The presentation of poetry

- 1. Lines are broken at each long-line rather than each half-line. This follows traditional practice for the publication of West Germanic poetry, while departing from that of Old Norse poetry.
- 2. Cæsuræ are represented with the interpunct (·).
- 3. Alliterating sounds are marked with red colour.

About the present corpus

The scope of the present corpus is large, containing most alliterative poetry extant in Old Germanic languages. It may be divided into the following categories:

- 1. Mythic poetry, i.e., that which directly treats the Germanic mythology; for historical reasons, the poetry in this category is exclusively written in Old Norse. See also Galders, below.
- 2. Heroic poetry of the Codex Regius. Since the heroic portion of the Codex Regius forms a coherent text, it is edited in full in the format of the manuscript.
- 3. Other Heroic poetry, i.e., heroic poetry from sources other than the Codex Regius. This category includes heroic poetry in Old English and Old High German.
- 4. Galders, i.e., alliterative spells and charms, both from runic inscriptions and from manuscripts.
- 5. Christian poetry. This category includes a few explicitly Christian poems, where the new religion is at the core of the work (thus Christianised heroic poems like Beow and Hild are not included here). This poetry has been included for its value in the study of poetic expression, and because it may still provide valuable cultural evidence, for instance in the form of glosses.
- 6. Runic poetry, apart from that already edited under Galders above.

Exclusions

The corpora formed by the (non-mythological) Norse Scoldic corpus and the Norse poetry found in old legendary saws (the forn-aldar-sogur) are explicitly excluded. They have been excellently edited in the SkP series, such that I, a single editor, could scarcely produce something as thorough. The latter is problematic in another way. Being entirely embedded in saws, the underlying poetry is often impossible to take out of its prose context, and in some cases one may ask whether it ever had a life of its own, or whether it were simply composed on occasion by the author. For these reasons I think it would be more conscientious to simply edit the whole saws, rather than artificially extract the poetry found scattered therein.

Manuscripts

Norse poetry

The so-called Eddic poetry is foremost found in two medieval Icelandic manuscripts.

The first and most important is GKS 2365 4to, here R. It dates to the 1270s and has 45 surviving leaves, containing TODO poems. Of these 10 are mythological; the rest heroic, dealing with legends mostly of the Migration Period. Notably, following fol. 32, there is a gap of missing pages in the heroic section, specifically cutting off Sdr. It is unclear how many leaves and poems are missing. R is not just a compilation of poems, it shows editorial input as well. Several of the mythological poems are separated by short prose sections, which tie them together into a loose frame narrative, though it is clear from their style and composition that they are originally separate works. When it comes to the heroic poems long prose sections occur both within and between them, creating a saw<sup>C</sup>-like prosimetrical form, where the prose in many cases holds up the poetry, rather than the reverse. The heroic half of R clearly forms the basis for the later WalsS. For further literature see TODO.

The second ms. is AM 748 I a 4to, here A. It dates to the 1300s and is but a fragment, consisting of just 6 leaves. It contains only mythological poems, and in a different order from R; unlike it there is no trace of a frame narrative. On the first two leaves are contained the final stanzas of Hbl (1r–v), the complete Bdr (1v–2r), and the first verses of Shir, after which a single leaf has been lost. The next four leaves follow eachother and contain the second half of Webth, the complete Grmn and Hym, and the beginning of the prose introduction to Wayl. A is the only medieval manuscript attesting Bdr, and its variants of the poems attested in R are clearly not copied from it, but rather derive from a common ancestor. This makes it very valuable for textual criticism. For further literature see TODO.

Several Eddic poems are quoted in Yilv, namely (TODO): Wsp, Webth, Grmn. The text also cites a few fragmentary Eddic stanzas, which are edited under "Eddic fragments from Snorre's Edda". For Yilv I give variants from the following four main mss.:

- 1. The Codex Regius of the Prose Edda S (GKS 2367 4to; 1300-1350)
- 2. The Codex Trajectinus T (Traj 1374; a c. 1595 paper copy of a ms. closely related to S.)
- 3. The Codex Wormianus W (AM 242 fol.; 1340-70)
- 4. The Codex Upsaliensis U (DG 11; 1300-25)

For discussion on their internal stemmatics and origins I refer to Haukur Porgeirsson (2017). When all employed witness mss. of Yilv agree on a reading, I use in the critical apparatus the siglum G, which is thus equivalent to STWU.

A few other Eddic-style poems are also included. One of them, Righ, partially survives in W, though it is sadly incomplete (see its Introduction). Grot is quoted in full in Scold. Other Eddic poems survive only in younger Icelandic paper mss., namely TODO. While I have not consulted such paper mss. for poems attested in medieval mss., I have had to rely on them for these poems. Of these poems it must be said, that their late attestation not necessarily proves them to be late compositions. This is most clearly shown by Bdr, which is first attested in the fragmentary A, and in longer form in later paper mss. It thus cannot be excluded that some of these poems would have existed in other lost medieval mss., perhaps even on the now-lost pages of R or A.

Old English poetry

The edited Old English poetry primarily derives from a few manuscripts. Particularly important are the Exeter Book and Lacning.

About the original language edition

My goal with the edition of the texts has been to hold close to the original mss., without excessive emendation. Still, emendation is inevitable, and where it has done it is (apart from any oversight on my part) always marked.

Normalization

In the present edition are found texts in four languages, namely Old Norse, Old English, Old Saxon, and Old High German. All texts have been normalized according to my own orthography, which is based on two principles:

- 1. Faithfulness to the language at the time when the texts were written, and the distinctions found therein, without neglecting etymology.
- 2. Striving for a uniform orthography across the various treated idioms, where the same etymological sound is generally written with the same character.

Both of these choices entail disregarding local manuscript traditions and philological tradition, something I see as justified. My goal is to render the texts themselves in a manner that gives as much information to the reader as possible—not to present a facsimile edition for students of paleography. Anyway, such important traits of the original manuscript tradition as the long  $\int$ , arbitrary punctuation, arbitrary spelling, and lack of line breaks, are seldom reproduced in modern editions of Old Germanic poetry.

Normalization of Old Norse

The orthography is inspired by Finnur Jónsson (1932) in that it strives for a more archaic form than that of the surviving mss., one that instead represents the poetry as it may (in many cases, must) originally have looked. For this reason, it often has more in common with the proposed orthography of the First Grammatical Treatise than with the standard Old Icelandic orthography seen in most editions. The following list describes the differences from the standard Old Icelandic orthography:

- 1. I distinguish short e (from etymological short e) and short  $\varrho$  (from etymological short a+i-umlaut).
- 2. I distinguish long  $\acute{a}$  and  $\acute{o}$ , as done by the First Grammatical Treatise.
- 3. I use  $\delta$  and  $\xi'$  rather than the traditional  $\alpha$  and  $\alpha$ , to represent the vowels descended from Proto-Norse  $\bar{o}$  and  $\bar{a}$  after i-umlaut (cf. the short  $\delta$ ,  $\xi$  <  $\delta$ , a + i-umlaut).
- 4. I distinguish long nasal à, ė, ï, ò, ū from long oral á, é, í, ó, ú, as done in the First Grammatical Treatise.
- 5. I restore the old s—which in modern Scandinavian and even in most Old Norse manuscripts has become r, but which is found consistently in old manuscripts such as AM 237 a fol (c. 1150), and fossilized in forms like þaz (i.e. þat's) in R—in the words es 'which, that, where, when', and in inflections of vesa (later vera) such as es 'is' (3rd sg. pres. ind.) and vas (3rd sg. pret. ind.). The following forms retain the r, as it is there the result of Verner's law, and not of this (much younger) sound change: the pl. pres. ind. (erum etc.), the pl. pret. ind. (vǫ́rum etc.), and the pl. pret. subj. (vǫ́rim etc.)

- 6. When metrically benefactory, I contract ek 'I', eru 'are', and es 'which; is' to 'k, 'ru and 's, respectively.
- 7. I use Finnur Jónsson (1932)'s way of distinguishing between the relative particle es and the verb es: the first is appended to the previous word with only an apostrophe (e.g. hann's 'he who'), while the second is separated by a space (e.g. hann's 'he is').

Normalization of Old Swedish and Danish

I employ the same conventions as those described for Old Norse above, including the marking of u-mutated  $a > \varrho$  (that this was indeed found in the Eastern Nordic dialects is most clearly seen by the third-person personal pronoun, which shows u-mutation in such forms as Swedish honom 'him'  $< h\acute{\varrho}num$ , hon 'she'  $< h\acute{\varrho}n$ ). Where diphthongs have been contracted into monophthongs, these are marked with a circumflex accent, giving  $\hat{\varrho} < au$ ,  $\varrho y$  and  $\hat{e} < \varrho i$ . Where unstressed vowels have been reduced into an e-like sound, this is written with  $\varrho$ .

Normalization of Old English

I write fronted or brightened etymological a and  $\acute{a}$  with  $\emph{e}$  and  $\acute{e}$ , for instance in  $\emph{deg}$  'day' and  $\emph{réd}$  'advice, counsel'. These are contrasted with  $\emph{e}$  and  $\emph{e}$ , which represent i-mutated  $\emph{a}$  and  $\acute{a}$ .

An assimilated n is marked with an overpoint, as in rule 4 of the Old Norse orthography described above.

Normalization of Old Saxon

Normalization of Old High German

About the English translation

Point about literal translation for use by scholars of comparative mythology The "guiding star" of this translation effort has been literality and consistency. All previous translations (to my knowledge) have such issues as: rendering identically repeated phrases differently at various places; covering up or obscuring technical and cultural terminology; simplifying kennings and other expressions—and this often without notes, to a point where the original meaning is, at times, unrecognizable. While I wholly encourage all readers of sufficient interest to study Old Norse (and other ancient Germanic languages!), perhaps even using the present edition as a tool, I also realize that this is a demanding ask which not all interested students and scholars of comparative mythology, anthropology, literature, religion and other fields will be able to fulfill. I therefore want these groups to be able to have a text that is as close to the original as possible, at the very least when it regards sense and expression.

Anglish proper nouns

One of the most idiosyncratic parts of the present edition will be its handling of proper nouns. I have opted to render all cultural and religious terms, names of places, heroes, gods, and other entities by their English cognates (thus Thunder for Old Norse Pórr) and where such do not exist, their philologically expected English (Anglish) forms (e.g. wallow for Old Norse vǫlva). One reason for this is ideological. I believe that these myths and poems are a common Germanic or Northern European heritage, and should be treated as such. The English once knew gods such as Weden and Thunder, and called them by names naturally evolved in their language. So too did the Germans and Scandinavians, of course, and I would hope that any translators into those languages would follow this spirit and render the names in their natural forms there as well. Another is philological. Forms like Odin and Thor are, while now commonly accepted, debased. They do not even represent the Old Norse pronunciation as accurate as would be possible (for instance, Odin would be better anglicized as Othin; the dental fricative still survives in English!), and many are difficult for English speakers to pronounce. I shudder when hearing a word like ésir pronounced /ar's::1/

The Spae of the Wallow (Voluspó)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C10th (0.865)-early C11th (0.121)

Meter: Firnwordslaw

The Spae of the Wallow is the most comprehensive mythological text surviving from Heathen times.

The poem is attested in full in two independent recensions. The first is R, where it is the first poem, found on folios 1r–3r. The second is H, where it is found at 20r–21r in the middle of a large collection of saws and Catholics works. Many verses are also cited in Yilv, large parts of which are directly based on the poem. Other verses are not attested directly, but are instead paraphrased. The paraphrases may still have critical value (so e.g. st. 19, where sal in the parapharse corroborates H). For its constituent manuscripts see the General Introduction.

As seen from the title, the poem is a spae<sup>C</sup> ( $sp\acute{\varrho}$  'prophecy') in the form of a monologue spoken by a wallow<sup>C</sup> ( $v\varrho lva$  'seeress, sibyl, prophetess'), summoned by Weden in order to relate mythological knowledge. The motif of Weden journeying to ask beings (whether ettins or wallows) is also seen in other sources. Closest is Bdr, wherein Weden summons a wallow out of her grave in Hell<sup>L</sup> in order to understand why the god Balder<sup>P</sup> is having ominous nightmares. There is also Webth, wherein Weden challenges the wise ettin Webthrithner<sup>P</sup> to a wisdom contest and defeats him. These journeys are also alluded to in Hbl 43–46.

In its being a mythic catalogue it also resembles the latter part of High, Grmn, Sdr and Alw, though it differs from them in a key way: it gives a (mostly?) complete chronological overview of the whole mythic timeline, from the creation to the end and rebirth of the world. That is not to say that the events are clearly described; they are related in a highly allusive fashion—certainly presupposing that the audience already be familiar with them. There may also be gaps and later inserts that make the poem more difficult.

The poem begins with a bid for silence (1), and the wallow recalling her earliest memories (2). She then recounts the ordering of the world by the gods (3–6) and the golden age of peace and plenty (7–8), which is, however, interrupted by the intrusion of three unidentified ettin-maidens (8, and see note there). After this follow two verses about the shaping of the dwarfs (9–10), and then several originally separate dwarf-tallies (11–15), which are without doubt later inserts. Returning to the main narrative thread is described the creation and endowment of the first man and woman (16–17), Ugdrassle's Ash (18), and the three norns<sup>G</sup> living under it (19).

This is where the two full recensions of the poem diverge. Because of its older age and larger count of verses I have here followed the order of  $\mathbf{R}$ : the wallow recalls how a woman named Goldwey was sacrificed and reborn three times (20), and how she, under the name Heath, practiced sorcery and witchcraft (21). She then recalls the first war in the world, between the Eese and Wanes (22–23), and alludes to the slaying of the smith, who according to Yilv 42 was promised Frow and the sun and moon in exchange for building the wall of Osyard (24–25). This is followed by a cryptic verse describing Homedall's hidden silence or hearing (26).

In H the structure is quite different. After the description of the norns (19), the Eese go to decide what action to take regarding the promising of Frow to the ettin (my 24-25), and Homedall's hearing is described (26). Then follows the two verses about the old hag in Ironwood who raises the wolves that will swallow the sun and moon (40-41). After this come verses 20-23 in the same order as R (see above).

To illustrate the differences between mss., and which verses are attested in which, I have prepared the following table showing the order of stanzas by manuscript, compared to the present edition. As several stanzas in G are quoted on their own, with little relation to the order of the original poem, they are simply marked with plus signs. When stanzas are quoted in sequence, they are preceded by an alphabetically incrementing letter denoting which sequence they belong to. When a stanza found in a ms. differs majorly from the pres. ed. (e.g. st. 10 where G omits the first two half-lines), it is marked with a star. The stanzas beginning with paginguregin oll 'Then went the Reins all' are represented by the half-line immediately following.

2 meiri ok minni 'greater and lesser'] It is unclear what is being modified by these adjectives. It may either be 'greater and lesser holy kindreds', in which case it may be equivalent to the phrase Eese and Elves<sup>F</sup> (both earthly and heavenly supernatural beings; see Encyclopedia for occurrences.) or 'the greater and lesser sons of Homedall [MEN]', in which case it refers to all social classes. It seems rather out of character for such a high ranking person in Norse society as the poet must have been to invoke an ancestral relationship between human social classes, considering how biologically such distinctions were otherwise regarded (cf. my introduction to the Rigb), but on the other hand this may be part of the likely liminal nature of the performance. In any case, the wallow is clearly asking all intelligent beings that may be present for silence, and the expression is a merism of the type 'gods and men'; see West (2007)[99–100].

<sup>1</sup> Burs synir 'the sons of Byre'] In Yilv 6 identified as Weden, Will and Wigh. They "lifted" the earth (apparently both land and water, as in st. 3 there is no sea) out of the primordial chasm.

<sup>4</sup> grønum lauki 'green leek'] The leek had great cultural significance in the North. A fine example is Guth II 2, where Siward's superiority to the Yivickings is compared to a stag among wild beasts, gold among silver and a green leek in grass. The leek was also valued for its magical use, as seen already on C5th–6th bracteates where it appears as a charm word in the form <code>ffhff laukar</code>, in one inscription paired with <code>fiff lina</code> 'linen'. Later attestations of magic use include Sdr TODO, where the leek is to be used along with runes to prevent mead from being poisoned, and the WalsTb, where the eponymous worshipped horse-penis is lini góddr · en laukum studdr 'endowed with linen and supported by leeks'. The leek has a particular association with women; women-kennings frequently have the leek as a determinant (TODO: Meissner reference?), and Anon Sveinfl 1 (SkP I TODO.) sarcastically states that a battle was not sem manni · mér lauk eða ol béri 'as if a maiden brought a man leek or ale'.

<sup>2</sup> of himin-joǒur 'over heaven's rim'] Composite reading; of himin tiodyrt 'over the heaven-horse-deer(?)' R is both nonsensical and unmetrical and must be rejected; of tioður 'over the rim' H is unmetrical, lacking alliteration and being too short.

<sup>1–2</sup>  $\rlap{\ pa}$  ... géttusk 'Then ... of this.'] A formulaic expression for the convening of the Thing  $^{\rm C}$  of the Gods (for which see Encyclopedia: All Gods  $^{\rm G}$ ), identically repeated below in sts. 9/1–2, 22/1–2, and 24/1–2. Cf. also the three lines shared between Bdr 1/1–3 and Tbrim 14/1–3, which follow the structure of the present stanza(s) very closely: Senn véru ésir  $\cdot$  allir á pingi // ok ésynjur  $\cdot$  allar á máli, // ok umb þat reðu  $\cdot$  ríkir tívar: 'Soon were the Eese all at the Thing  $^{\rm C}$ , // and the Ossens all at speech, // and of this counseled the mighty Tews  $^{\rm G}$ : In all five occurrences other than the present stanza (three from Wsp, the present poem, one from Bdr, one from Tbrim), the demonstrative pronoun pat 'this' clearly refers to the matter at hand, expressed with the verb in the subjunctive case (e.g. in Tbrim 14/3–4: ok umb þat reðu  $\cdot$  ríkir tívar: // bve þeir Hlórriða  $\cdot$  bamar of sótti? 'and of this counseled the mighty Tews  $^{\rm G}$ : How they Loride's (= Thunder's) hammer would find?'). Following this pattern we would surely expect to find two lines after umb bat géttusk 'took counsel of this' and before  $n\acute{e}tt$  'night' in the present stanza, and it seems most likely to presume that they have simply been lost in transmission.

<sup>2</sup> þeir's ... hó-timbruðu 'they who ... timbered'] Two formulæ. horgr ok hof 'harrow and hove' is a merism referring to ritual structures and is also found (in reverse order) in Webth 38 and HHarw TODO, as well as in Norwegian Christian laws that mandate 'the burning of hoves and the breaking of harrows' (brenna hof ok brjóta horga). hó-timbra 'high-timber, timber high' is a rare poetic compound, and only occurs once elsewhere in the entire corpus, namely in Grmn 16 where it describes a harrow ruled by Nearth. — It is rather interesting that the Gods themselves build ritual structures.

<sup>4</sup> àm-átkar 'unnatural'] This word (nom. sg. ám-áttigr) has a clear supernatural connotation, and only occurs in four other places in R: Grmn 11, Shir 10, HHarw 17 and HHarw 14. In the first three it modifies jotunn 'ettin', while in the fourth it describes a man with clearly supernatural attributes.

&lt;sup>7</sup>These three maidens are never mentioned again (unless they are taken to be the norms in st. 19, but they would then be introduced twice). It's possible that an additional verse would have come after this one, giving further information about them, but if it did, it was already lost in the version employed by the author of Yilv who transparently paraphrases (ch. 14):

9 Þá gingu regin oll • á rok-stóla,

4 or brimi ... leggjum 'out of the bloody ... legs'] I think that the poem simply telling of "the bloody surf" and "the blue-black legs" fits better with its general allusive style, but the resulting composite reading may be somewhat controversial.

According to Yilv 14 the dwarfs first originated as maggots in the corpse of Yimer, whose bones are described in Grmn TODO and Webth TODO as being used to make rocks. Dwarfs dwell in the rocks and earth; cf. for instance IngT 2, where the Swedish king Swayther (Sveigŏir disappears into a rock in pursuit of a dwarf. More difficult to explain is the creation of dwarfs out of Yimer's blood (which according to Grmn TODO and Webth TODO is the sea), since dwarfs are never said to dwell in water. — If one chooses the reading Bláinn 'Blown' (named in the thules<sup>C</sup> as a dwarf) instead of blóum 'blue-black', then following Gurevich (Skp 2017, p. 693) one may see a kenning "the legs of Blown \dwarf\ [STONE]". Blown has otherwise been read as a poetic name for Yimer, but that is never attested elsewhere.

<sup>3–4</sup> þeir ... sagði 'They ... said.'] There are two conflicting interpretations of the creation of the dwarfs. Either they arose on their own; this is supported by the prose of Yilv (see note to previous st.) and by the form of the stanza quoted there (but it may have been changed to correspond to the author's vision). On the other hand, both R and H have the dwarfs Moodsowner and Dorn shaping "man-likenesses" out of soil. The present edition follows the second version.

Sts. 11–15 contain two originally separate lists of dwarfs. That they are separate is seen by the repetition of names (Oakenshield, Great-grandfather), and their having their own conclusions.

Sts. 11–13, having no repeated names, seem to belong together. If they do, st. 12, which contains the formulaic conclusion to the list, should probably switch places with 13.

Sts. 14–15 form the second group, having an introduction and a conclusion which both mention the dwarf Loffer.

<sup>10</sup> Two archaic formulæ. The first literally 'that will ever [be] up above', cf. HarS TODO: "We two are cursed, brother, thy bane am I become! That will ever be remembered (hat mun é uppi, but both mss. hat mun enn uppi), evil is the doom of the norns!" The second is found in a runic inscription, U 323 (980–1015): "Ever will lie—while the age lives (meþ + altr + lifiæ með aldr lifir)—the hard-hammered bridge, broad, after a good man." An especially close parallel is found in pstf Stuttdr (st. 5, Kari Ellen Gade ed. in SkP II): Ey mun uppi · Endils, meðan stendr // sól-borgar salr, · svor-góðis for. 'Always will be remembered—while the hall of the sun's stronghold [sky/heaven > earth] stands—the journey of the fattener of Andle's bird [raven/eagle > warrior].'

The ON cognate of tree, tré, can also mean 'pieces of wood', and it is traditionally seen as referring to pieces of driftwood. Yet as pointed out by Hultgård (2006) the comparative evidence suggests that the two were in fact living, growing trees (they would thus be part of the foliage described in st. 4) and there is nothing in the sources that speaks against this.

While Ash is easily identified with the same-named wood species (Fraxinus excelsior), the etymology of Emble is much more difficult. The shaping of men from trees is used by poets in various kennings for men and women, especially in scoldic poetry (for a short discussion see SkP I, p. lxxv ff.). While this is rarer in the Eddic corpus it does occur, e.g. in Sdr 4: brynpings apaldr 'apple-tree of the byrnie-Thing<sup>C</sup> [BATTLE > WARRIOR]'.

<sup>1</sup> Unds 'Until'] We seem to be missing a preceding sentence here which would have completed the semantics; it was probably contained in a now-lost stanza. What this st. would have contained is of course impossible to know, but it may have given a reason for why the gods needed to create men.

<sup>2</sup> at húsi 'along the settlement'] An adverbial, lit. 'along the house'; the gods were not walking in the wilderness.

<sup>12</sup>This verse is paraphrased in Yilv 9: Dá er þeir gengu með sévar-strondu Bors synir, fundu þeir tré tvau ok tóku upp trén ok skopuðu af menn. The first one gave breath (ond) and life, the second wit and movement, the third sight, speech, appearance and sight; they gave them clothes and names. The male was called Ash, and the woman Emble, and from them mankind was begotten, to whom were given the dwelling within Middenyard.'

<sup>2</sup> fekk spjǫll spak-lig 'received wise tidings'] fé, spjǫll spaklig 'wealth, wise tidings' R is metrically deficient, since alliteration would need to fall on the strongly stressed noun fé. The emended text also works better in context since it parallels st. 1, where the wallow likewise says that she will relate spjǫll 'tidings, sayings' (cf. English gospel lit. 'good news' which originally translates the Greek εὐαγγέλιον). See Haukur Þorgeirsson (2020, pp. 51–53), Males (2023, p. 16) for discussion on this reading.

3–6 Skuld ... val-kyrjur Shild] Judging especially by the out-of-place phrase  $n\acute{u}$  eru talðar 'now are tallied', these four lines seem to be a later insert from a thule<sup>C</sup> counting the walkirries.

5 Nonnur Herjans 'Nannies of Harn  $\langle = \text{Weden} \rangle$  [WALKIRRIES]'] Nanna 'Nanny<sup>P'</sup> (the name itself is a nursing word) was the wife of Balder<sup>P</sup>, but the word is here certainly being used to refer generically to 'maidens, women'. A similar kenning is found in the thule listing female divinities (Pul Ásynja in SkP III), where the walkirries are called Odins meyjar 'Weden's maidens'.

Told allusively in Wsp 31–33 is the myth about the Balder's death at the hands of his blind brother Hath, and the revenge killing of Hath by his half-brother Wonnel, who was specifically begotten for that purpose. The other important sources for this myth are Bdr 8–11, the detailed description in Yilv 49, and Saxo Grammaticus (III.4.1–8).

The account and language of Bdr 8–11 is strikingly similar to the present sts. (and Bdr 11/2–4 is near-identical to Wsp 32/4–33/2), and they give only one detail not found in the present sts., namely that Wonnel, the slayer of Hath, was born from a woman named Rind "in the western halls".

Yilv 49 contains a much longer and more detailed narrative. It may be shortly summarised as follows: After Balder has terrible nightmares about dying, his mother Frie makes all sorts of things (fire, water, venom, metals, stones, trees, diseases, beasts, etc.) swear oaths not to harm him. Since Balder is now practically unharmable, the Eese make sport out of shooting and striking him. Lock is annoyed by this game, and in disguise as a woman, he finds out from Frie that a single thing did not swear the oath: the mistletoe, since it was thought too young. Lock grabs a mistletoe and gives it to the blind god Hath, telling him where to shoot. Hath does so, and Balder dies.

Yilv 49 continues with the rest of the narrative, namely the failed attempt by the Eese at "crying Balder out of hell" (for which see Eddic Fragments in the present volume) and Balder's funeral (which is treated poetically in Wolf Ugson's fragmentary House-drape, ÚlfrU Húsdrp in SkP III.) For the revenge taken by the Eese on Lock, treated in Yilv 50, see st. 34 below.

A very notable omission in Yilv 49–50 is the slaying of Hath by his half-brother Wonnel. This brother-slaying may have been left out for moral reasons, but was certainly known to the author, as seen by Yilv 30, which reads in full: Áli eða Váli heitir einn, sonr Óðins ok Rindar. Hann er djarfr í orrostum ok mjok happ-skeytr. 'Onnel or Wonnel one is called, the son of Weden and Rind. He is brave in battles and a very lucky shot', and by Scold 19, where we find the following relevant kennings for Wonnel (with case changed from the acc. to the nom. for clarity): sonr Óðins ok Rindar 'son of Weden and Rind' and hefni-áss Baldrs, dólgr Haðar ok bani hans 'avenging os' of Balder; the enemy of Hath and his bane'.

The revenge narrative is also dealt with by Saxo (III.4.1–8) in his typical euhemerized form (for Saxo's Latin forms of relevant names see respective Encyclopedia entries): Weden learned from the Finnish wizard Horsethief that Rind, daughter of the Russian king, Weden (who could not murder his own son) seduced the woman Rind (in the by Cormac Awmundson's TODO: sqiŏ Yggr til rindar), who gave birth to Wonnel.

I saw Balder's—the bloody victim's, Weden's child's—orlay<sup>C</sup> sealed;<sup>30</sup> grown did stand, higher than the plains, a slender and very fair mistletoe.

