Notes to translation

Point about literal translation for use by scholars of comparative mythology The "guiding star" of this translation effort has been literality and concistency. All previous translations (to my knowledge) have such issues as: rendering identically repeated phrases differently at various places; covering up or obscuring technical and cultural terminology; simplifying kennings and other expressions—and this often without notes, to a point where the original meaning is, at times, unrecognizable. While I wholly encourage all readers of sufficient interest to study Old Norse (and other ancient Germanic languages!), perhaps even using this edition as a tool, I also realize that this is a demanding ask which not all interested students and scholars of comparative mythology, anthropology, literature, religion and other fields will be able to fulfill. I therefore want these groups to be able to have a text that is as close to the original as possible, at the very least when it regards sense and expression. Why Anglish names? One of the most idiosyncratic parts of this edition will be its handling of proper names. I have opted to render all cultural terms, names of places, gods, men and other entities in their natural English (Anglish) forms. I suppose the primary reason for this is ideological. I believe that these myths and poems are a common Germanic or Northern European heritage, and should be treated as such. The English once knew gods such as Weden and Thunder, and called them by names naturally evolved in their language. So too did the Germans and Scandinavians, of course, and I would hope that any translators into those languages would follow this spirit and render the names in their natural forms there as well.1

¹For instance in German perhaps Wuten, Donner, Froh.

Notes to critical edition

My goal with the critical editing of the texts has been to produce something as close to the original manuscripts as possible, without excessive emendation to the preserved recension(s). There are texts in three (TODO) languages in this edition, these being Old Norse, Old English and Old High German. Old Norse texts have been normalized according to roughly the same orthography as Finnur 1932. On the other hand the Old High German and Old English texts have only been lightly normalized, correcting obvious errors and marking vowel length with acute accents. For further information see below.

5.1 Normalization of Old Norse

The orthography only differs from Finnur 1932 in its use of δ rather than α to represent the result of i-umlaut on the ancient Germanic \bar{o} . Superfluous and hypermetrical pronouns (usually hann, hón) have in many places been removed. ek 'I', and es (particle) 'which, that, where, when', es (3rd sg. pres. ind. of vesa 'to be') have been contracted to 'k and 's when metrically beneficient.

5.2 Manuscripts

There are two surviving ancient manuscripts which contain full Eddic poems.

The first and most important is GKS 2365 4to, here R. It dates to the 1270s and has 45 surviving leaves, containing TODO poems. Of these 10 are mythological, and the rest heroic, dealing with legends mostly of the Migration Period. Notably, following fol. 32, there is a large gap of missing pages. This occurs in the heroic section, specifically cutting off Sigh. It is unclear how many leaves and poems went missing. R is not just a compilation of poems, it shows editorial input as well. Several of the mythological poems are separated by short prose sections, which tie them together into a loose frame narrative, though it is clear from their style and composition that they are originally separate works. When it comes to the heroic poems long prose sections occur both within and between them, creating a saw † -like narrative where the prose in many cases holds up the poetry, rather than the reverse. For further literature see TODO.

The second manuscript is AM 748 I a 4to, here A. It dates to the 1300s and has just 6 leaves. A, as we have it, contains only mythological poems, and in a different order from R; it has no frame narrative. On the first two leaves are contained Hoar (which lacks its beginning), Dreams and Shirn (lacking its ending). After this some number of leaves have gone missing, but the other four leaves follow eachother. On them we find Web (lacking its beginning), Grim Hym and the prose introduction of Way. A is the only medieval manuscript attesting Dreams, and further its other poems are not copied from R, but rather derive from a shared ancestor. This fact makes it very valuable for textual criticism. For further literature see TODO.

Some Eddic poems survive only in younger paper manuscripts. These being: TODO. While I have not consulted the paper mss. for poems attested in medieval mss., I have had to rely on them for these poems. Their exclusive survival there does not necessarily prove them works of late antiquarians; had we not been fortunate enough to have Dreams in A, it would have been counted among them, yet we now know that it is truly ancient.

It is not an impossibility that other poems now only found in paper mss. would have survived in now lost medieval mss., perhaps even in the lost pages of R or A.

Finally several Eddic poems are quoted in Yilf, these being (TODO): Spae, Web, Grim. It also contains a few fragments, which have also been edited. For Yilf I have relied on the following four main mss.:

- 1. The Codex Regius of the Prose Edda S (GKS 2367 4to; 1300-1350)
- 2. The Codex Trajectinus T (Traj 1374; a c. 1595 paper copy of a ms. closely related to S.)
- 3. The Codex Wormianus W (AM 242 fol.; 1340-70)
- 4. The Codex Upsaliensis U (DG 11; 1300–25)

For sake of brevity I refer to these four collectively as G, which is thus equivalent to STWU. I refer to Haukur porgeirsson 2017 for discussion on their internal stemmatics and origins.

