of his son Nare, while his son Narve became an outlaw (varð at vargi). Yilfer 50 has a longer but somewhat different account: the Ease captured Lock's two sons, Wonnel and "Nare or Narve". They turned Wonnel into a wolf (vargr; note the double meaning) and had him tear apart his brother Narve, whose intestines were then taken and used to bind Lock so that he lay on top of three pointed stones; one digging into his shoulder-blades, one digging into his loins and one digging into his houghs. The intestine-bonds then turned into iron.

Since the author of Yilfer knew Wallow, it is possible that he combined a text similar to From Lock with this st., interpreting Vála víg-bond as 'Wonnel's war-bonds' and vargr as 'wolf' rather than the more probable 'outlaw'. Wonnel is otherwise only known as the son of Weden, and there is no reason why he could not also bound Lock. For further differences between them see From Lock.

^aIn this st. is clearly described watery punishment in the Heathen afterlife, also clearly mentioned in Rein 3–4 and possibly in Grimner 21. The crimes are what one might expect from the Germanic worldview: perjury, committing murder and evading punishment, and seducing a married woman. In Anglo-Saxon and Nordic laws particularly severe crimes likt these ones made the committer a nithing^C, that is, one afflicted with nithe^C (severe shame). It is not surprising then that such nithings would be tortured by a creature named Nithehewer 'Nithe-striker'. The practice of burying nithings (Tacitus: TODO) in bogs, flood-marks, or other unsettled ground is well attested in sources about Germanic culture from Tacitī Germania onwards—I consider it likely that the heavy streams in this stanza and in the two mentioned above represent such watery grounds. This is further elaborated on in GermanicGems2

As the young agentive suffix -ari is found nowhere else in the poem it is possible that this word is corrupt. If it is, it must have occurred early in the transmission, as reflexes of *tjúgari are found in all surviving mss.

bThe old hag raises the cubs of the wolf Fenrer, of which a particularly fierce one will swallow the moon. According to Grimner 40 the sun is chased by a wolf called Skoll, while another wolf, Hate Rothswitner's son, runs in front of her. This is elaborated upon in Yilfer 12, where it is said that Skoll swallows the moon, while Hate swallows the sun. High then explains that "A lone troll-woman (gýgr) lives to the east of Middenyard in that forest called Ironwood", and "feeds the sons of many ettins, all in the likenesses of wolves, and thereof these wolves (i.e. Skoll and Hate) come. And it is also said that from that lineage a single one becomes the mightiest, and he is called Moongarm. He fills himself with the life of all those men who die and he swallows the moon and stains heaven and all the air with blood. Thereof the sun loses its rays and the winds are violent and moan hither and thirther, and thus it says in the Spae of the Wallow: [...]" after which this and the following st. are quoted. This seems very much like a composite from several sources—probably Wallow 40–41 and Grimner 40—but becomes contradictory when it states that two wolves swallow the moon. Assuming that this is only a combision on the part of the author of Yilfer, this st. and the next must be describing Skoll, but it is of course not impossible that there was confusion about the exact details of these events among the Heathen poets. In favour of that seems to speak Webthrithner 46–47, where the sun is said to be swallowed by Fenrer (but see note there).

^aThat the first sorrow was the death of Balder (see sts. 31–33) is unanimously understood. Line is described in Yilfer 35 as a minor goddess sett til gézlu yfir þeim monnum, er Frigg vill forða við háska nokkurum 'placed to watch over those men which Frie wishes to protect against any particular danger'. In spite of this, almost all translators and commentors have understood Line as here referring to Frie, or questioned whether her existence as a separate goddess is not a misunderstanding on the part of the author of Yilfer. Hopkins (2017) argues excellently that this need not be the case; as a subordinate goddess of Frie, Line's two sorrows would be her failing to protect Balder and Weden (the son and husband of her mistress, respectively) from harm.

'Then spoke Gangler: "Do any of the gods survive then, or is there any earth or heaven?" High says: "Then shoots the earth up from the seas, and is then green and fair. Then acres grow unsown. Wider and Wonnel live, as the sea and Surt's flame has not wounded them, and they settle Idewold, where Osyard once was, and there come the sons of Thunder, Mood and Main, and have there Millner. Thereafter come Balder and Hath from Hell, then all reconcile with each other and speak with each other and think back on their runes, and speak about the tidings which had once been: about the Middenyardsworm and about the Fenrerswolf. Then they find in the grass those golden Tavel bricks which the Ease had owned. So it is said:"

The Speeches of Webthrithner (Vafþrúðnismól)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C9th (0.105)–C10th (0.894)

Meter: Leed-meter

A wisdom contest poem, known by the author of Yilfer.

Weden first asks his wife, Frie, for counsel, as he is curious about the ancient wisdom which the ettin Webthrithner might possess (1). Frie expresses worry, as she considers Webthrithner wiser than all other ettins (2), but Weden says that he has travelled far and wide, and wishes to know what Webthrithner's hall is like (3). Frie wishes Weden good luck against the ettin (4) and he departs, to challenge Webthrithner's orð-spęki 'word-wisdom' (5). He arrives at hall of Webthrithner (6), who promptly declares that Weden will not come out of the hall unless he be wiser than him (7). Weden introduces himself as Gainred, saying that he has travelled far in need of Webthrithner's hospitality (8). Webthrithner invites Weden to sit down (9), but he instead utters a gnomic stanza (10) not unlike those of the first section of High.

Webthrithner then begins to ask questions relating to the mythology, each answered by Weden in turn. The questions concern which horses pull the day (11–12) and night (13–14), the river which divides the gods and ettins (15–16) and the plain where Surt and the gods will fight (17–18).

Webthrithner calls the god learned, invites him to sit on the bench, and declares that the loser of the contest must give his head (19). It is now Weden's turn to ask and the ettin's to answer, namely about the origins of earth and heaven (20–21), of sun and moon (22–23), of day, night, and the phases of the moon (24–25), and of winter and summer (26–27); then about the earliest god or ettin, namely Earyelmer^P (28–29), his origins (30–31) and how he reproduced asexually (32–33). He continues by asking what Webthrithner first remembers (34–35), about the origin of the wind (36–37) and of the god Nearth^P (38–39), then about Walhall (40–41) and where Webthrithner learned these esoteric pieces of wisdom (42–43).

After this the structure and tone of the questions change; each one begins with the same first half as that of st. 3, and they concern the end-times. Weden asks about the humans who will survive after the Fimble-winter (44–45), how the sun will rise after Fenrer has destroyed the current one (46–47), about some obscure ettin-maidens (48–49; see discussion there), which Ease will survive after the flame of Surt goes out (50–51) and how Weden will die (52–53). Finally, he asks what he himself spoke in the ear of Balder before he was burned on the pyre (54). Webthrithner finally realizes the identity of his challenger, since only Weden could know the answer to that question. He laconically accepts his imminent death and the futility of his word-wisdom (55); the poem ends with his admission that Weden is ever the wisest of beings (56).

onto, mount' is also used to refer to one stepping aboard a ship or mounting a horse (see CV: stiga for citations), and so its use for a person being borne onto the pyre seems formulaic. This has been compared with Beewolf 1118b: gưỡrinc ástáh 'the warrior mounted [his pyre]', but the interpretation of that line is not controversial; Fulk et al. (2008) [186] follow Grundtvig in emending gưỡrinc to gưỡréc 'war-smoke', relating it to Beewolf 3144b (wuduréc ástáh 'wood-smoke rose up', also in a description of a cremation). They state that Grimner 54 'almost certainly refers not to Baldr but to Óðinn, probably imagined to mount the pyre in order to set fire to it.'

Dreams of Balder (Baldrs draumar)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C9th (0.110)-C10th (0.890)

Meter: Firnwordslaw

In ancient manuscripts only preserved in A, but the poem also survives in later manuscripts with a few extra stanzas (see below). It follows the structure of a riddle contest.

The poem begins in medias res; Balder has been having nightmares, and so the gods meet at the Thing to figure out why (1). Weden^P rides to Hell^L, where he has an encounter with a bloody dog (2). It barks for a long time at him, but he passes it and continues to "the high house of Hell^P" (3), from which he rides west, to the grave of a certain wallow^C, whom he revives using magic (4). She asks which man has forced her out of the grave (5), and Weden introduces himself as Waytame, before asking for whom the benches of Hell are covered with gold (6). The wallow responds that barrels of mead stand brewed for Balder and that the gods are very anxious (7). Weden asks her who will slay Balder (8), and she responds that it is Hath, carrying a "high fame-beam" (9). Weden then asks her who will avenge Balder's death by slaying Hath (10). The wallow responds that Rind^P will give birth to Weden's son Wonnel^P, who will slay Hath when only one night old (11). Weden then asks about some mysterious maidens (12; see Note), which betrays his identity. The wallow tells him that she now knows his true identity, to which Weden responds that he does as well: she is not a wallow, but rather the "mother of three thurses" (13). The wallow tells him to ride home and "be famous"; he must still die at the Rakes of the Reins^L (14).

[The wallow quoth:] "Thou art not Waytame, as I thought; rather art thou Weden, the aged Geat!"—[Weden quoth:] "Thou art not a wallow^C, nor a wise woman; rather art thou of three Thurses^G the mother!"

^aThe similarity in wording to the treatment of this myth in Wallow is striking; apart from the tense, ll. 2–4 here are identical to 32/4–33/2 there (for discussion on the narrative see Note to Wallow 32). The irregularity of the stanza length might suggest that a line has been inserted in analogy with the aforementioned poem.

^aAccording to Yilfer 49 Hell promised to give Balder back to the Ease if "all things in the world, living and dead, cry for him". The Ease relayed this message, and "the men and the animals and the earth and the stones and trees and all metals" cried for Balder. It may be that these maidens were included among the grievers (perhaps they were the walkirries, and this is what reveals Weden's identity?), but their identity is otherwise unknown.

Late stanzas in paper manuscripts? TODO

^aA sarcastic, taunting statement, the sense being: "Your renown, Weden, will not save you at the Rakes of the Reins^L."

bThe rjúfendr 'rippers' are presumably Surt and Lock with his children, as described in Wallow 40 ff. The verb rjúfa 'CV: to break, rip up, break a hole in' is also used in this context in the formulaic þá's rjúfask regin 'when the Reins^G are ripped' (Webthrithner 52), unz (of) rjúfask regin 'until the Reins are ripped' (Grimner 4, Lock TODO and Sighdrive TODO). One may further compare the similar sounding verb rifna 'be riven', also used with reference to the destruction of the world in Runic inscription Sö 154 (Jorð sal rifna · ok upp-himinn 'Earth shall be riven, and Up-heaven') and Arn Hryn (in SkP II pp. 185–6, ll. 3/7–8, see also note there: meiri verði þinn an þeira · þrifnuðr allr, unz himinn rifnar. 'greater than theirs may thy whole wealth be, until heaven is riven.')

The Speeches of the High One (Hávamól)

The Speeches of the High One is the second poem of R, which is also the only ancient manuscript in which it is attested. Several sts. are however cited or alluded to in other places, such as Eyv Hák (TODO: formatting) 21 and FbrS TODO.

The poem as it currently comes down to us hardly seems like a single composition, much rather like a grab bag of traditional poetic sts. associated with the god Weden. It combines two separate advice-poems with sts. concerning Weden's love adventures, runes and spells. Little unites these various strands other than their speaker.

Following previous authors, I identify several such strands, excepting various lone sts. that are probably later inserts. In the present edition each of them is given a separate, short introduction:

- 1–79 The Guest-strand; practical life advice placed within the context of a guest arriving at a homestead.
- 81-89 Other sts. advice, mostly composed in Firnwordslaw.
- 90-101 Weden's failed seduction of Billing's maiden.
- 102-109 Weden's obtaining of the Mead of Poetry
- 110–135 The Speeches of Loddfathomer; Weden's advice to Loddfathomer.
- 136–144 The Rune-tally; various sts. relating to runes.
- 145-163 The Leed-tally; Weden's listing of 18 spells.
- 164 Final st., composed when the poem as we have it was assembled.

Whatever their origins, it is clear from the final st. that they have been thought of as a single work, but it is notable that this st., which also contains the title Hávamǫl 'Speeches of the High One', is highly metrically irregular. It has likely been composed by the person who assembled the disparate elements listed above into one text.

The Guest-strand

The Guest-Strand (Old Norse: Gestaþáttr) is possibly the finest work in Norse poetry. Sadly, its structure has been obscured by various inserted and possibly displaced sts. My hope is to shed some light on the original vision behind the poem, while as usual not changing the order of sts. as they appear in the only surviving witness manuscript.

The poem moves through many elements of life, but in a poetically almost seamless way. To move from one topic to another, the poet often employs transitions where a st. recalls the structure of the previous one, but with a new subject. This is particularly evident in sts. 4–5 and 10–11.

The strand begins with a st. encouraging travellers to be wary of entering strange houses without first spying out who is inside (1), after which a voice inside of a farmstead (possibly Weden?) announces that a guest is waiting to be let in (2). The same speaker then lists several things which the newly arrived guest needs from the host, namely: fire, food and clothes (3), water, a towel, a great welcome, a good reception, an opportunity to speak and silence in return (4).

After this focus shifts to the conduct of the wanderer, with an introductory st. explaining that he needs wit (specifically manwit^C (manvit); see Encyclopedia), lest he become a laughing-stock (5). He should be silent but attentive, and choose his words carefully (6–7). He should be confident in himself and his own decisions, and not rely too much on the opinions of others (8–9), since there is nothing better one may bring along on the journey than much manwit (10).

Here the advice moves to the subject alcohol. Where the best thing one may bring along on the journey is manwit, the worst is too much ale (11). It is not as good as men call it (12) since it "robs [them] of their senses"; it is even personified as a "heron of forgetfulness" (13). A drinking round is best when the participants do not drink too much, but rather regain their senses afterwards (14).

St. 15 contains some general advice; a royal child should be silent, thoughtful and bold in battle, and all men should stay happy, until they die.

^aThere is a well thought-out linear progression throughout this st: The guest must first wash himself, then dry himself with a towel, then be welcomed to sit and eat at the table and speak with the host. The host has done his part, and now it is the guest's turn. This nicely leads the transition to the following sts., where the proper conduct of the guest (first in speech, and then in various other areas) is discussed.

^aThe unvalorous man might have been spared by the spears, but death will still find him through miserable old age. Since death is unavoidable it is better to live bravely, even if one risks dying in battle, than to live cowardly and die of sickness. This connects well to the ancient view of the 'straw-death' (TODO).

Man ought not to hold onto the cask; yet drink mead in moderation; he ought to speak the needful or shut up. For that uncouthness will no man blame thee, that thou go early to sleep.

^aDrinking horns at this time could not be set down, and so to "hold onto" one was presumably an expression for not drinking. The st. may also be referring to the toasting ritual wherein a single vessel would be passed around and drunk from by each person (indeed this is the origin of the Scandinavian toasting-word, skål 'prosit; cheers!', but lit. 'bowl!'). At such celebrations "holding onto" the vessel and refusing to drink was very rude; in 1519 a man in Jämtland was killed in an argument resulting from his refusal to pass on to the bowl (see Sjöberg (1907)).

The unclever man, when among people he comes, 'tis best that he shut up. None knows that he nothing knows, unless he speak too much. Man knows not, who nothing knows, ^aRepeated in st. 62. He has few who are ready to take his side and speak up for him; the sense is that true friends are proven in conflict, not in talking. The Thing (see Encyclopedia) was the old Germanic legal assembly, and so the specific reference here is legal disputes, but it should be kept in mind that they could easily turn into deadly feuds.

^{3 [...]]} It is doubtless that a word has been lost here; the meter and sense require it. Finnur Jónsson (1932) suggests gløggvan 'miserly, stingy', giving a litotes 'so not stingy', i.e., 'so generous'.

^aOne of the hardest sts. in the poem. After much thought I consider the probable sense to be the following: the clothes make the man; under expensive gear a thin tree-man might be hiding, and likewise even a strong man (I see the choice of the word halr 'warrior' rather than the more neutral $ma \ddot{o}r$ 'man, person' as intentional) when naked and facing a heavily armoured opponent becomes as vulnerable as the 'tree-man' on a plain.

^aA reference to the five-day week (see also st. 74); the number is symbolic. See further Encyclopedia.

4 holf es old hvar.

Of small sands, of small seas; small are the senses of man. For all have not become evenly knowing; half is every man.^a ^aThe genitive "of small sands, of small seas" is probably a partitive, the sense being that man's horizons are small; the universe is far greater than he and always will be. On the meaning of the second half of the st. I find that of Gudmundur Finnbogason (1929) most convincing, namely that every man has both strengths and weaknesses. As nobody can excel at everything, nobody is complete; every person is half (which in ON has a sense of incompleteness). This fits particularly closely with sts. 71 and 132.

4 þótt ... góðan 'although ... good one'] As Finnur Jónsson (1932) points out this line is surely a late insert. The inserter was not aware of the rules of the Leed-meter meter and interpreted the c-verse as an a-verse in Firnwordslaw.

^aA collocation. Cf. Rein TODO: kembor 'combed' — hyeginn 'washed' — mettr 'full'; Wallow 33: ho 'washed' — kemboi 'combed'. These examples attest to the importance of personal hygiene in the culture, something further seen by the ubiquity of combs in pre-Christian graves. Cf. also Tacitī Germania 22: Statim e somno, quem plerumque in diem extrabunt, lavantur, saepius calida, ut apud quos plurimum biems occupat. Lauti cibum capiunt: separatae singulis sedes et sua cuique mensa. Tum ad negotia nec minus saepe ad convivia procedunt armati. 'On waking from sleep, which they generally prolong to a late hour of the day, they take a bath, oftenest of warm water, which suits a country where winter is the longest of the seasons. After their bath they take their meal, each having a separate seat and table of his own. Then they go armed to business, or no less often to their festal meetings.'

^{3–4} þá ... einna hvatastr 'then ...briskest of all'] Almost identical to Rein TODO/3–4, which however has fleirum 'more men' for fróknum 'the bold'.

On the other hand we may compare Fathomer 30: Hvotum 's betra · an sé óhvotum 'For the brisk 'tis better than it may be for the unbrisk'. The corruption is understandable; *en, younger form of *an 'than' was interpreted as en 'and' and thus copied as η (the tironian et), while *séi ólifóom (probably with the words cramped together) became sel lifóom.