1 tífur 'victim's'] This word is rather difficult (and possibly corrupt). It may be connected with týr 'tew, god', but I see two problems with this. First, the dat. sg. of týr is tivi and the intrusive r is hard to explain. Second, although it must was at some point used in the singular in the generic sense 'god', and this survives in compounds like Sig-týr 'Victory-tew  $\langle =$  Weden)' and in the plural tivar 'tews; gods', in the ON corpus the simplex form týr exclusively refers to the god Tew<sup>C</sup>. I follow CV, who connect it with OE tiber, tifer 'victim, hostage', but this also has problems: As seen by  $bl\delta\delta gum$  the present word is certainly masculine, but tiber is neuter. Assuming a nom. sg. tifurr with the same declension as jofurr, we would expect \*tifri in the dat. sg., not tifur (which would however be the expected acc. sg.).

<sup>30</sup>Or 'hidden'. The verb fela 'hide, conceal' is used in poetry to describe burial in mounds, as in IngT 24 ("[...] And afterwards the victory-havers hid (fólu) the ruler on Borrey.") or the C10th Karlevi stone ("Hidden (fulkin fólginn) in this mound lies he whom the greatest deeds followed; [...]")

<sup>2</sup> lé-gjarns 'guiler-eager'] A formulaic epithet of Lock. See note to TODO for other examples and discussion.

'Then spoke Gangler: "What will then be afterwards, when heaven and earth and all the world is burned, and dead are the gods and all Oneharriers and all man-kind—and ye have said earlier, that each man will live in some world for all ages?"

Then answers Third: "Many good dwellings are there then, and many bad: it is then best to be on Gimlee in heaven, and it is all-good with good drink, for those who find that pleasurable, in the hall which is called Brimmer; it also stands on heaven. That one is also a good hall which stands on the Nithfells, made of red gold; it is called Sinder. In these halls good and well-mannered men will dwell.

On Neestrand is a great and bad hall, and the doors face north. It is all woven with the spines of serpents like a wicker-house, but the heads of the serpents all face into the house and blow venom, so that along the hall run venom-rivers, and in those rivers wade oath-breakers and murder-wargs, as is said here:"

after which are quoted sts. 37 and 38/1–2, followed by the prose: En i Hver-gelmi er verst 'But in Wharyelmer is is worst' and 38/4.

1 býr 'dwells'] so HG; sat 'sat/stayed' R 1 aldna 'old'] arma 'wretched' U 1 Éarn-viõi 'Ironwood'] metr. emend.; Járnviði RHSWU; Járn-viðjum 'Ironwoods' T 2 fóðir 'nourishes'] so HG; fóddi 'nourished' R 3 af] ór TS 4 tjúgari 'seizer'] †tuigan† T; tregari 'griever' U. As the young agentive suffix -ari is found nowhere else in the poem it is possible that this word is corrupt. If it is, it must have occurred early in the transmission, as reflexes of *tjúgari are found in all surviving mss.

<sup>35</sup>The old hag raises the cubs of the wolf Fenrer, of which a particularly fierce one will swallow the moon. According to Grmn 40 the sun is chased by a wolf called Skoll, while another wolf, Hate Rothswitner's son, runs in front of her. This is elaborated upon in Yilv 12, where it is said that Skoll swallows the moon, while Hate swallows the sun. High then explains that "A lone troll-woman (g/gr) lives to the east of Middenyard in that forest called Ironwood", and "feeds the sons of many ettins, all in the likenesses of wolves, and thereof these wolves (i.e. Skoll and Hate) come. And it is also said that from that lineage a single one becomes the mightiest, and he is called Moongarm. He fills himself with the life of all those men who die and he swallows the moon and stains heaven and all the air with blood. Thereof the sun loses its rays and the winds are violent and moan hither and thither, and thus it says in the Spae of the Wallow: [...]" after which this and the following st. are quoted. This seems very much like a composite from several sources—probably Wsp 40–41 and Grmn 40—but becomes contradictory when it states that two wolves swallow the moon. Assuming that this is only a confusion on the part of the author of Yilv, this st. and the next must be describing Skoll, but it is of course not impossible that there was confusion about the exact details of these events among the Heathen poets. In favour of that seems to speak Webth 46–47, where the sun is said to be swallowed by Fenrer (but see note there).

Pá mélti Gangleri: "Hvárt lifa nokkur goðin þá, eða er þá nokkur jorð eða himinn:" Hárr segir: "Upp skýtr jorðunni þá ór sénum, ok er þá grón ok fogr. Vaxa þá akrar ó·sánir. Þá finna þeir í grasinu gull-toflur þér, er ésirnir hofðu átt. Svá er sagt:"

'Then spoke Gangler: "Do any of the gods survive then, or is there any earth or heaven?" High says: "Then shoots the earth up from the seas, and is then green and fair. Then acres grow unsown. Wider and Wonnel live, as the sea and Surt's flame has not wounded them, and they settle Idewolds, where Osyard once was, and there come the sons of Thunder, Mood and Main, and have there Millner. Thereafter come Balder and Hath from Hell, then all reconcile with each other and speak with each other and think back on their runes, and speak about the tidings which had once been: about the Middenyardswyrm and about the Fenrerswolf. Then they find in the grass those golden Tavel bricks which the Eese had owned. So it is said:"

The Dreams of Balder (Baldrs draumar)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C9th (0.110)–C10th (0.890) Meter: Firnwordslaw

In ancient manuscripts only preserved in A, but the poem also survives in later manuscripts with a few extra stanzas (see below). It follows the structure of a riddle contest.

The poem begins in medias res; Balder has been having nightmares, and so the gods meet at the Thing to figure out why (1). Weden<sup>P</sup> rides to Hell<sup>L</sup>, where he has an encounter with a bloody dog (2). It barks for a long time at him, but he passes it and continues to "the high house of Hell<sup>P</sup>" (3), from which he rides west, to the grave of a certain wallow<sup>C</sup>, whom he revives using magic (4). She asks which man has forced her out of the grave (5), and Weden introduces himself as Waytame, before asking for whom the benches of Hell are covered with gold (6). The wallow responds that barrels of mead stand brewed for Balder and that the gods are very anxious (7). Weden asks her who will slay Balder (8), and she responds that it is Hath, carrying a "high fame-beam" (9). Weden then asks her who will avenge Balder's death by slaying Hath (10). The wallow responds that Rind<sup>P</sup> will give birth to Weden's son Wonnel<sup>P</sup>, who will slay Hath when only one night old (11). Weden then asks about some mysterious maidens (12; see Note), which betrays his identity. The wallow tells him that she now knows his true identity, to which Weden responds that he does as well: she is not a wallow, but rather the "mother of three thurses" (13). The wallow tells him to ride home and "be famous"; he must still die at the Rakes of the Reins<sup>L</sup> (14).

The Eese relayed this message, and "the men and the animals and the earth and the stones and trees and all metals" cried for Balder. It may be that these maidens were included among the grievers (perhaps they were the walkirries, and this is what reveals Weden's identity?), but their identity is otherwise unknown.

The Speeches of the High One (Hávamól)

The Speeches of the High One is the second poem of R, which is the only medieval witness manuscript. Several sts. are however cited or alluded to in other places, such as Eyv Hák (TODO: formatting) 21 and FbrS TODO.

The poem before us does not very much seem like a single composition by one poet, but instead much more like a collection of scattered traditional poetry associated with the god Weden. It seems to contain at least two poems of practical life advice, two mythological narratives, scattered gnomic poetry about runes, and a list of galders. These various strands are united by their presumed speaker, namely Weden in His function as God of Wisdom.

Following previous authors, I identify the following strands, excepting various lone sts. that are probably later inserts. In the present edition each of the following is given a separate, short introduction:

1-79	The Guest-strand; practical life advice, beginning with a guest arriving at a homestead.
81-89	Various scattered sts. of advice.
90-101	Weden's failed seduction of Billing's daughter.
102-109	Weden's obtaining of the Mead of Poetry
110-136	The Speeches of Loddfathomer; Weden's advice to Loddfathomer.
137-145	The Rune-tally; various sts. relating to runes and their magical use.
146-164	The Leed-tally; Weden's listing of 18 galders.

Two questions shortly arise: who was the redactor (i.e., the person who set these strands together, and gave the new work the title Háva mǫl), and what was his motive? While a detailed and sufficient answer will probably never be found, a careful reading of the final stanza, 165, gives us some clues. By its prayer-like blessing, which brings up the Heathen dichotomy between the Gods and Ettins (the friends and enemies of Mankind, respectively) and calls the contents of the poem (which include unambiguous Heathen ritual instructions) "very useful" (all-þǫrf); and by its reference to the process of oral transmission, the whole poem in something resembling the current form must (it seems) have been put together no later than the early 11th century, in a pre-scribal, pre-monastic, Heathen context. (Iceland converted around year 1000, but people surely clung to the old traditions for some time longer.)

As seen by the emphasis on the usefulness of the poetry, the reason for this redaction was not strictly antiquarian, but foremost utilitarian; the redactor gathered an amount of traditional poetry he found useful (whether for its life-advice or mythology) into a single poem, which could then be learned by heart by anyone. In this he certainly achieved his goal. The High is by far the greatest surviving collection of pre-Christian Norse advice poetry, and has functioned like a Noah's Ark—or Hoardmimer's Wood—for that genre. Thus, those scattered stanzas which were not included by the redactor—and many must have existed—are now forever lost.

The Guest-strand (sts. 1–79)

The Guest-Strand (Old Norse: Gesta-páttr) is one of the most interesting surviving works of Norse poetry. Sadly, its structure has been obscured by the insertion of unrelated sts. and by poor translations. My hope is to shed some light on the original coherence of the strand, while respecting the text as it appears in the manuscript. As I do not think it can do each stanza justice, and since there is not exactly a clear progression of themes, I will not here attempt a stanza-by-stanza summary of this strand. Rather, I will give some important observations and then let the reader read for himself.

The Strand is a piece of advice poetry, and takes its outset in a wanderer's arriving as a guest at a Norse farmstead. It first (roughly sts. 1–4) discusses the mutual responsibilites between guest and host, and then moves on to broader human interactions, with a particular focus on alcohol, war, friendship and human wisdom. While there is some coherence and nice transitions are frequently employed in order to shift from one theme to another (e.g. between sts. 4 and 5, or 10 and 11), the poem is not clearly divided into sections, nor is there (after the very first stanzas) a linear progression from one theme to another.

At all turns the poem advices caution and shrewdness. A man should always carry his "manwit" (ON man-vit, a word somewhat analogous with the English "common sense") with him; he should think before he speaks

The poem moves seamlessly between various parts of life. To do so the poet often employs transitions where a st. repeats the structure of the previous one, but with a new subject. This is particularly evident in sts. 4–5 and 10–11.

The speaker is announcing to the hosts (or "givers") that a guest, frozen, wet and tired, is currently sitting on the wood-pile, and ought to be let in.

1–4 ALL.] There is a good train of thought throughout the st.: the guest must first wash and dry himself, and then be welcomed to sit and eat at the table. After the host has provided these amenities the responsibility shifts onto the guest, who must now speak.

The word <code>endr-paga</code> 'silence in return leads a nice transition to the rest of the Strand, where proper social conduct (encompassed by the first word of the next stanza below, "wir") will be discussed more broadly. One may note that the verb <code>pegja</code> 'shut up, be silent' (of which *paga, which only appears in the present compound, is a derivative, formed in the same way as <code>saga</code> 'saw, history, story' to <code>segja</code> 'say, speak') and its derivative <code>pogn</code> 'silence' are frequently used by Scoldic poets to mark the very beginning of their works (e.g. Arn <code>Magndr 1</code> II. <code>pegi seim-brotar</code> 'may gold-breakers [GENEROUS MEN] be silent', Egill <code>Berdr 1</code> l': <code>byggi ... til pagnar pinn lyor</code> 'may thy retinue focus on silence', Glúmr <code>Gráf 1</code> I. <code>biojum vér pagnar</code> 'we ask for silence').

While Anglo-Saxon Latin-script mss. use several runes ideographically (e.g.  $\mbox{\sc O}$  for OE  $\mbox{\sc $\delta el$}$  'homeland, patrimony'), there are (to my knowledge) no Scandinavian examples with runes other than  $\mbox{\sc M}$ . The tradition of ideographic runes standing for their names is ancient and goes back to the time before Latin writing, as proven by the inscriptions from Stentoften (DR 357) and Ingelstad (Ög 43), which use the runes  $\mbox{\sc $s$}$  if or  $\mbox{\sc $ar$}$  for  $\mbox{\sc $ar$}$  for  $\mbox{\sc $ar$}$  (year, good harvest' and  $\mbox{\sc M}$  d for  $\mbox{\sc dagn}$  'day', respectively.

The unvalorous man thinks he will always live if he of war be wary; but old age gives him no peace, which yet spears would give him.<sup>53</sup>

<sup>53</sup>The unvalorous man might have been spared by the spears, but death will still find him through miserable old age. Since death is unavoidable it is better to live bravely, even if one risks dying in battle, than to live cowardly and die of sickness. This connects well to the ancient view of the 'straw-death' (TODO).

The gluttonous man—unless he know his sense—eats himself a life-sorrow.

Oft the belly, when among the sharp he comes, brings the foolish man ridicule.

<sup>2</sup> méli parft eða þegi 'he ought to speak the needful or shut up'] Formulaic, line occurs identically in Webth

&lt;sup>54</sup>Drinking horns at this time could not be set down, and so to "hold onto" may have been an expression for not drinking. The st. may also be referring to the toasting ritual wherein a single vessel would be passed around and drunk from by each person (indeed this is the origin of the Scandinavian toasting-word, skāl 'prosit, cheers!', lit. 'bowl!'). At such celebrations "holding onto" the vessel and refusing to drink was very rude; as late as 1519 a man in Jämtland was killed in an argument resulting from his refusal to pass on to the bowl (see Sjöberg (1907)).

The unclever man, when among people he comes, 'tis best that he shut up.

No one knows that he nothing knows, unless he speak too much.

The man knows not, who nothing knows, that he speak too much.

<sup>4</sup> á for-mélendr fáa 'has spokesmen few'] Repeated in st. 62. He has few who are ready to take his side and speak up for him; the sense is that true friends are proven in conflict, not in easy things like laughing. The Thing was the old Germanic legal assembly, and so the specific reference here is to legal disputes, which, however, could easily turn into deadly feuds.

52 Mikit eitt · skal-a manni gefa;

&lt;sup>61</sup>One of the harder sts. in the poem. The probable sense is that "the clothes make the man" (or warrior): under expensive gear a thin tree-man might be lurking, and likewise even a mighty man (the choice of the word halr 'hero, warrior' (cf. sts. 36, 37) rather than the more neutral maðr 'man, person' is surely intentional) can never defend himself against a heavily armoured opponent. Without his arms, he becomes as vulnerable as the "tree-man" on the plain.

Middle-clever should each man be; never too clever.

 $<sup>^{62}</sup>$ The genitive "of small sands, of small seas" is probably a partitive, the sense being that man's horizons are small; the universe is far greater than he and always will be. On the meaning of the second half of the st. I find that of Gudmundur Finnbogason (1929) most convincing, namely that every man has both strengths and weaknesses. As nobody can excel at everything, nobody is complete; every person is "half" (and it should be added that ON balfr has a more general sense of incompleteness than its English cognate). This interpretation fits particularly closely with sts. 71 and 132.

The clever man's heart is seldom gladdened, if he is all-clever that owns [it].

Washed and full ought man to ride to the Thing<sup>C</sup>, although he be not clothed too well; of his shoes and his breeches ought no man to be ashamed, nor the more of his horse. (although he has not a good one.)

The two following sts. are written in opposite order in R, but a symbol at the start of each indicates that they should switch places.

 $<sup>^{64}</sup>$ i.e. the brisk man is already "halfway there" just by choosing to wake up early instead of sleeping in.

<sup>4</sup> þótt ... góðan 'although ... good one'] Finnur Jónsson (1932) considers this a late insert, and I agree. It seems that the inserter was not aware of the rules of the Leed-meter meter and interpreted the c-verse as an a-verse in Firnwordslaw.

 $<sup>^{68}</sup>$ Not everyone is hospitable, especially with regards to food, which was scarce and closely watched among the Norse subsistence farmers. The poet notes that even a "trusty friend" (possibly sarcastic) would invite him over more often if he brought more food than he ate.

Man is not all unblessed, though he of poor health be: someone is blessed with sons; someone with kinsmen, someone with ample fee<sup>C</sup>, someone with works done well.

1 ve-sall 'unblessed'] Or 'woe-blessed'. I have elsewhere translated this word as 'wretched', but I have presently rendered it this way to show the etymological relationship. The second element in this word is sɛɛll, but lacks i-umlaut due to Proto-Norse shortening of the vowel before the umlaut occurred or became phonemic. The ancestral Proto-Norse forms would be *salin and *wajē-salin. Cf. here PFSM-MFRIY wajē-marin 'infamous' on the Tjurkö bracteate, where the second element is the ancestor of ON meer 'renowned, famous'. The expected descendant *ve-marr is not attested.

1 ve-sall 'unblessed'] I have chosen to translate  $s \not\in ll$  as 'blessed', but it is not a past participle and could also be rendered as 'lucky'. It carries with it a certain sense of innateness, in a way that modern Westerners may find foreign. So a king whose reign is one of peace ( $fri\delta r$ ) is said to be  $fri\delta -s \not\in ll$  'blessed with peace', while one who reigns during good harvests ( $\acute{a}r$ ) is said to be  $\acute{a}r -s \not\in ll$  'blessed with harvests'. The harvests and peace are not due to environmental or political factors outside of his control, but rather spring from the king himself (TODO: Reference PCRN chapter).

2 sonum ... fréndum 'sons ... kinsmen'] Cf. st. 72 below, which stresses the importance of sons and kinsmen.

A fire I saw burning high for a wealthy man, but outside he was dead before the doors. <sup>69</sup>

<sup>1</sup> an séi ó·lifóum 'than with the unliving'] emend.;  $\jmath \not fel lifóom R$ . The normalized reading ok sél-lifóum 'and for the blessed living' is metrically defect, since sél- is strongly stressed and thus should carry alliteration. For the original form of the line we may instead compare Fthm 30: Hvotum 's betra · an sé óbvotum 'Tis better for the brisk than it may be for the unbrisk'. The corruption probably happened in the following way: \*en (younger form of an 'than') in the prototype was misinterpreted as en 'and, but' and copied as  $\jmath$  (the tironian et), while \*séi óltfoom (probably with the words cramped together) became sel lifoom.

<sup>2</sup> ey getr kvikr kú 'always gets the quick a cow'] i.e., "new opportunities always present themselves for the living". A reference to the cattle-based economy (see also st. 76), the cow being used as a metonym: (cf. churchly English 'the quick and the dead', i.e. 'the living and the dead').

&lt;sup>69</sup>The fire is probably the man's funeral pyre. It is notable that his wealth is mentioned; according to Ibn Fadlan (TODO) two thirds of a great chieftain's wealth was spent on his funeral. One notes the contrastive en 'but', and may paraphrase it as something like "I saw a lavish funeral, but the burning man was dead anyway." This interpretation is supported by the following st. (High 70, especially the second half), which expresses the same sentiment."

<sup>1</sup> Sonr es betri 'A son is better'] i.e. it is better for a man to have a son and heir than not, even if the father should die some time before he is born. The son can further his father's lineage and memory (as exemplified by the raising of a "beat-stone"), and as the poet says, it is rare for a non-relative to do so.

<sup>1</sup> tunga 's hofuŏs bani 'the tongue is the head's bane'] Formulaic or proverbial. Cf. the Old Swedish Heathen Law (my norm. following Läffler (1879)): Fallr þann orð havr givit—glópr orða verstr, tunga hovuð-bani—liggi i ú-gildum akri 'If he falls who has given the word (of insult)—wickedness is the worst of words, the tongue the head-bane-man—may he lie in an invalid (i.e. not properly enclosed) field.'

 $<sup>^{70}</sup>$  herjar gen. sg. of herr 'host, army' may alternatively be read as the nom. pl. meaning 'harriers, raiders,' present in einherjar (Oneharriers<sup>G</sup>). Thus 'two are the destroyers of one (i.e. the person)'.

1 fé ... fréndr 'Fee ... kinsmen'] The import of this merism may be less clear to the modern reader. In the Germanic Iron Age farming society a man's wealth was reckoned by how many heads of cattle (and the Norman loan-word cattle is itself the same word as capital) he owned (cf. st. 70 above, where "a cow" is used to express "an opportunity"), and his social power by the number of able male relatives ready to side with him in conflict (cf. st. 72 above and TODO: reference?). The meaning is thus: all your power will pass away, and so too must you, but if you leave a good reputation behind it can live on. For Indo-European poetic analogues, see West (2007, pp. 99 ff.).

Weden's failed seduction of Billing's daughter

The following sts. are united by their meter, Leed-meter (unlike most of the preceding sts., see introduction to them above), style and content. The strand begins with general maxims about love and relations between the sexes, before moving on to the narrative about Billing's daughter.

Weden's obtaining of the Mead of Poetry

The intricate myth of how Weden came to own the Mead of Poetry is told more fully in Scold 5-6. That narrative goes as follows, with minor details left out: After the war between the Eese and Wanes, the two tribes of gods reconcile through spitting into a vat. Not wanting to discard this token of their truce, they instead create a man out of the spit, calling him Quasher<sup>P</sup>; he is so wise that he can answer any question posed to him, and so travels around the world in order to share his wisdom with humans. Quasher eventually comes to the dwelling of two dwarfs, Fealer and Galer. They kill him and drain his blood into three vessels: two vats named Soon and Bothem, and a kettle named Woderearer<sup>P</sup>. Through mixing the blood with honey they make a mead, with the power to turn anyone who drinks from it "a scold or man of learning (skald eða fróða-maðr)". The dwarfs then lie to the Eese about the murder, telling them that Quasher drowned in his own wisdom. Some time later, the dwarfs murder an ettin named Gilling<sup>P</sup> and his wife. Gilling's son, Sutting , learns of this and prepares to drown the dwarfs. In exchange for their lives and as recompense for his father's slaying, the dwarfs offer Sutting the "dear mead" (mjoðinn dýra; cf. here sts. 104 and 138). Sutting accepts the ransom and takes the mead home with him. He makes his daughter Guthlathe<sup>P</sup> guard it. Some time later, Weden is out journeying, and finds nine thralls mowing hay. He sharpens their scythes with a special whetstone, and the mowing improves greatly. He then throws it in the air and the thralls shortly kill each other over it. By evening Weden comes to the owner of the thralls, Bigh, Sutting's brother. Bigh laments the death of his workmen, and so Weden, who calls himself Baleworker<sup>P</sup>, offers to do the work of the thralls over the summer, in exchange for one drink of Sutting's mead. Bigh tells him that Sutting alone owns the mead, but that he will accompany Baleworker to Sutting to ask for the drink. The two arrive at Sutting, who as expected refuses to give any part of the mead away. Baleworker then tells Bigh that he will get to it anyway; he takes out the drill Rate<sup>P</sup>, and tells Bigh to drill through the mountain, into the room where the mead is stored. Bigh first attempts to trick him by only drilling halfway, but eventually creates a narrow passage. Baleworker turns himself into a snake and crawls through it; as he does, Bigh tries to strike him the drill, but misses. After coming through, Baleworker sees Guthlathe watching over the mead. He goes on to sleep with her for three nights, after which she promises him three sips of the mead. With each sip he swallows the contents of one of the three vessels, so that all of the mead ends up in his belly. Having taken the mead, he dons his eagle-hame and flies away from the mountain. Sutting sees him, takes his own eagle-hame, and gives chase. The Eese see Weden in flight, and set out several large vat on the ground, into which Weden, still flying, spits out the mead. At this point Sutting has almost caught up with him, and so Weden "sends back" (senda aptr, usually interpreted being sent out from the anus) some of the mead, presumably into his face. This portion becomes the lot of foolish poets (skald-fifla hlutr), while the rest of the mead is given to the Eese and to skilled poets (þeim monnum, er yrkja kunnu 'those men who can compose [poetry]').

The core of this many-twisted myth is old. A close parallel is found in RV hymns 4.26–27. In these two hymns the soma plant (who in the Vedic mythology is not just the plant and its resulting drink, but also a god, perhaps somewhat like Quasher) is first held within "a hundred iron forts" (4.27.1c: śatám púraḥ áyasīḥ) by the archer Krsanu, before being stolen by a sweeping falcon. The falcon brings Soma to Manu, the ancestor of the Aryans and first sacrificer.

The resemblance to the last part of the Scold account should be obvious, but, notably, the detail of the falcon is not found in any of the sts. below. This shows that the narrative of Scold cannot be exclusively based on the sts. here below, but instead also relies on other, now-lost sources. This is also supported by the present sts. leaving out the narratives about Quasher, the two dwarfs, and Baye, along with some subtler narrative differences.

The order of the present sts. follows that of R, their main witness manuscript. The strand begins with some social advice (102), after which the narrative follows (103–109). It is narrated in the first person by Weden himself. The sts. do not tell the myth in chronological order and leave much up to the listener; they are surely composed for an audience that already knows the story. The following narrative details are given:

- 104. Weden visits Sutting's home, but does not receive a good reception.
- 105. Guthlate falls in love with Weden, and gives him a drink of the Mead.
- 106. Weden has to bore through the mountains with the drill Rate.
- 107. Weden has "bought [the Mead] well"; possibly a euphemistic reference to sleeping with Guthlathe for it.
- 108. Guthlathe indeed does sleep with Weden, though not expressely in exchange for the Mead.
- 109. The following day (hins hindra dags, see note to this word in the edited text below), a group of Rime-Thurses come to Weden's hall, to ask him whether a Baleworker is among the Gods, or if he has been slain by Sutting.
- 110. Switching to the third person (which may indicate that this is his answer to the Rime-Thurses), Weden says that he "thinks" that Weden has sworn an oath, but that his words cannot be trusted. After the "simble" (i.e. drinking feast, banquet; probably referring to the drink of the Mead), Weden betrayed Sutting and made Guthlathe weep.

The underlying narrative seems to generally agree with that of Scold, but unlike its more transactional affair, we here find a stronger emphasis on Weden's cruel betrayal of Guthlathe. A notable detail not found in Scold is Weden's oath in st. 109. The content of the oath was most likely that Weden would marry Guthlathe, something supported by the language used (see note to st. 108: hins hindra dags). The recipient of the oath, which Weden clearly broke, was either Sutting or Guthlathe. That Weden swore it to Sutting, and thus asked him for Guthlathe's hand in marriage, may be suggested by the description of Sutting as svikvinn 'betrayed' in st. 109. This view, however, has an internal narrative problem: in st. 103 Weden describes his interaction with Sutting as poor, and in st. 105 Weden is said to have had to bore through the mountains, but this may just have been to reach Sutting, rather than Guthlathe as in Scold. The recipient of the oath being Guthlathe would agree better with the Scold narrative, and Sutting's betrayer would instead be her.

The following day went the Rime-Thurses to ask for the High One's counsel, in the High One's hall. About Baleworker (= Weden) they asked, if he were come among the bonds [GODS], or if Sutting had slain him.

1 Hins hindra dags 'The following day'] This is the only occurrence of the comparative bindra 'following, next' in the Norse (i.e. 'belonging to Norway and its colonies') literature. The superlative bindstr 'last, final' does occur more often (e.g. indsta sinni 'the last time', with loss of the b-; see CV: bindri), and the possible derivative bindar-dags 'day after tomorrow, two days after' is found twice, both times in the GolL, chh. 37 and 266. If we, however, search in the broader Scandinavian sphere, we find in the Swedish provicial laws an exact equivalent of the present phrase, namely OSwe. bindra-dagber, a law-word referring specifically to the 'day after the wedding', used both on its own and in the expression bindra-dags gigf 'morning gift'. If this is indeed the sense in the present stanza, two interpretations are possible: it either (i) refers sarcastically to Weden's sleeping with Guthlathe (as would be done on the wedding night), or (ii) means that Weden actually married, or promised to marry, Guthlathe. The latter interpretation may find support in st. 109, see notes there.

A bigh-oath<sup>C</sup> I ween that Weden has sworn—how shall one trust his truces? Away from the simble<sup>C</sup> he left Sutting, betrayed, and Guthlathe, brought to tears.