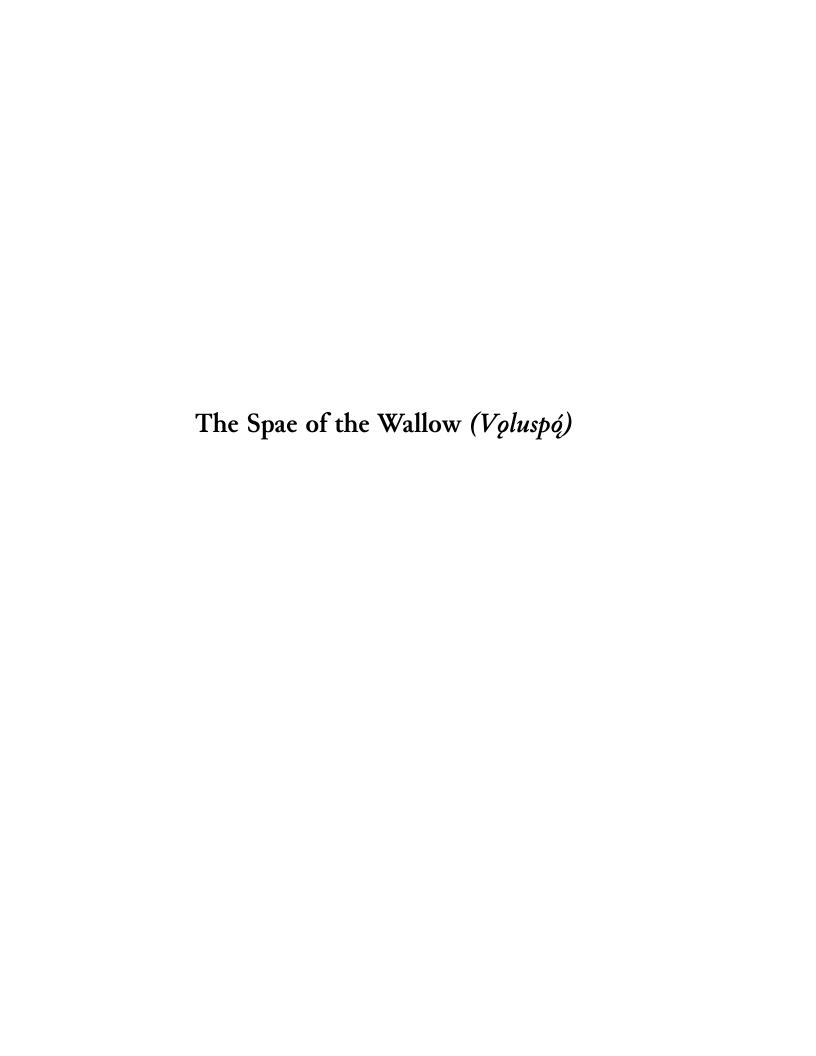

West Germanic poetry

As all West Germanic poems edited here (TODO: Will we be editing other poems than Hildebrandslied?) survive only in one copy, the specific details are discussed in their accompanying introductions.

The Spae[†] of the Wallow[†] is the most comprehensive mythological text surviving from Heathen times. It takes the form of the monologue of a wallow^C, summoned by Weden in order to reveal mythological exposition. In this it fits closely with Web, Grim, Sigh and Allw, but differs from them in several ways: there is no format of a dialogue (this it shares with Grim) or competition; the meter is in Law of Ancient Utterings; and it gives an overview of the mythological chronology in an otherwise unparalleled way.

Many events are related in a very allusive fashion, and not all of them are clear. There are also some likely gaps, possibly the result of misplaced verses. The poem begins with a bid for silence (v. 1), and the wallow reckoning her earliest memories (v. 2). She then recounts the ordering of the cosmos by the gods (vv. 3–6) and the earliest golden age (vv. 7–8), which however is interrupted by the intrusion of three unidentified ettin maidens (v. 8, and see note there). After this follow two verses about the shaping of the dwarfs (9–10), and then several independent dwarf-tallies (vv. 11–15), which are undoubtedly later inserts. We then return to the gods, specifically the creation of man (vv. 16–17). Judging from the end of verse 8 and the beginning of verse 16, it seems likely that these various dwarf-related verses have taken the place of some other verse. After this we get a description of the great tree Ugdrassle (v. 18), and the three norns living under it (v. 19).

This is where our two full recensions diverge. We have here followed the order of R due to the age of its text, but whether it is the original is hard to say. In R the wallow recounts the earliest war in the world

The poem is attested in full in two independent recensions. The first is R (GKS 2365 4to; 1270s), where it is the first poem, found on folios 1r–3r. Second is Hawksbook, H (AM 544 4to; 1300–75), where it is found at 20r–21r in the middle of a large collection of saws and Catholics works. Many verses are also cited in Yilf, which here has the general siglum G—to avoid confusion, it is only used when all employed witness mss. agree. See further the General Introduction.

Order of verses by manuscript, compared to this edition. As most verses in G are quoted on their own, and have little relation to the original order, these are simply marked with plus signs. When verses are quoted in a series, they are preceded by an alphabetically incrementing letter denoting which series they belong to. When there is a major difference in a ms. relative to the ed., such as in v. 10 where G omits the first two lines, it is then marked with a star. The verses beginning with $P\dot{a}$ gingu regin gll ... are represented by the following sentence.

¹Cf. Rigb, wherein Righ, identified by the prose as Homedall, sires three classes of men (namely earls, churls and thralls).—The wallow has been summoned to recite, and asks for all beings present to be silent.

²Cf. Web 34, 35 with very similar phrasing.

Wallow reckons what she recalls; the creation and ordering of the world.

Sun cast from the south—the companion of Moon⁶—her right hand over heaven's rim;⁷ Sun knew not, where halls she owned; stars knew not, where steads they owned; Moon knew not, what sort of might he owned.