^bThe fire is probably the man's funeral pyre. It is notable that his wealth is mentioned; according to Ibn Fadlan (TODO) two thirds of a great chieftain's wealth was spent on his funeral. One notes the contrastive en 'but', and may paraphrase it as something like "I saw a lavish funeral, but the burning man was dead anyway." This interpretation is supported by the following st. (High 70, especially the second half), which expresses the same sentiment."

^aThe power of this succinct merism may be less clear to the modern reader. In Germanic Iron Age society a man's wealth was reckoned by how many heads of cattle (for which compare particularly English chattel 'tangible, movable property' and the etymology of capital) he owned, and his social power by the number of able male relatives ready to side with him in conflict. The meaning is thus: all your power will pass away, and so too must you. — For poetic analogues, see West (2007, pp. 99 ff.).

Weden's obtaining of the Mead of Poetry

The quite complicated myth of how Weden came to own the Mead of Poetry is also told in Scold 5-6, which I here summarize with minor details left out: After the war between the Ease and Wanes, the two tribes of gods make a truce between them through spitting into a vat. They do not want to dispose of the truce-mark, and thus create a man, Quasher^P, out of the spit. He is so wise that no man can ask him a question which he cannot answer. He goes around the world, and omes to the dwelling of two dwarfs named Fealer and Galer. They kill him, and let his blood run into two vats named Soon and Bothem and a kettle named Woderearer^P; they then make mead through mixing the blood with honey, and "anyone who drinks from it becomes a scold or man of learning". Some time later, the two dwarfs murder an ettin named Gilling^P and his wife. Their son, Sutting^P, learns of this and takes the dwarfs to a small islet which will flood at high tide. In exchange for their lives and as recompense for his father, the dwarfs offer Sutting the dear mead (mjoðinn dýra; cf. here sts. 104 and 138). Sutting accepts this, moves the mead to his home, the mountain Nitbarrow^L, and sets his daughter Guthlathe^P to watch it. Some time later Weden is out journeying and comes to a place where nine thralls cut hay. After sharpening their scythes with a special whetstone he throws it into the air, and they slay each other over it. By evening he comes to the master of the thralls, Baye, Sutting's brother. Baye laments over the death of his workmen, and so Weden, calling himself Baleworker^P, offers to do the work of the thralls over the summer in exchange for one drink of Sutting's mead. Baye tells him that Sutting alone owns the mead, but that he will follow along with Weden to ask for a drink. When the two arrive at Sutting's, he refuses to give away a single drop. Weden then tells Baye that he will get it anyway; he takes out his drill Rate^P and tells Baye to drill through the mountain to get into the room where the mead was stored. Baye first tricks him, only drilling half-way, but Weden calls him out and he bores through the wall, creating a narrow passage. Weden turns himself into a snake and crawls through the passage; as he does Baye tries to strike him the drill, but misses. When through he sees Guthlathe, seduces her and lays with her for three nights, after which she promises him three drinks. With each drink Weden drinks up each vessel, and thus has all the mead inside of him. He dons his eagle-hame and flies away from the mountain; upon seing the eagle Sutting takes his own eagle-hame and flies after him. The Ease put out a large vat in the yard, into which Weden spit the mead in flight. By this time Sutting is so near that Weden has to throw back (senda aptr, which has often been interpreted as the mead being sent out from the anus) some of the mead. The mead which was thrown back was not taken care of, and was accessible to anyone. It became the lot of poetasters. The rest of the mead was given to the Ease and to men who knew how to compose.

The core of this many-twisted myth is very old. Parallels are found in the RV (hymns 4.26 and 27), where Soma (being both a ritual substance and a god) is held within "a hundred iron fortresses" by the archer K_{f} § $\bar{a}nu$, but stolen by a falcon and given to Manu, the first sacrificer and ancestor of the Aryans. It is curious that the god's flying out as a bird of prey is also found in Scold (see above), but not in the following stanzas. One might think that other, now-lost retellings of the myth underlie Scold, but the detail could also be derived from allusions to the myth in Scoldic kennings, or from an oral, prose retelling.

The sts. below are in the same order as R, their only attestation. The strand begins with a st. of general advice (102), after which the narrative comes, which differs in some ways from that of Scold. It may be arranged chronologically as follows: Weden arrives at Suttings halls, and "speaks many words" (103), calling himself Baleworker (109). He is presumably denied, and thus has to bore through the mountain with the drill Rate (105 note that there is no mention of Baye here!). After boring into the room where Guthlathe watches the mead, she falls in love with him. Weden in turn swears a bigh-oath to her, presumably that they will marry (109), and they sleep together (107). From the mention of Weden's betrayal of Sutting (109), it has been inferred that there may even have been a wedding feast. In any case, Guthlathe gives Weden the dear mead, and he flees with it, leaving her to weep (104, 109). Unlike the more transactional affair in Scold, there is here a strong emphasis on Weden's betrayal of Guthlathe. The day after Weden's flight a group of Rime-Thurses—which for some reason does not include Sutting—show up at the home of the gods. They ask whether "Baleworker" is among them, or if Sutting has slain him (108). Someone, presumably Weden, responds that he "thinks that" Weden he had sworn an oath, but that his words cannot be trusted (109).

^aThe speaker, describing himself as a thyle (bulr 'sage, chanter of memorized poetry'), says that he will relate what he has heard said in Walhall. Considering the location, it seems almost certain that the giver of this advice was its owner, Weden^P. The receiver of the advice, Loddfathomer^P (see Encyclopedia for etymologies), is otherwise unknown.

4 líkn-fastan 'health-firm'] A cpd. from líkn ONP: 'mercy, compassion, relief, comfort, help' and fastr 'fast, firm'. La Farge and Tucker (1992) give a tentative 'assured of favour', while CV gives 'fast in goodwill, beloved'. I read it as literally as possible, since the word líkn has some connections with healing.

ai.e. 'the customer will put a curse you'.

^ai.e. 'if somebody puts a curse on you, do not ignore it, but respond forcefully'. This st. has often been interpreted as a command to call out evil, even when committed towards somebody else, and while there is nothing in it that speaks clearly against that interpretation, it probably does not agree with the sense of the poem itself, which advocates caution.

⁵ en lát þér at góðu getit 'but rather let thyself be pleased by good'] This construction is equivalent to CV: geta, A. IV. with acc.

I counsel thee Loddfathomer, that thou learn the counsels; thou wilt benefit if thou learnest; they will be good for thee if thou gettest: Up shalt thou not look in battle—alike to a madman become the sons of men—lest men bewitch thy [sense/life/face].^a La Farge and Tucker (1992) instead explains the word as a borrowing from Old Irish geilt 'insane, mad'. Pettit (1986) follows this, and argues that the whole theme of the st. probably be of Celtic origin, giving several examples from Celtic literature of warriors going mad upon looking up into the sky during battle. In this case the men (halir, which word seems to have an association with warriors; cf. 36–37, 49) would be to quote Pettit some sort of "supernatural sky warriors", in my opinion most likely the Ownharriers^G.

^aA very difficult st. CV explains gjalti as an old dative of ggltr 'boar, hog', and thus sees the closely related phrase verŏa at gjalti as "'to be turned into a hog', i.e. 'to turn mad with terror', esp. in a fight". The vowel breaking is however unexpected here, since ggltr (< Proto-Norse galtuw*) is an u-stem, which makes the stem-vowel in the dat. sg. gglti (< galtiu*, cf. kunimudiu, dat. sg. of Kunimundu*, on the Tjurkö 1 bracteate) the result of i-umlaut rather than an original short e*.

⁴ gaman-rúnum 'pleasure-runes'] While easily interpreted as 'intercourse', the word is used in 118 with a decidedly non-sexual meaning. It probably just means 'good, light-hearted conversation'.

^aThis st. fits poorly here and seems like an insert. It mentions $lj\delta\delta$ 'leeds; (magical) songs, incantations' rather than runes, and has nothing to do with Weden's hanging on the tree. Bestle was Weden's mother and Balethorn his maternal grandfather. The famous son of Balethorn would then be his maternal uncle. The custom of sending sons away to be fostered by their maternal uncles or grandfathers (which seems to be what is going on here) was quite common in Germanic society, cf. TODO.

Then I took to thrive, and be learned, and grow and have myself well. A word for me of a word a word sought out; a work for me of a work a work.^a 1 nam'k frévask 'I took to thrive'] A notorious mistranslation (TODO: source) has rendered these words as 'I took semen', seeing in them a reference to Weden taking the seed from hanged men in order to replenish his own powers, something never elsewhere attested. This notion, surely based on the root-related word $fr\acute{\epsilon}$ 'seed', has no philological ground; $fr\acute{\epsilon}vask$ is wo. doubt a reflexive verb.

^aThe identity of the speaker is not clear.

^aA symmetric structure would be attained if the first four verbs refer to runes^C—carving, interpreting, painting (with blood?), and divining—while the latter four refer to sacrifice—praying, sacrificing, sending (the sacrifice or the prayer; making sure the gods receive it), and slaying the victim. The Leed-Tally

This final section of the poem has fittingly been called the Leed-Tally (Ljóðatal). The speaker (certainly Weden) recounts eighteen spells, aristocratic and Odinic in character; they deal with such things as healing (2, 12), battle (3, 4, 5, 8, 11, 13), countering sorcery (6, 10), stilling the elements (7, 9), and seduction (16, 17).

In particular the fourth spell bears a strong likeness to the first Merseburg charm.

^aIdentical wording ($bi\eth ja$ 'to bid; to pray' : blota 'to bloot; to sacrifice'; senda 'to send' : soa 'to soo; to slay') suggests a close relation to the previous st. — The sense seems to be that it is better not to sacrifice at all than to sacrifice in excess, since even a small gift (to the gods) will be rewarded. This mechanistic system of gifts and rewards between man and the gods is also seen in other Indo-European pagan literatures. Compare the Sanskrit Debi me, $d\acute{a}d\~{a}mi$ te 'Give to me; I give to thee' or Latin $d\~{o}$ ut $d\~{e}s$ 'I give that thou might give'.

Those leeds^C I know, as knows not the ruler's woman, and no man's lad. Help is called one, it will help thee against sorrows and sakes,^a and all kinds of griefs.^b

Weden was through his second sight able to see these riders, and could use his superior magical abilities in order to confuse them so that they were not able to return to their original hames or minds; a cruel fate. — Weden likewise brags about tricking riders in Hoarbeard 20.

The Speeches of Grimner (Grimnismól)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C10th (0.976) Meter: Leed-meter, Firnwordslaw (2/3–4, 28/3–5, 45/3–5, 48/4, 49/1–2, 53), Galder-law (46)

The Speeches of Grimner are preserved whole in both R and A.

The poem itself is surrounded by two long introductory prose narratives containing some very old motifs, which are here brought up in the notes. It's hard to say for how long these texts have accompanied the poem (TODO: I may write about this in the Introduction, since this question is important for several other poems), but since they are found in both R and A and contain these motifs it would seem that they are fairly old. Together with sts. 1–3 they form a frame narrative that gives additional meaning to the gnomic sts. enclosed within.

The gnomic sts. themselves, the meat of the poem, are mythological and often quite obscure. In this they align closely with other Eddic gnomic poems such as High, Webthrithner, Sighdrive, and Allwise.

Weden begins by listing the halls of the gods (4–17). This section has been discussed in detail by de Vries (1952) TODO! who considers it corrupt. Specifically, he sees the second half of v. 4 as a later insert, since it does not elaborate on the "holy land" mentioned in the first half. Jackson (1995) has argued convincingly against this, showing how the first half serves as a generalized introduction to the list; the holy land is the dwelling-places of the gods.

After this list come several sts relating to Weden and his hall, Walhall (18–23). Mentioned are the preparation of food in Walhall (18), Weden's wolves (19) and ravens (20), the river through which the dead have to wade (21) and the gate through which they have to pass (22), the count of doors in Walhall (23), the count of doors in Thunder's hall Bilshirner (24), and two animals which stand on the hall and gnaw on the branches of the tree Leered (25–26). From the latter animal's—the stag Oakthirner's—horns droplets fall into Wharyelmer, which is the origin of all rivers (26).

This introduces a list of mythic rivers (27–28), ending with the waters through which Thunder must wade on his way to Ugdrassle (29). This leads to a list of the horses ridden by the other gods on their way to Ugdrassle (31) which is followed by a description of the roots of Ugdrassle (31), then its animals (32–36) the Walkirries (37), and beings associated with the sun and moon (38–40), the things created from Yimer's body (41–42) with a digression on the significance of the bloot^P for men in the present (43, see note there!), the creation of the ship Shidebladner (44) and finally a list of the noblest of several categories of things and groups (45).

After these lists Weden utters an unclear st. invoking the gods (46), before listing many of his names and the circumstances in which they were used (47–50). He then turns to Garfrith, disappointed by the inhospitality and poor conduct of his former protégé, and predicts his imminent death (51–53). He finally reveals himself by his true name, daring Garfrith to face him (53). After this he repeats several of his names (54), and the poem ends.

In the final prose section we are told that Garfrith, after learning that he was torturing Weden, hurried up to take the god away from the fires, but tripped and fell on his sword and died. After this his son Eyner ruled for a long time.

From the sons of king Reeding (Frá sonum Hrauðungs konungs)

- Hrauðungr konungr átti tvá sonu. Hét annarr Agnarr, enn annarr Geirrøðr.
- 2 Agnarr var tíu vetra enn Geirrøðr átta vetra. Þeir reru tveir á báti með dorgar sínar at smáfiski. Vindr rak þá í haf út. Í náttmyrkri brutu þeir
- 4 við land ok gingu upp; fundu kotbónda einn. Þar vóru þeir um vetrinn. Kerling fostraði Agnar enn karl Geirrøð. At vári fekk karl þeim skip. Enn
- 6 er þau kerling leiddu þá til strandar, þá mélti karl einméli við Geirrøð. Þeir fengu byr ok kvómu til stoðva foður síns. Geirrøðr var fram í skipi. Hann
- 8 hljóp upp á land enn hratt út skipinu, ok mélti: "Far þú þar er smyl hafi þik." Skipit rak út. Enn Geirrøðr gekk út til bójar; hánum var vel fagnat;
- þá var faðir hans andaðr. Var þá Geirrøðr til konungs tekinn, ok varð maðr ágétr.

King Reeding owned two sons. One was called Eyner, and the other Garfrith. Eyner was ten winters old, and Garfrith eight winters. The two were rowing in a boat with their trolling-lines for small fishing. The wind then drove them out into the sea. In the dark of night they crashed into land and walked up; they found a lone cottage-farmer. There they were over the winter. The wife fostered Eyner, but the husband Garfrith.^a In the spring the husband gave them ships, but when they followed the farmer's wife in leading them to the shore, the husband spoke privately with Garfrith.^b They got a good gust, and came to their father's harbour. Garfrith was in the front of the ship. He leapt up onto land and pushed out the ship, and spoke: "Go thou whither the fiends may have thee!" The ship drove out. But Garfrith walked towards the farm; he was welcomed well; by then his father was passed-on. Then Garfrith was taken as king, and became an excellent man.

^aThe wife was Frie, and the husband Weden; this is clarified by the following prose. The motif of Weden preferring the youngest brother is also found in Righ.

^bSurely instructing him to push his brother out to sea.

Weden and Frie sat in Lithshelf^L and looked over all the Homes.^a Weden spoke: "Seest thou Eyner, thy foster-son, where he begets children with the troll-woman in the cave?^b But Garfrith, my foster-son, is king and now sits at land." Frie says: "He is such a meatnithing that he tortures his guests if he judges too many are coming." Weden says that this is the greatest lie; they make a wager about this matter. Frie sent her handmaid Full to Garfrith's. She bade the king be wary, that he not be ended by that many-cunning^C man who was come in the land, and said that his sign was that no hound was so fierce that he would leap at him. But that was the greatest vainglory that Garfrith were not meat-good, and yet he has that man seized, whom the hounds would not touch. He was clad in a blue cloak, and called himself Grimner, and did not tell any more about himself, even though he was interrogated. The king had him tortured that he would speak, and set him between two fires, and he sat there for eight nights. King Garfrith had a son ten winters old, and he was named Eyner after his brother. Eyner walked up to Grimner, and gave him a full horn to drink, saying that the king did ill as he had him tortured without cause. Grimner drank from it. Then the fire had come such that the cloak burned on Grimner. He quoth:

^aVery similar to the Longbeard Origin Myth (TODO: reference and elaborate).

^bThis may relate to Frie's role as love-goddess. Eyner is in any case a degenerate^C man, what one would call a 'coomer'.

Folkwong is the ninth, and there Frow decides the choice of seats in the hall; half the slain she chooses each day, but half does Weden own.^a a This st. is cited and closely paraphrased in Yilfer 24. — The roots of kjósa val 'choose the slain' are the same as those in walkirrie (val-kyrja 'chooser of the slain'), and as Frow is a prominent goddess this would surely make her the chief walkirrie. This is paralleled by SarleTh, where Frow assumes the name Gandle (Gondul, a name attested in several lists of walkirries; see Wallow 30 and Notes) and incites the legendary never-ending Conflict of the Headnings (Hjaðningavíg). In spite of this parallel, there are good reasons to believe that the chief walkirrie was Frie Weden's wife. First, one of the functions of the walkirries is to bear ale to the Ownharriers (Grimner 37). This mirrors royal Germanic banquets attested in heroic poetry, where the host's wife or daughter would pour ale to his retainers and guests (the so-called 'lady with a mead cup' ritual; see Enright (1996) and Riseley (2014)). As Weden's wife, we would expect Frie to have this role. Second, at Balder's funeral as attested in Yilfer (TODO. chapter number), Weden rides with Frie and the Walkirries, while Frow rides alone with her cats. If she were chief walkirrie, it is rather strange that she should not ride with them. Third, there are two separate myths where Frie and Weden contend over the fates of armies and men. These are the prose introduction to the present poem and the Longbeard origin myth (for which see Introduction to the present poem).