1–4 Baug-eiö ... Gunn-loōu 'A bigh-oath ... brought to tears<sup>TM</sup>] The exact narrative referred to in the stanza is hard to pin down, but I find the following most likely: Weden swore an oath on a bigh, its contents being that he would marry Guthlathe. Sutting then hosted a simble (banquet, drinking feast) for the new couple (cf. bins bindra dags in st. 108), and Weden slept with her, but after. svikvinn 'betrayed' and grótta 'brought to tears' are (respectively masc. and fem.) acc. sg. past participles of the transitive verbs svikva 'to betray' and gróta 'to make weep, bring to tears'. I read  $l\acute{e}t$  as meaning 'left, abandoned, forsook'.

The Speeches of Loddfathomer

Loddfáfnismól. Advice given to Loddfathomer. In  ${\bf R}$  stanza 110 begins with a large initial M in the margin, smaller than those of individual named poems, but larger than the typical initials for sts.

<sup>5</sup> leitir þér innan út staðar 'thou must look for thy place, [going] out from within'] A difficult line to translate faithfully, owing to innan út '[going] out from within' and the euphemistic expression leita sér staðar 'look for one's place' for 'shit', something which at the time was done outside. The meaning of the line is thus 'or if you are leaving your house to relieve yourself'.

<sup>5</sup> en lát þér at góðu getit 'but [rather] let thyself be pleased by good'] This construction is equivalent to CV: geta, A. IV. with acc.

they will be good for thee if thou get [them]:
Up shalt thou not look in battle —alike to a madman become the sons of men—lest men bewitch thy [sense/life/face].81

La Farge and Tucker (1992) instead explain the word as a borrowing from Old Irish geilt 'insane, mad'. Pettit (1986) follows this, and argues that the whole theme of the st. probably be of Celtic origin, giving several examples from Celtic literature of warriors going mad upon looking up into the sky during battle. In this case the men (halir, which word seems to have an association with warriors; cf. 36–37, 49) would be to quote Pettit some sort of "supernatural sky warriors", in my opinion most likely the Oneharriers<sup>G</sup>.

The Rune-Tally

These scattered sts. are introduced by a larger initial in  $\mathbf{R}$ , marking the beginning of a new section. They have the header  $R\acute{u}na$ -tals  $p\acute{a}ttr$  'Strand of the Rune-Tally' in younger paper mss. and generally give an archaic, mystic impression; it is as if they were drawn from the lips of an Odinic priest.

Apart from these stanzas, there are a few other instances of Runic magic. Closest at hand is st. 80 above, which would fit seamlessly into the present section. Outside of High there is Sdr 4–16, also preserved in R.

<sup>87</sup>This st. fits poorly here and seems like an insert. It mentions ljóð 'leeds; (magical) songs, incantations' rather than runes, and has nothing to do with Weden's hanging on the tree. Bestle was Weden's mother and Balethorn his maternal grandfather. The famous son of Balethorn would then be his maternal uncle. The custom of sending sons away to be fostered by their maternal uncles or grandfathers (which seems to be what is going on here) was quite common in Germanic society, cf. TODO.

1 nam'k frévask 'I took to thrive'] A notorious mistranslation (TODO: source) has rendered these words as 'I took semen', seeing in them a reference to Weden taking the seed from hanged men in order to replenish his own powers, something never attested elsewhere. This notion, surely based on the word fré 'seed', has no philological grounding. fré vask is wo. doubt a reflexive verb, and regardless fré is used of plant seeds, not ejaculate.

The Leed-Tally

This section of High, the so-called the Leed-Tally (Ljóðatal), is not separated from the preceding section (which is marked out with a large initial), but is usually taken as separate since it is a unified whole not much concerned with runes. The speaker (certainly Weden) recounts eighteen spells, aristocratic and Odinic in character; they deal with such things as healing (spell 2, 12), battle (3, 4, 5, 8, 11, 13), countering sorcery (6, 10), stilling the elements (7, 9), and seduction (16, 17).

In particular the fourth spell bears a strong likeness to the first Merseburg charm.

Ljóð þau kann'k, • es kann-at þjóðans kona ok manns-kis mogr.
Hjolp heitir eitt, • þat þér hjalpa mun

Those leeds<sup>C</sup> I know, as knows not the ruler's woman, and no man's lad:

 $<sup>^{92}</sup>$ An identical progression of four verbs suggests a close relation with the previous st. — The sense seems to be that it is better not to sacrifice at all than to sacrifice in excess, since even a small gift (to the gods) will be rewarded. A ritual cycle of gifts and rewards between men and the gods is also seen in other Indo-European pagan literatures. Compare the Sanskrit Debí me, dádāmi te 'Give to me, I give to thee' and Latin  $d\bar{o}$  ut  $d\bar{e}s$  'I give that thou might give'.

The Speeches of Webthrithner (Vafþrúðnismól)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C9th (0.105)–C10th (0.894) Meter: Leed-meter

A wisdom contest poem, known by the author of Yilv.

Far from being a loose collection of pieces of mythic information, the poem is tightly structured.

Weden first asks his wife, Frie, for counsel, as he is curious about the ancient wisdom which the ettin Webthrithner might possess (1). Frie expresses worry, as she considers Webthrithner wiser than all other ettins (2), but Weden says that he has travelled far and wide, and wishes to know what Webthrithner's hall is like (3). Frie wishes Weden good luck against the ettin (4) and he departs, to challenge Webthrithner's orð-spęki 'word-wisdom' (5). He arrives at hall of Webthrithner (6), who promptly declares that Weden will not come out of the hall unless he be wiser than him (7). Weden introduces himself as Gainred, saying that he has travelled far in need of Webthrithner's hospitality (8). Webthrithner invites Weden to sit down (9), but he instead utters a gnomic stanza (10) not unlike those of the first section of High.

Webthrithner then begins to ask questions relating to the mythology, each answered by Weden in turn. The questions concern which horses pull the day (11–12) and night (13–14), the river which divides the gods and ettins (15–16) and the plain where Surt and the gods will fight (17–18).

Webthrithner calls the god learned, invites him to sit on the bench, and declares that the loser of the contest must give his head (19). The roles are now reversed, and Weden asks the ettin about the origins of earth and heaven (20–21), of sun and moon (22–23), of day, night, and the phases of the moon (24–25), and of winter and summer (26–27); then about the earliest being, namely the ettin Earyelmer<sup>P</sup> (28–29), his origins (30–31) and how he reproduced asexually (32–33). Weden continues by asking what Webthrithner himself first remembers (34–35), about the origin of the wind (36–37), the god Nearth<sup>P</sup> (38–39), Walhall and the Oneharriers (40–41), and where Webthrithner learned these esoteric pieces of wisdom (42–43).

After this the structure and tone of the questions change; each one begins with the same first half as that of st. 3, and they concern the end-times. Weden asks which humans will survive after the Fimble-winter (44–45), how the sun will rise after Fenrer has destroyed it (46–47), about some obscure maidens (48–49; see discussion there), which Eese will survive after the flame of Surt goes out (50–51) and how Weden will die (52–53). Finally, he asks what Weden spoke in the ear of Balder before he was burned on the pyre (54). Webthrithner at last understands the identity of his challenger, since only Weden himself could know the answer to that question. He laconically accepts his imminent death and the futility of his word-wisdom (55); the poem ends with his admission that Weden will always be the wisest (56).

<sup>4</sup> sveita 'blood'] In poetry sveiti, although cognate with ModEngl. 'sweat', almost always means 'blood'. This is also the case with the OE swât, as seen e.g. in Beow 1286a: sweord swâte fâb 'sword stained with sweat', 2689b–2690: bé ge-blódegod wearð // sâwul-dríore; • swât ýðum wéoll. 'he was bloodied in soul-gore; the sweat gushed in waves'.

 $<sup>^{106}</sup>$ The present st. very closely resembles Grmn 41; lines 1 and 4 here are identical to lines 1–2 there, and lines 2 and 3a here are very similar to line 3a and 4 there. Although the stanzas are clearly related, they are still distinct enough that the one cannot be a direct scribal copy of the other. I think that the relation is most likely to be oral, and that the two stanzas were both composed in the same, most likely West Norwegian, community of poets, or perhaps even by the same individual.

<sup>4</sup> oldum at ár-tali 'for the year-tally of mankind'] Cf. Wsp 6, where the Reins gave names to night, the moon-phases, morning, midday, afternoon, and evening, órum at telja 'the years for to tally'.

"From the Ilewaves<sup>L</sup> splashed venom-drops; so it grew until it formed an ettin. Our lineages came there all together, thus it is ever all too fierce."

1–4 ALL] Over acons the splashing venom-drops combined until they formed a sentient being: this was Earyelmer, who is probably to be identified with Yimer. This stanza is cited in support of the lengthy and embellished creation narrative found in Yilv, but there is reason to believe that our poet was thinking of something simpler.

The Ilewaves are surely a reflex of the chaotic primeval Waters found in many West Eurasian mythologies, including Genesis 1:1–3 and RV 10.129. Of these two foundational religious sources the latter is closer to the present stanza, and probably holds the more archaic conception. Where we find in the Jewish narrative a proper creation; at the very beginning of time God's spirit is on the Waters and He makes the light shine over them, we find in these two Indo-European texts a spontaneous emergence of a single primeval entity long before the Gods are born—here from the violent splashing of venom, in RV 10.129.3 from "the power of heat" ( $t\acute{a}pasa\acute{p}$   $mahin\acute{a}$ ). This entity in turn asexually begets sexual beings—here through rubbing his limbs together, in RV 10.129.4 simply giving rise to "desire" ( $k\acute{a}ma$ ) which serves as the "primal seed of thought" ( $m\acute{a}nasa\acute{p}$   $r\acute{e}ta\acute{p}$   $pratham\acute{a}m$ )—and it is from these that the world is populated.

[R 8v/3, A 3r/26]

<sup>4</sup> hofum ok horgum 'hoves and harrows'] A formulaic merism, see note to Wsp 7 for other occurrences. This stanza seems to be referring to the large count of cultic places named after Nearth in Norway (TODO: source this); cf. here Grmn 16, where it is said that Nearth rę̃or hó-timbruðum horgi 'rules a high-timbered harrow'. Also of interest is Lock 51, where a goddess speaks about her véum ok vongum 'wighs and wongs', other cultic names. All of these examples suggest something about the Heathen view of shrines.

The two following stanzas are damaged in both R and A; R has only 40, but splits it in two, while A has 40/1 (abbreviated in the ms.: S. p. e. XI) and then jumps to the answer. The present two stanzas are reconstructed. TODO: explain better.

<sup>118</sup>I agree with Finnur Jónsson (1932) that the subject is "son" from the next line. The phrase stiga á 'step onto, mount' is also used to refer to one stepping aboard a ship or mounting a horse (see CV: stiga for citations), and so its use for a person being borne onto the pyre seems formulaic. This has been compared with Beow 1118b: giữrinc ástáh 'the warrior mounted [his pyre]', but the interpretation of that line is not controversial; Fulk et al. (2008)[186] follow Grundtvig in emending giữrinc to giữric 'war-smoke', relating it to Beow 3144b (wuduréc ástáh 'wood-smoke rose up', also in a description of a cremation). They state that Grmn 54 'almost certainly refers not to Baldr but to Óðinn, probably imagined to mount the pyre in order to set fire to it.'

[Webthrithner quoth:]

1 mann-gi] manni dat. sg. RA is impossible; a subject is needed.

3 feigum 'fey'] A word with strong fatalistic connections. Webthrithner realises that he was bound to die from the moment he proposed the wager (v. 19), as no being can outwit Weden.

 $<sup>^{119}</sup>$  verr literally means 'husband, man,' but here surely in the broader sense of '(male) being'. For other instances of gods being called men, see TODO.

The Speeches of Grimner (Grimnismól)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C10th (0.976) Meter: Leed-meter, Firnwordslaw (2/3–4, 28/3–5, 45/3–5, 48/4, 49/1–2, 53), Galderlaw (46)

The Speeches of Grimner are preserved whole in both R and A.

The poem itself is surrounded by two long introductory prose narratives containing some very old motifs, which are here brought up in the notes. It's hard to say for how long these texts have accompanied the poem (TODO: I may write about this in the Introduction, since this question is important for several other poems), but since they are found in both R and A and contain these motifs it would seem that they are fairly old. Together with sts. 1–3 they form a frame narrative that gives additional meaning to the gnomic sts. enclosed within.

The gnomic sts. themselves, the meat of the poem, are mythological and often quite obscure. In this they align closely with other Eddic gnomic poems such as High, Webth, Sdr, and Alw.

Weden begins by listing the halls of the gods (4–17). This section has been discussed in detail by de Vries (1952) TODO! who considers it corrupt. Specifically, he sees the second half of v. 4 as a later insert, since it does not elaborate on the "holy land" mentioned in the first half. Jackson (1995) has argued convincingly against this, showing how the first half serves as a generalized introduction to the list; the holy land is the dwelling-places of the gods.

After this list come several sts relating to Weden and his hall, Walhall (18–23). Mentioned are the preparation of food in Walhall (18), Weden's wolves (19) and ravens (20), the river through which the dead have to wade (21) and the gate through which they have to pass (22), the count of doors in Walhall (23), the count of doors in Thunder's hall Bilshirner (24), and two animals which stand on the hall and gnaw on the branches of the tree Leered (25–26). From the latter animal's—the stag Oakthirner's—horns droplets fall into Wharyelmer, which is the origin of all rivers (26).

This introduces a list of mythic rivers (27–28), ending with the waters through which Thunder must wade on his way to Ugdrassle (29). This leads to a list of the horses ridden by the other gods on their way to Ugdrassle (31) which is followed by a description of the roots of Ugdrassle (31), then its animals (32–36) the Walkirries (37), and beings associated with the sun and moon (38–40), the things created from Yimer's body (41–42) with a digression on the significance of the bloot<sup>P</sup> for men in the present (43, see note there!), the creation of the ship Shidebladner (44) and finally a list of the noblest of several categories of things and groups (45).

After these lists Weden utters an unclear st. invoking the gods (46), before listing many of his names and the circumstances in which they were used (47–50). He then turns to Garfrith, disappointed by the inhospitality and poor conduct of his former protégé, and predicts his imminent death (51-53). He finally reveals himself by his true name, daring Garfrith to face him (53). After this he repeats several of his names (54), and the poem ends.

In the final prose section we are told that Garfrith, after learning that he was torturing Weden, hurried up to take the god away from the fires, but tripped and fell on his sword and died. After this his son Ayner ruled for a long time.

From the sons of king Reeding (Frá sonum Hrauðungs konungs)

P<sub>1</sub>a Hrauðungr konungr átti tvá sonu. Hét annarr Agnarr, enn annarr Geirrøðr. [R 8v/31, A 3v/23]

- 2 Agnarr var tíu vetra enn Geirrøðr átta vetra. Þeir reru tveir á báti með dorgar sínar at smá-fiski. Vindr rak þá í haf út. Í nátt-myrkri brutu þeir
- 4 við land ok gingu upp; fundu kot-bónda einn. Þar vóru þeir um vetrinn. Kerling fostraði Agnar, enn karl Geirrøð. At vári fekk karl þeim skip. Enn
- er þau kerling leiddu þá til strandar, þá mélti karl ein-méli við Geirrøð. Peir fengu byr ok kvómu til stoðva foður síns. Geirrøðr var fram í skipi.
- 8 Hann hljóp upp á land enn hratt út skipinu, ok mélti: "Far þú þar er smyl hafi þik." Skipit rak út. Enn Geirrøðr gekk út til bójar; hánum var vel
- fagnat; þá var faðir hans andaðr. Var þá Geirrøðr til konungs tekinn, ok varð maðr ágétr.

King Reeding had two sons. One was called Ayner, and the other Garfrith. Ayner was ten winters old, but Garfrith eight winters. The two were rowing in a boat with their trolling-lines for small fishing. The wind drove them out into the sea. In the dark of night they crashed onto land and walked ashore; they found a lone cottage farmer. There they stayed over the winter. The wife fostered Ayner, but the husband Garfrith. 120 In the spring the husband gave them ships, but when he and his wife led them to the shore, the husband spoke privately with Garfrith. 121 They caught good wind, and came to their father's harbour. Garfrith was in the front of the ship. He leapt onto land and pushed out the ship, and spoke: "Go thou whither the fiends may have thee!" The ship drove out. But Garfrith walked towards the farm; he was welcomed well; by then was his father ended. Garfrith was then taken as king, and became an excellent man.

Weden and Frie sat in Lithshelf<sup>L</sup> and looked over all the Homes. 122 Weden spoke: "Seest thou Ayner, thy foster son, as he begets children with a troll-woman in her cave? 123 But Garfrith, my foster son, is a king and now sits at land." Frie says: "He is such a meatnithing that he tortures his guests if he judges too many are coming." Weden says that this is the greatest lie; they make a wager about this matter. Frie sent her handmaid Full to Garfrith's hall. She bade the king be wary, lest he be destroyed by that many-cunning<sup>C</sup> man who was come to the land, and said that his sign was that no hound was so fierce that he would leap at him. But it was the greatest vainglorious lie that Garfrith should not be good of meat<sup>C</sup>, and yet he has that man bound, whom the hounds would not touch. He was in a blue cloak and called himself Grimner, and did not tell any more about himself, although he was asked. The king had him tortured, that he would speak, and set him between two fires, and he sat there for eight nights. King Garfrith had a son, ten winters old, and he was named Ayner after his brother. Ayner walked up to Grimner, and gave him a full horn to drink; he said that the king did badly, as he had him tortured without cause. Grimner drank from it. Then the fire was so grown, that the cloak burned on Grimner. He quoth:

<sup>3</sup> vọrŏr goða 'Watchman of the Gods'] Formulaic epithet of Homedall, also occurring in Lock 49 and possibly in Shir 28: vọrỡr með goðum 'the Watchman among the Gods'. Yilv 27, where the present stanza is quoted, gives some details: Hann er vọrỡr goða ok sitr þar við himins enda at géta brúarinnar fyrir berg-risum. Hann þarf minna svefn en fugl. Hann sér jafnt nótt sem dag bundrað rasta frá sér; hann beyrir ok þat, er gras vex á jorðu eða ull á sauðum, ok allt þat er béra létr. 'He [= Homedall] is the Watchman of the Gods and sits there at Heaven's end to guard the bridge against barrow-risers. He needs less sleep than a bird. He sees both night and day a hundred rests from himself; he also hears grass growing on the ground or wool on sheep, and every thing which is louder.'

<sup>130</sup>This st. is cited and closely paraphrased in Yilv 24. — The roots of kjósa val 'choose the slain' are the same as those in walkirrie<sup>C</sup> (val-kyrja 'chooser of the slain'), and as Frow is a prominent goddess this would surely make her the chief walkirrie. This is paralleled by Sarle, where Frow assumes the name Gandle<sup>C</sup> (Gondul, a name attested in several lists of walkirries; see Wsp 30 and Notes) and incites the legendary never-ending Conflict of the Headnings (Hjaðningavíg). In spite of this parallel, there are good reasons to believe that the chief walkirrie was Frie<sup>C</sup>, Weden's wife. First, one of the functions of the walkirries is to bear ale to the Oneharriers (Grmn 37). This mirrors royal Germanic banquets attested in heroic poetry, where the host's wife or daughter would pour ale to his retainers and guests (the so-called 'lady with a mead cup' ritual; see Enright (1996) and Riseley (2014)). As Weden's wife, we would expect Frie to have this role. Second, at Balder's funeral as attested in Yilv (TODO. chapter number), Weden rides with Frie and the Walkirries, while Frow rides alone with her cats. If she were chief walkirrie, it is rather strange that she should not ride with them. Third, there are two separate myths where Frie and Weden contend over the fates of armies and men. These are the prose introduction to the present poem and the Longbeard origin myth (for which see Introduction to the present poem).

[R 10v/6, A 5r/23, A<sub>b</sub> 9v/14, B 3v/11]

 $<sup>^{148}</sup>$ The sun-disc was apparently thought to be a translucent shield, which protected the earth from the full power of the Sun behind it. Without it the whole world ("crags and surf", LAND and SEA; the totality of the earth) would burn up. In Sdr 14a/1 there is mention of the "shield that stands before the shining god [SUN]", which may or may not derive from the present stanza.

 $<sup>^{149}</sup>$ According to Yilv 12, which is probably based on this st., Skoll chases the sun, but Hate chases the moon (which is why he runs in front of the sun). See note to Wsp 40 for discussion on these wolves.

The holdness<sup>C</sup> of Woulder<sup>P</sup> and of All Gods<sup>C</sup> has each who first touches the fire, for the Homes<sup>C</sup> become open for the sons of the Eese, when men lift off the cauldrons. 151

- 1 Ullar 'Woulder'] The exact reason for why Woulder is invoked here is unclear, but it suggests that he has a role in the setting of the ritual fire, something possibly attested by the archeological finds at Lilla Ullevi, Sweden. See Encyclopedia: Woulder<sup>C</sup> and af Edholm (2009) for more.
- 1 hylli 'holdness'] i.e. 'favour, loyalty, grace'. This word and the corresponding adjective hollr 'hold; favourable, loyal, gracious' and verb bylla 'to make hold' are often used when speaking about divine grace, not just in Christian texts, but also (as here) w.r.t. to the Heathen gods. See Encyclopedia: holdness<sup>C</sup> for other examples.
- 1 allra goða 'All Gods' ] Cf. Sdr 2-3, Lock 11, which both hail the Gods as a collective (the former as part of a genuine prayer, the latter subversively). For the unity of the Gods, see Encyclopedia: All Gods<sup>C</sup>.

 $<sup>^{150}</sup>$ I agree with Finnur Jónsson (1932) in that this describes the gods fencing in Middenyard ('the middle enclosure') by using the hair of Yimer's eyebrows as poles.

 $<sup>^{151}\</sup>mathrm{This}\,\mathrm{st.}\,$  is one of the most difficult in the poem, and many interpretations have been made (for a summary see Nordberg (2005)). Many commenters (e.g. Finnur Jónsson (1932) and Sijmons and Gering (p. 208, TODO)) interpret this st. as relating to the poem's frame narrative. In this view Weden, still bound between the two fires, cryptically asks for a cauldron to be lifted off so that the Gods can see him through the smoke vent and rescue him. This, however, scarcely makes sense given the current stanza's placement in the gnomic wisdom section of the poem, unless this whole section is taken to be a later insert (as suggested by Finnur), something for which there is no real support. The invocation of Woulder is also left unexplained, and there is no mention of a cauldron elsewhere in the poem. I agree with Nordberg's superior solution, namely that the present st. refers to the cooking and eating of a "sacred stew" cooked in large cauldrons during the bloot<sup>C</sup>, as described in the kings' saws. More specifically, Weden is speaking of the divine grace (hylli 'holdness', see Note to l. 1) gained by the ritualist who sets the fire on which the cauldron is placed, since this act enables the Gods to become present among those partaking in the ritual when the cauldron is lifted off and the communal meal can begin. This interpretation is especially interesting when one considers the preceding sts. 41 and 42, which deal with the ordering of the world through the dismembering of Yimer, the primordial sacrificial victim. It is well attested comparatively that the ritual sacrifice in the present was seen as a reenactment and continuation of the primordial ritual sacrifice by the Gods in the mythic past, which was neccessary for the creation and ordering of the world.; see Lincoln (1986)—especially the first two chapters—for its Indo-European analogues. Grmn 41–43 would then seem to attest this view in the Germanic tradition.

The Leed of Hoarbeard (Hárbarðsljóð)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): early C11th (0.578)-late C11th (0.377) Meter: Unclear (TODO)

In my opinion the poem can be seen as an allegory on class relations, namely between the self-owning Norwegian and later Icelandic farmers, and the warlike Norwegian earls.

Of all Eddic poems this one is probably the strangest in terms of form. Verse length varies greatly, and many of the lines (see especially the final verse) are of an obscene length reminiscent of late continental Germanic poems like the Heliand; some simply have no metrical qualities at all. The young clitic definite is (uniquely) employed frequently throughout the poem. These criteria would seem to point towards a late origin for the poem (though not later than the late C13th, when R was written).

Against this late origin speaks the presence of rare words (e.g. ogurr v. 13) and a thorough understanding of the personalities of the two gods which would seem unlikely to stem from several centuries after the conversion of Iceland. The model devised by Sapp gives the poem a 57.8% likelihood of being from the early C11th, and a 37.7% likelihood of being from the late 11th. These scores are most similar to those obtained by Grip, a poem that on the surface seems much more archaic.

What could we then be dealing with? It may of course be that the poem is heavily corrupt, but there is no good evidence for this (apart from the above-mentioned irregularities). Most lines are readily understandable and fit well both within their respective context and the poem as a whole. I think a better solution to this problem is to assume that the poem has been acted out as a sort of carnivalesque theatre, with two masked actors, each playing one of the gods. This would explain the variations in meter and line length, and the prose; some lines were simply shouted out, and the lack of alliteration in them would then have a powerful, discordant effect.

This is shown also by uses of the word 'here' in sts. 9 and 14. TODO: mention concept of "double scene" by Lars Lönnroth?

P1 Þórr fór ór austr-vegi ok kom at sundi einu. Þórum megum sundsins var

2 ferju-karlinn með skipit. Þórr kallaði:

Thunder journeyed from the Eastern Way and came to a sound. At the other side of the sound was the ferryman with the ship. Thunder called out:

1 "Hverr's sá sveinn sveina · es stendr fyr sundit handan?"

[R 12r/32]

"Who is that swain of swains, standing here across the sound?"

Hann svaraði:

2 "Hverr's sá karl karla · es kallar of váginn?"

[R 12v/1]

He answered:

"Who is that churl of churls, calling out over the wave?"

3 "Fer þú mik of sundit, · føði'k þik á morgun;

[R 12v/2]

- meis hefi'k á baki, · verðr-a matrinn betri. Át'k í hvíld · áðr ek heiman fór,
- síldr ok hafra; saðr em'k enn þess."

[Thunder quoth:]

[R 12v/5]

"Ferry me over the sound, I feed thee in the morning! A basket have I on my back; the food does not get better. I ate for a while before I journeyed from home, herring and oatmeal/he-goats; I am still full from that."

4 "Ár-ligum verkum hrósar þú, verðinum; veitst-at-tu fyr gorla, dopr 'ru þín heim-kynni, · dauð hygg'k at þín móðir sé."

dismal is the state of thy home—I think that thy mother is dead!"

<sup>4</sup> hafra 'oatmeal/he-goats'] The easiest reading here is the acc. pl. of hafr 'he-goat'. Thunder also eats his goats in Yilv 44, where he butchers and cooks them in the evening and brings them back to life by blessing them with his hammer at dawn. Finnur Jónsson (1932) and Pettit (1986) prefer this reading; see also note to next stanza.—Many other scholars have here read an accusative plural of hafri 'oat', i.e. 'porridge, oatmeal'. Stiles (forthcoming TODO) connects this with Indrá's (who is the Vedic equivalent of Thunder) "partner and yokemate" (RV 6.56.2) Pūṣán's eating porridge (e.g. 6.56.1, 57.2). Another similarity Stiles notes between Thunder and Pūṣan is that both have chariots driven by goats (e.g. 6.57.3: "Goats are the draft-animals for the one", 58.2: "Having goats as his horses"). Whether the Vedic tradition has split an original god into two or whether Thunder has absorbed elements of another god is hard to say.

&lt;sup>157</sup>TODO. This is pretty difficult. From the previous stanza vęrðinum seems to be referring to eating.

5 "Dat sęgir þú nú • es hverjum þikkir

"But it is hardly as if thou own three good homesteads; bare-legged thou standest, and hast the gear of a tramp; it is not even as if thou own thy breeches!"

7 "Stýr-ðu hingat eikjunni, • ek mun þér stoðna kenna

[R 12v/9]

eða hverr á skipit • es þú heldr við landit?"

"Steer hither the boat! I will show thee to the harbour—or who owns the ship which thou holdest by the shore?"

"Hildolf he is called, who asked me to hold it, the counsel-wise man who lives in Redeseysound. He bade me not take highwaymen nor horse-thieves; good men only, and those whom I know well—say thy name if thou wilt go over the sound!"