³Certainly Ugdrassle, "beneath the soil" likely referring to it still being a seed.

⁴ginnungr (of which ginnunga would be the genitive plural) means 'hawk' in the Scoldish poetry, but that meaning hardly makes sense here, unless it is taken as an obscure sky-kenning referring to the primeval void.

¹³Gurevich (Skp 2017, p. 693) (employing the translation of SnE 2005 p. 16) interprets the "legs of Blown (a dwarf")" as a kenning for 'stone', but this disagrees with the prose in Yilf (TODO), which states that the dwarfs first originated as maggots in Yimer's rotting corpse.

^{3–4} þeir ... sagði "They ... said."] There are two conflicting forms of the verse. Either the dwarfs were created on their own; this is supported by the prose of Yilf (see note to last v.) and by the form of its verse. On the other hand, both R and H have the "worthiest" dwarfs Moodsowner and Dorn shaping "man-likenesses" out of soil. I have gone with the latter reading, but both should be considered.

Wey and Gandelf, Windelf, Thrown, Thetch and Thorn, Throo, Wit and Lit, Nee and Newred—now have I the dwarfs—Rain and Redswith—rightly tallied.

¹⁴A standard genealogical introduction (compare Hal 1). The line of dwarfs is to be counted to their progenitor, Loffer. This possibly disagrees with the earlier introduction ("There was ..."), where Moodsown is said to be the foremost of the dwarfs, and Loffer is not mentioned.

¹⁵Cleasby-Vigfússon aurvangr 'a loamy field', and indeed this fits etymologically.

¹⁶ Yilf (TODO): "But these came from Swornshigh (Svarinshaugr) to the Earwongs on the Erwolds, and thence Lofer is come; these are their names: Sherper (Skirpir), Werper (Virpir), Showfind, Great-grandfather, Elf and Ing (Ingi), Oakenshield, Fale (Falr), Frost, Finn, Ginner."

¹⁷Two archaic formulae. The first literally "that will ever up above", cf. HarS TODO: "We two are cursed, brother, thy bane am I become! That will ever be remembered (bat mun & uppi), but both mss. bat mun enn uppi), evil is the doom of the norns!". The second is found in a runic inscription, U 323 (980–1015): "Ever will lie, while the eld lives (mep + altr + lifin með aldr lifir), the hard-hammered bridge, broad, after a good man."

Yawns over the air the girdle of the earth [= the Middenyardsworm]; gape the jaws of the fierce worm in the heights. The venom of the beast will meet Weden's son [= Thunder], after the deaths of Wider's kinsmen [= the Ease].

Thunder and the Worm kill each other.

¹²⁰The power of this succinct expression may be less clear to the modern reader. In Germanic Iron Age society a man's wealth was reckoned by how many heads of cattle (for which compare particularly English chattel 'tangible, movable property' and the etymology of capital) he owned, and his social power by the number of able male relatives ready to side with him in conflict. The meaning is thus: all your property and social relations will go away, and so will you.

For earth takes against drunkenness, but fire against sickness; oak against dysentery, the ear [of corn] against sorcery, bearded rye against hernia, in conflicts shall one invoke the moon. TODO

Of Woden's taking of the runes. It is clear that these verses have very little to do with the rest of the poem, but instead are separate. It is for this reason that they are labelled as Rúnatals þáttr (The strand of the Runecount) in younger Eddic paper manuscripts. Many give an archaic, pagan impression. It is as if they were drawn from the lips of an Odinic priest.

Runes wilt thou find, and interpreted staves: much large staves, much stiff staves, as painted the Fimble-thyle, and made the yin-Powers, and carved Roft of the Powers.

^aIt has been noted (FJ) that this verse fits better in the next section of the poem. It is awkwardly placed here, since it mentions $lj\delta\delta$ '(magical) songs, incantations', rather than runes.

From the Sons of King Reeding (Frá sonum Hrauðungs konungs)

BPA Hrauðungr konungr átti tvá sonu. Hét annarr Agnarr, enn annarr Geirrøðr. BPA Agnarr var tíu vetra enn Geirrøðr átta vetra. Þeir reru tveir á báti með dorgar sínar at smáfiski. BPA Vindr rak þá í haf út. Í náttmyrkri brutu þeir við land ok gingu upp; fundu kotbónda einn. BPA Þar vóru þeir um vetrinn. Kerling fostraði Agnar enn karl Geirrøð. BPA At vári fekk karl þeim skip. Enn er þau kerling leiddu þá til strandar, þá mælti karl einmæli við Geirrøð. BPA Þeir fengu byr ok kvómu til stoðva foður síns. Geirrøðr var fram í skipi. BPB King Reeding owned two sons. One was called Eyner, and the other Garfrith. BPB Eyner was ten winters old, and Garfrith eight winters. The two were rowing in a boat with their trolling-lines for small fishing. BPB Wind then drove them out into the sea. In the darkness of night they crashed into land and walked up; they found a single cottage-farmer. BPB There they were about the winter. The wife fostered Eyner, but the husband Garfrith. BPB At spring the man gave them ships, but when they and the farmer's wife brought them to the shore, the husband spoke privately with Garfrith. BPB They got a good gust, and came to their father's harbour. Garfrith was in the front of the ship. BPB He leapt up onto land and pushed out the ship, and spoke: "Go thou where the smil^G might have thee." BPB The ship drove out. But Garfrith walked towards the farm; he was welcomed well; his father had by then drawn his final breath. BPB Then was Garfrith taken as king, and became an excellent man.