Thound^P roars; thrives Thedwitner's fish [= Middenyardsworm?] in the flood; the river-stream seems far too great for the noisy slain host to wade.^a

^{1–2} Djóðvitnis fiskr 'Thedwitner's fish'] Djóðvitnir is easily analyzed as bjóð- 'great, main' + vitnir 'wolf'. The great wolf is naturally the Fenrerswolf', and its "fish" should then be the Middenyardsworm. That it could indeed be called a fish is proven by Hymer~24, where the word does not even carry alliteration.

^aThound may be the river surrounding Walhall, which the dead have to pass over to reach the hall. This stanza may also be referring to the punishment of men in waters; see note to Wallow TODO for discussion on that.

^aThese horses also appear in Sighdrive 14a/2, immediately after the sun itself. See note to the next st.

^bAccording to Yilfer 11 the gods took two horses to pull the sun's chariot—Yorewaker and Allswith—and "under the shoulders of the horses the gods placed two wind-bags to cool them, but in some sources (i sumum fróðum, presumably this st.) this is called iron-coals (ísarn-kol).

^aThe sun-disc was apparently thought to be a translucent shield, which protected the earth from the full power of the Sun behind it. Without it the whole world ("crags and surf", LAND and SEA; the totality of the earth) would burn up. In Sighdrive 14a/1 there is mentioned the "shield that stands before the shining god [SUN]".

^aAccording to Yilfer 12, which is probably based on this st., Skoll chases the sun, but Hate chases the moon (which is why he runs in front of the sun). See note to Wallow 40 for discussion on these wolves.

Woulder^P's holdness^C—and that of all the gods—has each who first touches the fire; for the Homes^C become open o'er the sons of the Ease, when the cauldrons are heaved off.^a ^asveiti, while cognate with ModEngl. 'sweat', almost always carries the meaning of 'blood' in poetry. This is also the case with the OE cognate swát (e.g. Beewolf 1286a: sweord swáte fáb 'sword stained with sweat', 2689b–2690: hé ge-blódegod wearð // sáwul-dríore; · swát ýðum wéoll. 'he was bloodied in soul-gore; the sweat gushed in waves').

^bThe understanding is of the heavens as a dome, something that fits well with the clouds being Yimer's brains as mentioned in the following st.

^aI agree with Finnur Jónsson (1932) in that this describes the gods fencing in Middenyard ('the middle enclosure') by using the hair of Yimer's eyebrows as poles.

¹ hylli 'holdness'] i.e. 'favour, loyalty, grace'. This word and its adjectival equivalent bollr 'hold; favourable, loyal, gracious' are often used when speaking about divine grace, not just in Christian texts, but likewise as here wrt. to the Heathen gods. See Encyclopedia for other examples.

^aThis st. is one of the most difficult in the poem, and many interpretations have been made (for a summary see Nordberg (2005)). Many commentors (e.g. Finnur Jónsson (1932) and Sijmons and Gering (p. 208, TODO)) interpret this st. as relating to the frame narrative, so that Weden, still bound between the two fires, is wishing for the gods to rescue him. This, however, scarcely makes sense given its placement in the gnomic wisdom section of the poem, unless the whole surrounding section is taken to be a later "insert" (as supposed by Finnur) but there is no textual or internal support for that. I believe instead, agreeing with Nordberg, that the st. refers to the cooking and eating of sacred stew in large cauldrons during the bloot^C, and Woulder's role in the setting of the ritual fire (see Encyclopedia: Woulder and (af Edholm, 2009)). This interpretation is especially interesting when one considers the preceding sts. 41–42, which deal with the ordering of the world through the dismembering of the primordial sacrificial victim Yimer. It is well attested comparatively (see (Lincoln, 1986)—especially the first two chapters—for its Indo-European analogues) that the ritual sacrifice in the present was seen as a reenactment and continuation of the gods' creation of the world in the mythic past through the previously mentioned primordial sacrifice, and these three sts. would seem to attest this view also in the Germanic tradition.

The Leed of Hoarbeard (Hárbarðsljóð)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): early C11th (0.578)—late C11th (0.377) Meter: Unclear (TODO)

In my opinion the poem can be seen as an allegory on class relations, namely between the self-owning Norwegian and later Icelandic farmers, and the warlike Norwegian earls.

Of all Eddic poems this one is probably the strangest in terms of form. Verse length varies greatly, and many of the lines (see especially the final verse) are of an obscene length reminiscent of late continental Germanic poems like the Heliand; some simply have no metrical qualities at all. The young clitic definite is (uniquely) employed frequently throughout the poem. These criteria would seem to point towards a late origin for the poem (though not later than the late C13th, when R was written).

Against this late origin speaks the presence of rare words (e.g. ggurr v. 13) and a thorough understanding of the personalities of the two gods which would seem unlikely to stem from several centuries after the conversion of Iceland. The model devised by Sapp gives the poem a 57.8% likelihood of being from the early C11th, and a 37.7% likelihood of being from the late 11th. These scores are most similar to those obtained by Griper, a poem that on the surface seems much more archaic.

What could we then be dealing with? It may of course be that the poem is heavily corrupt, but there is no good evidence for this (apart from the above-mentioned irregularities). Most lines are readily understandable and fit well both within their respective context and the poem as a whole. I think a better solution to this problem is to assume that the poem has been acted out as a sort of carnivalesque theatre, with two masked actors, each playing one of the gods. This would explain the variations in meter and line length, and the prose; some lines were simply shouted out, and the lack of alliteration in them would then have a powerful, discordant effect.

This is shown also by uses of the word 'here' in vv. 9 and 14. TODO: mention concept of "double scene" by Lars Lönnroth?

P1 Þórr fór ór austr-vegi ok kom at sundi einu. Qðrum megum sundsins var [R 12r/30] 2 ferju-karlinn með skipit. Þórr kallaði:

Thunder journeyed from the Eastern Way and came to a sound. At the other side of the sound was the ferryman with the ship. Thunder called out:

[R 12r/32] 1 "Hvęrr's sá svęinn svęina · es stęndr fyr sundit handan?" "Who is that swain of swains, that stands across the sound?"

[R 12v/1] 2 "Hverr's sá karl karla · es kallar of váginn?"

"Who is that churl of churls, that calls out over the wave?"

[R 12v/2]

- 3 "Fer þú mik of sundit, · føði'k þik á morgun;
- mẹis hẹfi'k á baki, · verŏr-a matrinn bẹtri. Át'k í hvíld · áŏr ek hẹiman fór,
- 4 síldr ok hafra; · saðr em'k enn þess."

[Thunder quoth:] "Ferry me over the sound, I feed thee in the morning! A basket have I on my back; the food does not get better.^a I ate for a while before I journeyed from home, herring and oatmeal/he-goats; I am still full from that."

4 hafra 'oatmeal/he-goats'] The easiest reading here is the acc. pl. of hafr 'he-goat'. Thunder also eats his goats in Yilfer 44, where he butchers and cooks them in the evening and brings them back to life by blessing them with his hammer at dawn. Finnur Jónsson (1932) and Pettit (1986) prefer this reading; see also note to next stanza.—Many other scholars have here read an accusative plural of hafri 'oat', i.e. 'porridge, oatmeal'. Stiles (forthcoming TODO) connects this with Indrá's (who is the Vedic equivalent of Thunder) "partner and yokemate" (RV 6.56.2) Pūṣán's eating porridge (e.g. 6.56.1, 57.2). Another similarity Stiles notes between Thunder and Pūṣan is that both have chariots driven by goats (e.g. 6.57.3: "Goats are the draft-animals for the one", 58.2: "Having goats as his horses"). Whether the Vedic tradition has split an original god into two or whether Thunder has absorbed elements of another god is hard to say.

- 5 "Dat sęgir þú nú · es hverjum þikkir ai.e. 'you will not get better food than that.'

^aTODO. This is pretty difficult. From the previous stanza vęrŏinum seems to be referring to eating.

at vaða of váginn til þín · ok véta ǫgur minn; skylda'k launa kǫgur-sveini · þínum kangin-yrði · ef ek komumk yfir sundit."

"An ugly harm it seems to me to wade o'er the wave to thee, and wet my burden.

I would repay thee, swaddle-swain, for thy mocking words, if myself I could bring over the sound."

[R 12v/23] 14 "Hér mun'k standa · ok þín heðan bíða;

2 fannt-a-tu mann inn harðara · at Hrungni dauðan."

"Here will I stand, and hence await thee; thou foundest not a harder man since the death of Rungner^P!a"

[R 12v/25] 15 "Hins vilt-u nú geta · es vit Hrungnir deildum, sá inn stór-úðgi jǫtunn, · es ór stęini vas hǫfuðit á, þó lét'k hann falla · ok fyr hníga;

hvat vannt-u þá meðan, Hárbarðr?"

"This wilt thou now mention, of when I and Rungner dealt with each other, that great-minded ettin on whom the head was made of stone. Yet I let him fall, and sink down before [me]— what didst thou then meanwhile, Hoarbeard?"

² ogur 'burden'] The sense of this word is not clear, though it is probably the same as the first element of the compound ogur-stund 'burdensome hour', found in Wayland 42. Some authors have read it as a crude euphemism for 'penis', which would not be out of character for this poem. I however consider the best interpretation to be that of an author whose name I've forgotten (TODO!), namely that Thunder is referring to the food he carries on his back (cf. v. 3).

^aRungner was an ettin slain by Thunder, TODO. Hoarbeard's mentioning of him sets off a long interchange, wherein the two boast of their deeds, and ask what the other one was doing meanwhile.

^aA remarkable clear statement of purpose. This conception is far from unique to this verse; in Hymer 11, for instance, Thunder is described as "the opponent of Rooder", "the friend of manly retinues" and "Wighward", attesting his role in the slaying of ettins and the protection of men and their sanctuaries (wighs^C). kenned as the wigh-ward (sanctuary-defender) of Middenyard. "Thunder owns ample strength, but no heart; out of fear and mind-softness didst thou tread into a glove, and then seemedest thou not to be Thunder. Thou daredest neither—for thy fear—to sneeze nor to fart so that Feller might hear [it]."

^aThis story is also referenced in Lock TODO. It is elaborated heavily on in Yilfer 45: Thunder, Lock, and the siblings Thelve and Wrash had travelled east for a long time when they discovered a large hall, with an opening on one end, as wide as the building. They took rest inside, but in the middle of the night there was a great earthquake and the ground beneath them trembled. Thunder rose and led the party to a side-room to the right in the middle of the hall. He sat closest to the opening with his hammer ready, while the others sat terrified further inside. At daybreak they left the hall and found a huge ettin named Skrymir (Shrimer^P) sleeping next to them. His snoring had caused the earth-quakes, and the hall was his mitten; the side-room was the thumb-part.

"Sib has a lover at home; him wilt thou wish to meet! On that one shalt thou use thy strength—that befits thee more!"

1 hó 'lover'] Most translators take this acc. sg. word as an alternative form of bórr m. 'adulterer' (gen. bórs), containing the same root as bóra f. 'whore, prostitute', bór n. 'adultery, fornication', ModEngl. whore. The -r has presumably been interpreted as the masc. nom. sg. ending, giving nom. bór*, gen. bós*. Further, this accusation is also found in Lock TODO, where Lock says that he has been Sib's lover (bórr). Notably, CV interprets this word as the unrelated bór m. 'pot-hook', "insinuating that Thor busied himself with cooking and dairy-work." This seems very unlikely when considering Thunder's response in the next verse: "I think that thou liest!" and the parallel in Lock.

^aThis verse contains an interesting description of Viking age bridal dress: As the everyday manager of the household, keys were the mark of a respectable married woman. The "broad stones" on the breast are probably tortoise brooches, while the tipping of the head refers to some sort of bridal hat (TODO: Literature). Breast-brooches are also mentioned in Wayland 25, 36.

Then quoth that Lock, the son of Leafie: "I will also with thee be a handmaid; we two shall drive into the Ettin-homes."

Soon he-goats^{Ca} were driven home, hastened onto the cart-poles; they were to run well. Crags burst, burned the earth with flame; drove Weden's son [= Thunder] into the Ettin-homes.^b

Here march to the estate golden-horned cows, all-black oxen, for the ettin's [= my] pleasure.

A great deal I own of treasures, a great deal I own of necklaces; only Frow I think myself missing."

^aThe form used, tvau, is the neuter plural, i.e. one of the pair is female and the other male. This is either an error due to mindless copying of v. 11, or a backhanded insult against Thunder.

^aThunder's cart was driven by he-goats, for which he is called (for instance) "the lord of he-goats" in Hymer 20, 31. See Encyclopedia.

^bA very similar but more detailed description of Thunder driving is found in Thedwolf's Harvestlong 14–16. In both poems his wagon is drawn by he-goats, causing great cosmic disturbance: crags (bjorg in both) burst asunder and fires rage before him. See also Dreams 3 for a related description of Weden riding.

2 øxn al-svartir 'all-black oxen'] Formulaic, also occurring in Hymer 18. That all-black (i.e. spotlessly black) oxen were most valued is seen by the pairing with "golden-horned". One may also compare Saxo (I.8.12), where the hero Hadding has to atone for his slaying of a heavenly being by the bloot of dark-coloured victims (furvae hostiae): Siquidem propiciandorum numinum gratia Frø deo rem diuinam furuis hostiis fecit. Quem litationis morem annuo feriarum circuitu repetitum posteris imitandum reliquit. Frøblod Sueones uocant. 'In order to mollify the divinities he [= Hadding] did indeed make a holy sacrifice of dark-coloured victims to the god Frø. He repeated this mode of propitiation at an annual festival and left it to be imitated by his descendants. The Swedes call it Frøblot.' This ancient ritual taboo is further paralleled e.g. by the Tanakh, where animals dedicated to Yhwh were to be without blemish (מַמִּיִלְם, Leviticus 1:3)

^aCf. Hymer 15, where Thunder eats two of Hymer's oxen. It is rather interesting that the same kenning is used in both stanzas when both concern the god's great eating; perhaps one poet was playing on the other's expression, or they were both referencing another, now-lost work.

'But when the gods came to their wits [after Balder's death], then Frie spoke and asked which one among the Ease would own "all my loves and holdness, and will ride onto the Hellway and see if he can find Balder, and offer Hell a ransom if she will let Balder come home to Osyard."

^aLit. "Methinks out of the eyes burn."

⁵ ástir mínar, alla hylli 'my love, [and] all [my] holdness'] Probably formulaic. There are no preserved parallels in poetry, but there seems to be one in Yilfer 49 (excerpt):

We can tell from the citation of a Leed-meter stanza at the end of ch. 49 that Snorre knew one or more now-lost Eddic poems about Balder's death (cf. Yilfer 37, where Shirner is retold in prose, and then the final st. is cited), and it seems that one of these contained the same two long-lines as the present stanza. For such a sharing of lines cf. e.g. st. 14 above, the first three long-lines of which are identically shared with Dreams 1.

The Lay of Hymer (Hymiskviða)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C10th (0.694)-early C11th (0.268)

Meter: Firnwordslaw

Attested in two manuscripts, R and A. The two are surprisingly consistent; all verses are shared, and come in the same order. The title Hymiskvida 'the Lay of Hymer' comes from A. R instead has in the usual red ink the header Pórr dró Mið-garðsorm 'Thunder pulled the Middenyardsworm'.

While its meter is Firnwordslaw, typical for Eddic poems, this poem is notable for its unusual amount of kennings and complex word-order, both of which are clearly Scoldic traits. The myth of Thunder's fishing, likewise, is well known from a number of Skaldic poems (see TODO), with which this poem shares both kennings (e.g. 22/4 umbgjorð allra landa 'the encircler of all lands [= Middenyardsworm]') and wording (especially). These factors suggest that Hymer was composed in a Scoldic environment, perhaps even by a poet by whom we have other works preserved, although that can of course not be known.

Another notable thing about this poem is its nature as a compilation of several myths. (It must here be said, that unlike High, which has clear differences of style and language between its parts, Hymer is clearly a stylistic and narrative whole, composed by a single poet and then transmitted faithfully!) This is most clearly seen in its analogues. Thus, the story of Thunder's fishing is told in Yilfer 48, but Tew is not present, and there is no mention of a cauldron. TODO!

The unmerry ettin [= Hymer], as they rowed back, [...], so that in early morn Hymer spoke nothing;

he pulled the oar around, against the storm:

2 [...]] There is without doubt a line missing here; the meter usually requires four lines, and the first half of the sentence is incomplete without a verb (unless one understands an implied "was", so that the verse would begin "Unmerry was the ettin").

^aA rather unfitting kenning, since serpents do not have hair.

¹ hrutu] so A; hlumŏu 'dashed' R. End-rhyme is also used by the poet in st. 3/3.

^{3 [...]} It is very likely that a line is missing here, since the stanzas in the poem consistently have four lines. In other texts describing this narrative Hymer cuts Thunder's fishing line at this point, and so that is probably what it contained

3 ár 'in the early morning'] Finnur Jónsson (1932) suggests $sv\acute{a}'t$ at $\acute{q}r$ 'so that by the oar'. Assuming my interpretation is correct, the three would have been fishing

And yet the ettin, used to stubbornness, regarding strength of hand flyted with Thunder; he called not the man strong—although he could row, mightily—unless he broke the chalice.^a ^aHymer tells Thunder, who having let go of the Worm now has nothing to show for the trip, that he can accomplish something half as good as the pulling of the whales if he carries them home, or if he fastens the boat (by the shore).

^aThunder did not pour the bilge-water out of the boat, something that makes its weight considerably heavier. This was thus a great work of strength.

² ol-kjól 'ale-ship [CAULDRON]'] olkjól is the accusative form, but in this sense (CV: koma, B) we would expect the dative olkjóli, something that the meter does not allow for.

^ahof 'hall' usually means 'hove; temple'.

^aIn the account of Yilfer Thunder is said to have stepped through the boat when trying to pull up the Middenyardsworm. This detail is also seen on the carving of the Altuna stone from Uppland, Sweden; it may have been transposed to this place in the narrative. TODO.

^bThe rings from the cauldron-chain; this detail is mentioned in an example sentence contrasting long and short phonemes in FGT (1950): heyrði til hoddu, þá er Pórr bar hverinn "one heard the pot-links when Thunder bore the kettle". According to Finnur Jónsson (1932) this chain reached from one end of the kettle to another, in which case this would be an oblique reference to the cauldron's size, its diameter being the same as Thunder's height.