9 "Segja mun'k til nafns míns · þótt ek sekr sjá'k

[R 12v/15]

- φrúð-valdr goða · við þór knátt-u hér déma! Hins vil'k nú spyrja, · hvat þú heitir?"

"I will say my name—although I should be charged—and all my origin: I am Weden's son, Male's brother and Main's father, the strength-wielder of the Gods; with Thunder dost thou here speak! Now I will ask something else: What art thou called?"

10 "Hár-barðr ek heiti, · hyl'k of nafn sjaldan."

[R 12v/18]

"Hoarbeard I am called, seldom I conceal my name."

11 "Hvat skalt-u of nafn hylja · nema þú sakar eigir?"

[R 12v/18]

"Why shalt thou conceal thy name, unless thou have charges?"

12 "En þótt ek sakar eiga, · fyr slíkum sem þú est

[R 12v/19]

2 þá mun'k forða fjorvi mínu · nema ek feigr sé."

"But though I had charges—for such a one as thou art then I will protect my life, unless I be fey<sup>C</sup>."

13 "Harm ljótan mér þikkir í því

[R 12v/21]

"An ugly harm it seems to me to wade o'er the wave to thee, and wet my burden.

I would repay thee, swaddle-swain, for thy mocking words, if I could bring myself over the sound."

14 "Hér mun'k standa · ok þín heðan bíða;

[R 12v/23]

₂ fannt-a-tu mann inn harðara • at Hrungni dauðan."

"Here will I stand, and from here await thee; thou hast not found a harder man since Rungner<sup>P</sup> died!<sup>158</sup>"

<sup>2</sup> ogur 'burden'] The sense of this word is not clear, though it is probably the same as the first element of the compound ogur-stund 'burdensome hour', found in Wayl 42. Some authors have read it as a crude euphemism for 'penis', which would not be out of character for this poem. I however consider the best interpretation to be that of an author whose name I've forgotten (TODO!), namely that Thunder is referring to the food he carries on his back (cf. v. 3).

&lt;sup>163</sup>A remarkable clear statement, the underlying worldview of which is far from unique to this stanza; in Hym 11, for instance, Thunder is described as "the opponent of Rooder", "the friend of manly retinues" and "Wighward", referring to His role in slaying ettins and guarding men and their shrines (wighs<sup>C</sup>). For Thunder's killing of women cf. sts. 37–39 below and Lindow 1988.

<sup>164</sup>We see here a sort of aristocratic, Odinic disregard for lower life and life as a good in itself; where Thunder boasts of saving men, Weden sarcastically responds that he caused the deaths of men so that he could have them for himself.

&lt;sup>165</sup>This story is also referenced in Lock TODO. It is elaborated heavily on in Yilv 45: Thunder, Lock, and the siblings Thelve and Wrash had travelled east for a long time when they discovered a large hall, with an opening on one end, as wide as the building. They took rest inside, but in the middle of the night there was a great earthquake and the ground beneath them trembled. Thunder rose and led the party to a side-room to the right in the middle of the hall. He sat closest to the opening with his hammer ready, while the others sat terrified further inside. At daybreak they left the hall and found a huge ettin named Skrymir (Shrimer<sup>P</sup>) sleeping next to them. His snoring had caused the earth-quakes, and the hall was his mitten; the side-room was the thumb-part.

Bound they Thunder then, with bride's linen, and with the great necklace of the Brisings.

They placed by his side keys to jingle, and women's garments to fall down about his knees, and on the breast broad stones, and skillfully they tipped his head.

 $<sup>^{181}</sup>$ This verse contains an interesting description of Viking age bridal dress: As the everyday manager of the household, keys were the mark of a respectable married woman. The "broad stones" on the breast are probably tortoise brooches, while the tipping of the head refers to some sort of bridal hat (TODO: Literature). Breast-brooches are also mentioned in Wayl 25, 36.

- øxn al-svartir, · jotni at gamni, fjolö á'k meiðma, · fjolö á'k menja;
- 4 einnar mér Freyju · á-vant þykkir."

 $<sup>^{183}</sup>$ Thunder's cart was driven by he-goats, for which he is called (for instance) "the lord of he-goats" in Hym 20, 31. See Encyclopedia.

 $<sup>^{184}</sup>$ Thunder's driving of his chariot is often connected with cosmic disturbance. So, his arrival in Lock (st. 55) is signalled by the mountains quaking. The most similar description to the present stanza is found in Thedwolf's Hvl 14–16, where crags (there likewise bjprg) burst asunder and fires rage before him. A possibly Indo-European parallel to this is the Vedic myth of Indra breaking the mountains and releasing the mountains (as described most famously in RV hymn 1.32). See also Bdr 3 for a related description of the god Weden's riding.

Here march to the estate golden-horned cows, all-black oxen, for the ettin's [= my] pleasure.

A multitude I own of treasures, a multitude I own of necklaces; only Frow I think myself missing."

2 øxn al-svartir 'all-black oxen'] Formulaic, also occurring in Hym 18. That all-black (i.e. spotlessly black) oxen were most valued is seen by the pairing with "golden-horned". One may also compare Saxo (I.8.12), where the hero Hadding has to atone for his slaying of a heavenly being by the blooting of dark-coloured victims (furvae hostiae): Siquidem propiciandorum numinum gratia Frø deo rem diuinam furuis hostiis fecit. Quem litationis morem annuo feriarum circuitu repetitum posteris imitandum reliquit. Frøblod Sueones uocant. 'In order to mollify the divinities he [= Hadding] did indeed make a holy sacrifice of dark-coloured victims to the god Frø. He repeated this mode of propitiation at an annual festival and left it to be imitated by his descendants. The Swedes call it Frøblot.' This ancient ritual taboo is further paralleled e.g. by the Tanakh, where animals dedicated to Yhwh were to be without blemish (D'ani, Leviticus 1:3)

<sup>5</sup> ástir mínar, alla hylli 'my love, [and] all [my] holdness'] Probably formulaic. There are no preserved parallels in poetry, but there seems to be one in Yilv 49 (excerpt):

En er goðin vitkuðust, þá mélti Frigg ok spurði, hverr sá véri með ásum, er eignast vildi "allar ástir mínar (so TW; ástir hennar 'her loves' SU) ok bylli, ok vili bann ríða á hel-veg ok freista, ef hann fái fundit Baldr, ok bjóða Helju út-lausn, ef hon vill láta fara Baldr heim í Ás-garð." 'But when the gods came to their wits [after Balder's death], then Frie spoke and asked which one among the Eese would own "all my loves and holdness, and will ride onto the Hellway and see if he can find Balder, and offer Hell a ransom if she will let Balder come home to Osyard."

We can tell from the citation of a Leed-meter stanza at the end of ch. 49 that Snorre knew one or more now-lost Eddic poems about Balder's death (cf. Yilv 37, where Shir is retold in prose, and then the final st. is cited), and it seems that one of these contained the same two long-lines as the present stanza. For such a sharing of lines cf. e.g. st. 14 above, the first three long-lines of which are identically shared with Bdr 1.

 $<sup>^{187}</sup>$ The sister, who was apparently the one who asked for the Hammer, now has the audacity to ask Thunder (disguised as Frow) to give her the very rings on his hands.

<sup>4</sup> Várar 'Ware'] A minor goddess presiding over romantic relationships and weddings. See Encyclopedia.

The Lay of Hymer (Hymiskviða)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C10th (0.694)-early C11th (0.268)

Meter: Firnwordslaw

Attested in two manuscripts, R and A. The two are surprisingly consistent; all stanzas are shared, and come in the same order. The title Hymis-kviða 'the Lay of Hymer' comes from A. R instead has the title Pórr dró Mið-garðs-orm 'Thunder pulled the Midden-yardswyrm' in typical red ink.

The poem is a comedy about Thunder's adventures among the Ettins. This was likely a popular genre, and is also represented by Thrim. In spite of these similarities of contents the two poems are far apart stylistically. Whereas Thrim is written in a simple and sparse style with free Firnwordslaw meter and few kennings, the form of Firnwordslaw used in Hym is unusually strict, almost syllable-counting, and the stanzas are filled with rare kennings and difficult grammatical constructions, often in forced word order. In this way Hym is more akin to Scoldic poetry in intricate measures like Drightquethed than to typical Eddic poetry in Firnwordslaw. Because of this it seems likely that the anonymous poet was highly trained in the Scoldic arts, and familiar with composition in more advanced meters. (See TODO: Difference between Scoldic and Eddic).

Apart from meter and style, the Scoldic composition context of Hym is also supported by both its dating and subject. Thunder's fishing expedition was a very popular myth in the Wiking age, and there are five extant Scoldic poetic fragments (TODO: list them) that deal with it. The story is also retold in Yilv, and attested pictorally on the Swedish Altuna runestone and others (TODO).

The Scoldic fragments are very incomplete, and (in their presently reduced form) mostly focus on the subject of Thunder facing off against the hooked Wyrm pressed to the gunwale. In some of the fragments the encounter ends with the cowardly Hymer cutting off the fishing line and the Wyrm sinking back into the sea (the version preferred by Snorre)—in others Thunder strikes the head off the Wyrm. There are some interesting verbal correspondences between these fragments and Hym—most strikingly the kenning for the Middenyardswyrm in st. 22/4 below—that may also support a common composition context.

Yilv 48 tells a more complete narrative, here paraphrased for shortness' sake:

Thunder goes out into Middenyard in the shape of a young man (ungr drengr), without his chariot, his goats, or his typical travelling gear. In the evening he comes to the ettin Hymer and begs for lodgings. At dawn Hymer plans to go fishing, and so Thunder asks to join in. Hymer insults Thunder's small stature and youth, and questions his ability to go on such a long and arduous trip as he usually takes. Thunder, angered, says that he will row very far, and then asks Hymer what bait they will use. Hymer tells him to get his own bait, and so he turns to Hymer's flock of oxen and tears off the head from his greatest ox, one named Heavenrid. The two go out to sea, and Thunder rows far past Hymer's usual fishing spot. Hymer, unhappy, warns him that if they row any further out they'll be in danger of the Middenyardswyrm, but Thunder goes on. Eventually Thunder puts away the oars, readies a fishing line, hooks the ox-head and lowers it. The Wyrm soon bites, and struggles so hard that Thunder is pressed against the gunwale. This angers the god, and he brings himself into his Os-might. Strengthened, he pulls back with such force that his feet go through the bottom of the ship and press into the sea-floor; the Wyrm's head goes up against the gunwale. The two archenemies furiously stare at each other, Thunder "sharpening his eyes" and the Wyrm spitting venom. Hymer is frightened, reaches for his bait-cutting knife, and cuts off the line—the Wyrm then sinks back into the sea. Thunder throws the hammer after it, "and men say that he struck off the monster's head, but I think it true to tell thee, that the Middenyardswyrm still lives and lies in the outer sea." Thunder then punches Hymer's ear with his fist so that he is thrown overboard head-first; the god then wades back to land.

This account is clearly based on several sources, possibly including the present poem. The most notable correspondence is when it is said that Miðgarðs-ormr gein yfir uxa-bofuðit, en ongullinn vá í góminn orminum 'The Middenyardswyrm yawned over the oxhead, and the hook went into the roof of the wyrm's mouth', which is decently close to st. 22 below. The name Heavenrid (Himinbrjóðr) is otherwise only found in thules listing names of oxen, and the interesting detail of Thunder's feet going through the boat is only paralleled by the Swedish Altuna stone (though see note to st. 34/2 below).

While Yilv 48, the Scoldic fragments, and Hym all share the central narrative of the fishing expedition, Hym has several additional narratives woven into it. (I mean not to say that Hym consists of multiple originally separate poems—unlike, say, High, which has noticable differences of style and language between its constituent strands, Hym comes off as a strong stylistic and narrative whole, composed by a single poet and thereafter transmitted faithfully.)

One may roughly identify the following narrative divisions in Hym, of which only numbers 2–4 are found in the other sources for the myth of Thunder's fishing:

- 1. 1–6 Thunder attempts to force the ettin Eagre to host a banquet for the Gods; Eagre in turn asks for a cauldron big enough to brew enough ale for them all.
- 2. 7–16 Thunder and Tew go to visit the stingy ettin Hymer, who owns such a cauldron; horrified at Thunder's great appetite during the evening, Hymer tells them that they must eat fish the next.
- 3. 17–19 Thunder says that he will go fishing if he is given bait; Hymer challenges him with killing one of his oxen for bait, after which Thunder tears off the head of one.
- 4. 20–25 Hymer, Thunder and Tew go fishing; Hymer pulls up some whales; with the ox-head as bait Thunder manages to hook the Middenyardswyrm itself; he loses it.
- 26–27 Hymer challenges Thunder to carry the boat and whales back to his farm; he does.

- 6. 28–32 Hymer challenges Thunder to break a supposedly indestructible chalice; he succeeds by smashing it against the ettin's forehead.
- 7. 33–36 Thunder and Tew depart with the cauldron; they find themselves followed by a troop led by Hymer; Thunder kills them all.
- 8. 37–38 Lock makes the leg of one of Thunder's goats halt.
- 9. 39 Thunder returns to the Gods with Hymer's cauldron; they host a banquet.

The fishing expedition, found at the very center of the poem, is thus framed by the unique narrative of Thunder and Tew obtaining a huge cauldron from Hymer for the sake of brewing ale, and several other superfluous narratives scattered throughout. The poet has not been entirely successful in his endeavour, and there are several loose strands; most notably Tew, who has nothing to do with the fishing expedition, probably because he was not originally in it, and who has no reaction at all to the murder of his father. The function of Lock making one of Thunder's goats halt is also unclear, and he does not appear anywhere else in the poem.

The poem has some interesting reoccurring themes. The "otherness" of the Ettins, specifically Hymer, is constantly emphasized in several ways:

- they live far to the East (st. 5) in an inhospitable, frozen climate (st. 10), associated with mountains (sts. 2, 17) and lava-fields (st. 36)
- they are physically deviant, being misshapen (st. 10), grey-haired (st. 16), many-headed (sts. 8, 35), and very hard-boned (sts. 30–31); they are even likened to apes (st. 20), whales (st. 36) and Danes (st. 17; see note!),
- they are stingy and inhospitable (sts. 9, 16),
- and sarcastic and cowardly (st. 19-20, 25-26, 28-32).

In these ways the Ettins oppose the Old Germanic social norms as represented by the Gods, who live in a lush green climate and are young, beautiful and generous. The one exception is of course Tew's mother in st. 8, who is light-haired (in contrast to the swarthy grandmother, presumably) and generous. Perhaps the poet is implying that it is from her that Tew has inherited his good traits?

The last point, viz. sarcasm and cowardice, is seen throughout the poem in the way Thunder comically humiliates the Ettins, especially by completing challenges issued to him. These follow a similar format: Thunder is given a near-impossible test of strength, which he shortly completes through a mix of physical strength and cleverness, humiliating the challenger. These tests are finding a huge kettle (st. 3, explicitly called Eagre's "revenge" (hefnd), taking one of Hymer's oxen for bait (st. 17–18), carrying home Hymer's whales and boat (st. 26), breaking Hymer's finest chalice (st. 28), and perhaps also taking away the kettle (st. 33)—though that may just be Hymer's wishing to finally be rid of the pestering gods.

Much like in Thrim the conflict is finally resolved with righteous hammer-slaughter. After the Gods leave, Hymer tries to get his revenge by ambushing them, but Thunder takes his trusty hammer and kills them all. The poem is clearly humorous and meant to be performed before an audience (see st. 38 where the poet directly addresses the listeners). The original performance context may perhaps be gleaned from the difficult final stanza. TODO: It hints at a performance at a harvest bloot.

3 Sveinn 'The swain'] Thunder was apparently in the shape of a youth. This detail is also found in Yilv 48, where Snorre writes: Gekk hann út of Miðgarð svá sem ungr drengr ... 'He went out about Middenyard in the shape of a young warrior'.

4 oxi ... alsvartr 'all-black ... ox'] Formulaic, also occuring in Thrim 23; see note there for further parallels to the custom of sacrificing animals of certain colours. It seems that all-black oxen were thought the noblest, and so Thunder's slaying one instead of an inferior beast is probably intended to humiliate the stingy Hymer. In Yilv 48 we read that: Hann tók inn mesta uxann, er Himin-brjóðr hét, ok sleit af hofuðit ok fór með til sjávar. 'He took the greatest ox, which was called Heavenrid, and tore of its head and went with it to the sea'.

The lavafield-monsters [ETTINS] bounded and the bedrock resounded; the ancient earth moved all at once; sank thereafter that fish [= Middenyardswyrm] into the sea.

It is of course impossible to know what exact form it had, but for the reader's enjoyment, based on other poets and the account in Yilv (see introduction to the present poem) I've composed the following variant lines: unds vinr Hrungnis · vað Þórs of skar 'until the friend of Rungner [= Hymer] Thunder's fishing-line did cut'; unds folr Hymir · fekk á saxi 'until pale Hymer grasped the knife'.

<sup>1</sup> hrutu] so A; hlumõu 'dashed' R. End-rhyme is also used by the poet in st. 3/3.

<sup>1</sup> Hraun-golkn 'The lavafield-monsters'] Both mss. have <code>brein-</code>, which may mean either 'clean' or 'reindeer', neither of which fit. On the other hand <code>braun ONP</code>: 'stone/barren area, wasteland; lavafield' is well attested in scoldic kennings for ettins. The precise meaning of <code>galkn</code> 'monster' (plural <code>golkn</code>) is unclear; but it is attested in three scoldic verses, always in kennings of the type "troll-woman of the shield <code>[AXE]</code>". While the mss. spelling 'galkn' (norm. <code>gálkn</code>) could reflect either singular and plural, the form of the verb is plural. This means that the word cannot be referring to the Middenyardswyrm, refuting the interpretation of Larrington (2014): "the sea-wolf shrieked".

<sup>3 [...]]</sup> It is very likely that a line is missing here, since the stanzas in the poem otherwise consistently have four lines. In other tellings of the myth it is at this point that Hymer cuts Thunder's fishing line, so that is probably what has been lost.

<sup>2 [...]]</sup> Another missing line. As said in the previous stanza the meter usually requires four lines, and also the first half of the sentence is incomplete without a verb.

<sup>3</sup> ár 'in the early morning'] Finnur Jónsson (1932) suggests  $sv\acute{a}'t$  at  $\acute{p}r$  'so that by the oar', but this burdens the meter. Assuming my interpretation is correct, the three would have been out fishing throughout the night.

<sup>197</sup>Hymer tells Thunder, who having let go of the Wyrm now has nothing to show for the trip, that he can accomplish something half as good as the pulling of the whales if he carries them home or ties up the boat (by the shore).

The father of Moody [= Thunder] grasped the brim, and stepped down through the floor in the hall;<sup>199</sup> Sib's husband [= Thunder] heaved the cauldron up onto his head, and at his heels the rings clattered.

<sup>2</sup> ol-kjól 'ale-ship [CAULDRON]']  $\rho l$ -kjól is the accusative of  $\rho l$ -kjóll, but in this context (CV: koma, B) we would expect the dative  $\rho l$ -kjóli. The meter does not allow for this, however.

<sup>2</sup> hofi 'hall'] This is the only Old Norse occurrence of the word bof in the sense 'hall, house'; it otherwise only means 'temple' (hove<sup>C</sup>). The West Germanic cognates consistently mean 'hall', and that is probably the original sense, so it is unclear if this is an instance of foreign influence (if so, most likely Anglo-Saxon) or just a poetic archaism.

<sup>4</sup> hringar skullu 'the rings clattered'] i.e. the chain-links. This detail is mentioned in an example sentence contrasting long and short phonemes in FGT (1950): heyrði til hoddu, þá er Þórr bar hverinn 'the sound of the pot-links (badda) was heard when Thunder bore the cauldron'. According to Finnur Jónsson (1932) the chain (or hadda) on a Wiking-age cauldron would have reached across, in which case this would be a reference to the cauldron's enormous size, with its diameter—mentioned in st. 5 as one rest<sup>C</sup>—being roughly the same as Thunder's height.

<sup>1</sup> ér 'ye'] The audience. As pointed out by Finnur Jónsson (1932) an address to the audience of this type is otherwise unparalleled in Eddic mythological poetry. Such are however fairly common in Scaldic poetry, with which this poem shares several traits (see Introduction above).

<sup>2</sup> goŏ-móʻlugra 'god-speaking'] This word is a hapax, but easily understood. One who is goŏ-móʻlugr is 'able to speak about the god-lore', i.e. 'versed in the mythology'.

<sup>4</sup> eitt hor-meitiö 'one ... flax-cutting'] A very obscure kenning. La Farge and Tucker (1992) give several interpretations, viz. eitr-hor-meitir 'poison-rope-cutter [SNAKE > WINTER]', eitr-orm-meitir 'poison-worm-injurer' [WINTER]. The solution with the minimal amount of emendation is to read eitt 'one' as modifying eltor 'ale-feast', and hverjan 'every' as modifying hor-meititor 'flax-cutting', a compound made up of horr 'flax, cord' and meita 'to cut', seemingly referring to an obscure harvest festival. This interpretation is by no means certain.

4 mann-gi ... vinr 'none ... words.'] i.e. "none of them say anything good about you." — The (lack of) alliteration here is very notable, and also occurs in st. 10 (between Vi∂arr and ulf𝔞𝑛, see note there). It could simply be explained by the line being corrupt, but as there are no signs of that we ought to look for other explanations. I see two, namely that (a) the semi-vowel v(/w/) is participating in vowel-alliteration with o. Such an alliteration between v and true vowels is never encountered in Scoldic poetry, but it might have been existed in the simpler Eddic styles; or that (2) the poem (or at least the relevant lines) is of such old age that it was composed before the North Germanic loss of v before rounded vowels. This is supported by the fact that in both the present st. and st. 10 the words beginning with vowels (orð 'word', ulfv 'wolf') have cognates in other Germanic languages that begin with w, and in the case of the word ulfv this consonant is also attested in several old Scandinavian runic inscriptions. For metrical reasons the lines must postdate syncope, but on the basis of three clearly related C7th runestones from Blekinge (from Stentoften, Gummarp, and Istaby; DR 357–359) the loss of w before rounded vowels is shown also to have occurred after some syncope (so DR 359 haþuwulafæ  $Haþuwul^of𝔞$ a). Of course, even if the alliteration indeed is on v, this does not require dating the whole poem to the late Proto-Norse period (indeed, according to the analysis done by Sapp (2022), it is not even the linguistically oldest poem preserved); the older forms could simply be an archaism.

A C7th Proto-Norse form of the c-line might be: *mannagí 's þér in worðé winir.

4 lít'k þér þat fyr lygi] 'litt ec þer þat fyr lygi' R. A variety of emendations have been proposed for this line. Simplest would be lítt es þér þat fyr lygi 'that is little [punishment] for thee for lying'. Based on the similarity of \dot{\tau} (= tt) and c Finnur Jónsson (1932) gives lykak þér þat fyr lygi 'so I would bring to thee for thy lie'.
<sup>209</sup>As explicitly said in P1, the rule of grith<sup>C</sup> (a truce of non-violence, even between enemies; see Encyclopedia) applied inside the hall. Being bound to it, Bray (or the other gods) cannot injure Lock.
     [Loki] kvaŏ:
   15
             "Snjallr est í sessi, · skal-at-tu svá gera, hyggsk vétr hvatr fyrir."

[Lock] quoth: "Valiant art thou in the seat; [but] thou shalt not do thus,
O Bray the bench-ornamenter!
Go thou to fight if thou art wroth;
the bold thinks not in advance.<sup>210</sup>"
<sup>210</sup>Lock attacks Bray's invoking of the rule of grith; a truly brave man would not care about such a thing.

[Weden] quoth: "Know that if I gave to them I should not have given, to the slower men victory: for eight winters wast thou beneath the earth [as] a milch cow and a woman, and thou hast there borne children, and I've judged that a degenerate's nature."

4 kýr mólkandi 'a milch cow'] May also be read as "milking cows", the nom. sg. kýr being identical to the nom./acc. pl. kýr, and mólka meaning both 'to milk' and 'to give milk'. "Milch cow" is preferable for two reasons, viz. (i) that the phrase is followed by ok kona 'and a woman' rather than sem kona 'as a woman' or similar, and (ii) that it agrees with another instance where Lock is gives birth in the form of a female animal (cows, of course, only giving milk after calving), namely the episode of the building of the wall around Osyard as told in Yilv 42.

[Loki] kvaő:

In the likeness of a sorcerer thou journeyedst among the nations of men, and I've judged that a degenerate's nature."

Wroth against thee are the Eese and Ossens: grieved wilt thou journey home."

1–2 Fló ... gala; 'False ... thee'] The language is again strikingly similar to High, particularly 29/3–4: "A quick-spoken tongue—unless it be held in place—oft sings evil [into being] for itself (opt sér ó-gótt of gglr)." and 116/3–4: "a false-counseling tongue (flá-róð tunga) brought his life to its end, and in no way over a truthful charge."

From Lock (Frá Loka)

The myth told here is known from two other places. Closest at hand is Wsp Yilv 50 has a longer but somewhat different account: the Eese captured Lock's two sons, Wonnel and "Nare or Narve". They turned Wonnel into a wolf (vargr, which also means 'outlaw') and had him tear his brother Narve apart. Narve's intestines were then taken and used to bind Lock on top of three pointed stones, with one digging into his shoulder-blades, the other digging into his loins, and the third digging into his houghs. The intestines then turned into iron.

Since the author of Yilv knew Wsp, it is possible that he combined a text similar to From Lock with this st., interpreting Vála víg-bond as 'Wonnel's war-bonds' and vargr as 'wolf' rather than the more probable 'outlaw'. Wonnel is otherwise only known as the son of Weden, and there is no reason as to why he could not have bound Lock. For further differences between Yilv and From Lock see introduction to From Lock below.

- P7 En eptir þetta falst Loki í Fránangrs-forsi í lax líki. Þar tóku ésir hann.
  - 2 Hann var bundinn með þormum sonar Nara; en Narfi, sonr hans, varð at vargi. Skaði tók eitr-orm ok festi upp yfir and-lit Loka; draup þar ór
  - 4 eitr. Sigyn, kona Loka, sat þar ok helt munn-laug undir eitrit. En er munn-laugin var full bar hon út eitrit, en meðan draup eitrit á Loka. Þá
  - 6 kipptist hann svá hart við, at þaðan af skalf jorð oll; þat eru nú kallaðir land-skjálftar.

But after this Lock hid himself in the Freenangersforce in the form of a salmon. There the Eese took him. He was bound with the intestines of his son Nare, but his son Narve became an outlaw. Shede took a venomous serpent and fastened it over Lock's face; out of it dripped venom. Syein, Lock's wife, sat there and held a basin [for hand-washing] under the venom. But when the basin was full she bore out the venom, and meanwhile the venom dripped on Lock. Then he revolted so hard that thence all the earth quaked; that is now called earth-quakes.

The Speeches of Shirner (Skírnismól)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C10th (0.897) Meter: Leed-meter, Galderlaw (TODO)

The whole poem is attested in both R and A. The name Skírnismól 'Speeches of Shirner' comes from A; R has in the typical titular red ink For Skírnis 'Shirner's journey'.

The same myth is told in prose in Yilv 37. A single stanza of the present poem is quoted there, namely the last one, with some minor differences in wording that would seem to stem from oral tradition (see Note to st. 42 below). It is unlikely that the author of Yilv knew of the narrative through an oral tradition which included only the last verse, chiefly since his paraphrase does not add a single detail not found in the present poem, but on the other hand condenses and abbreviates. So, Shirner's journey and curse (roughly sts. 10–38 here) is simply summarized in the following manner: "Then Shirner journeyed and requested the woman [i.e. Gird] for him [i.e. Free], and received her promise, that nine nights later she would come to the place which is called Barrey, and have a wedding with Free." The summarising of a narrative mythic poem with a single verse quotation in the form of a dialogue-stanza is something done several times in Yilv; see Eddic fragments from Snorre's Edda below.