BPB Weden and Frie sat in Litheshelf and looked about all the Homes. BPB Weden spoke: Seest thou Eyner thy foster-son, where he begets children with the troll-woman in the cave? BPB But Garfrith, my foster-son, is king and now sits at land. BPB Frie says: He is such a meat-nithing that he tortures his guests if he thinks there are too many of them. BPB Weden says that this is the greatest lie; they make a bet about this matter. BPB Frie sent her handmaid Full to Garfrith's. She asked the king to be wary, that he might not be ended by that feelcunning^C man who was come in the land, and said that his mark was that no hound were so fierce that he would leap onto him. BPB But that was the greatest vainglory that Garfrith would not be meat-good, and yet he has that man seized, whom the dogs would not touch. BPB He was clad in a blue cloak, and called himself Grimen, and did not tell any more about himself, even though he was interrogated. BPB The king had him tortured so that he would speak, and set him between two fires, and he remained there for eight nights. BPB King Garfrith had a son ten winters old, and he was named Eyner after his brother. BPB Eyner walked up to Grimen, and gave him a full horn to drink, saying that the king did ill as he had him tortured without cause. BPB Grimen drank from it; then the fire had come such that the cloak burned on Grimen. He quoth:

The Speeches of Grimner are preserved whole in both R and A.

The structure of the poem is mostly clear; the first three verses set the stage, repeating some of what we got in the prose. It is certain that Weden is the speaker. After this various lore is touched on, not always clearly. In this the poem aligns closely with ones such as Web Sigh and Allw.

First are listed the halls of the gods (4–17), though the numbering does not seem to agree with the count of locations mentioned. Then the conditions and surroundings of Weden's animals and hall are elaborated on (18–23). Mentioned are the preparation of food (18), his wolves (19) and ravens (20), the river through which dead men have to wade (21), the gate through which they have to pass (22), the count of doors in the hall (23) and the two animals who gnaw on the branches of the tree (25–26). We then have a long list of rivers (28–30) and horses ridden by the gods (31). Then is told of the conditions and animals of Ugdrassle (32–36).

Thereafter follow several discordant verses. A list of Walkirries (37), the progression of the sun and moon (38–40), the creation of the world from Yimer's body (41–42), the significance of bloot-kettles^C (43), the creation of the ship Shidebladner (44) and finally the noblest of several categories of things and groups (45).

After all of this Weden utters an unclear verse invoking the gods (46), before listing many of his names and the circumstances in which they were used (47–50). He then turns to Garfrith, disappointed by the inhospitality and poor conduct of his former protégé, and predicts his imminent death (51–53). He finally reveals himself by his true name, daring Garfrith to face him (53). After this he repeats several of his names (54), and the poetry ends.

In the final prose section we are told that Garfrith tripped and fell on his sword, after which is son Eyner rules for a long time.

King Garfrith sat and had a sword about his knee, and it was brandished half-way up. But when he heard that Weden was come there, he stood up and would take Weden from the fire. The sword slipped out of his hand; the hilt pointed downwards. The king tripped and threw himself forth, but the sword pierced him, and he received his bane. Weden then disappeared, but Eyner was there king for a long while thence.

¹⁴⁵Regaining the hammer is of such importance to the gods (cf. v. 17; without it the Ease stand powerless against the Ettins[†]T), that Frow would lend the feather-hame to the greedy and unreliable Lock, even if it were made out of solid gold or silver.

¹⁴⁸A difficult phrase to translate; Thunder asks Lock if he has bad news.

¹⁴⁹Proverbial, meaning being that if one sits down and thinks too much over bad news, things will be left out, excuses thought up. Thus it is best that Lock immediately tell Thunder what he has learned.

¹⁵³ Large jewels.

¹⁵⁴With a (pointed) hood (TODO: literature).

¹⁵⁵The form used, tvau, is the neuter plural, ie. one of the pair is female and the other male. This is either an error due to mindless copying of v. 11, or a backhanded insult against Thunder.

¹⁶⁰The sister, who already asked for the hammer, now has the audacity to ask "Frow" (Thunder) to take the rings off her hands and give them to her.

¹⁶⁴ The gods sprinkled the leat (sacrificial blood) of the beasts and interpreted the pattern; they found it most auspicious to feast at Eyer's.

¹⁶⁵A reference to a lost myth? Unless Misherblind is an alternative name for Firneet, Eyer's father.

¹⁶⁶Having seen that Eyer has a great store of cauldrons, Thunder orders him to host future banquets for the Ease.

¹⁶⁷Eyer asks Thunder to find a single cauldron which can hold enough ale to supply all the Ease.

- 1 "Níu em'k mǿðra mǫgr, [&]quot;Of nine mothers am I a lad, of nine sisters am I a son."

The Lay of Wayland (Way) is a story of immense psychological complexity, one of the greatest masterpieces of Norse poetry.

The poem begins with a prose introduction, which survives in both R and A.