The valour-mighty one [= Thunder] came onto the Thing^C of the gods, and had that cauldron which Hymer [had] owned; but well the Wighers^G (= gods) shall drink one ale-feast at Eagre's every flax-cutting [FALL?].

¹ ér 'ye'] The audience. As pointed out in Finnur Jónsson (1932), a verse containing such an address to the audience is otherwise unparalleled. (Wallow 1, for instance, is still 'in character' as the wallow.)

² goŏ-mólugra 'god-speaking'] This is a hapax, but easily analyzed. One who is $go\check{o}$ -mólugr is 'able to speak about the god-lore', i.e. 'versed in the mythology'.

⁴ eitt hor-meitið 'one ... flax-cutting'] A very obscure kenning. La Farge and Tucker (1992) give several interpretations, viz. eitr-bor-meitir 'poison-rope-cutter [SNAKE > WINTER]', eitr-orm-meiðir 'poison-worm-injurer' [WINTER]. The solution with the minimal amount of emendation is to read eitt 'one' as modifying elðr 'ale-feast', and hverjan 'every' as modifying bor-meitiðr 'flax-cutting', a compound made up of horr 'flax, cord' and meita 'to cut', seemingly referring to an obscure harvest festival. This interpretation is by no means certain.

Eagre^P, who by another name is called Gymer^P, had prepared an ale-feast for the Ease when he had got the great kettle as now is told.^a

To that gathering came Weden^P and Frie^P, his woman. Thunder^P came not, for he was on the Eastern Way^L. Sib was there, Thunder's woman; Bray^P and Idun^P, his woman. Tew^P was there, he was one-handed. The Fenrerswolf^P tore his hand off when it was bound.^b There was Nearth^P, and his woman Shede^P; Free^P and Frow^L; Wider^P, the son of Weden^P. Lock^P was there, and the servants of Free: Bew^P and Beal^P. There was a great many of the Ease^G and Elves^{Gc}.

Eagre had two servants: Femfinger^P and Elder^P. There was glowing gold used instead of fire; the ale there poured itself. There was a great grith-stead^C.^d Men greatly praised how good the servants of Eagre were. Lock could not stand that, and he slew Femfinger.

Then the Ease shook their shields and screamed at Lock,^e and chased him away to the forest, but then they went to drink. Lock came back and found Elder outside; Lock greeted him:

ai.e. 'what do they speak about over the ale?'

4 mann-gi ... vinr 'none ... words.'] i.e. "none of them say anything good about you." — The (lack of) alliteration here is very notable, and also occurs in st. 10 (between $Vi\eth arr$ and ulfs, see note there). It could simply be explained by the line being corrupt, but as there are no signs of that we ought to look for other explanations. I see two, namely that (a) the semi-vowel v(/w/) is participating in vowel-alliteration with o. Such an alliteration between v and true vowels is never encountered in Scoldic poetry, but it might have been existed in the simpler Eddic styles; or that (2) the poem (or at least the relevant lines) is of such old age that it was composed before the North Germanic loss of v before rounded vowels. This is supported by the fact that in both the present st. and st. 10 the words beginning with vowels ($or\eth$ 'word', ulfr 'wolf') have cognates in other Germanic languages that begin with w, and in the case of the word ulfr this consonant is also attested in several old Scandinavian runic inscriptions. For metrical reasons the lines must postdate syncope, but on the basis of three clearly related C7th runestones from Blekinge (from Stentoften, Gummarp, and Istaby; DR 357–359) the loss of w before rounded vowels is shown also to have occurred after some syncope (so DR 359 haþuwulafR Haþuwulaf<math>R). Of course, even if the alliteration indeed is on v, this does not require dating the whole poem to the late Proto-Norse period (indeed, according to the analysis done by Sapp (2022), it is not even the linguistically oldest poem preserved); the older forms could simply be an archaism.

A C7th Proto-Norse form of the c-line might be: *mannagí 's þér in worðé winir.

[Lock] quoth:
"Shut up thou, Giben: Him will I now mention,
who seduced thy senses:
the white swain who gave thee a necklace,
and thou cast o'er [him] thy leg!"
    [Óðinn kvað] þat:
  21
          "Órr est, Loki, · ok ør-viti jafn-gorla sem ek."

    4
[Weden quoth] this:
"Mad art thou, Lock, and out of wits,
as thou earnest Giben's anger against thee,
for all orlays of people I ween that she should know, just as clearly as I."
1 Ørr ... ok ør-viti 'Mad ... and out of wits'] Formulaic, occurs at two other places (TODO), and is probably alluded to in st. TODO of the present poem.
    [Loki] kvaŏ:
  22
          "Þęgi þú, Óðinn, 🕟 þú kunnir aldri-gi

[Weden] quoth:

"Know that if I gave to them I should not have given, to the slower men victory: for eight nights wast thou beneath the earth, milking cows and a woman, and there hast thou borne children, and I've judged that a degenerate's nature."

[Loki] kvaŏ:

 4

[Lock] quoth:

"But thou, they said, didst sink down into Samsy, and thou beatst the drum like [do] wallows. In the likeness of a sorcerer thou journeyedst among the nations of men, and I've judged that a degenerate's nature."

[Frigg kvaő:]

[Lock quoth:]
"Shut up thou, Frie: Thou art Firgyn's maiden, and has always been man-eager:
as [when] Wigh and Will, thou hadst, O Withrer's wife, both in thy bosom taken."
   [Frigg kvaő:]
  27
          "Veizt ef inni étta'k · Égis hollum í

    4
[Frie quoth:]
"Know, that if within I owned, in Eagre's halls,
a son alike to Balder:
out came thou not from the sons of the Ease,
and thou wouldst be fought with wrath."
   [Loki kvað:]
  28
          "Enn vill þú, Frigg, · at ek fleiri telja
              mína mein-stafi:

    4
[Lock quoth:]
"Yet wilt thou, Frie, that I count more of my harmful deeds:
I caused it, that thou seest not riding henceforth Balder to the halls."
   [Fręyja kvaő:]
          "Órr est, Loki, · es þú yðra tęlr

[Frow quoth:]

"False is thy tongue, I ween that it henceforth will sing evil [into being] for thee.

Wroth against thee are the Ease and Ossens: grieved wilt thou journey home.^a"

1–2 Fl ϕ ... gala; 'False ... thee'] The language is again strikingly similar to High , particularly 29/3–4: "A quick-spoken tongue—unless it be held in place—oft sings evil [into being] for itself (opt sér \acute{o} -gótt of gglr)." and 116/3–4: "a false-counseling tongue ($\mathit{fl\acute{a}}$ -r $\acute{\varrho}\acute{o}$ tunga) brought his life to its end, and in no way over a truthful charge."

Loki:

Nearth [quoth]:
"It is little woe that women should get themselves a man,
an adulterer or whomever;
this is a wonder, as a degenerate os is come here within,
and that one has born children!"
   Loki:
         "Þegi þú, Njorðr, · þú vast austr heðan

Lock [quoth]:
"Shut up thou, Nearth: Thou wast east hence sent [as] a hostage for the gods.
Hymer's maidens had thee for a urinal,
and pissed thee in the mouth!"
   Njorŏr:
  35

The Speeches of Shirner (Skírnismól)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C10th (0.897) Meter: Leed-meter, Galder-law (TODO)

The whole poem is attested in both R and A. The name Skírnismól 'Speeches of Shirner' comes from A; R has the header For Skírnis 'Shirner's journey'.

The same myth is told in Yilfer 37. A single verse of the present poem is quoted there, namely the last one (42), with some minor differences in wording that would seem to stem from oral tradition (see Note there). One could speculate that the author of Yilfer did not have a copy of this poem in front of him, but rather knew of the story through an oral tradition which included only the last verse. This seems unlikely for the chief reason that this paraphrase does not add a single detail not already in the present poem, but on the other hand condenses and abbreviates that which is already written here. Thus Shirner's journey and curse (roughly vv. 10–38 here) is simply summarized in the following manner: "Then Shirner journeyed and requested the woman [i.e. Gird] for him [i.e. Free], and received her promise, that nine nights later she would come to the place which is called Barrey, and have a wedding with Free."

On the other hand, the paragraph in Yilfer 37 that corresponds to what is here P1 is much more detailed. It goes: "Gymer was a man called, and his woman Earbode; she was of the lineage of mountain-risers. Their daughter is Gird, who is fairest of all women. It was one day as Free had gone to Lithshelf and looked about all the Homes. And when he looked to the north he saw on a farm a large and fair house, and into that house walked a woman. And when she brought out her hands and closed the doors before her, then light shone off her hands—both into the air and onto the waters—and all the homes were brightened by her. That beauty, when he had set himself in that holy seat, harmed him so that he walked away filled with pain. And when he came home he spoke nothing. Nothing slept he, nothing drank he. Nobody dared to ask him to speak. Then Nearth had Shirner, Free's shoe-swain, called unto him, and asked him to go to Free and ask him to speak, [...]"

It seems to me that this circumstance, where the part corresponding to the poem is a short paraphrase, but the part corresponding to the prose passage is much more detailed, can only have arisen if the former already had a fixed form, whereas the latter was freer and could vary with each retelling. For this, see further TODO.

Nearth asked him to speak with Free. Then Shede^P spoke:

 $^{1\,}$ rís ... beiða 'rise ... speak'] Alliteration is missing here. A simple solution would be to replace gakk 'go' with a synonym like rinn 'run' or $r \acute{a} \eth$ 'resolve', but this breaks the mirroring in 2/2.

⁴ afi 'man'] While this word usually means 'father' or 'grandfather', it must here certainly mean 'man' without a connotation of old age. See further CV.

[R 11r/22, A 2r/23]

² seggr 'youth'] This word usually means simply 'man', but it seems to have a specific connotation with youth. Its original meaning is 'messenger', and the semantic shift is thus: 'messenger' > 'young man' > 'warrior/man'. The sense of 'young man' is also seen in Wayland 23, where it is used in reference to king Nithad's two young sons. In the present stanza it answers Free's addressing Shirner as seggr binn ungi 'the young youth'; Shirner points out that the two are of equal age, and so Free is as much of a young man as he.

Free [quoth]: "That steed I give thee which bears thee over the dark, wise wavering-flame; and that sword which by itself will strike, if he is sharp who owns it."

⁴ lopt ok logr 'air and sea'] Formulaic and very old, also paralleled in the Anglo-Saxon. TODO.

^ai.e. 'person'. For other examples of gods being called men see note to final st. of Webthrithner (TODO).

^{1–4} berr 'bears'; mun vegask, ef sá 's horskr es hefr 'will strike, if he is wise who owns it'] In his response Free replaces the subjunctive verb forms (beri 'might bear', vegisk 'might strike') with indicative and future forms, giving a sense of certainity and authority. The steed and sword are faultless, and if Shirner fails on the mission, it would be only due to his own fault ("if he is sharp who owns it.").

P2 Skírnir mélti við hestinn:

Shirner spoke with the horse:

10 "Myrkt es úti, · mál kveő'k okkr fara [R 11r/29, A 2r/28]

"Tis dark outside; I declare it time for us to journey over the drizzling mountains, over the nation of the Thurses^G. Both two we come, or us both does take that terrifying ettin.^a"

3 bursa 'of the Thurses'] so A; byria R

5 á-mátki jotunn 'terrifying ettin'] Formulaic. á-máttigr 'terrifying' (lit. perhaps 'mighty in opposition') has a supernatural connotation, and only occurs in four other places in R: Wallow 8, Grimner 11, HHarw 17 and HHarw 14. In the first three it is likewise paired with jotunn 'ettin', while in the fourth it describes a man with clearly supernatural attributes.

^aShirner declares his intention not to abandon the horse given to him by his lord; they will either both make it, or both perish.

laid on the pyre that gold ring which is called Dreepner. Its nature was such that every ninth night, eight even-heavy golden rings dripped from it." When Harmod^{P} later comes to Hell^{L} to try to bring Balder back, Balder tells him to bring the ring back to Weden, as a token of memory.

^{1–3} Til holts ... gat. 'To the wood ... got.'] The <code>gamban-tein</code> 'gombentoe' seems to be the stick on which the runic curse is to be carved (possibly to be identified with the <code>tams-vondr</code> 'taming-wand' of st. 26.) This interpretation is supported by <code>High</code> 152, which also uses the expression <code>(h)rás viðr</code> 'raw/sappy tree' and seems to refer to a runic curse.

This expression also appears on the C7th Gummarp stone: haþuwolafa sate staba þria fff 'Hathwolf placed three staves: fff', where the f-rune (*) is standing for its name, fee ^C (i.e. wealth, cattle).

² ergi ok óói ok ó-bola 'degeneracy and madness and impatience'] Both ergi 'degeneracy' and óþoli 'impatience' (here probably with a sexual connotation), are found in the love magic charm on the rune stick B257 from Bryggen, here edited under Charms and Spells. ergi is also found in the curse-formula on the C7th Proto-Norse runestones from Stentoften and Björketorp. See further introduction to B257.

Dumezil hypothesis. Irish influence? Many interesting things to write here!

P1 Svá sęgja menn í fornum sogum, at einnhverr af ósum, sá es Heimdallr 2 hét, fór ferðar sinnar ok framm með sjóvarstrondu nokkurri, kom at einum húsabó ok nefndisk Rígr; eptir þeiri sogu es kvéði þetta.

Thus say men in ancient saws^C, that one of the Ease^G—he who was called Homedall^P—went on his journey forth along some lakeshore, came upon a lone homestead and called himself Righ. According to that saw is this poem.

- 1 Ár kvóðu ganga · grønar brautir
- 2 oflgan ok aldinn · ós kunnigan, ramman ok roskvan · Ríg stíganda.

Of yore they said did walk the green paths, a mighty and aged os^G, cunning; the strong and brisk Righ, striding.

- 2 Gekk hann meir at þat · miðrar brautar,
- kom hann at húsi, · hurð vas á gétti; inn nam at ganga, · ęldr vas á golfi,
- hjón sótu þar · hór at arni,
 Ái ok Edda · aldinfalda.

Went he further at that, on the middle of the road; came he to a house; the door was wide open. He took to go inside; fire was on the floor. A couple sat there, hoary by the hearth: Great Grandfather and Great Grandmother, old-fashioned.

- 3 Rigr kunni þeim · róð at segja;
- meir settisk hann · miðra fletja en á hlið hvára · hjón salkynna.

Righ knew to tell them counsels; he further set himself down on the middle of the floor-bench, but on either side [sat] the couple of the hall.

- 4 þá tók Edda · økkvinn hleif,
- þungan ok þykkvan, · þrunginn sóðum, bar hón meir at þat · miðra skutla,
- soð vas í bolla · setti á bjóð;
 vas kalfr soðinn · krása beztr;
- 6 ręis hann upp þaðan, · réðsk at sofna;

Then took Great Grandmother a lumpy loaf, heavy and thick, stuffed with chaff. She carried it further at that on the middle of a trencher—broth was in the bowl—she set it on a plate; a cooked calf was the best dainty; he rose up thence, resolved to sleep.

- 5 Rigr kunni þeim · róð at segja;
- męir lagðisk hann · miðrar rekkju, en á hlið hvára · hjón salkynna.

Righ knew to tell them counsels; he further laid himself down in the middle of the bed, but on either side [lay] the couple of the hall.

- 6 par vas hann at þat · þríar nétr saman;
- gekk hann meirr at þat · miðrar brautar; liðu meirr at þat · mónuðr níu.

There was at that for nine nights in all; went he further at that, on the middle of the road; passed further at that nine months.

- 7 Jóð ól Edda, · jósu vatni
- 2 horundsvartan, · hétu þrél.

Great Grandmother begot a child, they poured it with water^a—swarthy of skin—they called him Thrall.

² horundsvartan 'swarthy of skin'] emend.; horvi svartan 'swarthy with flax' W

^aA reference to the Heathen naming ceremony, wherein water would be poured on a newborn (quite similar to the Christian baptism). Cf. High 156.

- 8 Hann nam at vaxa · ok vel dafna;
- vas þar á hǫndum · hrokkit skinn, kropnir knúar, · [...]
- fingr digrir, · fúlligt andlit, lotr hryggr, · langir hélar.

He took to grow, and thrive well; there on his hands was skin wrinkled, knuckles crooked, [...], fingers thick, a face foul, back stooping, heels long.

- 9 Nam hann meirr at þat · magns of kosta,
- bast at binda, · byrðar gørva;bar hann heim at þat · hrís gerstan dag.

Took he further at that to try his power; bast to bind, burdens to make; he carried home at that brushwood on a dismal day.^a

- 10 Par kom at garði · gengilbeina,
- aurr vas á iljum, · armr sólbrunninn, niðrbjúgt vas nef, · nefndisk Þír.

There came to the farm a gangleboned woman; mud was on her footsoles, her arm sunburnt; downturned was her face; she called herself Thew.

- 11 Meir settisk hón · miðra fletja,
- sat hjá hęnni · sonr húss, róddu ok rýndu, · rękkju gęrðu
 - Þréll ok Þír · þrungin dógr.

She further set himself down on the middle of the floor-bench; beside her sat the son of the house [= Thrall]. They spoke and whispered; made a bed—Thrall and Thew—on hard-pressed days.

- 12 Born ólu þau, · bjuggu ok unðu;
- hygg'k at héti · Hreimr ok Fjósnir, Klúrr ok Kleggi, · Kefsir, Fúlnir, ^aThe thrall had to work in even the most hostile weather.

^{1 &#}x27;gangleboned woman'] Derogatory term for somebody that only travels on their legs.

³ þír 'Thew'] The name probably means 'maid-servant' or 'female slave'. Unlike Thrall, it is not attested in any prose texts, but probably corresponds to OS thiwi 'maid(-servant)', being further root-related to þéa -þjá 'to enthral', Proto-Norse þewar 'servant', OE þéow 'slave, servant',.

- Drumbr, Digraldi, · Drǫttr ok Hǫsvir, Lútr ok Leggjaldi; · lǫgðu garða,
- akra tǫddu, · unnu at svínum, geita géttu, · grófu torf.

Children they begot, they settled and were content. I judge that they were called Ream and Feasner, Clour and Cleg, Chafser, Foulner, Drumber, Dighrald, Draught and Hazer, Lout and Leggald, they laid yard-fences, dunged fields, fed swine, tended to goats, dug turf.