On the other hand, the paragraph in Yilv 37 corresponding to what is here P1 is much more detailed and reads: "Gymer was a man called, and his woman Earbode; she was of the lineage of mountain-risers. Their daughter is Gird, who is fairest of all women. It was one day when Free had gone to Lithshelf and looked about all the Homes, but when he looked to the north he saw on a farm a great and fine house, and to that house walked a woman, and when she lifted her hands and closed the doors before her, then it did shine from her hands both into the air and onto the waters, and all the homes were brightened by her. And that beauty, which he had seen in that holy seat, harmed him so that he walked away filled with pain, and when he came home he spoke nothing; he neither slept nor drank; nobody dared to get words out of him. Then Nearth had Shirner, Free's shoe-swain, called unto himself, and asked him to go to Free and ask him to speak, [...]"

[R 11r/17, A 2r/18]

[R 11r/15, A 2r/17]

<sup>4</sup> afi 'man'] While this word usually means 'father' or 'grandfather', it must here certainly mean 'man' without a connotation of old age. See further CV.

5 "Muni þína · hykk-a svá mikla vesa, 2 at þú mér seggr né segir; ungir saman · vórum í ár-daga,

4 vel méttim tveir trúask."
Shirner [quoth]: "Thy liking I do not think so great, that thou, O youth, should not tell me [of it].

Young together were we in days of yore; we two might well trust each other."

2 seggr 'youth'] This word usually means simply 'man', but it seems to have a specific connotation with youth. Its original meaning is 'messenger', and the semantic shift is thus: 'messenger' > 'young man' > 'warrior/man'. The sense of 'young man' is also seen in Wayl 23, where it is used in reference to king Nithad's two young sons. In the present stanza it answers Free's addressing Shirner as seggr hinn ungi 'the young youth'; Shirner points out that the two are of equal age, and so Free is as much of a young man as he.

<sup>1–4</sup> berr 'bears'; mun vegask, ef sá 's horskr es heft 'will strike, if he is wise who owns it'] In his response Free replaces the subjunctive verb forms (beri 'might bear', vegisk 'might strike') with indicative and future forms, giving a sense of certainity and authority. The steed and sword are faultless, and if Shirner fails on the mission, it would be only due to his own fault ("if he is sharp who owns it.").

- 1 þría stafi 'three staves' ] Three runic letters (or phrases) representing the three following words (ergi 'degeneracy' etc.). The ritual practice of carving "three staves" is first found on the C7th Gummarp stone: habuwolafa sate staba þria fff 'Hathwolf placed three staves: fff', where the f-rune ( $\not$ ) stands for its name fee<sup>C</sup> (i.e. 'wealth, cattle') and is thus meant to bring wealth.
- 2 ergi ok óói ok ó·bola 'degeneracy and madness and restlessness'] Both ergi 'degeneracy' and ó·boli 'restlessness' (here probably with a sexual connotation), are found in the love magic charm on the rune stick B257 from Bryggen (edited below under Galders). ergi is also found in the curse-formula on the C7th Proto-Norse runestones from Stentoften and Björketorp. See further introduction to B257.

<sup>4</sup> otul ... yrmlingi 'fierce ... the young serpent'] A person of noble stock being recognised as such through their appearance is a motif in Norse literature. Cf. esp. the incident at the beginning of HHund II, where Hallow, disguised as a thrall-woman, is almost caught due to his unslavelike eyes, which are, as in the present stanza, likewise said to be otul 'fierce, terrible'.

The Lay of Wayland (Volundarkviða)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C10th (0.428)-early C11th (0.475)

Meter: Firnwordslaw

The Lay of Wayland (Wayl) is a story of immense psychological complexity, one of the masterpieces of Norse narrative poetry.

The poem begins with a prose introduction, which survives in both R and A.

Wayland gets his revenge on the whole royal household. He murders Nithad's two young sons (affectionately, his "bear-cubs") and thus ends his male lineage. Likewise he defangs Nithad's "cunning wife" (she is never called anything else) by reducing her once powerful counsels to cold words; and finally he rapes Beadhild, depriving her of her maidenhood and value in marriage. They are thus reduced to the same state of complete powerlessness as he himself experienced, something clearly seen in the repetition of the adjective viljalauss 'powerless'; in v. 12 it describes Wayland after he wakes in shackles, but in v. 31 Nithad uses it to refer to his own mental state after the deaths of his sons. This sense of hopelessness is also seen in Beadhild's haunting concluding speech. "I knew by naught struggle against him; I could by naught struggle against him."

From the other versions of the story it is known that Beadhild gave birth to a son, Woody (OE Wudga, Thdr Viðga, in Danish ballads Vidrik Verlandsøn). He went on to become a great hero, and in the later heroic ballads by far eclipses his father. His birth seems heavily foreshadowed by Wayland forcing Nithad to swear an oath in v. 33, but he is nowhere directly mentioned in the poem, probably for artistic reasons.

Apart from this lay there is one other telling of the full story, namely the Strand of Wayland the Smith in Thdr. While written in Old Norse, it is clear from the proper names and content that it is based on German sources (probably heroic ballads). Thus the native form Volundr is replaced with Velent [sic], Niðuðr with Niðungr. Interestingly there is a note within it showing that the native form was still known, namely about "Velent, the excellent smith, whom Warrings (Væringjar) call Wayland (Volundr)". Apparently Wayland was so famous that "all men seem to praise his workmanship so, that the maker of any smith's work which is made better than other works, is called a Wayland (Volundr) with regards to workmanship."

Far more stark than minor differences of language is that of tone. The psychological complexity and tension of the older redaction is almost entirely gone: Wayland is no longer a mysterious wild man, but a chivalrous knight who can escape from any peril through his ingenuity and craftmanship. He is not kidnapped out of Nithad's greed, nor hamstrung out of the suspicion of his cruel wife, but rather a loyal servant of Nithad's, banished from the kingdom after defending himself against the king's corrupt steward, and hamstrung after being caught attempting to poison the king's food in revenge.

Most frustratingly the personality of Beadhild is entirely expulged. She is the anonymous "king's daughter", an unnamed maiden (jungfrú, a borrowing from Low German) who is peacefully seduced by Wayland and quickly falls in love with him. Likewise the person of Nithad's cunning wife is completely gone, and the murder of his sons no longer ends his lineage, since he has another, older son who survives him and takes over the kingdom. Wayland still flies away laughing after telling Nithad what he has done, but only four years (his son with Beadhild is three years old) later reconciliates with Nithad's son, retrieves Beadhild and their son and lives a long life as a famous craftsman.

With this it is clearly seen that the story by the time of the Thdr had been heavily distorted, a tragic victim of medieval romantic sensibilities. It does not have any high literary value, but is of interest since it shows the wide reception and variation of the narrative.

Finally there are also traces of the story in the Anglo-Saxon tradition, where it is alluded to in both Walder and Dear, the latter of which particularly emphasising the powerlessness felt by Wayland and Beadhild (thus being much closer in spirit to the present poem than to Thdr). Parts of the narrative are depicted on the early C8th Frank's casket, where it is as prominent as the depiction of the Adoration of the Magi—a true testament to the weight with which it was regarded within that culture.

To illustrate the narrative correspondences and differences of the various redactions, I present the following table:

- maðr, svá at menn viti í fornum sǫgum. Níðuðr konungr lét hann hǫndum taka, svá sem hér er um kveðit:

Nithad was a king in Sweden called. He had two sons and one daughter; she was called Beadhild. Three brothers were there, the sons of a king of the Finns. One was called Slayfinn, another Agle, the third Wayland. They travelled on skis and hunted wild animals; they came into the Wolfdales and made for themselves houses there. A body of water lies there, which is called Wolfsea. Early in the morning they found on its shore three women who were spinning linen. Near the women were their swan-hames<sup>C</sup>; they were Walkirries. Two of them were the daughters of king Ladwigh: Ladguth Swanwhite and Harware Allwit. The third was Alerune, daughter of Kear<sup>P</sup> of Walland<sup>G231</sup>. The men took the women to their halls with them. Agle got Alerune, and Slayfinn Swanwhite, and Wayland Allwit. The couples lived there for seven winters; then the women left to attend battles, and did not return. Then Agle left on skis to look for Alerune, and Slayfinn looked for Swanwhite, and Wayland stayed in the Wolfdales. He was the most skilled craftsman whom men know of in the ancient saws. King Nithad had him captured, as it is here sung of:

1 Meyjar flugu sunnan · Myrk-við í gognum al-vitr ungar, • ør-lǫg drýgja; þér á sévar-strǫnd • settusk at hvílask drósir suð-rønar, · dýrt lín spunnu.

Maidens flew from the south through Mirkwood<sup>232</sup>—young allwits<sup>233</sup>— to fulfill orlay<sup>C</sup>. They on the lake-shore set down to rest; the southern ladies span expensive linen.

2 ør-log drýgja; 'fulfill orlay'] That is, to fulfill their destinies, and act according to their innate nature, as described in P1 and st. 3. I disagree with Clunies Ross (2005)[103], who translates this phrase as 'engage in war', through seeing the latter word as a borrowing from OE (cf. Dutch oorlog 'war'). In fact, the expression drýgja ørlog is also attested in OE, namely in 1. 29 of a poem on the Christian Doomsday (TODO?), about a man going to Hell for his sins: ond þonne á tó ealdre · or-leg dreógeð 'and then for ever and ever [he] suffers his orlay'

They stayed then for seven winters after that, and all the eighth they yearned, and the ninth did need divorce them.—
The maidens longed for the mirky wood: the young allwits, to fulfill orlay.<sup>234</sup>

4 Kom þar af veiði • veðr-eygr skyti [R 18r/26]

 $<sup>^{232}</sup>$ Mirkwood is surely referenced for its association with the war-ravaged lands of the Gots and Huns; a natural environment for Walkirries.

The fixed variant line bón/bann inn of gekk · end-langan sal 'he/she inside did go the endlong hall' (i.e. 'through the entire length of the hall', cf. English "livelong") occurs in three other places: sts. 16 and 30 of the present poem, and st. 3 of Ord. end-langr salr 'endlong hall' occurs in two additional places: st. 27 of Thrim and st. 3 of Shir.

&lt;sup>237</sup>Nithad's men take off all the seven hundred rings (presumably to count them) and then put them back on, but they keep just one. This bigh is probably the one mentioned in sts. 17 and 26, since Beadhild has it already when Wayland is brought back after being captured. Finnur Jónsson (1932) writes (My translation from the Danish.): "The ring which Nithad kept must have had special properties, and distinguished itself before others. There is no doubt that the ring is a flight ring; whether this was clear to the poet is however questionable. This much is certain, that Wayland seems to be able to fly away only after he has got back the ring; that is, the one which Beadhild brings him." —The reader may for himself judge the plausibility of this, but it seems that Wayland, being an exceptionally handy craftsman, may just as well have crafted wings for himself without need for magical rings. This agrees with the Low German verison and the Daedalus myth, for both of which see the introduction to the present poem.

Now called Nithad, lord of the Nears: "Where gottest thou, Wayland, leader of elves, our ounces, in the Wolfdales? Gold was there not on Grane<sup>P</sup>'s path; far I've thought our land from the fells of the Rhine.<sup>238</sup>"

Eddic fragments from Snorre's Edda

Numerous Eddic stanzas are quoted in Snorre's Edda, whether isolated or in sequence. The majority of them are taken from longer Eddic poems preserved in full in other manuscripts (primarily R and A), but a few are found nowhere else; it is these fragments that are edited in the present section.

The fragments have some things in common: they are generally pieces of spoken dialogue quoted in the context of longer narrative prose sections, and are, with one exception (Homedall's galder, see below), not introduced by reference to their source, but rather with phrases like þá kvað hann 'then he quoth'.

This half-stanza is quoted in Yilv 2, being the second Eddic verse in the text, following High 1 in the same chapter, which is uttered by Yilfer himself when he enters the hall of the Eese. The whole section is clearly referencing other Eddic mythic wisdom contests and particularly reminiscent of Webth.

P1 Hann sá þrjú háséti ok hvert upp frá oðru, ok sátu þrír menn sinn í hverju.

- <sup>2</sup> Pá spurði hann, hvert nafn hofðingja þeira véri. Sá svarar, er hann leiddi inn, at sá, er í inu neðsta háséti sat, var konungr, ok heitir Hárr, en þar nést
- 4 sá, er heitir Jafnhárr, en sá ofast, er þriði heitir. Þá spyrr Hárr komandann, hvárt fleira er erendi hans, en heimill er matr ok drykkr honum sem ollum
- 6 þar í Háva holl. Hann segir, at fyrst vill hann spyrja, ef nokkurr er fróðr maðr inni. Hárr segir, at hann komi eigi heill út, nema hann sé fróðari,

He [= Yilfer] saw three high-seats, and each was higher than the other. And there sat three men, each in his seat. Then he asked what the names of those chieftains were. He who led him in answers, that the one who sat in the lowest high-seat was a king, and is called High, and there next that one who is called Evenhigh, and uppermost the one who is called Third. Then High asks the guest whether he has any other errands, and says that food and drink will be freely offered to him, like it is to all men there in the High One's hall. He [= Yilfer], asks if anyone inside is a learned man. High says, that he will not come out whole, unless he be more learned [than he],

```

"and stand forth while thou askest; he shall sit who speaks!"

The following passage is almost the whole of Yilv 23, excepting at the very end svá er sagt 'so it is said', after which is quoted Grmn 11. The myth described is found in typically corrupted form in Saxo (TODO), who also paraphrases the same two stanzas. See Hopkins (2021).

- P2 Inn þriði áss er sá, er kallaðr er Njorðr. Hann býr á himni, þar sem heitir

The third Os is that one who is called Nearth. He lives in the heaven in the place called Nowetowns. He rules the course of the wind, and stills sea and fire. On him shall one call for sea-faring and for hunting. He is so wealthy and blessed with money that he may give them a wealth of lands or loose property; on him shall one call for that sake. Nearth is not of the lineage of the Eese. He was brought up in Wanehome, but the Wanes gave him as a hostage to the gods, and in return got as hostage that one who is called Heener. He was used to reconcile the gods and the Wanes. Nearth has that woman who is called Shede, the daughter of the ettin Thedse. Shede wishes to have the dwelling which her father had owned, which lies on some fells in the place called Thrimham—but Nearth wishes to live by the sea. They agreed with each other that they would live for nine nights in Thrimham, but the other nine at Nowetowns. But when Nearth came back to the Nowetowns from the fell, he quoth this:

2 "Leið erumk fjoll, · vas'k-a lengi á,
2 nétr einar níu;
ulfa þytr · mér þótti illr vesa

4 hjá songvi svana."

"The fells are loathsome to me; I was not long thereon—only for nine nights.

The howling of the wolves thought me evil, compared to the song of swans."

P3 þá kvað Skaði þetta:

Then Shede quoth this:

- 3 "Sofa né mát'k-a'k · sévar bęðjum á 2 fugls jarmi fyrir;
  sá mik vekr · es af víði kømr
  4 morgun hverjan már."
- "I could not sleep on the beds of the sea for the bleating of the bird. He awakes me, when from the wide sea he comes, every morning, the mew."
- P4 Pá fór Skaði upp á fjall ok byggði í Prym-heimi, ok ferr hon mjok á skíðum ok með boga ok skýtr dýr. Hon heitir ondur-goð eða ondur-dís.

Then Shede went up to the fells and dwelled in Thrimham, and she often goes on skis with her bow and shoots beasts. She is called ski-god or ski-dise.

Homedall's Galder (Heimdallargaldr)

This mysterious fragment is quoted in Yilv 27, the chapter describing Homedall, and introduced by the sentence: Ok enn segir hann sjalfr i Heimdallar-galdri: 'And further he himself says in Homedall's Galderi'. It is fittingly composed in the meter Galderlaw, consisting of two c-lines. The now-lost poem from whence it stems is also mentioned, but not quoted, in Scold 15: Heimdallar hofuð heitir sverð. Svá er sagt, at hann var lostinn manns hofði í gegnum. Um þat er kveðit í Heimdallar-galdri, ok er síðan kallat hofuð mjotuðr Heimdallar 'A sword is called Homedall's head. So is said, that he was pierced by a man's head. About that it is sung in Homedall's galder, and thereafter the head is called Homedall's bane.'

4 "Níu em'k møðra mogr,

2 níu em'k systra sonr."

"I am nine mothers' lad; I am nine sisters' son."

The following passage is from Yilv 35, which lists the Ossens<sup>G</sup>.

P5 Fjórtánda Gná, hana sendir Frigg í ymsa heima at ørindum sínum. Hon á 2 þann hest, er renn lopt ok lǫg, er heitir Hóf-varpnir. Þat var eitt sinn, er hon reið, at vanir nokkvorir sá reið hennar í loptinu. Þa mélti einn:

The fourteenth is Gna; Frie sends her into every home to do her errands. She owns the horse who runs through air and sea, and is called Hoofwarpner. It was one time when she rode that some Wanes saw her riding in the air. Then one spoke:

```
5 "Hvat þar flýgr, · hvat þar ferr,
2 eða at lopti líðr?"
```

"What flies there, what fares there, or passes through the air?"

P6 Hon svarar:

She answers:

```
6 "Né ek flýg, · þó ek fer
2 ok at lopti lið'k á Hóf-varpni, · þeim's Ham-skerpir
4 gat við Garð-rofu."
```

"I fly not, thou I fare, and pass through the air, on Hoofwarpner, whom Hamsherper begot with Yardrove."

P7 Af Gnár nafni er svá kallat, at þat gnéfar, er hátt ferr:

From Gna's name it is so called that that which fares high up protrudes.

Yilv 49 contains the narrative of Balder's death, beginning with his ominous dreams, and ending with the Eese failing to "weep him out of Hell" (for a summary and discussion of the myth and its attestations, see the introduction to Wsp 31–33). At the end of the chapter, a single Leed-meter speech-stanza is quoted.

P8 Pví nést sendu ésir um allan heim ørind-reka at biðja, at Baldr véri grátinn

- <sup>2</sup> ór Helju, en allir gerðu þat, menninir ok kykvendin ok jorðin ok steinarnir ok tré ok allr málmr, svá sem þú munt sét hafa, at þessir lutir gráta, þá er
- 4 þeir koma ór frosti ok í hita. Þá er sendi-menn fóru heim ok hǫfðu vel rekit sín ørindi, finna þeir í helli nǫkkvǫrum, hvar gýgr sat; hon nefndist
- 6 Pokk. Peir biðja hana gráta Baldr ór helju, hon segir:

Next after that the Eese sent an errand-runner through all the Home<sup>C</sup>, to ask that Balder be wept out of hell. And all did that, the men and the beasts and the earth and the stones and trees and all bedrock, as thou must have seen, that these things weep when they come out of cold and into heat. When the messengers journeyed home, and had ran their errand well, they find in a certain cave that a gow<sup>C</sup> sat there; she called herself Thanks. They ask her to weep Balder out of hell. She says:

    7 "Þokk mun gráta · þurrum tórum
    2 Baldrs bál-farar;
    kyks né dauðs · naut'k-a Karls sonar
    4 hafi Hel því's hefir."
```

"Thanks will weep— with dry tears for Balder's pyre-journey [DEATH]. Neither living nor dead did I have use for Churl's son [= Balder]; let Hell have what she has!"

P9 En þess geta menn, at þar hafi verit Loki Laufeyjarson, er flest hefir illt 2 gørt með ásum.

But men guess that this was Lock, Leafy's son, who has done the most evil among the Eese.

Scold 26, here edited in part, is the only surviving retelling of Thunder's journey to the ettin Garfrith, and his following fight with, and slaying of, him and his two daughters, Yelp and Grope. This was apparently a well-known story, and is also mentioned in Vetrl Lv 1/1b (quoted in Scold 11, which lists kennings for Thunder): stétt of Gjolp dauða 'thou didst step over the dead Yelp'. The prose of Scold 26 seems to be based on an earlier, now-lost poem in Leed-meter, from which it quotes two stanzas. The first is found in all four main manuscripts, while the second is found only in U. Both are spoken by Thunder and closely resemble each other stylistically, which is why they most likely come from the same poem.

- P10 pá fór pórr til ár þeirar, er Vimur heitir, allra á mest. Þá spennti hann
  - sik megin-gjorðum ok studdi for-streymis Gríðar-vol, en Loki helt undir megin-gjarðar. Ok þá er Þórr kom á miðja ána, þá óx svá mjok áin, at uppi
  - 4 braut á oxl honum. Þá kvað Þórr þetta:

Then Thunder journeyed to that river which is called Wimbre, greatest of all rivers. Then he wrapped his might-girdle around himself and leaned upon Grith's stave against the stream, and Lock held up the might-girdle. And when Thunder came to the middle of the river, it waxed so great that it reached up unto his shoulders. Then Thunder quoth this:

```
8 "Vax-at-tu nú, Vimur, · alls mik þik vaða tíðir
2 jǫtna garða í;
veitst, ef þú vex · at þá vex mér ós-megin
4 jafn-hátt upp sem himinn."
```

"Grow not now, O Wimbre, as I wish to wade through thee into the yards of the ettins; know that if thou growest, that my os-might then grows up as high as the heaven."

- P11 Pá sér Pórr uppi í gljúfrum nokkurum, at Gjálp, dóttir Geirrøðar stóð þar
  - 2 tveim megin árinnar, ok gerði hon ár-vǫxtinn. Þá tók Þórr upp ór ánni stein mikinn ok kastaði at henni ok mélti svá: "At ósi skal á stemma." Eigi
  - 4 missti hann, þar er hann kastaði til, ok í því bili bar hann at landi ok fekk tekit reyni-runn nokkurn ok steig svá ór ánni. Því er þat orð-tak haft, at
  - 6 reynir er bjorg Þórs.

Then Thunder sees that, up in some gorges, Yelp, daughter of Garfrith stood there on both sides of the river, and she caused the river's growth. Then Thunder took up from the river a great stone, and threw it at her and spoke thus: "At the source shall river be dammed!" He did not miss his target, and in that moment he turned towards land and caught hold of some rowan shrub, and thus stepped out of the river. Therefore the saying goes that the rowan is Thunder's deliverance.

P12 En er þórr kom til Geirrøðar, þá var þeim fé-logum vísat fyrst í geita-hús

- 2 til her-bergis, ok var þar einn stóll til sétis, ok sat Pórr þar. Pá varð hann þess varr, at stóllinn fór undir honum upp at réfri. Hann stakk Gríðar-veli
- 4 upp í raftana ok lét sígast fast á stólinn. Varð þá brestr mikill, ok fylgði skrékr. Þar hofðu verit undir stólinum dǿtr Geirrøðar, Gjálp ok Greip, ok
- 6 hafði hann brotit hrygginn í báðum. Þa kvað Þórr:

But when Thunder came to Garfrith's home, then the companions were first shown to a goathouse as lodgings, and the seating there was one chair, and Thunder sat thereon. Then he noticed that the chair beneath him was going up toward the roof. He stuck