Wayland gets his revenge on the whole royal household. He murders Nithad's two young sons (affectionately, his "bear-cubs") and thus ends his male lineage. Likewise he defangs Nithad's "cunning wife" (she is never called anything else) by reducing her once powerful counsels to cold words; and finally he rapes Beadhild, depriving her of her maidenhood and value in marriage. They are thus reduced to the same state of complete powerlessness as he himself experienced, something clearly seen in the repetition of the adjective viljalauss 'powerless'; in v. 12 it describes Wayland after he wakes in shackles, but in v. 31 Nithad uses it to refer to his own mental state after the deaths of his sons. This sense of hopelessness is also seen in Beadhild's haunting concluding speech. "I knew by naught struggle against him; I could by naught struggle against him."

From the other versions of the story it is known that Beadhild gave birth to a son, Woody (Old English Wudga, ThedS Viðga), in Danish ballads Vidrik Verlandsøn). He went on to become a great hero, and in the later heroic ballads by far eclipses his father. His birth seems heavily foreshadowed by Wayland forcing Nithad to swear an oath in v. 33, but he is nowhere directly mentioned in the poem, probably for artistic reasons.

Apart from this lay there is one other telling of the full story, namely the Strand of Wayland the Smith in ThedS. While written in Old Norse, it is clear from the proper names and content that it is based on German sources (probably heroic ballads). Thus the native form Volundr is replaced with Velent [sic], Niõuŏr with Niõungr. Interestingly there is a note within it showing that the native form was still known, namely about "Velent, the excellent smith, whom Warrings (Væringjar) call Wayland (Volundr)". Apparently Wayland was so famous that "all men seem to praise his workmanship so, that the maker of any smith's work which is made better than other works, is called a Wayland (Volundr) with regards to workmanship."

Far more stark than minor differences of language is that of tone. The psychological complexity and tension of the older redaction is almost entirely gone: Wayland is no longer a mysterious wild man, but a chivalrous knight who can escape from any peril through his ingenuity and craftmanship. He is not captured due to Nithad's greed or hamstrung due to the suspicion of his cruel wife, but rather a loyal servant of Nithad's, banished from the kingdom after defending himself against the king's steward and hamstrung after being caught attempting to poison his food in revenge.

Frustratingly the personality of Beadhild is entirely expulged. She is the anonymous "king's daughter", an unnamed virgin (jungfrú, a borrowing from Low German) who is peacefully seduced by Wayland and quickly falls in love with him. Likewise the person of Nithad's cunning wife is completely gone, and the murder of his sons no longer ends his lineage, since he now has another, older son who survives him and takes over the kingdom. Wayland still flies away laughing after telling Nithad what he has done, but only four years (his son with Beadhild is three years old) later reconciliates with Nithad's son, retrieves Beadhild and their son and lives a long life as a famous craftsman.

With this it is clearly seen that the story by the time of the ThedS had been heavily distorted, a tragic victim of medieval romantic sensibilities. It does not have any high literary value, but is of interest since it shows the wide reception and variation of the narrative.

Finally there are also traces of the story in the Anglo-Saxon tradition, where it is alluded to in both Walder and Dear, the latter of which particularly emphasising the powerlessness felt by Wayland and Beadhild (thus being much closer in spirit to Way than ThedS). Some of it is also depicted on the early 8th century Frank's casket, where it is as prominent as the depiction of the Adoration of the Magi—a true testament to the weight with which it was regarded within that culture.

To illustrate the narrative correspondences and differences of the various redactions, I present the following table:

BPB Nithad was named a king in Sweden. BPB He owned two sons and one daughter; she was called Beadhild. BPB There were three brothers, the sons of a Finnish king. BPB One was called Slayfinn, another Agle, the third Wayland. BPB They travelled on skis and hunted wild animals. They came into Wolfdales and made for themselves houses there. BPB There is a water there, called Wolfsea. BPB Early in the morning they found on the lake-shore three women, and they were spinning linen. BPB By them were their swan-hames^C; they were Walkirries. BPB Two of them were the daughters of king Lathwy: Lathguth Swanwhite and Harware Allwit, the third was Alerune, daughter of Kear^P of Walland^{G178}. BPB The brothers brought the maidens with them to their halls. Agle got Alerune, but Slayfinn Swanwhite, but Wayland Allwit. BPB They lived there for seven winters, then they left to attend battles, and did not return. BPB Then Agle left on skis to look for Alerune, and Slayfinn sought out Swanwhite; and Wayland stayed in Wolfdales. BPB He was the most handy man, which men have known in ancient tales. BPB King Nithad had him captured, about which this has been sung: EPG

- 1 Meyjar flugu sunnan · Myrkvið í gognum

Maidens flew from the south through Mirkwood¹⁷⁹—young allwits¹⁸⁰—to fulfill orlay^C. They on the lake-shore set down to rest; the southern ladies span expensive linen.

¹⁷⁹Mirkwood is surely referenced for its association with the war-ravaged lands of the Gots and Huns; a natural environment for Walkirries.

¹⁸¹As Walkirries the orlay of the sisters is to preside over battles for Weden. Remembering this duty they become increasingly anxious, until they one day decide to finally leave, as seen from the next verse without telling their husbands. For the significance of Mirkwood, see note to v. 1.

¹⁸⁴That this is the bigh mentioned by itself in vv. 17 and 26 seems likely. Finnur writes: "The ring which Nithad kept must have had special properties, and distinguished itself before others. There is no doubt that the ring is a flight ring; whether this was clear to the poet is however questionable. This much is certain, that Wayland seems to be able to fly away only after he has got back the ring; that is, the one which Beadhild brings him." (My translation from the Danish.)—The reader may for himself judge the plausibility of this, but it seems that Wayland, being an exceptionally handy craftsman, may just as well have crafted wings for himself without need for magical rings. This agrees with the Low German verison and the Daedalus myth, for both of which see the introduction to the poem.