- 13 Døtr vóru þér · Drumba ok Kumba,
 - Økkvinkalfa · ok Arinnęfja, Ysja ok Ambótt, · Eikintjasna,
- 4 Totrughypja · ok Tronubeina; þaðan eru komnar · þræla ættir.

The daughters were Drumb and Cumb; .

^aNote the contradiction with v. 12. Since the Inglings have already been mentioned (under the name Shilvings, for the difference between the two see Encyclopedia), it seems likely that Wolvings is the original reading.

The Lay of Wayland (Volundarkviða)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C10th (0.428)–early C11th (0.475)

Meter: Firnwordslaw

The Lay of Wayland (Wayland) is a story of immense psychological complexity, one of the masterpieces of Norse poetry.

The poem begins with a prose introduction, which survives in both R and A.

Wayland gets his revenge on the whole royal household. He murders Nithad's two young sons (affectionately, his "bear-cubs") and thus ends his male lineage. Likewise he defangs Nithad's "cunning wife" (she is never called anything else) by reducing her once powerful counsels to cold words; and finally he rapes Beadhild, depriving her of her maidenhood and value in marriage. They are thus reduced to the same state of complete powerlessness as he himself experienced, something clearly seen in the repetition of the adjective viljalauss 'powerless'; in v. 12 it describes Wayland after he wakes in shackles, but in v. 31 Nithad uses it to refer to his own mental state after the deaths of his sons. This sense of hopelessness is also seen in Beadhild's haunting concluding speech. "I knew by naught struggle against him," I could by naught struggle against him."

From the other versions of the story it is known that Beadhild gave birth to a son, Woody (OE Wudga, ThedS Viŏga, in Danish ballads Vidrik Verlandsøn). He went on to become a great hero, and in the later heroic ballads by far eclipses his father. His birth seems heavily foreshadowed by Wayland forcing Nithad to swear an oath in v. 33, but he is nowhere directly mentioned in the poem, probably for artistic reasons.

Apart from this lay there is one other telling of the full story, namely the Strand of Wayland the Smith in ThedS. While written in Old Norse, it is clear from the proper names and content that it is based on German sources (probably heroic ballads). Thus the native form Volundr is replaced with Velent [sic], Niðuðr with Niðungr. Interestingly there is a note within it showing that the native form was still known, namely about "Velent, the excellent smith, whom Warrings (Væringjar) call Wayland (Volundr)". Apparently Wayland was so famous that "all men seem to praise his workmanship so, that the maker of any smith's work which is made better than other works, is called a Wayland (Volundr) with regards to workmanship."

Far more stark than minor differences of language is that of tone. The psychological complexity and tension of the older redaction is almost entirely gone: Wayland is no longer a mysterious wild man, but a chivalrous knight who can escape from any peril through his ingenuity and craftmanship. He is not kidnapped out of Nithad's greed, nor hamstrung out of the suspicion of his cruel wife, but rather a loyal servant of Nithad's, banished from the kingdom after defending himself against the king's corrupt steward, and hamstrung after being caught attempting to poison the king's food in revenge.

Most frustratingly the personality of Beadhild is entirely expulged. She is the anonymous "king's daughter", an unnamed maiden (jungfrú, a borrowing from Low German) who is peacefully seduced by Wayland and quickly falls in love with him. Likewise the person of Nithad's cunning wife is completely gone, and the murder of his sons no longer ends his lineage, since he has another, older son who survives him and takes over the kingdom. Wayland still flies away laughing after telling Nithad what he has done, but only four years (his son with Beadhild is three years old) later reconciliates with Nithad's son, retrieves Beadhild and their son and lives a long life as a famous craftsman.

With this it is clearly seen that the story by the time of the ThedS had been heavily distorted, a tragic victim of medieval romantic sensibilities. It does not have any high literary value, but is of interest since it shows the wide reception and variation of the narrative.

Finally there are also traces of the story in the Anglo-Saxon tradition, where it is alluded to in both Walder and Dear, the latter of which particularly emphasising the powerlessness felt by Wayland and Beadhild (thus being much closer in spirit to the present poem than to ThedS). Parts of the narrative are depicted on the early C8th Frank's casket, where it is as prominent as the depiction of the Adoration of the Magi—a true testament to the weight with which it was regarded within that culture.

To illustrate the narrative correspondences and differences of the various redactions, I present the following table:

- svá't menn viti í fornum sogum. Níðuðr konungr lét hann hondum taka, svá sem hér er um kveðit:

Nithad was named a king in Sweden. He owned two sons and one daughter; she was called Beadhild. There were three brothers, the sons of a king of the Finns. One was called Slayfinn, another Agle, the third Wayland. They travelled on skis and hunted wild animals. They came into the Wolfdales and made for themselves houses there. There is a water there, called Wolfsea. Early in the morning they found on the lake-shore three women, and they were spinning linen. By them were their swan-hames^C; they were Walkirries. Two of them were the daughters of king Ladwigh: Ladguth Swanwhite and Harware Allwit, the third was Alerune, daughter of Kear^P of Walland^{Ga}. The brothers brought the maidens with them to their halls. Agle got Alerune, but Slayfinn Swanwhite, but Wayland Allwit. They lived there for seven winters, then they left to attend battles, and did not return. Then Agle left on skis to look for Alerune, but Slayfinn sought out Swanwhite; but Wayland stayed in the Wolfdales. He was the most skilled craftsman, as men know, in the ancient saws. King Nithad had him captured, about which this has been sung:

^aThe Roman emperor; see Encyclopedia.

1 Meyjar flugu sunnan · Myrk-við í gognum

2 al-vitr ungar, · ør-lǫg drýgja; þér á sévar-strǫnd · settusk at hvílask drósir suð-rónar, dýrt lín spunnu.

Maidens flew from the south through Mirkwood^a—young allwits^b—to fulfill [their] orlay^C. They on the lake-shore set down to rest; the southern ladies span expensive linen.

² ør-log drýgja; 'fulfill [their] orlay'] That is, to fulfill their already laid-down destinies, as described in P1 and st. 3. I disagree with Clunies Ross (2005)[103], who translates this phrase as 'engage in war', seeing the latter word as a borrowing from OE (cf. Dutch oorlog 'war'). In fact, the expression drýgja ørlog is also attested in OE, namely in l. 29 of a poem on the Christian Doomsday (TODO?), about a man going to Hell for his sins: ond þonne á tó ealdre · orleg dreógeð 'And then (the sinner) suffers his orlay for ever and ever'

^aMirkwood is surely referenced for its association with the war-ravaged lands of the Gots and Huns; a natural environment for Walkirries.

^bMaybe look at what this means. TODO.

One of them began—the fair maiden of men—to embrace Agle in her light bosom. Another was Swanwhite—her swan-feathers she rustled; but the third of the sisters warded the white throat of Wayland.

Then they stayed for seven winters at that, but all the eighth they yearned, but the ninth did need divorce them: the maidens longed for the mirky wood: the young allwits, to fulfill orlay.^a

Came there from the hunt the weather-eyed shooter: Wayland passing over a long way. Slayfinn and Agle found the halls deserted; they walked out and in, and looked about.

East skied Agle for Alerune, but south Slayfinn for Swanwhite; but alone Wayland stayed in the Wolfdales.

^{4 [...]]} A line mentioning the name of Slayfinn has certainly gone missing here.

^aAs Walkirries the orlay^C (already laid-down destiny) of the sisters is to preside over battles for Weden. Remembering this duty they become increasingly restless, until they one day decide to leave when their husbands are out hunting. For the significance of Mirkwood, see note to st. 1.

- 6 Hann sló goll rautt · við gim fastan,

This learns Nithad, lord of the Nears^G, that alone Wayland stayed in the Wolfdales. By night travelled warriors—nailed were their byrnies^a—their shields gleamed by the waning moon.

^aThe soldiers had plated armour.

² gingu ... sal 'went ... hall'] Formulaic. The fixed variant line hón/hann inn of gekk · end-langan sal 'he/she inside did go the endlong hall' occurs in three other places: sts. 16 and 30 of the present poem, and st. 3 of Ordrun. end-langr salr 'endlong hall' occurs in two additional places: st. 27 of Thrim and st. 3 of Shirner. — end-langr 'endlong' may be rendered as 'throughout, the entire (length of)'.

^aNithad's men take off all the seven hundred rings (presumably to count them) and then put them back on, but they keep just one. This bigh is probably the one mentioned in sts. 17 and 26, since Beadhild has it already when Wayland is brought back after being captured. Finnur Jónsson (1932) writes (My translation from the Danish.): "The ring which Nithad kept must have had special properties, and distinguished itself before others. There is no doubt that the ring is a flight ring; whether this was clear to the poet is however questionable. This much is certain, that Wayland seems to be able to fly away only after he has got back the ring; that is, the one which Beadhild brings him." —The reader may for himself judge the plausibility of this, but it seems that Wayland, being an exceptionally handy craftsman, may just as well have crafted wings for himself without need for magical rings. This agrees with the Low German verison and the Daedalus myth, for both of which see the introduction to the present poem.

^aThe verse is without doubt incomplete, but the story can be gleaned: Beadhild breaks the bigh she has been given by her parents (previously mentioned in vv. 10 (see note there) and 17), and is afraid that her parents may become upset. She thus goes to Wayland in secret, asking him to repair it.

^ai.e. was more cunning, experienced than her.

^bPresumably the deprivation of his mobility due to the hamstringing, which he resolves in the following stanza.

^cKing Nithad and his family.

grátandi Bǫŏvildr · gekk ór ęyju. tregŏi for friŏils · ok foŏur vreiŏi.

"Well I", quoth Wayland, "fall on my paddles; those which Nithad's men bereaved me of!a" Laughing Wayland threw himself in the air; weeping Beadhild went from the island: she grieved the lover's flight, and the father's fury.

^a C-V: fit 'the webbed foot of water-birds', the reader may picture for himself. Wayland has crafted a mechanism to take flight, regaining his mobility which he lost when he was hamstrung.

^aWayland has Nithad swear an oath that he will not harm Beadhild, nor their (yet unborn) child. For the form of the oaths cf. TODO.

⁴ einga dóttir · ykkur beggja. [Nithad quoth:] "Rise up, Thankred, my best thrall! Ask Beadhild—the brow-white maiden—to go fair-clothed with her father to counsel."

40 "Es þat satt Boðvildr, · es sogðu mér, sótuð it Volundr · saman í holmi?"

[Nithad quoth:] "Is it true, Beadhild, as they said to me: stayed thou and Wayland together on the islet?"

41 "Satt 's þat Níðuðr · es sagði þér:

- sótum vit Volundr · saman í holmi eina ogur-stund, · éva skyldi;
- ek vétr hónum · vinna kunna'k,

^{2–3} mey hina brá-hvítu ... fagr-varið 'the brow-white maiden ... fair-clothed'] With these expressions Nithad strongly stresses the purity of his daughter ($m\acute{e}r$ 'maiden' here simply meaning 'virgin'). Perhaps he thinks that her innocence can be restored if she dresses in fair clothes, but it will not be so.

ek vétr hónum · vinna mátta'k."

[Beadhild quoth:] "Tis true, Nithad, as he said^a to thee: stayed I and Wayland together on the islet, for one heavy hour—it should never [have been]! I knew by naught struggle against him; I could by naught struggle against him.^b"

^aBeadhild, knowing that the only one who is aware of what happened is Wayland, makes the subtle change in the conjugation, from her father's general plural ("what they said"), to the specific singular ("what the said").

^bShe was both mentally (kunna 'to know, understand') and physically (mega 'to have strength to do, avail') incapable of struggling against him. — As Finnur Jónsson (1932) comments, an unsurpassed final verse.

Eddic fragments from Snorre's Edda

TODO: Discussion on the fragments.

Numerous Eddic verses are quoted in Snorre's Edda. Most of them come from Eddic poems preserved in other manuscripts, but a few do not. One is attributed to a lost poem (Homedall's Galder), while the rest are quoted in the context of longer narrative prose sections.

The tone and context of this verse is highly reminding of mythic wisdom contests, especially that of Webthrithner. It is quoted in Yilfer 2, being the second Eddic verse in the text, following High 1 in the same chapter, which is uttered by Yilfer himself when he enters the hall of the Ease (who in Yilfer are presented as a group of deceitful sorcerers, rather than gods).

- P1 Hann sá þrjú háséti ok hvert upp frá oðru, ok sátu þrír menn sinn í hverju.
 - 2 Pá spurði hann, hvert nafn hofðingja þeira véri. Sá svarar, er hann leiddi inn, at sá, er í inu neðsta háséti sat, var konungr "ok heitir Hárr, en
 - 4 þar nést sá, er heitir Jafnhárr, en sá ofast, er Þriði heitir. Þá spyrr Hárr komandann, hvárt fleira er erendi hans, en heimill er matr ok drykkr honum
 - sem ollum þar í Háva holl. Hann segir, at fyrst vill hann spyrja, ef nokkurr er fróðr maðr inni. Hárr segir, at hann komi eigi heill út, nema hann sé
 - 8 fróðari,

He [= Yilfer] saw three high-seats and each one higher than the other, and sat there three men, one in each seat. Then he asked what the names of those chieftains were. Then High asks the one who is come, whether

- 1 ok statt-u framm · meðan þú fregn
- sitja skal sá es segir.

"and stand forth while thou askest; sit shall he who speaks!"

Homedall's Galder (Heimdallargaldr)

This mysterious stanza is quoted in Yilfer 27, the chapter describing Homedall. The poem is mentioned but not quoted in Scold 15: Heimdallar hofuð heitir sverð. Svá er sagt, at hann var lostinn mannshofði í gegnum. Um þat er kveðit í Heimdallar galdri, ok er síðan kallat hofuð mjotuðr Heimdallar 'The sword is called Homedall's head. So it is said, that he was pierced by a man's head. Regarding that was sung in Homedall's galder, and thereafter the head is called Homedall's bane.'

- 2 "Níu em'k móðra mogr,
- 2 níu em'k systra sonr."

This passage is closely paralleled in Saxo (TODO). See Hopkins (2021).

- P2 Inn þriði áss er sá, er kallaðr er Njorðr. Hann býr á himni, þar sem heitir
 - 2 Nóatún. Hann réðr fyrir gongu vinds ok stillir sjá ok eld. Á hann skal heita til séfara ok til veiða. Hann er svá auðigr ok féséll, at hann má gefa
 - 4 þeim auð landa eða lausafjár. Á hann skal til þess heita. Eigi er Njorðr ása éttar. Hann var upp féddr í Vanaheimi, en Vanir gísluðu hann goðunum ok
 - 6 tóku í mót at gíslingu þann, er Hénir heitir. Hann varð at sétt með goðum ok Vonum. Njorðr á þá konu, er Skaði heitir, dóttir Þjaza jotuns. Skaði
 - 8 vill hafa bústað þann, er átt hafði faðir hennar, þat er á fjollum nokkurum, þar sem heitir Þrymheimr, en Njorðr vill vera nér sé. Þau séttust á þat, at
 - þau skyldu vera níu nétr í Þrymheimi, en þá aðrar níu at Nóatúnum. En er Njorðr kom aftr til Nóatúna af fjallinu, þá kvað hann þetta:

The third Os is that one who is called Nearth. He lives in heaven, there as is called Nowetowns. He rules the motion of the wind and calms sea and fire. Upon him shall one call for sea-faring and for hunting. He is so wealthy and blessed with cattle that he may give them a wealth of lands or loose cattle. Upon him shall one call for that. Nearth is not of the lineage of the Ease. He was brought up in Wanehome, but the Wanes gave him as a hostage towards the gods and received as a hostage that one who is called Heener. He was used for reconciling the gods and the Wanes. Nearth has that woman who is called Shede, the daughter of the ettin Thedse. Shede wishes to have the dwelling place which her father had owned, which lies on some certain fells in the place called Thrimham, but Nearth wishes to be near the sea. They agreed to it that they would be for nine nights in Thrimham, but the other nine at Nowetowns. But when Nearth came back to the Nowetowns from the fell, then he quoth this:

- 3 "Leið erumk fjoll, · vas'k-a lengi á,
- 2 nétr einar níu;

[&]quot;I am nine mothers' lad; I am nine sisters' son."

ulfa þytr · mér þótti illr vesa hjá songvi svana."
```

"The fells are loathsome to me; I was not long on them—only for nine nights. The howling of the wolves thought me bad, held against the song of the swans."

P3 Pá kvað Skaði þetta:

Then Shede quoth this:

```
4 "Sofa né mát'k-a'k · sévar beðjum á
2 fugls jarmi fyrir;
sá mik vekr · es af víði kømr
4 morgun hverjan már."
```

"I could not sleep on the beds of the sea due to the bleating of the bird. That one wakes me when from the wide sea it comes, every morning, the mew."

P4 Pá fór Skaði upp á fjall ok byggði í Þrymheimi, ok ferr hon mjok á skíðum ok með boga ok skýtr dýr. Hon heitir ondurgoð eða ondurdís.

Then Shede went up to the fells and dwelled in Thrimham, and she often goes on skis with her bow and shoots beasts. She is called ski-god or ski-dise.

Pá fór Þórr til ár þeirar, er Vimur heitir, allra á mest. Þá spennti hann sik megingjorðum ok studdi forstreymis Gríðarvol, en Loki helt undir megingjarðar. Ok þá er Þórr kom á miðja ána, þá óx svá mjok áin, at uppi braut á oxl honum. Þá kvað Þórr þetta:

Then Thunder journeyed to that river which is called Wimbre, the greatest of all rivers. Then he wrapped his strength-girdle around himself and leaned upon Grith's stave against the stream, and Lock held the strength-girdle. And when Thunder came to the middle of the river, it waxed so great that it reached up unto his shoulders. Then Thunder quoth this:

```
5 "Vax-at-tu nú, Vimur, · alls mik þik vaða tíðir
2 jotna garða í;
veizt, ef þú vex · at þá vex mér ósmegin

jafnhátt upp sem himinn."

"Wax thou not now, Wimbre, as I wish to wade through thee into the yards of the ettins; know that if thou growest, that my os-might then grows as high as heaven."