9 "Einu sinni · neytta'k alls megins
2 jotna gorðum í þá's Gjolp ok Greip, · dótr Geir-raðar, 4 vildu hefja mik til himins."
```

"But one time I used all [my] might in the yards of the ettins: When Yelp and Grope, daughters of Garfrith, would lift me to the heaven."

This rather late poem is very well written. Particularly beautiful are the introductory stanzas, which tell of Norns arriving in the night to predetermine Hallow's life.

TODO: Introduction.

- P1 Helgi fekk Sigrúnar ok áttu þau sonu; var Helgi eigi gamall. Dagr Hogna
  - 2 sonr blótaði Óðin til foður-hefnda. Óðinn léði Dag geirs síns. Dagr fann Helga, mág sinn, þar sem heitir at Fjoturlundi. Hann lagði í gognum
  - 4 Helga með geirnum. Þar fell Helgi, en Dagr reið til fjalla ok sagði Sigrúnu tíðindi:

Hallow got Syerun and they owned sons; Hallow was not old. Day, son of Hain, blooted<sup>C</sup> to Weden to avenge his father; Weden lent Day his spear. Day found Hallow, his brother-in-law, at the place which is called Fetterlund; he laid the spear through Hallow. There fell Hallow, but Day rode to the fells and told Syerun the news:

- 1 "Trauðr em ek, systir, trega þér at segja
- því-at ek hefi nauðigr · nipti grótta: Fell í morgun · und Fjoturlundi
- buðlungr sá's vas · betstr í heimi ok hildingum · á halsi stóð."

"Regretful am I, sister, to grieve thee by saying—for, forced must I cause my kinswoman to cry: This morning fell, 'neath Fetterlund, that prince who was in the world the best, and on the throats of rulers stood."

The Speeches of Rein (Reginsmól)

Meter: Leed-meter, Firnwordslaw

The title of this poem (or, better, prosimetrum) is editorial. Itmost closely The differing meter of the stanzas might suggest that they are taken from different poems.

P1 Sigurðr gekk til stóðs Hjálp-reks ok kaus sér af hest einn er Grani var

- 2 kallaör síðan. Þá var kominn Reginn til Hjálp-reks, sonr Hreið-mars. Hann var hverjum manni hagari ok dvergr of voxt. Hann var vitr, grimmr
- 4 ok fjǫl-kunnigr. Reginn veitti Sigurði fóstr ok kennslu ok elskaði hann mjǫk. Hann sagði Sigurði frá for·ellri sínu ok þeim at·burðum at Óðinn
- 6 ok Hønir ok Loki hǫfðu komit til And-vara-fors; í þeim forsi var fjǫlði fiska. Einn dvergr hét And-vari; hann var lǫngum í forsinum í geddu líki
- 8 ok fekk sér þar matar. "Otr hét bróðir várr," kvað Reginn, "er oft fór í forsinn í otrs líki. Hann hafði tekit einn lax ok sat á ár-bakkanum ok át
- blundandi. Loki laust hann með steini til bana. Þóttust ésir mjok heppnir verit hafa ok flógu belg af otrinum. Þat sama kveld sóttu þeir gisting til
- Hreið-mars ok sýndu veiði sína. Þá tóku vér þá hondum ok logðum þeim fjor-lausn at fylla otr-belginn með gulli ok hylja útan ok með rauðu gulli.
- 14 Pá sendu þeir Loka at afla gullsins. Hann kom til Ránar ok fekk net hennar ok fór þá til And-vara-fors ok kastaði netinu fyr gedduna en hon hljóp
- 16 í netit. Þá mélti Loki:

Siward went to Helpric's stable and thereof chose for himself one horse, which was henceforth called Grane. Then Rein, son of Rethmar, was come to Helpric. He was more crafty than any man and a dwarf in stature; he was clever, cruel and many-cunning<sup>C</sup>. Rein fostered and taught Siward and love him very much. He told Siward about his own parents, and about the events that Weden, Heener and Lock had come to Andwareforce; in that force was a multitude of fish. A dwarf was named Andware; he was for a long time in the force in the likeness of a pike and got his food there. "Otter was our brother called," said Rein, "who often journeyed in the force in the likeness of an otter. He had caught a salmon and sat on the riverbank and ate it with closed eyes Lock struck him with a stone unto his death. The Eese thought themselves to have been very lucky, and flayed the skin off the otter. The same evening they sought to pass the night at Rethmar's house, and showed their catch. Then we bound them and proposed to them as a life-ransom that they would fill the otter-skin with gold, and also cover the outside with red gold. Then they sent Lock to procure the gold. He came to Ran and got her net, and then journeyed to Andwareforce and threw the net in front of the pike, and it jumped into the net. Then spoke Lock:

- "Hvat 's þat fiska · es rinn flóði í, kann-at sér við víti varask.
  Hǫfuð þitt · leys-tu helju ór;
- 4 finn mér lindar loga!"

"What kind of fish is it who runs in the flood? It cannot protect itself from harm.
Ransom thy head out of Hell; find me the flame of the linden [GOLD]!"

- "And-vari ek hęiti, · Óinn hét minn faðir, margan hęfi'k fors of farit.
   Aumlig norn · skóp oss í ár-daga at skylda í vatni vaða."
- "Andware I am called; Owen was called my father; through many a force have I fared.

  A wretched norn shaped for us in days of yore, that I should in the water wade."
  - 3 "Sęg-ŏu þat, And-vari, (kvaŏ Loki) ef þú eiga vill
     2 líf í lýða solum:
     Hver gjold fáa gumna synir
     4 ef hoggvask orðum á?"

"Say that, Andware—quoth Lock—if thou wilt own life in the halls of men:
Which recompense do the sons of men get, if they hew at each other with words?"

- 4 "Ofr-gjǫld · fáa gumna synir
- pęir's Vaŏgęlmi vaŏa;
  - ó·saðra orða · hverr's á annan lýgr,
- 4 of lengi leiða limar."

"Great recompense do the sons of men get, those who in Wadyelmer<sup>L</sup> wade. By the ramifications of untrue words is each who lies to another long followed.<sup>253</sup>"

<sup>253</sup>Watery torment in the afterlife for oath-breakers and liars is well attested in the Germanic sources. See note to Wsp 39 for discussion.

P2 Loki sá allt gull þat er And-vari átti. En er hann hafði fram reitt gullit, þá
2 hafði hann eftir einn hring ok tók Loki þann af hánum. Dvergrinn gekk inn í steininn ok mélti:

Lock saw all the gold which Andware owned. But when he had brought forth all the gold, then he had one ring left, and Lock took it off him. The dwarf went into the stone and spoke:

- 5 "pat skal gull es Gustr átti
- bréðrum tveim at bana verða ok oðlingum • átta at rógi;
- 4 mun míns féar · mann-gi njóta."

"That gold which Gust owned shall for two brothers become the bane, and for eight nobles the [cause of] strife; of my wealth will no man benefit."

- P3 Ésir reiddu Hreið-mari féit ok tráðu upp otr-belginn ok reistu á føtr; þá
  - 2 skyldu ésirnir hlaða upp gullinu ok hylja. En er þat var gørt gekk Hreiðmarr framm ok sá eitt grana-hár ok bað hylja. Þá dró Óðinn framm
  - 4 hringinn And-vara-naut ok hulði hárit.

The Eese prepared the wealth for Rethmar and stuffed the otter-skin and raised it on its feet. Then the Eese should fill it up with gold and cover it. But when that was done Rethmar stepped forth, and saw a single whisker-strand and bade it be covered. Then Weden drew forth the ring Andwaresgift and covered the strand.

- 6 "Gull's þér nú reitt (kvað Loki) en þú gjold hefir

"Thou gavest a gift—gavest not a gift of love; gavest not out of a true heart!
From your lives would ye be removed, if I had known that danger before!"

- P4 Fáfnir ok Reginn krofðu Hreið-mar nið-gjalda eptir Otr, bróður sinn.
  - 2 Hann kvað nei við. En Fáfnir lagði sverði Hreið-mar, foður sinn, sofanda. Hreið-marr kallaði á dótr sínar:

Fathomer and Rein demanded from Rethmar the kinsman-payment after Otter, their brother. He said no to it. But Fathomer laid the sword through Rethmar, his father, sleeping. Rethmar called upon his daughters:

- 10 "Lyng-heiðr ok Lofn-heiðr, · vitið mínu lífi farit!
- 2 Mart 's þat's þorf þéar!"

"Lingheath and Lovenheath, witness my destroyed life! TODO."

Lyngheiðr svaraði:

- 11 "Fá mun systir, · þótt fǫður missi,
  - 2 hęfna hlýra harms!"

Lingheath answered:

"Not many a sister, although she misses her father, will avenge her brother's harm!"

- 12 "Al þú þó dóttur, (kvað Hreiðmarr) dís úlf-huguð,
- ef þú getr-at son · við siklingi; fá þú mey mann · í megin-þarfar, þá mun þeirar sonr · þíns harms reka."

P5 Þá dó Hreið-marr en Fáfnir tók gullit allt. Þá beiddisk Reginn at hafa
 2 foður-arf sinn, en Fáfnir galt þar nei við. Þá leitaði Reginn ráða við Lyngheiði, systur sína, hvernig hann skyldi heimta foður-arf sinn. Hon kvað:

Then Rethmar died, and Fathomer took all the gold. Then Rein asked to have his father's inheritance, but Fathomer gave back a no. Then Rein looked for counsel from Lingheath, his sister, over how he should get his father's inheritance. She quoth:

- 13 "Brúðar kveðja skalt blíð-liga
  - 2 arfs ok óðra hugar;
    - es-a þat hóft at þú hjorvi skylir
  - 4 kvęŏja Fáfni féar!"

"TODO."

P6 Þessa hluti sagði Reginn Sigurði. Einn dag, er hann kom til húsa Regins, var hánum vel fagnat. Reginn kvað:

These things Rein said to Siward. One day when he came to Rein's house he was greeted well. Rein quoth:

- 14 "Kominn's hingat · konr Sig-mundar,
  - sęggr inn snar-ráði, til sala várra; móð hefir meira • en maðr gamall,
- ok es mér fangs vón · at frekum ulfi.

"Hither is come the son of Syemund [= Siward], the quick-counselling youth, to our halls; he has greater courage than an old man, and I expect a catch from the hungry wolf!

- 15 Ek mun fóða · folk-djarfan gram;
  - 2 nú 's yngva konr · með oss kominn; sjá mun résir · ríkstr und sólu,
  - 4 þrymr um oll lond ør·log-símu."

I will raise the troop-bold prince, now the son of a king is come among us! This ruler will become mightiest under the sun, he fastens through all lands his orlay-strands!"

- P7 Sigurðr var þá jafnan með Regin ok sagði hann Sigurði at Fáfnir lá á Gnita-
  - 2 heiði ok var í orms líki. Hann átti égis-hjalm er oll kvikvendi hréddusk við. Reginn gerði Sigurði sverð er Gramr hét. Þat var svá hvasst at hann
  - 4 brá því ofan í Rín ok lét reka ullar-lagð fyr straumi ok tók í sundr lagðinn sem vatnit. Því sverði klauf Sigurðr í sundr steðja Regins. Eptir þat eggjaði
  - 6 Reginn Sigurð at vega Fáfni. Hann sagði:

Then Siward was always with Rein, and he told Siward that Fathomer lay on the Gnitheath in a Wyrm's likeness; he owned the helm of awe by which all living things were frightened. Rein made for Siward the sword which is called Gram; it was so sharp that he plunged it down into the Rhine, and floated a lock of wool down the stream, and it split the lock like it did the water. With that sword Siward split asunder Rein's anvil; after that Rein urged Siward to slay Fathomer. He said:

- 16 "Hátt munu hléja · Hundings synir

Helpric got Siward a ship-retinue in order to avenge his father. They caught a great storm, and tacked the ships through some rocky cliffs. A lone man stood on the cliff and quoth:

- 2 Hverra est manna mogr?
  - es þú á Fáfni rautt þínn hinn frána méki;
- stǫndumk til hjarta hjǫrr!"

[Fathomer quoth:]

"O swain and swain! To which swain art thou born; of which men art thou son? As thou on Fathomer hast reddened thy gleaming blade, the sword stands unto my heart!"

- P1 Sigurðr dulði nafns síns fyr því at þat var trúa þeira í forneskju at orð feigs
  - 2 manns métti mikit ef hann bolvaði óvin sínum með nafni. Hann kvað:

Siward concealed his name, because it was their belief in ancient times that the word of a fey $^{C}$  man could do much if he baled his enemy by his name. He [= Siward] quoth:

- 2 "Gofugt dýr ek heiti · en ek gengit hef'k
- hinn móður-lausi mǫgr,
  - fǫður ek á'kk-a · sem fira synir,
- geng ek einn saman."

"Noble beast I am called, but I have gone as the motherless lad.

[Fathomer quoth:]

"Who goaded thee—why didst thou let thee be goaded—my life for to destroy?

O gleaming-eyed swain, thou haddest a sharp father; inborn traits quickly show!"

&lt;sup>255</sup>The meaning is that Fathomer would not recognize Siward's lineage (i.e. his father) or name, since he is an orphan who up until this point has not won any glory. He is not saying that he is lineage is unknown even to himself, since sjalfan mik 'my self' is accusative, not dative.

<sup>4</sup> á-bornu skjór á skeið. 'inborn traits quickly show.'] The original is cryptic. á skeið means roughly 'rapidly, quickly', whence the expression ríða á skeið 'CV: to ride at full speed', but the other words are uncertain. La Farge and Tucker (1992) read 'your innate qualities show quickly', suggesting two unattested words: an adjective *áborinn 'innate, inborn' and a verb *skjóa 'to show'. Yet the lack of i-umlaut in the supposed 3rd sg. pres. ind. skjór is difficult. We would expect **skýr, as in skjóta 'to shoot,' with 2nd/3rd sg. pres. ind skýtr. A solution here would be reading a 2nd sg. pres. subj. skjóir, with a vowel TODO

The Speeches of Syedrive (Sigrdrífumól)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C10th (0.961)

Meter: Leed-meter

The poem and prose under this header follows the order of R. A large count of verses are also cited in N (WalsS ch. 21).

In WalsS the present text up to P2 is first paraphrased:

Brynhildr segir, at tveir konungar bǫrðust. Hét annarr Hjalmgunnarr; hann var gamall ok hinn mesti hermaðr, ok hafði Óðinn honum sigr heitit, en annarr Agnarr eða Auða bróðir. "Ek fellda Hjalmgunnarr í orrostu, en Óðinn stakk mik svefn-þorni í hefnd þess ok kvað mik aldri síðan skyldu sigr hafa ok kvað mik giptast skulu. En ek strengða þess heit þar í mót at giptast engum þeim, er hréðast kynni." Sigurðr mélti: "Kenn oss ráð til stórra hluta." Hun svarar: "Pér munuð betr kunna, en með þokkum vil ek kenna yðr, ef þat er nokkut, er vér kunnum, þat er yðr métti líka, í rúnum eða oðrum hlutum, er liggja til hvers hlutar, ok drekkum béði saman, ok gefi goðin okkr góðan dag, at þér verði nýt ok fregð at mínum vitrleik, ok þú munir eptir þat, er vit reðum." Brynhildr fylldi eitt ker ok férði Sigurði ok mélti:

'Byrnhild says that two kings fought. One was called Helmguther; he was old and the greatest warrior, and Weden had promised him victory, but the other was called Eyner or Eade's brother. "I felled Helmguther in battle, but Weden stung me with a sleeping-thorn as revenge for that, and declared that I should never thenceforth have victory, and said that I must marry, but I made a vow in response, to marry no man who could be frightened." Siward spoke: "Teach us counsels regarding great things." She answers: "Ye will know better, but with thanks I will teach you, if there is anything which we know that may please you, of runes or other things of importance; and let us both drink together, and may the gods give us two a good day, that thou have use and joy from my wisdom and that thou afterwards recall that which we two speak of." Byrnhild filled a vessel and brought it to Siward and spoke:'

After this the present sts. 4–12 and 14–19 are cited uninterrupted, and a paraphrase is given of sts. 20 ff. (TODO: edit these!). While the order of 12–19 (excepting the omission of 13) in N is identical to that of R, and sts. 4–5 likewise come first, the order of the middle sts. 6–11 is very different. The following table shows the relationship between the two ms. for the relevant stanzas:

Siward set himself down, asking for her name. Then she took a horn full of mead, and gave him a draught of memory:

Hail Night and [her] kinswoman [= Earth]!
With un-wroth [FRIENDLY] eyes look ye toward us two, and give the sitters [= us] victory.

2 nipt '[her] kinswoman [= Earth]'] According to Yilv 10 Earth is the daughter of Night and Aner P.

3  $\acute{O}$ -rejõum augum · lítið okkr þinig 'With unwrathful [FRIENDLY] eyes look ye toward us two'] An archaic conception; the Gods turning Their friendly gaze toward the worshipper symbolises Their bestowing their favour, and the specific use of  $\acute{o}$ -rejõr 'un-wroth' shows that the wrath of the Gods was feared. Compare Hdl 6. Similar language is found in other ancient literatures, e.g. in the Hebrew Bible, most famously in the "Priestly Blessing" of Numbers 6:24–26 where Yahweh's favour is expressed by "making His face shine" and "lifting His face" toward the receiver of the blessing, and also in Psalms 4:6 and the chorus of Psalms 80, contrasting with 80:17 where the Israelites are depicted as perishing before the rebuke of Yahweh's face.

1 Heilir ésir,  $\cdot$  heilar ósynjur 'Hail the Eese! Hail the Ossens!'] Probably formulaic, subverted by Lock in Lock 11 (see note there for possible ritual use).

- 4 léknis-hendr 'healing-hands'] Hands with the power to heal (perhaps supernaturally). The singular form léknis-hond occurs in the semi-Christianized prayer on a c. 1300 stick from Ribe, Denmark (signum DR EM85;493).

She called herself Syedrive and was a walkirrie. She said, that two kings fought. One was called Helmguther; he was then old and the greatest warrior, and Weden had promised him victory. But the other was called Eyner, Eade's brother, who in no way wished to surrender. Syedrive felled Helmguther in the battle, but Weden stung her with a sleeping-thorn as revenge for that, and declared that she should never thenceforth cause victory in battle, and said that she must marry, "but I said to him that I made a vow in response, to marry no man who could be frightened." 1 bók-rúnar 'book-runes'] Or 'beech-runes'. The word may also be emended to bót-rúnar 'cure-runes', since the letters c and t were, in the TODO miniscule used on Iceland, very similar. This emendation is favourable for two reasons: (i) it makes more sense, since the semantic pair bót 'cure': bjarg 'rescue' is surely stronger than bók 'book, beech': bjarg 'rescue', and since the present stanza is specifically referring to the practical use of the runes; (ii) the pair bót-runar: bjarg-rúnar is already found in a runic charm (B 257, edited under Galders from Bryggen).

3 simar 'strands'] i.e. 'strands of fate'; cf.  $HHund\ I$  3, where the norns are said to twist such strands. Often emended to limar 'ramifications' in accordance with  $Rein\ 4$ , where that word is used in basically the same context. Such a scribal confusion is easily understood, since s in this position was always spelled with long f in the old mss. The paraphrase (see other note) is not conclusive, since it replaces this word with befind 'revenge'.

The Third Lay of Guthrun (Guðrúnarkviða þriðja)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C10th (0.731), early C11th (0.178) Meter: Firnwordslaw

A very short narrative poem, depicting a single minor legendary event. It is especially notable for its depiction of a trial by ordeal and the mention of a woman being drowned in a bog.

Herch, one of Attle's concubines tells Attle that she has seen his wife Guthrun sleeping with Thedric. Attle becomes distressed upon hearing this (P1). Guthrun asks him what is wrong (1), and he responds that Herch has accused her of sleeping with Thedric (2). Guthrun promises to to prove her innocence through a trial by ordeal involving picking up a white stone from boiling water (3). She further says that while she and Thedric did sit down together, they did so in mutual grief over the deaths of her brothers (4-5). She tells Attle to summon a German lord named Saxe, who knows how to carry out the trial. Seven hundred men arrive to witness the event (6). Before picking up the stone, Guthrun laments over her brothers' deaths, saying that they would have disputed the accusation through violence, but that she must now prove her innocence by herself (7). She then puts her hand in the boiling water, and unscathed takes out the stones. She holds it up and shows it to the witnesses (8). Attle laughs, knowing that his wife has been faithful, and orders Herch to pick up the stone (9). She does so, but her hands are horribly scorched, and men lead her to a "foul bog", presumably to be drowned (see above). The poet ends by laconically stating that Guthrun in such a way was "reconstituted for her affronts".

- P1 Herkja hét ambótt Atla; hón hafði verit frilla hans. Hón sagði Atla at hón
  - 2 hefői sét Þjóðrek ok Guðrúnu béði saman. Atli var þá allókátr. Þá kvað Guðrún:

Herch was named the female thrall of Attle; she had been his concubine. She told Attle that she had seen Thedric and Guthrun both together. Attle was then wholly displeased. Then Guthrun quoth:

- 1 "Hvat 's þér, Atli? é, Buðla sonr,

&lt;sup>270</sup>Guthrun says that she will prove her innocence through a trial by ordeal (that is, by lifting "the white holy stone" out of boiling water; see st. 8). She further strengthens her position by pointing out that no reliable person has sworn an oath attesting to her guilt.

The Lay of Attle (Atlakviða)

Dating (Sapp, 2022): C10th (0.719)—early C11th (0.212) Meter: Speech-meter, Firnwordslaw

A famously archaic poem.

Attle sends his messenger Kneefrith to Guther (1). He arrives at Guther's hall, where the mood is one of unease, and addresses Guther (2). Kneefrith invites him and his brother Hain to Attle's court (3), offering them treasures, weapons and land (4–5). Guther asks his brother Hain for advice, since he has not heard of Attle having gold to give away (6).

The Death of Attle (Dauði Atla)

P1 Guðrún Gjúkadóttir hefndi brøðra sinna, svá sem frégt er orðit. Hon drap
2 fyrst sonu Atla, en eptir drap hon Atla ok brendi hǫllina ok hirðina alla; um þetta er sjá kviða ort.

Guthrun Yivicksdaughter avenged her brothers, as has become famous. She first killed the sons of Attle, and after that she killed Attle, and burned the hall and the whole hird. Regarding that this lay is wrought.

- 1 Atli sendi · ár til Gunnars
- kunnan sęgg at ríða, · Knéfrøðr vas sá heitinn; at gorðum kom hann Gjúka · ok at Gunnars hollu,
- bękkjum arin-gręypum · ok at bjóri svósum.

Attle sent—of yore—to Guther a well-known messenger to ride; Kneefrith he was called.

To the yards of Yivick he came, and to the hall of Guther; to the hearth-surrounding benches, and to the lovely beer.

- 2 Drukku þar drótt-megir · —en dyljendr þogðu—
- vín í val-hǫllu, · vreiði sóusk þeir Húna; kallaði þá Knéfrøðr · kaldri roddu,
- seggr inn suð-róni · sat hann á bekk hóm:

There the dright-lads [warriors] drank—but the concealed ones shut up—wine in the walhall; they feared the wrath of the Huns.

Then called Kneefrith with cold voice, the southern messenger, he sat on a high bench:

- 3 "Atli mik hingat sendi · ríða ørendi,
- mar inum mél-gręypa, Myrk-við inn ó·kunna at biðja yðr, Gunnarr, at it á bekk kómið
- með hjolmum arin-greypum · at søkja heim Atla.

- 4 Skjoldu kneguð þar velja · ok skafna aska,
- hjalma gull-roŏna · ok Húna męngi, silfr-gyllt soŏul-klę́ŏi, · serki val-rauŏa,
- dafar, darraða, drosla mél-greypa.

There ye might choose shields, and shaven ash-spears, helmets gold-reddened, and the multitude of the Huns, silver-gilt saddle-cloths, blood-red serks, daves, spears, bit-champing steeds.

5 Voll létsk ykkr ok myndu gefa · víðrar Gnita-heiðar

<sup>2</sup> val-hollu 'the walhall'] The interpretation of this compound is difficult in the current context. The first element val- could be (1) valr 'falcon', referring to the aristocratic hunting practice; (2) valr 'Wale<sup>G</sup>', cognate with 'Welsh' but in ON referring to the French or Romans, stressing the southern location or appearance of the hall; or (3) valr '(collective) the battle-slain', foreshadowing the inevitable death (feyness<sup>C</sup>) of the Yivickings<sup>G</sup>. If (3) is correct the word is linguistically identical to Walhall<sup>L</sup>, Weden's hall, whither the battle-slain go.

&quot;Attle sent me hither to ride with an errand, on the bit-champing steed through uncharted Mirkwood— to ask you, O Guther, that ye two [= Guther and Hain] on the bench come, with hearth-surrounding helmets, to seek the home of Attle.

    af geiri gjallanda · ok af gylltum stofnum, stórar meiðmar · ok staði Danpar, hrís þat it méra · es meðr Myrk-við kalla."
```

He also declared himself willing to give you two the field of wide Gnit-heath, [and] of yelling spears and of gilded prows, great treasures and the place of Danp; the renowned brush which men call Mirkwood.

- 6 Hofði vatt þá Gunnarr · ok Hogna til sagði:
- "Hvat réðr þú okkr, seggr hinn óri, alls vit slíkt heyrum? Gull vissa'k ekki • á Gnita-heiði,
- 4 þat's vit éttim-a · annat slíkt.

His head turned Guther then, and said to Hain: "What dost thou counsel us two, O younger man, as such a thing we hear? I knew of no gold on the Gnit-heath which we two should not own as much of.

- 7 Sjau eigu vit sal-hús · sverða full,
- hverju 'ru þeira · hjolt ór gulli; mínn veit'k mar betstan · en méki hvassastan,
- boga bekk-søma en brynjur ór gulli;

We own seven hall-houses filled with swords on each of them is a golden hilt; I know my horse to be the best and [my] sword the sharpest, [my] bow bench-fit and [my] byrnies golden,

- 8 hjalm ok skjold hvítastan, · kominn ór holl Kjárs;
- einn 's mínn betri en sé allra Húna."

[my] helmet and whitest shield, come from Caser's hall; mine alone is better, than [those] of all of the Huns might be!"

- 9 "Hvat hyggr brúði bendu þá's hón okkr baug sendi,
- varinn vóðum heiðingja? · Hykk at hón vornuð byði! Hár fann'k heiðingja · riðit í hring rauðum;
- ylfskr es vegr okkarr · at ríða ørendi."

[Hain quoth:]

"What dost thou think the bride meant, when she sent us two an armlet wrapped with a heath-dweller's garment [WOLF > WOLF'S HAIR]? I think that she gave us a warning!

I found the heath-dweller's [WOLF'S] hair tied through the red ring: wolven is our road, if we ride that errand!<sup>272</sup>"

- 10 Niðjar-gi hvottu Gunnar · né náungr annarr,
  - rýnęndr né ráðendr, · né þeir's ríkir vóru; kvaddi þá Gunnarr · sem konungr skyldi,
  - 4 mérr í mjoð-ranni · af móði stórum:

Kinsmen urged not Guther, nor any other relation, not counselors nor advisors, nor those who were mighty. Guther then announced—as a king should, renowned in the mead-hall—with great spirit:

- 11 "Rís-tu nú, Fjornir, · lát-tu á flet vaða
  - gręppa gull-skálir · með gumna hondum!

"Rise now, Ferner; let on the floorboards wade forth the golden bowls of warriors along the hands of men!

- 12 Ulfr mun ráða · arfi Niflunga,
  - gamlir gran-varðir, ef Gunnars missir, birnir blakk-fjallir • bíta þref-tǫnnum,
  - gamna grey-stóði, ef Gunnarr né kømr-at."

The wolf will rule the inheritance of the Nivlings—the old grey guardians [wolves]—if Guther is missing. Black-furred bears [will] bite with wrangling teeth—amusing the bitch-pack—if Guther comes not."

- 13 Leiddu land-rogni · lýðar ó · neisir,
- grátendr, gunn-hvatan, · ór garði Húna; þá kvað þat inn øri · erfi-vorðr Hogna:

&lt;sup>272</sup>That it is the more cautious Hain who speaks here is clear from Guther's response in the following stanzas. # The Lay of Hildbrand

Dating: C8th Meter: Firnwordslaw

For the text of original poem I present the manuscript text with as few textual emendations as possible. As for the orthography, I have found it impossible to produce a normalised without too heavily distorting the received text, being as it is, a blend of several dialects (one need only observe the treatment of the name Thedric, which appears thrice, and each time in a markedly different form). Apart from my typical practice of capitalising proper names, marking prefixes with  $\langle \cdot \rangle$  and compounds with  $\langle - \rangle$ , and using acute accents to signify long vowels, circumflex accents to signify now-monophthongised original diphthongs, and overdots to mark nasal vowels, I have done the following changes in order to clarify etymological relationships and make the text somewhat more wieldy. Of these, 8–10 have also been noted in the apparatus where they occur:

- 1. Consistently replaced both p (wynn) and uu with w.
- 2. Consistently replaced c with k.
- 3. Consistently replaced qu with kw.
- 4. Consistently replaced t with t in positions affected by the Second Sound Shift.
- 5. Replaced th with þ.
- 6. Replaced e with e when reflecting an original a-vowel affected by i-mutation.
- 7. Replaced  $\delta$  with  $\delta$  where originally an a.
- 8. Removed unetymological double nn.
- 9. Restored initial b where etymological and/or metrically required.
- 10. Removed initial b unetymological and/or metrically deficient.

The punctuation of the original, entirely consisting of interpuncts, at times representing metrical breaks, at others sporadically placed, has not been retained.

Where they appear in cæsuræ, the words kwad Hilti-brant 'Hildbrand quoth' (found in ll. 30, 49, and 58) replace the usual interpunct. Due to their hypermetrical nature, I had originally planned to remove these, and instead indicate the speaker in the margins—but after comparison with various Norse stanzas (e.g. Rein 3, wherein the words kvaŏ Loki 'Lock quoth' appear in the stanza's first cæsura), I have come to believe that these represent an ancient oral interjection, seemingly going back as far as the Migration Period (as it seems incredulous to think that the scribe of ms. should have influenced the four centuries younger scribe of R in such a minor point.)

The poet gives a very short formulaic introduction, from which we can tell that the beginning of the poem is preserved (1–2). Hildbrand and Hathbrand, father and son, arm and dress themselves before riding into battle, each the head of an opposing host (3–6). Hildbrand asks Hathbrand about his name and lineage, saying that he knows all noble genealogies (7–13). Hathbrand gives his name, and says that the old men of his tribe have told him that his father was Hildbrand, a brave warrior. He abandoned the newborn Hathbrand in order to serve Thedric in his fight against Edwaker, but this was a long time ago, and Hathbrand doubts that he is still alive (14–29). Realising that he is facing his son, Hildbrand invokes God as witness, and as a token of loyalty offers Hathbrand a golden bigh which the Hunnish king had given him (30–35). Hathbrand exclaims that treasures must be won by struggle alone and harshly insults his father's manhood: he calls him an old Hun, and accuses him of having survived to old age through treachery (36–41). Hathbrand then reveals that he has learned from sailors on the Mediterranean that Hildbrand is dead (42–44).

After this follow three short speeches by Hildbrand. The second one is certainly spoken by him, but the other two may be misplaced or misattributed. Hildbrand reflects on his son's prosperity, saying that he can tell from his clothes that he has a good lord, and that he, unlike himself, has not suffered an exile's fate (first speech: 45–48). He then calls on God, and laments that after thirty years of war he is now forced to fight against his own son; still, he tells Hathbrand that he should easily be able to kill such an old man as himself, if he has the strength to it (second speech: 49–57). Lastly, he (or Hathbrand, if we choose to emend) says that only the most degenerate easterner would refuse the fight when his opponent so greatly desires it. He accepts his fate and declares that when the duel is over, one of the two must win and rob the corpse of the other (third speech: 58–62).

The two men then throw their javelins, each of which gets stuck in the opposing shield, before rushing into each other, hacking away at their shields until they become worthless (63–68). The rest of the poem was continued on the now-lost, following page(s).

Widsith (Wídsiþ)

Dating: TODO Meter: Firnwordslaw

An archaic heroic poem.

- 1 Wíd-sið maðolade, · word-hord on·leac,
- sé þe mæst · mærþa ofer eorþan, folca geond·ferde; · oft he flette ge·þah
- myne-lícne maþþum. · Hine from Myrgingum æþele ǫn·wócon. · He mid Ealh-hilde,
- fælre freoþu-wębban, · forman síþe Hreð-cyninges · hâm ge·sóhte
- eastan of Qngle, · Eorman-ríces, wrâþes wær-logan. · Qn·gǫnn þá worn sprecan:

Widesith spoke, unlocking his word-hoard, he who through the most tribes over earth, and folks had journeyed; often he received on a bench pleasing treasures. From the Mirgings his ancestry stemmed. Together with Elhild, the good peace-weaveress, for the first time he sought out the home of the Reth-King, to the east of the Angles, [the home of] Erminric<sup>P</sup>, the angry oath-breaker. — He then began to speak before the many:

<sup>6</sup> freohu-webban 'peace-weaveress'] A woman used in a political marriage to bring peace between two tribes or families, in this case apparently between King Edwin (see Il. 97–98) and the Gots.