Thus was done, that the sinews in his houghs were cut, and he was placed on a lonely islet, which there lay before the land, called Seastead. There he smithed for the king all manner of jewels. No man dared travel to him, but the king alone. Wayland quoth:

"It is true, Nithad, as he said¹⁹³ to thee: I and Wayland stayed together on the island, for one grave moment—it should never have been! I knew by naught struggle against him; I could by naught struggle against him.¹⁹⁴"

¹⁹³Beadhild, knowing that the only one who is aware of what happened is Wayland, makes the subtle change in the conjugation, from her father's general plural ("what they said"), to the specific singular ("what he said").

¹⁹⁴She was both mentally (Cleasby-Vigfússon: kunna 'know, understand') and physically (Cleasby-Vigfússon: mega 'to have strength to do, avail') incapable of struggling against him. As Finnur comments, a potent final verse.

 þér um greiddu · gullinsímu
- ok und mána sal · miðjan fęstu.

They turned with their might the strands of orlay†, as he broke cities in Browlund; they arranged golden bands, and under the moon's hall fastened [them in] the middle.

Second Lay of Hallow Hundingsbane (Helgakviða Hundingsbana aðra)

BPG BPA Helgi fekk Sigrúnar ok áttu þau sonu; var Helgi eigi gamall. Dagr Hogna sonr blótaði Óðin til foðurhefnda. Óðinn léði Dag geirs síns. Dagr fann Helga, mág sinn, þar sem heitir at Fjoturlundi. Hann lagði í gognum Helga með geirnum. Þar fell Helgi en Dagr reið til fjalla ok sagði Sigrúnu tíðindi:

BPB Hallow got Sighrun, and they owned sons; Hallow was not old. Day, son of Hain, blooted† to Weden to take revenge for his father. Weden lent Day his spear. Day found Hallow, his brother-in-law, at a place called Fetterlund; he laid the spear through Hallow. There fell Hallow, but Day rode to the fells and told Sighrun the news: EPB

"Regretful am I, sister, to grieve thee by saying—for, forced must I cause my kinswoman to cry: This morning fell, 'neath Fetterlund, that prince who was in the world the best, and on the throats of rulers stood."

2 "Fyrr vil'k kyssa · konung ólifðan

"Sooner would I kiss the unliving king, than thou the bloody byrnie mightst cast away. Thy hair is, Hallow, with hoarfrost thick: the prince is all with corpse-dew whipped: the hands wet-cold on the kinsman of Hain. How shall I for thee, lord, remedy that?"

"Thou alone causest, Sighrun from the Sevefells, that Hallow be by harm-dew whipped; thou criest, gold-covered, bitter tears, sun-bright southern lady, before thou to sleep mightst go. Each one falls bloody on the breast of the ruler, wet-cold and stifled, pressed forth by grief."

1 Svá ... verjask] Line moved from the last verse to this one since it seems to connect semantically with the immediately following line, and also creates a regular line distribution of 4-4 instead of 5-3.

- 23 "Hjarta skal mér Hogna · í hendi liggja
- blóðugt, ór brjósti · skorit baldriða, saxi slíðrbeitu, · syni þjóðans."

²⁰⁰The Huns ask Guther (it is clear that "ruler of the Gots" refers to him, cf. 1, 3, 10) if he wishes to ransom Hain. He instead responds with the following:

(Guther quoth:)

"The heart of Hain shall lie me in the hands: bloody from the breast—cut from the bold rider with a slide-biting sax²⁰¹—of the son of the sovereign."

- 24 Skóru þeir hjarta · Hjalla ór brjósti

Then quoth that Guther, the lord of men: "Here have I the heart of Helle the soft—unlike the heart of Hain the bold!—which much trembles, when on the platter it lies; it trembled twice as much, when in the breast it lay."

- 26 Hló þá Hogni · es til hjarta skóru

Hain laughed then, when to the heart they cut on the living wound-smith; he thought least of sobbing. Bloody on a platter they laid it, and carried it before Guther.

33 Enn segir gleggra í Atlamálum inum grønlenskum.

Yet this is told more clearly in the Greenlendish Speeches of Attle.

For the text of original poem I generally present the manuscript text. I found it very difficult to produce a normalization without too heavily distorting the received text, being as it is, a blend of several dialects. I have, however, added acute accents to signify long vowels, capitalized proper names, consistently replaced p (wynn) and uu with w, and made minor corrections where the manuscript is clearly in error—these are noted in the critical apparatus. The punctuation of the original, entirely consisting of interpuncts, at times representing line breaks and caesurae and at others sporadically placed, has not been retained. The hypermetrical words quad Hiltibrant "Hildbrand quoth" (found in the ms. at the caesurae of ll., 30, 49, and 58) have been removed from the German text, but are presented in small font in the English translation.

I heard it said, that two contenders alone did meet: Hildbrand and Hathbrand, under two hosts. Son and father ordered their armour, readied their war-cloth, girded their swords on, the heroes over the mail, when to that battle they rode.