- P6 Þá sér Þórr uppi í gljúfrum nokkurum, at Gjálp, dóttir Geirroðar stóð þar tveim megin árinnar, ok gerði hon árvoxtinn. Þá tók Þórr upp ór ánni stein mikinn ok kastaði at henni ok mélti svá: "At ósi skal á stemma." Eigi
 - 4 missti hann, þar er hann kastaði til. Ok í því bili bar hann at landi ok fekk tekit reynirunn nokkurn ok steig svá ór ánni. Því er þat orðtak haft, at
 - 6 reynir er bjorg Þórs.

Then Thunder sees above in some gorges, that Yelp, daughter of Garfrith stood there on either side of the river, and she caused it to grow. Then Thunder took up out of the river a great stone, and threw it at her and spoke thus: "At its source shall a river be dammed!" He did not miss his target. And in that moment he came on land and grasped ahold of a certain rowan-branch and thus stepped out of the river. Thus it is a saying that the rowan is Thunder's deliverance.

This additional st. regarding Thunder's battle with Yelp and Grope is only found in U, but seems in all regards like an old Eddic st. and has thus been included.

    6 "Einu sinni · neytta'k alls megins
    2 jotna gorðum í þá's Gjolp ok Greip, · dótr Geirraðar,
    4 vildu hefia mik til himins"
```

"A single time I used all [my] strength in the yards of the ettins: When Yelp and Grope, Garfrith's daughters, wished to lift me [up] to heaven."

- ok und mána sal · miðjan festu.

They turned mightily orlay-strands, when castles were broken in Browlund. They arranged a golden band, and beneath the moon-hall [SKY/HEAVEN] fastened it in the middle.

[R 20r/27]

- 4 Pér austr ok vestr · enda fólu,
- þar átti lofðungr · land á milli, brá nipt Nera · á norðrvega
- 4 einni festi, · ey bað hon halda.

They in the east and west hid its ends; there the praised one owned land in between. The kinswoman of Nare (unknown person) [NORN] tugged onto the northern ways a single cord; she bade it hold forever.

Second Lay of Hallow Hundingsbane (Helgakviða Hundingsbana aðra)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): early C11th (0.346)—late C11th (0.587) Meter: Firnwordslaw (TODO)

TODO: Introduction.

P1 Helgi fekk Sigrúnar ok áttu þau sonu; var Helgi eigi gamall. Dagr Hogna

- 2 sonr blótaði Óðin til foðurhefnda. Óðinn léði Dag geirs síns. Dagr fann Helga, mág sinn, þar sem heitir at Fjoturlundi. Hann lagði í gognum
- 4 Helga með geirnum. Þar fell Helgi en Dagr reið til fjalla ok sagði Sigrúnu tíðindi:

Hallow got Sighrun, and they owned sons; Hallow was not old. Day, son of Hain, blooted^C to Weden to take revenge for his father. Weden lent Day his spear. Day found Hallow, his brother-in-law, at a place called Fetterlund; he laid the spear through Hallow. There fell Hallow, but Day rode to the fells and told Sighrun the news:

- 1 "Trauðr em ek, systir, · trega þér at segja
- þvíat ek hefi nauðigr · nipti grétta: Fell í morgun · und Fjoturlundi
- buðlungr sá's vas · beztr í heimi ok hildingum · á halsi stóð."

"Regretful am I, sister, to grieve thee by saying—for, forced must I cause my kinswoman to cry: This morning fell, 'neath Fetterlund, that prince who was in the world the best, and on the throats of rulers stood."

P2 Ambótt Sigrúnar gekk um aftan hjá haugi Helga ok sá at Helgi reið til 2 haugsins með marga menn. Ambótt kvað:

Sighrun's maid-servant walked in the evening near Hallow's mound, and saw that Hallow rode to the mound along with many men. The maid-servant quoth:

- 2 "Hvárt eru þat svik ein · es séa þikkjumk
- eða ragna rǫk · ríða menn dauðir, es jóa yðra · oddum keyrið,
- 4 eða es hildingum · heimfor gefin?"

Sighrun walked into the mound, to Hallow, and quoth:

[&]quot;Tis not deceits only, as thou thinkest thyself seeing—nor the rending of the age, although thou behold us; although we drive forth our steeds with spear-points the princes are not granted leave to go home."

Sooner will I kiss the unliving king, than thou the bloody byrnie mightst cast away! Thy hair is, oh Hallow, with hoarfrost thick; the prince is all with corpse-dew [BLOOD] whipped; the hands wet-cold on the kinsman of Hain [= Hallow].—How shall I for thee, nobleman, remedy that?"

P5 Sigrún bjó séing í hauginum.

Sighrun made the bed in the mound:

Péir Helgi riðu leið sína, en þér fóru heim til bójar. Annan aftan lét Sigrún ambótt halda vorð á hauginum. En at dagsetri, er Sigrún kom til haugsins, hon kvað:

Hallow and his men rode on their way, but the women journeyed home to the farmstead. The next evening Sighrun made the maid-servant keep watch on the mound. But at sunset, when Sighrun came to the mound, she [= the maid-servant] quoth:

"Be not so mad that thou journey alone, oh lady of the Shieldings [= Sighrun], to the ghost-houses [MOUNDS]! They become mightier at night, all the dead fiends, oh maiden, than during the bright days."

Sighrun became short-lived due to harm and pain. It was the belief in ancient times, that men were reborn; but that is now called an old wives' tale. Hallow and Sighrun, it is said, were reborn. He was then called Hallow Haddingskate, but she Cheer Halfdanesdaughter, as is sung in the Leed of Cheer; and she was a walkirrie.

The Speeches of Rein (Reginsmól)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C10th (0.666)-early C11th (0.259) Meter: Leed-meter, Firnwordslaw

Like other poems from this section, it is better defined as a prosimetrum. The differing meter of the verses might suggest that they are taken from different poems.

P1 Sigurðr gekk til stóðs Hjálpreks ok kaus sér af hest einn er Grani var

Siward went to Helpric's stable and chose one horse, which was thereafter called Grane. Then Rein, son of Rethmar, was come to Helpric. He was more skilled than any man and a dwarf in stature. He was wise, cruel and feel-cunning. Rein fostered and taught Siward and love him very much. He told Siward about his own parents, and about the events that Weden, Heener and Lock had come to Andwareforce; in that force was a multitude of fish. A dwarf was named Andware; he was for a long time in the force in the likeness of a pike and got his food there. "Otter was our brother called," said Rein, "who often journeyed in the force in the likeness of an otter. He had caught a salmon and sat on the riverbank and ate it with closed eyes Lock struck him with a stone unto his death. The Ease thought themselves to have been very lucky, and flayed the skin off the otter. The same evening they sought to pass the night at Rethmare's house, and showed their catch. Then we bound them and proposed to them as a life-ransom that they would fill the otter-skin with gold, and also coat the outside with red gold. Then they sent Lock to get ahold of the gold. He came to Ran and got her net and then journeyed to Andwareforce and threw the net before the pike, and it jumped into the net. Then Lock spoke:

Siward concealed his name, because it was their belief in ancient times that the word of a fey C man could do much if he baled his enemy by his name. He [= Siward] quoth:

[Fathomer quoth:] "With hateful words alone answerest thou anything, but I say to thee truth alone: The resounding gold and the glowing red fee, those bighs will become thy bane!"

^aThe meaning is that Fathomer would not recognize Siward's lineage (i.e. his father) or name, since he is an orphan who up until this point has not won any glory. He is not saying that he is lineage is unknown even to himself, since sjalfan mik 'my self' is accusative, not dative.

^aThe original is unclear. á skęið means roughly 'rapidly, quickly', whence the expression ríða á skęið 'CV: to ride at full speed', but the other words are uncertain. La Farge and Tucker (1992) read 'your innate qualities show quickly', suggesting two unattested words: an adjective áborinn* 'innate, inborn' and a verb skjóa* 'to show'. Yet the lack of i-umlaut in the supposed 3rd sg. pres. ind. skjór is difficult. We would expect skýr*, as in skjóta 'to shoot,' with 2nd/3rd sg. pres. ind skýtr. A solution here would be reading a 2nd sg. pres. subj. skjóir, with a vowel TODO

[Fathomer quoth:] "The doom of the Norns shalt thou have before the headlands, and that of an unwise ape. In water [wilt] thou drown if thou row in wind; everything is the pit of the fey C .a"

1 fyr nesjum 'before the headlands'] Formulaic, the sense is that the doom of the norns is close at hand (TODO: How do other scholars explain this?). Cf. the last st. of Sonatorrek (TODO).

4 ok kjósa móðr frá mogum?"

^aSiward dismisses the idea of the curse. He must die regardless of whether he takes the gold or not, and he would rather die wealthy and famous than poor and unknown.

^aThat is, the cursed, death-doomed (fey) man will find sudden death no matter where he turns.

[&]quot;Say to me, Fathomer, as they call the wise, and knowing well enough: Which are those Norns who are TODO, and choose the mothers from their lads?"

The Speeches of Sighdrive (Sigrdrífumól)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C10th (0.961)

Meter: Leed-meter

The poem and prose under this header follows the order of R. A large count of verses are also cited in N (WalsS ch. 21).

In WalsS the present text up to P2 is first paraphrased:

Brynhildr segir, at tveir konungar bǫrðuz. Hét annarr Hjalmgunnarr; hann var gamall ok hinn mesti hermaðr, ok hafði Óðinn honum sigr heitit, en annarr Agnarr eða Auða bróðir. "Ek fellda Hjalmgunnarr í orrostu, en Óðinn stakk mik svefn-þorni í hefnd þess ok kvað mik aldri síðan skyldu sigr hafa ok kvað mik giptaz skulu. En ek strengða þess heit þar í mót at giptaz engum þeim, er hréðast kynni." Sigurðr mélti: "Kenn oss ráð til stórra hluta." Hun svarar: "Þér munuð betr kunna, en með þokkum vil ek kenna yðr, ef þat er nokkut, er vér kunnum, þat er yðr métti líka, í rúnum eða oðrum hlutum, er liggja til hvers hlutar, ok drekkum béði saman, ok gefi goðin okkr góðan dag, at þér verði nýt ok fregð at mínum vitrleik, ok þú munir eptir þat, er vit réðum." Brynhildr fylldi eitt ker ok férði Sigurði ok mélti:

'Byrnhild says that two kings fought. One was called Helmguther; he was old and the greatest warrior, and Weden had promised him victory, but the other was called Eyner or Eade's brother. "I felled Helmguther in battle, but Weden stung me with a sleeping-thorn as revenge for that, and declared that I should never thenceforth have victory, and said that I must marry, but I made a vow in response, to marry no man who could be frightened." Siward spoke: "Teach us counsels regarding great things." She answers: "Ye will know better, but with thanks I will teach you, if there is anything which we know that may please you, of runes or other things of importance; and let us both drink together, and may the gods give us two a good day, that thou have use and joy from my wisdom and that thou afterwards recall that which we two speak of." Byrnhild filled a vessel and brought it to Siward and spoke:'

After this the present sts. 4–12 and 14–19 are cited uninterrupted, and a paraphrase is given of sts. 20 ff. (TODO: edit these!). While the order of 12–19 (excepting the omission of 13) in N is identical to that of R, and sts. 4–5 likewise come first, the order of the middle sts. 6–11 is very different. The following table shows the relationship between the two ms. for the relevant stanzas:

The Third Lay of Guthrun (Guðrúnarkviða þriðja)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C10th (0.731), early C11th (0.178)

Meter: Firnwordslaw

A very short narrative poem, depicting a single minor legendary event. It is especially notable for its depiction of a trial by ordeal and the mention of a woman being drowned in a bog.

Herch, one of Attle's concubines tells Attle that she has seen his wife Guthrun sleeping with Thedric. Attle becomes distressed upon hearing this (P1). Guthrun asks him what is wrong (1), and he responds that Herch has accused her of sleeping with Thedric (2). Guthrun promises to to prove her innocence through a trial by ordeal involving picking up a white stone from boiling water (3). She further says that while she and Thedric did sit down together, they did so in mutual grief over the deaths of her brothers (4-5). She tells Attle to summon a German lord named Saxe, who knows how to carry out the trial. Seven hundred men arrive to witness the event (6). Before picking up the stone, Guthrun laments over her brothers' deaths, saying that they would have disputed the accusation through violence, but that she must now prove her innocence by herself (7). She then puts her hand in the boiling water, and unscathed takes out the stones. She holds it up and shows it to the witnesses (8). Attle laughs, knowing that his wife has been faithful, and orders Herch to pick up the stone (9). She does so, but her hands are horribly scorched, and men lead her to a "foul bog", presumably to be drowned (see above). The poet ends by laconically stating that Guthrun in such a way was "reconstituted for her affronts".

P1 Herkja hét ambótt Atla; hón hafði verit frilla hans. Hón sagði Atla at hón 2 hefði sét Þjóðrek ok Guðrúnu béði saman. Atli var þá allókátr. Þá kvað Guðrún:

Herch was named the female thrall of Attle; she had been his concubine. She told Attle that she had seen Thedric and Guthrun both together. Attle was then wholly displeased. Then Guthrun quoth:

- 1 "Hvat 's þér, Atli? · é, Buðla sonr,
- es þér hryggt í hug; · hví hlér þú éva? Hitt myndi óðra · jǫrlum þykkja
- 4 at við menn méltir · ok mik séir."

"What is with thee, Attle? Always, son of Bodle, art thou sad at heart; why laughest thou never? TODO."

- 2 "Tregr mik þat, Guðrún, · Gjúka dóttir,
- mér í hǫllu · Hęrkja sagði at þit Þjóðrekr · undir þaki svéfið
- 4 ok léttliga · líni verðið."

"It troubles me, Guthrun, Yivick's daughter, as in the hall Herch has said me: that thou and Thedric beneath thatched roof slept, and ye lightly warded the linen.^a"

- 3 "Dér mun'k alls þess · eiða vinna
- at inum hvíta · hęlga stęini, at ek við Þjóðmar · þat-ki átta'k,
- es vǫrðr né verr · vinna knátti,—

- 4 Nema ek halsaða · herja stilli,
- jǫfur ónęisinn, · ęinu sinni; aðrar vǫ́ru · okkrar spękjur
- es vit hormug tvau · hnigum at rúnum.

Unless I embraced the stiller of hosts [RULER = Thedmar]—the unshamed prince—a single time. Different were our dealings, when we two distressed ones [Guthrun and Thedric] reclined in private conversation.

^ai.e., they threw off their clothes and slept together.

^aHistorically, Thedmar was the father of Thedric, who took over the kingdom after his father's death (see Encyclopedia). Thedmar may here be a scribal error for Thedric, a scribal error for "Thedmar's son", or a nickname due to conflation of the father and son.

^bGuthrun says that she will prove her innocence through a trial by ordeal (that is, by lifting "the white holy stone" out of boiling water; see st. 8). She further strengthens her position by pointing out that no reliable man has sworn an oath attesting to her guilt.

The Lay of Attle (Atlakviða)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C10th (0.719)-early C11th (0.212)

Meter: Speech-meter, Firnwordslaw

A famously archaic poem.

Attle sends his messenger Kneefrith to Guther (1). He arrives at Guther's hall, where the mood is one of unease, and addresses Guther (2). Kneefrith invites him and his brother Hain to Attle's court (3), offering them treasures, weapons and land (4–5). Guther asks his brother Hain for advice, since he has not heard of Attle having gold to give away (6).

The Death of Attle (Dauði Atla)

P1 Guðrún Gjúkadóttir hefndi bróðra sinna, svá sem frégt er orðit. Hon drap ² fyrst sonu Atla, en eptir drap hon Atla ok brendi hollina ok hirðina alla; um þetta er sjá kviða ort.

Guthrun Yivicksdaughter avenged her brothers, as has become famous. She first killed the sons of Attle, and after that she killed Attle, and burned the hall and the whole hird. Regarding that this lay is wrought.

- 1 Atli sendi · ár til Gunnars
- kunnan sęgg at ríða, · Knéfrøðr vas sá heitinn; at gorðum kom hann Gjúka · ok at Gunnars hollu,
- bękkjum aringręypum · ok at bjóri svósum.

Attle sent early to Guther a well-known messenger to ride; Kneefrith that one was called. To the estates of Yivick he came, and to the hall of Guther; to the hearth-surrounding benches, and to the lovely beer.

- 2 Drukku þar dróttmegir · —en dyljendr þogðu—
- vín í valhǫllu, · vreiði sóusk þeir Húna; kallaði þá Knéfrøðr · kaldri roddu,
- seggr inn suðróni · sat hann á bekk hóm:

There the dright-lads [WARRIORS] drank—but the concealed ones shut up—wine in the walhall; they feared the wrath of the Huns. Then called Kneefrith with cold voice; the southern messenger sat on a high bench:

- 3 "Atli mik hingat sendi · ríða ørendi,
- mar inum mélgreypa, · Myrkvið inn ókunna at biðja yðr, Gunnarr, · at it á bekk kómið
- 4 með hjolmum aringreypum · at sókja heim Atla.

- 4 Skjoldu kneguð þar velja · ok skafna aska,
- hjalma gullroðna · ok Húna mengi, silfrgyllt soðulkléði, · serki valrauða,
- dafar, darraða, · drosla mélgreypa.

There ye might choose shields, and shaven ash-spears, helmets gold-reddened, and the multitude of the Huns, silver-gilt saddle-cloths, corpse-red serks, daves, spears, bit-champing steeds.

- 5 Voll lézk ykkr ok myndu gefa · víðrar Gnitaheiðar
- af geiri gjallanda · ok af gylltum stofnum, stórar meiðmar · ok staði Danpar,
- 4 hrís þat it méra · es meðr Myrkvið kalla."

He also declared himself willing to give you two the field of the wide Gnit-heath, [and] of yelling spears and of gilded staves, great treasures and the place of Danp; the renowned brushwood which men call Mirkwood.

¹ dyljendr 'concealed ones'] Finnur Jónsson (1932) reasonably interprets this as referring to Attle's spies at Guther's court.