<sup>7</sup> Hreŏ-cyninges 'Reth-King'] i.e. the king of the Reth-Gots, which is apparently just a poetic name for the (Eastern) Gots; cf. ll. 18, 57, 88–89.

"I have learned of many men wield over tribes. Every folk must live in virtue, each earl after the other rule his homeland, who wishes to prosper on his throne.

Offe ruled over the Angles, Ale-wigh over the Danes; of those men was he the bravest of all, but he never furthered earlship more than Offe, for Offe overwon—youngest of men, still a boy—the greatest kingdom.

No man of his age accomplished greater earlship: with one sword he marked the border against the Mirgings, by Fiveldoor—it was thenceforth held by the Angles and Sweves, as Offe had won it.

Rotholf and Rothgar held for the longest the peace together, uncle and nephew, since they drove away the race of Wikings, and bent down Ingeld's spear-point, striking down at the Hart the host of the Hathbeards.

Heliand

Very much a work in progress.

The following is a complete list of relevant manuscript, in chronological order.

- L. 840–850 (Thomas 4073 (Ms)), which appears to originally have belonged to the same codex as
- P. 840-850 (R 56/2537 (PA))
- V. 800-850 (Palatini Latini 1447)
- S. 850 (cgm. 8840)
- M. 850–875 (cgm. 25)
- C. 950-1000 (Cotton Caligula A. VII sign. 3-11)

Fragments L and P appear to originally belong to the same codex? Notes on the normalization:

- Long vowels are marked by the acute rather than by the circumflex accent or macron. This is both faithful to the original manuscripts and concordant with my practice in normalising other Germanic languages.
- Long vowels  $\hat{o}$  and  $\hat{e}$  resulting from monophthongisation of diphthongs au and ai are, however, written with the circumflex accent.
- $\acute{o}$  when coming from etymological  $\emph{a}$  or  $\acute{a}$  is written as  $\acute{o}$
- When attested in all mss., epenthetic (svarabhakti) vowels are marked with an underdot. Otherwise they are deleted.
- Long vowels resulting from nasal assimilation are marked with an overdot. i is written as i.
- ms. e and i, when occurring between vowels are written as j.
- ms. i, when word-initial or following g and corresponding to etymological j is written as j
- ms. e as resulting from i-mutation is written as e.

- ms. b or b, when representing the voiced bilabial fricative, is written as v.
- ms. th is written as b.
- ms. uu is written as w.

Galders: Charms, Spells, and Curses

Under this section I have gathered sundry galders (metrical magic charms) attested in Old Germanic languages. I have generally only included those with clear Heathen or otherwise traditional elements, especially certain poetic formulae known from older texts.

Continental Germanic galders

The Two Merseburg Galders

Dating: TODO. Meter: Firnwordslaw, Galderlaw

These two galders, preserved in a manuscript (TODO) are some of the only surviving examples of genuine Heathen galders from the continent. Both share a common two-part structure, each beginning with an historiola (a "historical" account describing the successful effects of the galder in the mythic past), followed by an imperative, commanding that the willed magic effect take place in the present.

The first galder begins with the historiola describing a group of supernatural women in the midst of a battle, affecting its outcome by fastening or loosening fetters. The imperative then commands that some fetters in the present be destroyed, so that captive(s) may escape.

The second galder begins with the historiola describing a group of Gods riding through the woods. Among them is Balder<sup>P</sup>, whose young horse sprains its foot. Three Gods then sing (see Note to bi·guol below) a healing-galder each over the horse; first the otherwise unknown goddess Sithguth<sup>P</sup>, then the goddess Sun<sup>P</sup>, and finally the god Weden<sup>P</sup>. The imperative (apparently the same one sung by Weden) then commands that a present sprain be healed.

- 1 Eiris sázun idisi · sázun hera duo der;
- suma hapt heptidun suma heri lezidun suma klubodun • umbi kuonjo-widi
- in·sprink hapt-bandun · in·far fígandun
  .H.

Of yore sat dises, sat here, then there: some fastened fetters, some hindered armies, some cleaved shackles (TODO!).—
Destroy the fetter-bonds, lead the way from the fiends! .H.

5 .H.] The meaning of this letter, which is very clear and written in the same hand as the galders, is uncertain. To me, the most convincing suggestion is that it be read as .N., short for Latin nomen 'name', presumably the name for the person whom the singer wishes to free from the fetters.

- 2 Fol ende Wuodan · fuorun zi holza lid zi ge·liden · só-se ge·limida sín!

Phol and Weden journeyed in the woods; then was the foot of Balder's foal sprained.

Then begaled<sup>C</sup> him Sithguth<sup>P</sup>, Sun<sup>P</sup> her sister; then begaled him Frie<sup>P</sup>, Full<sup>P</sup> her sister; then begaled him Weden, as he knew well:

Like bone-sprain, like blood-sprain, like joint-sprain!

Bone to bone, blood to blood, joint to joints, like were they glued together!

Against worms (Contra vermes)

Dating: ? Meter: Firnwordslaw

A manuscript charm, as its header suggests, aimed against worms. The worms (possibly maggots in an infected wound) are to leave the body (from marrow, to bone, to flesh, to skin) and instead go into some arrows (strála), possibly a ritual implement.

- 1 Gang út, Nesso, · mid nigun nessi-klínon,
- ut fana þemo marge an þat bên, fan þemo bêne an þat flesg, ut fan þemo flesgke an þia húd, ut fan þera húd an þesa strála.
- 4 Drohtin, werþe só.

Go out, Nesse, with nine small Nesses! Out from the marrow into the bone, from the bone into the flesh, out from the flesh into the skin, out from the skin into these arrows. Lord, may it be so.

Against Swarm (Wið ymbe)

Dating: ? Meter: Firnwordslaw

TODO. That bees are called "victory-wives" is interesting.

P1 Wiŏ ymbe nim eorþan, ofer weorp mid þínre swíþran handa under þínum swíþran fét, and cwet:

Against a swarm take earth, throw it with thy right hand under thy right foot, and say:

- 1 Fó ic under fót, · funde ic hit.
- 2 Hwæt eorŏe mæg · wiŏ ealra wihta ge·hwilce and wiŏ andan · and wiŏ æminde
- and wið þá micelan · mannes tungan.

I catch under foot, I may have found it. How, earth works against everywhich wight and against mischief and against neglect and against that mighty tongue of man.

4 þá micelan • mannes tungan 'that mighty tongue of man'] The tongue is surely here standing in for "speech", specifically galder; i.e., if the swarming of the bees were caused by an enemy's cursing, the earth will disarm it.

P2 And wiððon for weorp ofer greót, þonne hí swirman, and cweð:

And with that throw the grit over, when they swarm, and say:

 $<sup>1\ \ \</sup>text{for}\cdot\text{weorp}$  ofer greót 'throw the grit over' ]  $\ \text{i.e.}$  "throw the earth over the swarm".

- 2 Sitte gé, sige-wíf, · sígað to eorþan!
- Næfre gé wilde to wuda fleogan. Beo gé swá ge·mindige • mínes gódes,
- swá bið manna ge·hwilc · metes and épeles.

Sit ye, victory-wives, sink to the earth! Never would ye fly to the woods. Be ye so mindful of my good, as is every man of his measure and homestead.

One shall take seven small wafers, such as one offers [during the Mass], and write these names on each wafer: Maximianus, Malchus, Johannes, Martinianus, Dionysius, Constantinus, Seraphion. After that shall one sing this galder which is henceforth said; first into the left ear, then into the right ear, then over the man's head; and thereafter a maiden go forth, and hang it on his neck; and one do so for three days. He will soon be well.

Here came walking in an inspiden wight, had his harness in his hands; said that thou wert his horse, laid his reins on thy neck; then they together began to ride from the land. As soon as they came away from the land, then they together began to cool limbs. Then came walking in the beast's sister; then she ended [it], and swore oaths, that this never should harm the ailing man, nor him who this galder might get, nor whomever this galder could gale. Amen, let it be.

The Ribe Galder Stick

Dating: Medieval. Meter: Firnwordslaw

A wooden stick from the Danish city of Ribe. The galder is syncretic, and as such contains numerous pre-Christian elements, albeit in a Christian(ised) context.

The inscription may be conveniently divided into four parts. Part one (Il. 1–4) contains an introductory prayer where the healer asks for the support of natural forces (Earth, Up-heaven and the Sun) and Christian divinitities (God and Saint Mary), that the healing may be successful. Part two (Il. 5–8) ritually exorcises any sickness which may have entered any part of the body. Part three (Il. 9–14) apparently warns the addressee that they will be haunted by "nine needs" (an old Heathen formula; see Note) until they pray. Part four (Il. 15, which is probably prose) gives the personal name "Bonde", perhaps the addressee, and concludes with an "Amen".

Jorð bið ak varðe · ok up-himen sól ok sante María · ok salfen Guð drótten þet hann lé mik léknes-hand · ok lyf-tunge at lyfe bifjande · þer bóte þarf.

I bid earth to ward, and up-heaven, the sun and saint Mary, and the very lord God, that he lend me a healing-hand and medicine-tongue, as medicine for the trembler who needs a cure.

- þer ligger á þé níu nauðer; þér skule hverki sóten sofe;
- φŏ varmęn vakę;førr en þú þessa bót biŏer, þer ak orð at kvéŏe.

Swart is a stone called, he stands out in the ocean. There lie on it nine needs.

They will not sleep sweetly nor wake warmly, until thou prayest this cure to which I have given the words.

The Canterbury Galder

Dating: c. 1075 Meter: Firnwordslaw

This Old Norse galder is found in the Anglo-Saxon manuscript Cotton Caligula A XV. It runs across the bottom margin of the two facing pages 123v and 124r and is written in very clear runes of the Wiking age long-stave type. One rune, viz. g in vigi vegi 'smite' is stung. The inscription has no word separators.

The galder is of the same type as the two from Sigtuna (U Fv1933;134, U NOR1998;25) and clearly intended for healing; it ends with viðr áðra-vari 'against pus of veins', and this is probably a declaration of purpose.

Gyrils sár-þvara!

- Far-ðu nú, fundinn es-tu!

  pórr vegi þik þursa dróttinn!
- Jórils sár-þvara.Viðr áðra-vari.

O Gyrel's wound-TODO!
Go thou now, thou art found!
May Thunder smite thee, O lord of Thurses!
O Erel's wound-causer.
Against pus of veins.

Galders from Bryggen

Several galders or magical inscriptions are part of the cache of medieval rune-inscribed objects found at Bryggen in the city of Bergen, Norway. For simplicity's sake, they are here listed in ascending order of their runological numbers.

Dating: c. 1335 Meter: Galderlaw

A stick inscribed on four planed sides. Part of the stick is broken off, which renders the text incomplete. The inscription is clearly a "love-charm" (that is, a piece of sexually coercive magic), addressed—as shown by the feminine dative sjalfri þér 'thy self' on side D—to a woman. The language closely resembles that of Shir 36, in which Shirner, Free's servant, threatens to carve a runic inscription which will curse the ettin-woman Gird with ergi 'degeneracy', ðði 'madness', and ó·þoli 'restlessness, impatience' unless she sleep with his master. It seems that we are here dealing with just such a surviving runic curse, and that Shir 36 is reflecting an authentic form of Norse "love magic" (for it is unlikely that the present inscription should derive directly from that poem) by which a woman is cursed with sexual restlessness until she succumb to the will of the male curser.

A more distant parallel may be seen in the curse-formula found on the two C7th runic inscriptions from Stentoften and Björketorp (see TODO), wherein the destroyer of the respective monuments is cursed to become herma-lausan argjú 'restless (a different root from ó-þoli above!) with degeneracy', i.e. 'incessantly randy'.

Another thing of note is that side D ends with a string of fake-Latin gibberish, indicating post-conversion influence on the Old Norse-Germanic magic tradition.

A Ríst ek bót-rúnar · ríst ek bjarg-rúnar

- ein-falt við ǫlfum tví-falt við trollum
- 4 þrí-falt við þu*rsum*

I carve cure-runes, I carve rescue-runes: onefold against elves, twofold against trolls, threefold against thurses.

B Við inni skóðu · skag-val-kyrju svá't ei megi · þó-at é vili lé-vís kona · lífi þínu granda.

Against the scatheful shag-walkirrie, so that she may not—though she always wants to—that guile-wise woman—harm thy life.

C Ek sendir þér • ek sé á þér ylgjar ergi • ok ó• þola;

á þér hríni ó• þoli • ok jotuns móðr;

sit-tu aldri, • sop-tu aldri.

I send to thee, I see on thee a she-wolf's degeneracy and restlessness; may restlessness stick on thee, and an ettin's wrath! Never sit, never sleep!

- D Ant mér sem sjalfri þér.
- †Beirist rubus rabus et arantabus laus abus rosa gava†

Love me like thy self. [Latin-like gibberish].