Hathbrand spoke, Hildbrand's son: "It told me our people, the old and learned, those who earlier lived, that Hildbrand was called my father — I am called Hathbrand. Long ago he hurried east — he fled Edwaker's hate — thither with Thedrich, and his great many thanes. He left in the land a little one to stay, a bride in the bower, a bairn ungrown, without inheritance; he rode east thither, as Thedrich was in great need of my father; — that was so friendless a man. He was to Edwaker exceptionally hostile, the dearest of thanes under Thedrich. He was ever at the front of the troop, ever did the fight gladden him, known was he among keen men; I ween not that he have life."

Hathbrand spoke, Hildbrand's son: "With spear shall one earn gifts, point against point! Thou art, old Hun, exceptionally clever; thou lurest me with thy words, wilt thou at me thy spear hurl! Thou art thus old, though thou ever deceit didst work. — It told me seafarers, heading west o'er the Wendle-sea², that war took that man: — dead is Hildbrand, Harbrand's son!"

¹Armlets used as currency during the Migration Period; ON baugr, OE béag. — The giving of rings and armlets in exchange for loyalty was common across all of Germanic Europe, as seen in the many ruler-kennings of the type "breaker of rings" (like béaga brytta "the breaker of bighs" Bee ll. 35, 352, 1487.) This is also connected with the oath-ring, and the famous ring-swords. TODO? reference some literature on this.

1.1 Cultural and religious terms (C)

- aught (ON. étt, OE. éht) The Nordic (paternal) clan or family line.
- bloot (ON. blót, OE. blót, OHG. bluóz) Sacrifice or a sacrificial feast.
- Doom (ON. dómr, OE. dóm) Commonly 'judgement' (whence Doomsday, 'day of judgement'), but also specifically referring to one's fame or good reputation after death. Thus High 77: "I know one that never dies: the Doom over each man dead."; this is further illuminated by passages in Bee such as 884b–887a: Sigemunde gesprong / æfter déaðdæge · dóm unlýtel / syþðan wíges heard · wyrm ácwealde / hordes hyrde "For Sighmund sprang up after his day of death unlittle Doom, since hard in conflict the Worm[†] he defeated—the herder of the hoard."; 953b–955a: þú þé self hafast / dédum gefremed · þæt þín dóm lyfað / áwa tó aldre "Thou hast for thyself by deeds accomplished that thy Doom lives for ever and ever."
 - fee (ON. fé, OE. féoh) Originally 'cattle', however also used in a broader sense to refer to one's mobile wealth. For this cf. particularly High
- feelcunning (ON. fjolkunnigr) Skilled with sorcery.
 - fimble- (ON. fimbul-) The ultimate, final, greatest. See Fimble-thyle[†], Fimble-winter[†].
 - gand (ON. gandr, Latin gandus) A witch's familiar. See PCRN, Historia Norvegiæ.
 - hame (ON. bamr) A skin, shape. Individuals can through magic "shift hames" (ON. skipta homum), and leave their human bames behind, instead entering into the shapes of wolves, bears, birds. During this process the original hame would be sleeping in a vulnerable state, as described in the Saw of the Walsings, chap. TODO: . See also feather-hame[†], town-riders[†], evening-riders[†].
 - harrow (ON. horgr, OE. hearg, PNWGmc. *harugar) A cairn constructed for ritual purposes. Hind 10 describes one: "A harrow he made for me, loaded with stones; now that stone-pile is become into glass. He reddened [it] in fresh blood of oxen; Oughthere ever trusted on the osennies." See also wigh.
 - leed (ON. ljóð, OE. léod) A magical chant or incantation. See also galder^C, gale^C, begale^C.
 - manwit (ON. manvit) Practical sense and wisdom, situational awareness, 'common sense'.
 - orlay (ON. orlog, OE. orlog) One's predetermined fate, destiny, purpose as decreed by the Norns[†].
 - rest (ON. rost) The distance between two rest-stops, a geographical mile (about 1850 metres). See especially Cleasby-Vigfússon.

 - soo (ON. sóa) To ritually waste, the slaying in the animal sacrifice.
 - thill (ON. þylja) To chant poetry or lists (so called thules^C) acquired by rote memorization. See also thyle[C].
 - Thing (ON., OE. þing, OS. thing, OHG. ding) The legal assembly and gathering place where matters would be settled and the law recited.

- thyle (ON. þulr, OE. þyle, PNWGmc. þuli*a) A sage who through rote learning has acquired a large amount of mythological lore (cf. þula 'a list in poetic form; a meaningless poem' and þylja 'to recite, to chant'). Thus Weden[†] is the Fimble-thyle[†], being the unbeaten master of lore, as can be seen in his wisdom contests (see Allw, Web). Runic inscription DR 248 (Snoldelev) suggests the thyle may have tied to a specific place, and in Beowulf it seems to have been a court position, with Unferth[†] being described as the "thyle of Rothgar".
- wallow (ON. vqlva, OE. *wealwe (cf. ON. svqlva, OE. swealwe 'swallow')) A sibyl, prophetess. The name derives from the wale^C, the staff carried by them.
- wigh (ON. vé, OE. wéoh, wíh, PNWGmc. *wīhą) A holy shrine or sanctuary. It seems that where the harrow was a pile of stones or cairn used for carrying out rituals, the wigh was an enclosed space. The earliest Norse attestation is the runic inscription Ög N288 (Oklunda), which reads: "Guthhere <= Gunnarr> painted these runes, and he fled, guilty. Sought this wigh, and he fled into this clearing. And he bound. [...]" The implication seems to be that the wigh was considered so sacred that Guthhere could not be apprehended or punished for his crime while in it. In Old English the word means 'pagan idol'. It is not immediately clear which meaning is the original one, but in this edition the Norse sense has been adopted, since the Anglo-Saxon sources are all of a Christian nature. The Beewolf name Wighstone (Wīhor Wēohstān) in any case suggests it is the Norse meaning, since 'idol-stone' makes little sense.
- wode (ON. όδr, OE. wód, PNWGmc. wōþu*R) Hean†'s gift to men, though the name would suggest it be from Weden†. The word has several related meanings: 'poetic inspiration', 'madness', 'rage'.