² valhǫllu 'the walhall'] The interpretation of this compound is difficult in context. The first element val-could be (1) valr 'falcon', referring to the aristocratic hunting practice; (2) valr 'WaleG', cognate with 'Welsh' but in ON referring to the French or Romans, stressing the southern location or appearance of the hall; or (3) valr '(collective) the battle-slain', foreshadowing the inevitable death (feynessC) of the YivickingsG. In this case it is linguistically identical to WalhallL, Weden's hall, whither the battle-slain go.

[&]quot;Attle sent me hither to ride with an errand, on the bit-champing steed through uncharted Mirkwood—to ask you, Guther, that ye two [= Guther and Hain] on the bench might come, with hearth-surrounding helmets, to seek the home of Attle.

- 6 Hofði vatt þá Gunnarr · ok Hogna til sagði:
- "Hvat réőr þú okkr, seggr hinn óri, · allz vit slíkt heyrum? Gull vissa'k ekki · á Gnitaheiði,
- 4 þat's vit éttim-a · annat slíkt.

His head turned Guther then, and to Hain said: "What counselest thou us two, younger man, as such things we hear? I knew of no gold on the Gnit-heath that we did not own as much of.

- 7 Sjau eigu vit salhús · sverða full,
- hverju 'ru þeira · hjolt ór gulli; mínn veit'k mar beztan · en méki hvassastan,
- boga bękksóma · en brynjur ór gulli;

We own seven hallhouses filled with swords—on each of them is a golden hilt; I know my horse to be the best and my sword the sharpest; my bow bench-fit and my byrnies golden;

- 8 hjalm ok skjold hvítastan, · kominn ór holl Kjárs;
- 2 einn 's mínn betri · en sé allra Húna."

helmet and whitest shield, come from the hall of Caser; alone is mine better, than [those] of all of the Huns might be!"

- 9 "Hvat hyggr þú brúði bendu · þá's hón okkr baug sendi,
- varinn váðum heiðingja? · Hykk at hón vǫrnuð byði! Hár fann'k heiðingja · riðit í hring rauðum;
- 4 ylfskr es vegr okkarr · at ríða ørendi."

[Hain quoth:] "What thinkest thou the bride meant when she sent us two an armlet, wrapped with the garments of a heath-dweller [WOLF > WOLF'S HAIR]? I think that she gave us a warning! I found the hair of a heath-dweller [WOLF] tied around the red ring; wolven is our way, to ride with that errand!"

- rýnęndr né ráŏęndr, · né þeir's ríkir vóru; kvaddi þá Gunnarr · sem konungr skyldi,
- 4 mérr í mjoðranni · af móði stórum:

^aThat it is Hain speaking here is clear from the response in the following stanzas. He considers the wolf-hair to be a warning of Hunnish treachery.

¹⁰ Niðjar-gi hvottu Gunnar · né náungr annarr,

Kinsmen did not urge Guther, nor any other relation; not counselors nor advisors, nor those who were mighty. Guther then announced—as a king should, renowned in the mead-house—with great spirit:

- 11 "Rís-tu nú, Fjornir, · lát-tu á flet vaða

"Rise now, Ferner; let on the floorboards wade forth the golden bowls of warriors, along the hands of men!

The wolf will rule the inheritance of the Nivlings—the old grey guardians—if Guther is missing. Black-furred beras [will] bite with wrangling teeth—amusing the pack of bitches—if Guther comes not."

¹ Svá ... verjask] Line moved from the last st. to this one since it seems to connect semantically with the immediately following line, and also creates a regular line distribution of 4-4 instead of 5-3.

^aThe Huns ask Guther (it is clear that "ruler of the Gots" refers to him, cf. sts. 1, 3, 10) if he wishes to ransom Hain. He instead responds with the following:

^ai.e. a short-sword with a blade so sharp that it draws blood when one slides the finger across it.

- 24 Skóru þeir hjarta · Hjalla ór brjósti
- blóðugt ok á bjóð logðu · ok bóru þat fyr Gunnar.

They cut the heart of Helle out of the breast; bloody on a platter they laid it, and carried it before Guther.

- 25 þá kvað þat Gunnarr, · gumna dróttinn:
 - "Hér hęfi'k hjarta · Hjalla ins blauða, ólíkt hjarta · Hogna ins frókna,
- es mjǫk bifask · es á bjóði liggr; bifðisk hǫlfu meirr · es í brjósti lá!"

Then quoth that Guther, the lord of men: "Here have I the heart of Helle the soft—unlike the heart of Hain the bold!—which much trembles, when on the platter it lies; it trembled twice as much, when in the breast it lay."

- 26 Hló þá Hogni · es til hjarta skóru
- kvikvan kumblasmið · kløkkva hann sízt hugði; blóðugt þat á bjóð logðu · ok bóru fyr Gunnar.

Hain laughed then, when unto the heart they cut the living wound-smith [WARRIOR = Hain]; he thought least of sobbing. Bloody on a platter they laid it, and carried it before Guther.

- 27 Mérr kvað þat Gunnarr, · Geir-Niflungr:

- es lítt bifask · es á bjóði liggr; bifðisk svági mjok · þá's í brjósti lá!

This quoth renowned Guther, the Spear-Nivling: "Here have I the heart of Hain the bold—unlike the heart of Helle the soft!—which little trembles, when on the platter it lies; it trembled not as much when in the breast it lay.

- 28 Svá skalt, Atli, · augum fjarri

The Lay of Hildbrand

Dating: C8th Meter: Germanic alliterative meter

For the text of original poem I generally present the manuscript text. I have found it impossible to produce a normalization without too heavily distorting the received text, being as it is, a blend of several dialects. I have, however, added acute accents to signify long vowels, capitalized proper names, marked compounds, consistently replaced p (wynn) and uu with w, and made minor corrections where the manuscript reading is clearly in error—these are noted in the critical apparatus. The punctuation of the original, entirely consisting of interpuncts, at times representing line breaks and cæsuræ and at others sporadically placed, has not been retained.

Where they appear in cæsuræ, the words quad Hiltibrant 'Hildbrand quoth' (found in ll., 30, 49, and 58) replace the usual interpunct. I had originally planned to remove these as hypermetrical, instead indicating the speaker above the verse, but after comparison with Rein 3, wherein the words kvað Loki 'Lock quoth' appear in the first cæsura of the verse, I have come to believe that these represent an ancient oral indication, seemingly going back as far as the Migration Period (as it seems incredulous to think that the scribe of ms. would have influenced the scribe of R four centuries later in such a minor point.)

I heard it said, that two contenders alone did meet: Hildbrand and Hathbrand, under two hosts.^a Son and father ordered their armour, readied their war-cloth, girded their swords on, the heroes over the mail, when to that battle they rode.

Hathbrand spoke, Hildbrand's son: "It told me our people—the old and learned, those who earlier lived—that Hildbrand was called my father—I am called Hathbrand. Long ago he hurried east—he fled Edwaker's hate—thither with Thedrich and his many thanes. He abandoned in the land a little one to stay; a bride in the bower, a bairn ungrown, without inheritance; he rode east thither, as Thedrich was in great need of my father—that was so friendless a man! He was to Edwaker exceptionally hostile, the dearest of thanes under Thedrich. He was ever at the front of the troop, ever did the fight gladden him, known was he among keen men; I ween not that he have life."

^aThis ancient mindset was codified by the Indians as part of the kṣatra-dharma, the code of the Warrior (Kṣatriya) caste, which explicitly forbade the Warriors from taking gifts. So in a part of the Mahabharata (12.192.73), a (Kṣatriya) King refuses a gift from a priest, saying that "it is the duty prescribed for a Kṣatriya that he must fight and protect (people). Kṣatriya are said to be the givers, then, how can I take (this) from you?" (translation by Hara (1974))

I have here gathered sundry charms spells; galders and leeds, assembled from sources across the ancient Germanic world. I have generally only included those with clear Heathen elements or contexts, though a few are of Christian origin. The Old Saxon baptismal vow, while explicitly anti-pagan, has also been included due to its mention of Germanic Heathen deities.

Charms from Bryggen

These charms are found inscribed on medieval pieces of wood found at Bryggen in the city of Bergen, Norway.

A stick with four sides, dated to c. 1335. It is clearly a love-charm and—as seen by the feminine dative adjective sjalfri 'self' on side C—addressed to a woman. The language is very close to that of Shirner 36, wherein Shirner threatens to curse the ettin-woman

Gird with <code>ergi</code> 'degeneracy' and <code>óði</code> 'madness' and <code>óþoli</code> 'impatience' unless she sleep with his master, Free. A crucial difference is of course that this charm is not an Eddic narrative poem; it must have been expected to work. Both of these share a root with the curse-formula seen on the two C7th runic inscriptions from Stentoften and Björketorp (see TODO), wherein the destroyer of the respective monuments will be <code>hermalausar</code> <code>argjú</code> 'restless with degeneracy', i.e. 'incessantly randy'. As it would be absurd to think that the poet of <code>Shirner</code> should have learned this type of magic from one of the rune-stones, and then passed this onto the carver of the present inscription, we must rather be dealing with a common form of curse magic, wherein the victim is cursed with incessant randiness leading to sexual perversion.

Cultural and religious expressions (C) ape (ON api, OE apa, OS apo, OHG affo, PNWGmc. *apó) In the Old Norse the word seems to mean 'fool, buffoon', in the other old languages apparently 'monkey', though this sense should be a later development of the former; why would the early Germanic tribes have a word for an animal that they had never encountered?

aught (ON étt, OE éht 'possession, property') The Nordic (paternal) clan or family line.

begale (OHG bi-galan) To affect, bewitch something using galders^C. See also gale^C.

bigh (ON baugr, OE béag, OHG boug) Armlets used as currency during the Migration Period. — The giving of rings and armlets in exchange for loyalty (holdness^C being the word used for a warrior's loyalty towards his lord, and of a lord's grace towards his servants) was common across all of Germanic Europe, as seen in the many poetic ruler-kennings of the type "breaker of rings" (e.g. béaga brytta 'the breaker of bighs' in Beewolf II. 35, 352, 1487). An illustrative example of this is Hildbrand 33–35. This is also connected with the oath-ring, and the famous ring-swords. TODO? reference some literature on this.

bloot (ON blót, OE blót, OHG bluoz) A sacrifice or a sacrificial feast, one of the best attested Germanic pagan practices. The animals would be sacrificed by the host, cooked in large kettles and eaten communally.

bloot-kettle The large pots used for cooking the bloot-stew.

Doom (ON dómr, OE dóm) Commonly 'judgement, verdict' (whence Doomsday, 'Judgement Day'), in the Norse and Anglo-Saxon poetry often specifically referring to one's fame or good reputation (that is, how others will judge one's character and deeds), especially after death. It is clear that this verdict was of utmost importance to the ancient Germanic people. The clearest examples are High 77 (see there): I know one that never dies: the Doom o'er each man dead. and Beewolf 1384-1389, where Beewolf consols king Rothgar after Grendle's mother has slain his trusted advisor Asher (Æschere):

Ne sorga, snotor guma! · Sélre bið æghwæm, // þæt hé his fréond wrece, · þonne hé fela murne. // Úre æghwylc sceal · ende gebídan // worolde lífes; · wyrce sé þe móte // dómes ær déaþe; · þæt bið drihtguman // unlifgendum · æfter sélest.

'Sorrow not, wise man! 'Tis better for each one that he avenge his friend, than that he mourn much. Each one of us shall suffer the end of worldly life—win he who might Doom before death: that is for the warrior, unliving, afterwards the best.'

Other illustrative examples in Beewolf include 884b–887a: [...] Sigemunde gesprong // æfter déaðdæge · dóm unlýtel // syþðan wíges heard · wyrm ácwealde // hordes hyrde [...] 'For Sighmund^P sprang up after his day of death an unlittle [= great] Doom, since hard in conflict he defeated the Worm^C, the herder of the hoard.' and 953b–955a: [...] þú þé self hafast // dédum gefremed · þæt þín dóm lyfað // áwa tó aldre [...] 'Thou hast for thyself by deeds accomplished that thy Doom lives for ever and ever.'

fee (ON fé, OE féoh) Originally 'cattle', however also used in a broader sense to refer to one's mobile wealth. For this cf. particularly High TODO.

many-cunning (ON fjol-kunnigr) Literally 'much-cunning, cunning in many ways'. Skilled with sorcery.

fey (ON feigr, OE fége, OHG feigi 'cowardly') Being doomed or fated to die, with a sense of predestination and inevitability. Its earliest use is on the Rök stone: aft uamuþ stanta runar þar + n uarin faþi faþir aft faikian sunu Apt Vámóð standa rúnar þár, en Varinn fáði, faðir aft feigjan sonu 'After Woemood (Vámóðr) stand these runes^C, but Warren (Varinn) painted, the father after the fey son.' It was believed that one's TODO. See PCRN HS II:35, p. 928 ff. (TODO) feyness (ON feigŏ) The state of being fey^C.

fimble- (ON fimbul-) The ultimate, final, greatest. See Fimblethyle^P, Fimble-winter^L.

five days (ON fimm dagar) That the old Scandinavian week was five days long is well attested. According to the GolL there were six weeks in a month, and the expression five days is used as the equivalent of week in High 51 and 74, in the second of which it is contrasted with month. Related to this is the legal term fifth (ON fimmt, OSw. fæmt), a meeting or gathering set to be held at a five-day notice. See fimt in CV, Love et al. (2020) for further discussion.

galder (ON galdr, OE gealdor, OHG galdar) A magical spell or song. See the Merseburg charms (TODO?) for examples. See also gale^C.

gale (ON gala, OE galan, OHG galan) To sing galders^C.

gand (ON gandr, Latin gandus) A witch's familiar, a spirit sent out to do her bidding. See PCRN HS I:17, p. 361 and II:26, p. 656. TODO gid (ON goði, OE Gydda masc. nom. prop.) A heathen priest or master of ceremonies.

gidden (ON gyðja, OE gyden 'goddess') The feminine equivalent of gid^C.

yin- (ON ginn-) A rare augmentative prefix. TODO.

yin-holy (ON ginn-heilagr) High holy, sacrosanct. Used of the gods in the formula ginn-heilog goð.

good of meat (ON matar góðr) An old expression, appearing not just in High 39 ("I found not a generous man, or so good of meat, that a gift were not accepted;") but also several Viking Age Runic inscriptions, such as Sm 39: mildan orða · ok matar góðan 'mild of words and good of meat', U 805: bónda góðan matar 'a farmer good of meat', U 703: mandr matar góðr · auk máls risinn 'a man good of meat and proud in speechTM; compare also U 739: hann var mildr matar · auk máls risinn 'he was mild of meat and proud in speech'. — See meat-nithing^C for its opposite.

hame (ON hamr) A skin, shape. Individuals can through magic "shift hames" (ON skipta homum), and leave their human hames behind, instead entering into the shapes of wolves, bears, birds. During this process the original hame would be sleeping in a vulnerable state, as described in the Saw of the Walsings, chap. TODO: . See also feather-hame^P, town-riders^C, evening-riders^C.

harrow (ON borgr, OE bearg, PNWGmc. barugar*) A cairn constructed for ritual purposes. Hindle 10 describes one: "A harrow^C he made for me, loaded with stones; now that stone-pile is become into glass. He reddened [it] in fresh blood of oxen; Oughter^P ever trusted on the Ossens^G." See also wigh^C.

hold (ON hollr, OE hold, OS hold, OHG hold) 'Favourable, loyal, gracious', often of a ruler towards his subject (in the sense of 'gracious, benevolent') or the reverse (in the sense of 'loyal, devoted'). Mirroring these earthly relations, it is likewise often used to refer to divine grace, both of the Christian God—thus in the Ecclesiastical Laws of King Cnut ALIE I (p. 372): Dam byh witodlíce God hold þe bið his hláforde rihtlíce hold 'Indeed God is hold towards him who is rightly hold towards his lord'—but in the oldest Scandinavian material likewise of the Heathen gods. Thus Lock 4: holl regin 'hold Reins^G', and Ordrun 10 (TODO: Numbering is very uncertain): Svá hjalpi þér · hollar véttir,

Frigg ok Fręyja · ok fleiri goð

'So help thee hold wights^C; Frie^P and Frow^P, and more gods [...]'.

The word is also used in this way several medieval oath-formulæ, for instance in the Elder West-Geatish Law: Svá sé mér goð holl 'So may the gods(!) be hold towards me,' in medieval Norwegian laws (NgL II[197,397]) and Grey-Goose (TODO: cite): Guð sé mér hollr ef ek satt segi, gramr ef ek lýg 'God be hold towards me if I speak truly, wroth if I lie,' in Grey-Goose (TODO) also: Sé guð hollr þeim er heldr griðum, en gramr þeim er grið rýfr 'God be hold towards him who keeps the truce, but wroth against him who breaks the truce'. I refer to Läffler (1895) for further discussion on these formulæ.

holdness Closely connected to this is of course the abstract noun holdness (ON hylli, OE hyldu, OHG huldi) 'favour, loyalty, grace,' with the same semantics as the adjective.

Notably, this word appears three times in connection with the grace of gods in the poetry, namely in Grimner 43, where (according to my interpretation) the preparer of food at the bloot is said to earn the "holdness of Woulder^P and of all the gods;" and Grimner 53 where the disgraced king Garfrith is said to have been bereft of "my [= Weden's] support; of all the Ownharriers (see note to the v.), and of Weden's holdness". Weden's holdness (Óðins hylli; the phrase is identical in both occurences) is also mentioned in a stanza by Hallfred (edited as Hfr Lv 7 by Diana Whaley in SkP V) where the scold states that: 'The whole race of man has wrought songs to win the holdness of Weden; I recall the fully rewarded works of our kinsmen/ancestors.'