A short little charm explicitly invoking the two most important Heathen Gods, Thunder and Weden. The inscription postdates the conversion of Norway by over a century, and it is therefore an open question whether the two mentioned gods should still have been seen in a positive light (in which case the inscription is only well-wishing, assuming that the receiver was of like mind to the sender), or whether they had already assimilated into the Christian complex of demons and devils (in which case the inscriber may have had more sinister intent than the first line lets on). Judging from the first line, and from the half-Heathen contents of many other inscriptions found at Bryggen (some from as late as the C14th), I prefer the first option.

```
Heill sé þú • ok í hugum góðum;

Þórr þik þiggi,

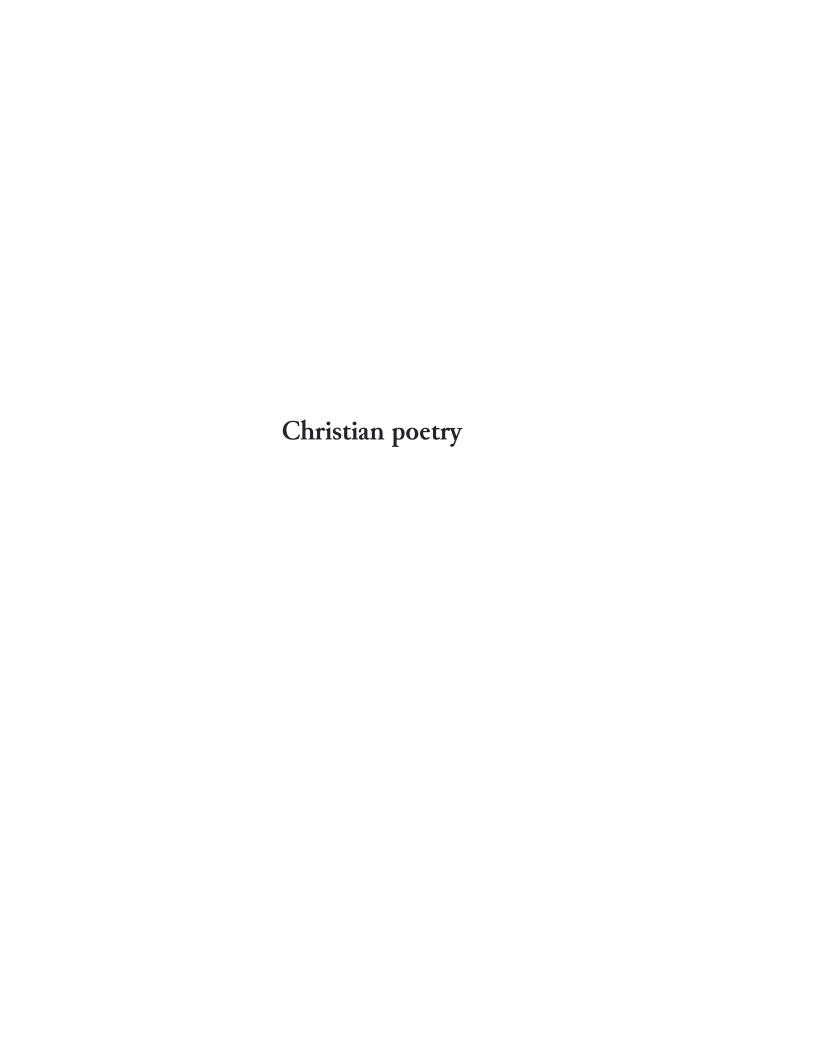

Óðinn þik eigi.

May thou be hale and in good spirits;<sup>281</sup> may Thunder receive thee, may Weden own thee.

3 Óʻoʻnn þik eigi 'may Weden own thee'] See note to Wsp 23.

Runic plates

 $<sup>^{281}\</sup>mbox{Formulaic},$  the same line is attested in  $\mbox{{\it Hym}}$  41; see note there for parallels.

Old Saxon Baptismal Vow

Dating: ? Meter: Prose.

While not an alliterative poem in the slightest, this short text is important for its mention of Saxon Heathen Gods, and as I have no section for Miscellanea, I have here set it first among the Christian poetry, in order to give relevant cultural context. The format of the text is straight-forward and resembles the modern Catholic questions asked to participants during the Sacrament of Confirmation (TODO: reference). The person to be baptised is to respond positively to three denying and three affirming questions; first to forsake the Devil (P1), all "Devil-yields" (i.e. non-Christian rituals, see note to that word) (P2), and all the Devil's "works and words" and his followers, among which are listed the three Germanic-Saxon gods Thunder, Weden, and Saxneet (P3); and then to profess belief in each member of the Trinity: God the almighty father (P4), Christ God's son (P5), and the Holy Ghost (P6).

P1 "For sachistu diobole?" et respondeat: "ec for sacho diabole" "Forsakest thou the Devil?" and he should respond: "I forsake the Devil."

P2 "end allum diobol-gelde?" respondeat: "end ec for·sacho allum diobol-2 gelde."

"And all devil-yields?" he should respond: "I forsake all devil-yields."

1 diobol-gelde 'devil-yields'] An obvious calque of OE TODO, which means TODO.

P3 "End allum dioboles wercum?" respondeat "end ec for·sacho allum dioboles <sup>2</sup> wercum and wordum, Thuner ende Wóden ende Sax-nôte ende allem them un·holdum the hira ge·nôtas sint." "And all the Devil's works" he should respond: "and I forsake all the works and words of the Devil; Thunder and Weden and Saxneet and all those unhold ones who are their fellows."

P4 "Ge·lôbistu in Got ala-mehtigun fader?" "Ec ge·lôbo in Got ala-mehtigun fader."

"Believest thou in God, the almighty father?" "I believe in God, the almighty father."

P5 "Ge·lôbistu in Crist Godes suno?" "Ec ge·lôbo in Crist Gotes suno." "Believest thou in Christ, God's son?" "I believe in Christ, God's son."

P6 "Ge·lôbistu in hâlogan gâst?" "Ec ge·lôbo in hâlogan gâst." "Believest thou in the Holy Ghost?" "I believe in the Holy Ghost."

The Wessobrunner Hymn

Dating: late C8th Meter: Firnwordslaw

This text can be split into two parts, the "poem" and the "prayer". Following my principle of including sources rather than excluding (TODO: see Introduction), I here present both.

The first part is a short alliterative poem describing the earliest beginning of the world. The poet describes "the greatest of wonders", namely that the universe began as a void, where neither earth nor heaven existed. In this void was, however, the almighty God, along with his many spirits (presumably the Heavenly Host or the Angels). While the cosmogony expressed is clearly Jewish-Christian rather than Germanic, the poem does contain two word-pairs also found in Norse Heathen stanzas about the creation of the world (see Notes to Il. 2, 3.), which may point toward a repurposing of older Heathen motifs and expressions in the new, Christian context.

The second part is a thoroughly Christian prayer. The author first thanks God for creating the earth and heaven, this is presumably why the poem was included, and for giving good things to mankind. He then asks for faith, strength and wisdom to "withstand devils", "reproach degeneracy" and "work [God's] will".

I learned among men that greatest of wonders, that earth was not, nor up-heaven, nor a forest, nor a mountain was not, nor any [...]; nor did the sun shine, nor the moon give off light, nor the glittering sea.

Then nothing was there, neither of limit nor infinity (TODO: Translation),—and then was the One Almighty God: the mildest of men [= Christ], and there were also many with Him: good ghosts, and Holy God.

2 erdo] ero ms.

2 erdo ... úf-himil 'earth ... up-heaven' ] A formulaic merism attested across the Germanic world, expressing the totality of the universe. Cf. especially Webth 21, where the god Weden asks the ettin Webthrithner about the origin of "earth and up-heaven", and Wsp 3/3, where it is said, about the time before the World existed, that "earth and up-heaven" never existed.

3 paum ... perek 'forest ... mountain'] The same word-pair is found in Grmn 40, describing the creation of the world from Yimer's body by the Gods.

- P1 Kot al-mahtiko, dú himil enti erda ga·worahtós, enti dú mannun só manak

O God almighty, thou didst work heaven and earth, and thou didst give men so many good things. Give me in thy mercy the right belief and good will, wisdom and prophecy, and power to withstand devils and to reproach degeneracy and to work thy will.

Cultural and religious terms and expressions (C) ape (ON api, OE apa, OS apo, OHG affo, PNWGmc. *apó) In the Old Norse the word seems to mean 'fool, buffoon', in the other old languages apparently 'monkey', though this sense should be a later development of the former; why would the early Germanic tribes have a word for an animal that they had never encountered?

aught (ON étt, OE éht 'possession, property') The Nordic (paternal) clan or family line.

begale (OHG bi-galan) To enchant, bewitch something or someone by singing a galder<sup>C</sup>. Transitive of gale<sup>C</sup>.

bigh (ON baugr, OE béag, OHG boug) Armlets used as currency during the Migration Period. — The giving of rings and armlets in exchange for loyalty (holdness<sup>C</sup> being the word used for a warrior's loyalty towards his lord, and of a lord's grace towards his servants) was common across all of Germanic Europe, as seen in the many poetic ruler-kennings of the type "breaker of rings" (e.g. béaga brytta 'the breaker of bighs' in Beow II. 35, 352, 1487). An illustrative example of this is Hild 33–35. This is also connected with the oath-ring, and the famous ring-swords. TODO? reference some literature on this.

bloot (ON blót, OE blót, OHG bluoz) A sacrifice or a sacrificial feast, one of the best attested Germanic pagan practices. The animals would be sacrificed by the host, cooked in large kettles and eaten communally. See also bloot-house<sup>C</sup>.

bloot-house (ON blót-hús, OHG bluoz-hús) A heathen temple. Glosses Latin fānum in OHG. See also harrow<sup>C</sup>, hove<sup>C</sup>, wigh<sup>C</sup>.

Doom (ON dómr, OE dóm) Commonly 'judgement, verdict' (whence Doomsday, 'Judgement Day'), in the Norse and Anglo-Saxon poetry often specifically referring to one's fame or good reputation (that is, how others will judge one's character and deeds), especially after death. It is clear that this verdict was of utmost importance to the ancient Germanic people. The clearest examples are High 77 (see there): I know one that never dies: the Doom o'er each man dead. and Beow 1384-1389, where Beewolf consols king Rothgar after Grendle's mother has slain his trusted advisor Asher (Æschere):

Ne sorga, snotor guma! • Sélre bið æghwæm, // þæt hé his fréond wrece, • þonne hé fela murne. // Úre æghwylc sceal • ende gebídan // worolde lífes; • wyrce sé þe móte // dómes ær déaþe; • þæt bið drihtguman // unlifgendum • æfter sélest.

'Sorrow not, wise man! 'Tis better for each one that he avenge his friend, than that he mourn much. Each one of us shall suffer the end of worldly life—win he who might Doom before death: that is for the warrior, unliving, afterwards the best.'

Other illustrative examples in Beow include 884b–887a: [...] Sigemunde gesprong // æfter déaðdæge · dóm unlýtel // syþðan wíges heard · wyrm ácwealde // hordes hyrde [...] 'For Syemund<sup>P</sup> sprang up after his day of death an unlittle [= great] Doom, since hard in conflict he defeated the Wyrm<sup>C</sup>, the herder of the hoard.' and 953b–955a: [...] þú þé self hafast // dédum gefremed · þæt þín dóm lyfað // áwa tó aldre [...] 'Thou hast for thyself by deeds accomplished that thy Doom lives for ever and ever.'

feather-hame (ON fjaŏr-hamr, OE feŏer-hama, OS feŏar-, feŏer-hamo) A plumage, which when donned by the wearer lets him fly like, or perhaps become, a bird. One is owned by Frow and used by Lock to fly between the homes. In the Healend feather-hames are donned by angels who fly from heaven to earth. See also hame<sup>C</sup>.

fee (ON fé, OE féoh) Originally 'cattle', however also used in a broader sense to refer to one's mobile wealth. For this cf. particularly High TODO.

fey (ON feigr, OE fége, OHG feigi 'cowardly') Being doomed or fated to die, with a sense of predestination and inevitability. Its earliest use is on the Rök stone: aft uamuþ stanta runar þar + n uarin faþi faþir aft faikian sunu Apt Vámóð standa rúnar þár, en Varinn fáði, faðir aft feigjan sonu 'After Woemood (Vámóðr) stand these runes<sup>C</sup>, but Warren (Varinn) painted, the father after the fey son.' It was believed that one's TODO. See PCRN HS II:35, p. 928 ff. (TODO)

five days (ON fimm dagar) The Old Scandinavian (and perhaps Germanic) week was originally five days long, the seven-day week being a later import, as seen by the names of the days, which are obviously calqued from the Latin (Dies Mercurii = Weden's day, et.c.). According to the GolL there were six weeks in a month, and "five days" is used as a generic period of time in High 51 and 74; in st. 74 it is contrasted with month. Related to this is the legal term fifth (ON fimmt, OSw. femt), a meeting or gathering set to be held at a five-day notice. See fimt in CV, Love et al. (2020) for further discussion.

gale (ON gala, OE galan, OHG galan) To sing, chant, especially of magical songs; verbal root of galder<sup>C</sup> 'something sung, chanted'.

gand (ON gandr, Latin gandus) A witch's familiar, a spirit sent out to do her bidding. See PCRN HS I:17, p. 361 and II:26, p. 656. TODO gid (ON goði, OE Gydda masc. given name) A heathen priest or master of ceremonies.

gidden (ON gyðja, OE gyden 'goddess') The womanly equivalent of gid<sup>C</sup>.

good of meat (ON matar gốờr) An old expression, appearing both in High 39 and several Viking Age Runic inscriptions, viz. Sm 39: mildan orða · ok matar góðan 'mild of words and good of meat', U 805: bónda góðan matar 'a farmer good of meat', U 703: mandr matar góðr · auk máls risinn 'a man good of meat and proud in speech<sup>TM</sup>; cf. also U 739: hann var mildr matar · auk máls risinn 'he was mild of meat and proud in speech'. — Antonyms are matar illr 'evil of meat' and meat-nithing<sup>C</sup>.

hame (ON bamr) A skin, shape. Individuals can through magic "shift hames" (ON skipta homum), and leave their human bames behind, instead entering into the shapes of wolves, bears, birds. During this process the original hame would be sleeping in a vulnerable state, as described in WalsS ch. TODO-NUMBER: TODO-QUOTATION. See also feather-hame<sup>C</sup>, town-riders<sup>C</sup>, evening-riders<sup>C</sup>.

harrow (ON borgr, OE bearg, PNWGmc. **barugar*) A cairn constructed for ritual purposes. Hdl 10 describes one: "A harrow<sup>C</sup> he made for me, loaded with stones; now that stone-pile is become into glass. He reddened [it] in fresh blood of oxen; Oughter<sup>P</sup> ever trusted on the Ossens<sup>G</sup>." See also wigh<sup>C</sup>.

hold (ON bollr, OE bold, OS bold, OHG bold) 'Favourable, loyal, gracious', often of a ruler towards his subject (in the sense of 'gracious, benevolent') or vice-versa (in the sense of 'loyal, devoted'). Mirroring these earthly relationships, it is often used to refer to divine grace, both of the Christian God—thus in the Ecclesiastical Laws of King Cnut ALIE I (p. 372): Pam byh witod-lice God bold, he bið his bláforde ribtlíce bold 'Indeed God is hold towards him who is rightly hold to his lord'—but in the oldest Scandinavian material likewise of the Heathen gods. Thus Lock 4 (e.): boll regin 'hold Reins<sup>G</sup>', and Ord 10 (e.):

Svá hjalpi þér · hollar véttir,

'So help thee hold wights<sup>C</sup>; Frie<sup>P</sup> and Frow<sup>P</sup>, and more gods [...]'.

This word is common in old Scandinavian oath formulæ, e.g. in the elder redaction of the West-Geatish Law: Svá sé mér goð holl 'So may the Gods(!) be hold towards me,' in medieval Norwegian laws (NgL II[197,397]) and Grey-Goose (TODO: cite): Guð sé mér hollr ef ek satt segi, gramr ef ek lýg 'God be hold towards me if I speak truly, wroth if I lie,' in Grey-Goose (TODO) also: Sé guð hollr þeim er heldr griðum, en gramr þeim er grið rýfr 'God be hold towards him who keeps the truce, but wroth against him who breaks the truce'. I refer to Läffler (1895) for further discussion on these formulæ.

holdness (ON hylli, OE hyldu, OHG huldi) Abstract noun formed to hold<sup>C</sup>, meaning 'favour, loyalty, grace,' with the same semantics as the adjective.

Notably, this word appears three times in connection with the grace of gods in the poetry, namely in Grmn 43, where (according to my interpretation) the preparer of food at the bloot is said to earn the "holdness of Woulder" and of all the gods;"

and Grmn 53 where the disgraced king Garfrith is said to have been bereft of the support gęngi of Weden and all the Oneharriers, and of "Weden's holdness" (Óðins hylli). "Weden's holdness" is also mentioned in a stanza by Hallfred (edited as Hfr Lv 7 by Diana Whaley in SkP V), who laments that: "The whole race of man has wrought songs to win the holdness of Weden; I recall the fully rewarded works of our kinsmen/ancestors."

From the semantics of this word the Germanic view on heavenly grace is clear: the Gods are hold towards those who do good works, which include swearing true oaths, faithfully observing truces, partaking in the bloot, following rules of hospitality, and composing poetry—and gram<sup>C</sup> 'wroth' towards those who do the opposite.

Home (ON heimr, OE hám, PNWGmc. *haimar) In the Norse often referring to a realm in the cosmology (Wsp 2: "I remember nine Homes", Webth TODO: "From the runes of the Ettins<sup>G</sup> and of all the gods I can speak truly, for I have come into each Home"). Thus Ettinham<sup>L</sup> is the 'Home/realm of the ettins'. When used alone the term simply means 'the world (that we inhabit)'. See also nine Homes<sup>L</sup>, Thrithham<sup>L</sup>.

leat (ON hlaut) In some saws explained as the blood drained from the offered animal; the verbal root is hljóta 'to get by lot' and this word certainly refers to the use of the blood for auguries.

leat-twig (ON blaut-tęinn) A twig used to sprinkle the leat<sup>C</sup>. The pattern of the blood would presumably be inspected for the augury; cf. Hym 1.

leed (ON ljóð, OE léod) A magical chant or incantation, as seen by High 153 synonymous with galder<sup>C</sup>. See also gale<sup>C</sup>, begale<sup>C</sup>.

manwit (ON man-vit) Common sense and wits.

many-cunning (ON fjol-kunnigr) Skilled with sorcery or the dark arts.

meat-nithing (ON mat-niðingr) One who is a nithing with food, i.e. one who does not properly furnish his guest. See good of meat.

nithe (ON níð, OE níþ, OHG níd) Originally 'hatred, emnity'. In the Norse the sense is something like 'shame' which was not just a social abstraction, but almost a tangible thing. So the curse ritual where the curser would "turn nithe" (snýja níð against his enemy to cause him great misfortune. A poet would "compose nithe" (yrkja níð) through singing slanderous verses, which likewise had a adverse effect on their subject. See also nithing.

nithing (ON niŏingr, OE niþing) One afflicted with nithe<sup>C</sup>; a villain. In the Norse a sort of legal term; a nithing could not swear oaths or bear witness.

orlay (ON orlog, OE orlæg) One's predetermined fate, destiny, purpose as decreed by the Norns<sup>G</sup>.

- rest (ON rost) The distance between two rest-stops, a geographical mile (about 1850 metres). See CV: rost.
- scold (ON skald) A Scandinavian court poet. The name probably comes from their ability to slander with words.
- simble (ON sumbl, OE symbol) A banquet.
  - soo (ON sóa) To ritually waste, to slay (especially in a sacrificial context).
  - thill (ON þylja) To chant poetry or lists (so called thules<sup>C</sup>) acquired by rote memorization. See thyle<sup>C</sup>.
- Thing (ON, OE þing, OS thing, OHG ding) A (legal) assembly, where lawsuits would be settled and the law fastened. See also Thing of the Gods<sup>L</sup>.
- thule (ON pula) A poetic list, typically of various items of a category (e.g. gods, legendary horses) or poetic synonyms (e.g. for swords, men, Weden). Degoratively also a ditty, poorly composed poem. See thyle<sup>C</sup>.
- thyle (ON pulr, OE pyle, PNWGmc. **puli*R) A sage who through rote learning has acquired a large amount of mythological lore (cf. thule<sup>C</sup> 'a list in poetic form; a ditty, bad poem' and thill<sup>C</sup> 'to recite, to chant'). Thus Weden<sup>P</sup> is the Fimblethyle<sup>P</sup>, being the unbeaten master of lore, as can be seen in his wisdom contests (like Webth). Runic inscription DR 248 (Snoldelev) suggests the thyle may have tied to a specific place, and in Beow it seems to have been a court position, with the poet Unferth being described (l. 1456) as the "thyle of Rothgar".
- wale (ON volr) The staff or sceptre of a wallow. TODO: archeological finds, mention Sutton Hoo.
- wallow (ON volva, OE *wealwe (cf. ON svolva, OE swealwe 'swallow')) A sibyl, seeress, oracle. The word derives from the wale<sup>C</sup>, a staff or sceptre probably used for ritual purposes.
  - wigh (ON vé, OE wéoh, wíh, PNWGmc. *wīhą) A holy shrine or sanctuary. It seems that where the harrow<sup>C</sup> was a pile of stones or cairn used for carrying out rituals, the wigh was an enclosed space. The earliest Norse attestation is the runic inscription Ög N288 (Oklunda), which reads: "Guther <= Gunnarr> painted these runes, and he fled, guilty. Sought this wigh, and he fled into this clearing. And he bound. [...]" The implication seems to be that the wigh was considered so sacred that Guther could not be apprehended or punished for his crime while in it. — In OE the word means 'pagan idol'. It is not immediately clear which meaning is the original one, but in the present edition the Norse sense has been adopted, since the Anglo-Saxon sources are all of a Christian nature. The Beow name Wighstone (Wīh- or Wēohstān) in any case suggests it is the Norse meaning, since 'idol-stone' makes little sense.

- wode (ON óðr, OE wód, PNWGmc. *wódur.) Heener P's gift to men, though the name may suggest it be from Weden P. The word has several related meanings: 'mind, (poetic) inspiration, rage'. See also Woderearer P.
- wyrm (ON ormr, OE wyrm, PNWGmc. **wurmiR*) A dragon, serpent. The distinction between "wyrm" and "worm; snake" is purely editorial and not made in the original languages.
- yin- (ON ginn-) A rare augmentative prefix. TODO.
- yin-holy (ON ginn-heilagr) High holy, sacrosanct. Used of the Gods in the formula ginn-heilog goδ 'yin-holy Gods'.

Persons and objects (P)

- Attle (Attila, ON Atli, OE Ætla, MHG. Etzel, PNWGmc. *Attiló) The ruler of the Huns<sup>G</sup> (historically from 434–453). Husband of Guthrun<sup>P</sup>, and with her father of Earp and Oatle<sup>P</sup>. and murderer of I HHb 54, SiL 11, I Gr 23, ShS 28, 29, 33, 37, 54, 56, 57, II Gr 26, 38, 45, III Gr 1, 9, BnOr 0, OdW A, 2, 22, 23, 25, 26, 30, 31, AtD 0, AtL 1, 3, 15, 17, 18, 27, 31, 32, 34, 36, 37, 38, 41, 43, B, AtS 2, 4, 21, 22, 44, 52, 60, 64, 71, 73, 77, 80, 86, 87, 97, 98, 108, 113, 117, FGr 0, GrB 12, Ham 6.
- Balder (ON Baldr, OE Bældæg (not directly cognate), OHG Balter, PWGmc. *BaldrarN The beautiful son of Weden<sup>P</sup>, slayed by his brother Hath<sup>P</sup>, avenged by his other brother Wonnel<sup>P</sup>. Husband of Nan<sup>P</sup>.
- Earp and Oatle (ON Erpr ok Eitill) The sons of Attle<sup>P</sup> and Guthrun<sup>P</sup>.
  - Earth (ON jǫrŏ, OE eorþe, OHG erda, PNWGmc. *erþu, PGmc. *erþó) The personified Earth. By Weden<sup>P</sup> the mother of Thunder<sup>P</sup>.
  - Fathomer (ON Fáfnir) The wyrm<sup>C</sup> slain by Siward<sup>P</sup>, who was originally a man. Son of Rethmar<sup>P</sup>, brother of Otter<sup>P</sup> and Rein<sup>P</sup>.
  - Fimblethyle (ON Fimbulpulr) The 'ultimate thyle<sup>C</sup>' or sage; name for Weden<sup>P</sup>.
    - Free (ON Fręyr, OE fréa 'lord', PNWGmc. **Frawjar*) Son of Nearth<sup>P</sup>, brother of Frow<sup>P</sup>. See also Ing<sup>P</sup>.

- Frie (ON Frigg, OE **Frige*, OHG Frija, PNWGmc. **Frijju*) Wife of Weden<sup>P</sup>, mother of Balder<sup>P</sup>. Related to Full<sup>P</sup>, who is either her sister (Second Merseburg Charm, though this may be metaphorical, as in Hdl 1) or her maid-servant (the Norse sources).
- Frow (ON Freyja) Cat-goddess, daughter of Nearth<sup>P</sup>, sister of Free<sup>P</sup>, wife of Wode<sup>P</sup>. Promised to the Ettin. Possibly = Easter?
- Full (ON Fulla, OHG Folla) Maid-servant (or sister?) of Frie<sup>P</sup>; see there.
- Guther (ON Gunnarr, MHG Gunther) Brother of Hain<sup>P</sup>.
- Guthrun (ON Guŏrún) Daughter of king Yivick<sup>P</sup>, sister of Guther<sup>P</sup> and Hain<sup>P</sup>. The wife of Attle<sup>P</sup>.
  - Hain [Hain 1] (ON Hogni, OE Haguna, Hagena, OHG Hagano, Ger. Hagen, PNWGmc. *Haguno) A Nivling<sup>G</sup> and Yivicking<sup>G</sup>, son of king Yivick<sup>P</sup>, brother of Guther<sup>P</sup> and Guthrun<sup>P</sup>. In Atl he defeats seven warriors before being captured by Attle<sup>P</sup>, who has his heart cut out at the request of Guther.
- Hain 2 [2] A petty king of East Geatland<sup>L</sup>, contemporary with Granmer<sup>P</sup>, the king of Southmanland<sup>L</sup> and Ingeld Illred, the Ingling<sup>G</sup> king of Upland<sup>L</sup>.
  - Hath (ON Hoor) The blind son of Weden<sup>P</sup>, the slayer of his brother Balder<sup>P</sup>.
- Heener (ON Hónir, PNWGmc. *Hónija*R 'the little swan(?)') An obscure god. Rydberg (1886)[552] has convincingly argued that he is connected with the stork, connecting his name with the Greek κύκνος 'swan' and Sanskrit śakuna 'bird of omen', and noting that his epithets langi fótr 'long foot' and aurkonungr 'mud-king' (both found in Scold 22) accurately describe the stork. He gives wode<sup>C</sup> TODO.
  - Hell (ON Hel) Owneress of Hell<sup>L</sup>.
- Hindle (ON Hyndla) A witch awoken by Frow<sup>P</sup> in Hdl.
- Homedall (ON Heimdallr, OE *Hámdall) The Watchman of the gods, whitest of the Eese G.
  - Hymer (ON Hymir) Tew<sup>P</sup>'s father according to Hym.
    - Ing (ON Yngvi, OE Ing) Probably an older name of Free<sup>P</sup>. The legendary ancestor of the Inglings<sup>G</sup>. Cf. the Old English Rune Poem.
  - Lother (ON Lóðurr, OS Logaþore, PNWGmc. *Logaþorjan 'Flame-darer(?)') Gives three gifts to man. The Old Saxon attestation is a bit uncertain.
  - Millner (ON Mjollnir, OE *Meldne, PNWGmc. *Meldunjar) The hammer owned by Thunder<sup>C</sup>.
  - Moon (ON Máni) The personfied moon. In Webth 23 the son of Mundlefare<sup>P</sup> and brother of Sun<sup>P</sup>.
    - For ritual invocations of the Moon see Note to High TODO (heiptum kveða).

- Mundlefare (ON Mundilfari) The father of Sun<sup>P</sup> and Moon<sup>P</sup> (Webth 23).
  - Nearth (ON Njorðr) One of the Wanes<sup>G</sup>. Father of Free<sup>P</sup> and Frow<sup>P</sup>.
  - Nithad (ON Niõuõr, OE Niþhad, PNWGmc. *Niþa-haduz) The king that imprisoned Wayland<sup>P</sup>, father of Beadhild<sup>P</sup> and two unnamed sons (Wayl, Dear).
  - Oughter (ON Óttarr, OE Óhthere, PNWGmc. *Óhta-harjar) Legendary Swedish king.
  - Rotholf (ON Hrólfr kraki, OE Hróþulf, PNWGmc. **Hróþi-wulfan*) A king of the Shieldings G (see family tree). As foreshadowed in Beow 1017–9, 1180–90, he betrays the sons of Rothgar<sup>P</sup>, his cousins Rethrich and Rothmund<sup>P</sup>, in order to take the throne for himself. In the later Icelandic tradition this has been forgotten, and he is consistently portrayed as a heroic king.
  - Rothgar (ON Hróarr, OE Hróþgár, PNWGmc. **Hróþi-gairar*) A king of the Shieldings G (see family tree), one of the main characters in Beow.
    - Shede (ON Skaði, OE Scede(?), PGmc. *Skadī) A female figure, possibly the namesake of Shedeny<sup>L</sup> and the Shedelands<sup>L</sup>, in which case she was in an early period closely associated with, and perhaps thought to guard, the Scandinavian (or properly Scadinavian, see Shedeny) peninsula. In the Norse tradition the daughter of Thedse<sup>P</sup>, and later wife of Nearth<sup>P</sup>. Their marriage is the subject of Yilv which preserves.
    - Shield (ON Skjǫldr, OE Scyld, PNWGmc. *Skelduz) Legendary Danish king, founder of the Shieldings<sup>G</sup>.
  - Syemund (ON Sig-mundr, OE Sige-mund, MHG. Sieg-mund, PNWGmc. *Sigi-mundur.)

    In the Norse tradition the son of Walsing<sup>C</sup> and father of Siward<sup>P</sup>. In Beow it is instead Syemund himself who slays an unnamed wyrm. Connected with his nephew Sinfittle<sup>P</sup>.
  - Sithguth (OHG Sinthgunt, PNWGmc. **Sinha-gunhir*(?)) Only known from Mers II as the sister of Sun<sup>P</sup>.
    - Siward (ON Sigurŏr) A hero of the Walsings<sup>G</sup>, slayer of the wyrm<sup>C</sup> Fathomer<sup>P</sup>.
      - Sun (ON Sól, OHG Sunna) The personified Sun, who in the Germanic mythology is a woman. In Webth 22 the daughter of Mundlefare<sup>P</sup> and sister of Moon<sup>P</sup>. In Mers II the sister of Sithguth<sup>P</sup>.
    - Thrim (ON Prymr) Ettin who steals Thunder's hammer in Thrim and is later killed.
  - Thunder (ON pórr, OE punor, OHG Donar, PNWGmc. **ponarar*) Son of Weden<sup>P</sup> and Earth<sup>P</sup>. Friend of men, guarding of Middenyard.
    - Tew (ON Týr, OE Tíw) Son of Hymer<sup>P</sup>. One-handed god. The name is not identical to Sanskrit Dyāus, Greek Zeus, Latin Iuppiter.
- Webthrithner (ON Vafþrúðnir) Ettin defeated by Weden in the wisdom contest in Webth.

- Weden (rhymes with leaden; ON Óðinn, OE Wóden, Wéden, OHG Wuotan, PNWGmc. *Wódanar 'Lord of wode<sup>C</sup> (poetry, intelligence)') Chief of the Eese<sup>G</sup>, God of Wisdom, Galder, Poetry, War. Husband of Frie<sup>P</sup>, and by her father of Balder<sup>P</sup>. Father of Thunder<sup>P</sup> by Earth<sup>P</sup>. Brother of Heener<sup>P</sup> and Lother<sup>P</sup> or Will<sup>P</sup> and Wigh<sup>P</sup>.
- Wider (ON Við-arr, OE *Wid-here, PNWGmc. *Wida-harjar) Son of Weden<sup>P</sup>, who avenges him at the Rakes of the Reins<sup>L</sup>.
- Wigh (ON Véi, PNWGmc. *Wīhā 'hallower, (heathen) priest') Brother of Weden<sup>P</sup> and Will<sup>P</sup>.
- Will (ON Vili, PNWGmc. *Wiljā) Brother of Weden<sup>P</sup> and Wigh<sup>P</sup>.
- Wode (ON O OE W Obscure husband of Frow P. His name looks to be the same word as wode C.
- Wonnel (ON Váli, OE **Wonela*, PNWGmc. **Wanilô* 'the little Wane<sup>G</sup>?') Son of Weden<sup>P</sup>, who just one night old avenges his brother Balder<sup>P</sup> through slaying Hath<sup>P</sup>, his half-brother.
- Woulder (ON Ullr, *Wuldor, PNWGmc. *Wulþuz) A rather obscure god. He is mentioned in connection with oath-rings (TODO) and the setting of ritual fires (Grmn TODO). These obscure references are likely related to the interesting finds at Lilla Ullevi ('the small wigh<sup>C</sup> of Woulder') in Upland, Sweden, consisting of several dozen fire striker-shaped iron amulet rings dating to 660–780 (for a detailed description see (af Edholm, 2009)).
  - Yimer (ON Ymir, OE **Yime*) The primeval ancestor of the Ettins<sup>G</sup>, probably equivalent to Earyelmer<sup>P</sup>. The first Gods slew Yimer and arranged the world out of his corpse.
  - Yivick (ON Gjúki, OE Gifica, OHG Gibicho, MHG. Gibeche) King of the Burgends<sup>G</sup> (historically from late 300s–407) of the Nifling dynasty, ancestor of the Yivickings<sup>G</sup>. Father of Guthrun<sup>P</sup>, Guther<sup>P</sup> and Hain<sup>P</sup>.

Groups and tribes (G)

- TODO: Map of rough tribal areas. Geneaologies.
- All Gods (ON oll god) Occurs in ritual or ritual-adjacent use (see note to Grmn 43, Sdr 2–3, Lock 11), strongly suggesting a conception of Godly Oneness (Divine Unity). Compare the Thing of the Gods<sup>G</sup>.
  - Danes (ON danir, OE dene, PNWGmc. \*danír.) A tribe in eastern modern-day Denmark and southern Sweden. They probably originated in Scania in southern Sweden, before moving westwards into the Danish isles and eventually Jutland, driving out the Earls  $^{\rm G}$  and Jutes  $^{\rm G}$ . Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO
  - Dwarfs (ON dvergar, OE dweorgas, OHG twerca, PNWGmc. *dwergón) Earthly (chthonic) supernatural beings, often referred to as living in rocks and mountains. Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO

- Eese (rhyming with geese; ON ésir, OE ése, PNWGmc. *ansiwir; sg. os, ON áss, OE ós, PNWGmc. *answr) Either a subgroup of Gods or all the Gods. See also Gods<sup>G</sup>, Tews<sup>G</sup>, Wanes<sup>G</sup>, Reins<sup>G</sup>. Noted members: Weden<sup>P</sup>, Thunder<sup>P</sup>, Frie<sup>P</sup>, Hath<sup>P</sup> and Balder<sup>P</sup> Attestations: TODO
- Elves (ON alfar, OE ielfe, PNWGmc. *alβίκ) Earthly (chthonic) supernatural beings. Possibly ancestral spirits? Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO
- Ettins (ON jotnar, OE eotenas, PNWGmc. *etunón) The fundamental enemies of the Gods, the agents of chaos and disorder. See Rises<sup>G</sup>, Thurses<sup>G</sup>. Noted members: Hymer<sup>P</sup>, Thrim<sup>P</sup>, Webthrithner<sup>P</sup>, Yimer<sup>P</sup> Attestations: TODO
- Geats (ON gautar, OE géatas, PNWGmc. *gautón from *geut- 'to pour', perhaps 'the libators') A tribe in what is today southern-central Sweden. See also Geatland<sup>L</sup>, Swedes<sup>G</sup>. Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO
- yin-Reins (ON ginn-regin) yin-C + ReinsG. The sacrosanct, highest divine powers.
  - Gods (ON goð, OE godu, OHG gota, PNWGmc. *godu) TODO. Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO
  - Huns (ON búnir, OE Húne, OHG Húni, Hunni, PNWGmc. *búnín) An invading Asiatic tribe in the Migration Period. In the legendary material their cultural and ethnic foreignness is not seen. Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO
  - Inglings (ON ynglingar, PNWGmc. **ingwalingón* 'the descendants of Ing<sup>P</sup>') Difference between this term and Shelvings<sup>G</sup> is a bit unclear. They seem to be used synonymously in the Norse sources, whereas the English only use the later.
    - Nears (ON níarar -njárar) A Swedish tribe, only mentioned in Wayl, where it is ruled by king Nithad<sup>P</sup>. The name and location may allow us to connect them with the Swedish province of Närke, cf. Old Swedish Nærikiar 'inhabitants of Närke', Nærisker 'belonging to Närke; Nearish'. The Old Swedish stem nær- (with unclear vowel length, though it is probably long) would be a reduced form of níar-, njár-.
    - Norns (ON nornir) Supernatural women responsible for the fates (orlay<sup>C</sup>s) of men. Probably synonymous with Dises<sup>G</sup>, Mothers<sup>G</sup>.
  - Ossens (ON osynjur) The wives of the Eese<sup>G</sup>, see there.
- Oneharriers (ON ein-herjar, OE *án-hergas) Weden's chosen warriors, probably corresponding to the Vedic Maruts. The Ownharriers have some agency (Grmn TODO) and were probably also invoked in rituals. Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO
  - Reins (ON rogn, regin) The heavenly powers. Judging from Webth TODO the term may be more closely associated with the Wanes<sup>G</sup> than the Eese<sup>G</sup>.
  - Saxons (ON saxar, OE Seaxan, Seaxe) TODO. Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO

- Shieldings (ON skjoldungar, OE Scyldingas, PNWGmc. *skeldungón) The descendants of Shield<sup>P</sup>; the legendary Danish<sup>G</sup> royal dynasty. With Harward<sup>P</sup>'s death after his slaying of Rotholf<sup>P</sup> their rule ended. TODO Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO
- Shelvings (ON skilfingar, OE scilfingas, PNWGmc. *skilβingón) The descendants of Shelf<sup>P</sup>; the legendary Swedish<sup>G</sup> royal dynasty. The exact difference between the terms Shelvings and Inglings<sup>G</sup> is unclear, but the first may have referred to the old royal family in Sweden, while the latter to the Norwegian branch which claimed descent from the former. TODO Noted members: TODO Attestations: Hdl 15, 20
  - Swedes (ON svíar, OE swéon, PNWGmc. *swihaníR) The tribe around the Mälar valley in eastern Sweden. Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO
- Thurses (sg. Thurse; ON purs, OE pyrs, OS thuris, OHG duris, PNWGmc. **purisaR*) Possibly a poetic synonym for Ettins<sup>G</sup>. See also Rime-Thurses<sup>G</sup>. Noted members: TODO Attestations: Wal 8, Shr 31, 35, 36, Hyme 17, Thr 5, 10, 21, 24, 29, 30, Alw 2, I HHb 40, HHw 27.
  - Tews (ON tivar, PNWGmc. *tίwóκ) A poetic synonym for Gods<sup>G</sup>. Attestations: TODO
- Wanes (ON vanir, OE wan-?) A subgroup or tribe of the gods, associated with fertility, harvests and fishing. Noted members: Nearth<sup>P</sup>, Ing<sup>P</sup>, Frow<sup>P</sup> Attestations: TODO
- Yivickings (ON gjúkungar) The descendants of Yivick<sup>P</sup>, including Guther<sup>P</sup>, Guthrun<sup>P</sup> and Hain<sup>P</sup>. Attestations: TODO

Places and events (L)

- Eastern Way (ON Austr-vegr) In the mythology the eastern lands of the Ettins<sup>G</sup>, to which Thunder<sup>P</sup> goes to fight the Ettins and protect the realms of Gods and men. Probably the same as Ettinham<sup>L</sup>. In Scandinavian (especially Swedish) runic inscriptions this word refers to Eastern Europe and Asia.
  - Ettinham (ON Jotun-heimr, Jotna-heimar) The 'Ettin<sup>G</sup>-Home<sup>C</sup>' or 'home of the Ettins'; the eastern realm of chaotic and inhospitable beings. See also Eastern Way<sup>L</sup>, Outyards<sup>L</sup>.
- Fimble-winter (ON fimbulvetr) The great winter, which kills all humans apart from Life and Lifethrasher<sup>P</sup>.
  - Geatland (ON Gaut-land, Gauta-land) The land of the Geats<sup>G</sup>.
    - Hell (ON bęl, PNWGmc. **halju*, Got. halja) The Underworld, personfied as and formally identical to Hell<sup>P</sup>. After the arrival of Christianity the word came to refer to the Christian hell-fire (= Gehenna), which is the case in all attested languages apart from the Old Norse. See also Nivelhell<sup>L</sup>.
  - Middenyard (ON Miò-garòr, OE Middan-geard, OS Middil-gard, OHG Mittil-gart, Got. midjungards) The 'Middle Enclosure'; the realm of men. See also Osyard<sup>L</sup>, Outyards<sup>L</sup>.

Nivelhell (ON nifl-hęl) 'Mist-Hell'. From the poetic evidence it seems like it may originally have been a synonym for Hell<sup>L</sup>.

Rakes of the Tews (ON tiva rok) See Rakes of the Reins<sup>L</sup>.

Thing of the Gods (ON þing goða) The Divine Council or Assembly, where the Gods convene and make decisions; a conception well known from Near Eastern literature. The Thing is only attended by the male Gods (Eese<sup>G</sup>, Bdr 1, Thrim 14); it is held every day (Grmn TODO). According to Snorre twelve Gods apart from Weden were present at the Thing (viz. Thunder, Nearth, Free, Tew, Homedall, Bray, Wither, Wonnel, Woulder, Heener, Forset, Lock); this certainly corresponds to the Scandinavian and English jury of twelve men. Occurrences: Wsp 6, 9, etc, Hym TODO.

Walhall (ON Valhǫll, OE Wælheall) The Hall of the Slain owned by Weden<sup>P</sup> and inhabited by the Oneharriers<sup>G</sup>.

Poetic formulæ (F)

All formulæ are given in English translation, their attested forms and a Proto-Germanic rendition. For those consisting of two words bound together by a conjunction, & is written in its place.

Earth and Up-heaven (ON jorð & upphiminn, OE eorþe & upheofon, PGmc. *erþō & uphiminaz) An ancient poetic merism meaning "the world"; used especially about the creation and destruction of the world, and in prayers. ON: Ribe Galder, Wsp 3, Webth 20, Thrim 2, Ord 17; OE: Acreboot; OHG: Wessobrunner Hymn Eese and Elves (ON ésir & alfar, OE ése & ielfe, PNWGmc. *alβín & ansiwin) A merism; both heavenly and earthly spiritual beings. Notably the two words always occur in this order (never 'Elves and Eese'), even in OE.

words and works (ON orð & verk, OE word & weorc, PGmc. *wurdó & werkô) Beow 289, 1100, 1833