1.2 Personal names, objects and events (P)

Attle (Attila, ON. Atli, OE. Ætla, MHG. Etzel, PNWGmc. Attilō*) The ruler of the Huns[†] (historically from 434–453). Husband of Guthrun[†], and with her father of Earp and Oatle[†]. and murderer of I HHb 54, SiL 11, I Gr 23, ShS 28, 29, 33, 37, 54, 56, 57, II Gr 26, 38, 45, III Gr 1, 9, BnOr 0, OdW A, 2, 22, 23, 25, 26, 30, 31, AtD 0, AtL 1, 3, 15, 17, 18, 27, 31, 32, 34, 36, 37, 38, 41, 43, B, AtS 2, 4, 21, 22, 44, 52, 60, 64, 71, 73, 77, 80, 86, 87, 97, 98, 108, 113, 117, FGr 0, GrB 12, Ham 6.

Earp and Oatle (ON. Erpr ok Eitill) The sons of Attle[†] and Guthrun[†].

Feather-hame (ON. fjaðrhamr) A hame† owned by the Ease that lets the wearer fly like a bird, more specifically a falcon.

Guthrun (ON. Guðrún) Daughter of king Yivick[†], sister of Guthhere[†] and Hain[†]. The wife of Attle[†].

Hain 1 (ON. Hogni, OE. Haguna, Hagena, OHG. Hagano, Ger. Hagen, PNWGmc. Hagunō*) A Nifling[†] and Yifking[†], son of king Yivick[†], brother of Guthhere[†] and Guthrun[†]. In AtL he defeats seven warriors before being captured by Attle[†], who has his heart cut out at the request of Guthhere.

2 A petty king of East Geatland[†], contemporary with Granmer[†], the king of Southmanland[†] and Ingeld Illrede, the Ingling[†] king of Upland[†].

Hindle (ON. Hyndla) A witch awoken by Frow in Hind.

Millner (ON. Mjollnir, OE. *Meldne, PNWGmc. *Meldunjar) Powerful hammer owned by Thunder.

Oughter (ON. Óttarr, OE. Óhthere, PNWGmc. * Ōhtaharjar) TODO

Rakes of the Reins (ON. ragna rok) The 'sequence of events of the Reins^G', euphemistic for the destruction of the Home.

Rakes of the Tues (ON. tíva rok) See the Rakes of the Reins^P.

Rotholf (ON. Hrólfr kraki, OE. Hróþulf, PNWGmc. Hróþiwulfar*) A king of the Shieldings[†] (see family tree). As foreshadowed in Beewolf (1017–9, 1180–90), he betrays the sons of Rothgar[†], his cousins Rethrich and Rothmund[†], in order to take the throne for himself. In the later Icelandic tradition this has been forgotten, and he is consistently portrayed as a heroic king.

Index 199

- Rothgar (ON. Hróarr, OE. Hróþgár, PNWGmc. Hróþigai*RaR) A king of the Shieldings[†] (see family tree), one of the main characters in Beewolf.
- Weden (rhymes with leaden; ON. Óðinn, OE. Wóden, Wéden, OHG. Wuotan, PNWGmc. *Wōdanan) Chief of the Ease[†], his name is clearly related to wode[†], referring to his role as the patron of scolds[†] and bearserks[†]. For the meaning of his other names see Fimblethyle[†], Harn[†] TODO. Husband of Frie[†], and by her father of Bolder[†]. Also father of Thunder[†] by Earth[†]. Brother of Hean[†] and Lother[†].
- Yivick (ON. Gjúki, OE. Gifica, OHG. Gibicho, MHG. Gibeche) King of the Burgends[†] (historically from late 300s–407) of the Nifling dynasty, founder of the Yifking[†] aught[†]. Father of Guthrun[†], Guthhere[†] and Hain[†].

1.3 Groups and place names (G)

- TODO: Map of rough tribal areas.
- Danes (ON. danir, OE. Dene, PNWGmc. *danír) A tribe in eastern modern-day Denmark and southern Sweden. They probably originated in Scania in southern Sweden, before moving westwards into the Danish isles and eventually Jutland, driving out the Earls† and Jutes†. Noted members: TODO Attestations: TODO
- Ease (rhymes with geese; ON. ésir, OE. Ése, PNWGmc. *ansír) A group of Gods, though the word can also refer to all the Gods. Singular os[†]. See Gods[†], Tues[†], Wanes[†], Powers[†]. Noted members: Weden[†], Thunder[†], Frie[†], Hath[†] and Bolder[†] Attestations: TODO