From all these citations the Germanic view on divine favour is clear: the gods are hold towards those who do good works, which in the aforementioned instances include swearing true oaths, faithfully observing truces, partaking in the bloot, following rules of hospitality and composing poetry—and gram^C 'wroth' towards those who do the opposite.

Home (ON heimr, OE hám, PNWGmc. *haimar) In the Norse often referring to a realm in the cosmology (Wallow 2: "I remember nine Homes", Webthrithner TODO: "From the runes of the Ettins^G and of all the gods I can speak truly, for I have come into each Home"). Thus Ettinham^L is the 'Home/realm of the ettins'. When used alone the term simply means 'the world (that we inhabit)'. See also nine Homes^L, Thrithham^L.

leat (ON hlaut) Sacrificial blood (that is, taken from the animal), especially when used for auguries.

leat-twig (ON blautteinn) A twig used to sprinkle the leat^C in auguries (presumably the pattern of the blood would then be inspected).

leed (ON ljóð, OE léod) A magical chant or incantation. See also galder^C, gale^C, begale^C.

manwit (ON manvit) Practical/common sense and wisdom, situational awareness.

nithe (ON niō, OE niþ, OHG nid) Originally probably 'hatred, emnity', in the Norse a sort of ritual libel that brought great dishonor.

orlay (ON orlog, OE orlæg) One's predetermined fate, destiny, purpose as decreed by the Norns^G.

rest (ON rost) The distance between two rest-stops, a geographical mile (about 1850 metres). See especially CV.

scold (ON skald) A Scandinavian poet. The name probably comes from their ability to slander with words.

- simble (ON sumbl, OE symbol) A banquet.
 - soo (ON sóa) To ritually waste, to slay (especially in a sacrificial context).
 - thill (ON þylja) To chant poetry or lists (so called thules^C) acquired by rote memorization. See thyle^C.
- Thing (ON, OE þing, OS thing, OHG ding) The legal assembly and gathering place where matters would be settled and the law recited.
- thule (ON pula) A poetic list, typically of various items of a category (e.g. gods, legendary horses) or poetic synonyms (e.g. for swords, men, Weden). Degoratively also a ditty, poorly composed poem. See thyle^C.
- thyle (ON pulr, OE pyle, PNWGmc. puli*R) A sage who through rote learning has acquired a large amount of mythological lore (cf. thule^C 'a list in poetic form; a ditty, bad poem' and thill^C 'to recite, to chant'). Thus Weden^P is the Fimblethyle^P, being the unbeaten master of lore, as can be seen in his wisdom contests (like Webthrithner). Runic inscription DR 248 (Snoldelev) suggests the thyle may have tied to a specific place, and in Beewolf it seems to have been a court position, with the poet Unferth being described (l. 1456) as the "thyle of Rothgar".
- wale (ON volr) The staff or sceptre, especially of a wallow. TODO: archeological finds, mention Sutton Hoo.
- wallow (ON volva, OE *wealwe (cf. ON svolva, OE swealwe 'swallow')) A sibyl, seeress, oracle. The word derives from the wale^C, a staff or sceptre probably used for ritual purposes.
 - wigh (ON vé, OE wéoh, wíh, PNWGmc. *wīha) A holy shrine or sanctuary. It seems that where the harrow was a pile of stones or cairn used for carrying out rituals, the wigh was an enclosed space. The earliest Norse attestation is the runic inscription Ög N288 (Oklunda), which reads: "Guther <= Gunnarr> painted these runes, and he fled, guilty. Sought this wigh, and he fled into this clearing. And he bound. [...]" The implication seems to be that the wigh was considered so sacred that Guther could not be apprehended or punished for his crime while in it. In OE the word means 'pagan idol'. It is not immediately clear which meaning is the original one, but in the present edition the Norse sense has been adopted, since the Anglo-Saxon sources are all of a Christian nature. The Beewolf name Wighstone (Wīh- or Wēohstān) in any case suggests it is the Norse meaning, since 'idol-stone' makes little sense.
 - wode (ON óðr, OE wód, PNWGmc. *wóþur) Heener^P's gift to men, though the name would suggest it be from Weden^P. The word has several related meanings: 'poetic inspiration, madness, rage'.

Persons and objects (P)

- Attle (Attila, ON Atli, OE Ætla, MHG. Etzel, PNWGmc. *Attilô) The ruler of the Huns^G (historically from 434–453). Husband of Guthrun^P, and with her father of Earp and Oatle^P. and murderer of I HHb 54, SiL 11, I Gr 23, ShS 28, 29, 33, 37, 54, 56, 57, II Gr 26, 38, 45, III Gr 1, 9, BnOr 0, OdW A, 2, 22, 23, 25, 26, 30, 31, AtD 0, AtL 1, 3, 15, 17, 18, 27, 31, 32, 34, 36, 37, 38, 41, 43, B, AtS 2, 4, 21, 22, 44, 52, 60, 64, 71, 73, 77, 80, 86, 87, 97, 98, 108, 113, 117, FGr 0, GrB 12, Ham 6.
- Balder (ON Baldr, OE Bældæg (not directly cognate), OHG Balter, PWGmc. *BaldrarN The beautiful son of Weden^P, slayed by his brother Hath^P, avenged by his other brother Wonnel^P.
- Earp and Oatle (ON Erpr ok Eitill) The sons of Attle^P and Guthrun^P.
 - Earth (ON jǫrŏ, OE eorþe, OHG erda, PNWGmc. erþu*, PGmc. erþó*) The personified Earth. Through Weden^P the mother of Thunder^P.
 - feather-hame (ON fjaŏr-hamr, OE feŏer-hama, OS feŏar-, feŏer-hamo) An object by which the wearer may fly like a bird. One is owned by Frow and used by Lock to fly between the homes. In the Heliand feather-hames are donned by angels who fly from heaven to earth. See also hame^C.
 - Free (ON Freyr, OE fréa 'lord', PNWGmc. Frawjar*) Son of Nearth^P, brother of Frow^P. See also Ing^P.
 - Frie (ON Frigg, OE Frige*, OHG Frija, PNWGmc. Frijju*) Wife of Weden^P, mother of Balder^P. Related to Full^P, who is either her sister (Second Merseburg Charm, though this may be metaphorical, as in Hindle 1) or her maid-servant (the Norse sources).
 - Frow (ON Freyja) Cat-goddess, daughter of Nearth^P, sister of Free^P, wife of Wode^P. Promised to the Ettin. Possibly = Easter?
 - Full (ON Fulla, OHG Folla) Maid-servant (or sister?) of Frie^P; see there.
 - Guthrun (ON Guðrún) Daughter of king Yivick^P, sister of Guther^P and Hain^P. The wife of Attle^P.
 - Hain [Hain 1] (ON Hogni, OE Haguna, Hagena, OHG Hagano, Ger. Hagen, PNWGmc. *Haguno) A Nifling^G and Yivicking^G, son of king Yivick^P, brother of Guther^P and Guthrun^P. In AtL he defeats seven warriors before being captured by Attle^P, who has his heart cut out at the request of Guther.
 - Hain 2 [2] A petty king of East Geatland^L, contemporary with Granmer^P, the king of Southmanland^L and Ingeld Illred, the Ingling^G king of Upland^L.
 - Hath (ON $H \rho \delta r$) The blind son of Weden^P, the slayer of his brother Balder^P.

- Heener (ON Hónir, PNWGmc. *Hónija*r 'the little swan(?)') An obscure god. Rydberg (1886)[552] has convincingly argued that he is connected with the stork, connecting his name with the Greek κύκνος 'swan' and Sanskrit śakuna 'bird of omen', and noting that his epithets langi fótr 'long foot' and aurkonungr 'mud-king' (both found in Scold 22) accurately describe the stork. He gives wode^C TODO.
- Hindle (ON Hyndla) A witch awoken by Frow^P in Hindle.
- Homedall (ON Heimdallr, OE *Hámdall) Ward of the gods, whitest of the Ease^G.
 - Hymer (ON Hymir) Tew^P's father according to Hymer.
 - Ing (ON Yngvi, OE Ing) Probably an older name of Free^P. The legendary ancestor of the Inglings^G. Cf. the Old English Rune Poem.
 - Lother (ON Lóðurr, OS Logaþore, PNWGmc. *Logaþorjan 'Flame-darer(?)') Gives three gifts to man. The Old-Saxon attestation is a bit uncertain.
 - Millner (ON Mjǫllnir, OE *Meldne, PNWGmc. *Meldunjar) Powerful hammer owned by Thunder.
 - Nearth (ON Njorðr) The father of Free^P and Frow^P by Shede^P.
 - Nithad (ON Niðuðr, OE *Hámdall) The Swedish king that imprisons Wayland^P in Wayland. Father of Beadhild^P.
 - Oughter (ON Óttarr, OE Óhthere, PNWGmc. *Óhtaharjan) Legendary Swedish king.
 - Rotholf (ON Hrólfr kraki, OE Hrópulf, PNWGmc. Hrópiwulfan*) A king of the Shieldings^G (see family tree). As foreshadowed in Beewolf 1017–9, 1180–90, he betrays the sons of Rothgar^P, his cousins Rethrich and Rothmund^P, in order to take the throne for himself. In the later Icelandic tradition this has been forgotten, and he is consistently portrayed as a heroic king.
 - Rothgar (ON Hróarr, OE Hróþgár, PNWGmc. Hróþigai*RaR) A king of the Shieldings^G (see family tree), one of the main characters in Beewolf.
 - Shield (ON Skjoldr, OE Scyld) Legendary Danish king, founder of the Shieldings^G.
- Sighmund (ON Sigmundr, OE Sigemund, MHG. Siegmund) A hero of the Walsings^G, in Beewolf attested as the slayer of the dragon along with his nephew Sinfittle^P. In the Norse tradition however, it is his half-brother Siward^P that slays the dragon instead.
- Sithguth (OHG Sinthgunt, PNWGmc. Sinhagunhiz*) Only known from Mers II as the sister of Sun^C.
 - Sun (ON Sól, OHG Sunna) The personified sun (see also Moon^P). In Mers II, described as the sister of Sithguth^C.
 - Thrim (ON Prymr) The ettin responsible for stealing Thunder's hammer in Thrim.

- Thunder (ON pórr, OE punor, OHG Donar, PNWGmc. ponara*_R) Son of Weden^P and Earth^P.
 - Tew (ON Týr, OE Tíw) Son of Hymer^P. One-handed god. TODO.
- Webthrithner (ON Vafþrúðnir) The ettin defeated by Weden in the wisdom contest in Webthrithner.
 - Weden (rhymes with leaden; ON Óðinn, OE Wóden, Wéden, OHG Wuotan, PNWGmc. *Wódanar) Chief of the Ease^G, his name is clearly related to wode^C, referring to his role as the patron of scolds^C and bearserks^C. Husband of Frie^P, and by her father of Balder^P. Also father of Thunder^P by Earth^P. Brother of Heener^P and Lother^P.
 - Wider (ON Viðarr, OE Widhere*) A son of Weden^P, who avenges him at the Rakes of the Reins^L.
 - Wode (ON OT, OE W0d) Husband of Frow P. His name looks to be the same word as wode C.
 - Wonnel (ON Váli, OE *Wonela, PNWGmc. *Wanilô 'the little Wane^G?') The son of Weden^P, who one-night old avenged his brother Balder^P through slaying Hath^P, his half-brother.
 - Woulder (ON Ullr, *Wuldor, PNWGmc. *Wulþuz) A rather obscure god. He is mentioned in connection with oath-rings (TODO) and the setting of ritual fires (Grimner TODO). These obscure references are likely related to the interesting finds at Lilla Ullevi ('the small wigh^C of Woulder') in Upland, Sweden, consisting of several dozen fire striker-shaped iron amulet rings dating to 660–780 (for a detailed description see (af Edholm, 2009)).
 - Yimer (ON Ymir, OE Yime*) The first ettin, probably equivalent to Earyelmer^P.
 - Yivick (ON Gjúki, OE Gifica, OHG Gibicho, MHG. Gibeche) King of the Burgends^G (historically from late 300s–407) of the Nifling dynasty, ancestor of the Yivickings^G. Father of Guthrun^P, Guther^P and Hain^P.

Groups and tribes (G)

- TODO: Map of rough tribal areas. Geneaologies.
- Danes (ON danir, OE dene, PNWGmc. *danír.) A tribe in eastern modern-day Denmark and southern Sweden. They probably originated in Scania in southern Sweden, before moving westwards into the Danish isles and eventually Jutland, driving out the Earls^G and Jutes^G. Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO
- Dwarfs (ON dvergar, OE dweorgas, OHG twerca, PNWGmc. *dwergón) Earthly (chthonic) supernatural beings, often referred to as living in rocks and mountains. Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO

- Ease (rhyming with geese; ON ésir, OE ése, PNWGmc. *ansiwir; sg. os, ON áss, OE ós, PNWGmc. *ansur) A group of Gods, though the word can also refer to all the Gods. See Gods^G, Tews^G, Wanes^G, Reins^G. Noted members: Weden^P, Thunder^P, Frie^P, Hath^P and Balder^P Attestations: TODO
- Elves (ON alfar, OE ielfe, PNWGmc. *alβίκ) Earthly (chthonic) supernatural beings. Possibly ancestral spirits? Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO
- Ettins (ON jotnar, OE eotenas, PNWGmc. etunór*) The fundamental enemies of the Gods, the agents of chaos and disorder. See Rises^G, Thurses^G. Noted members: Hymer^P, Thrim^P, Webthrithner^P, Yimer^P Attestations: TODO
- Geats (ON gautar, OE géatas, PNWGmc. *gautón from *geut- 'to pour', perhaps 'the libators') A tribe in what is today southern-central Sweden. See also Geatland^L, Swedes^G. Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO
- yin-Reins (ON ginn-regin) yin-^C + Reins^G. The sacrosanct, highest divine powers.
 - Gods (ON goð, OE godu, OHG gota, PNWGmc. *godu) TODO. Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO
 - Huns (ON búnir, OE Húne, OHG Húni, Hunni, PNWGmc. *búnín) An invading Asiatic tribe in the Migration Period. In the legendary material their cultural and ethnic foreignness is not seen. Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO
- Inglings (ON ynglingar, PNWGmc. ingwalingón* 'the descendants of Ing^P') Difference between this term and Shelvings^G is a bit unclear. They seem to be used synonymously in the Norse sources, whereas the English only use the later.
 - Nears (ON níarar -njárar) A Swedish tribe, only mentioned in Wayland, where it is ruled by king Nithad^P. The name and location may allow us to connect them with the Swedish province of Närke, cf. Old Swedish: Nærikjar 'inhabitants of Närke', Nærisker 'belonging to Närke; Nearish', in which case the Old Swedish stem nær-(with unclear vowel length, though it is probably long) would be a reduced form of níar-, njár-.
 - Norns (ON nornir) A group of supernatural women responsible for declaring the fates of
- Ossens (ON ϕ synjur) The women of the Ease^G, see there.
- Ownharriers (ON einherjar, OE *ánhergas) Earthly (chthonic) supernatural beings, often referred to as living in rocks and mountains. Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO
 - Reins (ON rogn, regin) The divine powers. Based on Webthrithner (TODO) the term may be more closely associated with the Wanes^G than the Ease^G.
 - Saxons (ON saxar, OE Seaxan, Seaxe) TODO. Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO

- Shieldings (ON skjǫldungar, OE Scyldingas, PNWGmc. *skeldungón) The descendants of Shield^P; the legendary Danish^G royal dynasty. With Harward^P's death after his slaying of Rotholf^P their rule ended. TODO Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO
- Shelvings (ON skilfingar, OE scilfingas, PNWGmc. *skilβingón) The descendants of Shelf^P; the legendary Swedish^G royal dynasty. The exact difference between the terms Shelvings and Inglings^G is unclear, but the first may have referred to the old royal family in Sweden, while the latter to the Norwegian branch which claimed descent from the former. TODO Noted members: TODO Attestations: Hindle 15, 20
 - Swedes (ON svíar, OE swéon, PNWGmc. *swihanír) The tribe around the Mälar valley in eastern Sweden. Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO
- Thurses (sg. Thurse; ON purs, OE pyrs, OS thuris, OHG duris, PNWGmc. purisaR*) Possibly a poetic synonym for Ettins^G. See also Rime-Thurses^G. Noted members: TODO Attestations: Wal 8, Shr 31, 35, 36, Hyme 17, Thr 5, 10, 21, 24, 29, 30, Alw 2, I HHb 40, HHw 27.
 - Tews (ON tívar, PNWGmc. *tíwór) A poetic synonym for Gods^G. Attestations: TODO
- Wanes (ON vanir, OE wan-?) A subgroup or tribe of the gods, associated with fertility, harvests and fishing. Noted members: Nearth^P, Ing^P, Frow^P Attestations: TODO
- Yivickings (ON gjúkungar) The descendants of Yivick^P, including Guther^P, Guthrun^P and Hain^P. Attestations: TODO

Place names, locations and events (L)

- Eastern Way (ON Austrvegr) The eastern lands of the Ettins^G (probably identical in meaning to Ettinham^L), whither Thunder^P goes to fight.
 - Ettinham (ON Jotunheimr, Jotnaheimr) The 'Ettin^G-Home^C' or 'home of the Ettins'; the eastern realm of chaotic and inhospitable beings. See also Eastern Way^L, Outyards^L.
- Fimble-winter (ON fimbulvetr) The great winter, which kills all humans apart from Life and Lifethrasher^P.
 - Hell (ON bęl, PNWGmc. halju*, Got. halja) The underworld, personfied as and formally identical with Hell^P. After Christianity the word came to refer to the Christian hell (= Gehenna), as is the case in all attested languages apart from the Old Norse. See also Nivelhell^L.
 - Middenyard (ON Mið-garðr, OE Middangeard, OS Middilgard, OHG Mittilgart, Got. midjungards) The 'middle enclosure'; the realm of men. See also Osyard^L, Outyards^L.
 - Nivelhell (ON niflhęl) 'Mist-Hell', from the poetic evidence it seems like it may originally have been a synonym for Hell^L. In poetry it is attested in Webthrithner TODO: níu kom'k heima |hld fyr Niflhel neðan, hinig deyja ór helju halir. 'into nine homes I came, beneath Nivelhell; thither die men out of Hell', the second by Dreams 2: reið niðr þaðan |hld niflheljar til; mótti hvelpi, |hld þeim's ór helju kom. '[Weden] rode down thence to Nivel-hell; met the whelp that out of Hell came.' Possibly the distinction was held by the first poet but not the second.

- Osyard (ON $\acute{A}sgar \acute{o}r$) The 'enclosure of the Ease G'; the heavenly realm. See also Middenyard L. Outyards L.
- Outyards (ON Útgarŏar) Not eddic. The 'outer enclosures', described in Yilfer. See also Ettinham^L, Middenyard^L, Osyard^L.
- Rakes of the Reins (ON ragna rok) The 'fates of the Reins^G', euphemism for the destruction of the world.
- Rakes of the Tews (ON tiva rok) The Rakes of the Reins^L.
 - Up-heaven (ON Upphiminn, OE Upheofon, OS Upphimil, OHG úfhimil) Highest heaven. See also Earth and Up-heaven^F.
 - Walhall (ON Valholl, OE Walheall) The hall of the slain, held by Weden^P and inhabited by the Ownharriers^G.
